While sipping his coffee, he began feeling pangs of anxiety and started to figid for there was something rather nebulous about his situation. He reached for a copy of the Journal and glanced at the front page. "Canada joins Warsaw Pact", he read. "Flood eliminates American midwest". Down in the corner was a picture of the Salvation Army on manoevers in Cyprus and over to the side was an article on the South African programme to ship twelve million black Communists away on ice-bergs. He threw the paper down in disgust. "Same old crap. Those people at the Journal take themselves so seriously".

He switched on the TV set, but there being no people there were no programmes and Gilbert was confronted with a black square buzzing at him from the inside of the TV cabinet. He stared back for a few minutes. "What a stupid programme and its not even listed in the TV guide." He kicked the set a few times, sat down and fell asleep.

★ ★ ★

Gilbert was not really unhappy with his new life and indeed there were some mornings, when he caught the sun spreading out from the horizon or passed between the friendly trees in the park, that he was genuinely happy. But because such moments are not the basis of life, but only give it colour, like a balloon that wraps itself around the air inside, happiness could not be used to describe the substance of his feelings. His state was somewhere between resignation and contentment, boredom probably being the best description. And there were moments when even his boredom was threatened, when meaninglessness opened up before him and punctured the balloon and he, fascinated, froze before it like prey before a cobra. It always slithered away, that emptiness, and with time Gilbert came to ignore it, for not only did he find it necessary to repress such queer sensations and get on with the business of living, but he was also discovering his solace in art.

He had begun with painting. But coming face to face with that enormous blank canvas, challenging him to justify and define himself across its sardonic expanse, had been far too terrifying. Paper at least was lined and had comfortable red margins so he became a writer. This was to be expected for other reasons as well, for his soul was constantly churgling with the stuff of great drama, of human passion, struggles, death, and other such profundities. Yet whenever he tried giving vocal expression to that complex melodrama within, the odd assortment of words on the page did not seem to bear even the most tenuous of relationships with what he felt. In fact, it bore no relationship at all. And the scribbled words appeared to possess no relationship to one another; they looked as though they had been poured randomly from a milk bottle.

> I've always felt awkward in a crowd
> - Gilbert

"Odd", he thought. It wasn't only odd, it was damn right disconcerting.

He decided to streamline his efforts and become a poet. This was indeed a fortuitous decision, for as we all know, poets can get by quite handily without making the slightest bit of sense. In fact, it is an advantage in their profession for it gives them more time to develop symbolism and imagery.

Poetry fitted Gilbert's condition perfectly and it was not long before the words were tumbling down and rolling around the page into position. He worked with the passion of a man at the end of his wits and was eventually producing verse he'd be proud to show to a friend if he had one. There was one poem he entitled, "The world begins at my window but I keep it closed anyways" and another that began "Having experienced the limitless possibilities of human existence- I recapped the wine bottle". There was one poem he particularily liked and would have loved to have shown it to someone. "There's a hole in my shoe- And I'm feeling so blue- But I won't stay sad- Cause I'll find things to do".

Gilbert leaned back and pondered his progeny. There would undoubtedly be publications in those little literary magazines that no one read except for the contributors. This would be followed by public recognition and books that no one read except for the author's friends if he had any. Gilbert smiled. He was receiving the Governor-General's Award and being asked his opinion on Canadian nationalism for the forty-second time. He declined for fear of losing his private person to public currency. He had been mentioned in connection with the Nobel Prize and women were pursuing him everywhere. It was all so wonderful and fired with all the expanse of his being, Gilbert turned the dial on the television set and fell asleep.

★ ★ ★

Gilbert had become intrigued with the idea of space. Not just any space, but pockets of personal space. After all, once everyone has disappeared, this is what they are replaced by. It was the novelty that struck him about it at first - he tried to imagine what spaces coincided with what ex-individuals.

"Perhaps th

AIR

The space with which he was particularly enamoured, though, was the one his wife had filled beside him in bed. Gilbert was not sure which he preferred - the wife or the space for they both had their advantages. (He had difficulty remembering whether there should be spaces for children because he was not certain there had been any. At least he recalled irritating distractions which he managed to eliminate with forthright concentration upon his more lofty pursuits. But whether these were children or not was anybody's guess. At any rate, the evidence had disappeared on Sunday night.) There was something relaxing about stretching his arms and legs through the space between the cool linen sheets. It was more comfortable than the wife he had long ago grown bored with.

"Oh Ethel, Ethel", he cried, tenderly clutching the space beside him. "Or was it Rosemary. There was a Rosemary once, I think." There had been quite a few, but what did it all matter. "Once you've met one girl, you've met them all" he mused, pondering past revelries.

> Never, never, never, never
> - King Lear

He had often wondered how he and his wife had become well, sort of confused. At times he had become puzzled over which was which or who was whom. Indeed, it was as though his wife had become subsumed under GILBERT and he was as about aware of her as a man is of his legs when he's walking. On the other hand, he had long experienced a feeling of distance between his frustrated mind and his physical actions, a space which should have been filled like a drive shaft fills the space between the steering wheel and the front axel of a car. But unable to construct some similarity between will and action he had decided to treat his exterior with an aloof smugness. He dropped a smile here, a gesture there, to keep them from getting suspicious, and meanwhile went about his business with puzzled resolve.

★ ★ ★

An uncomfortable anxiety had begun to develop in the middle of Gilbert's stomach and then spread upwards to his chest and eventually reached his consciousness. And as odd as the source of this discomfort was, so was its persistence.

"Perhaps I'm not really alone", whispered Gilbert, checking over his shoulder and behind the tree trunk, lifting up the manhole cover and examining the inside of his hat.

"Perhaps they're watching me, you know. Checking up and filing it away in impenetrable vaults. (I hope my fly is done up)."

He knew who it was all right; Gilbert may have been slow but he was no one's fool. He had often had dealings with them before. Them. At times he imagined disguised and camouflaged white-frocked, clip-board clutching hoards of mealy-minded idiots, recognizable only by their obnoxious laughter, callously judging his every movement. At other times he fancied huge amorphous armies silently shifting across continents saying, "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush" or "a stitch in time saves nine" or other such profound pearls by which men organise their lives.

There seemed to be no way that they would go away. At first he tried to ignore them. "Go ahead and stare", he sneered and of course they went ahead and stared. Next he began to insult them. "Fools, I'm surrounded by fools". But since Gilbert knew that they knew that he knew who the real fool was, he did not sound very convincing. He was finally reduced to quixotic attacks on them with his umbrella. He would suddenly lift the top off a garbage can and spear the contents. Or he would wait in a tree, ready to pounce upon them as they passed by clinging onto their clip-boards. Yet, no matter how quick was his lunge and skillful his stab, they always eluded him.

It was inevitable that they would appear eventually, for Gilbert had within him his horrible sensation that was growing and consuming his energy like a ravenous tapeworm. Gilbert felt guilty. Worse than that, he knew he was guilty, for three and a half billion people do not disappear for no reason. And looking around Gilbert realized that there was no one else to whom responsibility could be attributed.

He began wondering how he had done it. "Do you think it was something I said?" But an examination of his conversation leading up to the crime revealed nothing that was not completely innocuous, as all his remarks were intended to be. It might have been an offending gesture or perhaps the way he smiled or tied his shoes. "Remember the time I drove through the stop-sign?" he wondered aloud and then checked around frantically to be sure they hadn't heard him. Whatever the cause was, it was certain that they were on to him and he would have to watch his step. "I guess I'll have to watch my step," said Gilbert.

★ ★ ★

Gilbert awoke one morning to find that he had barricaded himself inside his closet. Having analyzed this strange behavior, he discovered it to be the last in a series of physical actions which did possess within it some degree of causality yet the inherent sequence of the series was not of a necessary nature. And while a short while ago he would never have intended to find himself locked away within his own closet, he concluded that he really had no control over the environment which had conspired to shut him away. Indeed, things just happened, and as much as he might rail and rant against fate, the tide just seemed to be washing him away with a shrug.

He had not taken refuge in the closet in a search for privacy. He had recently taken to locking the doors of his house and as he entered every evening he backed in slowly, making sure they didn't sneak in while he wasn't looking. But once they were inside, as he senses they would inevitably be, he could not rest. He chased them up the stairs with a fire poker and along the ceiling with a fish-net. He'd turn off all the lights and then suddenly switch them on again, saying "gotchya" but they always managed to slip into the ventilator or crawl into drain-pipes.

Finally, he believed he had trapped them in the closet and flinging open the door, he charged in with a broom, closing the door behind him to prevent their escape. "Click", he heard the door latch behind him. They'd

> I'm feeling so depressed
> - Anonymous

slipped out the key-hole and locked him inside. He knew without even having to try the handle that that was what had happened. All that remained was to plug up the crack below the door to keep them from poking their noses in and Gilbert was sufficiently ensconed within his closet.

"What am I to do now" he wondered, shifting his eyes around the walls of his closet and struggling with an intense emptiness that was beyond the comprehension of any of them. There did not seem to be any point in thinking about anything any more for nothing seemed to be amenable to thought. Even the commonplace oozed a sordidness that fatigued him and gave him a headache. He laid down on the floor and began to think ... of men who bow beyond the periphery of thought to action constructed upon a universe of sounds of Gods who lock truths within books and let men die with a shrug of their shoulders ... and unable to sleep, for training had removed that final dignity, Gilbert fell gently off to sleep.

editorial

Rectorship discussed

Over the last few years the Journal has avoided endorsing any particular candidate for a campus election. As we are not familiar with all the candidates for rector, we obviously cannot endorse one even if we wanted to change this policy.

Nonetheless, we think next weeks rector election is too important to ignore. The person elected will be our representative on the Board of Trustees and a general purpose ombudsman for at least the next two years. He or she will be in constant contact with all levels of government on this campus. A poor choice of rector could seriously damage relations with these bodies for a number of years.

In any election it is obviously desirable to avoid electing an unsuitable candidate, but because of the nature of this position it is particularly important to make a conscientious choice. The basic qualifications for a good candidate in any election certainly apply - integrity, intelligence and a sincere interest in the job. In addition, we strongly agree with our collegues at Golden Words that the rector should have as little previous connection as possible with any "political structure" on campus, so that he is free to deal unencumbered with any problem that might arise.

The rector must remember that he is not an AMS president. It is not his job to stimulate student politics or solve all it's problems.

We urge everyone to vote if they have considered the candidates carefully. However, if they haven't we suggest they not exercise their franchise.

AMS fee increase, vote yes

When students vote on Tuesday for a new rector they will also be asked to give to the Alma Mater Society general funds another dollar and a half per person each year. This tax increase has been proposed two or three times in the past few years, and has always failed -- once because it was to pay for an executive assistant; another time, because no one tried to explain the reason for it.

Over the last few years, the AMS has grown into a big business, resulting in a larger and more costly bureaucracy. Each year, prices have gone up. Each year, the AMS has been asked to start and support new activities which, unlike things like the pub, do not, and cannot pay for themselves. Each year, the AMS has been strapped for the funds to support even a portion of the students who come to seek aid. In short, the AMS is currently out of money.

What does the AMS do with your money -- remember now, we are only talking about the AMS specific fee which is the only income that can be spent at the discretion of the Outer Council -- it publishes Who's Where, it funds the Student Volunteer Bureau, it runs Homecoming, Snowball and Symposia, like Olympics '76.

The biggest item of all is the bureaucracy -- half of the budget is needed to run an office, prepare material for meetings, produce ballots, and so on. By the time club grants, projects and other things are added, there is nothing left for new projects or for funding student activities that come up over the year, let alone anything for contingency.

We ask you to remember that the AMS doesn't mean 40 people who hang out in the Union and debate with each other. The AMS is 9000 people -- you. Vote for the $1.50 fee increase.

letters

Tercentenary

Dear Editor;

I have read with interest Mr. James Fleming's excellent suggestions in his letter to the Journal of November 10 regarding Queen's and the Tercenterary of the City of Kingston. He is to be commended for exhorting the student body to participate in these celebrations. A University Committee has been working in liaison with the City for the past eight months, coordinating events in which Queen's and Kingston can share. There are two student representatives on this 11-member Committee: Mrs. W. Douglas Redden (telephone 546-6526) and Mr. Ross W. McIlquham (542-7590). To date the activities listed below in chronological order have been arranged.

We welcome student support of and participation in these programs and others arranged by Tercentenary groups in the City, and will be pleased to hear of other student initiatives appropos Tercentenary. Students should contact their representatives directly, or me at 163 University Avenue, telephone 547-3244.

Queen's Tercentenary Events

1. Queen's and Kingston are partners in a Grey Cup Parade entry. When the parade is televised from Hamilton on Saturday, December 2, Queen's cheerleaders, band and pipe band will highlight a section which also includes a small pageant group in historical dress--Indians, the Fort Henry Guard, and an historical French regiment. A commemoration of past Queen's Grey Cup winners is also planned. Queen's Alumni in the Hamilton area will share in the project by accommodating all Queen's students participating in the parade.
2. The Mayor's Levee on Monday, New Year's Day, 1973, will take place in Grant Hall.
3. The whole community will be invited to a skating party in the Jock Harty Arena on the evening of Friday, January 12, 1973.
4. Events for International Week, the first week of February, will be supported by Queen's multi-national students, individually and in groups. Liaison here is by Ted Grandmaison, a graduate student.
5. There will be a Queen's Open House on Saturday and Sunday, February 10 and 11, 1973, under the direction of Kirk Hamilton, a graduate student.
6. A Citizenship Court, where the Governor-General is expected to meet with 2,000 people, will be held in the Bartlett Gymnasium the morning of Thursday, April 5.
7. A symposium entitled "The Child in Sport and Physical Activity" from Monday to Thursday, May 14-17, is expected to draw up to 400 delegates to the campus, including physical education experts from the United States and Europe.
8. Queen's will play host to the Local Council of Women 300-Year Fashion Show at McArthur Hall on the evening of Thursday, May 17, This activity will involve 32 women's organizations in Kingston.
9. The Learned Societies of Canada and the Royal Society will convene at Queen's for three weeks (late May and early June), drawing a total of 5,000 scholars plus 1,000 wives from more than 40 different groups.
10. At the beginning of June the Agnes Etherington Art Centre will open a summer-long, full-scale pictorial display to illustrate the history of Kingston.
11. The RCMP band will give a concert on Monday evening, June 4, in the Jock Harty Arena.
12. Richardson Stadium will be used for a mammoth civic welcome for Queen Elizabeth's visit expected on Friday, July 6.
13. One of several ecumenical services will be held on Sunday evening, July 8, in Grant Hall.
14. In connection with the re-enactment of Frontenac's landing. Queen's will house up to 100 canoeists on Friday, July 13, the day preceding the event.
15. Sunday, August 19, will be American Day at the Richardson Stadium. Queen's will host the U.S. Marine Corps Band, the Fort Henry Guard, and the Parliament Hill Guard from Ottawa.
16. The French Area Studies Centre has organized a late October (25-27) seminar on campus entitled "Le Monde francais en 1673".
17. Among a number of contributions to Tercentenary events from individual staff members will be special books by Professor G. Tulchinsky, Department of History, and Professor George Betts, Institute of Local Government.

J. M. Courtright,
Chairman,
Queen's Tercentenary Committee.

To Victoria

Dear Editor,

We would like to reply to the comments of "Miss Victoria" whose letter appeared in the November 10th edition of the Journal.

Dear "Ms Victoria" (and it is blatantly obvious why "Miss")

If you had one female hormone in your body you would realize that the cultured gentlemen who took the time to provide constructive criticism to the young ladies in Ban Righ Dining Hall on Nov. 3rd, did so as a gesture of concern over the obvious decline in the number of acceptable women on campus this year. In providing this valuable study, they struck a blow for feminine pulchritude, and mankind in general. From where do they claim this right? Their right stems from man's inherent superiority over the lower form of life that was privided him, in order that he propagate his species.

You also mentioned a certain repulsion to the sophisticated manner in which we partake of our meals in that temple of culinary delight, Leonard Hall. May we suggest that while our table etiquette may be somewhat lacking on occasion, watching the "ladies" in Ban Righ devour a meal is like watching a colony of rats let loose in a garbage dump.

In conclusion we would like to take this opportunity to wish "Miss Victoria" the best of luck in all her romantic pursuits, whatever that may intail.

Signed,
Mr. Gordon Stud

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 20.
Fri., Nov. 17, 1972,
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Patricia Devitt
Martin Jones
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
Backpage: Bob Mutrie
Photos: Pete Boag

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society or the University. Offices are located in the Students' Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

Applause

Dear Editor:

I must applaud Mr. Dick Shonnery's learned epistle on the subject of film critics. It was an acid attack upon the fair features of that profession which was long overdue and which will, I trust, leave it scarred for life. To have noticed that the remarks had PRECISELY zero content (as opposed to the imprecise zero with which we are all so familiar) and to have expressed that observation so eloquently, gave precise example of the kind of precision of observation and writing so sadly lacking in the original work. Language is made to be precise, of course; a critic can have no excuse for not expressing conceptual ideas, impressions, feelings and aesthetic evaluations in simple, monosyllabic and concrete language. Mr. Dick Shonnery's ability to express his exact meaning in such accurate language was a fine example of language used to perfection. It is quite ridiculous for a critic of any kind to expect his reader to reach behind his words for meanings that are in any way abstract, ephemeral, metaphysical, metaphorical, allegorical or associated in any way with those demands for imagination which have so vilely weakened our noble language. Without wishing to take the wind out of Mr. Shonnery's anal conjectures, dare I suggest that the word 'strictive' may have been a misprint for 'stricture'. Since the possiblity did not occur to Dick Shonnery himself, it must at best be wildly fanciful. However, despite the word's guileful di-syllabic nature, it would seem to come close to fitting into the 'sense' of the passage. Such unforgivable human errors (an ever-present feature of the Journal) can make nonsense, sorry, GREATER nonsense of a piece of critical writing.

Again, cloth head coverings elevated to Dick Shonnery.

Theo Soreass.

P.S. I hate to be pedantic, but if Mr. Shonnery cares to leaf through his pages, I think he will find that there are only five 'A's in that exemplum of precisely expressive language AAAAARGH.

User's Committee defends itself

Dear Editor,

Recent critics of the University Centre proposals appear to assume that a large monolithic structure is envisioned. They reach two conclusions as a result of this assumption: first, that large resources will be poured into the scheme with very little benefit to the university community; secondly, that the construction of the new Centre will effectively preclude the development of any further sub-Centres. They further assume that the University can have a series of sub-Centres without a Centre.

We believe these assumptions are false and misrepresent the substance of the proposals for a University Centre. The first initiative for a University Centre came from the AMS in 1968. The initial concept was for a large building of perhaps 150,000 to 200,000 square feet. Two successive committees, the University Centre Advisory Committee and a University Centre Planning Committee, changed this concept. In particular, the University Centre Planning Committee submitted a report in the spring of 1971 for approval by the Senate as a planning document. That document was the result of an intensive study during the winter and spring of 1971, with the assistance of a firm of architect-planners. The idea of sub-Centres originated during this period, and both the consultants and the Committee reached a number of conclusions after extensive consultation with the university community. These results are not ancient history even though one full academic year, 1971-72, has passed since the reports were submitted. Even so, the main conclusions have been revised and up-dated by the present Committee as follows:

1. That Queen's University needs a University Centre system rather than a single building.

2. That a University Centre system requires one main building of modest size as a focal point, and to provide certain services that otherwise are not possible in a university community of our size.

3. That the main building would have the first priority, but that we would have to keep clearly in mind the development of sub-Centres.

(NOTE: This latter conclusion was not merely a pious hope; as a result of the Users' Committee recommendation $80,000 has been allocated to the first sub-Centre which in fact will be completed in the Arts-Social Science Complex before the main Centre is built.)

4. That the present Students' Memorial Union is badly designed. Moreover, with an area of some 45,000 square feet it was designed for a much smaller university community. When the Students' Memorial Union was completed in 1948 the population of Queen's University was under 2,000. At present it is heavily used because it is the only facility available to us. The Union remains an ideal location for student activities - being next to the Physical Education complex - and is not suitable for academic uses. Accordingly it makes good sense to alter the Union substantially to make it a much more useful and pleasant building.

5. That an additional building is needed physically connected to the Union, so that the two units as a complex will provide the necessary services to improve the quality of life of the university community. The size of this additional structure has been described as about 60,000 square feet, that is, a building a little larger than the existing Union. It is important to understand how this building will be apportioned, both in terms of use and finance.

a) About 8,000 square feet, or ⅛ of the building, is intended for a commercial service of a modest kind, financed by bank loan and entirely self-supporting. Financing this area in no way affects funds available by gift or subscription. Of the 8,000 square feet some 50 per cent would be taken up by a bank; the remainder by small shops such as a gift shop, variety store, launderette, dry cleaning outlet, barber shop, etc.

b) A further 22,000 square feet, or 1-3 of the building, is expected to house a new University book store. The book store would be neither rent-free nor entirely paid for through revenues at a commercial rate. The decision, about whether the book store is to be moved to a new University Centre and how much of the overhead costs it should bear, is one for the whole university community; a special task force of the Senate and Board of Trustees has been established to make that decision. If it is finally decided to include the book store in the complex, then ½ of the new structure, some 30,000 square feet, will consist of a new university book store and self-amortizing commercial services. If it is decided to leave the book store in its present location, the Unitersity Centre building would decrease approximately 1-3 in size to a building no larger than the existing Union. (It is possible that the commercial services might be increased by 2,000 ro 3,000 square feet to compensate for the peripheral services that the book store might otherwise have offered.)

c) The remaining 30,000 square feet is best viewed as adding to the existing 45,000 square feet in the Union, making a total of 75,000 square feet for University Centre activities. A large portion of the new space will be needed to make major improvements in dining facilities. It is not feasible to attain the obviously-needed dining improvements by simply renovating the Union: the space there is too small even for the present uses and the structure does not permit easy modifications. We hope the new food service space will be much more efficient, attractive and flexible, designed for multi-purpose use such as a pub and coffee shop in the evening. The remaining portion of the new space will allow the re-arrangement and inclusion of: increased recreational facilities (table tennis, games room); meeting and storage space for clubs (using economical space-saving and space-sharing design); satisfactory space, location and layout for services such as Career Planning and Placement, and for organizations such as the AMS, Alumni, and others with poor accommodation at present. With re-organization and renovation, the Students' Memorial Union would be a vigorous and useful part of the University Centre system. Many of the activities will continue to be housed in the Union and all its space would be fully used.

We believe this review should dispel any notion that we are planning a large monolithic University Centre building to monopolize all non-academic activities. The amount of additional space for University Centre activities is about 30,000 square feet, or substantially less than the existing space in the Students' Memorial Union. Further, a large portion of this space is for better quality food facilities - and all opinion and information over the last three years has shown a continuing demand for improvement in this area. The cost of 30,000 square feet is about a million and a half dollars. The cost of renovating the 45,000 square feet in the present Students' Memorial Union could be from a half million to one million dollars, providing a total of 75,000 square feet including improved eating facilities, but excluding commercial services and book store. There is plenty of room left for the planning and creation of new sub-Centres in a university community of 13,000 people.

For instance, we are considering increasing the seating for noon eating at the main Centre by 50 per cent, surely not a gigantic increase when we recognize that the student population has increased by many times that number in recent years. We believe this leaves lots of business for dining facilities in the Arts-Social Science sub-Centre, facilities in the Health Sciences and, we think, for facilities in one other sub-Centre.

We believe that the best way to provide the services and facilities discussed above is to include them in a combined new building and renovated Union. To reduce new construction below the levels contemplated would probably not be feasible economically. In addition, there remains some question about the feasibility of the new building should the university book store not become part of it. What are the implications for the sub-Centre of not building a new University Centre? We believe that a university system of sub-Centres is dependent upon at least a modest main Centre. There must be some means of providing administrative staff and a university-wide management committee that assists in planning programs for the system as a whole. Sub-Centres without a main Centre would merely be isolated improvements in amenities for the occupants of the area immediately near the sub-Centre. It would simple not be a "system". In fact it would deny the very object of the AMS in 1968 when it recognized that Queen's was becoming a big university. If there is not even a modest focal point, a place where people from across the large campus usually meet, the separation between faculties and departments, and between various activities will continue. Thus, to abandon the concept of a main Centre in favour of sub-Centres only, is to create not a mediaeval village but a scattering of isolated hamlets.

One final point: a large scale survey has shown that a very large majority of people in the University want and would use the facilities proposed for the Centre. We are not persuaded to ignore these expressed wishes because of the views of a vocal minority who think it's good for us to walk to Princess Street to the bank.

Sue Dowler
Dan Norman
Dan Soberman
for the University Centre Users' Committee

Our reply

We admit that the university centre concept articulated here includes the need for sub-centres. However, while paying lip-service to sub-centres, no plans for them have been discussed except for the one in the Arts and Science complex.

We again emphasize that full consideration of sub-centres be made. This means ensuring that not all the "traffic generators" be included in the main centre. The User's Committee stresses the need for a "focal point, where people from across the large campus usually meet" or else "the separation between faculties and departments, and between various activities will continue." However, we wish to point out that the present Union was designed for this purpose and we would all be naive to assume that it has fulfilled this function.

The Committee boasts that a large scale survey has shown that a majority of people in the University want the Centre. We urge them to publicize these statistics as the only favourable opinion evident appears to come from the committee itself.

Illiterates Focus on Women

by Steven Winnett

Illiterates Anonymous, an occasional forum on literary matters sponsored by the English Department, got off to an excellent start Tuesday night with a stimulating talk by Professor R. Robertson on "The Lady (Writer, that is) from the Provinces." Professor Robertson's special interest is the comparative approach to literature, especially Commonwealth literature (he is a New Zealander).

Women writers do not figure prominently in our literary studies, but increasing attention is being paid to them in the American Universities. Professor Robertson's special interest is those women writers who are on the periphery, who are outside the literary, social and geographic centres of their times. Peripheral, minor writers are important in literary studies: a perceptive, responsive reader can "squeeze" their works and learn a great deal from them about the nature of literature - why is their literature?

One of the most valuable things to be learned from a study of the colonies (Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa et.al) is that literature needs a centre to exist. It also operates on a vertical scale, of major and minor. Concepts of literature which come from the centre tend to be dominated by time, ie. by an awareness of tradition. But tradition can also be seen in spatial terms, as the development not of a temporal but of a geographic sense of space.

Professor Robertson postulated the following "law": Out in space is back in time. Thus, today we go for a holiday - but with a return ticket. "Imagine the psychic disorder of those who came (e.g. to Canada from England in the 19th century) with a one-way ticket. The literature they produced tended to be surely provincial - writers would compensate for the loss of a centre by looking back in time to the centre. Women, however, were less aware of this than men, and they tended to celebrate place in more detail. "Imagine poor Sangster here in Kingston, looking out his window and trying to describe the St. Lawrence in the terms and forms of Spenser. It can't be done: you can't see the Thames in the St. Lawrence. He can't celebrate space, so he celebrates the cosmos" - at which point affairs become rather lamentable. The study of literature, however can be a question of perspectives.

Professor Robertson offered other probing observations on the nature of the novel written by the lady from the provinces. She tends to write a very poetic kind of novel (e.g. Wuthering Heights), then tries to conceal the source of her poetic impulse.

The further away from the centre, the more one finds women writers. Are women more important in the provinces? Women dominated provincial literary circles in the last century, and in the colonies women were often first in a particular literary field. The first novel by a native-born Canadian woman: St. Ursula's Convent, by a Miss Hunter, published in Kingston in 1824. The first novel with a Canadian subject was by a woman; Frances Brouke's The History of Emily Montague (1763). Furthermore, women writers have tended to be important very early in their particular region: Isabelle Crawford in Canada ("her reputation is going up and up"), Katherine Mansfield in New Zealand, Olive Shreiner in South Africa. "These writers are often (strongly) feminist; they are more conscious of intimate space than men; they are more influenced by their fathers than by their mothers; they have a particular way of using children in their work, unlike men."

The possibilities are large, argued Professor Robertson. "Maybe there is a different aesthetic waiting to be tapped, perhaps when we have the first major woman dramatist or poet."

A final suggestion: for these women regional writers, their most attractive, central character is likely to be the provincial artist (a centrist writer like George Eliot will look at provincial people in general). "They will be concerned with the problem of an artist in a provincial society." This may be what lies behind Anne of Green Gables (a valuable book from this perspective): the confrontation between a small, imaginative child, a girl, in a flat and unimaginative provincial society, and all the problems that come out of that conflict."

(Reporter's Note: Illiterates Anonymous is open to all. Not only is the discussion stimulating, but also the cookies served at the interval are some of the best in Kingston).

Division of Concerts

Tonight - 8:30 p.m.
Dunning Hall
Gary Towlen, Pianist
Beethoven, Ravel, Poulenc,
Prokofiev, Faure
$1.00 at the door

Sunday - 8:00 p.m.
Grant Hall
Vaghy String Quartet
Dvorak, Beethoven,
Shostakovitch
$1.00 at the door

Southern Comfort: it's the only way to travel.

Join the fun on the S.S. Southern Comfort. The party takes off any night and the only baggage you need is some Southern Comfort, ice, and mix.
See you on the levee.

Arrivals from the South:

Cold Comfort
Pour 1½ ounces of Southern Comfort over crushed ice. Add a twist of lemon.

Comfort Screwdriver
Pour 1½ ounces of Southern Comfort over ice. Top up with orange juice.

Comfort Collins
Mix 1½ ounces of Southern Comfort with the juice of a quarter of a lime. Add some ice. Fill the glass with lemon-lime drink.

Try these, too:
Comfort 'n' Cola,
Comfort and Tonic,
Comfort Daiquiri, etc., etc.

DIVISION OF CONCERTS

Tonight,
8:30 p.m.
Dunning Hall
Gary Towlen
- pianist
Beethoven, Ravel, Poulenc
Prokofiev, Faure
$1.00 at the door

Sunday,
8:00 p.m.
Grant Hall
Vaghy String Quartet
Dvorak, Beethoven,
Shostakovitch
$1.00 at the door

Kentucky Fried Chicken TAKE HOME STORES

240 Montreal St. 542-2773 _ (nearest to Queen's)

Princess St. West at Portsmouth

Bath Road just West of K-Mart

It's Finger Lickin Good — Delivery charge extra

Snacks .95
Dinners 1.50
Family Bucket 4.25
Party Barrel 5.50

Get together and order for the whole gang.

Picnics-Parties-Dances-Sunday Dinners-Just Loafin

Special Prices for Large Functions, Dances, Parties, Etc.

Department of Film Studies

Presents

mon oncle antoine

A Film by Claude Jutra, 1971

Winner of 8 Prizes
at the 1971 Canadian Film Awards
&
Best Feature Film
1971 Chicago International Film Festival
Tuesday, November 21
9:00 P.M. in Ellis Hall
Admission $1.00
The film has English sub-titles

A Musical Weekend

The Vaghy String Quartet and pianist Gary Towlen will present two inter-related concerts this weekend sponsored by the Division of Concerts at Queen's University.

The first concert will feature the Canadian debut of pianist Gary Towlen. This concert will take place on Friday, November 17, at 8:30 p.m. in Dunning Hall.

Gary Towlen has performed throughout the United States and twelve European countries in recital, with orchestra, and on television and radio. His career as a concert-pianist began in 1955 when, at the age of 12, he made his debut in New York at the Carnegie Recital Hall.

Mr. Towlen's Friday evening recital will feature works by Beethoven, Faure, Prokofiev, Poulenc and Ravel.

The second concert will take place on November 19 at 8:00 p.m. in Grant Hall. This concert will feature the Vaghy String Quartet, artists-in-residence at Queen's. The Quartet will be assisted by Gary Towlen in a performance of the Dvorak piano quintet. Other works on the programme include the Shostakovich Quarter in C Minor, Opus 110, No. 8 and the Beethoven Quartet Opus 59, No. 1. This will be the first time the Vaghy String Quartet will perform with a pianist in Kingston. This will be the only formal concert presented by the Vaghy Quartet in Kingston this year.

Tickets for each concert are available from the Division of Concerts Box Office at the Agnes Etherington Art Centre at $1.00 students, $1.50 Grant and Dunning Hall series subscribers, $2.00 general. Telephone reservations are accepted at 547-6194. Tickets will also be available at the door.

Concert pianist Gary Towler will perform with the Vaghy String Quartet on Friday.

briskdays

Friday, November 17 -

8:30 p.m. - Division of Concerts presents a concert featuring the Canadian debut of pianist Gary Towlen. Dunning Hall. Tickets available at Division of Concerts Box Office at Agnes Etherington Art Centre. Students: $1.00, Grant and Dunning Hall Series Subscribers: $1.50, General: $2.00. Telephone reservations are accepted at 547-6194. 8:30 p.m. - "Twister" - Smoker, Wallace Hall. Sponsored by Science '75.

8:30 p.m. - Department of Drama presents The Mother (Brecht). Convocation Hall, Old Arts Building. Tickets available in Drama Department. Students $1.00, Non-Students - $2.00. School Librarianship at Faculty of Education presents A Festival of Films

7:30 p.m. - "Alice's Restaurant" (U.S. colour). Directed by Arthur Penn.

9:30 p.m. - If. . . (Great Britain).

Cost 99c. Duncan McArthur Hall Auditorium.

Saturday, November 18 -

8:30 p.m. - Drama Department presents The Mother (Brecht). Convocation Hall, Old Arts Building. Tickets available in Drama Department. Students $1.00, Non-Students $2.00.

8:30 p.m. - Susie-Q. "Monopoly" Semi-Formal. Grant and Kingston Halls. Bars Galore! Group - Father, Balbukas and Honky Tonk Piano. Tickets $4.00, $4.50 at door. Tickets on sale in the John Orr Room or at the door.

9:00 p.m. - International Club presents Dance and Bar. All welcome. Lower Lounge, International Centre.

8:30 p.m. - Hillel Coffee House "All Welcome" No Admission Charge. Coffee and Donuts. Top Entertainment. 26 Barrie St.

Sunday, November 19 -

10:30 p.m. - Sunday Folk Mass in Dunning Hall. Followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House, 164 University Ave.

4:00 p.m. - Eucharistic Celebration at Queen's Theological Hall, Faculty Lounge (2nd Floor). All welcome.

7:30 p.m. - Folk Mass in Senior Common Room, McArthur.

8:00 p.m. - Gary Towlen, pianist will perform with the Vaghy String Quarter. Dvorak Quintet, Opus 81. Other works include the Shostakovitch Quartet No. 8, Opus 110 and Beethoven Quartet, Opus 59, No. 1. Tickets at $2.00 general, $1.50 Grant and Dunning Hall series subscribers and $1.00 students. Available from Division of Concerts Box Office, Agnes Etherington. In Grant Hall.

7:30 p.m. - Hillel House presents Mr. Dick Wilson, internationally acclaimed artist. Exhibition and slide presentation. All Welcome - No Admission. 26 Barrie Street.

Monday, November 20 -

8:00 p.m. - Kingston Youth Symphony will perform under the direction of Mr. Edouard Bartlett. McArthur Hall.

8:00 - 11:00 p.m. - Auditions for "As You Like It" Production running Feb. 12 - 17. Convocation Hall.

8:00 p.m. - Family Study Group. Discussion on Children and the Family. 128 Earl Street. Second Floor.

7:30 p.m. - All those interested in forming and contributing to an arts faculty newspaper. Room 308, Kingston Hall.

8:30 p.m. - Queen's Hillel presents classic award winning film "A Wall in Jerusalem", narrated by Richard Burton. Beth Israel Congregation, 116 Centre Street, Kingston. All Welcome. Admission 50c.

Tuesday, November 21 -

7:00 p.m. - The ninth of nine weekly sessions on Human Sexuality. Population Control and The Individual. Stirling D.

8:00 - 11:00 p.m. - Auditions for "As You Like It" Productions running from Feb. 12 - 17. Convocation Hall.

8:00 - 12:00 p.m. - Biology Society Smoker, Second Floor Union. Admission: Members 25c, non-members 50c. Beer 3-$1.00. Everyone Welcome.

9:00 p.m. - Department of Film Studies, Le Cinema Quebecois presents Mon Oncle Antoine (directed by Claude Jutra, 1971) Award Winning Film. Ellis Hall.

8:30 p.m. - Professor Elan Galper, topic "Rembrandt and the Jewish Community of his Time." Hillel House, 26 Barrie St.

Off Campus -

Pubs -

Commodore - Wilson, Lorne and The Ramblers
401 Inn - Harlequin
Seaway Pub - Jacqueline and Lindsey

Theatres -

Capitol - Red Sun
Hyland - Gone With The Wind
Odeon - Valachi Papers
Domino Theatre - Peter Schaffer's Farce "Black Comedy". Fri. - Sun. 9:00 p.m.

Men's Gymnastics

Gaels meet Cornell this weekend

Like the other winter sports in the intercollegiate spectrum at Queen's, men's gymnastics is again beginning its season, the third under coach Barry Brooker.

Brooker, Canada's Olympic men's gymnastics coach at Munich this past summer, has put a heavy emphasis on conditioning and endurance during the pre-season training, and for most of the team it seems to be paying off. The Queen's coach was tremendously impressed with the conditioning of the strong Olympic contingents from Japan, Russia, North Korea, and East Germany; hence, a lot of groaning Queen's gymnasts during October.

Among those gymnasts there are five veterans, and only one rookie, Bob Dales from Sault Ste. once again as captain and should demonstrate his customary prowess in the floor exercise and Parallel Bars events, while he has been gaining considerable strength in the Side Horse, Rings, and Horizontal Bar events.

Queen's can once again expect an excellent all-around showing from Drew Strickland, a member of Ontario's Junior National contingent last year, who is showing good progress on Rings, Parallel Bars, and Side Horse. Dave Ross, Queen's resident trampoline and unicycle nut (yes, he's the one you see riding on one wheel up and down University Avenue) will put in his usual creditable performance on almost everything, although he has been handicapped in his training by recurrent ankle injuries during the summer months.

Queen's other returning veterans are second-year student Alex McLaren, who's training has been interrupted by illnesses during the fall and Delio Tortosa. Despite his sickness, McLaren shows much promise if he can get in some hard training, while Tortosa is physically stronger at this time of the season than in his past two years on the team. Thus, although the whole team is not yet in top condition, there is no reason not to expect a very good showing after December passes.

Moreover, the team has gained much by the addition of first year artsci student Bob Dales, the Ontario high school champion in Side Horse last year, who is showing remarkable improvement under the watchful eye of coach Brooker. Dales' first university calibre meet will take place this weekend against Cornell University in Ithaca, New York. For the last two years, Queen's early meets have been against American teams from Plattsburg and Brockport. Queen's beat both of these teams last year in fall competitions, and this year the team is attempting to step up a notch in competitive standing by competing against the much stronger Cornell team. All in all, it should be an interesting meet, indicating both the potential of the Queen's team, which placed third in the OUAA last year and its standing vis-a-vis the better American teams. Coach Brooker is aiming for second spot in the OUAA Finals this coming February, and to do that he will have to edge one of the strong McMaster and York teams. That's going to be a tough job to handle, since McMaster boasts the presence of Canada's first-ranked Olympic gymnast, Steve Mitruk, while York, benefitting from five or six years of experienced coaching under Yugoslav Tom Zivic, boasts the powerhouse of the league. But if past seasons are any indication, the Queen's squad will show the greatest point improvement of any of the league teams this year, and just might manage to slip into that coveted second spot. Whatever the outcome, we should see an interesting and exciting gymnastics season at Queen's this year.

Dance Workshop

Queen's will host a one-day modern dance technique workshop tomorrow, November 18th, starting at 10:00 A.M. in the Dance Studio of the Physical Education Complex. Any Queen's student interested in dance is welcome to attend; there is a $2.00 registration fee for the workshop. Classes will be held in Modern Dance Technique, Jazz (two levels), Improvisation, Modern Rhythm, Fundamentals of Movement, and Character Movement, by dancers and dance instructors from York, Toronto, Waterloo, and Queen's. Judy Jarvis, who taught at Queen's in 1969, will be one of the guest instructors.

For further information, or to register, contact Cathy Smith (544-4835) or Anne Gardner (548-4288). Registration will take place between 9:00 A.M. and 9:45 A.M. on Saturday; the $2.00 fee can be paid at that time.

cotton's sporthouse
TELEPHONE 544-1066
399 PRINCESS STREET, KINGSTON K7L 1B9

Peter Cotton would like to welcome you to his new sporthouse located in Elrond College, 399 Princess St. Peter is a member of the Canadian Ski Instructors Alliance and was a member of the crew that placed second in the 1971 Stark World Sailing Championships. In other words, he competes in sports, he doesn't just sell sporting goods. The staff has been chosen accordingly - even Peter's wife (coach of the Queen's Women's Ski Team)

Peter wanted the type of shop that novices could come to and receive sound advice as to their sporting goods needs, and where experts could shop and converse intelligently with staff who knew what they were talking about.

Why don't you come in and compare prices and the manner in which you are treated by the staff. We feel you will be pleasantly surprised

WE CARRY

- ski equipment (cross country & alpine)
- training shoes and suits
- hockey, squash, tennis, badminton and related clothing

classified

LOST FROM LEONARD HALL small black and white cat with brown collar. Phone 544-7463.

FOR SALE (to females only) - Are you having trouble sleeping at nights? Exam pressures starting to get you down? What you need is a little excitement! The men for the job are "Three Available Males Inc". Call Don, Art, Scott at 544-0083. Business hours - 12 noon - 12 noon 7 days a week.

IF YOU OR YOUR friends are graduating and know of a 4-6 bedroom house we would like to find out about it. Call 544-8427 Maureen or 544-8433 Judy.

WANDERLUST is Coming! January 13.

IF YOU ENJOYED the reversal of roles for Suzie-Q, try us. Elrond - 544-1842.

BIRTHDAY WISHES for the perfect girl will be accepted at 544-8094 anytime on Nov. 17. Have a good day Brenda.

SKI EQUIPMENT: This equipment is new, never used and if it's just right for you, it is a really great buy. 1) RIESINGER "Europlast Super" 180 cm (made in Austria) fiberglass skis, split-metal edge, with Salomon 404 bindings. $55.00. 2) VECTOR "Killy" 195 cm wood-metal skis, made by HEAD in Austria. Don't confuse with much cheaper Vector skis sold locally. $80.00 (list at $160.00). Call collect 354-3426, ask for Joe.

CHESTERFIELD for Sale - Brown, some wear, good springs. At $25 a steal - worth seeing even if you don't need one. Call 544-2765.

LOST - 1 black memo book with Sc '73 crest on cover, and 1 copy National Building Code Supplement No. 4. Please phone Bill Patterson 544-2673.

FURNISHED ROOM close to Queen's. 196 Union. 546-5048.

FOR SALE - Stereo Cassette Recorder-Player with built in AM-FM radio, 2 component speakers; has two track record level meter, 2 stereo microphones, can record direct from radio. It's three months old, has a year's warranty, cost $325, but I need $250.00 NOW. Phone Paul 544-7982.

ANYONE knowing the whereabouts of a Queen's tunic and mitts lost last Tuesday, please contact Betty 544-8611.

TODAY IS THE DAY for the PERFECT girl. She'll be waiting. Call 544-8094.

at the art centre

PROGRESS IN CONSERVATION arranged by the National Gallery of Canada and continuing to December 10

KINGSTON WOODCUTS by GWYNETH TRAVERS last day is Sunday, November 19

SELECTIONS FROM THE PERMANENT COLLECTION continuing until December 21

HILLEL
COFFEE HOUSE
"ALL WELCOME" NO ADMISSION
SATURDAY, NOV. 18, 8:30 P.M.
COFFEE AND DONUTS
TOP ENTERTAINMENT.
26 Barrie Street

HILLEL HOUSE, 26 Barrie St. Presents
MR. DICK WILSON, internationally acclaimed artist - EXHIBITION AND SLIDE PRESENTATION Sunday, Nov. 19
7:30 P.M. ALL WELCOME - NO ADM.

QUEEN'S HILLEL PRESENTS CLASSIC AWARD WINNING FILM"
"A WALL IN JERUSALEM"
Monday, Nov. 20th, 8:30 P.M. at Beth Israel Congregation, 116 Centre Street
ALL WELCOME - ADMISSION 50c
Proceeds to aid Soviet Jewry.
THIS FILM REGARDED AS A MUST.

CLARITY, CUT, COLOR . . . WE'LL TEACH YOU THE C C C'S OF DIAMONDS

A fine diamond must have excellence in clarity, color, cut. Must be clear and free from visible flaws under high magnification. The color should be white and pure. The cut must be exact to bring out the greatest brilliance. These are the basic facts of diamonds. Now, let's look at the diamonds.

KINNEAR d'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET,
KINGSTON, ONTARIO
CANADA

From the sidelines...

by Chis Boon

For openers this week, our congratulations to Mary McLaughlin and her committee for their work on PHESA's 'Olympics 76' symposium. It was an excellent effort all around, although the absence of any Montreal spokesmen hurt the balance a little bit. The two days brought up one interesting contrast: there seems to be an almost complete dichotomy between the approach taken by the present organizers (even granting the serious intent of Drapeau's "down-to-earth" statements) of the '76 games, and the tack taken by Thursday's speakers, especially Bruce Kidd. In some ways, a direct confrontation between these two camps might have been very exciting - at least for those out of the line of fire.

I have some doubts about certain suggestions that Kidd put forward. Most specifically, he suggests that team sports be dropped from the Olympics to save money (by reducing the number of competitors requiring transportation, food and lodging, training and playing facilities, etc., etc.) and bring the games back to a more "human" scale. If the cost of the Olympic competition is a real concern, then the more logical (not necessarily the best) course of action would be to drop the sports that don't draw big crowds, soak the major TV networks a fortune (spread over four years, of course) for the rights to the various events, and apply these profits to the cost of staging the games. This, naturally, would be rampant commercialism on a gigantic scale, and one of the very things many people have long been labelling as the problem with the current Olympic set-up, but I wonder...Handled properly, such revenues could probably cover better than three-quarters of the total cost of the Games, as they now exist. Maybe the team sports aren't so bad, after all. Actually, I suspect that Kidd's long-standing war with team athletics may go back to his early competitive days, when track got almost nothing, and the football and hockey teams at U. of T. had almost carte blanche regarding expenses. Maybe not, but Bruce is human, too.

On to the coming weekend, and the sports scene is picking up with a vengeance. Hockey has a double-header here Friday, with the Gals taking on Guelph at 6:30 and the Gaels meeting Ryerson at 8:00. Come early and make a night of it! The Gals also play Western Saturday at 3:00 but the men have a thrilling bus ride to Sudbury ahead of them before taking on the Voyageurs on Sunday afternoon. Both basketball teams are on the road, too. The men open their exhibition schedule with games against McGill and Sir George in Montreal, while the Gals make the pilgramage to Ottawa, facing Ottawa U. on Friday and Carleton on Saturday. The Volleyball Gals make the same trip, an encouraging sign of co-ordination between our teams. Men's volleyball hosts a tournament here at Queen's, starting at 10:00 am in the Bartlett Gym; the Gaels' OUAA rivals will be in attendance, so there should be some top-flight matches. Gymnastics get under way with a competition against Cornell in Ithaca, N.Y., while a modern dance workshop is scheduled here on Saturday. Judy Jarvis, one of the instructors, taught at Queen's in 1969, and is a very knowledgeable and graceful dancer in her own right. Those interested in such things would be well advised to look in on the sessions. Still on the clinic route, there will be a wrestling clinic in the Combatives room of the PEC tomorrow; those interested should see John Albinson for details.

Finally, the pool sharks get their chance with the men competing in the OUAA Relays at York, while the Gals take part in an Invitational meet at McMaster.

A few notes in closing. Some people were quite shocked Lutheran parlayed a "Wishbone" offence into an upset win over Western last Saturday. I wasn't one of them. I doubt there is a college team in the country that could defense a well-run triple-option attack. Provided you have a mobile quarterback, who can run himself, this offense makes most defensive ends and linebackers wish they'd stuck to tennis. Maybe we'll run one next year.

bews news

by Peter Watts

One of the four new sports in the Bews program got underway Tuesday night and indications are that inner-tube waterpolo will be one of the more popular sports in Bews this year.

Inner-tube waterpolo is played by seven players at a time. Each one is equipped with an inner tube. Teams consist of three forwards, three defencemen, and a goalie. The teams start from either end of the pool and, on the whistle, maneuver as fast as possible to the centre of the pool to get possession of the ball. The first team to get the ball maintains possession and the first pass must be back into the player's own zone. Players are not allowed within the two-yard line which stretches across the front of each goal.

A total of twelve teams have registered for the program; they have been divided into two sections of six teams each. Most of the games are on Tuesday and Thursday nights at 9:30, so if you're interested, drop over to the Physical Education Centre and watch the fun.

Anyone interested in playing is urged to sign the lists on the notice board in the locker room or contact your athletic stick. Watch the notice boards as well for signs of upcoming games.

After three weeks of poor weather, the finals in flag football, soccer, and rugby are still not completed. Last night, Business Grads were to meet Mining in the last game of the quarter-finals in rugby. The winner qualifies to meet Mechanical in one semi-final round while PHE meets Civil in the other. The winners of these semi-finals will then play off to decide a champion.

In soccer, Engineering Grads meet Commerce '73 while Civil plays Electrical and PHE takes on Chemistry Grads. The winner of this last series will meet Commerce '74.

A look at Bews for the week ending November 10th, finds Civil and Math continuing to lead the race for the Bews Trophy, as we move toward the end of the fall schedule. The top ten are:

1. Civil and Math	13,145
2. Mining	9,110
3. Commerce '73	8,833
4. PHE	8,757
5. Chemical	7,355
6. Mechanical	7,161
7. Medicine	5,791
8. Commerce '75	5,602
9. Commerce '76	5,470
10. Law '74	4,929

GREAT STEAKS
try the Porterhouse Special
10 oz RED BRAND aged beef
Baked Potatoe - Vegetable
Rolls and Butter
Limited Offer 3.99 Red Brand Beef Only

For $1.40 more you get Soup or Juice - Tossed Fancy Salad (Best salad in town) Beverage and choice of Desert.

Aunt Lucy's Restaurant Tavern
Princess West at Portsmouth
No reservations
Relaxed Informal Dining
Great Place For That Special Date!

backpagebackpagebackpage

Six run for Aldermen in Sydenham Ward

Canada: Two names stand for mayor as nominations close

KINGSTON — Only two candidates are standing for election to the Kingston mayor's office in the December 4 municipal election. THE DEADLINE FOR NOMINATIONS ENDED Monday. Veteran Alderman George Speal, on city council since 1966 will be running against Paul Guindon a twenty-two year old unemployed high school dropout.

In the Alderman race, Ald. Grant Timmins and Ald. George Webb were returned by acclamation in St. Lawrence Ward.

There are six candidates for Alderman in Sydenham Ward, the ward in which Queen's University is located. They are Ald. James Cook, a manpower counsellor, Kenneth Rowley, businessman, Keith Norton, a lawyer and teacher, James Thompson, an employee of Bell Canada. Angus Ross, engineer and Nancy Foster, housewife.

In Rideau Ward, the candidates will be Ald. Edwin Watts, Ald. James Keenleyside. Buster Doubleday, and Garth Scott.

In Victoria Ward those announcing candidacy are Ald. Kenneth Keyes, George Holloway, Kenneth Lamb, John Storring and John Gerretsen.

Candidates for the post of Alderman in Ontario Ward are Ald. Lorne McDougall, Ald. David Travers and Andrew McCorkell.

In Cataraqui Ward the candidates will be Ald. Kenneth Matthews, Ald. Earl Blaney, and Neil McArthur.

The five candidates for alderman in Frontenac Ward are Ald. Victor Brighman, Ald. Thomas Hagerman, Clyde Scrutton, Thomas Lewis and Joseph Hawkins.

Each ward in Kingston elects two Aldermen.

There was a third candidate for mayor who withdrew the day after nominations closed. Lawyer Jack Chong filed his candidacy on Monday but finally decided that he "didn't have the experience necessary. He had originally entered the race to ensure that there would be a "meaningful election."

QUEBEC — In a unanimous decision five Quebec Appeal Court judges voted to uphold the one year jail sentences given to three top provincial labour leaders by a lower court.

Marcel Pepin, President of the Conference of National Trade Unions, Louis Laberge, President of the Quebec Federation of Labour and Yvon Charbonneau, President of the Quebec Teachers Corp. were sentenced to one year in prison for contempt of court following an eleven day strike by 200,000 civil servants last April.

However, the Quebec Appeal Court reduced the sentences for thirty of the forty-four minor union officials who had been sentenced to six months in prison and given a fine of $5,000 on a contempt charge. Most of the sentences were reduced to one week in jail and a fine of $1,000, on the grounds that they were only following orders.

The unionists have thirty days in which to appeal their case to the Supreme Court of Canada.

OTTAWA — Over half of the candidates running in the October 30 federal election lost their $200 deposits which they were required to put up "as a sign of their seriousness". The deposit is returned to all winners and the losers who poll at least half as many votes as the winner.

With 591 of the 1117 candidates who ran losing their deposits the federal treasury is $118,220 richer.

One hundred of 251 New Democratic Party candidates lost their deposit, and 133 of 166 Socreds lost their deposits. The figure was much lower for the Liberals and Conservatives who lost 29 and 84 deposits respectively. Eighteen of the Liberal losses were were in the Prairie provinces.

TORONTO — Premier William Davis announced that he will back a proposal making Ontario Hydro a crown corporation, as recommended by the recently published first volume report of Task Force Hydro.

Davis stated that the creation of a crown corporation would make Hyrdro more accessible to the public and strengthen their business efficiency. Hydro would report to the Legislature through a Minister Without Portfolio.

KINGSTON — There are 8,000 more people eligible to vote in he December 4 Kingston municipal election than last time. Seven thousand of these are registered on the voters' lists. Sydenham Ward especially experienced a sharp increase in eligible voters going from one of the smallest of the seven wards to second largest with a total of 6842 eligible votes.

In addition to being asked to vote for Alderman and Mayor, voters will also be asked to decide whether they prefer to vote in a general election for Alderman, effectively abolishing the ward system. There will also be a question on the ballot requesting a decision on flouridation of the city water supply.

TORONTO — Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon has announced that he will resign as head of the party in a leadership convention next fall. The Liberals were badly defeated in the last election, losing seven seats to the Conservatives.

"Maybe now the government will know what it feels like to be in a minority."

VICTORIA — The government of British Columbia has announced that it may take stringent measures to control industrial pollution, imposing financial charges against polluters not holding a government permit. There was only one such charge laid during the whole Social Credit administration, defeated earlier this fall.

Sorry...

The Looking About column in last Wednesday's issue was incorrectly attributed to Bob Mutrie and should have been credited to Peter Jensen.

World: France plans H-bomb test

PARIS — France has announced that it plans to detonate a hydrogen bomb of megaton strength this summer and experts say that major fallout is expected. The explosion will occur near Muroroa Atoll in the South Pacific, 1,000 miles south of Tahiti.

It is France's second hydrogen bomb test in their effort to achieve full nuclear capability. While the United States and Russia conduct underground tests, France is without any underground facilities and so will be running the test above ground.

France and China are the only two powers who did not sign the 1963 partial nuclear test-ban treaty which prohibits explosions in the atmosphere, outer space and under water.

France is planning to install hydrogen missiles in nuclear-powered Subs by 1976.

SAIGON — The United States delivered thirty-one amphibious vehicles to South Vietnam last week as part of an equipment buildup in anticipation of a ceasefire. One of the proposals of the treaty put forward by North Vietnam for approval by the United States specifies that arms held by both sides in the conflict are to be frozen at their existing levels when the treaty is put into effect.

The amphibious vehicles will carry thirty-four troops or 18,000 pounds of cargo. U.S. military and chartered planes are landing more war materials at Saigon.

VALDOSTA, GEORGIA — There will be a county-wide vote here on November 27 to decide whether mixed drinks should be sold in their bars. As the sale of mixed drinks has already been going on illegally for years, it was decided that it should be voted on. At present only mixers such as coca-cola are being served-at seventy-five cents a glass.

'We're somewhere between Washington, Paris, and Vietnam!'

Queen's
Journal
Volume One Hundred, No. 21
Tuesday, November 21, 1972

Artsci reps debate budgetary committee

The representatives from fourteen Departmental Student Councils, Student Senators and AMS and Faculty Board representatives clashed on Thursday night in a meeting called to approve a new joint student representative body.

"Arts and Science student representatives have not been making a meaningful representation on governing bodies," John Bankes, Faculty Board representative and co-organizer of the meeting stated. He called for a joint caucus to act as an information distributing body for students on the Faculty Board and Senate.

The report distributed to the meeting stated that the caucus would give student representatives "mutual enlightenment" and allow discussion of specific issues pending in the Senate and Faculty Board.

Bankes proposed that a caucus be formed to include every student of the Faculty of Arts and Science with representative power. "It is to be an informed body of representatives," he said, but pointed out that it would not be formed to issue a stereotype decision representing all students on campus.

ASUS president Ted Cape intoduced the "selling point" to the meeting, pointing out that the Society experienced a $3500 surplus this year and that they want to devote it to the DSC group which at present is unfunded.

He proposed that a caucus subsidiary be given the money for sponsoring "low key" activities for students in their departments. This amount would be a forerunner of a similar fixed amount to be alloted by ASUS in future years.

Both Cape and Bankes emphasized the role of the DSC's in a new council as that which is closest to students and as such is the "potentially most creative."

However, Student Senator Stewart Searle objected that the budgetary committee would be an extra body taking over the function of a body we already have for allocating financial resources. He was referring to the ASUS executive.

Cape pointed out that ASUS is too remote from DSC's and that there is too much red tape in applying for funds from ASUS. He pointed out that the surplus would be strictly for DSC's and that a budgetary committee would "keep them all constantly aware that money is available."

The budgetary committee became a major point of contention at the meeting and the idea of the two part caucus-committee structure faced strong attack.

In discussing the caucus, Bankes tried to assure the meeting that "we are not a power trip." The caucus. he claimed is "not an attempt to increase students' political power, but to give them more information on which to act."

Bankes also noted that logical extension would be an annual retreat for the caucus to "discuss education in its very broad ideals."

Searle stated that for him, the idea of the caucus "strikes close to home," that people on various bodies haven't been fulfilling their responsibility." He decried

Continued on Page 5

Voting today for Rector, AMS fee

Queen's students go to the polls today to vote for rector. The candidates are: Brian Copeland, Peter Crickmore, Gary Gannage, Victoria Kemsley, and Eric Salsbury.

Also on the ballot is a referendum asking that the AMS specific fee be raised a dollar fifty to $8.00. Currently, the fee is $6.50 (AMS - $5.30, Band - $.95, and Reserve fund - $.25.) The change would take affect for the 1972-73 academic year. A simple majority is necessary for passage.

Polls are located as follows: Library: 10:30 - 7:00; Union: 10:30 - 4:30; Jeffery: 10:30 - 3:30; Humphrey: 10:30 - 3:30; MacDonald (law) 10:30 - 12:30; McArthur (near the Student Council office): 10:30 - 1:30; Matheson Room, KGH: 11:30 - 12:30; and the dinner lines at Ban Righ, Brockington and Leonard.

Davis says 'nothing' on fees, OSAP

Premier Bill Davis said 'nothing' report members of the Ontario Federation of Student's executive who met with him last Thursday afternoon.

The students were meeting with the Premier to discuss the tuition increase and the OSAP changes in an attempt to have them returned to the levels which they were at last year.

The student leaders also were seeking a "clear and unambiguous statement" of the government policies on tuition and student aid for the 1972-1973 academic year.

Evelyn Flint elected head of staff assn.

Queen's Staff Association, and organization of the Queen's non-academic staff has elected its executive which will sit until the annual meeting in February. It includes President, Evelyn Flint from the Secretary's Office; Vice-President, Janice James, Departmental Assistant in the Office of Career Planning and Placement; Secretary, Agnes Henderson, Office Supervisor in the Department of Metallurigcal Engineering and Treasurer, Ronald Howard, Administrative Assistant in the Department of Geological Sciences. Six executive members at large were also elected.

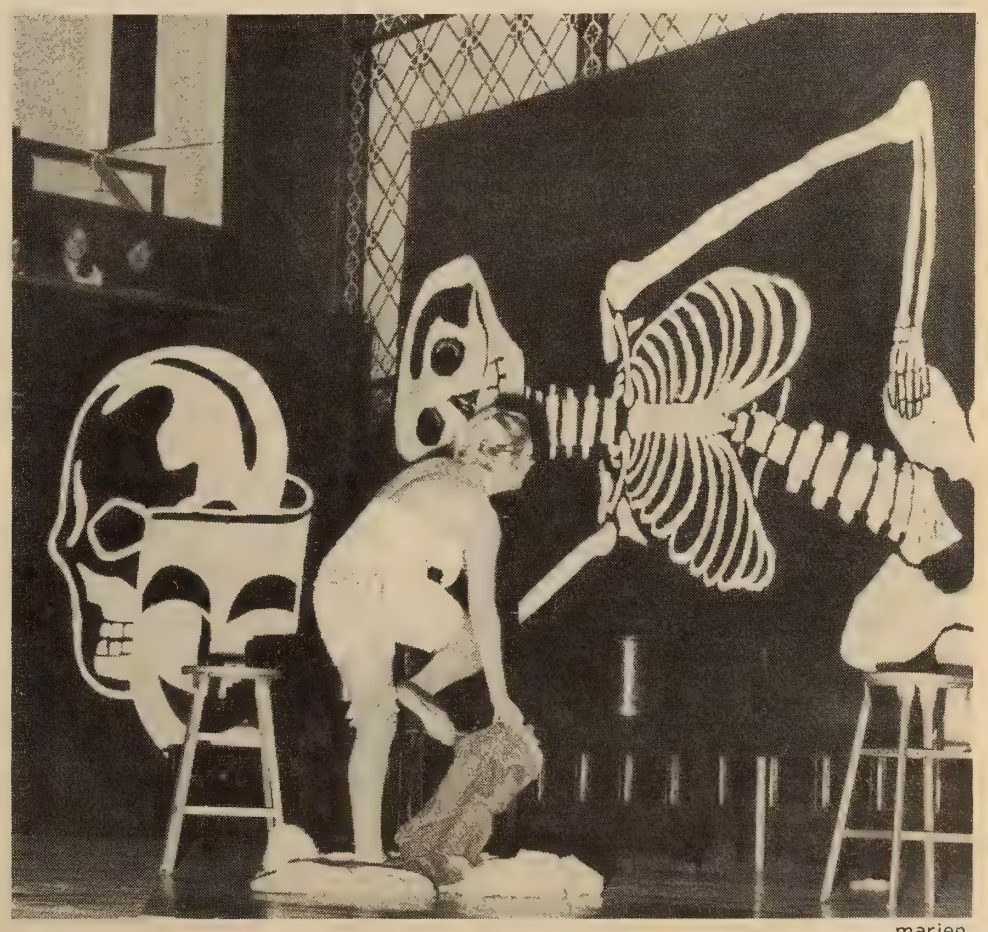
There has been "quite a bit of interest" in the association according to Ted Flint, an executive member at large.

Several committees have already been set up to discuss grievances, membership, recruiting and job postings.

Impact of the Baha'i, the new world order

by Raj Anand

The oneness of mankind. Independent investigation of truth. The common foundation of all religions. The essential harmony of science and religion. Equality of opportunity for men and women. Elimination of prejudice of all kinds. Universal compulsory education. A spiritual solution of the economic problem. A universal auxiliary language. Universal peace upheld by a world government.

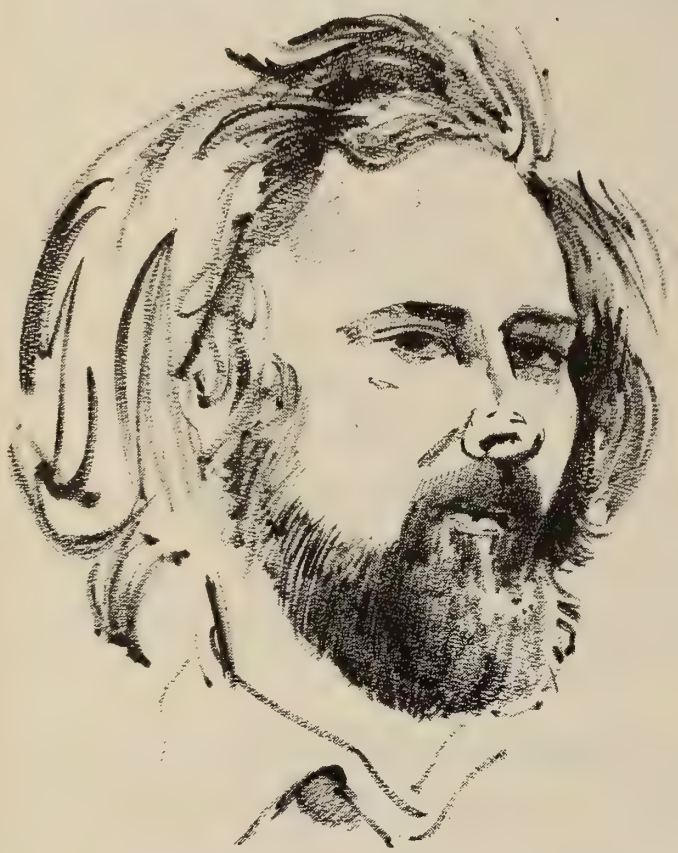


These are the beliefs of the Baha'is, a relatively new but rapidly expanding group, as stated by Dr. Ghadirian in an informal discussion period in the International Centre last Thursday evening. Dr. Ghadirian has been a Baha'i all his life, and was in fact forced to endure persecution in Persia, his native country, because of his beliefs. After spending some time in Montreal, Dr. Ghadarian moved to Kingston; he is now working at Kingston General Hospital.

The word Baha'i is derived from the Arabic for "follower of glory." The religion was founded in Persia by Baha'u'llah, the "Promised One," who declared his mission in 1863: to convert humanity to the New World Order, a term embracing all of the objectives of the Baha'is. The message of Baha'u'llah and his son 'Abdu'l-Baha was that the whole of humanity is one people; we must wipe out the artificial differences which separate us and work for the universal good.

One could argue that love and unity are among the stated goals of many religions which existed long before Baha'u-llah's time. But Dr. Ghadirian said that these other religions only considered these goals in a local or provincial, rather than universal way. As examples of this attitude, he chose patterns in human history since 1850: constant change, the fall of monarchies, world wars, corruption, anxiety, crime, materialism, drug abuse, the hippie movement, the generation gap. "These are all symptoms of the destruction of the Old World Order," he declared. "It is just like destroying an old building to build a new one; the new building will be the New World Order of the Baha'is."

Continuing his discussion of the originality of the Baha'i goals, he



Continued on Page 5

- marien

Undressing for Meds Variety night! For further details see page 7.

I've been told bluntly that my effort to stimulate the student vote is being wasted - I DON'T believe it! This is why I'm putting it to you.

Members of the Committee to elect Ken Rowley for alderman for Sydenham Ward will be canvassing in residence from Nov. 12-18, and 19-25. They will be passing out declarations to vote if students have not yet been enumerated

Campaign headquarters
549-0012

Ken Rowley:

- Wants to represent Queen's students on City Council. You are 80 per cent of Sydenham Ward, and deserve representation.
- Wants to provide better liaison between the City and Queen's University.
- Wants to look into rent structures in Kingston. He has received many complaints from Queen's students regarding high rents, absentee landlords, and poor conditions.
- Look into off-street parking. Many Queen's students have been forced to find other parking as parking spots with their apartments have been taken over for commercial parking by landlords.
- Believes that building of historical value should be saved, but not at the cost of turning these places into over-priced, inadequate dwellings for students. Sometimes People in Kingston forget the biggest industry in Kingston -- Queen's University, and maybe it would be good sometimes to show a little thanks, rather than a hell of a lot of criticism.
- Is the proprietor of Hair.
- Helped sponsor the Beer Brewing Contest, and the Science Formal.
- Is an advertiser in Golden Words, the Journal and Who's Where.
- Donates to scholarships at Queen's.

Kenneth

ROWLEY

For Alderman
in Sydenham Ward

Maybe its time to get off your ass and be represented!

The Wards, water, and whiskey vote

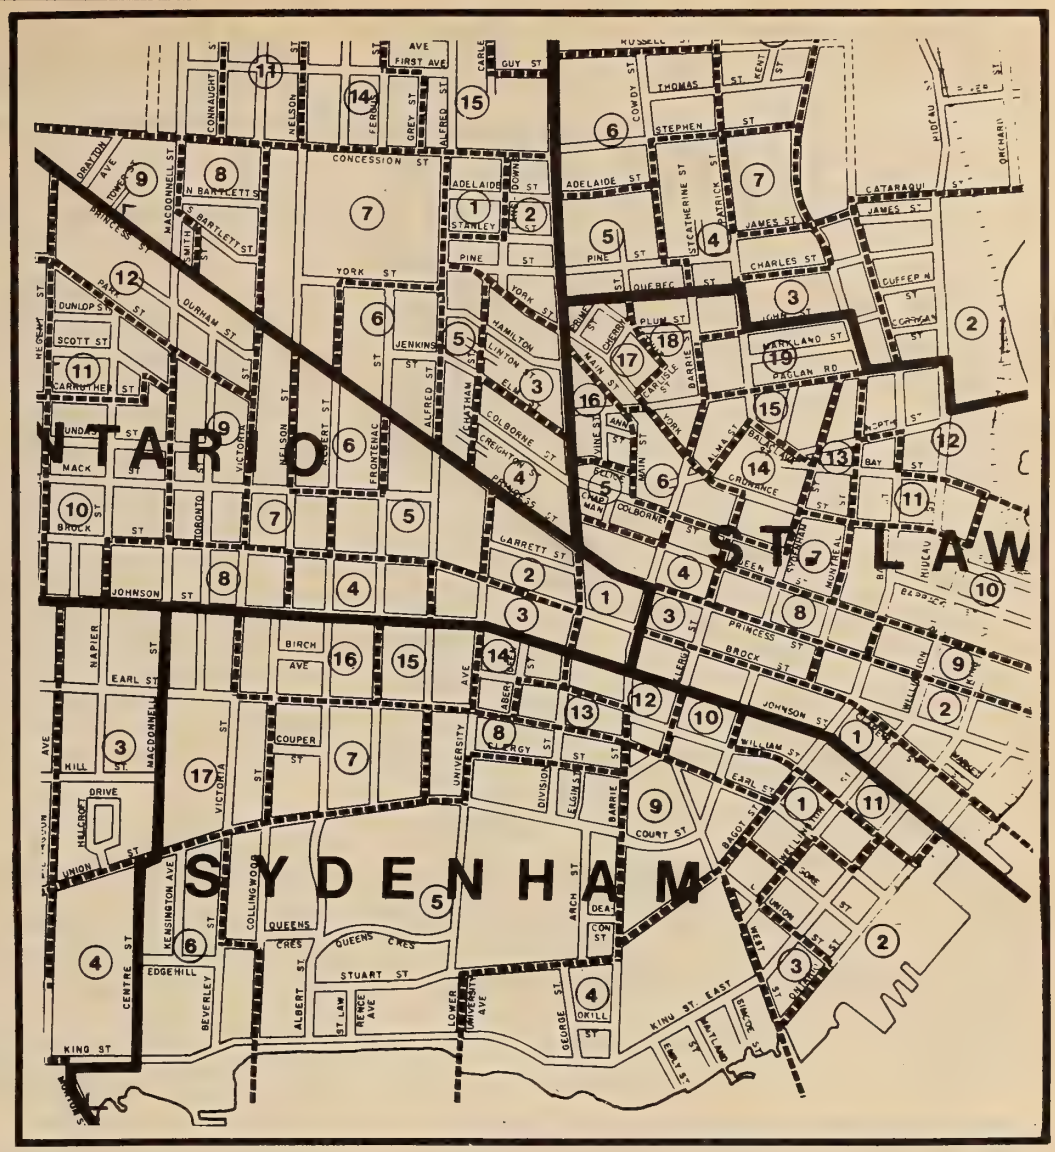
Kingston electors will have the opportunity this election to end the great "Ward Debate" that has been plaguing city officials for the last decade. One of the questions that will be appearing on the ballot in the December 4 municipal election will be whether the election of Aldermen by wards should be retained.

The alternative to the present ward system is a city-wide election of Aldermen, similar to that for mayor. At present two aldermen are elected from each of the city's seven wards.

If Kingston electors vote in favour of the proposed city-wide vote, council will be obliged to pass a bylaw removing the ward system.

Most present Aldermen, including George Webb, support retension of the ward system, pointing out that it allows for more personal contact between elected officials and taxpayers. This allows closer attention for the problems of specific areas.

Retiring Mayor Swain stated that the ward system restricts the city's overall development, and causes the growth of a "parochial" attitude. He claims that city-wide election would make Aldermen more concerned with what is good for the city as a whole.



He pointed out that personal contact can still be achieved in a city under 100,000 inhabitants, and that the city-wide vote has worked for both the Public Utilities Commission and the Kingston School Board.

Professor T.J. Plunkett, of the Institute of Local Government of Queen's is strongly against opening the vote for Alderman to a city-wide campaign, pointing out that it is necessary for the various interests and areas of the city to be represented. He also pointed out that the Ward system keeps election costs down.

Past arguments have included the proposition that a city-wide vote would allow a particular group or segment to form the majority of council.

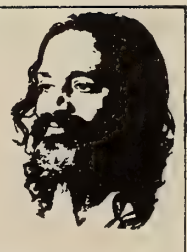
The second question to be put before electors in the municipal election will be whether the city should flouridate their water supply.

In some Wards voters will be asked to indicate whether they want to end the prolonged dry spell in the city's north-western sections. It is the last area in Kingston where liquor sales have been restricted. A majority vote will allow passage of a bylaw allowing free flow of liquor to return to the area once again.

ONTARIO
STLAW
SYDENHAM
CONCESSION ST
YORK ST
PINE ST
ADELAIDE ST
QUEEN ST
BROCK ST
PRINCESS ST
JOHNSON ST
WILLIAM ST
EARL ST
BIRCH AVE
COUPER ST
HILL ST
DRIVE
UNION ST
QUEENS CRES
STUART ST
KING ST
COURT ST
KINU ST EAST
JAMES ST
CHARLES ST
PLUM ST
MERKLAND ST
MACDONNELL ST
VICTORIA ST
UNIVERSITY AVE
COLLINGWOOD ST
ALBERT ST
ARCH ST
BARRIE ST
COLBORNE ST
LARRETT ST
MACK ST
DUNLOP ST
SCOTT ST
CARRUTHER ST
JOHNSON ST
NAPIER ST
EARL ST
HILL ST
EDGEHILL
BEVERLEY
CENTRE ST
KENSINGTON AVE
MELCROFT
UNION ST
QUEENS CRES
STUART ST
ALBERT ST
ST LAW RENCE AVE
LOWER UNIVERSITY AVE
GEORGE ST
OKILL ST
KING ST
ARCH ST
DEA CON ST
WEST ST
OKILL ST
KINU ST EAST
SIMCOE ST
MARYLAND ST
ST JAMES ST
BAGOT ST
SOPHIA ST
WILLIAM ST
JOHNSON ST
EARL ST
BROCK ST
PRINCESS ST
QUEEN ST
BAY ST
CLARENCE ST
COLBORNE ST
CHURCH ST
ANN ST
VINE ST
MAIN ST
ALMA ST
BARRIE ST
TERRACE ST
OREGON ST
PLUM ST
QUEBEC ST
PINE ST
YORK ST
HAMILTON ST
CLINTON ST
ELM ST
JENKINS ST
ALFRED ST
FRONTENAC ST
VICTORIA ST
NELSON ST
DURHAM ST
PARK ST
DUNLOP ST
SCOTT ST
CARRUTHER ST
MACK ST
BROCK ST
JOHNSON ST
NAPIER ST
EARL ST
HILL ST
DRIVE
UNION ST
QUEENS CRES
STUART ST
KING ST
MACDONNELL ST
CONNAUGHT AVE
DRAYTON AVE
IONA AVE
PRINCESS ST
N BARTLETT ST
S BARTLETT ST
CONCESSION ST
FIRST AVE
GUY ST
CARLE
NELSON
FERNS
GREY ST
ALFRED ST
ADELAIDE ST
STANLEY
DOWN
PINE ST
YORK ST
JENKINS ST
HAMILTON ST
CLINTON ST
ELM ST
ALFRED ST
FRONTENAC ST
VICTORIA ST
NELSON ST
DURHAM ST
PARK ST
DUNLOP ST
SCOTT ST
CARRUTHER ST
MACK ST
BROCK ST
JOHNSON ST
NAPIER ST
EARL ST
HILL ST
DRIVE
UNION ST
QUEENS CRES
STUART ST
KING ST
MACDONNELL ST
VICTORIA ST
UNIVERSITY AVE
COLLINGWOOD ST
ALBERT ST
ARCH ST
BARRIE ST
COLBORNE ST
LARRETT ST
MACK ST
DUNLOP ST
SCOTT ST
CARRUTHER ST
JOHNSON ST
NAPIER ST
EARL ST
HILL ST
DRIVE
UNION ST
QUEENS CRES
STUART ST
KING ST
KENSINGTON AVE
CENTRE ST
EDGEHILL
BEVERLEY
ALBERT ST
ST LAW RENCE AVE
LOWER UNIVERSITY AVE
GEORGE ST
OKILL ST
KING ST
ARCH ST
DEA CON ST
WEST ST
OKILL ST
KINU ST EAST
SIMCOE ST
MARYLAND ST
ST JAMES ST
BAGOT ST
SOPHIA ST
WILLIAM ST
JOHNSON ST
EARL ST
BROCK ST
PRINCESS ST
QUEEN ST
BAY ST
CLARENCE ST
COLBORNE ST
CHURCH ST
ANN ST
VINE ST
MAIN ST
ALMA ST
BARRIE ST
TERRACE ST
OREGON ST
PLUM ST
QUEBEC ST
PINE ST
YORK ST
HAMILTON ST
CLINTON ST
ELM ST
JENKINS ST
ALFRED ST
FRONTENAC ST
VICTORIA ST
NELSON ST
DURHAM ST
PARK ST
DUNLOP ST
SCOTT ST
CARRUTHER ST
MACK ST
BROCK ST
JOHNSON ST
NAPIER ST
EARL ST
HILL ST
DRIVE
UNION ST
QUEENS CRES
STUART ST
KING ST
MACDONNELL ST
CONNAUGHT AVE
DRAYTON AVE
IONA AVE
PRINCESS ST
N BARTLETT ST
S BARTLETT ST
CONCESSION ST
FIRST AVE
GUY ST
CARLE
NELSON
FERNS
GREY ST
ALFRED ST
ADELAIDE ST
STANLEY
DOWN
PINE ST
YORK ST
JENKINS ST
HAMILTON ST
CLINTON ST
ELM ST
ALFRED ST
FRONTENAC ST
VICTORIA ST
NELSON ST
DURHAM ST
PARK ST
DUNLOP ST
SCOTT ST
CARRUTHER ST
MACK ST
BROCK

N.B. address changed to:

35 RIDEAU ST., KINGSTON, 549-1911



CLOVER LEAF HEALTH FOODS

490 Princess Street

16 Years Experience in Selling Health Foods

Everything in flours, powders, juices, oils, honey, peanut butter, herbs for tea, seeds, whole grains, beverages, nuts, Loma Linda Products, & all capsules & tablets from Vitamin A to Wheat Germ.

Introductory Lecture and Physiological slides from the "Scientific American" article February, 1972

TRANSCENDENTAL MEDITATION

Wednesday, November 22

8:00 P.M.

Stirling Hall Theatre C Queen's University

"JOE"

A funny and terrifying motion picture if ever there was one.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 7, 9:30 pm

ADMISSION $1.00

newsbriefs

Orientation asks for orientation

by Susan Meech

Over the last few years Orientation week has become a particularily controversial issue. We have made a transition from a week of compulsory tams, frosh uniforms, and extensive hazing to a week with an accent on the academic, cultural and social aspects of Queen's. The general trend has moved away from a stress on hazing although individual group gaels may have some small individual ways of treating their freshmen. Our academic counselling has been admired by many other universities and our orientation week as a whole has been cited as one of the best. What do you think?

Try to take yourself back in time to your first week here at Queen's. Each of you will not have experienced the same week obviously but there may still be a common feeling among you. What aspect of orientation week seemed the most important to you? Was there enough offered in the week? Was there too much?

It is the goal of the orientation committee to have an orientation week that will appeal to all types of people who come to Queen's. A variety of events, atmospheres, and personnel involved in orientation are therefore important. Suggestions have been made to increase the cultural side of the week-maybe bring in a concert,hold a Queen's dramatic production, run an art workshop, bring in speakers, and . . .Whatever else you suggest.

We want your opinions, complaints, and suggestions. Even if you are not an Arts and Science student, we would like to hear your opinion.

Gaels are not restricted to Artsci people alone.

How about a week with two days off in the middle for individual exploring? What about the ratio of gaels to frosh? What about a clubs night during frosh week? What about tams?

On Thursday an open meeting will be held in Jeffrey Hall at 7.30 p.m. to discuss all aspects of orientation week.

Students to demonstrate anyway

TORONTO (CUP) — The Ontario Federation of Students' demonstration against the provincial government is apparently on, and is scheduled for today, the same day the Ontario Legislature opens for another session.

The demonstration will publicize the OFS campaign against the provincial government's tuition fee increases and its cut-back in student awards.

The fate of the demonstration was in some doubt for awhile as several OFS members balked at the idea and refused to help organize it. The University of Toronto students council last night (Nov. 8) reaffirmed its earlier decision not to participate in the action.

And still more volunteers yet

Agencies in the community are still contacting the Student Volunteer Bureau with current needs - people who need help:

- Home Care division of the Health Unit requires three people urgently.
- Drivers are needed for the Thurs. evening bridge group at Joyceville Pen. You can come along and join the card playing as well!
- "Mature male students who would like to work in the physical recreation field" are still required at the Regional Reception Centre at Kingston Pen.
- The children's lunch program still needs supervisors.
- The Inmate Drop-In needs help: Monday morning and afternoon; Wed. and Thurs. mornings also. If anyone could help with sewing and ironing they would be appreciated!

To those who signed up for volunteer positions prior to the first of November, within the next two weeks a member of the SVB Executive will call you to ask a few questions. Many thanks to those who have already cooperated, and to those who will, as well!

The SVB office is in the Union, up the outside steps on University Ave. The phone number is 547-5766.

OFL solidarity with OFS

OTTAWA (CUP) — The Ontario Federation of Labour (OFL) voted overwhelmingly to support the Ontario Federation of Students' campaign against increased tuition fees and decreased student awards, at the OFL annual convention which ended November 8.

Support for the OFS position by the 1,200 labor union delegates followed an earlier endorsement from the OFL executive and from the Labor Council of Metropolitan Toronto.

OFL policy calls for the abolition of tuition fees. In its annual presentation to the Ontario government last July, the OFL pointed out that the increase in tuition costs would create hardship for many students.

OFL secretary-treasurer Terry Meagher termed it grossly unfair to expect all citizens to support the cost of institutions of higher learning through the present methods of taxation, yet bar the door of these institutions to the children of taxpayers with limited incomes through higher tuition fees.

The OFL will ask all its affiliates, through Ontario's 50 labor councils, to support the student unions in their campaign against the higher fee structure.

The Federation also welcomed the OFS effort to give part-time students access to the Ontario Student Awards Program. The change would particularly help union members who are upgrading their skills and education through adult education programs, an OFL statement said.

The convention also called for an annual meeting of all labor appointees to the governing bodies of Ontario universities and community colleges. The move is designed to develop liaison between trade unionists appointed to such governing bodies by the provincial government, develop a program for them to follow, and create a system of accountability.

The OFL convention also called on the Ontario department of education to include "in their approval list of textbooks only those that offer an objective treatment of the contribution trade unions made to the development of society". Delegates urged local labor councils to continue their efforts to get school boards to change "social study courses to include a more balanced treatment of the subject."

The move followed a report on school texts by the Ontario Institute of Studies in Education called "Teaching Prejudice", which showed the prevalance of unfavourable stereotypes in discussions of the labour movements.

ASUS visitorship

ASUS will form an Arts and Science Visitorship to bring interesting people from all over the world to Queen's. A five man committee will be set up in February to discuss candidates for the coming years. Between $7500 and $8000 will be set aside for the visitorship.

Hassles with the student bus service

by Bob Mutrie

"We have been sending out full buses every weekend for the last month", Don McVie, co-ordinator of the Queen's to Toronto and Ottawa busing service stated.

However, McVie pointed out that he has been running into considerable trouble in his arrangements with busing companies.

The buses for the trips were originally rented from Travelways, an organization which rents buses to charter groups.

However, the fact that McVie was issuing tickets for the trips became a point of contention for the Voyageur Colonial lines who claimed that this made his trips non-charter, and that in this case Travelways buses could not be used.

Voyageur Colonial hold the licence for commercial trips in this area.

The problem is, McVie stated, Voyageur is quoting us a price so high that we have to have exactly a full bus to break even.

"Voyageur is making it tough for us", he said. During their first week of renting from the company he was given educational trip rates, somewhat below the normal charge.

However, in the second week with them, Voyageur told McVie that education rates were for elementary schools only and that he would have to pay more.

McVie noted that he is now netting about $10 on the trip to Toronto and losing $6 on the run to Ottawa. "This is supposed to be a money making venture."

McVie has now initiated a membership card system which bypasses a ticket operation and he states that he now hopes to be able to return to dealing with Travelways who are somewhat cheaper.

Travelways he pointed out, were more flexible and would reason to a considerable extent, "because they were interested in our business", McVie said. He also claimed that they had on one occasion lowered their price when a full busload was not obtained, just to keep the operation.

With Voyageur, he said, we have no such mobility. They have even put their own paying passengers on one of his buses, he noted.

McVie also stated that he is initiating runs to Montreal, but that, as yet, he has not received sufficient interest in it.

- wood

Impact of the Baha'i

Continued from Page 1

said that the equality of human rights, the concept of world government, and the idea of a universal world language were advocated by Baha'is long before they became common concerns in the Western world. 'Abdu'l-Baha, the son of Baha'u'llah, predicted in San Francisco in 1912 that the formation of a world government was at hand. Thirty-three years later, the United Nations was formed in the same city. Long before the suffragettes or any other women's liberation movement, Dr. Ghadirian declared, the Baha'is were advocating equality of rights of men and women. He cited these examples as evidence of the indirect influence of the Baha'i faith.

Dr. Ghadirian said that there were two forces at work today: the destructive forces tearing apart the old civilization, and the constructive forces of the New World Order bringing in a new civilization. The Baha'i faith, he said, will "bring new and fresh blood to the tired and frustrated body of humanity."

The inevitable question which came to mind at this point was: how can these seemingly-unreachable ideals be attained? It is fine to talk of a world in which there is complete mutual understanding, where economic problems are solved by the wish of both employer and employee to share profits equitably (this was Dr. Ghadirian's actual interpretation of the "spiritual solution of the economic problem"); but how can such a state realistically be brought about? How can a New World Order be established?

The Baha'i solution to any of the problems of the Old World Order narrows down to one need: teaching the Baha'i faith. Few employers today would willingly sacrifice their profits to ensure that their employees were content. It seems ludicrous to say that the employer can be shown brotherhood and love and apply them to his relations with his employees; but it is precisely this type of all-encompassing influence which would make such an attitude believable. The goals of the Baha'is become realistic only in the context of a world totally converted to their faith. If many of their solutions seem vague and unrealistic, it may be simply because the concepts which the Baha'i faith advocates are totally foreign to us as part of the decaying Old World Order.

VOTE TODAY

RECTOR

AMS FEE

DOUGLAS LIBRARY	10:30 a.m. - 7:00 p.m.
Student Union	10:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.
Jeffery Hall	10:30 a.m. - 3:30 p.m.
Humphery Hall	10:30 a.m. - 3:30 p.m.
MacDonald Hall	10:30 a.m. - 12:30 p.m.
Matheson Rm, KGH	11:30 a.m. - 12:30 p.m.
McArthur Hall	10:30 a.m. - 1:30 p.m.

and the Dinner Lines, Ban Righ, Leonard, Brockington

You must have your green student card to vote

Clash over caucus

Continued from Page 1

the lack of informal discussion of ideas and pointed out that such a body could also engender a more immediate feedback.

However, he led the attack on the formation of a budgetary committee and received string support from others present. Searle claimed that such a committee was not needed with ASUS already given responsibility for distribution of funds.

Conflicting views emanated from the assembled group concerning the structuring of a budgetary committee.

Bankes stressed that the caucus and the committee would be performing two separate functions, one for information and one for money. He pointed out the bureaucratic barriers involved in asking ASUS for money.

Art's '73 president Duncan Bull stated that the DSC's will interact better with a committee formed of other DSC's and that it will ensure that each department has so much of the budget for something worth while.

Bankes stated that it would be a logical place for individual DSC's to come for finances.

Cape also supported the idea of an autonomous body and announced that ASUS would exert no control over it other than acting as auditor.

At the end of the meeting a vote was rammed through temporarily knocking down the idea of the budgetary committee until after further discussion. Support was gained for the formation of an Arts caucus.

It was moved that a new Association of Departmental Student Councils be composed of DSC chairman, Student Faculty Board representatives, Student Senators, AMS representatives and the ASUS executive and that the budgetary committee be held up pending further consideration.

An interim steering committee was also elected, composed of Vicki Hand, Faculty Board representative for Phys. Ed., Jane Harkness, DSC chairman for Biology, Tony Layton, DSC for philosophy and Gerry Buck, DSC chairman for Politics.

The steering committee will rehash the decisions reached in the meeting Thursday night and bring proposals to another meeting to be held in the near future.

Correction

We regret that in the ASUS budget which appeared on November 14, $400 was allocated to Faculty Social. It should have been $100. This amount is used to hold a wine and cheese party each year for all those faculty and students who have helped out during the year.

Kentucky Fried Chicken TAKE HOME STORES

240 Montreal St. 542-2773 (nearest to Queen's)

Princess St. West at Portsmouth

Bath Road just West of K-Mart

It's Finger Lickin Good

Delivery charge extra

Snacks .95
Dinners 1.50
Family Bucket 4.25
Party Barrel 5.50

Get together and order for the whole gang.

Picnics-Parties-Dances-Sunday Dinners-Just Loafin

Special Prices for Large Functions, Dances, Parties, Etc.

science '76

smoker

Wednesday, Nov. 22nd

GRANT HALL

8 p.m. - 1 a.m.

special invitation to

FRECS & PROFS

Free with year card

(available from section reps.)

WE'LL FIND YOU
AN OUTSTANDING DIAMOND
WITHOUT AN OUTRAGEOUS PRICE

Diamonds are precious, but not priceless.
No matter what your financial status is,
we'll help you find a diamond you can afford.
Your fiery diamond will be outstanding.
And the price won't be outrageous.
Because we believe a diamond should make you happy, not make you broke.

KINNEAR d'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO
CANADA

Towlen Concert great success!

by Michael Hodgson

The Musical Weekend presented by the Division of Concerts opened with a recital by pianist Gary Towlen. It was his Canadian debut, and I am happy to report it was a great success.

The evening began with the Beethoven sonata opus 10, no. 2. Mr. Towlen gave it a wonderfully detailed and spirited performance, with rich and varied tone colours. It was at once obvious that he has a fine controlled technique and a splendid singing legato style.

Next on the program was a group of pieces by Faure - the fifth Barcarolle, the first two impromptus, and the thirteenth Nocturne. Faure is very rarely heard these days, but he should be, especially played by an interpreter as affectionate as Mr. Towlen. The barcarolle was tempestuous, beautifully coloured; the second impromptu was sparkling and delicate; and the thirteenth Nocturne? This piece is an undoubted masterpiece which Faure wrote two years before his death and at the age of 77! It is a most eloquent piece which seems to contain all the anguish and defiance of this passionate man as he felt deafness closing in on him. Mr. Towlen played it sometimes mournfully, sometimes in a uncompromising grimness. This was a very effective -- but of course, a young man's -- interpretation in its unrelieved solemnity. I would bet that Mr. Towlen will one day find the nobility and faith which are also in the piece.

The first half ended with the third sonata of Prokofiev played at an awful clip which hindered the pianist's control but certainly made things exciting for the listener. Mr. Towlen captured very well the alternately playful and wistful qualities of the music, but I felt his Prokofiev was rather wetter than we expect it to be. Perhaps some of the liquid bien chante from the Faure overflowed into the Prokofiev to produce this unusually Romantic style.

The second half was devoted entirely to French piano music, to which Mr. Towlen is so eminently suited. The Soirees de Nazelles, which is undoubtedly Poulenc's best work, was given a fine leisurely reading which allowed every nuance of this enjoyable music to come across. And in the Prelude and Rigaudon from the Tombeau de Coupecin of Revel a limpid tone, a dance like quality, and a stylish understatement made this well known work surprisingly fresh.

This was a splendid evening of music making, of unusual music played with facility, style and most of all, with affection which is so rare these days. A grateful audience gave Mr. Towlen a standing ovation and brought him back for two encores. I hope the Division of Concerts will bring him back soon too.

Le Barbier de Seville

The French Area Studies Centre in conjunction with the Division of Concerts at Queen's University presents Beaumarchais' "Le Barbier de Seville" on Thursday, 23 November at 8:00 p.m. in McArthur Auditorium. This comedy in four acts will be presented in French by Le Treteau de Paris as part of their sixteenth annual tour of North America.

"Le Barbier de Seville" retells the eternal misadventures of an old fogy in love and made a fool of by young lovers.

Le Treteau de Paris' production has been highly praised by critics:

"For afficinados of classic French comedy it was a performance of quicksilver amusement." The Herald, Auckland, N.Z.

"A delight! Exuberant, charming, and extremely funny." The Post, Wellington, N.Z.

Tickets for this performance at $2.50 students and $3.50 non-students are available from the Division of Concerts Box Office in the Agnes Etherington Art Centre. Reservations may be made by telephoning the Box Office at 547-6194.

CFRC am-fm

CFRC-FM, 91.9 HIGHLIGHTS

Thursday November 23rd

8:30 More Fun With the Scherzo: Form and structure in western music. Tonight a look at the Rondo.

10:00 The Spoken Word: Martin Donegan reads "Essays of Elia" by Charles Lamb.

Friday November 24th

8:00 The Living Classics: A special concert from the Salzburg Easter Festival 1972. Stravinsky's Appolon Musagete and Brahms' Symphony No. 2 in D Major, Op. 73 will be played by the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra conducted by Herbert von Karajan.

Saturday November 25th

8:00 Music Canada: Canadian artists Robert Aitken, flute and Erica Goodman, harp will play music by Krumpholtz, Lauber and Inghelbrecht.

Sunday November 26th

5:00 The Cleveland Orchestra in Concert: Erich Leinsdorf conducts the orchestra, with Isaac Stern, violin in music by Bach-Webern, Berg, and Beethoven.

african club

OPEN PARTY

Friday, Nov. 24th, 9 p.m.
Lower Lounge, International Centre
Beer 3/$1.00 Adm. 50¢

all welcome

Human Sexuality Course

FINAL PRESENTATION tonight:

Population Control and the Individual speakers: Allan Feingold, editor of the McGill Birth Control Handbook Prof. Landstreet, sociologist

Prof. Harmsen, biologist

Stirling D, 7:00 p.m.

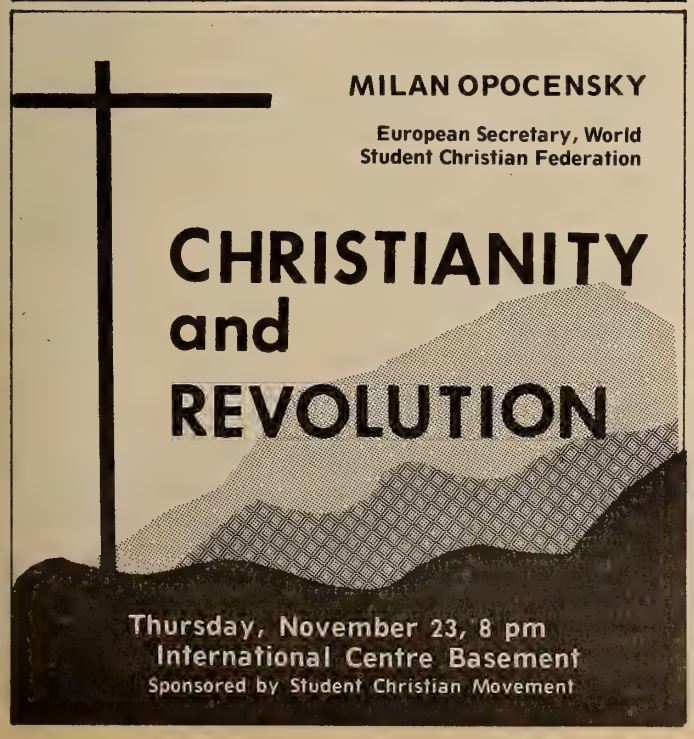
GREAT STEAKS

try the

Porterhouse Special

Limited Offer 3.99 Red Brand Beef Only

10 oz RED BRAND aged beef
Baked Potatoe - Vegetable
Rolls and Butter



For $1.40 more you get Soup or Juice - Tossed Fancy Salad (Best salad in town) Beverage and choice of Desert.

Aunt Lucy's Restaurant Tavern

Princess West at Portsmouth
No reservations
Relaxed Informal Dining

Great Place For That Special Date!

busydays

Tuesday, November 21

7:00 pm - The ninth of nine weekly sessions on Human Sexuality. Population control and the Individual. Stirling D.

7:00 - 9:30 pm - Department of Lands and Forests. Hunter Safety Training. Theatre 205, A & B. Physical Education Centre. Further Information phone Bill Dyke 544-2307.

8:00 - 11:00 pm - Auditions for "As You Like It." Production running Feb. 12 - 17. Convocation Hall.

8:00 - 12:00 pm - Biology Society Smoker, Second Floor Union, Admission: Members 25c, non-members 50c. All welcome. Beer 3-$1.00.

9:00 pm - Department of Film Studies, Le Cinema Quebecois presents Mon Oncle Antoine (directed by Claude Jutra, 1971). Award Winning Film. Ellis Hall.

Wednesday, November 22

4:00 - 6:00 pm and 7:00 - 9:00 pm - Auditions for "As You Like It." Production running Feb. 12 - 17. Convocation Hall.

7:00 pm - Ken Clark - Civilization - 1. "Skin of Our Teeth." 20c Admission. Stirling D.

8:00 pm - Queen's University Astronomy Club will have a meeting in Room 323 Ellis Hall. A Lecture will be given on certain aspects of modern astronomy by a member of the astronomy group. Refreshments will be served afterwards.

8:00 pm - Professor W. Maust of Music Department presents a lecture on "The Spanish Cantigas." This lecture will be illustrated by slides and musical examples, precedes the Grant Hall performance of the Waverly Consort. Dunning Hall. Admission Free.

9:00 pm - Poetry Reading sponsored by Quarry and the Department of English. Eli Mandel and Joe Rosenblatt. Agnes Etherington.

Thursday, November 23

7:00 and 9:30 pm - Campus Movies presents "Joe." Dunning Hall. Admission $1.00.

7:00 - 9:30 pm - Department of Lands and Forests. Hunter Safety Training. Theatre 205 A & B. Physical Education Centre. For further information phone Bill Dyke 544-2307.

7:30 pm - Biology Society Meeting, Lecturer Dr. R. Clark. Topic "Waste, reclamation, the problem and solution." Earl Hall. Room 111. Everyone welcome.

7:30 pm - Bridge Club Meeting in MacLaughlin Room. Students Union.

7:30 pm - Medical Sciences Lecture "Genetics and The Future of Man" by Louis Siminovitch, Professor and Chairman, Dept. of Medical Cell Biology, University of Toronto. Etherington Hall Auditorium.

7:30 pm - Skydiving Film Show for members and friends. Free Admission. Bring log books for your $1.-jump refund. 2nd Floor Common Room, Union. For more information phone Gillian 544-9207, Chris 544-9790.

8:00 pm - Division of Concerts and The French Area Studies present "Le Barbier de Seville" by Beaumarchais. This performance will be given in French by Le Treateau de Paris. McArthur Auditorium. Tickets at $2.50 students, $3.50 non-students. Available at Division of Concerts Box Office, Agnes Etherington Art Centre.

8:00 pm - Christianity and Revolution. A talk by Milan Opocensky, Czech theologian. International Centre, Union.

9:00 pm - Department of Film Studies, American Screen Masters presents "Meet Me In St. Louis." (Vincente Minelli, 1944). Ellis Hall.

Friday, November 24

8:00 pm - Graduate Students Society Films presents Faces. (director, John Cassavetes). Ellis Hall.

8:30 pm - A visiting production of Green Julia by Paul Ableman performed by the Kingston Theatre Co. Tickets are $2.00 for non-students, $1.00 for students. On sale in the Drama Department. Convocation Hall, Old Arts Buiilding. Playing Saturday night also.

Saturday, November 25 and 26 Last canoe trip, Queen's outing club. Madawaska River. Phone Joy 546-6276 or Jim 546-4953.

Off Campus

Pubs

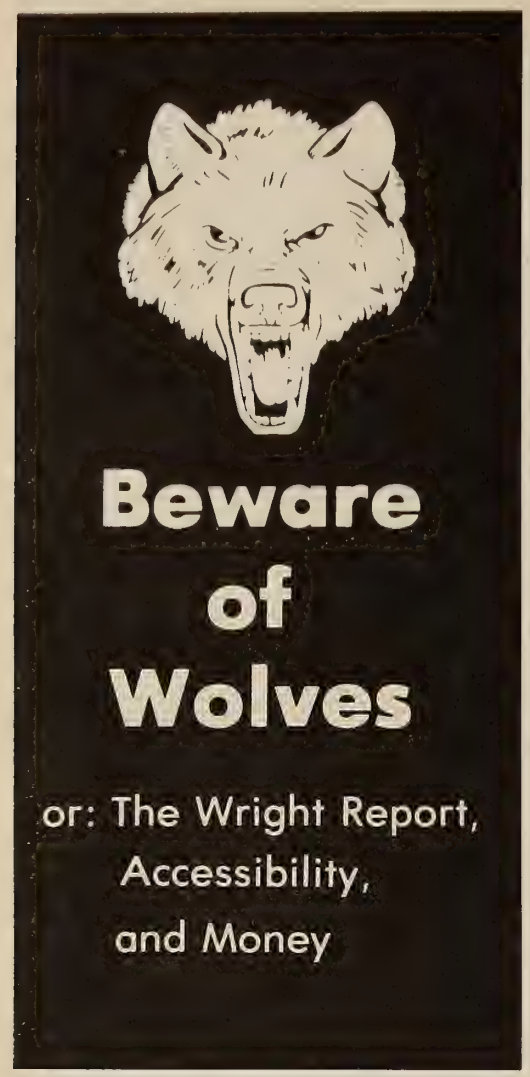
Commodore - Hank and the Drifters
401 Inn - Harlequin
Seaway Pub - Jacqueline and Lindsey

Theatres

Capitol - Red Sun
Hyland - Tuesday - Gone With The Wind
Wednesday and Thursday - King Lear, Friday and Saturday - Charlie Chaplin's Review.
Odeon - Valachi Papers. Starting Friday - Ulzanas Raid.

Navel whistling a hit at Bones

From out of the depths of Etherington Hall, the caverns of KGH and from the haunts of Hotel Dieu they came to see Medical Variety. The unsuspecting audience was treated to the titillating talents of a student cast of nurses, and rehab and medical students.



The show had something for everyone including naughty nursery rhymes, the story of rehab cinderella, and an Italian version of Goldilocks for all the fairy-tale telling parents to see how their versions need revision. Music ranged from classical piano solos, piano violin duets to folk and jug band. During one of the musical interludes four enterprising young meds students demonstrated their new found ability of whistling through their navels. "Tamure" was a beautiful exhibition of native dancing, helped along after some gentle persuasion by some active audience participation. No show nowadays would be complete without a little sex education and this was nicely worked in via a skit on the process of fertilization acted out to catchy little tunes like "2001" the "Lone Ranger," "Born Free" and others. The true facts in the lives of med students and especially clinical clerks were well outlined by Bob Reid, Andy Pipe and Glen Agar in their musical exposition on this topic. Later some of our deepest thoughts came to light in the female dedicated to the Department of Anatomy - "Going back to University When I die."

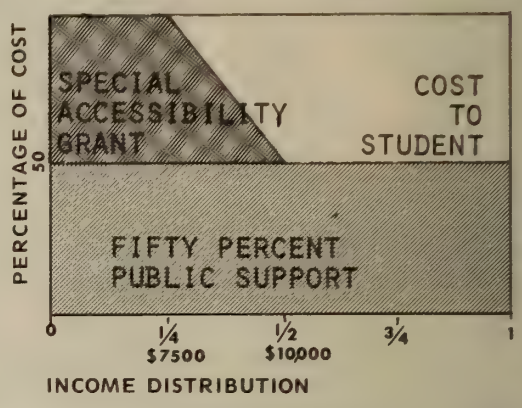
But now it's time for all good little nurses and med students to crawl back into their desks, pull out their books and turn on their lights. Time again to surpress that secret bit of actor lurking in each one of us, ready to leap with gay abandon whenever an audience rolls in. But before you get him repressed entirely you give him a pat on the back. After all, Funny Bones '72 was another flash success in the zingy world of medical entertainment.

Czech theologian to come

Dr. Milan Opocensky will be giving a talk on Christianity and Revolution at 8:00 pm on Thursday the 23rd in the International Centre.

Dr. Opocensky is a Czech theologian who has studied at the Comenius Faculty of Protestant Theology, Prague University from 1950 - to - 1954 and was on the staff of the Faculty from 1954 to 1966 as Senior Assistant in Systematic Theology. Since 1966 he has been the European Secretary of the World Student Christian Federation.

By Bruce Cameron



Those students who were genuinely outraged at the recent fee increases and alterations to the OSAP financial aid scheme in the Province of Ontario, and were conscientious enough to vote in the Ontario Federation of Students' fee referendum last month can be nothing but disillusioned by the outcome. Those who were outraged were, hopefully, not outraged because it meant $100 more out of their pocket, but rather because they saw these changes as an attack on the principle of accessibility to post-secondary education. Because the government had not conferred with any of the affected parties or with any group even closely connected with post-secondary education, there was reason to hope that when the final draft of the Wright Commission Report on Post-Secondary Education in Ontario was published, a knowledgeable voice could once again be heard in the plans for our educational futures. On the surface, this hope is not in vain.

To obtain a relatively accurate idea of what this final report has in store for the post-secondary institutions in the province, the recommendations of the Draft Report should give a fair indication. Concerned principally with the question of accessibility, this article will first outline what the Draft Report recommends, and then attempt to discuss these recommendations in the light of their possible effects on the students of Ontario.

In the second chapter of the Draft Report, the Commissioners state their aims and goals. They write: "We have accepted the need for universal accessibility to post-secondary education at all ages as our first principle. This principle must be reflected in a broad range of financial as well as academic policies." (p. 13) The philosophy expressed in this quotation is representative of the professed goals of the report. Stressing the highly individual nature of the type of education they espouse, the authors of this report aim to construct a diversified and flexible system which can meet these individual needs. The financial and academic policies through which this aim is to be achieved should be noted at this point.

The most fundamental change the Draft Report proposes is the separation of instructional costs from research costs. If it is desirable to shift some of the cost to students who can afford to pay, The Commissioners reason, it must be certain that the cost in question is indeed the cost of these students' education. Thus, a change in the method of financing research is proposed. The Commission recommends that all money presently earmarked for research purposes be put into an open fund which individual institutions could apply to for various types of research grants. On the instructional side, it is recommended that the public pay 50 per cent of the operating costs (i.e. instructional costs) of post-secondary institutions. The remaining 50 percent would be funded by the student with the help of grants or loans.

The grant program can be properly represented by the following graph, included in the Draft Report (p. 47)

Thus parenta money is aw quartile would grant to cov school (maint
the second qu $10,000) are el the top two q
There is a lin
grant aid is av is three years full years of

The loan po the following regardless of the 3 year lin bearing at the
the "abilty to centage of ta loans are repa thereafter. Th
Draft Report'

Beneath th philosophy an certain doubts place, The D analysis of il package is pre package is giv ment's current it can only be will operate thermore, the in the adoptio means that programs whi arrangements funds can onl education is b
the report wh consideration present level which might

Cleansing the windows of perception

Transcendental Meditation

By J.M. MacKenzie and Gregg Wilson

"If the windows of our perception were cleansed, we would see infinity stretching in every direction."

In this passage, William Blake displays an intuition of ultimate reality shared by philosophers and poets since the time of Plato. Their frustrating inability to perceive clearly this universal meaning hovering just beyond their grasp, in fact, might be considered as a basic theme underlying much of the world's great literature. This clear vision of the Absolute, however, can now be attained by all men. So proclaims Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, the Indian philosopher and teacher, who has travelled worldwide in the past fourteen years, spreading transcendental meditation.

If one were to consider such teaching as exotic or "Swami stuff" and thus not worthy of serious consideration, he would not be alone. Such skepticism, though, does not trouble Maharishi. This technique, he asserts, is natural and requires no irrational belief or "cultism". Meditation is for everyday people with normal disappointments, frustrations, joys and ambitions.

Transcendental meditation, or "TM", as it is commonly known, received widespread journalistic attention in 1967 with the famous voyages to Rishikesh, Maharishi's headquarters, by well-known personalities such as the Beatles and Mia Farrow. Since that time this notoriety has largely died down while serious scientific interest has increased markedly. Quietly and steadily TM has reached around the globe and in the past six years alone, has claimed over 100,000 initiates in North America.

Students from all walks of life, young and old, "straight" and "hip" have discovered a new existence with transcendental meditation. In addition, scientists, philosophers, educationalists and youth counsellors throughout the western world are expressing keen interest in this technique inherited from ancient Vedic tradition. Careful physiological studies have also been conducted, with results tending to confirm that the meditator achieves a "transcental", fourth major state of consciousness, differing markedly from waking, dreaming, deep sleep or hypnotic trance.

Most westerners regard meditation as an exotic eastern religious practice. It is true that for centuries Zen Buddhist monks in Japan and Hindu yogis in India have been engaging in and refining sophisticated meditational techniques. In recent years, however, there has been a quickening western interest in Oriental philosophies and a growing awareness that our materialistic industrial society may benefit greatly from this ancient learning.

Transcendental meditation springs from rich Himalayan traditions, but it is a common sense approach to many problems besetting twentieth century mankind. It might be described as a "no muss, no fuss' technique for modern living, requiring no ceremony, garments, incense, complex positions or esoteric jargon. It is different from all other methods of mind-control or physical manipulation involving concentration, contemplation, discipline or extensive training.

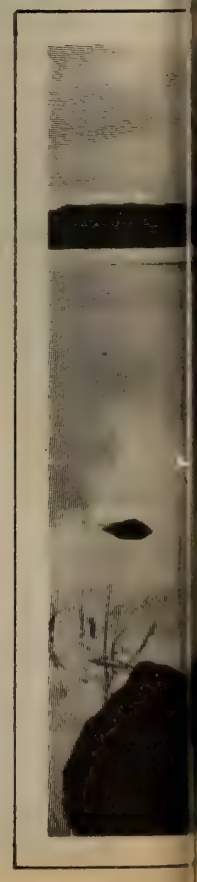
A simple, natural process, TM involves the progressive refinement of the nervous system through the regular alternation of deep rest and activity. In other words, postulates Maharishi, just as sleep and dreaming are required to relieve certain stresses and fatigue, so transcendental meditation is essential for relief of deep rooted stresses in the nervous system. It relaxes and rejuvenates both body and mind.

This energizing effect of meditation is explicable in light of Maharishi's view of the universe in which he sees all things striving for fulfilment. One aspect of this general principle is the natural tendency of the mind, or the attention, to move in the direction of greater satisfaction. The mind may not be forced into this process just as the body cannot be forced into sleep - such pressure results in tension and strain.

It is towards a reservoir of energy and bliss at the core of the Self the source of all thought - that the mind will progress. This Indian belief finds a counterpart in Christian tradition: the Kingdom of Heaven within thyself. Stimulated by the basic force of evolution, therefore, the inward march of the mind appears to be a completely natural process.

Through the technique, imparted by the teacher to the initiate, the mind is freed to follow this natural course. By means of a suitable thought employed for its sound value alone, the attention is kept lively while the mind, unburdened with meaning turns inward, leading the subject to increasingly subtle and more delicate levels of thought. This intensely pleasant experience lies beyond space and time, but remains always in the memory, distinct from the nothingness of sleep or non-consciousness.

During this time, although the mind is fully conscious, the nervous system undergoes a profound relaxation. Meditators report that following meditation, they feel completely rested and brimming over with renewed mental and physical energy. With regular practice, it is said, this "transcending" process becomes easier until eventually the subject may draw at will upon the inexhaustible energy reservoir.



Maharishi considers that the field of pure consciousness constitutes the quintessence of all physical reality. It follows, in his view, that with regular contact, one's life grows more meaningful and that finally one may reach a point of omniscient perspective in which the unity of all things is clearly perceived. Whether or not one follows such reasoning, it would appear that the practical benefits of transcendental meditation are manifold. If indeed such deep rest is possible, life could become more enjoyable. A man deprived of sleep leads a lonely, frustrating existence. Maharishi states that men a essential relaxat may be experien practice of trans

Viewed in suc
TM's goal of wo overambitious. I clearer more ful meditator, surely not unforeseeabl

Phys
In State

The transcende individual. It is di terms readily mediatator. Such

s used as the basis on which hose students in the first ull tuition and an additional expenses while attending rtion of grant). Students in mily income from $7500 to a partial grant, and those in eive no aid in grant form. length of time which this any one student. This limit rt-time equivalent of three e financial aid scheme has t is available to everyone, is not limited in time (like grants) and it is interest- te. Repayment is based on nciple and fixed as a per- me in any one year. The in 15 years, or forgiveable s the general outline of the s.

of both the admirable cies of implementation lie udent's mind. In the first rt produces no financial ds. Although a complete estimate of the cost of this w of the provincial govern- with budgetary restraints, hat any educational budget ed supply of funds. Fur- of costs increases inherent of the report's proposals ds will be drawn from peration under the present le re-allocation of these hat the current quality of ffer. This is one aspect of remely disappointing. No her to a maintenance of the in education or to policies evel.

The Draft Report asks for the acceptance of a new student aid scheme, the benefits of which are unknown. The present scheme OSAP, has, prior to the recent alterations, been moving successfully in a direction which has increased accessibility to post-secondary education for many students from low income families. In view of the widely expressed concern over the escalating cost of OSAP, it would be reasonable to expect the Commission to give some sort of estimate of the cost of its proposed alternative.

How does the Commission justify its proposal to separate the funding of instruction and research when the report itself insists "that post-secondary education at the university level is inseperable from research"? (p. 41) The only justification given is the the following quotation:

"Both on educational and administrative grounds, the Commission became convinced that, rather than engage in a detailed analysis of each case, it would be desirable to change the way we finance research in educational institutions." (p. 41) This can hardly be considered a sufficient explanation for such a fundamental change. The funding of research which they, themselves consider so essential to quality instruction will reduce by almost one third the amount which the government is now responsible for under objective formula financing. In dollars and cents, this means a sum estimated at approximately $100 million with which the government can do as it pleases. This large sum intended to promote research, while not being specifically earmarked for this purpose exists as a prime target for re-allocation into other, totallv unrelated fields.

In its effort to split the cost of education more equally between the student and the public, the Commission has neglected one, very important fact. This fact is the earnings which a student forgoes when he attends a post-secondary institution as opposed to working. Take, for example, the triple bind which a student receiving loan assistance would be placed in. As the student successfully completes each academic year, his fees rise, his debt grows and his forgone earnings grow. This should certainly count in favor of the student's per centage of cost.

The justification for this 'equal' distribution of costs is given as follows: "Following a series of 'test runs' of various schemes and extensive discussions, the Commission has decided to recommend that the public subsidy to institutions should amount to 50 percent of the operating costs for instruction." (p. 43) This does not seem to be a convincing argument for a proposal which would shift from $60 to $70 million of costs to students. The advantages of this even division of costs, according to the Commissioners are two-fold: "it makes clear to the student that for each dollar he pays towards his education, the public also contributes one dollar; and it leaves the current level of fees for many students relatively undisturbed. . . " (p. 43) Although it is true that the current levels of fees for many students would be relatively undisturbed, there would be drastic changes for many others. For those students in Colleges of Applied Arts and Technology (CAAT), the increase would be four-fold ($150 to $625), for graduate students, the increases is three-fold ($485 to $1500) and for students in applied health fields, the increase is nearly nine-fold (from $125 to $1,100). (These figures are quoted from the response of the Council of Ontario Universities to the Draft Report, (p. 21). These increases would seem to have the effect of decreasing accessibility to these particular fields. Recommendation 62 of the Draft Report which urges that institutions should be free to set their own tuition fees might also have the effect of raising fees even higher. It is my opinion that any fee increases should be opposed in principle unless matching monetary aid, in the form of grants, is made available to all deserving students. This last comment brings up the whole area of the proposals concerning grants and student aid in general.

At first glance, the prospects of some students (those in the first quartile) receiving full tuition and maintenance costs in grant form are praiseworthy. However, once again we run into doubt. In the first place, the Commission has based its proposals on the incomes of all Ontario families, whereas the appropriate base is the income of families with university-aged children. Wage earners (i.e. parents) in this group are, on the average, approaching peak earnings. As a result, few students would fall into this first quartile. Those who form this group are commonly laborers who have just started work and the elderly. Very few students, then, would qualify for this full support by grant. Secondly, the Commission does not state at any point what the maintenance portion of the grant would be. If this figure was unrealistically low, the purpose of these grants (to enhance accessibility) would be seriously undermined. Thirdly, no mention is made of the effect of family size on the need for financial assistance. Fourthly, there are a number of difficulties encountered when we consider those families with a family income of between $5000 and $10,000 and two or more children at university. The way in which the grant system is set up may encourage this income group to reduce their direct income from work. An example will clarify this point. Family A has two children attending university and a family income, before taxes of $7,499. This family, under the proposed scheme, would receive a grant of $4000. Family B also has two children attending university and has a family income of $10,001 annually. Family B would not qualify for any sort of grant. Thus the total family income of A, including grant, is $11,499, while B's is $10,001. These difficulties occur because the grant is large relative to the income range over which it must taper from full maintenance to zero. They can be eliminated either by lowering the full tuition-maintenance grant, by widening the income range over which this taper occurs, or both. Another deficiency in this grant scheme should be recognized in the three year limit which these grants cover. This limit quite obviously discourages een deprived of the deep nervous system, which lly through the regular meditation.

Continued on Page 10

non sense perspective, does not appear to be dividual can achieve a ng life, then, says the f international amity is al Studies Major sciousness ience is unique to each erefore to describe it in ndable to the non- le, however, should not constitute a ground for rejection of the phenomenon as non-existent, for the equally subjective dream experience has been discussed for centuries in the absence of "hard", objective verification. Only recently have scientists observed such unique physiological characteristics as Rapid Eye Movement attributable to the dream activity. Similarly, careful studies conducted during the past five years have reported definite physiological changes occurring during the period of deep meditation.

It is true that the subjective experience of "pure consciousness" can not be communicated or verified absolutely. Controlled experiments, however, recording observations before, during and after transcendental meditation do tend to substantiate at least the existence of a unique physiological state. As reported in such publications as Scientific American (February 1972), Time (October 25, 1971) and Science (March 27, 1970), these studies indicate that bodily changes occurring during meditation differ markedly from those observed during the other major states of consciousness such as waking, dreaming and sleeping as well as such "altered states" as hypnosis and auto-suggestion.

While these studies are relatively recent, for many years the concept of "higher" states of consciousness which might occur during meditation and which possibly could relieve physical and mental stresses has been postulated. Researchers, however, have been hindered by the difficulties in finding expert meditators and measuring physiological changes without interrupting the meditation. Studies among yogic meditators in India and Zen monks in Japan have produced results showing consistent and significant physiological changes and have suggested the possibility of a physiologically unique state of consciousness.

With the spread of transcendental meditation in North America, many thousands of subjects became available for such research. Furthermore, since the technique was claimed to be natural, requiring no concentration, contemplation or control, meditation could be carried on despite the array of instruments and electrodes affixed to the subject's body.

Profound Relaxation - Fully Active Mind

The observations reported by recent researchers are interesting and impressive. While the subjects were normal individuals with only a three-month to three-year experience in meditation, the results in some cases were similar to those recorded on expert Japanese Zen monks with over twenty-five years practice.

Dr. Herbert Benson and R. K. Wallace of the Harvard Medical School, in a current Scientific American article, write that the quality of rest in twenty minutes of meditation is much more profound than that gained in a full eight hours of sleep. While oxygen consumption during deep sleep, for example, decreases only about 15 per cent, during meditation it drops almost 80 per cent - a condition incompatible with life in any other state of consciousness. Even in deep hypnotic sleep the decrease is only negligible.A slight fall in blood pressure and an average decrease of five beats per minute in heart beat were also observed by these scientists. In addition, the marked fall in blood lactate level during meditation is apparently very significant. Since an increase in lactic acid accompanies anxiety symptoms and muscular activity, this particular change may cause a deep muscular relacation and reduction of anxiety.

Perhaps the most dramatic observation, notes Wallace, is the 500 per cent increase in electrical skin resistance as compared with the average 50 per cent increase during deep sleep and the negligible change during hypnotic trances. This indicates lowered perspiration activity and thus a definite fall in physical tension. Another interesting phenomenon recorded was the peculiar encephalographic pattern of subject brain waves: the alpha rhythm present in all subjects at rest increased in regularity and amplitude, even stopping in some cases from two to five minutes, to be replaced by low voltage theta waves.

These results tend to confirm the subjective experiences of many meditators and show indeed that the mind is fully conscious despite the profound rest experienced by the entire nervous system. The transcendental state clearly differs markedly from other states or altered states of consciousness and from other meditative techniques requiring control and thus imposing stresses and strains on the mind. Wallace has suggested, in fact, that perhaps in such meditation, ancient Hindu yogis discovered or stumbled upon a form of human "hibernation", a milder form of the winter sleep of animals.

Clinical and Other Practical Applications

The primary benefits of transcendental meditation for the individual have been discussed above. Modern researchers, in additon, foresee clinical applications of the technique in the treatment of hypertension and certain diseases during which extended periods of low oxygen consumption simultaneous with responsive mental activity would be very useful. It has also been suggested that transcendental meditation could be utilized successfully during extended space travel.

The most significant side-effect of TM, however, and that which has attracted the attention of medical, educational and legislative groups in Canada and the United States, is its proven value in alleviating drug abuse. In a recent report, the LeDain Commission on Non-Medical Use of Drugs notes that following regular practice of meditation, subjects report that the drug experience becomes distasteful. Moreover alcohol, caffeine and tobacco dependencies also tend to decrease or disappear after several months of meditating.

Continued on Page 10

Transcendental Meditation

Continued from Page 9

The technique appears to be acceptable to drug users among North American university communities because it is offered as a program for personal development and is not specifically intended to be a treatment for drug abuse. Transcendental meditation enables the subject to experience "mind-expansion" but does not threaten the beliefs of committed users who condone the use of drugs. "Try a 'natural' high", ask the thousands of young people who have turned away from artificial stimulants.

In a recent Time article, Dr. Benson remained cautious about TM's value to addicts. The studies conducted by him and his colleagues were "biased" he noted, since they had reported only on people who had learned meditation and continued to practise it. He agreed with the LeDain Commission though, that such results definitely merited further careful investigation.

The role of meditation in alleviating drug abuse has naturally impressed Boards of Education and youth counselling services throughout the nation. Furthermore, the increased motivation and higher academic success levels among secondary and post-secondary students, attributable to regular meditation has also attracted the attention of these authorities. The Department of Health and Welfare, for example, has expressed keen interest in transcendental meditation during recent months, especially following the January publication of the LeDain Commission report. School boards in British Coumbia and Ontario are considering the success achieved following the introduction of the Science of Creative Intelligence, the educational application of transcendental meditation, into the secondary school system in Eastchester, New York. A similar pilot project, in fact, has been approved by the North York Board of Education, one of the most progressive school systems in Canada.

Transcendental meditation has drawn federal support also through the Opportunities for Youth programme. In the summer of 1971, a grant of $3,000 was provided to a group of young meditators in Richmond, B.C. Their report, entitled Insight into the Richmond Community, surveyed the effect of this "new educational technique" on recently initiated students of TM.

During May 1972, the HOUSE of REPRESENTATIVES for the State of Illinois passed some significant legislation regarding Transcendental Meditation. It was resolved by the seventy-seventh general assembly on May 24th 1972 that all educational institutions, especially those under State of Illinois jurisdiction be strongly encouraged to study the feasibility of courses in Transcendental Meditation and the Science of Creative Intelligence (SCI) on their campuses and in their facilities.

This piece of legislation is mainly due again to officials noting a lessening of student unrest and an improvement in grades and student-parent and teacher relationships. Also the physiological experiments provide evidence that through the regular practice of T.M. (twice daily 15-20 minutes) the main causes of hypertension, anxiety, high blood pressure, cardiac arrest, and other psychosomatic illnesses are removed. The resolution also included that the State of Illinois send copies of the resolution to the Deans of all State Universities and to the Department heads of all public instruction and State Health authorities. The government also promised to give all possible cooperation to the new Centres for the teaching of the Science of Creative Intelligence and Transcendental Meditation.

Transcendental Meditation for Students

The results of both the Richmond study and the Eastchester project clearly indicate the value of transcendental meditation to high school and university students. The technique, bringing profound relaxation, yet requiring only a short period of time each day, is eminently suited to the academic life with its constant tensions and demands upon the intellect. Through the Students International Meditation Society (SIMS), transcendental meditation has been introduced at hundreds of universities throughout the western world. Not only does the technique produce increased energy and efficiency in the performance of any work, but also, it is reported, it aids in the mobilization of all bodily resources to combat such strenuous circumstances as accidents, sensory monotony and confined places.

It would appear, moreover, that TM can play a vital role upon the frontiers of knowledge. In a recent article in Creative Intelligence, for example, Richard Prosser, a physicist at Imperial College, London, explains that the technique had guided him in the formulation of new concepts in advanced quantum mechanics. Prosser believes, furthermore, that the great pioneers of science, including Sir Isaac Newton and Albert Einstein, have striven to clarify basic approaches to ultimate reality similar in several respects to that of Maharishi.

Erwin Schrodinger, a leader in early quantum physics research, also indicated the essential contribution which Eastern philosophy such as that underlying transcendental meditation may bring to the western "objective" methodology:

. . . our science - Greek science - is based on objectification, whereby it has cut itself off from an adequate understanding of the Subject of Cognizance, of the mind. But I do believe that this is precisely the point where our present way of thinking does need to be amended, perhaps by a bit of blood-transfusion from Eastern thought.

Following the research of Schrodinger and his colleagues, Prosser postulates that the basis of all physical reality, even that of sub-atomic particles, is a universal wave pattern. Consequently, he presents the awe-inspiring vision of a man walking about with these components of infinity, stirring the whole cosmos by his every breath and action. This possible relationship between Being and superficial appearance derived from quantum theortetical interpretation resembles closely Maharishi's vision of pure Consciousness.

In response to Prosser's theory, Maharishi has outlined his own vision of the universe:

This aspect of nature is very peculiar. Everyone is dancing on the head of everyone else. The whole physical structure is just a composite of waves. Actually, there is only one wave although it seems that there are many. Beyond the waves are just "tendencies". And beyond all this is the finest, no particle, no wave, no tendency.

It is this field of the Infinite, he asserts, that man reaches through the regular practice of transcendental meditation.

This is rarefied air for the average person to breathe but Transcendental meditation is basically practical and common sense - a philosophy of action for everyday life. It is not only for those who are by nature introspective or devotional or for ascetics. The life of the spirit may be opened to all men and infinity indeed stretches in every direction.

Beware of Wolves

Continued from Page 9

students from low income families to further their education beyond this three year limit. There is ample evidence to conclude that the parents of these student would generally advise them not to incur a debt from their education by applying for a loan to continue further. This limits the accessibility for these students to those faculties which require more than three years of study to obtain a degree -- particularly law, medicine and any graduate level of study. As a result, stratification among levels of study is increased.

The other component of the Commission's financial aid scheme is aid in the form of loans, available to everyone. The Commission feel that by offering loans to all segments of the population, regardless of income, it can offset the downward effect the increased fees are expected to have on enrolments. The Commission plans to charge interest on these loans at the current rate of interest to guard against "unscrupulous people" (p. 48) who engage in profit making enterprises with the capital from loans. Charging this current rate of interest, however, will do nothing to ease the added burden of higher education for the majority of student families. There is, in addition, nothing exclusive about this offer. Anyone with credit -- and, as it has been pointed out, parents of university-aged students are approaching peak earnings, and thus can usually get credit -- can secure the same type of loan at any finance company.

In conclusion, let it be said that there is still hope that the Wright Commission has reacted appropriately to many of the arguments, re-stated here, that were advanced against the proposals of their Draft Report, A cautionary remark should be advanced as the assessment of the final draft -- on the surface, the Draft Report seemed to be the answer to the problem of accessibility to post-secondary education -- beware of wolves dressed in sheep's clothing.

544-1227
286 Montreal St. North
• Free Delivery
• Fast, Friendly Service
• Most consistent quality
• pizza in Kingston
PIZZA CHALET

Queen's University Music Department

THE SPANISH CANTIGAS
An illustrated lecture by:
Professor W. Maust
Wednesday, November 22, 8 p.m.
Dunning Auditorium - Admission free

Department of Film Studies
Presents
mon oncle antoine
A Film by Claude Jutra, 1971
Winner of 8 Prizes
at the 1971 Canadian Film Awards
&
Best Feature Film
1971 Chicago International Film Festival
Tuesday, November 21
9:00 P.M. in Ellis Hall
Admission $1.00
The film has English sub-titles

The Paulists are helping to build the earth.
downtown
on the campus in the parish in the office building bridges working with the young and old spreading the Christian spirit, praying celebrating counseling
North American priests on the move throughout Canada and the United States.
For more information write:
Father Donald C. Campbell,
Room 101CA.
Paulist Fathers.
647 Markham Street
Toronto 174, Ontario

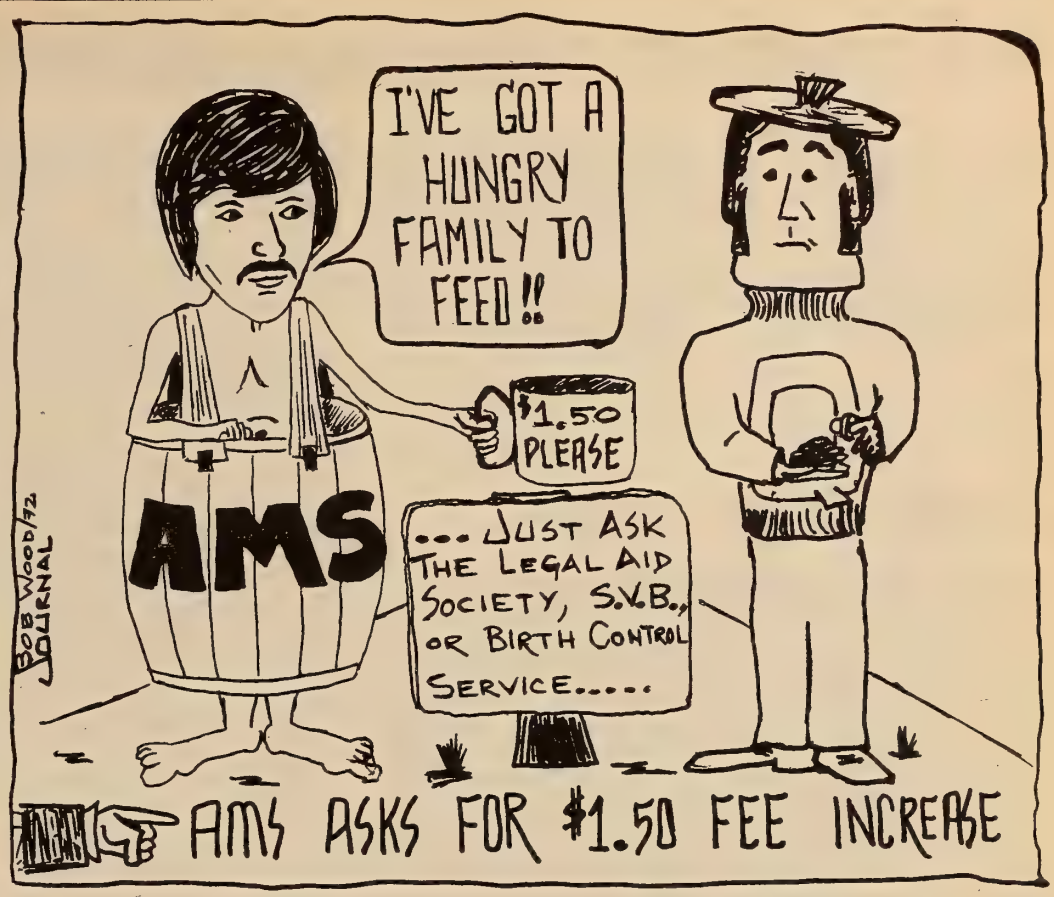
letters

AMS needs more money

In conjunction with the election for Rector being held today, Queen's students are being asked, by means of a referendum, to increase the AMS fee from $6.50 to $8.00. Since I am the one who asked that this referendum be held, I would like to explain some of the reasons why I feel this increase is essential.

One of the most worthwhile functions of the AMS is that of helping students who have worthwhile ideas to develop their plans into functioning services and agencies. In the last few years the Student Volunteer Bureau, the Student Legal Aid Society, and the Birth Control and Abortion Information and Referral Service are just a few examples of projects that have started with AMS assistance. However, the more services which we help into operation, the more agencies we are required to support from our inflexible revenues (i.e. the AMS fee). Unfortunately, we have now reached the stage that we can no longer provide financial assistance for any new groups.

It was mentioned in the Journal of Friday, November 17, that bureaucratic costs have risen. This is true and is the result of two things. First, and most obvious, inflation has affected us right from the cost of stationery to the salaries of our employees. Second, we have increased the size of our full-time staff. This latter change, while increasing the proportionate size of our administrative expenses, has more than been offset by the increased efficiency of operation which has resulted due to our ability to institute proper bookkeeping procedures and prevent errors such as double payment of bills and non-collection of outstanding accounts. It is this increased efficiency which has allowed the AMS to continue to expand its scope without any increase in fees thus far.



But back to inflation. It has increased costs in everything we do, from decorations and entertainment for putting on Homecoming and Snowball to the cost of printing "You and the Law" and "Who's Where". And all the outside groups which we fund are also being faced with rising costs and are asking us for increased support. To give you some idea of the magnitude of the problem, when I sat down to draw up the budget for this year, total estimated revenue was approximately sixty thousand dollars; total requests for money were over ninety thousand dollars! Obviously a lot of worthwhile projects had to be scrapped, and as mentioned earlier, there is no money available for any new needs and-or ideas.

Wouldn't it be preferable to have more events and projects financed by faculty societies you may ask. However even when faculty societies administer programmes, they expect financial support from the AMS. For example, both the Majority Rights Symposium run by the Law Society and Olympics '76 run by PHESA were largely financed by the AMS.

The options then are simple. If the fee increase is approved, the AMS will be able to continue to support campus groups and organizations to provide Queen's with needed services and events. Alternatively, if the fee increase is not granted, not only will there be no new growth, but activities will have to be reduced and support for many groups will have to be cut off.

The choice is yours, but I urge you to vote for the one dollar and fifty cent increase.

Yours sincerely,
Wally Palmer

Defended

Dear Editor,

The remarks made by Mr. Dick Shonerry in today's Journal regarding Paul Gompertz' reviews are not only unwarranted, but they exhibit a type of mindlessness which pervades the Queen's campus.

Does Mr. Shonerry feel that the sole purpose of language is to communicate, to provide information? Does he not see that expression in any language is an art, and that art is shaped by the purpose which lies behind it? When Mr. Shonerry reads a review of a play or movie, does he expect merely to be provided with information about it? I hope not. I rather and probably too idealistically, hope that we read reviews as the reflections of an artistically sensitive mind on some work of art.

Furthermore, is it ever possible to express our reactions to a work of art in clear, purely communicative ways? Again, I hope not. The language of the reviewer must necessarily be analytic and tend to the poetic, for he attempts to place under the control of language the emotions which seize him when confronted by a work of art. We all say to ourselves, while watching a play or movie, "I like this" or "I don't like this", but how many of us go beyond that superficial level to ask why those likings or dislikings exist? This lack of questioning, this blind acceptance of the given, this superficial treatment of everything, I see all around me here and I characterize it as mindlessness. Thank God for people like Paul Gompertz. If they did not exist, into what total darkness civilization would plunge, I hesitate to imagine.

Personally, I have found Gompertz' reviews interestingly and enjoyably written, and he has brought to the pages of the Journal a style and sophistication that is more than welcome. Both his reviews and those of Sandy Naiman I always read, whether I have seen the show in question or not. I find them entertaining and as close to good literature as the Journal ever comes in its weekly issues.

In looking over this letter, I find perhaps too many rhetorical question marks, but the subject of artistic criticism is a very involved one, and I can only raise some points which one should keep in mind while reading a review.

Hundreds of students come to Queen's each year with basic deficiencies in reading and writing abilities. Let us give thanks for those few who still honour the art of written expression.

Yours,
Charles Hayter

Vanquished

Dear Editor,

As a reviewer, Paul Gompertz has obvious acuity, scholarship and, at times, eloquence. Providing one has a dictionary readily to hand, his contributions are usually stimulating and enjoyable to read. However, his notice this week on 'The Mother' presented by Queen's Drama Department contains enough non sequiturs and blatant contradictions to suggest a lack of preparation or adequate thought or both.

For example, can Barb Stewart's performance as the mother really be 'well developed' and yet 'lacking in range?' Maybe, but its a semantic nicety that surely deserves some explanation. Again, how does Norm Campbell's speech idiosyncrasy add 'arcane unintelligibility to the Russian atmosphere of the play?' This intensely subjective observation may mean that Mr. Gompertz would have been happier if the actor had delivered his lines in Russian (difficult, since Brecht wrote in his native German) but we are left wondering.

Such omissions are merely irritating but the central argument on which the review is based seems deliberately myopic. We are informed that the acting was of a 'uniformly high standard' but that the directing was 'ill-considered' and 'not in sympathy with the talents of the actors.' This is an unlikely enough admixture in a play which depends upon psychological realism as anyone who has acted will know; poor direction usually results in at least some inadequate performances. In Brechtian theatre, it's a virtual impossibility. Ensemble playing, heavily dependent upon tight and consistent direction is a 'sine qua non' of any successful production of a Brecht play. Without in any way detracting from the individual abilities of the cast, it is greatly to the credit of the director, Bernard Burkom that he was able to coax from his young actors the energy and precision which resulted in precisely the 'uniformly high standard' previously remarked.

As for the objection to mixing dramatic modes, this may have appeared 'horrifying' to Mr. Gompertz but it would hardly have offended Brecht for whom the technique of 'Alienation' was essential to his dramatic purpose. Some of the director's gambits may not have worked, but to condemn the mechanics of the production as a 'gallimaufry' (i.e. meat ragout, hodgepodge. See 'Webster's Collegiate Dictionary') 'put together scene by scene with no thought to dramatic continuity), is surely an exaggeration bordering on the ludicrous.

In the light of his subsequent remarks, it speaks volumes for Mr. Gompertz's critical detachment that he was able to find the play 'one of the few enjoyable dramatic undertakings that I have seen in Kingston.'

John Burgess.

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 21, Tues., Nov. 21, 1972
Queen's University at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Patricia Devitt
Martin Jones
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
Backpage: Bob Mutrie
Photos: Pete Boag

And special thanks and a tip o' Scoop's hat to Bob Wood, Dave Wood, Peter Watts, Sue de Stein, Helen Gignac, Lee Berry, and she who didn't writer her story -- Hate, hate.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society or the University. Offices are located in the Students' Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

B.C. students protest new student loan regulations

OTTAWA CUP) — The federal student loan regulations came under fire as representatives of the British Columbia Association of Student Unions (BCASU) presented a brief to the steering committee of student loan officials from the provincial and federal governments.

The brief attacked the recent changes in the loan regulations, as well as some of the original regulations.

The recent changes include a demand that students save a certain amount of money over the summer, and the compulsory inclusion of photostats of the student's T-1 tax return form, birth certificate, and social insurance number with a loan application.

Finance Minister John Turner has claimed in a letter to the vice-president of Simon Fraser University that "... experience with this program over the past seven years has indicated that unsubstantiated data submitted by applicants cannot be relied upon."

Turner said that "... it had been discovered that false information on application forms was being submitted by some 25 per cent of the applicants (in the case of one province 75 per cent)."

He concluded "... to fail to require verification of data would, in my view, be an irresponsible use of the taxpayer's money."

The BCASU brief claims the federal government has offered no figures to justify the changes. It says any extra costs could result only from interest payment on the portion of loans gained by the submission of false information; by the extra administrative cost involved; and by unpaid loans originally gained by the submission of false information.

The brief also says the reference to the 75 per cent is irrelevant because it refers to Quebec which does not fall under the Canada Student Loan Act.

Because the Canada Student Loan application is a legal document and can be used as evidence under the Canada Evidence Act, the required photostated material is unnecessary, the BCASU says. The students also term it discriminitory because other federally-quaranteed loans do not require all these documents.

The BCASU brief suggests the provincial age of majority by the sole factor for determining independence, because it is the student who is liable for repayment of the loan.

The brief also suggests the elimination of the summer earning chart in favor of the old method of requesting applicants specify their existing financial support.

The number of student loan applications at the University of British Columbia has dropped by some 50 per cent this year. Meanwhile, the same trend is being experienced across Canada because many students are not returning to school. Many of the ones who are, come from higher income families.

Loyola delays merger with George Williams

MONTREAL (CUPI) — Uncertainty still remains for the merger of Loyola College and Sir George William University.

The Loyola board of trustees, which must make the final decision at Loyola whether to accept the "Model for the New University", met November 6 only to recess after four hours.

Academic vice-president Joseph Burke claimed the meeting proceeded "amicably" but refused to give details, fearing repercussions from Sir George Williams. A student member of the board, Mary Roche, told the Loyola student newspaper that the trustees seemed to have no problem solving major problems, but did have some difficulty with some minor points. But she was confident the merger would continue as planned once the two schools agree on the details.

The onus really falls on the Loyola body to make a decision because Sir George appears united behind accepting the Model. Therefore, any changes will come from Loyola and then will have to be renegotiated. Many changes have been suggested, and if any are accepted, they will probably concern the faculties of commerce and science.

Significant pressure has been placed on the trustees to alter the recommendation which proposes the dissolution of the honors science program at Loyola.

The plan for the new university proposes two joint faculties -- in engineering, and commerce and administration -- faculties of arts and science for Sir George and a Faculty of Loyola College with programs in arts and science. Loyola would offer honors and major programs in arts and would be restricted to major programs in science.

New CEGEP campus

MONTREAL (CUPI) — Although it has less available space than any other university, Loyola College of Montreal has offered part of a building for a new CEGEP campus next year.

The proposal resulted from a meeting called by the minister of education at which he asked all English CEGEP's and universities to suggest ways to housing the approximately 2,000 extra students who will be entering CEGEP's next year.

The arrangement will last for only two years, Loyola will accommodate about 800 students next year and another 1,000 the year after, but it will merely rent space to the CEGEP without establishing administrative ties with it.

The proposal calls for major renovations to the building Loyola is offering. Two courtyards will be filled in at the cost of about $140,000. Dining facilities will be doubled at a cost of about $300,000.

Burke explained Loyola made the offer because "if a solution is not found there is a possibility that some qualified students wouldn't be able to go on to CEGEP next year."

Burke admitted the plan would cause some crowding, but he felt the crowding would be a reasonable price for the continuation of a viable CEGEP program.

Brian Warrender Neil Steenberg Sarah Prichard Alan Ingram

Dave Dobbin Bill Cook Sam Principi Abraham Szereszewski

Rick Hillary Sharon McFadzean Randy Coates Jean Cook Ted O'Neill

QUEEN'S STUDENTS, AS RESIDENTS OF SYDENHAM WARD, ARE DIRECTLY AFFECTED BY CITY POLICY REGARDING HOUSING, SUMMER EMPLOYMENT, AND POLICE PROTECTION.

HOUSING ... "co-operative apartments are a positive approach to our housing problem."

SUMMER EMPLOYMENT ... "I organized a pilot progam last summer and hired 35 students. This year, with city co-operation we can aim for hiring several hundred students in this environmental program."

- FACULTY MEMBER - ST. LAWRENCE COLLEGE
- QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY GRADUATE
  B.Sc. '67 Civil Engineering
  M.Sc. Colorado, water resources
- 15 YR. RESIDENT OF SYDENHAM WARD
- ENVIRONMENTAL RESEARCHER

ANGUS ROSS SYDENHAM WARD

Help Elect Strong Representation

Call 542-7890 or visit 94 William St.

WE ARE WORKING TO ELECT ANGUS ROSS IN OUR WARD.

unclassifieds

FROSH? an irate spectator?, a hassled Gael? - If you have strong feelings about ORIENTATION, come to the OPEN MEETING Thursday Nov. 23, in Jeffrey at 7:30 pm. Come and make your presence felt.

ANYONE FINDING A red folder containing English and Physiology notes on November 13th as well as other papers, please phone Claire at 544-1431.

CAN YOU ADD, SUBTRACT, MULTIPLY OR FRACTIONALLY DIVIDE? If you can, and would like to handle large sums of money efficiently, we need you as treasurer for the ASUS ORIENTATION COMMITTEE. Apply c-o AMS office before Nov. 24.

HAPPY 21ST BIRTHDAY Chownie. From the 6E Animals.

ANYONE INTERESTED IN A visit to the Ontario Legislature on Tuesday, November 28, (for a small fee), should call 544-8576.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, Rick, You are now one-fifth of a century old. -- Frankenberry.

PUB NIGHT in Grant Hall sponsored by Commerce and Meds. Saturday, November 25, 8 - midnight. Beer 40 cents. Everyone invited. Admission Free.

AMS HOUSING REQUIRES resident caretaker. Apply for interview on Friday, November 24, 3:30 pm. Second Floor Common Room, Student Union.

FOUND A SLIDE RULE with leather cover. Please phone 549-1481 between 5:30 and 6:30 pm.

A WASTED BLOOD CELL WAKES up one morning, pink rather than his normal red, and decides he'd better get into the flow of things. Drained of all vital juices, he slithers out of his lair to replenish himself at the food reservoir of the kitchen. Rosy, refreshed and ready, he bravely accelerates into the surging tide of cells streaming along the veins. Pooling with them for a moment in the swift ride down to the heart, bracing himself for the final onslaught, he heroically heads for the wound where he spurts out to face the ultimate danger: the outside world. If you ever had high hopes of being a wasted blood cell, now's your chance: call Elrond College - 544-1842.

DIANNE -- we still have your cup.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY KIM -- from Ext. Afrs. and friend.

WE NEED A FAST PEN HANDLER - a SECRETARY for the ASUS ORIENTATION COMMITTEE. Apply c-o AMS Outer Office before Nov. 24, in writing please.

LOST: BRACELET (fine gold chain) last Wed. somewhere on campus. Great sentimental value. Also small gold barrette at the Semi. 544-5489.

FOUND — A WATCH at the Suzie-Q stag dance. Phone Paul at 544-7585.

B-Ball Gaels split exhibitions; hot rookies key to Queen's success

by Chris Boon

Queen's Golden Gaels basketball squad served notice to the OUAA-East this weekend, as they split a pair of exhibition games in Montreal, dumping a hapless McGill squad 70-47 Saturday night, then dropping a close 92-86 contest to Sir George Williams Sunday afternoon. The Gaels unveiled a bumper crop of rookies, headed by 6'3" forward Norm Hagarty and Kingston native John Keck at guard, and displayed more hustle and drive, on and off the court than the entire season generated last year. Hagarty led all scorers in both contests, hooping 17 against the Redmen, then pumping in 30 points in the Sunday contest, while Keck, who had been a little shaky against McGill, found his shooting legs in the Georgian game, putting in 18, 14 in the second half. Derek Swinnard, another rookie forward, came off the bench to add punch to Queen's attack, hooping 10 points Saturday and 8 Sunday, as well as pulling down 7 rebounds in the McGill match.

The veterans added some sparks of their own, with Paul Howard leading the way. Howard hit for 15 points and 17 rebounds Saturday, then added 8 points in the SGWU game; Bruce Hemming played his usual punishing defensive game underneath, and added 12 points against SGWU. Rob Smart, who has shown a great deal of promise as the Gaels' floor leader, ran into foul trouble in the Georgians game, but kept the Gaels out of trouble when Sir George tried to press.

The McGill game, played in the somewhat rejuvenated but still dingy Currie Gym, started off slowly, as the Gaels refused to take full advantage of the overall ineptness of the host Redmen. In fact, the first 20 minutes had about as much excitement as a good Junior game in high school. Only some breakneck assaults on the hoop by Hagarty (his check apparently didn't realize that Norm is left-handed, and he had a field day along the baseline) and the general gung-ho approach of the team as a whole kept the capacity crowd of 19 awake. The score at the half was 27-24 for Queen's.

The second half showed some improvement. Howard started to get some points (and rebounds), Hagarty kept hitting, Swinnard came off the bench for some points, Rob Smart added some fine driving layups, and the Gaels started to pull away. Coach Frank Tindall put everybody into the game, but it didn't make much difference. Queen's kept right on scoring,and running, and playing decent defense.

Sunday was another ballgame, though. Sir George is a good, but not exceptional, team, but they had a hot shooting hand, pumping in 38 of 70 shots from the floor, with forward Mark Hickey and guard Jim Berttiet doing most of the damage. Hickey had 28 points, including a lot of "garbage", while the diminutive guard, who has some good moves underneath, kept the Gaels' defense off balance with 25 points. The Gaels opened up an early lead, and led by as much as 8 points during the first quarter, but the Georgians began to hit from outside, and actually led by four at the half, 44-40. The Gaels made some typical rookie mistakes in the third quarter, allowing the SGWU squad to open up a larger lead, and Queen's trailed by as many as 13 points early in the fourth quarter. The Keck got hot, Hemming and Howard started to get some rebounds, Hagarty kept scoring, and Queen's pulled to within one point. Shortly after, Rob Smart got nailed with his fifth dubious foul of the afternoon, and the Gaels appeared a bit rattled with him out of the game. Sir George was able to stay ahead, by a little, until time ran out.

So, what lies ahead? The Gaels meet Toronto here this Friday night in their first league contest, and if Queen's can maintain the degree of aggressiveness shown in Montreal, they shoud win. Saturday night, Brock comes into town for another exhibition match. This one has a human-interest angle; Ken Sagadore, a spare guard with the Gaels, played for Brock last year, while the Badgers now own the "Rabbit", Joey Davidson. A one-for-one trade, you might say. Both play "rabid" basketball, so a matchup could be interesting.

John Keck turns the corner against McGill

Norm Hagarty drives for some of his 30 points vs SGWU

SCIENCE '74

GENERAL MEETING

Tues., Nov. 21st

Stirling Hall

☐ Ratification of Pres. & Vice-Pres.

☐ Elections for Secretary

☐ Elections for SCIENCE FORMAL COMMITTEE

Application for SCIENCE FORMAL CONVENOR NOW BEING ACCEPTED.
To be submitted in writing to the Engineering Society Office in Clark Hall.
Deadline Nov. 21st

Swim Gals do well individually at Mac

Queen's girls swimming and diving team travelled to Hamilton to take part in an invitational meet Saturday at McMaster University. While the team itself did not do well, individual perfermances by several girls leave plenty of hope for the future. Cathy Brace was the best of the Queen's swimmers with three second place finishes in the 50 yard freestyle, the 100 yard freestyle and the 200 yard breast-stroke. Diane Kidd placed fifth in the 200 yard individual medley and Jan Handcock finished sixth in the same event. In the 200 yard freestyle, Brenda Prosenyak finished eighth and Iana Swan finished ninth. Beth Randal placed tenth in the 100 yard freestyle and Mary Jean Dunn finished tenth in the 100 yard backstroke. The relay team placed sixth in the 400 yard freestyle relay.

Coach Sheila McKirdy feels that the team is well ahead of last year's pace and looks for continued improvement in the new year. The month of January will see the team competing in three meets with one of them being the Queen's Invitational on January 27th.

Hockey Gaels split; Rams up, Vee's down

by Peter Watts

The Queen's Golden Gaels hockey team opened its 1972-73 season on Friday night at the Harty Arena with a convincing 11-1 rout of the Ryerson Rams before a small crowd of Queen's supporters. The Gaels were in complete command all the way leading 4-1 after the first period and 8-1 after the second.

Dave Melloy opened the scoring for Queen's at 4:41 of the first period with assists going to Jim Tittemore and Bob Kindon. The Gaels got two more goals from Kindon and Jim Sunstrum before Ryerson finally got on the board at 12:11 of the first period with Ron Watson getting the goal. Colin Loudon got his first of two goals late in the first period.

In the second period, the Gaels got four unanswered goals from Steve Gross, John Smith, Craig Shannon, and Loudon. Third period markers went to Sunstrum, Kindon and Norm Goulet. For Sunstrum and Kindon it was their second goals of the night.

The Gaels completely dominated the game against a weaker Ryerson club. For once, the Gaels appeared to be in better shape than their opponents. Coach Dave Chambers of Ryerson told me that his team only gets a chance to practice twice a week because Ryerson does not have a rink of their own. The Gaels outshot Ryerson 44-18 in the game.

Sunday afternoon, however, was a different story as the Gaels played the Laurentian Voyageurs in Sudbury and lost 8-3. Veterans Frank Hammell and Ken Richardson did most of the damage for the Voyageurs as Hammell scored 3 goals and Richardson added 2 more. Bob Sidey also scored twice for Laurentian and John Precious added a single marker. John Smith got two goals for the Gaels and John Cerre added the other.

The score was 2-1 at the end of the first period, and 4-1 after the second. Queen's missed two breakaways, one when the score was 2-1 and the other with Laurentian leading 3-1. The Voyageurs are noted for their ability to score early, and Hammell got the first of his three goals with only 17 seconds gone in the first period. The fifth Laurentian goal, which was scored 16 seconds after the start of the third period, seemed to sink the Gaels into a shell and they were unable to shake themselves out of it before the final whistle.

Coach Bob Carnegie said that the Voyageurs showed more hustle and confidence in moving the puck than did the Gaels. Again the recurring problem seems to be the inability to keep the opposition and the puck from in front of the goal. Goaltender Clyde Harris played the entire game in the nets for Queen's and could not be faulted on the Laurentian goals. Harris faced a total of 39 shots. The Gaels tested the Laurentian goalie 36 times.

The Gaels are on the road again next weekend as they travel to Kitchener to face Waterloo and Waterloo Lutheran next Friday and Saturday. With only seven home games in the regular season this year, the Gaels must prove that they can win on the road as well as at home. Attitude and desire as usual will play a key role in the Gaels' success this year.

Men's Gymnastics clobbered in American Contest

by Chris Woods

The Queen's Men's Gymnastics team, third in the OUAA last year, found out how much they still have to learn in their sport this past Saturday at an in-invitational dual meet held at Cornell University.

The Queen's team was convincingly clobbered by a total score of 143.35 to 109.05 in a meet against Ivy League champion Cornell. A substantial portion of the margin of victory can be attributed to the benefits of superior facilities, the use of specialists in each event, the use of a full-time (nothing else but gymnastics) coach, and those infamous athletic scholarships. But at least three of the Cornell gymnasts performed all-around, so we can't explain the loss away completely in this manner. The plain truth is that the Cornell team was stronger and better-conditioned than the Queen's squad, and the performances they turned in were superior.

Although Cornell managed to capture first spot in every event, the two Queen's gymnasts who have been training hard turned in creditable performances in the all-around standings, where it really counts in the Ontario championships. Jamie Archibald, team captain, took fifth place in the final standings while Drew Strickland, a third-year biochemistry student, took third spot in the all-around scores. The rest of the Queen's effort appeared a bit sluggish and hesitant, almost certainly because of a serious lack of intensive training by the remainder of the team. The only other member of the team who can possibly be excused from this rather sweeping indictment, besides Archibald and Strickland, is rookie Bob Dales, who is still assembling his initial university-level routines.

All in all, the Cornell-Queen's contest was certainly a very useful meet, especially from the standpoint of exposing the Queen's gymnasts to some unique and interesting sequences of moves, and should serve as a valuable yardstick by which to measure performances during the OUAA season. Hopefully this meet will serve both as a stimulus and as a timely warning to a gym team which will have to shape up to keep or improve its standing in their own league.

Volleyball Gaels off to flying start

Queen's volleyball team got off to a fine start this past weekend as they swept their first four series of matches in the opening tournament of the OUAA season held Saturday at Queen's. Teams from Toronto, Ryerson, Ottawa, Carleton, York, Laurentian, and Queen's took part.

The Gaels met Laurentian, Ryerson, Toronto and York in this first round although they will see action against the other teams later in the year. The day began with a tough 17-15 loss to Laurentian; however, the Gaels rallied to take the final two games of the series by scores of 15-7 and 15-5. Against Ryerson, the Gaels had little trouble, sweeping the series by scores of 15-7 and 15-8.

Their next round action was against York. The series turned out to be a very exciting affair with the lead see-sawing back and forth. York won the first game 15-12, but Queen's came back to take the second game 18-16. At one point in the second game, Queen's had gotten off to a 7-0 lead but the Yeomen rallied to tie the score and Queen's was hard pressed to pull off a victory. The third game was won by Queen's by a score of 15-9. The victory over York was particularly sweet for Queen's; York had beaten the Gaels in the second Invitational Volleyball Tournament in Waterloo two weeks ago.

The Gaels final series of the day saw Queen's pitted against their arch rivals from the University of Toronto. The score was close in both games but Queen's emerged victorious by scores of 15-13 and 16-14.

Next weekend, The volleyball team will see action in the second tournament of the season as they play in Ottawa.

Other scores in the tournament were Toronto over Ottawa 15-9, 15-2; Toronto over Carleton 15-1, 15-7; Ottawa over Laurentian 15-12, 10-15, 15-13; Laurentian over Carleton 14-16, 15-5, 15-8; York over Ottawa 15-8, 15-6; York over Carleton 15-7, 15-7; Ryerson over Carleton 15-7, 15-9; and Ottawa over Ryerson 15-7, 18-16.

1972-73 Career Seminar No. 12

Jointly sponsored by the AMS
& Career Planning and Placement

CAREERS IN COMPUTING

... an open discussion conducted by

Mr. John Findeis,
Manager Software Engineering Section,
Canadian Police Information Centre, Ottawa

Monday, November 27th, 8:00 p.m.

Students' Memorial Union
McLaughlin Room

1972-73 Career Seminar No. 13

Jointly sponsored by the AMS
& Career Planning and Placement

CAREERS IN THE ONTARIO GOVERNMENT

... an open discussion conducted by

Mrs. Janet McChesney,
University Liaison Officer

Tuesday, November 28th, 7:00 p.m.

Students' Memorial Union
McLaughlin Room

VAN'S

Gifts Books Ltd.
253 Princess Street
542-6676 Kingston

Van's Adult section for
Adult Broadminded People
Adult: books, magazines, films
Adult: accessories, jokes, gifts
Adult: humorous cards & stationery
Adult: "Sex-to-Sexty" & "Super Sex-to-Sexty"
Adult: DeLuxe highgloss coloured posters
Yeah! Yeah! Comest ye all & select your purchase. Itt'll satisfy the soul of good 'harted' Van!
Open 7 days - till 11 pm

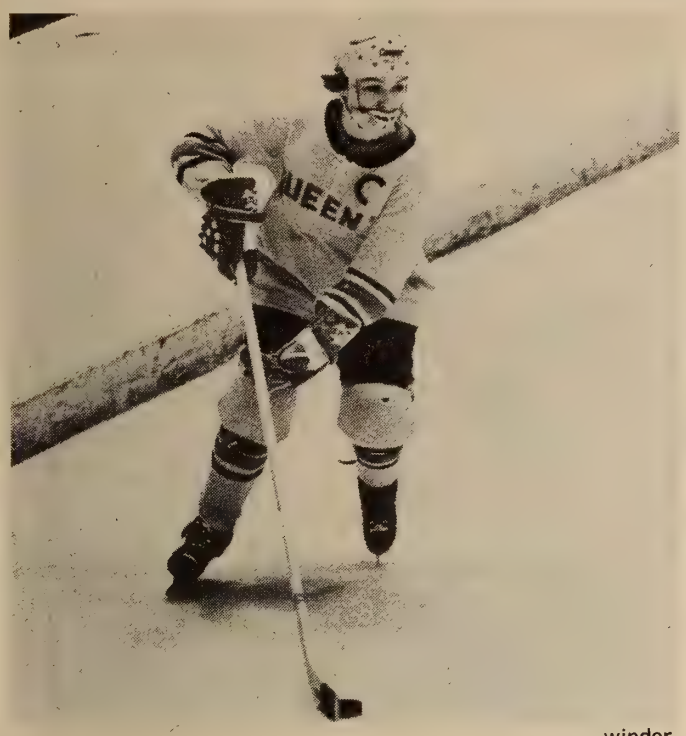
Canadian Handcrafted
Fully Briar Pipes
Different up to Date models

Hockey Gals split with league rivals

Queen's hockey Gals hosted their arch-rivals from last season over the weekend, and managed to emerge with a split decision. The Gals lost a 2-1 heartbreaker to Guelph Friday night, after holding a 1-0 lead into the final period, but came back to dump Western 1-0 on superior goaltending by Wanda Gyde and a goal by Wendy Carmen.

The Guelph game looked like the Gals were using an old New York Rangers script: pass the puck, then pass it again, and again, and again. . .but don't shoot, especially at the net. The Gals had numerous occasions on which they could have pulled away from Guelph, after Wenday Carmen had scored the opening goal, but failed to put the puck in the net. Perhaps frustrated by this inability of the forwards to put the puck in the net, the Gals' defencemen began committing themselves too early, and were caught up-ice on several occasions, including both goals. Goalie Wanda Gyde played a very steady game; the two Guelph markers came off rebounds that the absent defensive corps failed to pick up.

The Guelph team, mind you, were good. They appeared to be in excellent condition, and their positional play was generally superior to that of the Gals. Queen's has been rather short on ice time so far this year, due to concerts, beer bashes, and the like, and the lack of skating did show, especially later on in the game.



Even so, if the Guelph goalie had shown less inclination to smother the puck at all opportunities, the score might have told a different story.

The matinee effort against Western was a generally better show. The Gals were much more aggressive on offence, taking shots instead of passing, and playing a well-co-ordinated game; however, Queen's still lost scoring chances when their forwards waited for the puck instead of breaking down the ice. The big difference was in the Gals' ability to shift from offence to defence without getting caught out of position. They improved greatly over the Friday fiasco.

The new-found aggressiveness produced a lot of body contact ("hitting" is a nasty word) and a fair assortment of penalties. The Gals penalty-killing was a thing of beauty, breaking up the Western power-play in their own end, and producing several scoring chances. Leslie Ferrari and Wendy Carmen had excellent scoring opportunities, only to be foiled by the Western netminder.

The Gals appear to be rounding into shape as a whole team, after their third league game. They now have set lines, and the veterans seem to be well-integrated with the crop of newcomers. In particular, the team morale is high, and many of the Gals realize that this will be a do-or-die year for Queen's. And the indications are that they'll do, rather than die.

According to coach Cookie Cartwright, the entire team has been improving this season. "They (the Gals) skated better on Saturday," she said, "but they still have a lot to learn yet." The next test of how well Queen's is learning comes this Saturday, against York, in the Jock Harty. Game time is 3:00 p.m.

- winder

Pool Gaels fourth in OUAA relays

Queen's men's swimming and diving team came up with, what coach Larry Brawley called, "the best performance we've ever done", in the OUAA Relays in Toronto on Saturday. The activities were held in the York Pool.

Although final standings were unavailable at press time, Coach Brawley expected that Queen's would finish fourth out of eight teams and trailing Toronto, Western and Waterloo. Nonetheless, both he and diving coach Dr. Nelson Freedman were immensely pleased with the performance of the Queen's team. Most of the swimmers did personal best times in the relays with Queen's getting particularly strong performances from Rob Herman, Darryl Penner, John Pearson and John Ireland in the butterfly relay, and Penner in the breaststroke. Coach Brawley called it the strongest showing a Queen's team has ever had in relay swimming.

The diving team also did extremely well in their competition although they lost Phil Millard before the competition even got started. In a warmup dive prior to the start of the meet. Millard scraped across the bottom of the Pool and cut his lower lip. He was taken to hospital for repairs and could not take part in the meet. He is alright, however, and will be available for the Gaels next competition.

Despite the loss of Millard, the diving team finished fifth on the one-metre board and a strong and surprising second to the University of Western Ontario on the three-metre board. Tom Caswell looked particularly impressive for Queen's.

The diving team has been working out on the trampoline since the start of the season, under the watchful eyes of diving coach Freedman, and gymnastics coach Barry Brooker. Freedman and Brawley credit this added work with the strong and improving performance of the Queen's diving team this year.

A total of eight teams took part in the meet, representing Toronto, Western, York, McMaster, Waterloo, Guelph, Windsor and Queen's.

The swimming and diving teams see their next competition on Saturday, December 2nd, when they travel to Ottawa to take part in an invitational meet with the University of Ottawa and Plattsburg State College from Plattsburg New York. Coach Brawley is hopeful that Queen's can knock off Ottawa and "give Plattsburg a real run for their money." Plattsburg is expected to have a very strong team.

B-Ball Gals net double winner in weekend play

by Sue Moffatt

The OWIAA basketball season began this weekend with the Gals in Ottawa for two games. Friday against Ottawa, Queen's came from behind in the last five minutes of play to triumph over their traditional rival and court bogey-man, with a score 43-35. Veteren Karen Carson contributed 16 of the points, rookie Kathy Keely 10, and Janet Eady 5. The kilted Gals utterly dumped Carleton and on Saturday by a score of 39-11, as Laney Marshall retrieved her old form and netted 23 of the points.

The first half of the game against Ottawa was a study in frustration for Queen's. When the defense managed to bring the ball up to Ottawa's basket, either the plays were too uncoordinated and died of their own sloppiness, or more often, the ball seemed determined to evade the hoop. The second half, however, saw Queen's dominating the play. Karen Carson's successful outside shots contributed to the gradual overtake and defeat of their rival. It was a disgruntled Ottawa and jubilant Queen's that left the court after this last-minute victory.

Saturday's rout of Carleton was largely a result of Queen's effective use of the screen in the key, the press and zone defense, Laney Marshall's deftness, and Carleton's weakness. The play was comparable to Friday's but with the advantage of better percentage success on tries for the basket.

This weekend the basketball Gals meet Laurentian and it promises to be a good game. Come and see how Brenda Mackie's eager and quick team fares against the burly Northerners.

Volleyball drops two, but team looks strong

Sue Moffatt

Queen's senior volleyball team began league play this weekend with matches against Ottawa U. and Carleton. Spectators at Friday night's game against Ottawa surely saw some of the best play that inter-collegiate volleyball can offer.

After hovering at game point, the score of the first game finally tipped in Ottawa's favour 16-14. Queen's replied with a 15-13 victory in the second and recovered from an initial three point trail to thumb a confused Ottawa team 15-6 in the third. Ottawa pulled the fourth game out to a 15-13 win and in a nerve-stretching final game took the match with a 15-12 score. In total points, Queen's outscored Ottawa U. 69-64 in excellent, well-matched play.

It was a confident Queen's team that went into the match against Carleton on Saturday, and a thoroughly chastened one which came out of it. The first game went convincingly to the Gals, 15-10; but Carleton took the next three games and the match with equally definitive scores of 15-10, 15-8 and 15-9. It was hard to believe it was the same team which had just fared so well against Ottawa, who, incidently, have consistently beaten Carleton in extra-league play.

Volleyball is no longer a "front three, back three" proposition. This weekend's play pointed out the strengths and the weaknesses inherent in the new "power volleyball". Although one of the shortest teams in the league, Donna Gallagher's team uses fast footwork, great spring on their net plays and fast, loose spiking wrists to great advantage. The success of the system, however, depends on quick positioning on the court, good bumps and team co-ordination. In Ottawa's game the presence of these factors resulted in controlled hard spikes, noticeably by Kaiva Celdoma, and crossnet tips by Nancy Mills. Their abscence in Carleton's match was seen in net fouls, sloppy sets and general confusion. The inertia of players in the back court made for many dramatic "one-hand-wonder" bumps, which unfortunately were neither necessary nor often successful.

Inconsistencies on the part of the refs and linesmen were a game in themselves. It is a tribute to all the coaches' self-restraint that at least one umpire wasn't found in the locker room strangled by his own whistle.

Our Gals meet Laurentian here this coming weekend. They are a youthful but a seasoned team, with plenty of potential and the will to work. It will be a good match, and if they play as they did against Ottawa, it's bound to change your idea of volleyball.

World: State of emergency declared as students protest

BATON ROUGE, Louisiana — An area state of emergency has been delcared here as students of Southern University clashed with troops during their occupation of the university administration building.

Two black students were killed by either buckshot or shrapnel from exploding grenades or bombs when law officers moved in to clear out the students. There are one hundred national guardsmen on campus and another four hundred are waiting in reserve.

University governor Edwin Williams said that films show students firing the first blow - a cannister of tear gas being thrown at the approaching troops. Subsequent fires on the campus damaged two buildings and another was bombed.

The 9,000 student campus, one of the largest predominantly black university's in the United States, was pressing for more control of administrative affairs. Several weeks of boycotts and sit-ins finally culminated in the raid.

WASHINGTON — The American Balance of Payments during the months of July to September showed a marked deterioration after nine months of steady improvement. Official reserve transactions showed a deficit of $4.67 billion on a seasonally adjusted basis compared with a surplus of $850 million in the previous quarter.

The reserve transactions, which measure the flows of funds between governments and central banks, experienced a downtrend due to a dollar drain caused by the unsettled exchange markets which resulted from Britain's decision to float the pound last spring.

WELLINGTON, New Zealand — A close race is in progress in New Zealand, where the two major parties are fighting to gain an edge in the November 25 election. The governing National Party and the Opposition Labor Party are running close with the Labor Party, led by Norman E. Kirk, holding a slight edge.

The National Party led by Prime Minister John R. Marshall presently hold 44 of the 84 seats in the House of Representatives and the Labor hold the remainder.

Also running in the election is the Social Credit Party which lost considerable strength when it split recently on several issues and the New Democrats are expected to split their vote. The Socreds gained their major moral strength from their brother Canadian movement but with the decrease in Socred support here, the New Zealand Party has become much more disillusioned.

HANOI — North Vietnam announced in Paris last week that they will accept no changes in the Vietnam ceasefire agreement worked out with US Presidential Advisor Henry Kissinger. The United States has been holding up the signing of the agreement to allow clarification of certain points contained in the treaty.

Looking About

by Peter Jensen

Last Tuesday, I visited the village-idiot school. While being escorted about by the chief administrator, I observed a gentleman questioning another. He asked whether or not in a story the other had murdered a comrade in the best interests of the party. The second, dressed in overalls with a straw hat in his hand, answered "no, that is not right. If you read it, you will discover that literature has the right and duty to give to the public the ideas of the time."

I queried my guide, the administrator, about this conversation. He replied it was in rehearsal for the school play, Art to the People. "Who will be the audience?" "I, and you, if you will."

"I can hardly wait to go out and see if the cost of living has gone down yet ..."

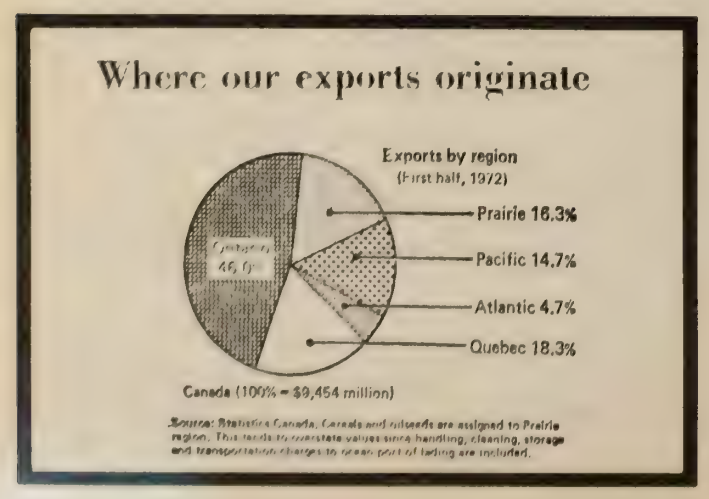
Hanoi maintains that the United States should have signed the treaty on October 31 and continues to demand immediate signing. Saigon has also called for revision of the treaty claiming that there must be a total withdrawal of all North Vietnamese troops as an "essential element of the agreement".

WASHINGTON — The American State Department has announced that Canada, Hungary, Indonesia, and Poland have agreed to supply forces for international supervision of a ceasefire in Vietnam.

However, a Canadian External Affairs Department spokesman stated that Canada has made no commitment to the role.

backpage

Canada: Ontario recount reverses Commons standings



WHITBY — A judicial recount of Ontario riding has given what was previously a Conservative win to Liberal Norman Cafik by four votes. The Conservative candidate is now consulting with his lawyers as to whether he should appeal the decision to a higher court. The judicial recount is the last automatic recount to be offered to candidates with a loss of twenty-five votes or less.

The decision leaves the House standings: Liberals 109, Conservatives 107, New Democratic Party 31, Social Credit 15 and Independents 2.

In recounts in three other ridings the election night results were confirmed and no other major changes were made. These were the ridings of Meadow Lake, Portneuf, and Churchill.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau announced that he will be calling the next session of the House on January 4. Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield and New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis have been urging that the House meet in December.

However Trudeau stated that he has an important program to get together for the Speech from the Throne. Besides a lot of "positive legislation", he said he also plans to form a new cabinet before Parliament is called.

OTTAWA — NDP leader David Lewis stated last week that he was approached by Liberal Justice Minister Otto Lang to form some kind of union between the two parties. "In a very few words I rejected it outright and firmly," Lewis said.

Lewis claimed that Lang suggested that the two parties should reach an "organic understanding". Lang told Lewis that he was doing it on his own, on his personal thought alone.

Lewis replied that the NDP refused and would always refuse to have any alliance with either of the two major parties.

•

OTTAWA — Canada experienced their worst balance of payments position in five years during the third quarter of 1972, Statistics Canada announced. During the months of July to September the net current account deficit on a seasonally adjusted basis was $408 million. There was a $102 million surplus during the same period last year.

The merchandise trade balance moved from a surplus of $429 million in the previous quarter to a deficit of $50 million.

There was a $280 million fall in exports and a $100 million increase in imports. The deficit is largely attributed to sluggish foreign markets for Canadian exports, the shutdown of General Motors' Ste. Therese plant, the Vancouver longshoreman's strike and the British dock strikes.

TORONTO — The 250 member letter carriers Toronto local has gone on strike, stopping all truck pick-up and delivery of mail in Toronto. It is expected to hold up most mail delivery in the city and they have started barring trucks from coming in from outside.

The Toronto post office trucks are now being driven by supervisory personnel. Postal authorities are advising residents not to post their mail in street mail boxes but to mail them directly through the post office.

The truck drivers' strike comes in response to the indefinite extension of the deadline for conciliation of their ongoing contract dispute.

KINGSTON — Joyceville medium security prison inmates are staging a protest against a ruling by prison director Charles W. Chitty ending free movement between cells during the evening. The 415 inmates are presently wandering outside their cells and have refused to return until the directive is rescinded.

The prisoners were allowed to move between the cells during offhours during an experiment begun last spring. However, Chitty claimed that it did not work, having presented too much of a threat to security.

REGINA — The Saskatchewan Liquor Board has ordered Calgary Export Ale off the Saskatchewan market after it was advertised at a Saskatchewan Roughriders - B.C. Lions game. All advertising of beer and liquor is illegal in that province. Calgary Export, which is one of the most popular brands in the province was originally ordered off the market for a period of sixty days. However, Premier Allan Blakeney softened the penalty handed out to one month after existing stocks run out.

TORONTO — Finance Minister John Turner announced that he intends to seek quick passage of legislation to implement corporate tax cuts in the new parliament. The NDP in the past has shown strong opposition to such a move. Turner has also called for early consideration for all tax measures proposed in the May 8 budget. These include accelerated depreciation on new machinery and equipment and a reduction in the corporate tax rate as well as that for small businesses.

He stated that no decision has been reached as to whether or not the government will propose personal income tax cuts.

Committee on sub-centres

by Bob Mutrie

Sub-centres on campus are going to be given special attention in the future with the announcement last Monday of the formation of a sub-committee on sub-centres by the University Centre User's committee.

There has been much controversy on campus since the Committee's open meeting on October 27 where people suggested that the User's Committee was not paying enough attention to sub-centres in their plans for placement of campus groups in a new University Centre system. The Committee has since strongly denied the charge.

User's Committee chairman D. G. Norman, Professor of Mathematics announced the formation of the sub-committee on sub-centres in the regular meeting last Monday, pointing out that a "clearer statement" on sub-centres was needed.

However, Norman stressed that the University Centre User's Committee has made decisions dealing with sub-centres in the past, referring to their decision to place a 100 seat buffeteria in a sub-centre in addition to the one already planned for the Arts and Social Sciences Complex.

Possible uses of Wallace Hall were discussed briefly at the meeting. Soberman pointed out that old halls can be made very attractive and suggested that Wallace could be a major traffic generator in the old Union building.

The committee expressed concern that the new University Centre could conceivably become two separated buildings if activities were not properly planned for each part. One major point suggested in tying the buildings together was provision of food services in both parts.

The Committee's major item of business this week was to deal with provision for the Pub in the new Centre. Pub manager, Reg Rickaby was at the meeting to present the pub's needs and projections for the future.

The proposal presented by Rickaby included provision for four rooms, each dedicated to a specific function. The "quiet pub would seat about one hundred people and cater to relaxed conversation. Another would hold one hundred people and be designated primarily for smokers as well as provide additional space for overflow. The Large room, where entertainment would be featured, would seat 200 to 300 people, and the fourth one would serve primarily as buffeteria but could also provide room for expansion if needed.

Rickaby called for a small, more luxurious room to seat at least 93 people, the mimimum possible for profitable operation, to serve as a quiet pub. It would be sealed off from the main pub with possibly a bar of its own.

The other one hundred seat room could be divided off from the rest of the pub, Rickaby claimed and would cater to smokers and at the same time would get away from the large hall idea.

Rickaby also called for a cold and a warm storage room with

Continued on Page 2

- marrithew

With winter setting in, it looks like "no more cycle days."

McArthur vs AMS

Student fee increase discussed

by Terry Macli

The MacArthur Students Society representing the interests of students in the faculty of education, met with four representatives from the AMS to discuss the possibility of re-negotiating student interest fees paid by McArthur students to the Alma Mater Society.

The meeting began with a motion to approve action taken by the McArthur cabinet resulting in a vote No campaign at McArthur with reference to the referendum on the 1.50 student fee increase. AMS rep Dave Hudson spoke against the motion claiming "that it was wrong for the AMS to start its negotiations from a position of conflict." Hudson also criticized the campaign for lacking objectivity and referred to the resentment created by the "spoon-feed" vote Yes campaign with regard to the fee strike referendum. MSS president Jim Wright however, disagreed with Hudson claiming that the MSS had to take a stand against a further fee increase at least until there had been some re-negotiation of the old fee system. The motion, not surprisingly was carried.

The meeting then moved into closed session with the arrival of Greg LeBlanc, Wally Palmer, Bruce Trotter and Lyn Whitam. The AMS delegation read a brief prepared by the MMS outlining the reasons for re-negotiation of fees. Despite its bias and sarcastic nature, the MSS brief did make a number of points. For example, when the Bus-it system was introduced this past month,

Continued on Page 2

Queen's Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 22

Friday, November 24, 1972

Change hits women's res.

by Susan de Stein

The Women's Residence Council held an open meeting on Monday night to deal with several important constitutional changes.

Kiloran German, president of the WRC, presided over the meeting and introduced several proposals for changes within the constitution.

These involved the elimination of several idiocies within the constitution which Miss German said "were unnecessary and too specific for the constitution."

One major change involved the lowering of the year restrictions on council positions. The elections for council positions take place during the spring term, at which time those running for positions previously had to be in second year. First year students may now run for positions in the spring elections. Miss German cited several instances where last year, council positions were won by acclamation. The "increased accessibility of positions," Miss German added, "will allow for better representation and will help the council to become a more responsive body."

In another constitutional change the position of vice-president was added to the basic council, in the hopes of easing the burden of other council members.

A great deal of controversy arose late in the meeting with the introduction of a proposal to change the 66 per cent needed in order to change residence rules to a straight majority of 50 per cent. Several of those present objected to the move on the grounds that it would be unconstitutional in light of the fact that attendance at the open meeting was too small for such a major change to be passed.

Miss German defended the move by saying that the meeting was open to all women residents and that it had been well-advertised. She also noted that the quorum was 50 and that it had been reached.

She then pointed out that her purpose in introducing the change was to allow the WRC to act on the majority opinion of the House, the women in residence. She felt that the present rule "allows 35 per cent of the women to impose on the majority what it wants."

On the grounds that the attendance at the meeting was not great enough, several of those present voted down the change. The 66 per cent required for a constitutional change was not obtained and the motion was defeated. Miss German's immediate comment was "I am disappointed."

The dissatisfaction of many with the edefeat of the motion was shown by Miss German's receipt, three hours later, of two petitions requesting that a referendum be held on the issue.

Miss German stated that the referendum will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday in the meal lines. A 66 per cent majority will be needed to pass the motion. She expressed the hope that it would be passed. "I would like to see the WRC become a truly responsive government. I feel that the majority is indeed responsible to make decisions."

McNie may revamp loans

Future student loans may be repayable according to income rather than as a normal bank loan, Ontario's Minister of Colleges and Universities, Jack McNie, told demonstrating students Tuesday.

In speaking to about 500 students protesting in front of Queen's Park, McNie said he hopes to amend the Ontario Student Awards Program by spring in order "to get loans repayable contingent on salary."

Students from six universities and three community colleges marched to the opening of the Legislature Tuesday to protest against fee increases and student grant reductions made last spring. The demonstration got only partial support from OFS members. Queen's, Western and the University of Toronto refused to back it because they felt it would do more harm than good to the image of their campaign.

Shortly before the budget was announced March 28 about 1000 students crowded into the Legislature to protest against the higher charges they suspected were in the speech.

Since then the OFS has demanded that the government defer the tuition fee increases and return the grant portion of student aid awards to the former lever. The OFS is also demanding that part-time students have access to student aid. It wants the age at which a student is considered independent of parental income lowered from 24.

Mr. McNie has said he is sympathetic to the last two demands but the Government has shown no indication of going back on its increased fees not of raising the grants.

The OFS has called a conference for Saturday to decide whether it should call a winter fee strike to press its demands on the Government.

David Moulton, president of the student council at Glendon College and an organizer of the demonstration, said a fee strike would only work if students were unified in the action. Eric Miglin, president of the University of Toronto student council, said he was against such action ". .because the governments position is pretty intransigent."

Committee on Sub-centres

Continued from Page 1

immediate access to the outside for easy loading and unloading of beer.

He suggested that the committee might consider providing access to a patio for pub operation during the summer.

The major theme of the Committee in considering Rickaby's proposals was flexibility. They wanted as many doors left open for easy conversion if the future demands warranted it. They also suggested the possibility of overlapping food services with pub operations during off hours, so that both functions could make use of the seating capacity, especially of the big room. D. A. Soberman in particular, called for a more economical use of space.

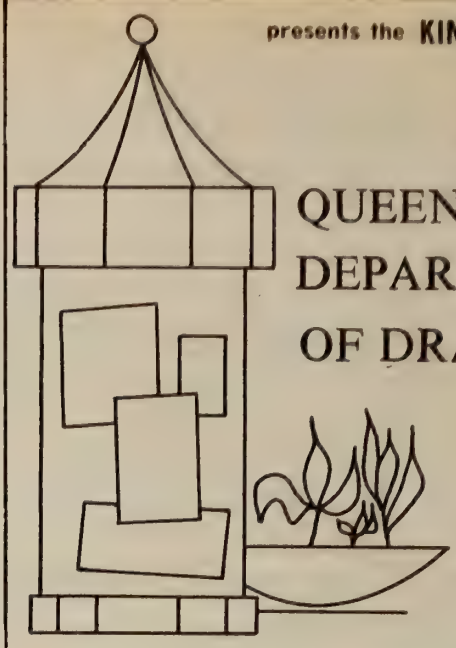
He also threw adamant support behind the "Quiet pub" idea and asked the Committee to give it high priority as a place that would be "attractive and accessible." "I am also hoping that they may serve beer with lunch"' he said.

The Committee gave approval to all four rooms.

Major disagreement erupted over the provision for semi-formals and formals in the new pub. According to Sue Dowler, pub accommodations would be too small for semi-formals, particularly Snowball.

Soberman stressed that the pub, a regular event, should not be closed for certain individual events and called for few resources, if any to be devoted specifically to such a proposal.

The User's Committee also agreed to expand the space alloted to the AMS providing for the addition to their staff of a full time accountant and the possibility of another future full time employee.



Previously they were alloted space for the five Commissioners, a business administrator, the President and Vice President and a general reception area totalling to 1250 square feet.

A report on lounges in the University Centre was presented by the Consultant to the Committee for evaluation, but it was agreed to defer discussion of it to a future date.

McArthur vs AMS

Continued from Page 1

McArthur students were absent for three of the four weeks it ran; Three AMS concerts were held when the education students were out of town, as were nominations for rector. The brief complained that because students at McArthur have their own facilities such portions of the fees concerning athletics are irrelevant. Further, the fact that McArthur students were only at Queen's for one year greatly reduced interest in such goods as the Journal and Tricolor. On the basis of the document and the mood of the MMS executive, the groundwork seemed laid for some flare-ups between the two groups. Such a flare-up however, never materialized. The AMS conceeded that McArthur seemed to have some legitimate complaints and McArthur in turn replied with equally magnanimous phrases. After about one hour the two groups decided to appoint three members representing their individual points of view to form a six man committee to study the entire fee structure as it applies to McArthur students. Negotiations are due to begin following exams and, judging from the mood presented at Monday night's meeting, McArthur students will not be paying quite as much in Student Interest fees next year.

presents the KINGSTON THEATRE COMPANY'S

Green Julia

QUEEN'S DEPARTMENT OF DRAMA

a comedy by Paul Ableman

November 24 & 25

Convocation Hall 8:30 p.m.

Tickets $2.00 (Students $1.00)

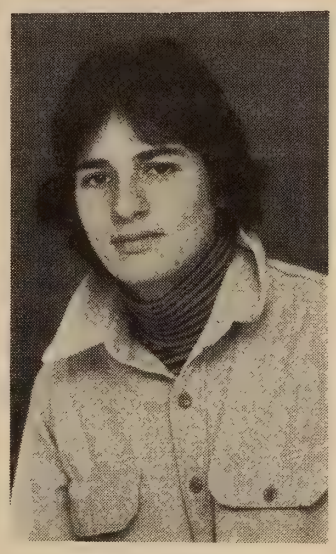
Available at door or 547-6291

Down with Golden

Molson Golden
A good smooth ale
Do you know what you're missing?

Rumblings from the new rector

"I haven't been so excited since George McGovern won the nomination," Gary Gannage, the new student rector told the Journal on Wednesday.



He won the election with 639 votes over Victoria Kemsley, 437 votes; Eric Salsbury, 181; Peter Crickmore, 154; and Brian Copeland, 103.

Gannage then proceeded to outline his plans and comment upon the role of the rector.

He said his first function in office would be "to talk to a few people about the AMS and see if it needs restructuring." When asked if he thought this was necessary, he replied with a resounding "I do". He added, "I think there is a concensus that we have to do something about it."

During the campaign, there has been some talk against the policization of the role of rector.

In reference to the AMS, Gannage acknowledged that "I can't get too close to them but I think I'm in a position to get things moving."

Gary Gannage

Gannage also mentioned that he hoped to "get out to West Campus to see what the problem is."

McArthur's campaign against the increase in the student activity fee "showed that they are perturbed." "We must make some concessions to them", he added.

Again he emphasized, "it's in my position to get something going on this."

Gannage commented that he had "a lot to learn" and his first year in office would consist mainly in "getting used to the position."

He concluded his remarks with the comment that "I still want to be known as Gary Gannage, not as rector."

Accompanying the election of rector, a referendum was held on whether or not to increase the AMS fee from $6.50 to $8.00. Although insufficient support was mustered to pass this, 799 were opposed and 692 supported it. AMS president Greg Leblanc, told the Journal that he was confident it would pass the next time a referendum is held on the subject. It is likely that this issue will appear again on the AMS election ballots in the spring.

AMS forms policy on student entrepreneurs

The following is the draft of the AMS Policy on Student Entrepreneurs.

Our university community life, we feel, depends to a very great extent upon the maintenance of a spirit of cooperation between all its members and elements. Ideally all members of, and groups within the community, will constitute to its life not on the basis of a desire to accumulate profit but rather on the basis leading to the richness and diversity of the university's cultural, social and academic dimensions. To this, and the ability of all campus organizations and societies to make such contributions should not be jeopardized, nor their activities detracted from, by the undertakings of individual students or groups of students designed so as to return profits to their organizers(s).

We see two particular circumstances arising where students might be tempted to organize or undertake certain schemes of a profit making nature.

a. The student who might wish to organize a function or series of functions of a cultural, social or entertainment nature. (i.e. concerts, dancers, film festivals etc.).

b. The student who seeks to capitalize upon his membership in the community and the access to a large population that this affords, by initiating commercial type-business ventures. (i.e. care packages etc.)

It is felt that by allowing students or groups of students to undertake activities as discussed in (a) above would:

i. jeopardize and detract from the activities and programmes of existing campus organizations and ultimately impair, through diminished financial sources the ability to conduct further activities in its field.

ii. burgeon and already somewhat chaotic calendar of events.

We feel that there are a sufficiently large number of organizations and clubs with a sufficiently great range of activities to satisfy most individuals interests and tastes. These organizations deserve all the support we can give them. We are sure they would welcome the ideas and emergies of any individuals with common or related interests. Consequently we recommend that any individual or group of individuals willing or wishing to initiate or undertake a particular programme or venture as in (a) & (b) above should be steered to an appropriate campus club or organization. It is recognized that on occasion students may have attempted with little or no success to organize a particular event or series of events through an existing organization. In such circumstances (and assuming a perceived need for such an activity or event - determined perhaps by AMS Inner Council) the full resources and facilities of the AMS should be lent to such persons and their programmes, if all other avenues of support have been investigated including faculty and year societies, DSC's etc.

For these reasons, we recommend that without exception, the AMS refuse to lend its support to individual students who wish to undertake campus events likely to return them a profit.

Dare foods will prosecute Glendon reporter

CUP — Dare Foods Ltd. has threatened to prosecute a reporter from the Glendon college student newspaper for an article he wrote about the boycott against Dare products.

Bob Edwards, a fourth year political science student, has been given until November 15 to retract his October 18 story in Pro Tem on the five-month Dare strike.

Edwards says he has been advised he is not violating a court injunction as Dare alleges. He is not contemplating any retraction.

Dare's lawyer John Lang, in a letter to Edwards says, "In my opinion it is unlawful and a breach of the June 12 injunction to do anything or say anything to any person in an effort to stop persons or corporations from handling products sold by Dare Foods Ltd.

Edwards said he considers it a compliment Dare thinks his article had so much influence. Edwards charged Dare is trying to "throw its weight around" and is attempting to break the union by intimidation. "Dare's actions are a more blatant version of what every capitalist would like to do. I think every employer has a latent desire to destroy their union. Dare just thinks it can get away with it," he said.

Dare's executive vice-president William Thom charged several student newspapers have been printing false and misleading information about the Dare strike but refused to "particularize" or be specific.

Local 173 struck the Dare plant in Kitchener last spring seeking better rates and working conditions. The company responded by hiring strike-breakers to keep operating. The boycott of Dare products is being supported by the Ontario Federation of Labour.

31 openings

We have at least thirty-one openings in two categories. Both involve the planning and selling of life insurance programs, not just policies.
We are interested in interviewing any graduate from any discipline, but only if you're at least open-minded enough to explore a sales career. (If you're not, see page 48 of the new Employment Opportunities Handbook. Available free at your placement office.)

London Life

We will be on campus at Queen's Dec. 5 & 6

classified

TO THE BOYS OF the C.A. -- Meow -- From Lucie Lastic and Barb Wire.

INTERESTED IN GOING BACK to your High School . . . and telling the students about University? If so, attend a meeting at Stirling D on Thursday, November 30, 7:30 pm. For further information, contact Terry Macli at 544-7192.

Create research fund guardian

Dr. John J. Deutsch has announced the formation of the Office of Research Administration, to assist faculty members engaged in research. The Principal has asked Dr. J.E. Hogarth, Acting Dean of the School of Graduate Studies and Research, to assume the additional responsibility of becoming the first Director of the new Office.

Dr. J. E. Hogarth

Dr. Deutsch pointed out the need for better information about research funding and about related procedures and policies of both the University and the funding agencies. The Office of Research Administration will fill this need by assisting faculty members in their financial and contractual dealings with outside agencies. Responsibility for clearing such agreements and contracts now rests with this office.

The Office of Research Administration, while responsible to the Principal, will function within the School of Graduate Studies and Research using the existing facilities of the School. Dr. Hogarth will continue as Associate Dean (Research) as defined by the constitution of the Graduate School, in parallel with his duties as Director of the Office of Research Administration.

Dr. Hogarth has also recently been elected first president of a new national association--the Canadian Association of University Research Administrators (CAURA).

Its founding members are 56 research administrators from 30 Canadian universities. There are also 21 associate members representing government research funding agencies and private foundations. The new association became officially affiliated with the Association of Canadian Universities and Colleges at the AUCC's annual meeting in Toronto early this month.

CAURA cites its purpose as (a) to encourage and facilitate the development of more effective policies and procedures relating to the administration of research programs and to promote the achievement of the goals of university research policy, (b) to provide a forum, through national and regional meetings, for the discussion and exchange of information and experiences related to university research programs, policies and procedures, (c) to provide a publication for the dissemination of current information and the exchange of views on mutual problems.

Cubans invite Christian movement

The Student Christian Movement of Canada in conjunction with the North American Office of the World Student Christian Federation, has managed to plan a visit to Cuba during the month of August 1973. The project involves work and study with members of the Cuban Student Christian Movement for ten Canadians and fifteen Americans.

The Cubans would like to host Christian students who would view the revolutionary situation of Cuba with "honesty"; "honesty" being taken to mean an openness to the new directions of Cuban society since the revolution. Applicants should be neither committed to the structural ideology of continental North America nor completely uncritical of the revolutionary situation in Cuba. 'Christian' may be loosely defined as being in some way committed to Jesus Christ and his Gospel.

It is important that applicants be ready to comply with some guidelines for preparation which should include an effort to learn Spanish at least to the point of being able to understand speech if not to the point of actually being able to speak the language. Orientation of at least one week, with a programme of intensive study of Spanish language and an introduction to the Cuban milieu will be the main activities.

The funds for the project will come from the group itself unless some unforeseen source becomes available.

Part of the selection will be the availability of applicants for feedback into the Canadian student and church scene. The need to develop a greater understanding in Canada of the revolutionary situation of Cuba and of the "Third World" in general is very great and is upper-most in the minds of the Cubans.

Initial selections will be made by local committees on campus. Final selections will be made by the national committee of the Student Christian Movement of Canada. The deadline for reception of applications is December 15, 1972. All selections will be made by the end of January 1973.

For an application form and information contact Paul Michaud at 549-2387.

Sociology loses on job orientation

Enrolment in Sociolgy courses has dropped this year.

When questioned on this matter, Dr. J. Lele, head of the department of Sociology admitted that "the enrolment has dropped" but added, "such drops have been experienced in many departments on campus."

He felt that students were now tending towards more job-oriented courses such as the Life Sciences and Commerce. However, in an effort to find out why many Sociology students last year failed to continue in the department, the Sociology department has sent out a questionnaire to these students.

Dr. Lele commented that upon receipt of the information in a few weeks, he will know more.

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 22
Fri., Nov. 24, 1972
Queen's University at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Patricia Devitt
Martin Jones
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
Backpage: Bob Mutrie
Photos: Pete Boag

And thanks to those who helped set a modern record -- 10 pm. Sue and Helen and Bob and Liz and well. Hey staff, come and visit, or even work.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society or the University. Offices are located in the Students' Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

FORD MERCURY

MARIO CREVIER

Bus. 374-2133
Res. 544-0266

Representing
Revell Motor Sales Ltd.
Verona, Ontario

HAVE AN ESSAY TO WRITE?
CAN'T FIND THE INFORMATION?
we can help
Stop at the information desk
DOUGLAS LIBRARY

AGNES at the art centre

PROGRESS IN CONSERVATION
arranged by the National Gallery of Canada and continuing until December 10

SELECTIONS FROM THE PERMANENT COLLECTION
paintings, prints and sculpture

FILM: GERTRUDE STEIN: When This You See Remember Me 89 minutes colour

A special showing for university students in ELLIS HALL at 4.30 p.m. on Monday, December 4. Admission is free, Courtesy of AGNES.

The film will be shown again in DUNNING HALL at 8.30 p.m. for Gallery Association members and their guests.

the
great housing
lottery!!!

ITS COMING....
COMING....
COMING....

In January the A.M.S.
Housing Service will be compiling a waiting list for vacant houses in the spring.

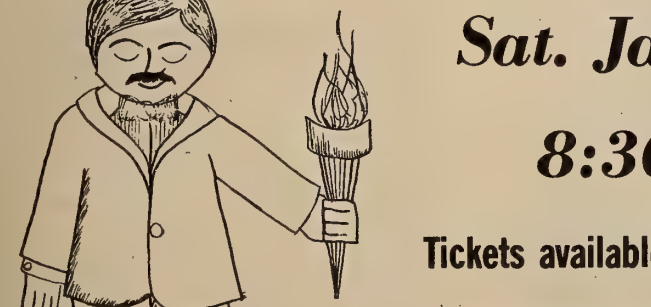
COME AND TRY YOUR LUCK!

african club

OPEN PARTY

Friday, Nov. 24th, 9 p.m.
Lower Lounge, International Centre
Beer 3/$1.00 Adm. 50¢

all welcome



Skiing at its peak
Prices at their bottom

30 superbly groomed trails.
10 lifts accommodating 7,500 skiers per hour, including
the only gondola lift in Eastern Canada

- 2050' vertical drop (It's a real kick)
- Beginner's slopes (Look at me!)
- 5 day ski week: use of lifts $25., lifts & lessons $35.
- Season from November to May

mont ste-anne P.O. Box 40, Beaupré, Province of Québec
(418) 692-0835

Toronto ski reports phone number (416) 483-4510

when you're sick of studying, come to

PUB NIGHT

Grant Hall, Sat., Nov. 25 (8-12 p.m.)

Admission is free
Music is free
Beer is free

A.M.S. constables are on us
Sponsored by the Commerce and Aesculapian Societies

WANDERLUST III

I.R.C. / W.R.C.

SEMI-FORMAL

Sat. Jan. 13th

8:30 p.m.

Tickets available in John Orr Room and in meal lines, Nov. 27th

WINTER OLYMPIAD on LEONARD FIELD

letters

Tipsy tables

Dear Editor,

I would like to express my disgust with the acquisition of picnic tables in the pub. Not only do they ruin the atmosphere as others have mentioned in previous letters but they were obviously so cheap that after only three months of use they tip forward and backward with the slightest movement. If it were absolutely necessary to buy these, which I cannot believe then the managers of the pub whould have at least had the foresight to buy a longer lasting product. Down with wibbly-wobbly tables!

Sincerely
feeling wobbled

Kraft boycott

Dear Editor,

A few weeks ago the Journal printed an article concerning the Kraft boycott. In recent weeks there has been much effort on the part of the N.F.U. to get students involved in the boycott. I was disturbed about the boycott. I have been a Kraft employee at their Montreal plant for the past two summers and at that time I was very impressed by the interest Kraft took in the well-being of their employees as well as in making excellent products. So I believed it only fair that Kraft have a chance to reply to the article and the criticism. I mailed the article to them and they sent me the following reply last Monday.

I hope that before students join the boycott that they seriously listen to both sides of the argument as I realize it is fashionable nowadays to jump on a protest bandwagon.

Sincerely yours,
David Charles

Kraft replies

Dear Mr. Charles,

Thank you for your recent note requesting some information in connection with the National Farmers Union boycott of our products.

We think that it is only fair that Kraft Foods Limited be allowed to conduct its business in a legal manner. Certainly, it is not our intention at any time to do anything which would be contrary to any of the laws of the Government of Canada, or any of the provinces.

In the Province of Ontario, we or anyone else, are specifically forbidden by law from negotiating for the purchase of milk or cheese directly from any producer of same. The law insists that we purchase these ingredients directly, and only through the services of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board.

This board, set up as a result of the Milk Act which was passed through the Ontario Legislature in 1965, has the exclusive authority to establish market prices for milk. Twelve of the members of this board are producers and are elected by their fellows. The other gentleman is appointed by the government.

Any negotiations which Kraft Foods Limited might carry out with the National Farmers Union, or any other individual or group in the Province of Ontario, concerning either milk prices or other conditions of sale, would most definitely be illegal.

According to government statements, it was the dairy producers themselves who requested the formation of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board.

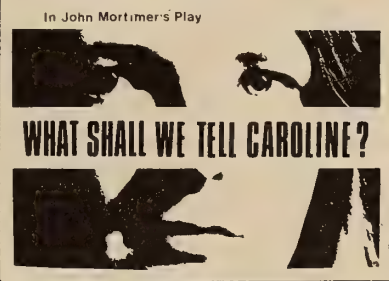
We purchase a large quantity of our material from a dairy co-operative in the Province of Quebec, where different laws exist. This does constitute a more direct relationship between user and supplier, and we think indicates our willingness to conduct our business in a moral manner and in accordance with local law.

Thank you for your request; and we do hope that this information might prompt your friendly understanding of the situation.

Yours very truly,
Kraft Foods Limited
R.F. Lowery,
Manager of Marketing Services.

Upset with algae

Dear Editor,



We are writing regarding the appalling conditions of the men's shower and drying room at the athletic centre. Certainly you must agree that standing knee deep in grunge and brushing against the algae coated walls is definitely detrimental to one's health. The clean practices layed down for the pool area do not seem to coincide to the darkness of the ajoining water closet. Possibly the vampire visit to the women's shower rooms are mere protests to the disgusting environment across the hall. Please take note, Queen's men with athletes feet and hands etc. Would be rather frightening.

tired of filthy showers 288

WAIT

Please stay tuned for the continuing saga of the University Centre, appearing on Tuesday.

McArthur Theatre Arts Presents
LORNA WILSON DAVID KEMP
MARY JO DICK JOHN BURGESS
In John Mortimer's Play

WHAT SHALL WE TELL CAROLINE?

directed by LARRY O'FARRELL
NOV 29&30 @ 8:30 pm
McArthur Theatre Union St & Sir John A
Admission $1.00 Phone 547-6666

St James Anglican Church

Rector - Rev. Gordon Hendra, BA, BD
Assistant Curate and Anglican Chaplain to Queen's University
Rev. Eric Howes, BA, M.Div.
Organist and Choirmaster - Mr. E. J. Brown, GRSM, A RCM

9:00 a.m. - HOLY COMMUNION
11:00 a.m. - MORNING PRAYER & HOLY BAPTISM
Preacher: The Rector
7:30 p.m. - EVENING PRAYER
Preacher: The Rev. Eric Howes

The Centre:

Is drug counselling by inm

by Johnny Vollmann

Recently it came to my attention that inmates from one of the federal penitentiaries in the Kingston area have been working two days a week at the Drug Centre on Wellington Street. One of the first reactions to this news was what's the angle? Why are inmates trusted to work in such a sensitive area of community activity? Are they qualified for these duties or is it just a sham to get people in penitentiaries a day out? I decided it might be interesting to check out some of these thoughts and ended up with quite a bit of information in the process. It did not, however, clear up the matter of whether the program could, would, or should be considered valid.

The penitentiary presently supplying the inmates for the Centre is Collin's Bay Institution, a medium security, gray-walled bastion located on the Bath Road in western Kingston (otherwise known as 'Disneyland' because of its cartoon-like resemblance). Upon entering the institution for an interview I found the cartoon-like atmosphere was hardly in evidence. Passing through a series of clanging, electrified gates, I managed to enter the 'inner-sanctum' for a talk with Steve Reid, Chairman of the Circle Group which sponsors the inmate manpower for the Centre's use. Steve was a very calm and cordial host and he related the history of the project with enthusiasm. During the discussion it was pointed out that four men have been helping out at the Drug Centre, rotating on a basis of one every Tuesday and Thursday and attending special speaking engagements at local schools and universities. All the inmate team members have been with the Circle Group for a number of months and have had to become involved in various aspects of the internal program including therapy sessions both as patients and as counsellors. In the latter capacity they must actually work as paraprofessionals and are given training commensurate to their skills and abilities under the supervision of the prison psychologist.

When it is felt a candidate has been successfully prepared - and this is adjudged by the group itself - the Inmate Training Board of the institution is presented with the individual's case for a review and security clearance. If this review proves positive he becomes a member of the team which works in community involvement programs. However he must continue being a member of the group in a supportive role.

The security clearance issued by the Inmate Training Board for this particular program allows the men to leave the institution without a custodial escort. The men are issued with temporary absence passes that have prescribed hours for leaving and returning to the institution as well as certain other conditions - one specifically being that of total abstinence from all drugs and alcoholic beverages. I asked Steve if any infractions were noted since the program began four months ago and he very emphatically maintained that the group had a perfect record with no negative incidents. On this note I was introduced to Ed Isokait, Bill Blackwell, Don Harvey and Al Quattrocchi, who are all members of the team presently working on community involvement projects for the group.

In the course of conversation with the team it was related how they are optimistic about their work at the Centre. The feeling that they can turn some youngsters away from the drug scene and possible 'brushes' with the law appear to be high on the list of ambitions. Work at the Centre includes answering the telephone, general office duties and counselling or just plain 'rapping' with people who come in.

Billy Blackwell pointed out that time really flew while working at the Centre. He said, "You seem to have just arrived when it's time to get back to the institution." In reply to how he found the reception to inmates working at the Drug Centre he claimed "We are accepted as people and I've never felt any resentment or bad vibes. In fact, "he added, I spoke to a class at MacArthur College and was pleased at their interest in what I had been through and what I had to say rather than what I was or where I had just come from."

In reply to a question of how much free time the men have in the city there was a unanimous reply of "none." Although no one supervised them from the institution and they were free to come and go as they pleased while downtown Don Harvey claimed personal responsibility and group pressures were the main factors for honoring the conditions of the pass. "We have to accept responsibility for our own actions, both to ourselves and the group. Besides it is usually relatively busy and we hardly take enough time for lunch," he asserted. In conjunction with this statement I learned that the hours of the temporary absences are from 9 A.M. until 4 P.M. which does appear to be a short period of time for all intents and purposes.

Ed Isokait, who only recently joined the team, explained that it takes a few days to really learn the Centre's procedure. Ed maintained that "On my first day at the Centre I became involved in at least four rap sessions that lasted onwards of a half hour each - leaving me with hardly any time to really see how the office itself functioned."

Turning again to the Circle Group Chairman, I found the unit has been operating within the institution for slightly more than a year. The group is composed entirely of ex-drug addicts who have been through the so-called 'school of hard knocks'. Fifteen men comprise the main body of the Circle, while there are three sub-groups of five to six people. Contemporary therapeutic methods of interaction are used at weekly sessions including video recording and playback techniques. The group is building their own personal library and also maintain a list of books relating to drug information which are currently available in the institution's prison library.

My attention was drawn to the fact that one team member, Al Quattrocchi, spent a day with people at the Prison for Women where he assisted them in setting up a similar type group. A check into the size of this unit and their activity revealed the women now have seven members and are beginning to move in the direction of a stable self-help association after only four and a half months of operation. They are not at this writing involved in community programs as are the men.

The Circle has some rather ambitious projects under wraps at the moment - one is a play which they hope to stage in area schools and universities. They intend to venture into seminars which will include members of the public as panelists on a regular basis. One such event was held recently in their gymnasium and the platform of panelists included Gerald LeDain and Ian Campbell, both members of the popular 'LeDain Commission'. The seminar was open to any member of the inmate population as well as invited guests of the group and it covered such topic areas as the law and non-medical use of drugs along with therapeutic communities for assisting drug addicts to become rehabilitated.

Upon leaving Collin's Bay Institution I could not come to grips with the rationalization that this program was genuine. It really looked too good to be true. The people interviewed didn't really care how I felt about their going into the community to work. They tended to give the impression of being self-conscious of their efforts being accepted as positive - this impression was so strong in fact I fear they would have challenged any person who would question the validity of their social responsibility. It didn't remove the feelings however that it is people like this who often don't uphold the conditions of a temporary absence, either by not returning or taking up the time of provincial courts for some other offence. This conflict has been brought up by various media and still no one has resolved whether the public should have to take the risk of having these men in the community.

The Centre, located at 122 Wellington Street, was my next stop. I met with Gord Conn, newly appointed (5 weeks ago) coordinator of the facility, and was given a quick tour of the premises. The

-vollmann

Newly appointed co-ordinator of the Drug Centre is Gord Conn here with part-time staff member Barb Villeneuve.

ates the answer?

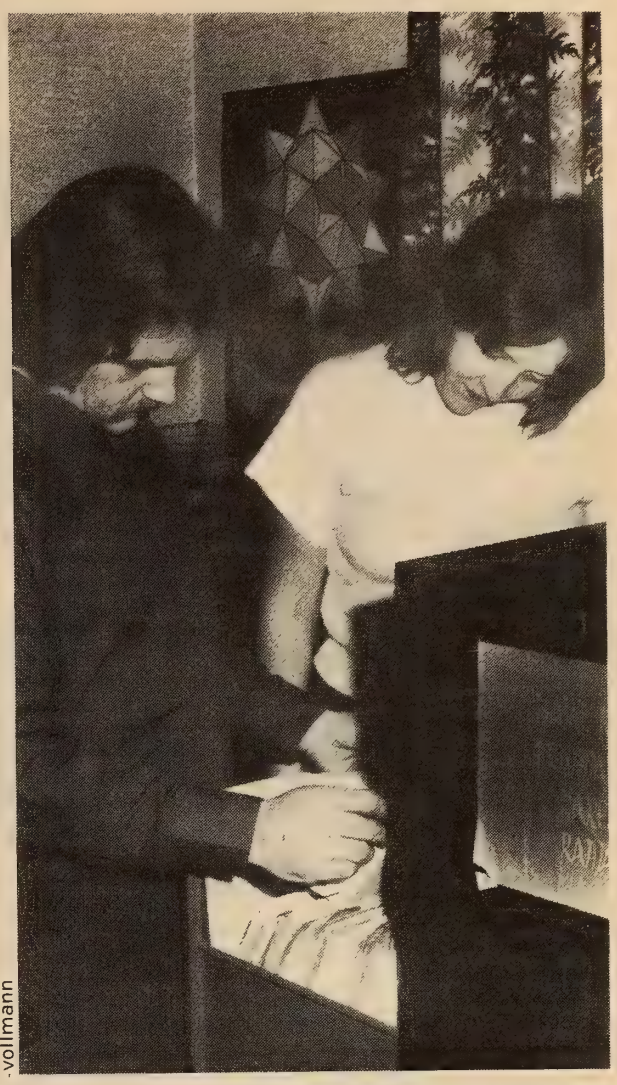
establishment is comprised of a reception room, office, and kitchenette. The reception area is typically appointed with upholstered furniture and has a well stocked bookcase where displays of drug oriented literature are available. On top of a fireplace mantle a large bulletin board has been installed and it carries a number of notices, news clips, and cartoons related to the drug scene. The office is very meager and not uncommon in characteristics of similar low budget enterprises. Two telephones (one is the emergency line) and a log book are on the desk with the traditional file cabinet and typewriter occupying other spaces of the room. The kitchenette is always in action with the ever-present availability of coffee for all who drop in.

Gord explained that the Centre was opened in March of this year under a grant from the Local Initiatives Program. It deals basically with Kingston's drug problems, operating in areas of crisis intervention, education and information, referrals, and followups. The establishment was originally organized by a group of people representing various areas of the community who were concerned about drug abuse in the city. One member of the Circle Group, who was also working in Kingston on Day Parole, was on the Board of Directors.

I queried the role of the Circle Group at this time in connection with the Centre and the Coordinator maintained the men are "an invaluable asset as workers and resource people". Claiming the interaction between the two units was a two-way street he emphasized the importance of sharing experiences and how everyone appears to earn through this association. Specifically, I asked Gord what the major problem is when the men come out? His reply lauded the selection of the team, their capabilities, and the manner in which they conducted themselves. "These guys really want to help - they are genuine and honest in rap sessions - well versed in the drug scene and quite often say things we can't, or in ways only someone with their experience and knowledge can." Still pressing for a problem area I asked Gord if anything unusual has ever happened while they've been at the Centre. "No", he said, "our biggest problem is not having them long enough and on a more regular basis." Then I asked why the inmates are not there long enough - do they go someplace else on their temporary absences? "No", the Coordinator maintained, "the men spend all their time here at the office. One of the Centre Staff takes them to lunch, but what I mean by not a long period of time is the hours the institution has assigned to the program." Centre Staff feel their operations would be enhanced by the availability of a man each day with hours like other professionals on an eight to five schedule. The availability of several staff makes followup very good and closely knit, especially when field work can be done without worrying about an empty office.

There are five salaried employees at the Centre including the coordinator. Three work on a full time basis - Nancy Hamilton and Shaun Skene along with Gord Conn - while two are part time staff - Barb Villeneuve and Kathy Ash.

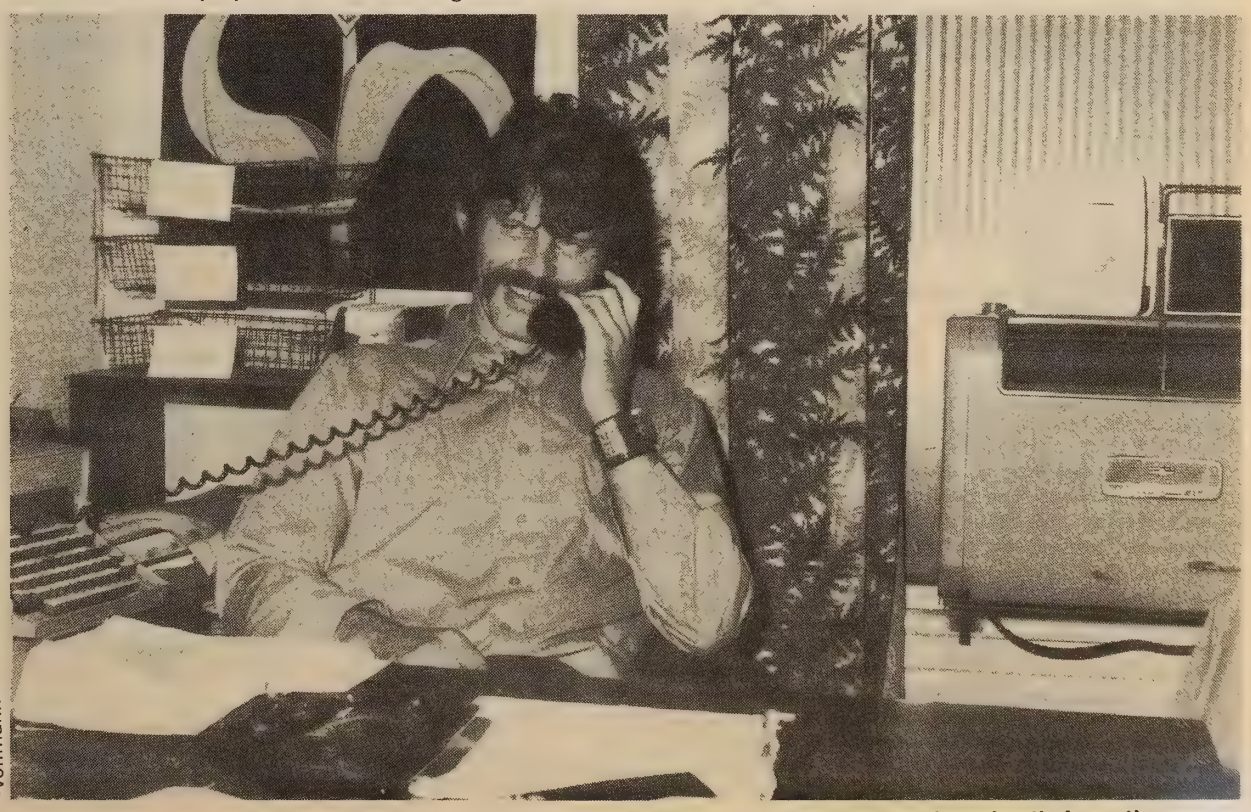
The Centre's business is largely handled by telephone although the staff estimates 35 per cent of activity is produced by people dropping in. About 25 per cent of their case loads are referred to other agencies such as hospitals, doctors, or other resource agencies, but in all referrals they do their own followup as well. One of the surprising facts revealed is that 10 per cent of their cases are under the age of 15, but 70 per cent are between 15 and 20 years of age; the balance is broke up with 15 per cent from 21 to 29 and 5 per cent over 30.



The telephone log reveals an average of 1200 calls per month with a breakdown 5 per cent involving drug crisis and another 5 per cent dealing with legal problems. Twenty per cent of the calls concern information about drugs and 25 per cent apply to followups. The balance is attributed to business and referrals.

Ms. Hamilton pointed out the value the Centre has in assisting the men from the institution. "One of the inmates coming to work here was using 'junk' for seven years and developed a serious problem of placing trust in people", she related. "We have a chance to use his experience and at the same time show him he can trust people - he makes effective use of his time and has begun to rap quite a bit as a result." In addition the Staff felt resocialization was important and maintained that it could not be done inside an institution.

Shaun Skene brought it to our attention that there are eighteen volunteer workers who man the telephone after normal hours. I posed the question of how the law enforcement agencies relate to the Centre and it was explained that sometimes referrals are made to them by local authorities. However, it was clear that no connection between law enforcement agencies and the conduct of business was involved. The files and information in this respect were strictly confidential.



The positive aspects revealed by the Centre Staff in relation to the inmates working there were difficult to counter. I talked about the responsibility of error in counselling, in misinformation, in any type of problem area and kept coming up with solid replies. I asked about the training of the volunteers - how they compare to inmates - wouldn't more volunteers suffice? The same story kept coming up. The inmates have a unique experience - they share the experience - they are well versed and well trained, even more so than the volunteers. Gord Conn wrapped it up by saying, "Community service organizations such as ours need people with this type of learning experience - look at the age group of people we deal with."

I looked at the age group - it is devastating. Is counselling by inmates the answer? Can we place our trust in people who have made a genuine mess of their lives - in people who have broken the law? Should we expect the youth of this city to be positively influenced by men in prison? These are questions for all of us; they are ours to answer. I admit I've been impressed by what was learned about the Circle Group and the Centre. But it is not for me to make decisions that fall on the shoulders of a community which has had its fill of bad experiences with inmates. What's the answer?

-vollmann

Circle group member Bill Blackwell and staff member Nancy Hamilton try to cope with people dropping into the Centre which takes up to 35 per cent of their business.

-vollmann

Ed Isokait a recent member of the Circle group is now working at the Centre learning their routine.

Grant Hall Series presents

Waverly Consort - Medieval Spanish Court Music

"The performance can only be described as perfect" wrote the New York Times following the Waverly Consort's production of Las Cantigas de Santa Maria, the Songs of the Virgin Mary. This programme of music of the medieval Spanish court will be the next concert in the popular Grant Hall Series. Sponsored by the Division of Concerts at Queen's, the performance will take place on Monday 27 November at 8:30 p.m. in Grant Hall. Tickets, at $2,3 students, $3,4 non-students, are available from the Division of Concerts Box Office, Agnes Etherington Art Centre -- 547-6194, or at the door on the night of performance.

The Waverly Consort is a company of six musicians, two singers and four instrumentalists. The recorder, medieval fiddles, organetto, Moorish guitar, handbells and percussion instruments are among the many medieval instruments that will be performed. A troubadour-narrator relates the many tales. All artists are costumed in authentic reproductions from the 13th century.

The songs and verses about the Virgin Mary were compiled by the king of Castile and Leon, Alfonso X. He said he foreswore all other women in the hope that he might "regain through her what he had lost through them."

While the concert has a religious theme, it is not all mystical adoration. Medieval Christianity mixed its religious fervor equally with a frank enjoyment of what used to be known as carnal pleasure. The many miracles of Mary described in the Cantigas found the Holy Mother using her power to punish the wicked as well as reward the faithful. Some of the stories cast a sharp, ribald eye on the sins of the clergy.

The 13th century king of Castile and Leon, Alfonso X, was known as "el Sabio". This has been variously translated as "the sage", "the wise", "the learned". The epithet was coined for his cultural interests, not for his disasterous political rule.

Kingston Theatre Company presents

Green Julia - premier production

The Kingston Theatre Company, a new professional acting troupe, will present its premiere performance at Queen's University with a production of Paul Ableman's comedy, Green Julia.

Three young Kingstonians, well-known on local stages, have organized the Kingston Theatre Company to tour throughout Ontario with such plays as Green Julia, Endgame, and Feiffer's People in their first season.

Green Julia, the opening show, is described by Ronald Bryden of The New Statesman as "a witty, intelligent duologue between two graduate-students splitting up after five years of sharing digs . . . They drink some farewell champagne in their crumb-strewn lodging, mask their feelings for each other in joke parody-games and talk about Julia, Jake's drunken mistress who is supposed to join them."

The play has a serious thread, but the surface is always bright.

Playwright Paul Ableman, who also wrote Tests, which was produced at Queen's last year, has worked extensively with Peter Brook, Charles Marowitz and the experimental group affiliated with the Royal Shakespeare Company.

Green Julia is directed by Michael Kronenwetter and features Daniel Buccos and Stephen Hair. All three have been active and enjoyed success in the Kingston theatre scene--both acting and directing.

Green Julia will be presented November 24 and 25 at 8:30 p.m. in Convocation Hall. Tickets are $2.00 and $1.00 for students and are available in the Department of Drama, basement, Old Arts. Telephone 547-6291.

Director Michael Kronenwetter

Chuck Mangione Quartet, a welcomed change

by Francis C. Mewa

Sunday night's concert by the huck Mangione Quartet was a elcomed variation on the type of oncert sponsored by the A.M.S. oncert Committee and if cues ere taken from the attendance nd intimacy between artists and udience it will not be another hree years before a jazz oriented group performs on campus. (The previous concert was by the Modern Jazz Quartet at Dunning Hall in 1969.)

Mangione, the toast of up-state New York's jazz buffs and concert goers, laid down some fine sounds in the acoustically perfect McArthur Hall Auditorium and despite a persistent electronic hum won a host of new friends and confirmed the belief that he has more staying power than his one Grammy nomination would indicate.

The quartet has been in a state of flux since brother Gaspars (Gap) branched off with his trio. For this appearance, it consisted of Chuck on flugelhorn, electric piano and tambourine; Gerry Niewood on tenor and soprano saxophones, flutes and assorted rhythms; Slim Johnson on fender bass and Les La Barbera on drums. They were a well-knit group even though Johnson seemed more anxious to tear off in the direction of Isaac Hayes than most of the composition allowed. The concert opened with the hauntingly beautiful "Little Sunflower" (Freddie Hubbard). The theme was stated twice in unison, followed by pretty solos on flugelhorn, piano and soprano sax, restated then taken out after some free-form work. "Like I see" (Chuck Mangione) was done with Mangione milking organ and vibraphone effects from the electric piano in a nine minute spell of solo work. La Barbera was very effective in producing a backdrop of Latin rhythms which varied from bossa nova to bayounge and slowcha. His use of mallets on the high hat at times added an oriental flavour to Niewood's soft guaracha scratchings. Niewood opened and closed on soprano sax.

"High heeled Sneaker" (J.C. Higginbotham) allowed Slim Johnson freedom to expose his bag of hard soul and rhythm and blues stylings. His bass plucking and use of the wa-wa pedal were reminders of where it's at with dance music in Black America. Niewood's tenor sax work was reminiscent of Ben Webster then Harold Land but mostly of Syl Austin. La Barbera's offering on drums was colourless probably an indication of what turns him off. Niewood and Mangione engaged in some beautiful call and echo blowing backed by Johnson's walking bass. The two then took it out using the closing phrases from Gillespie's "Salt Peanuts" -- a tribute to one of Mangione's early influences.

The other tunes played by the quartet were Mangione - Niewood compositions and arrangements. "Please Stay a While" done in 4-4 and other complex rhythm figures featured Niewood on flute. The soft-voiced passages spiced with vibraphone like block chords from the electric piano flowed like olive oil. It inspired thoughts of all the tasty morsels lovers enjoy then tire of in their impatience to get to the source. One wonders why the jazz waltz, with its scope for melodic improvization finds so little favour with younger musicians. "Sixty Miles Young" from the Together album was done at a faster bossa nova tempo with crisp clear statements of the theme and in the bridges.

Niewood and Mangione exchanged solos followed by restatement of the theme and a poignant Davis like solo filled with spaces for effect and fast runs up and down the scale of the lower pitched horn. Johnson and La Barbera, meanwhile were wailing and cooking up a storm. Niewood closed off the piece and the set with a lush but soulful bit of tenor sax work, climaxing with a cascade of cymbals and electronic bass effects.

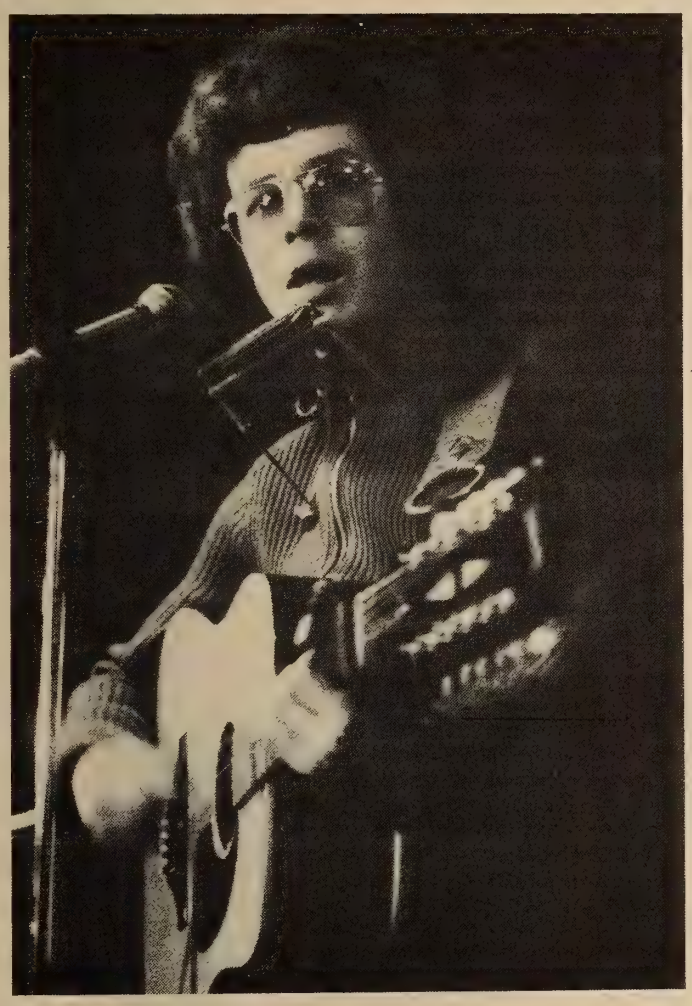
La Barbera led the quartet into "Legend of the One-Eyed Sailor" with a flurry of military drumming then switched to up-tempo polyrhythms when they had all gotten aboard. The unison blowing was flawless despite the close harmony work the score required. The flugelhorn-soprano saxaphone sound was so well blended that it was difficult to differentiate the lines being blown. "Spring Has Sprung" - a soulful modern blues featured Niewood on flute roaring, swooping and stretching out in the style of the Mississippi Gambles. Miles Davis, Clark Terry and Roy Bryant have been fascinated by it's warm organic sound but seldom have done justice to it in performance. Let's hope Chuck will keep it alive as a lead instrument in jazz and not discard it in favour of his toted-bell horn.

The concert climaxed with the popular "Hill Where The Lord Hides" from the 1970 Friends and Love concert and more recently the hit parade charts. Niewood and Mangione laid down their lines faithfully and the rock rhythms pumped life into the shortened offering. In my mind's ear I could hear the guitars and guitaron of Don Potter, Bat McGrath and Stan Watson and the brass section of the Rochester Philharmonic filling the gaps but it was all a dream. The near capacity crowd gave the quartet a standing ovation and earned an encore - 'Sunshower' from the Together album. But then it had begun to snow.

The Chuck Mangione Quartet, like many groups south of the border, suffer partial censure on Canadian networks. It is a brave impressario who elects to stage and promote these artistes here. It must have warmed the cockles of the hearts of the organizers of this concert that it was so well received by the audience who turned out at such short notice. I am not surprised that the crowd left satisifed.

Vaghy Quartet not at its best, but Gary Towlen was!

by Michael Hodgson



On Sunday, November 19, the Vaghy Quartet gave a concert of music by Shostakovich, Beethoven, and Dvorak. This was the first time I had heard them, and I came away with very mixed impressions.

The program began with the eighth quartet (1960) of Shostakovich, which was written after his triumph with the eleventh symphony which won him the Lenin Prize, highest award for a Soviet composer. In many respects, however, this work recalls his much earlier works -- the desolate blend of sound in the largo, the rather burlesque style of the allegretto, the use of the extreme registers of his instruments, the contrapuntal passages. It is quite a personal work and it was given a convincing interpretation, with particularly fine work by the first violinist and cellist in the central allegretto and largo. The Vaghy Quartet is obviously suited to this music. An all-Shostakovich program might be an interesting idea for the future.

Next came the first Rasoumovsky Quartet of Beethoven, whom Shostakovich takes as his model from his earlier revolutionary age. I have heard many good things about the Vaghy Quartet's playing of Beethoven: if they are true, this was clearly a very "off" night. There were problems everywhere of pitch and intonation, and for much of the time it was an "ensemble" of squeaks and groans. The opening Allegro was given an insipid reading that brought out none of the contrasts in the movement. If their intention was to give a pastoral leisurely account of this movement, which might be legitimate, it did not come off. Strangely enough, what came off best was the very long adagio, where things held together beautifully, and there was excellent control of the rise and fall of this endless lament. Unfortunately the finale did not sustain this level of performance.

In the second half of the program pianist Gary Towlen joined the Vaghy Quartet in the Dvorak piano quintet opus 81. This was a classy bit of playing from start to finish, and had obviously been well rehearsed. In this sprawling work, the momentum was sustained throughout, the contrasts in mood and sonority were carefully delineated, and the blend of quartet with piano was excellent. I haven't heard this piece better done even on record!

So you can see how mixed my reactions were to this concert and how unequal the playing of the Vaghy String Quartet was on that evening! I hope the lows hit at this concert are rare and the Quartet shows itself capable of repeating its highs.

Alan J. Ryan at Bitter Grounds

Alan J. Ryan is alive and well at the Bitter Grounds. Alan has played here many times and has always had a warm welcome from Queen's students.

A Columbia recording artist, Alan has a wide range of song material and is quite accomplished in playing both the quitar and the harmonica. A true professional, Alan's stage presence and well-trained voice constantly guide and change the audience's mood throughout the evening.

Come and see Alan J. Ryan at the Bitter Grounds on the second floor of the Union, Saturday or Sunday night November 25 and 26th from 8 to 12 p.m.

bye-bye-cycledays

Friday, November 24

8:00 pm - Graduate Students' Society Films presents Faces. (director, John Cassavetes). Ellis Hall.

8:30 pm - A visiting production of Green Julia by Paul Ableman performed by the Kingston Theatre Co. Tickets are $2.00 for non-students, $1.00 for students. On sale in the Drama Department. Convocation Hall, Old Arts Building.

8:30 pm - African Club get together at the International Centre (lower lounge). Admission 50c.

Saturday, November 25

Last canoe trip, Queen's Outing Club. Madawaska River. Phone Joy 546-6276 or Jim 546-4953.

8:00 - 12:00 pm - Pub Night. Grant Hall sponsored by Commerce and Meds. Admission Free.

8:30 pm - A visiting production of Green Julia by Paul Ableman performed by the Kingston Theatre Co. Tickets: students $1.00, non-students $2.00 On sale in the Drama Dept. Performance in Convocation Hall, Old Arts Building.

Sunday, November 26

10:30 am - Folk Mass. Dunning Hall. Coffee and donuts at the Newman House following. 164 University Ave.

4:00 pm - Eucharistic Celebration at Queen's Theological Hall. Faculty Lounge. (2nd Floor). All welcome.

5:30 pm - Liberation Study Group presents a Sunday Supper. Lower Lounge, International Centre. Followd by a talk on "The Canadian Liberation Movement" by Gail Lord of the Canadian Liberation Movement. Dinner $1.00 per person.

7:30 pm - Folk Mass in Senior Common Room at McArthur College.

Monday, November 27

8:30 pm - The Waverly Consort presents Las Cantigas de Santa Maria, a programme of Medieval Music and Verse from the court of Alfonso X. Grant Hall Series. Tickets: Students $2.00 and $3.00, non-students -$3.00 and $4.00. Available at Division of Concerts Box Office. Agnes Etherington Art Centre.

7:30 pm - ZPG Meeting. Discussion of "Limits to Growth" and future activities. Rm. 111, Earl Hall.

7:30 pm - Talk and Slide Show on Peru by two students who participated in WUSC. Lower Lounge of the International Centre. All welcome.

Tuesday, November 28

8:00 pm - Math Smoker. House of Commons. Admission 30c. Beer 3-$1.00. All welcome.

7:30 pm - Drama Department presents Chronicles 15, The Private Ear by Peter Shaffer. Tickets - free at the Dept. of Drama. Studio Theatre Rm. 102, Old Arts Bulding. Running until Dec. 1.

9:00 pm - Dept. of Film Studies, Le Cinema Quebecois presents Mon Amie Pierrette (directed by Jean-Pierre Lefebvre, 1968). Ellis Hall.

Coming:

Wednesday, Nov. 29 and Thursday, Nov. 30, 8:30 pm- What Shall We Tell Caroline - a play by John Mortimer presented by the Theatre Arts Dept. of the Faculty of Education. Admission $1.00. Phone 547-666 for information. Duncan McArthur Hall Theatre.

Off Campus-

Pubs:

Commodore - Hank and the Drifters
401 Inn - Harlequin
The Manor - Honey West
Seaway Pub - Jacqueline and Lindsey

Theatres:

Capitol - One Hundred and One Dalmations and Swiss Family Robinson
Hyland - Friday and Sat. Charlie Chaplin's Review. Sun. to Tues. - The Rowdy Man
Grand Theatre- Kismet. Musical by Rogers and Hammerstein Friday Nov. 24 - Dec. 2. Time 8:00 pm. Tickets $3.75. Upper Balcony - $2.00.

A display put on by the Canadian Herpetologists' Society (the study of amphibians and reptiles) consiting of collections of both live and preserved, native and exotic amphibians and reptiles. Woolco Shopping Mall. Sponsored by Cornwall and Toronto Chapters.

ARTS & SCIENCE
ORIENTATION '73

Gael Applications forms

available in the

A.M.S. OUTER OFFICE
MONDAY, NOV. 27th

completed applications should be returned to the

A.M.S. OUTER OFFICE
THURSDAY, DEC. 14th

all years & faculties may apply

G.S.S. FILM CLUB
presents
"FACES"
Director John Cassavetes from (Rosemary's Baby) analyses marriage
Tonight, 8 p.m.
Ellis Auditorium

One delightful fille whose open, sensitive charms are to be cast upon a worth prince of yet unreleased passion. We wish only to free his perplexed state of mental and physical frustration. Our beloved friend deserves the best -- money creates no restriction! Our concern is only outweighed by our seriousness. Contact Journal Office.

LADIES
ELECTROLYSIS
Avoid shaving, tweezing, or the use of dipilatories. Have your eyebrows styled and unwanted hair removed permanently by electrolysis. Physicians recommend our work. For a free consultation and information call:
HARRISON SALON 542-5595

classified

VACANT AMS HOUSE available for rent January 1, 1973. For details, contact AMS office.

FOR SALE: 1972 TR6 $3000. Extras such as AM-FM radio, stereo tape deck, michelin radial tires, hondo cover. Please call Suzi at 544-0974, leave message if not there.

ROOMS AVAILABLE: 3 single rooms available in Earl Street Residence as of Jan. 1, 1973. Kitchen and lounge for each sub-unit. Seconds from campus. Laundry facilities. Call Bill 544-8995 or Brian 544-7901.

ANYONE INTERESTED in a visit to the Ontario Legislature on Tuesday, Nov. 28, for a small fee, should phone 544-8576.

WOULD ANYONE KNOWING the whereabouts of Mr. Ted Pidgeon or our sack of potatoes please contact La Societe des Fermiers de Patates de St-Jean-de-Brunswick tout de suite!

LOST:Members of the Queen's Riding Club who have not yet come riding. The last rides are this Sat and Sun, Nov 24 and 25.

FOR SALE: NEW MUSKRAT coat. Short, knee-length. Price negotiable. Phone Pat at 544-1758.

LOST COLUME 1 of the Norton Anthology of English Literature in Leonard Lobby on Monday night between 5 and 5.30. Please return to Dianne at 544-7148.

LOST: The Democratic Citizen by D. F. Thompson; Brand new; hard cover; blue text; name inside. Finder will be eternally blessed and somewhat richer if he-she returns it to Doug at 544-7132.

WANTED: IDEAS FOR THE Queen's Riding Club Sleigh Night in February. Send to Queen's Riding Club, c-o AMS Outer Office, Student Union, Queen's.

WANTED: A house or Apt. to be subletted from Dec. 18 to Jan. 8. Please phone 544-8626.

LOST: ladies' gold watch with spiral band between Union and Victoria Hall. Sentimental value. Please call 544-8412.

WANTED: furnished apt. or house for 4 people--preferably close to campus--occupancy immediate or as soon as possible--rent negotiable. Call 544-3427 or 549-2433.

THREE PEOPLE LOOKING for fourth to share house for spring term. Cheap rent, large room, close to campus. Phone 549-0176. Ask for John. Option for house for next year if desired.

THE C.A. IS PLEASE to announce still another signing. Miss Suzie-Q (Joanne E.) has come to terms for future considerations. Signed Jimbo, Ralph, the Big Bopper, Duke and Huck.

ALL THE GUYS would like to join together in wishing BIMBO the best of luck in his up-coming take-home exam.

EXPRESS YOUR CONCERN Dec. 4. Sydenham Ward needs experienced representation. Help provide it by electing Nancy Foster as Alderman. You have two votes--Nancy Foster and it's your city too!

COME gain some real experience in living with people. Learn how a community functions on the levels of finance, food, fun and self-government. Learn about yourself. Call Elrond College: 544-1842.

THE QUEEN'S EXCURSION CLUB is currently attempting to charter a bus to travel to Florida (probably Fort Lauderdale) and return to Kingston or Toronto) during the Christmas holidays. We hope to keep the price down to $50. If you are seriously interested please leave your name, telephone number and suggested dates of departure and return either with the ticket sellers or in Don McVie's office before November 30.

THE QUEEN'S EXCURSION CLUB will be attempting to run buses to Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal daily or as often as is plausible between the 10th and 18th of December for students going home at Christmas. All return buses will come back on the 6th and 7th of January. Please sign up in the Outer AMS office as soon as possible.

GRUNDIG REEL-to-REEL stereo tape recorder for sale. Cost $600 new, will sell for $275. Please call 546-4753 for details or a demonstration.

PIANO INSTRUCTION -- A basis for all other instruments, call 546-6579 for information.

PIANO and FLUTE lessons -- experienced instructor. For information phone 546-6579.

DIANNE -- you spilled the wax. Yes he can use the room, and no comment.

DIVISION OF CONCERTS
GRANT HALL SERIES NO. 3

WAVERLY CONSORT

Songs of the Virgin Mary

- a courtly entertainment from 13th Century Spain
- 6 musicians
- 1 narrator
- all costumes

Monday, Nov. 27th, 8:30 p.m.

Tickets: $2 and $3 students
$3 and $4 non-students

Division of Concerts Box Office
AE Art Centre, 547-6194

1972-73 Career Seminar No. 12

Jointly sponsored by the AMS
& Career Planning and Placement

CAREERS IN COMPUTING

Mr. John Findeis,
Manager Software Engineering Section,
Canadian Police Information Centre, Ottawa

Monday, November 27th, 8:00 p.m.

Students' Memorial Union
McLaughlin Room

---

urgent meeting

re: QUEBEC WINTER CARNIVAL TRIP

March 2-4/'73

Lower Vic Common Room
7:00 p.m. Monday, Nov. 27th

Attendance at meeting necessary for accommodation reservations to be made

ALL WELCOME
Sponsored by Artsci '76

AMS HOUSE AVAILABLE

Jan. 1st, 1973

a group of 5 min. 6 max.

Apply at AMS Office

before Friday, Nov. 24th, '72 waiting list priority

---

cotton's sporthouse

TELEPHONE 544-1066
399 PRINCESS STREET, KINGSTON K7L 1B9

Peter Cotton would like to welcome you to his new sporthouse located in Elrond College, 399 Princess St. Peter is a member of the Canadian Ski Instructors Alliance and was a member of the crew that placed second in the 1971 Shark World Sailing Championships. In other words, he competes in sports, he doesn't just sell sporting goods. The staff has been chosen accordingly - even Peter's wife (coach of the Queen's Women's Ski Team)

Peter wanted the type of shop that novices could come to and receive sound advice as to their sporting goods needs, and where experts could shop and converse intelligently with staff who knew what they were talking about.

Why don't you come in and compare prices and the manner in which you are treated by the staff. We feel you will be pleasantly surprised

WE CARRY

- ☐ ski equipment (cross country & alpine)
- ☐ training shoes and suits
- ☐ hockey, squash, tennis, badminton, and related clothing

Modern Dance: "Working on an impulse"

Those who attended the OWIAA Fall Dance Workshop on Saturday at Queen's, were exposed to a varied program including dance technique, jazz, charactarization, modern rhythm and improvisation. Five instructors taught a total of nine classes throughout the day. About 100 people attended from several universities in Ontario.

The Workshop was fortunate in attracting such well-known dance personnel as Judy Jarvis and Lloyd Malenfant. Those who had known Judy when she taught at Queen's several years ago, were taken aback at the change in styles. Along with her partner, Larry McCollough, they have evolved a unique expression of dance through human reactions and sounds. For each of their classes they performed a piece, and in most cases their works are without music. They explain their creative process as "working on an impulse" as opposed to working from a set philosophy of dance. In teaching, they stress to the student searching for his own creativeness, his own impulse, to become aware of the natural rhythm of his body. This is the concept of "breath", prevalent in modern dance today.

Our own dance personage on campus, Sandy Aitken, taught a very popular class in Character Movement, in which she combines dance with the portrayal of several different characters. The students were so enthralled with the technique that they persuaded their dance instructors to have Sandy come to the next workshop at U of T. She has also been asked to bring her Queen's Modern Dance Company to perform at other universities. Such an interchange of university dance troupes could prove to be a valuable practice.

A more formal version of dance was taught by Lloyd Malenfant, a ballet, ballroom and jazz instructor from U of T. His class of modern jazz had would-be June Taylor dancers tripping over their feet in an agonizing effort to keep up with his fancy footwork.

In the spring, dance enthusiasts will get a few more chances to learn new things in the realm at dance. In January, U of T will be holding a Workshop with the theme of Traditional Dance, and they will also host a Workshop in March with the emphasis on choreography and composition. Queen's can thank the OWIAA and Anne Gardner for organizing the event, and if anyone has any suggestions or reactions to the Workshop, their comments would be welcome - you can phone Anne or leave a note in her slot in the women's locker room. Feed-back is necessary in order to organize more such events for the university, which is pretty well underexposed to the act of dance.

From the sidelines...

by Chris Boon

The basketball Gaels open their regular season tonight with an 8:15 contest against the University of Toronto, and if last weekend was any indication, it should be a great game. The Gaels have their best rookie crop in at least five years, and the two starting freshmen, John Keck at guard and Norm Hagarty at forward, could be good for 20-points-plus a game. If Paul Howard, who has been moved to forward this year, can find his outside shooting touch, the Gaels could just bomb people to death. (An aside here: Howard needs just 40 more points to reach 1000 career points for Queen's - a couple of big games this weekend could give it to him!) Howard, Hagarty, and starting centre Bruce Hemming give the Gaels solid rebounding as well as a scoring punch. And, for a change, it looks like we have some bench strength. Derek Swinnard is a smooth forward, Ian Rawes and Stu Beck have improved greatly from last year, Corky McLeery is a definite asset under the boards, Ken Sagadore will be a useful guard, freshman Don Sinclair has shown much potential, and Dave Lefebure, who can play either guard or forward, has the benefit of several years' intercollegiate experience. Finally, and this is the biggest and most important change from last year, the Gaels have some real team spirit. These guys want to win ball games, and with any kind of luck at all, they will.

Still with basketball, it looks like the Gals have found the key against last year's bugbear, Ottawa U. Queen's dumped the GeeGee's 43-35 in Ottawa last weekend, with Karen Carson's outside shooting in the second half making the difference. Like we said earlier, if they can hit outside against a zone, then the Gals should win. They'll get another chance to test how things are going tomorrow at 6:00 pm, when Laurentian comes to town. A win here would put Queen's in great shape.

The volleyball Gals will be here this weekend, too, hosting Laurentian's tall, experienced squad. If the girls play up to potential, Queen's will be at the very least competitive; if they don't ... Also, both the Basketball and Volleyball Intermediate competitions (Part 1) are here this weekend. Play starts today, and continues through Saturday evening.

Tomorrow sees the final game in a prolonged CIAU football schedule, as the University of Alberta takes on Waterloo-Lutheran in Toronto. The Bears and the Hawks proved once again that the overall level of competition in the Bluenose and QUAA conferences is rather low, compared to that in the OUAA and the WIFC. 50-17 (Lutheran over St. Mary's) and 58-6 (Alberta over Loyola) ain't exactly close scores. What will be interesting is how those big defensive ends of Alberta's react to the pressure of a well-run wishbone. There's a way to beat the wishbone (Notre Dame proved that second time 'round against Texas), but I have my doubts that any team in Canada will come up with the right answers. Of course, Alberta could just outscore Lutheran . . . so you never know.

Coming Events

Friday, Nov. 24: Women: Intermediate Volleyball and Basketball, OWIAA Part 1.
Men: OUAA Basketball-Toronto at Queen's, Bartlett Gym, 8:15 pm

Saturday, Nov. 25: Women: Intermediate Volleyball and Basketball, OWIAA Part 1; OWIAA Basketball, Laurentian at Queen's, 6:00 pm, Bartlett Gym; OWIAA Volleyball, Laurentian at Queen's, 7:00 pm, Ross Gym; OWIAA Hockey, York at Queen's, Jock Harty Arena, 3:00 pm.
Men: Exhibition Basketball - Brock at Queen's, Bartlett Gym, 8:15 pm; Badminton - Queen's Invitational

Monday, Nov. 27: Men: Exhibition Basketball - Pottsdam C.C. at Queen's - Bartlett Gym, 7:00 pm.

Words from W.I.C.

by Suzanna Trebuss

The coming week will be the final week of W.I.C. activities this term.

The Basketball final is on Tuesday, (7:15-9:15 p.m.) All teams will be playing in the finals, so no matter where your team finished, be sure to come out.

Another Ringette clinic will be held in the Arena on Wednesday, November 29 from 7:00 to 8:20 p.m.

Thursday will be the last evening of co-ed volleyball.

Bowling continues this Sunday and next at the Cloverleaf Bowling Lanes.

The standings so far are:

1.	P.H.E.	3300
2.	Arts '76	2070
3.	Arts '73	1337
4.	Com-Eng	600
5.	Nursing	503
6.	Law	334
7.	Arts '74	200
8.	Meds	168

Arts '75 Education, Rehab and Grads have no points as yet.

Just because this is the last week, let's not slack off on participation. Why not finish the term off well and come out for your team this week!

bews news

by Peter Watts

At long last, the fall outdoor sports are being blessed with some decent weather and the finals in soccer and flag football are nearly completed. Congratulations to Mechanical Engineering who won the rugby championship earlier this week with a 3-0 victory over PHE.

In soccer, Game 1 of the two game series was played on Tuesday night on the Outer Field. I that game, Engineering Grads escaped with a 2-1 victory over Commerce '74. The second game of the final was to be played on Wednesday night but results were unavailable at press time.

Bews Curling will get underway on Sunday, January 14th at 2 p.m. and will continue every Sunday thereafter until February 25th. Athletic sticks are urged to get their entries in to the supervisor, Dr. Andrew as soon as possible. The deadline for entries is Friday December 8th at 12 noon. Entry fees must be accompanied by a cheque for $12 made payable to the Men's Intra-mural Athletic Committee. Participants should be prepared to abide by the rules regarding clean footwear on the ice.

At a meeting of the Men's intra-mural Athletic Committee on Tuesday night, it was decided to make a small change in the rules governing hockey and broomball. Effective immediately, the last minute of the final period will be stop time. The final period may be slightly shortened so as to finish the game promptly at twenty minutes past the hour; in any case, however, the final minute will be stop time.

The schedules for tennis, horseshoes, and singles and doubles paddleball and squash remain posted on the notice board in the men's locker room and participants are urged to consult these. Most of the draws are now into the third round and entrants are asked to adhere to the time schedules and have their games completed by the stated deadline.

A lot of controversy has been raging over the Bews standings board posted in the locker room. By the time you see this column, the standings are a week out of date. They are changed every Friday. Also, some sport supervisors are delaying getting the point allotments into Mr. Carnegie until their sport has been completed. So, those standings are not necessarily accurate. In any event, put some pressure on the sport co-ordinators to get the information in and then the board will better reflect the way the teams are doing.

Standings in Bews as of Friday, November 17th are:

1.	Civil and Math	13,445
2.	Commerce '73	10,533
3.	Mining	10,410
4.	PHE	9,101
5.	Chemical	8,330
6.	Mechanical	8,161
7.	Commerce '75	6,552
8.	Medicine	6,491
9.	Law '74	6,229
10.	Commerce '76	5,770

Basketball Doubleheader
Saturday November 25th
6:00 p.m. Queen's Golden Gals vs. Laurentian
8:15 p.m. Golden Gaels vs. Toronto
In the Bartlett Gym

Canada: Study proposed for electricity from H-power

OTTAWA — Canada may be embarking on a major feasibility study to determine whether resources should be devoted to the taming of thermonuclear fusion, which also powers the H-bomb, for producing electricity.

Ottawa has received and evaluated a proposal from a consortium of five Quebec research establishments to do a one-year $235,000 study on the possibility of extensive research facilities being made available in this country. Canada is one of the few country's not to have undertaken such a program.

Thermonuclear fusion is beyond present fission nuclear power and even the projected "fast breeder" reactors.

THOMPSON, MAN. — Yet another recount has been requested, this time in Churchill, Manitoba. A judicial recount has been requested by third place Liberal runner Bruce Dunlop. Official standings in that riding are presently Conservative Keith Taylor 9493 votes, NDP Donald Duff 9017 votes, and Liberal Bruce Dunlop 8435 votes.

TORONTO — The Supreme Court of Ontario ordered striking Toronto postal truck drivers back to work after their four-day walkout over the extension of their contract conciliation deadline. The court injunction was all inclusive, naming the eight top union officials of the Council of Postal Unions and covered all post office employees. All 281 drivers have now returned to work.

OTTAWA — Talks on the proposed revision of the Canada - U.S. Auto Pact have been postponed indefinitely due to the uncertain political situation in this country. The Pact talks had been adjourned in deadlock since February.

The October 30 federal election left the strength of the Canadian bargaining position in some doubt. However, the Canadian and American government officials are planning to get together at the end of the month to discuss the world trading situation in anticipation of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) talks to be held next year.

KINGSTON — The 432 prisoners of Joyceville institution who refused to return to their cells last week, have been forced to give up their protest by prison officials. The order was handed down by prison director Charles W. Chitty who claimed that prisoners wandering around the institution were a threat to security. He claimed that they had been tampering with security facilities.

The inmates were protesting the rescinding of the prison's previous policy of allowing inter-cell visiting during off-hours. They claimed that the cancellation of the open cell-door policy was contrary to modern penal concepts and that it will retard the inmates opportunity for rehabilitation.

BRANDON, MAN. — Manitoba Conservative Leader Sidney Spivak weathered a vote of confidence from the party this week but the vote opened a significant party rift. The Manitoba Conservatives have been debating as to whether the party constitution should be followed in holding a leadership convention every two years.

Spivak claimed that the leadership should not be put on the line until he has had an opportunity to prove himself in an election.

However, a significant part of the party claim that the constitution should be upheld and two MLA's have put their name in the running.

The convention also rejected coalition with the Liberals to present a united front against the governing NDP in the upcoming election, a subject which has been given much consideration in both parties. However they are leaving themselves open to determine the advisability of not fielding a candidate, on a riding by riding basis.

QUEBEC — The three labour leaders convicted to one-year sentences by the Court of Appeal of Quebec for contempt of court will be appealing their sentences to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Marcel Pepin, president of the Conference of National Trade Unions, Louis Laberge, President of the Quebec Federation of Labour, and Yvon Charbonneau, president of the Quebec Teachers' Corp. were charged last spring for advising 200,000 striking hospital employees to ignore back-to-work orders.

OTTAWA — Canada will conduct talks with all four parties involved in the Vietnam conflict before committing itself to a peacekeeping role in the event of a ceasefire. External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp also called for the setting of an exact time limit on our participation in the ceasefire. He also stated that none of those sent from Canada would bear arms.

TORONTO — Plans have been tabled in the Ontario Legislature for the licencing of denturists and stringent controls imposed to improved the quality of their services. It is believed that these standards will force out many of those who are presently practicing illegally.

It has also been proposed that a denturists' course be offered at George Brown College in Toronto.

Social Democrats' coalition takes 272 of 496 seats

World: Victory for West German Socialists largest ever

BONN — Chancellor Willy Brandt's left-liberal coalition swept to victory in the West German elections this week endorsing the good neighbour policy he has been pursuing with East Europe.

Brandt's Social Democrats and his Free Democratic coalition partners under Foreign Minister Walter Scheel managed to capture 54.3 per cent of the popular vote giving them 272 seats in the 496 seat Bundestag.

It is the greatest number of seats to be held by the Social Democrats and the heaviest lost for the Christian Democrats under Rainer Barzel since the formation of the republic in 1949.

The vote was taken by Brandt as a mandate for his foreign policy, specifically the recent treaty with East Germany which approved the establishment of diplomatic ties, as well as entry for both Germannys into the United Nations.

TEL AVIV — Fighting along the border between Israel and Syria reached its highest point since the 1967 Mid East War this week with successive plane raids and tank battles.

Israel sent out four waves of jets to bomb Syrian army and guerrilla bases. Both sides claimed they inflicted serious losses on the other but each denied the other's report.

PARIS — U.S. Presidential Advisor Henry Kissinger is back in Paris to conduct talks with Vietnamese negotiator Le Duc Tho in an attempt to resolve their differences in the recently Peace Treaty.

Meanwhile, in Saigon President Nguyen Van Thieu is rushing to complete the organization of a new political party with an estimated 100,000 members to enable him to balance Communist strength in the event of a ceasefire. Under the treaty presently being negotiated in Paris, individual political groups will be given a say in a peace time government.

The new party has been given the name Democracy Party and contains dozens of generals, most of the major South Vietnames political chiefs, and many thousands of village and hamlet officials. However, many of those who joined, said they did so only after being ordered to sign.

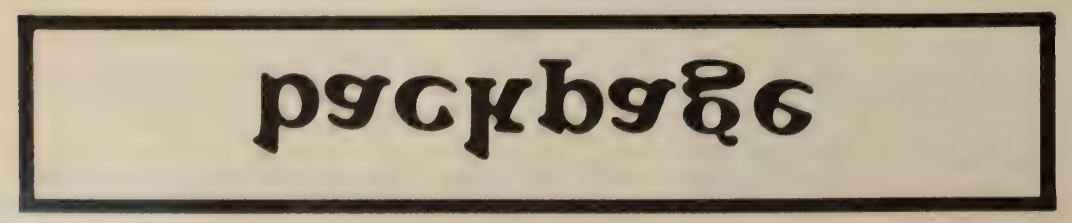
DUBLIN — Irish Republican Army Chief Sean MacStiofain was captured near Dublin in the Irish Republic and is being held for questioning.

MacStiofain is the leader of the militant provisional wing of the IRA in Northern Ireland and has been holding out against a ceasefire and peace with Britain as advocated by the IRA's Official Marxist wing.

As author of some of the heaviest destructions in the conflict, MacStiofain is the most wanted fugitive in the British Isles. However, it is expected that, in keeping with their past policies, the Irish Republic will release him and not turn him over to the British authorities.

BUENOS AIRES — Crowds have been flocking to the house of the popular former Argentine President Juan Peron ever since his return to Argentina after 17 years of exile in Spain.

Over 100,000 people stood out in front of his dwelling last weekend and 700 Argentine policemen were finally called in to prevent riots from breaking out.



Peron has taken up the reins of the movement that was founded in his honor when his exile was announced, and has called for an end to the military dictatorship which has been governing the country for the past seven years in the upcoming national elections.

LONDON — A festival atmosphere surrounded this city during the past week as Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip marked their silver wedding anniversary.

It was the largest display of royal pageantry and celebrations since the Queen's coronation in 1953.

WASHINGTON — A popular movement in the Democratic Party ranks to put Senator Edward Kennedy in control has been gaining momentum since their election defeat on November 7, under Senator George McGovern.

A growing number of Senators endorse Kennedy as the obvious choice for the Democratic Presidential candidate for 1976. Kennedy has not as yet made any firm commitments.

Queen's
Journal
Volume One Hundred, No. 23
Tuesday, November 28, 1972

AMS to discuss it

Fee withholding - DFS talks

by Charles Schwier

TORONTO — The Ontario Federation of Students, on Saturday first called for, and then recinded, a second term fee withholding by Ontario post-secondary students.

The decision to call the withholding came after a stormy all day session which rejected a Queen's proposal that the demand for the rollback of the $100 tuition hike be removed and a Toronto suggestion that the $100 issue be quietly ignored.

After much dissention about the relative majority of those in favour of the witholding (eight to four with five abstentions) and the numbers of participants, and the resignation of four OFS executive members, the OFS passed a motion to recind the withholding. This was a procedural action to enable discussion to take place on the withholding question. At this point, a representative of the Lakehead Summer Students challenged the quorum and the meeting was dissolved.

The new executive of OFS later met and passed the original motion, calling for a withholding which would be re-evaluated in February which now must be approved by student councils across the province before it becomes policy. The AMS will be discussing the motion tomorrow night at 7 pm in the McLaughlin Room of the Union.

The meeting started off on a sour note when the organizer of the OFS demonstration, Dave Multon, OFS executive member and president of the Glendon Student Society, attacked (without mentioning them,) Queen's, Western and Toronto for not taking part in and supporting the demonstration. He said "people don't respect democratic decisions and actions of some people are jeopardizing the organization."

He went on to attack other members of the OFS executive for what he called a "lack of leadership," and for not taking a hard enough line. The sniping from Multon and others continued for the whole meeting.

The two biggest issues of the meeting were the $100 and the length of the withholding. One proposal was that the withholding be for the month of January only so that it would be only "a symbolic protest". Part of the reason for this proposal was that many students would be reluctant to withhold their fees if it meant that the government or the universities would not release their OSAP cheques. A number of schools reported this feeling on the part of their administrations.

Some opposed the deadline on the grounds that it was too symbolic and that it was really a sellout. Multon called it "bullshit".

Executive member Ross McGregor (former AMS president) said he favoured the one month limit on the withholding because it "would get better support", and blasted those who wished to keep the $100 demand, saying "There is no way we'll get it!" He said that he was not impressed with the support that the OFS has been getting from across the province and termed the showing of a number of schools in the referendum an "abortion."

Student representatives from Glendon, Trent, Lakehead and other places all vehimently spoke against the dropping of the $100 demand saying that they had been mandated by their students to fight for it, and that it was "compromise with the government for compromise sake," and if the students fell on their face, too bad.

Queen's GSS vice-president Stu Clark said that the consensus of students was against holding out for the $100 rollback. He said that it was an unrealistic demand which could not be supported publicly or sold to a great majority of students.

Queen's External Affairs Commissioner, Lyn Whitham, said that the main issue of the students should be accessibility to post-secondary education and the Ontario Student Awards Programme. She thought that these were the issues that Ontario students backed and the public would support.

Only Queen's and Western voted for removing the demand.

After the withholding vote, four members of the OFS executive resigned. They were McGregor, Eric Miglin, president of SAC at Toronto, and members from Laurention and the association of part time students at Toronto.

Orientation plans may be revised

by Bob Mutrie

The abolition of Gael groups from Orientation at Queen's became a favourite issue during the Orientation think night last week.

The meeting was called to invite people with suggestions on how to improve Orientation '73. A very vocal complaint was that freshmen were not allowed to move enough on their own.

Eleanor Crowder, Co-ordinator of Orientation '73 showed interest in the idea of having student counsellors who would be easily approachable instead of the traditional group idea, which places more emphasis on the Gael looking for the frosh, than the frosh looking for the Gael.

"Gaels tend to act as a substitute mother and father", Crowder stated, and added that the frosh really aren't allowed enough leaway on their own.

The possibility of not having any Gaels was raised after the suggestion that the number of Gaels be increased to three or four with an increase in the group to twenty frosh.

It was felt, however, that large groups tend to aim too much at the social aspects of campus and that the cultural end becomes neglected.

However, much opposition was aroused at the suggestion of no Gael groups. Many present felt that the group provided a starting point for relationships and that, being voluntary, individuals have the choice of whether they want to participate. They felt that people who are lost will stay lost without groups.

One person suggested that Gael groups provide a security blanket which individuals are free to accept or reject at will.

Kathy Turner, in charge of academics in Orienation '73 called for Registration to be moved back to early October in order that more people would be allowed to "move around and try different courses."

It was agreed, that, although people are allowed to change their courses up until October 15, the red tape and paper work involved in doing so after Registration "stops many people from shopping around."

However, Tony Ibbotson, Professor of French cautioned the group that such a policy was "not fair to the professor" in that he would be starting his course not knowing who will be remaining in the class.

One feature that the Committee will be emphasizing this year is more responsibility for course counselling placed on departmental student councils.

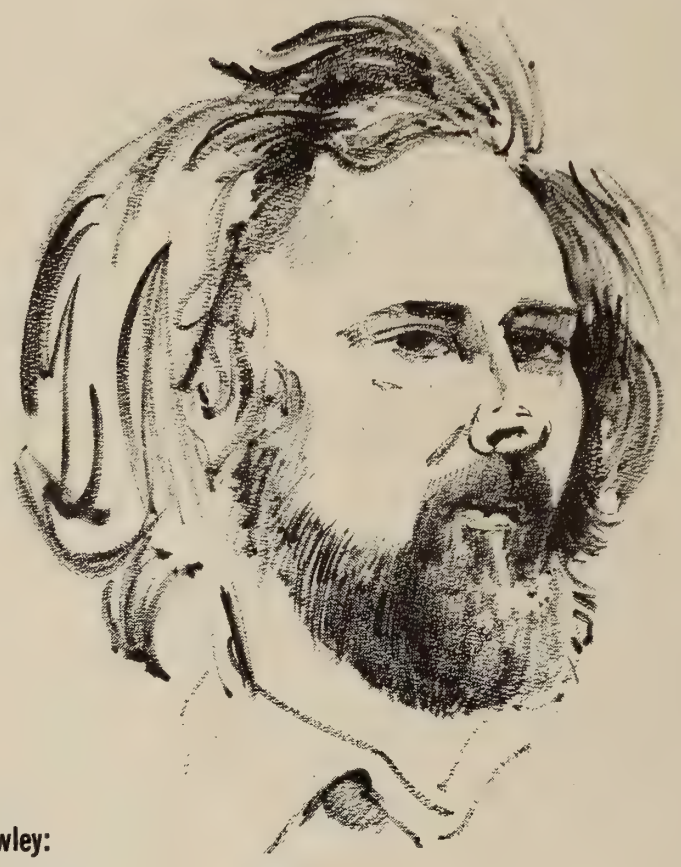
It was pointed out that professors had a tendency to "sell their course" and Crowder claimed that using DSC's for all counselling would avoid this.

The discussion turned to the question of whether there should be roving Gaels to seek out freshmen who are not at an event and perhaps even going into residences to talk with them.

"Gaels must not be mother hens", Ibbotson told the meeting, however, adding that "some people want to be alone to sort things out."

Crowder agreed, pointing out that "Gaels must become responsive to peoples' needs to be alone."

She suggested a proposal for only structuring part of the week and leaving freshmen on their own to explore for the other part.



"Gaels are not aware enough that they are learning during the week," Crowder stated, suggesting that a division of the week would allow them to function both as a group and as in-

Continued on Page 5

- schwier

People - the grass roots of representation start with YOU; it isn't party - to - party, but people - to - people.

Mr. Rowley is the candidate most accessible to you.

He will be in the Queen's residences and pub this week asking students their thoughts.

Campaign headquarters
549-0012

Ken Rowley:

- Wants to represent Queen's students on City Council. You are 80 per cent of Sydenham Ward, and deserve representation.
- Wants to provide better liaison between the City and Queen's University.
- Wants to look into rent structures in Kingston. He has received many complaints from Queen's students regarding high rents, absentee landlords, and poor conditions.
- Look into off-street parking. Many Queen's students have been forced to find other parking as parking spots with their apartments have been taken over for commercial parking by landlords.
- Believes that building of historical value should be saved, but not at the cost of turning these places into over-priced, inadequate dwellings for students. Sometimes People in Kingston forget the biggest industry in Kingston -- Queen's University, and maybe it would be good sometimes to show a little thanks, rather than a hell of a lot of criticism.
- Is the proprietor of Hair.
- Helped sponsor the Beer Brewing Contest, and the Science Formal.
- Is an advertiser in Golden Words, the Journal and Who's Where.
- Donates to scholarships at Queen's.

I, Kenneth ROWLEY solicit your vote for alderman in Sydenham Ward on Monday, December 4th.

Remember - bad officials are elected by good citizens who don't vote.

Province severs university grants

Last Thursday a major shift in priorities was announced by the Ontrio government. Two provincial ministers announced freezes designed to curb the rising cost to the public treasury of education and health services.

Jack McNie, Minister of Colleges and Universities cut off provincial funds for new capital construction at post-secondary education institutins. The freeze will last yor "years" he said. Building projects will be limited to those already under construction.

Health Minister Richard Potter declared a one year freeze on financing hospital expansion and a 5 per cent ceiling on increases of operating budgets.

He told a press conference after this announcement that his research shows, "there are a number of areas in which hospital active in-patient treatment facilities are in excess of the eventual goal of 4 beds per thousand people."

Stanley Martin, Deputy Minister of Health mentioned Kingston, Sarnia and Thunder Bay as municipalities where the ratio was considered inefficiently high.

The announcements followed by one day Premier William Davis' unveiling of an ambitious and costly program to reshape and expand mass transit in Ontario. Davis estimated the new scheme would cost Queen's Park about $135 million a year over the next decade.

Principal John J. Deutsch made this announcement to a meeting of Senate on Thursday. Later, he told the Journal that "the statement is pretty general." "We'll have to have it clarified" before we can tell what the implications are for Queen's.

Only two projects are presently in the planning stages and it is not clear how they will be affected. "The proposed University Centre is to be funded out of private monies anyway so it will not be affected directly," he said. But he added it means that "there will be less funds available for other things."

Deutsch was unsure if the freeze on hospital expansion would affect the proposed Health Sciences Complex.

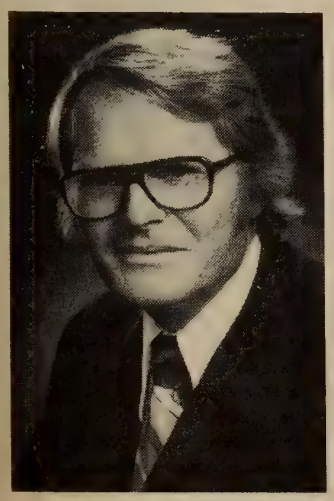
He explained that Kingston had a higher ratio of beds that other areas because it is a centre of medical education.

The government's statement did not clarify whether or not teaching hospitals would be affected. The hospitals in Kingston are classified as such.

One of the purposes of the new Health Sciences Complex is to rehabilitate worn out hospital facilities. To what extent these plans will be affected is not yet evident.

The freeze on capital construction of higher education facilities "should enable the government to save roughly $10 million between now and the end of the fiscal year in March," McNie said.

"The pause will allow both government and institutions to explore ways to make more intensive use of existing facilities," McNie commented.



- merrithew

Dorn designs crest

by Jennifer Grass

The Senate received notice of recommendations from the Graphics Advisory Committee which was set up in May 1970.

The committee had reported that the "graphic image of Queen's University is fragmented, indistinct and deplorably undistinguished." In order to improve this image, the committee suggested that a co-ordinating director of Graphics be appointed.

Peter Dorn

In July 1971 Principal John J. Deutsch announced the appointment of Peter Dorn to this position.

Dorn has been responsible for many design improvments since he arrived at Queen's. The most noticeable one is the design of academic calendars. These were previously handled by the individual faculties. This year Dorn co-ordinated the design and production of all faculty calendars. As a result, he was able to produce calendars which are cheaper and which look like they are all issued by Queen's. The cost of these calendars was $60,000 two years ago and was reduced to $40,000 this year.

Equipped with slides, Dorn gave an amusing presentation to Senate concerning the form of graphic design as it was and as it should be.

He told the Senate meeting that the "original coat of arms has been used improperly and indiscriminately" and recommended that it be "reserved for ceremonial purposes."

"For everyday use" he displayed a simple but distinctive crest.

Dorn also showed a design for a university logo. Acceptance of these recommendations has been reserved until the December meeting of Senate.

Intercession-yes, trimester-no

by Jennifer Grass

Last week the Senate approved a motion to offer intercession courses during May and June in 1973 and 1974 and endorsed a recommendation not to take steps to implement a trimester system.

Dr. G. A. Horrower, Vice-Principal, Academic, said that the Intercession will enable the university to make more "efficient use of their resources and manpower as well as meeting the changing needs of students."

Twenty to thirty courses will be offered each session. Regular members of faculty who teach during intercession will receive appropriate adjustment in their teaching responsibilities during the remainder of the academic year rather than supplementary remuneration.

The Senate agreed to make representations to the Ministry of University Affairs of Ontario for a change in the present rule so that students not be required to take more than two full courses in the period May to August in order to qualify for student aid.

Student senator, Dave Pritchard pointed out that the University of Toronto had recently made this request and it was denied. Principal John J. Deutsch expressed the hope that perhaps further representations might have a more persuasive affect.

A task force has been studying trimester systems for the past year, with a view to possible implementation at Queen's.

However, Deutsch reported that the Task Force along with the Senate Committee on Academic Development has decided that this system is "not an advisable course for us to take."

Dr. H. M. Love, chairman of the Task Force told Senate that other institutions had noticed three things about the trimester system. It enables students to complete degrees quicker. It affects a more efficient use of capital and may lead to economies.

Love said, "we considered the first as a priority" but explained that three semesters would only be an academic advantage if a wide range of courses were available."

He foresaw that "any attempt of this sort would have bad effects on the general academic work of departments."

He also pointed out that the "costs of institutions with a trimester system have risen."

With this Love concluded that there was "no advantage in pursuing this arrangement."

However, a Task Force recommended that the Faculties of Arts and Science and Applied Science consider the academic merits of extending each term by one week. This suggestion was endorsed by Senate.

Other Senate news

by Jennifer Grass

Other business at Senate concerned early admissions, publication of research results, AMS constables at Senate meetings, Art Conservation, and a report from Technical Supplies.

The Senate adopted as policy the guidelines concerning publications of research results which were formulated by the Committee of Presidents of Universities of Ontario.

Their report asks that neither research sponsors nor universities attempt to enter into agreements which will formally involve universities in conducting academic work which cannot be published. It also suggests that sponsors be entitled to request and be granted a reasonable delay in publication, say six

Continued on Page 5

newsbriefs

What Kingston is electing

With December 4 approaching, it is time to sort out the confusion as to what exactly electors will be voting for in the Kingston municipal election.

There are sixteen members on the Frontenac Board of Education, eight of whom are elected by the townships, eight by the city. One of those elected by the city voters represents the separate schools and is voted for only by those who indicate themselves to be separate school electors. Joseph A. Courneya was returned to this position by acclamation. This leaves seven positions to be filled on December 4.

In addition, each elector will be voting for candidates to fill the four positions on the Public Utilities Commission, from seven candidates. These are Robert H. Hay, physicist, who is running for another term, Herbert G. Hunter, spinning operator, Albert S. Watts, merchant, also running for a second term, W. E. Cooke, chemist, Reginald Potts, sales representative, King Enright, real estate agent and Conald Boyd Good, lawyer.

Two Aldermen are also elected from each ward to sit on city council. In Sydenham Ward, the ward in which the university is located there are six candidates for the two positions.

There are two candidates for mayor of Kingston. These are Alderman George Speal and Paul Guindon, who are chosen by a city-wide vote.

Also on the ballot will be three referenda questions, two in most wards. One is whether Aldermen should be elected on a city wide basis instead of by Ward. The second is whether Kingston should allow flouridation of their water supply.

The third, which will only appear in some areas, is whether the serving of liquor is to be allowed there.

Vote against minority rule

A referendum will be held this week in women's residence. Women in residence will be asked for their opinion on the question of changing the 66 per cent presently needed to change residence rules, to a straight majority. A 66 per cent majority will be required to pass the motion in the referendum, as is the case for all proposals for a constitutional change.

Kiloran German, Women's Residence Council President, said, "the issue is an important one." She expressed the hope that it would be passed.

"The present rule allows for the minority to govern the majority," she added. Many women residents showed their dissatisfaction with the existing rule after an Open WRC meeting last week. Following the meeting Miss German received two petitions requesting that a referendum be held on the issue.

Voting will take place in the meal line at Ban Righ on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Ice goes, new hours set

The ice will be removed from the Jock Harty Arena on Tuesday, December 5 at 7 pm in order to set up for examinations. The Arena will remain closed until December 27.

The Physical Education Centre will be closed from 4 pm Friday December 22 to 8 am Tuesday January 2 with the exception of Wednesday December 27 from 2 pm to 9 pm and Thursday December 28 from 8 am to 6 pm. During the period January 2 to 7, the hours will be Tuesday through Saturday 8 am to 9 pm and Sunday 2 pm to 11 pm.

Scholarship floor raised

A rise in the academic percentage necessary to qualify for scholarships which are renewable on a yearly basis was approved at the Wednesday meeting of the Senate Committee on Scholarships and Student Aid.

The Committee decided that the continuing scholarships, which require a certain percentage each year for the applicant to continue receiving them, were set too low.

The standing required for qualificiation for scholarships was not changed at the time of the 1966 general change in university policy towards standings and so were somewhat below the new levels, all of them calling for either 65 per cent or 70 per cent.

However, there was also the problem of some of these scholarships only being available to very few entrants, being on a county, city or single school basis and it was felt that too high an increase in the requirements for these would result in no applicants being eligible. Committee member D. N. Ellis, Assistant Registrar (Students' Awards), stated that he would rather see the standards slightly lower in some cases, than have the funds laying idle.

It was finally decided that the requirements on the scholarships with a large number of possible entrants would be raised to 75 per cent while the more parochial ones would be set at 70 per cent.

The Committee also agreed that the standards could be waived in certain cases but only by their specific approval.

Did you ever

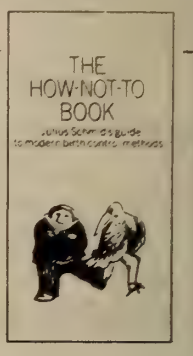
STOP

to think how it all got started?

Get some straight facts about the different methods of birth control and some historical anecdotes in the FREE "How-Not-To" booklet. Written in simple, easy-to-read language. From Julius Schmid, makers of quality contraceptives for men.
Ask for these well known brands at your drug store.

FOUREX • RAMSES • SHEIK

JULIUS SCHMID OF CANADA LIMITED
32 Bermondsey Rd., Toronto 16, Ont.



Please send me FREE "THE-HOW-NOT-TO-BOOK
(Print clearly)

TO: Name_____

Address_____

City_____ Zone_____ Prov._____

YS-272

Brian Warrender Neil Steenberg Sarah Prichard Alan Ingram

QUEEN'S STUDENTS, AS RESIDENTS OF SYDENHAM WARD, ARE DIRECTLY AFFECTED BY CITY POLICY REGARDING HOUSING, SUMMER EMPLOYMENT, AND POLICE PROTECTION

HOUSING. . . "co-operative apartments are a positive approach to our housing problem."

SUMMER EMPLOYMENT. . ."I organized a pilot program last summer and hired 35 students. This year, with city co-operation we can aim for hiring several hundred students in this environmental program."

- FACULTY MEMBER - St. Lawrence College
- QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY GRADUATE B.Sc. '67 Civil Engineering M.Sc. Colorado, water resources
- 15 YR. RESIDENT OF SYDENHAM WARD
- ENVIRONMENTAL RESEARCHER

ANGUS ROSS SYDENHAM WARD

Help Elect Strong Representation
Call 542-7890 or visit 94 William St.

Dave Dobbin Bill Cook Sam Principi Abraham Szereszewski

Rick Hillary Sharon McFadzean Randy Coates Jean Cook Ted O'Neill

WE ARE WORKING TO ELECT ANGUS ROSS IN OUR WARD.

Queen's University Music Department

CONCERT

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY WIND ENSEMBLE

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY CHORAL ENSEMBLE

Grant Hall, 8:00 p.m. Nov. 30th admission free

AMS OUTER COUNCIL MEETING

Wednesday, November 29th

Principal John Deutsch

Fee Withholding

7:30 p.m.

McLaughlin Room

ALL WELCOME

interested in going back to your HIGH SCHOOL...

to tell students about university?

if so, attend a meeting in

STIRLING D

THURS., Nov. 30th

7:30 p.m.

Queen's Housing Service improved

by Susan de Stein

In an interview with the Journal concerning the Queen's Student Housing Service, Mary Ann Doyle, a director of the Operation, stressed the fact that "we are not a money-making organization."

Miss Doule added that the Housing Service is "a student organization, operating with the aim of providing housing for students at a reasonable cost."

The Housing Service was started three years ago when the housing shortage was acute. Although the housing market is not as tight today, the service continues to provide the valuable service of aiding students in their search for accomodation. The organization has grown considerably in the last two years, and at present has 52 "dwelling places" under its management.

The service is run in conjunction with the university. Although it is relatively autonomous of the AMS, its operation comes under the jurisdiction of the AMS. A student committee which includes Paul Mahaffy (chairman), Sheila McIntyre, Tony Wolman, Kathy McSweeney, Steve Sugar, and Mary Ann Doyle, forms the organizing body of the Housing Service. John F. Richardson, Director of Property Management at Queen's, also sits on the committee. "Mr. Richardson's advice and help has been invaluable," Miss Doyle commented.

The university itself acquired these houses, located in the area around the campus that has been marked for eventual university expansion. Until Queen's needs the houses or the land, the Housing Service will continue to manage the houses which the university owns and rent them to students.

In January, the Housing Service will hold a lottery. Those persons who desire a certain accomodation will have their names drawn randomly and in the order of selection in the lottery, their names will be placed on a waiting list for that accomodation.

In the past, Miss Doyle said, "we have been accused of giving houses away to people we know. There was no justification for such a complaint." She added that the lottery system will dissolve any similar doubts and at the same time will simplify the operation.

MBA pamphlet "token" to women

Female students in fourth year are receiving a special pamphlet encouraging them to take a Masters of Business Administration.

This material is being circulated along with the standard information concerning the MBA program.

Several women at Queen's have expressed disatisfaction with this pamphlet which was produced by the Princeton Testing Service.

Some feel it takes a rather "token attitude towards women" and others believe that it "uses women's lib as an advertising gimick."

Dr. N. B. MacIntosh, chairman of the MBA program assured the Journal that "we were simply trying to get more women interested."

"We had no intention of intimidating or annoying anyone," he said.

"If women are going to get equality in management jobs they must be as well trained as men," he remarked and pointed out that "proportionately few women have joined the program in past."

This Thursday at 7:30 pm in Dunning a meeting will be held to acquaint all students with the MBA program.

Several graduate students will be on hand to discuss their experiences in the job market.

MacIntosh indicated that a female graduate had been invited to "tell of her trials and tribulations as a woman in business."

He reiterated the claim that in circulating the pamphlet "we had honorable intentions." The idea was innocent." "It was not designed to patronize women," he commented.

Other Senate news

Continued from Page 3

months to one year where such delay is in the interest of the sponsor. Where university researchers are to be given access to confidential data, the report says that the terms and conditions of their use be specified in advance.

Recommendations regarding the concept of early admissions were passed. Early admissions is based on criteria other than grade 13 final marks.

Dates were set for accepting marks and offering admissions.

Senate received a letter from AMS president, Greg Leblanc concerning the need for having constables at Senate meetings. Leblanc called their presence at meetings an "unnecessary expense" and hoped that they could be removed to aid the AMS to "cut down on some of our marginal expenses."

The suggestion was referred to the Operations Review Committee.

A letter from Technical Suppliesreported that in response to a suggestion by Senate task force last year, the store is moving towards the direction of a more comprehensive book store.

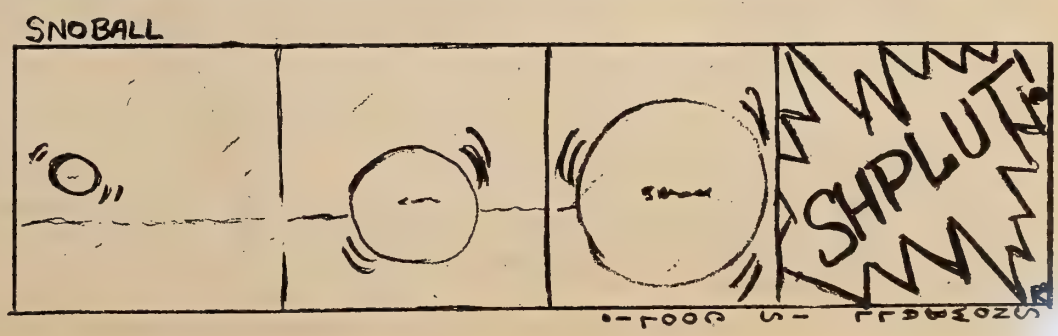
"We have already increased offerings of this sort to a rate of over 2000 titles per year and within the next several months, we expect to increase that rate to at least 5000 titles per year," the statement said.

However, it pointed out that "sales amount to only a small fraction of the offerings."

The letter does acknowledge that the store has not yet been reorganized to display this range of ittles distinctly.

Since costs are up, Technical Supplies does not intend to lower its text discount rate from the present 5 per cent level introduced last May.

Orientation idea



Continued from Page 1

dividuals.

She calimed that leaving one part of the week unstructured and without formal groups, the freshmen would better be able to explore Queen's and Kingston.

Crowder pointed out that it is important to put the onus on freshment for determining their surroundings and that this would encourage an overview.

The orientation committee will take these comments into consideration when formulating policy.

classified

A NUMBER OF ARTICLES such as watches, jewellery, keys and eye glasses remain unclaimed in the Lost & Found box in our office and we feel that if you could put a note to this effect in your paper, some of the students who lost items might come in to claim them. Thank You. The lost & found box is located in the Admin. Office of the Phys. Ed. Centre, Room 101 (ground floor).

TRISH, "SAM", TED, John, Jane, Paul, Martin, Mike, Debra and Suzie-Q. Read the WANTED; in this section. And bring a friend.

SECONDHAND SUEDE Jacket for sale -- need money -- only $20. Phone Glen after 5 pm. 546-6504.

STTON TRIP -- Meeting for all Ski Club members going on Christmas Trip to the Eastern Townships; this Thursday, November 30; Games Room, Lower Vic; 7 pm.

SINGLE ROOM AVAILABLE In Victoria Hall after Christmas. Phone Linda at 544-8536.

LOST KEY RING WITH miniature aididas shoes. If found, please leave at Victoria Hall desk. Keys urgently needed. If you like the shoes, you can keep them, but please return the keys.

GIRL WANTED to share large, quiet Apartment at Earl and Clergy on January 1. Call 544-6722.

KINGSTON CERAMISTS GUILD Annual Sale. City Park Recreation Centre, Bagot Street. Preview on Thursday November 30, 8-10 pm. Sale on Friday December 1, 10-9 and Saturday, December 2, 10-5.

THE QUEEN'S EXCURSION CLUB is currently attempting to charter a bus to travel to Florida (probably Fort Lauderdale) and return to Kingston (or Toronto) during the Christmas holidays. We hope to keep the price down to $50. If you are seriously interested please leave your name, telephone number and suggested dates of departure and return either with the ticket sellers or in Don McVie's office before November 30.

THE QUEEN'S EXCURSION CLUB will be attempting to run buses to Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal daily or as often as is plausible between the 10th and 18th of December for students going home at Christmas. All return buses will come back on the 6th and 7th of January. Please sign up in the Outer AMS office as soon as possible.

TO THE PERSON WHO has been riding a stolen blue 3-speed bike with a red basket: it's mine and I have it back. Thanks for leaving it at the Union where I could find it.

THREE PEOPLE LOOKING for fourth to share house for spring term. Cheap rent, large room, close to campus. Phone 549-0176. Ask for John. Option for house for next year if desired.

PAINT YOUR ROOM, decorate our massive Xmas tree, learn to cook, help manage your own living space. Do it at Elrond and do it now. Xmas is the time to make that change before residence gets you down in a second term.

PREGNANT AND DISTRESSED? Birthright can help. Call 546-LIFE (5433).

WATERBEDS: Ged rid of your deadbed and get a waterbed, the greatest advance in bed design in 50 years. Call HALCYON WATERBEDS (544-9540, 6 to 9 pm) tonight. Caution, a waterbed is not a birth control device.

WANTED: All Artsci DSC Chairmen, Artsci Faculty Board Reps., Artsci Senators, Artsci Divisional Councellors, Ted Cape and any other interested students. Where: Stirling "C" Time: 7:00 pm, November 30. Why? To discuss issues of an Academic nature that will be coming up at the next Faculty Board and Senate Meetings.

Kentucky Fried Chicken TAKE HOME STORES

240 Montreal St. 542-2773 (nearest to Queen's)

Princess St. West at Portsmouth

Bath Road just West of K-Mart

It's Finger Lickin Good

Delivery charge extra

Snacks .95
Dinners 1.50
Family Bucket 4.25
Party Barrel 5.50

Get together and order for the whole gang.

ARTS & SCIENCE ORIENTATION '73

Gael Applications forms

available in the

A.M.S. OUTER OFFICE NOW

completed applications should be returned to the

A.M.S. OUTER OFFICE
THURSDAY, DEC. 14th

all years & faculties may apply

Hoechst thinks ahead

A Polar City with Summer Weather

Only climatic conditions have delayed development of the polar regions and mining of the mineral wealth beneath them. Tomorrow, new cities may arise in these remote climes, encased in gigantic domes made of an incredible material developed by Hoechst — new Trevira high tenacity polyester fabric. Inside these artificial greenhouses, covering many square miles and held aloft by streams of air, temperature and humidity would be controlled to create a perfect environment for both working and living.

Cross-Fertilization of Ideas

New Trevira high tenacity polyester fabric and the various uses projected for it are examples of the cross-fertilization of ideas that inevitably results from the several scientific disciplines Hoechst is active in. Our chemical research and discoveries reinforce our developments in the newer fields of plastics and fibres. Research, development and product experience in many areas combine to solve specific problems.

Helping Build Canada

An affiliate of the worldwide Hoechst organization, Canadian Hoechst Limited concerns itself with supplying both the present and future needs of Canadians. The range of products and services covers the spectrum through industrial chemicals, dyestuffs, plastics, printing plates, human and veterinary medicines, pharmaceuticals, and textile fibres. Hoechst products and services, Hoechst techniques and know-how in these fields, combined with a large international fund of experience, have given the company a reputation for expertise which takes constant striving to live up to. Hoechst thinks ahead.

HOECHST
REG. T.M. HOECHST.
HOECHST

Canadian Hoechst Limited
4045 Côte Vertu
Montreal 383, Quebec

40 Lesmill Road
Don Mills, Ontario

722-6-1

LADIES ELECTROLYSIS
Avoid shaving, tweezing, or the use of dipilatories. Have your eyebrows styled and unwanted hair removed permanently by electrolysis. Physicians recommend our work. For a free consultation and information call:
HARRISON SALON 542-5595

CLOVER LEAF
HEALTH FOODS
490 Princess Street
16 Years Experience in Selling Health Foods
Everything in flours, powders, juices, oils, honey, peanut butter, herbs for tea, seeds, whole grains, beverages, nuts, Loma Linda Products, & all capsules & tablets from Vitamin A to Wheat Germ.

544-1227
286 Montreal St. North
- Free Delivery
- Fast, Friendly Service
- Most consistent quality
- pizza in Kingston

PIZZA CHALET

at the art centre

PROGRESS IN CONSERVATION
arranged by the National Gallery of Canada and continuing until December 10

SELECTIONS FROM THE PERMANENT COLLECTION
paintings, prints and sculpture

FILM: GERTRUDE STEIN: When This You See Remember Me 89 minutes colour

A special showing for university students in ELLIS HALL at 4.30 p.m. on Monday, December 4. Admission is free, Courtesy of AGNES.

The film will be shown again in DUNNING HALL at 8.30 p.m. for Gallery Association members and their guests.

Queen's University Music Department

MUSIC OF THE LATE MIDDLE AGES
by the
Collegium Musicum
Director: W. Maust
a program of English Carols: Dunstable, Dufay
GRANT HALL, 8:30 p.m., FRIDAY, DEC. 1
admission free

Discuss environmental projects

by Raj Anand

Last Tuesday evening, a meeting was held in Clark Hall to discuss student environmental projects for eastern Ontario next summer. The discussion period was organized by Angus Ross, a Queen's graduate who now teaches at St. Lawrence College, Ted O'Neill, a graduate student in Physical Geology; and Rick Hillary, a law student here.

Hillary opened the meeting by outlining some of the work done by students last summer in this area. A survey on the Rideau canal system concentrated on the segment from the southern end of Whitefish Lake to Kingston Mills. Chemical and bacteriological samples were collected along the length of this system. The tests attempted to trace fluctuations in the quality of water through determination of ph, temperature, oxygen content, and concentrations of certain chemicals.

Another project was the surveying of landlocked recreational lakes in the Tweed area. Several students covered seven lakes on a rotational basis; the object was to obtain some type of background inventory of the water.

A third program was aimed at determining the extent of contamination of water from wells in small towns such as Odessa, Newburgh, and Sydenham. The conclusion arrived at was that the problem was very severe but that the residents had actually developed an immunity to the contamination. This, naturally, posed a grave danger for visitors.

In Kingston, three students studied the effect of seepage out of sewage pipes. At the same time, door-to-door surveys of land and water use were being conducted in Pittsburg Township.

From these brief summaries, it can be seen that both in the number of projects undertaken and in the depth of these projects, the surface has only been scratched. Ross was optimistic about the prospects of growth in both of these areas because, he said, the Ontario government has expressed interest in receiving proposals for next summer. The foundations were laid last year with the granting of $45,000 for student environmental projects. Ross was confident that a grant of $500,000 was within the reach of a group of several hundred interested students. He stressed that the government is not limiting its support to air or water pollution projects; other aspects of this area is environment, such as the preservation of national monuments, would be considered. But the government must be informed soon of the type of programs people are willing to undertake.

O'Neill covered the financial considerations and work relationships. There were three categories of pay last year: $2.50 an hour for top administrators, $2.25 for positions involving less responsibility, and $2.00 for most first-year and college students. Reasonable travel and other expenses were paid for; there was a 2 per cent vacation pay and paid holidays. A student could work for a maximum of forty hours a week and fifteen weeks a year. But O'Neill pointed out that these are last year's figures, including the pay scale, and salaries might well be higher this summer.

The remainder of the meeting consisted of suggestions and comments from the faculty and students who attended. One consideration that was mentined was that while students must stay away from jobs which are within the sphere of regularly paid city engineers, there was a large market in private companies for students to do environmental tests which are simply too small for the companies themselves.

It was noted that there is a need not only for students with a scientific background, but also for those who are simple interested. There are a variety of non-scientific jobs to be done, such as administration and door-to-door surveys.

After the meeting, O'Neill told the Journal that while he and his two colleagues were willing to provide the initial leadership, they will be unable to assume total responsibility, and that students who are less occupied during the summer must do so collectively. Last year, O'Neill handled administration, Ross dealth with the government, and Hillary controlled field operations. This coming summer, they want a much bigger operation, with a greater share of the responsibility taken by a large number of students.

Anybody who is interested in this type of summer work should contact Ross at 542-7890, O'Neill at 549-1778, or Hillary at 544-0973.

merrithew

Council formed to manage private support

Board of Trustees at Queen's has established a special committee, the Queen's Fund Council, to formulate policy and give counsel on all means of private financial support for the University. The committee will be chaired by L. G. Greenwood.

The Queen's Fund Council will perform a co-ordinating role in this important aspect of University support. Based on past history and future expectations, Queen's will always be in need of private funds from a variety of sources.

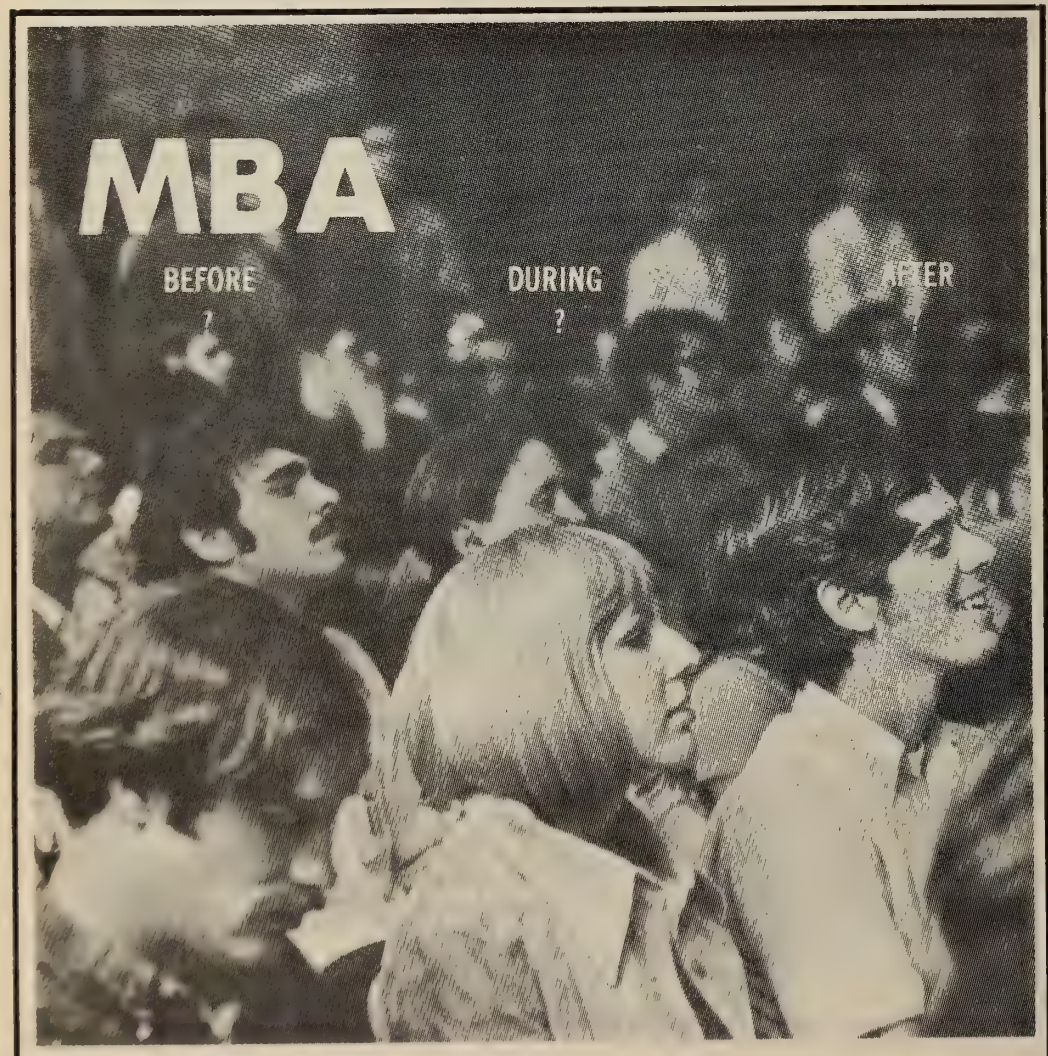
Some existing and possible private support programs include: the Alumni fund; capital campaigns; wills and bequests; parents' clubs; separate memorial funds for scholarships and bursaries, by individuals and corporations; private research funds (non-governmental); and various special types of deferred giving.

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 23
Tues., Nov. 28, 1972,
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Patricia Devitt
Martin Jones
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
Backpage: Bob Mutrie
Photos: Pete Boag

And special thanks and a tip o' Scoop's hat to Bob Wood, Chris Brown, Peter Watts, Sue de Stein, Helen Gignac, Lee Parry and Liz Trotter.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society or the University. Offices are located in the Students' Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.



Ian McIntyre,
new Commissioner of Campus Activities
cordially invites all groups and individuals with social plans for next term to drop into the AMS office
and have a chat.

high taxes ... create high rent
lower both

ELECT ALEX SAUNDERS

FOR ALDERMAN IN ONTARIO WARD
FOR INFORMATION CALL: 542-7777

Meet with faculty, students and grads of Queen's MBA to informally discuss the program

Thurs., Nov. 30th 7:00 p.m.
DUNNING HALL RM. 11

Czech theologian says

Jesus was a revolutionary

by Liz Trotter

"Jesus was more revolutionary than we usually see" declared Milan Opocensky, a Czechoslavakian theologian, as he explored the possibility of the compatibility of Christianity with revolution.

Opocensky felt that Christiantiy gives the image of an upholder of the status quo, but there is a different mood now, as some people consider themselves revolutionary Christians. He claimed that revolutionary expression is inherent in Christianity, but this expression has been burid. We will have to learn to cope with revolution, as "Christians are faced with revolutionary changes." Christians are need to look for a theology of revolution" as they "are not prepared for the phenomenon of revolution." They need to look for "persepective and horizon" to deal with this problem.

Opocenksy also stated that "to accept history is to accept revolution." he pointed out that "sin is somehow reflected in the structures of society", and therefore "man is ultimately corrupted. "These structures lead to violence and revolution."

Opocensky believed that Christians are not involved in the "macro" problems, but mostly in the "micro" problems. They are interested in inter-human relationships but Christian relationships lie outside of this; Opocensky gave the example of foreign affairs.

He pointed to the Russian revolution as a revolution where the masses turned against the church. The church lost its leading position in society, as the revolution brought a new ideology that the masses liked. They turned against the church as a representative of "the unhappy past" and as "a prop for the ruling exploiting classes."

The question of "to what extent do Christians have the right to revolt". was especially perplexing in the Middle Ages where the principle of divine right was widely believed. The sovereigns were thought to be there from the grace of God, so to "revolt against the sovereign was to revolt against God."

This question rose in a similar degree in Germany in 1933 and 1945 with the "tormenting question of how Christians could eliminate a tyrant." This was not just a political matter as Christians were faced with "and ethical question of whether it was right to move against the leader." This also raised the question of "under what conditions is it necessary to remove a sovereign.

Opocensky closed by saying that Christian communities are not closed to the revolutionary phenomenon. But Christians have been raised in an educational system that ignores "dynamic influences" and emphasizes "docility and well-rounded Christianity." But both elements are equally noble, and this idea goes back to the Biblical message and gospel - our interpretation may obscure it, but it is there.

Occupation wins the day

ST. JOHN'S (CUP) — Students at Memorial University have virtually won their fight over the check off of student union fees, following a 10-day non-violent occupation of their administration building.

A tentative agreement was reached early Friday (Nov. 24) following negotiations between students representatives and representatives from the Univeristy Board of Regents. But the agreement must still be ratified by the Board of Regents Dec. 14 and by the students in a referendum.

The student referendum will be supervised by the University Faculty Association, but no date has yet been set.

The agreement stipulates the University must collect the 8 student union fee each semester, but student union membership will not be compulsory. However, the student union will be given all the money collected and individual student must decide if they consider themselves student union members.

The occupation, which began Nov. 14 with about 1500 students, followed an announcement Nov. 9 by university president and vice-chancellor Lord Stephen Taylor that the administration would not collect the student union fees as of Dec. 31. He claimed the Board of Regents was concerned that half the $140,000 collected for the union was spent on administration, $42,000 of it on salaries.

Until Thursday (Nov. 23), Taylor had refused to negotiate unless students ended their occupation of the building. But the threat of a student strike (scheduled for Nov. 23-34 but never held) and possible intervention by Premier Frank Moores, apparently forced Taylor to the negotiating table.

Following the negotiations, students decided to end their occupation and clean the building before they left.

Representatives of the board of Regents agreed no reprisals of any kind will be taken against any student.

Protest brings few gains

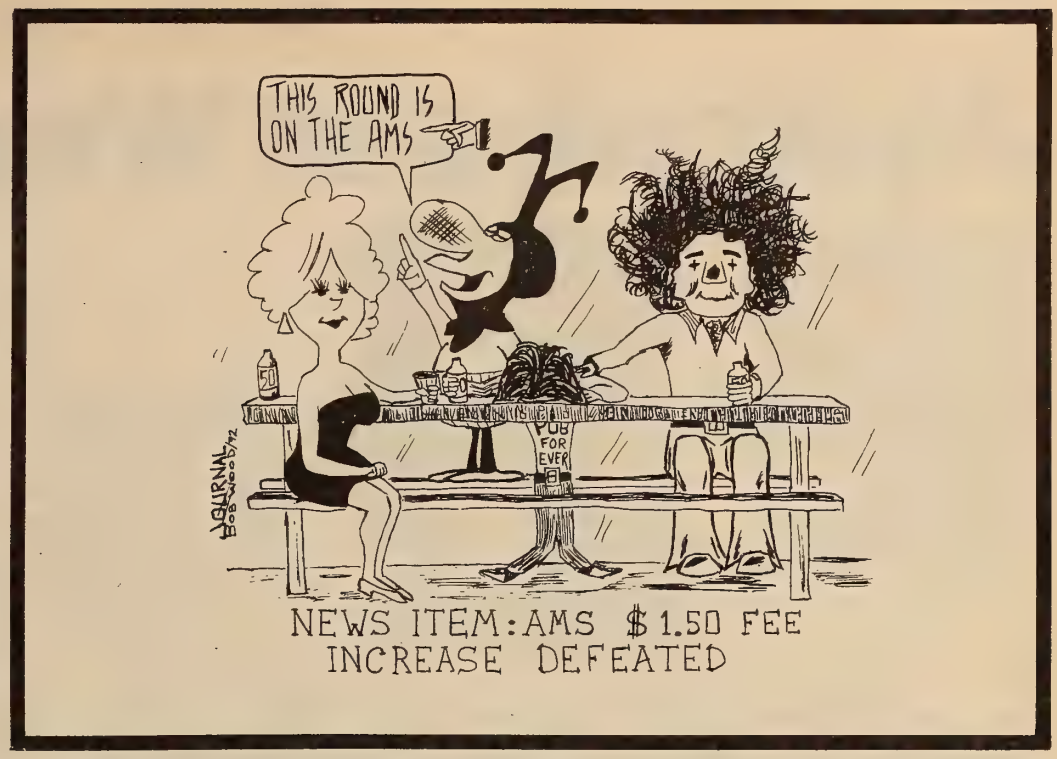
Saskatchewan students who marched on the provincial legislature on November 24 received few concessions in their fight for parity campus autonomy and a restructuring of the Board of Governors to include an equal number of students, faculty and community representatives.

After meeting with the student representatives Saskatchewan premier Alan Blakeney suggested that a compromise might be reached which would meet the students demands and still meet "the minimum requirements for some supervisory position if only with respect to semesters which a government with respect to a provincial university must have."

Blakeney stated that he would meet with a student committee to discuss proposed changes in the University Act but that the government would proceed "pretty gingerly" to avoid incringement on academic freedom.

National Farmers' Union representative Jack McCloy told the demonstrating students that the NFU supports their demands for a university that will "truly serve the people of Saskatchewan." Ron Ruth of Regina Allied Printing Trades told students that he supports an alliance between the two groups.

Blakeney later complemented the students on the disciplined manner in which the demonstration was conducted.



editorial

AMS fee increase defeated

The AMS fee increase was defeated for the third time in as many years. Presumably the AMS and those who hoped to get more money from them will complain about apathetic students who won't support anything. Perhaps this is true, and certainly a number of worthwhile projects and activities won't have the money they'd like.

However, another explanation may be offered which is probably less palatable to the AMS executive. It just could be that the majority of members of the AMS, which means all of us don't want to support all these projects with their money. Perhaps they are not impressed with the fact that the AMS bureaucracy costs some $30,000 or about $3.50 per student. The campus may feel that the AMS has in the past spent its money foolishly. (Remember the heffalump - most of the $10,000 came from capital, not current.) funds.

Students on this campus seem willing to pay fees for specific projects. At the same time that the AMS increases have been defeated, they have supported a $3 concert fee and a $4 yearbook fee, both decisively. Somehow, we cannot easily escape the conclusion that the majority is not against higher non-academic fees - they just feel that the AMS will not do anything useful (in the student's opinions) with the money. Certainly they do not seem interested in "more of the same." Council - are you listening?

letters

A complaint

Dear Editor,

The recent letter from the University Centre Users Committee shows that, despite all the proposals for alternative ways of developing the Queen's community, they are still mired in the myth of a large building. They accuse their critics of not having read their reports; with more justice the Committee can be accused of not having thought about the implications of their reports.

The centre they envisage will serve meals to 2,500 people. It will be convertible to an equal-sized night-time drinking facility. The main criticism of the Committee's plan is that any single building serving this many meals for people will not improve the sense of community, but will destroy it. The customers of the services will be an anonymous mass. One of the weaknesses of the present union is that people don't know each other there: making the meal facilities larger will only make this problem worse. Users will be lost in the crowd as the consumers of large-scale services, not parts of a community.

The User's Committee has simply failed to appreciate that the true criticism of their proposal is that it is impossible to improve the cohesion of a community of 13,000 people through a single centre because 13,000 people cannot, and will not, form a cohesive group. Variety, not centralization is needed.

I like eating, and drinking, and I enjoy doing both with my students. But I don't enjoy the present union because it is noisy and anonymous, and the new centre must inevitably be the same.

Apart from this basic criticism, there are many flaws in the Committee's thinking. Every single proposal for a sub-centre, including the one in the Arts-Social Science Complex, has been pushed at them. The Committee has put no creative thought into facilities outside their one building. The Committee has not developed the planning of any sub-centre to the point where they can see how a sub-centre might function and contribute to the Queen's community. If they had done any serious thinking, they would know that a recital hall must be next to the music department, and cannot, as was suggested at their meeting, be located in Ontario Hall.

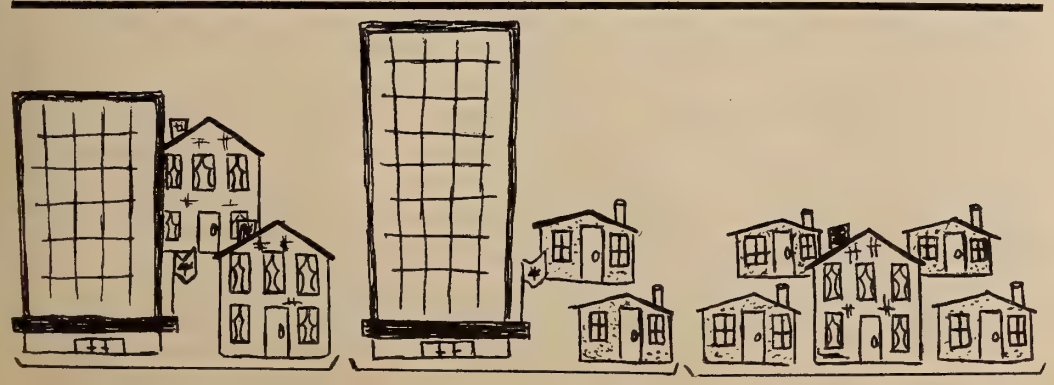
Whether they realize it or not, the main centre they are proposing will take up the bulk of the $3,500,000 which is available for the University Centre. The cost of the proposed bookstore will be 22,000 sq. ft. x $50-sq. ft. - $1,100,00. The other additional 30,000 sq. ft. will cost $1,500,000. Renovations to the present Union "from half a million to one million dollars". Where is the money for sub-centres?

One of the earlier Committee reports proposed that the University would buy Technical Supplies and put this extra money into the Centre. This is not very realistic. Has the Committee considered what other capital projects will have to be foregone if the University gives this sort of indirect subsidy to the large Centre?

This wouldn't be so serious a problem if Queen's, like every other university in Canada, was not under so much pressure to use its financial resources wisely, if Queen's did not face a drastic slowdown in growth, if there was no pressure to make more efficient use of present space, or if, over the next fifteen years, there was any possibility of more funds to develop the rest of the campus. But we are in a period financial stringency, and the User's Committee will fail the University if it cannot prove that its proposals are the best use for the very limited funds.

Some of the questions it should ask are:

1. Can this campus afford a million dollar bookstore? I don't think so; the manager of Technical Supplies expressed his doubts at the Committee's open meeting; but the Committee ignored us both. There are no profits from a bookstore operation to pay for space. If Technical Supplies stays where it is (as I think it will) isn't it sensible to build a sub-centre near it?
2. Will sub-centres really separate faculties? Supposing one was built near Technical Supplies. The nearest departments are: Chemistry, Geology, Psychology, Medicine, Drama, Theology, Modern Languages and Electrical Engineering. If one was built near the Agnes Etherington Art Centre, the nearest departments would be: Art, Music, Physics, Humanities, Mathematics, and Civil Engineering. How much more of a mix do they want? How much more is possible? Isn't it better to build small communities where there is some likelihood of seeing the same people frequently and developing personal relationships than to build a large anonymous mass food-factory?
3. Does the need for a university wide management committee and administrative staff mean there must be a single main centre? I doubt it.
4. Does the fact that "a large scale survey has shown that a very large majority of people in the University want and would use the facilities proposed for the Centre" also show that they want one large centre? Probably not. It only shows they want the facilities. They might prefer decentralization.



So far the User's Committee have been very resistant to suggestions that they might be on the wrong track. They argue that Queen's is becoming a large university and hence needs one centre. They ignore the experience of University of Toronto, which went through this same process and completely abandoned the idea of a centre for the proposal of "the campus as a campus centre". This tunnel vision would be less worrying if Queen's had the money to correct mistakes in planning. But Queen's hasn't, and the Committee has a duty, which it has neglected, to consider all alternatives seriously to get the best results from limited resources.

I would suggest that an appropriate construction programme would be:

1. The gradual development of sub-centres.
2. Improvements to existing space in the residences. For instance, why not a small pub in the basement of Victoria Hall?
3. Renovation of the Union.
4. No other large-scale construction whatsoever.

The Committee might find, if it followed this plan, that it could build more, and a much greater variety of facilities than it is now considering.

Yours sincerely,
C.E.S. Franks

As the Senate approved it — As the User's Committee discusses it — As others suggest

Needs survey

Dear Editor,

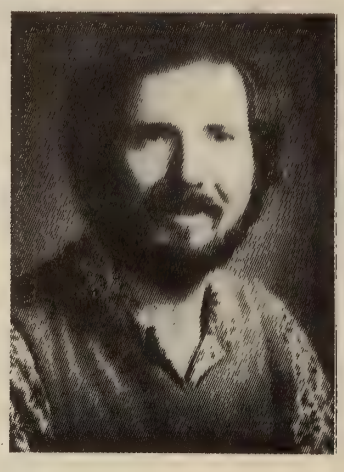
You inquired about the survey referred to in our letter about the University Centre. The "Queen's University Centre Needs Survey" was carried out during 1970-71 for the Planning Study, to assess the need for various services and facilities, including commercial facilities on campus. The sample consisted of 674 students, 136 faculty and staff. One question was "If the following services were provided in a central location on campus, how often would you use them? " For some of the facilities, the responses were as follows:

Bank: Frequently 80 per cent, Infrequently 9 per cent, Rarely 4 per cent, Never 7 per cent.

Barber - Hairdresser; Frequently 16 per cent, Infrequently 26 per cent, Rarely 27 per cent, Never 31 per cent.

Drug Store: Frequently 57 per cent, Infrequently 27 per cent, Rarely 11 per cent, Never 5 per cent.

Dry Cleaner; Frequently 29 per cent, Infrequently 29 per cent, Rarely 20 per cent, Never 20 per cent.



These figures are over-all percentages; student interest was higher, faculty interest was lower in these facilities. While there may be insufficient interest to justify some services (in which case they won't exist, as no businessman will operate them), we think that it is clear that majority of students would like some commercial facilities, particularly a bank, on campus.

Anyone who wishes to see the survey results is welcome to do so.

Yours sincerely,
Dan Norman
Chairman
University Centre Users' Committee

Sydenham Ward Elects Tw

Kenneth Rowley

Kenneth Rowley who is contesting the aldermanic seat in the Sydenham Ward feels that there is "no way one can escape the responsibility of representation; it is like death and taxes." He believes that students who constitute eighty per cent of the vote in the Sydenham Ward deserve a representative voice on city council.

"Students as soon as they step off the train or bus each year automatically make themselves citizens of the Kingston community and as such should have an effective voice on city council" Mr. Rowley commented.

He went on to state that Queen's students can no longer withdraw into themselves, "the university provides a learning experience but the day of the university as an 'ivory tower' is long over...Kingston is Queen's and Queen's is Kingston." Viewing Queen's students as an integral and active part of the Kingston community, he wants to challenge them to face up to their need for representation in city hall. Rowley emphasized that "The young person's view, his needs and demands should be felt in city council and this is my purpose in running for alderman. The student, who lives here for three or four years owes as much to Kingston, as Kingston owes them."

It is impossible he felt to avoid involvement as a citizen of Kingston for as soon as you complain about poor bus service or inefficient snow removal one becomes involved in the outside community. He noted that students, who form a large majority of the electorate in Kingston have been ignored too long on city council. He sees one of the largest problems to overcome is the high rents poor housing conditions and the number of absentee landlords in this ward. Rowley stressed that the violators involved should be dealt with strongly by using such legislation as the landlord tenant act, building code or the public health act to stop "the student from being constantly ripped off."

Adding that he has had previous experience dealing with council and successfully lobbying for the passing of new legislation he stated "You can't beat city hall outside pounding on the front door; you beat city hall inside the door."

Regarding the impact of the summer Olympics upon the city's facilities and financial resources he raised the question of priorities and expressed the concern that the money might be spent more wisely and effectively in different areas. He only saw its feasibility if "it cost the city nothing or no more than $5 to each tax payer." Areas that need closer attention he thought were welfare recipiants and particularly for better recreational and other services for Kingston's senior citizens. As an alternative to holding the Olympics in the Portsmouth area, he speculated upon having the site at Cataraqui Basin. He argued that this piece of land is less expensive and the area is already dredged. Most important he stressed that the facilities in Cataraqui would be much more accessible for the entire public's use afterwards and prevent the possibility as he termed it of a "rich man's Portsmouth."

He expressed apprehension concerning the city's ability to successfully accomodate the Olympics. Moreover, he seemed suspicious of Mayor Swain's resignation at this time stating "If Swain brought it, why didn't he stay around to finish it?" Mr. Rowley felt that the distinct lack of mayorality candidates indicated that others are scared of the issue blowing up. However, he noted another reason is the lack of financial reinbursement for the office of mayor. He viewed it as a position which should be run by a professional and salaried accordingly.

Also raised was the issue of downtown development when Rowley claimed that Olympic funds should be "put into redeveloping the downtown core." With an already disturbing number of bankruptcys of downtown businesses he felt that the Princess Street sector should be saved from its present rate of deterioration. He advocates an inner city structure characteristic of older European cities. In addition to a general clean up of the streets and elimination of motor vehicles, he suggested pedestrian malls and further recreational facilities for the people.

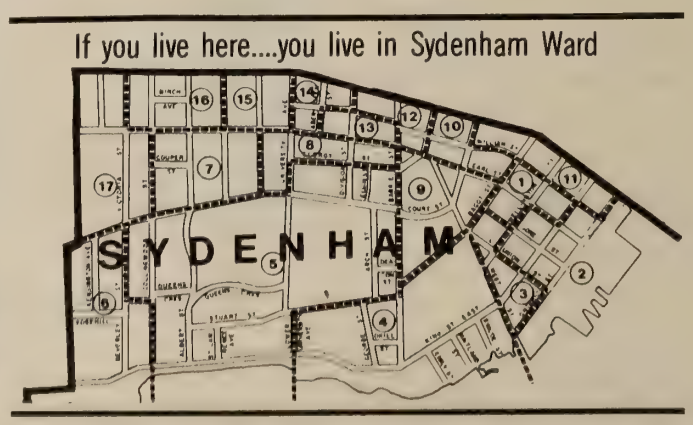
Mr. Rowley firmly believes that the city should be for the people. He went on to evaluate the Teron waterfront project in terms of this dictum claiming the control of the project should be in the hands of the elected council members to prevent it from serving only the interests of the developer. "We don't need another Tower of Babylon," he said.

If elected Mr. Rowley will have an open meeting on campus where students could make direct contact of their problems and demands to their councilman. He intends in sending out newsletters and keeping close contact with the AMS. He would like to prevent a new student union complex from destroying relations with downtown businessmen by its setting up competing enterprises such as clothing stores and boutiques on campus.

Mr. Rowley felt that he has had close association with the varied social agencies in Kingston as a resident over the past years with which he could bring first hand experience to council in their facing problems such as crime, drug abuse and welfare difficulties.

Keith Norton

Keith Norton, a lawyer and teacher, comes across as a man with a sophisticated grasp of the city's problems and a set of imaginative solutions to them. He speaks with a great deal of knowledge and insight on all the election issues.



The problem of tax-exempt property is part of the larger problem of the tax structure. Property tax is far too narrow a tax base as a source of revenue for urban municipalities. As short term solutions, Norton advocates increased government grants to cover non-taxable land and programmes to attract industry to Kingston. However, he sees the long-range answer in a concerted effort on the part of all municipalities to persuade higher levels of government to create a flowback of income and other taxes to urban areas. Municipalities are burdened with far too many responsibilities which cannot be adequately financed by property taxes alone.

He is in favour of the city's participation in the Olympics providing that Kingston does not get stuck with a bad tab. While the city can only afford about 10 per cent of the cost, it does have a commitment from the provincial government. Although the federal government has refused a grant for the games, federal funds are available are available for harbour development. If the city receives the development grants and provincial funds, Norton believes that the city would only have to put enough to provide the staff to run the events. Revenue from harbour rents after the games could run to between fifty to one-hundred thousand dollars a year. The total Olympic debt could be discharged over a period of five to ten years.

Norton believes the only sensible solution to the high crime rate to lie in a treatment of its source. Because of the close relationship between the drug problem and breaking and entering charges, he feels that the city must acknowledge the drug problem, particularly speed. The known pushers could be picked up immediately and the city should provide adequate treatment facilities. Norton sees the immediate answer in an augmented police force and the release of officers from desk work through the creation of a permanent clerical staff. There are some evenings when only two or three constables are on patrol.

Norton thinks that it would be a mistake to drop the ward system. Alderman would no longer have specific responsibilities for specific areas and North Kingston would probably lose its share of representation on city council.

He does not feel that there is really any significant difference between the interests of students and those of local residents. Housing, for example, affects all and he advocates a strict enforcement of Kingston's housing standard bylaw. Norton also envisages a rent review board consisting of tenants and landlords can work together to raise the quality of life in Kingston.

Angus Ross

"Students at Queen's have been apathe the past but the drive to get the student v
the upcoming municipal elections thro great deal of responsibility on their should Angus Ross, a teacher of enviromental d at St. Lawrence College, feels that stu should examine their ward and participa they constitute the bulk of the vote.Shou become an alderman, Ross would like t programmes established to integrate stu with the city. He has supervised a vironmental studies project in past sum and feels that such programmes make stu feel a part of the city.

Ross sees the high crime rate as one c

"I am not running to be the student rep c city council," Jim Thompson told the Jou
A former Queen's student, Thompson is n employee of Bell Canada. "Kingston some life. I know I can give it some of the t it needs," he said.

It is time the city "got moving," Thom said, adding that Kingston seemed to
"tired city, relying heavily on the 'histo
Kingston' and tourism aspect for its ec ce." With the high enemployment in Kin
"we need a highly energetic industrial mission to get things going."

"We must find out what needs to be don head the city in some definite direction said, adding that "we need better planning organization, perhaps in the form of a year plan." He cited an example of this la planning and forethought. Johnson street resurfaced this past summer. This fall, wit changes in the sewage system being troduced, it was necessary to tear the stre again. "Planning could have avoided this said.

Thompson stated that the university's p on expansion and growth was a good one Queen's were to grow much more, it woul much of its distinctness and many of its qualities would be lost," he commented.
bounds for its expansion have been set d
"We know where its going now," he add

In his opinion "something within the p force is going wrong." The police commi is very "heavy on the bureaucracy. Two are doing one man's job." As an example waste of manpower, Thompson could no
the necessity of stationing one police outside Joe and Paul's. Are they only to that the people get in and out okay?" he as

Thompson emphasized that the studen
Queen's must be concerned in muni politics, "as citizens of the community."
added, "they can't hide behind Queen's."

Aldermen on December 4

st important issues in the election. Although re policemen are needed, he feels that new as are necessary as well. He would like to plainclothes men patrol parks and more cemen out of cruisers. The possibility of ng an auxiliary police force, such as the P, should also be examined.

oss would like to see the Olympic sailing nts held in Kingston but feels that the city make no commitment until the financial blems are settled. It would be impossible for gston to pick up the tab.

lthough the abolition of the ward system ld be desirable from an elitist point of view, s believes that this would tend to undermine representation of local people in North ingston. The most desirable arrangement ld be a modified system combining one resentative from each ward and seven rmen elected city-wide.

the problem of tax exempt property, Ross ld like to see increased grants to cover versity and government property. Although city is presently receiving grants, they are ay near commensurate with the increased to Kingston tax-payers.

Jim Thompson

ct of municipal government is profound and cannot be ignored," he said. Nor can the icipality ignore the students, as they resent 16 per cent of the population of gston.

hompson also said that for him the primary tion of hosting the Olympic Sailing events not the same as that of the city. The city, he ned "tends to see the Olympics as an event will put Kingston the map, as an in- ment in the realm of tourism." This is not ly as important, Thompson claims, as is opportunity for improvements in the city the event may provide." He emphasized "the people of Kingston should be proud to in Kingston. The event is not being hosted for the sake of others knowing that there is gston to live in."

hompson has had experience in council ations at Queen's and in a small scale in icipal councils. "I have been a student and I can well-represent the students in nham ward. I am also a working person can relate to those working persons in the l. I have an interest in the issues. I want to omething to get Kingston going."

hompson stressed that "the election does n something." He added that those who n't been enumerated may obtain the right te in the election by going to either 19 n Street or 86 Clarence in the Clerk's office obtaining the appropriate certificate e Dec. 4.

Nancy Foster

"Decisions must be made in the light of the effect or change they will have in the future for the residents of Kingston. They are not being dealt with in this manner at the present time," stated Nancy Foster. Former Chairman and Member of the City Planning Board, housewife and mother, Mrs. Foster hopes to be elected alderman in Sydenham Ward in the December 4 municipal elections.

In her door to door campaign she was made aware of a number of problems which the students complained to her about. Between Barrie Street and University Ave. There seems to have become a student ghetto and most of the students I talked with felt that they missed having more variety in the types of residents around their area, such as families with children," she said.

"Any bad felling which Kingston residents may have had aginst Queen's students is mostly gone," she commented adding that, "Now that Queen's has officially told the city the limits and bounds for their programme of expansion, the residents are less fearful and there is less resentment."

With the large amount of tax exempt property in the area, including Queen's University, Kingston will have to get money for the municipality elsewhere.

Mrs. Foster felt that, "The provincial government could supply special purpose grant, or money could come from the federal government; but only if they took a more active role in urban affairs." Also she stated that, "Grants in lieu of taxes might be made available."

When queried about the problem of rent control for housing in the ward she stressed that, "A high rent area is an administrative nightmare and beyond the ability of the city to control."

Mrs. Foster hopes that the Teron waterfront development scheme will bring residents to the downtown area.

"The city of Kingston because of the zoning by-laws in which the land is situated, has virtually no control over Mr. Teron, the developer. If he decides to sell it, which is a possibility with the increase of its price on the market, could lead to trouble. Because of the zoning by-laws in the area, industrial development is a grim but very real possibility," she said.

In answer to the current situation she stated that, "To revitalize the Princess Street district, the Kingston Businessman's Organization should become more active." She noted that, "It character is changing; there are more specialty shops now."

When asked about the feasibility of making a pedestrian mall of Princess Street she commented realistically that, "It would never be approved in council, because one would have to fight the old established attitudes which are entrenched for a long time to come."

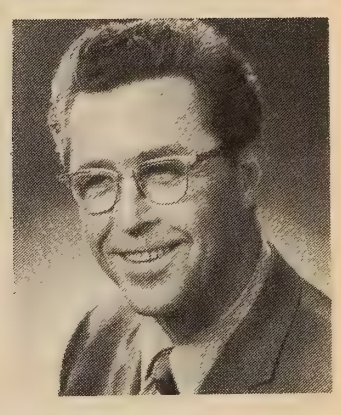
She added that, "A solution to this problem is to have all decisions made by the Planning Board well thought out before hand and then brought before council for ratification. All areas and questions should be thoroughly researched to see what their future effects upon the city would be."

MRS. Foster believed that, "If the decisions are well thought out in advance the city will be in a greater position of strength and will be able to take a firm stand when developers come upon the scene. The city would not then be left in the weak position of having to make arbitrary decisions."

Stressing that decisions and policy, at the present time in council are not interrelated, Mrs. Foster stated that, "Decisions in council are made in a vacuum; the planning arm of council is not active enough."

This need for consultation earlier in the game, also covers decisions being made now by Queen's concerning the new Students' Union Complex which will effect students in a number of years. Mrs. Foster further stated that, "This is the time when future problems such as the effects upon the residential area, traffic control and the viability of commercial space should be dealt with at the Users' Committee level.

Mrs. Foster did not feel that Queen's was deliberately trying to avoid the city. She emphasized that "Liaison between city representatives, students and administrators at the design committee level is essential to prevent any further segreation of students from the city of Kingston."



"The Olympic question is up in the air," she said but that "There should be no waste at all if its future use is designed into it right now, thereby creating maximum public exposure."

Mrs. Foster asserted that, "It was worth spending some money to have the Olympics, for the redevelopment of the Portsmouth area would be worthwhile for Kingston residents."

Mrs. Foster claimed that, "Variety and balance are the essential ingredients for the preservation of Sydenham Ward as a residential area where they will be life and hope in the community."

She concluded the interview by saying, "I realize that my concept of urban redevelopment for Kingston is to some a deeply conservative stand, but I do not deny the need for change. Residents of Kingston and in Sydenham Ward should have a wide variety of choice in their urban environment."

Jim Cook

W. T. J. Cook, the incumbent alderman in Sydenham ward wants to make Kingston " a better place in which to live and work."

"This city must increase and promote industry for the area in the hope of helping in the tax structure and of improving the unemployment situation in Kingston," he stated. "An aggressive industrial commission must be set up," he said, adding that, "the council must not sit idly by."

With such a policy of aggressive action in industrial ventures he claimed the city's property taxes would not increase. "They are high enough now," Cook emphasized. Cook also thought it reasonable to expect "more and better provincial grants, in order to offset inflation." There is, in Kingston a relatively high percentage of tax exempt land.

Sydenham ward contains the university land and a good percentage of the residents of the ward are students. Cook felt that the problem of the university's expansion has been dealt with successfully. "We now have designated the area into which the university will eventually expand," he commented. "The city has established a high level of communication with the university. The council is informed of its plans and works in coordination with the administration. We have complete liaison with the university."

Cook also stated that "relations with Queen's are generally very good," adding that "we are very fortunate in this respect."

"The same liaison exists today with the hospitals", he said. "We are aware of proposals and plans for expansion. The municipal planning department is being kept up-to-date."

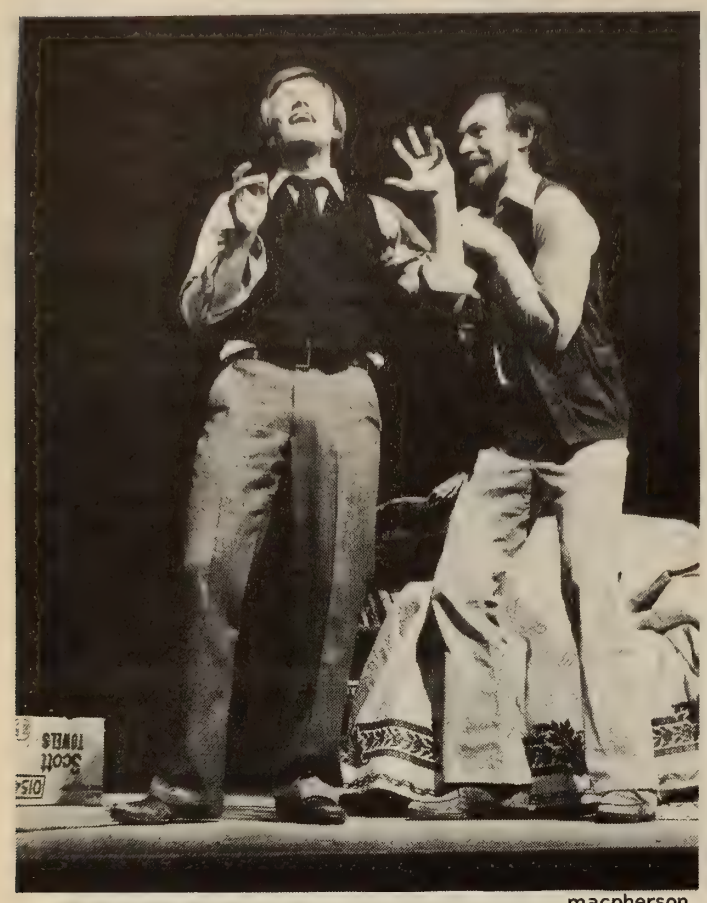
There have been reports that the police department will soon be undergoing some changes. When questioned on this matter Cook explained "we must not forget that the police commission is a partial entity. Although the council supplies the money for its operation, it is difficult to legislate the policy of the police commission." Cook however did verify the fact that the commission was looking at the operation of the police department and that certain recommendations would be coming forth. He added that "until the reports are in, we cannot make any statement." One recent improvement in the police operation was that of taking the police away from the enforcement of parking regulations.

This past summer alderman Cook was a member of the delegation from Kingston that travelled to Kiel, Germany to look over the facilities that were used in the Olympic sailing events last summer. Cook stressed that "we must realize that the Kingston Olympic sailing facilities could not be related to the Olympic structures in Kiel."

Although there is sufficient accommodation at present for participants, judges and the like, Cook outlined the need for more and improved facilities for the equipping, launching, and storing of boats. "These costs cannot be assumed by the city: we just aren't big enough," he said.

The city has already received a committment from the Ontario government for the sum of $500,000 for the purchase of land. He also though it reasonable to expect a grant from the federal government for the construction of a breakwater and for the dredging of the harbour. "The question is--where will we get the rest of the money?" he added.

If a contribution is made by the city, "it would involve a change in the priorities of our capital budget," he explained. "Something slated for 1977 might have to be moved forward and another project moved back."



Cook talked of improvements already taking shape in the sewage system.

"In order to make Kingston a better place to live and work we must take a good look at the proposals or things won't get any better," Cook said.

Interviews by

Patricia Devitt Martin Jones Susan de Stein

"Green Julia" proved to be lively and amusing

- macpherson

Daniel Buccos and Stephen Hair in "Green Julia."

by Paul Gompertz

On Friday and Saturday of last week the newly-formed Kingston Theatre Company presented Paul Ableman's "Green Julia" in Convocation Hall. When fumbling for a key to its relative success or failure, I came across in the recesses of dramatic history, this early piece of directorial instruction; "If you mouth it, as many of our players do, I had as lief the town crier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hands, thus, but use all gently, for in the very torrent, tempest, and (as I may say) whirlwind of your passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance that may give it smoothness."

It is a pity that Michael Kronenwetter, the director, did not manage a twentieth century version of this sound piece of advice, for the production, far from being weak, was much too strong. If the actors had used the physical facets of the play a little more gently, then the worlds would not have been so smothered. For it is primarily a linguistic play, and the words demand priority, despite the seeming disparity between the 'real life' and the 'game', the linguistic development of the play is carefully organised and must be granted 'a temperance that may give it smoothness.'

Unfortunately, the actors and director saw fit to indulge the play's potential for visual, physical humour, and by exaggerating the vagaries of verbal and physical delivery, they created a brittle, surface, production which belied the more subtle qualities of the play. It was hard to believe two characters who had been indulging in a private game for five years would do so in such a theatrical fashion; it was even harder to believe they should have such an awareness of their appeal to an audience. Consequently, the heavy-handed acting, though well-done and interesting per-se, overbalanced the play and detracted from much of the clever linguistic humour. The wit of the lines was lost in the idiosyncracy of the delivery, since much of their humour derives from the incongruity between them and the students who speak them. By putting them into strange and exaggerated situations, the 'dry' humour became flooded, and the bite of the lines was lost.

Some of the best moments in the play came in the rare periods of relaxation, and Stephen Hair in particular caught on occasion a mood of delivery which allowed full play to the mental gymnastics of the relationship and which would have served the whole play much better.

There was also a noticeable lack of development through the play which was again the fault of the mode of acting. The play attempts, by implication, to summarise the nature and development of the two students' five years of cahabitation, and the intricate balance of the relationship should be far more apparent than it was. Its absence made the last section of the play less than effective; it represented a sudden plunge into significance rather than the end of a gradual slide.

Nevertheless, both Danny Buccos, as Jake, and Stephen Hair, as Bob, evinced an energy and talent which kept this production lively and amusing, shallow though it may have been. They showed if their abilities can be better harnessed, and not allowed to run a rather self-indulgent course, they have considerable potential, and as the first venture of this new company, the production had much to commend it.

This is your city!

George Speal urges you to know the candidates and vote on Dec. 4

For your information -- George Speal attended Queen's obtaining a Bachelor of Commerce in 1954 -- graduated from law in 1958 and shortly thereafter set-up private law practice -- has had seven years continuous service as alderman for Victoria Ward -- has served as City Council representative to the AMS -- chairman of the Kingston Planning Board -- Governor of Kingston General Hospital --

For experienced leadership and dedicated Service

George SPEAL for Mayor	X

For any information concerning your eligibility to vote, call the Speal Headquarters at 546-3141

classified

WHAT IS BUFFALO CHIPS? Snowball Variety Night '73. We need acts and musical talent of all kinds. For information, call Steve, Tom, or Dave at 544-9381 or Charles at 549-1941.

ELROND IS MORE THAN a residence. By allowing members to manage things themselves, Elrond educates people in practical experience. Come learn how to manage an operating budget of more than half a million dollars, run a co-operative kitchen, or plan an education programme which will educate you. People with just BA's need experience these days you know.

SNOW JOB II - Queen's Ski Club presents the last beer bash of the term, Saturday, December 2; 8 pm in Grant Hall. All welcome, free admission.

primitives write contemporary canada

by Steven Winnett

Dr. Eli Mandel, Professor of English at York University, spoke Wednesday afternoon to an audience of about 60 in Watson Hall on "Contemporary Primitives" in Canada, with particular reference to the work of Bill Bissett. Dr. Mandel's (well structured) "rambling remarks" grew out of certain statements he made in his introduction to Poets of Contemporary Canada:

"Perhaps the ultimate temptation of the contemporary mind is primitivism. It is an imagination that seeks to express itself in the minimal, in speech, design, personality, a spare poetry as laconic as form itself. And yet, like primitive art, it is capable of moments of pure extravagance. . "

Bill Bissett has a special spelling, language, and grammar in his poems, which are often physically cast in the shape of emblems. He is noted for long incantatory lines, variations on one or two lines, and his own drawings of mask-like faces and dancing figures. Dr. Mandel paid tribute to Bissett's artistic integrity: "No writer in this country has gone further, paid a higher price, worked more consciously and seriously in the cause of a vision which has possessed him. He has a feeling for the magical world which might be released if we break out of the order of civilization." (Which, for Bissett, is synonymous with "America" and with "imperialism in society and language")

Contemporary Canadian poetry, said Dr. Mandel, generally exhibits two kinds of primitivism: (1), the formal sense, the use of a distinct literary form; and (2) the symbolic sense, the use of the figure of the Indian and Eskimo in poetry.

Formal primitivism involves the breaking apart of one kind of literary form, by breaking down grammar, sentence structure, spelling. Says Bissett: "You can live without the imperial sentence." The poem can be seen as spatial form, where the silences are as important as the words. Or, formal primitivism might be found in the minimal poetry of Bowering and Coleman, who try to say as little as possible. In another sense, formal primitivism can provide a poetry close to the poetry of an oral culture, particularly in its use of the chant, "a vision quest, an hypnotic use of words that will bring us directly into phase with the universal rhythm." Or, a spare poetry can be minimal in its use of personality, as in the work of Margaret Atwood.

Symbolic primitivism,on the other hand, makes use of the magical, psychological qualities connoted by the figure of the Indian or Eskimo. The source of much of the creative power behind such literature, said Dr. Mandel, is that "we are given the image of the primitive not to think about, but to contemplate. It stares out at us, like some vast god-like mask."

The danger of symbolic primitivism, according to Dr. Mandel, is sentimentalizing, a fault found by one of his students (an Indian herself) with John Newlove's much-anthologized poem, "The Pride", which she argued was a lie because "we are not all Indians."

An even greater danger is that the poet, having put on the mask of God, will be destroyed by the role - he will forget he is wearing the mask. Thus Leonard Cohen told Dr. Mandel that he almost died after the completion of Beautiful Losers - he saw the danger in the demonic nature of the novel.

"For Bill Bissett," said Dr. Mandel, "the demonic is technological plastic society. The divine is nature as a mother (see his poem, "no one owns the earth"). The danger is that the act of putting on the mask becomes as demonic as that against which we struggle."

Dr. Mandel, to remind his audience of the seriousness of the issue ("Poetry is not a game") quoted two lines from one of his new poems:

Is it how easily a camera kills
Makes us praise poetic sensitivity?

Kinsmen's Kismet is entertaining!

by Sandy Naiman

The Kinsmen Club of Kingston presented a rather elaborate production of the Robert Wright - George Forrest musical Kismet and took an enthusiastic audience into the realm of the Arabian Nights with pomp and ceremony last Saturday evening.

The demands of the show were more than met musically with three very fine singing leads, particularly in the case of John Davies whose richly mellow operatic voice and profuse physical energy kept both the pace of the show and its comic vulgarities moving throughout.

As Hajj, the Poet, he managed to manipulate his feats of wizardry and deceit with utmost aplomb and relish. He never lost his beguiling devilishness and so won over both the aristocracy of Bagdad and the Kingston audience as well.

As his deprived daughter, Marsinah, Gillian McConnell sang beautifully the two hit songs of the show, Baubles, Bangles and Beads, and Stranger in Paradise. C. Alan Anderson, as the Caliph, her romantic lead, although physically and in his straight acting, most believable, was not strong enough in his singing roles and was almost inaudible, particularly when performing with the ensemble in the second act opening number, Night of my Nights.

As the serio-comic villian, Garry Roberts was clearly most appealing when singing Was I Wazir backed with some charming choreography by director choreographer Bob LaCrosse, whose choreogrphy throughout, and particularly of the Princesses of Ababu was very well executed and polished.

Annabelle McCullough as the sleasy-seductive wife of the Wazir, Lalume, as both musically and dramatically competent in her role. She sang Rehadlakum, while seducing Hajj, beautifully and her delivery of some well chosen one liners was impeccable.

Clearly the highlights of the evening were in the parade of goregous costumes and the numerous sets designed by Mary Lou Brown. Although the sets tended towards a flat one dimensional design in some cases, they were exquisitely coloured and intriguing to watch. The costumes of the ensemble as well as the actors were numerous and delightfully designed and provided much of the visual splendour of the production.

Bob LaCrosse's direction and staging of Kismet was both inovative and well rehearsed. Scenes moved quickly and cleanly and the overall polish of the production made it most entertaining.

Musical comedy is almost always a sure fire way of pleasing an audience. It has both visual and auditory elements which rarely fail to entertain and the Kinsmen have once again provided Kingstonians with an evening of enjoyment.

It is encouraging to note as well that although the cast is primarily an amateur one, with excellent direction and musical accompaniment they have given us a performance which is more than acceptable, which is in fact, quite appealing.

CFRC am-fm

This week's special programs

CFRC-FM, 91.9
HIGHLIGHTS

Thursday, November 30th
8:30 More Fun With The Scherzo: Form and structure in western music. Tonight a study of the sonata.
10:00 The Spoken Word: Ezra Pound reads from his Cantos.

Friday, December 1st
6:30 The Baroque Program: Chamber music and lieder by Mozart, Ives and Haydn.

Saturday, December 2nd
8:00 Music Canada: Canadian artists and orchestras perform music by Beethoven and Brahms.

Sunday December 3rd
5:00 The Cleveland Orchestra in Concert: Eugene Ormandy conducts the Cleveland Orchestra with Phyllis Curtin, soprano and Helen Watts, contralto, in Mahler's Symphony No. 2 in C "Resurrection".

panicdays

Tuesday, November 28

7:30 pm - Drama Department presents Chronicles 15, The Private Ear by Peter Shaffer. Tickets free at the Drama Department. Performance in room 102, Old Arts Building.

8:00 pm - Math Smoker, House of Commons. Admission 30c. Beer 3-$1.00. All welcome.

8:30 pm - Meeting of the Kraft Boycott Committee. 2nd floor common room of Students Union.

9:00 pm - Le Cinema Quebecois presents Mon Amie Pierrette. (Directed by Jean-Pierre Lefebvre, 1968). Ellis Hall.

Wednesday, November 29

7:30 pm - Department of Drama presents Chronicles 15, The Private Ear by Peter Shaffer. Studio Theatre, Room 102, Old Arts Building. Tickets free at the Drama Department.

8:30 pm - What Shall We Tell Caroline - a play by John Mortimer presented by the Theatre Arts Department of the Faculty of Education. Admission $1.00. Phone 547-6666 for information. Duncan McArthur Hall Theatre.

Thursday, November 30

7:00 and 9:30 pm - Campus Movies presents "8½" by Fellini. Dunning Hall. Admission $1.00.

7:30 pm - Bridge Club meets in MacLaughlin Room, Students Union.

7:30 pm - Medical Sciences Lecture Series presents Aggression, Crime and Society. Panelists H. R. Stewart Ryan (Prof. of Law, Queen's), T.C. Willett (Associate Prof. of Soc., Queen's), Hugh Haley (Psych., Kingston Penitentiary), Robert J. McCaldon (Lecturer in Psychiatry, Kingston Penitentiary). Auditorium Etherington Hall.

7:30 and 9:00 pm - Drama Department presents Chronicles 15, The Private Ear by Peter Shaffer. Studio Theatre, Room 102, Old Arts Building. Tickets free at the Drama Department.

8:00 pm - The Queen's Wind Ensemble under the direction of Prof. Duane Bates and the Queen's Choral Ensemble, under the direction of Prof. Denise Narcisse-Mair present a free concert. Grant Hall.

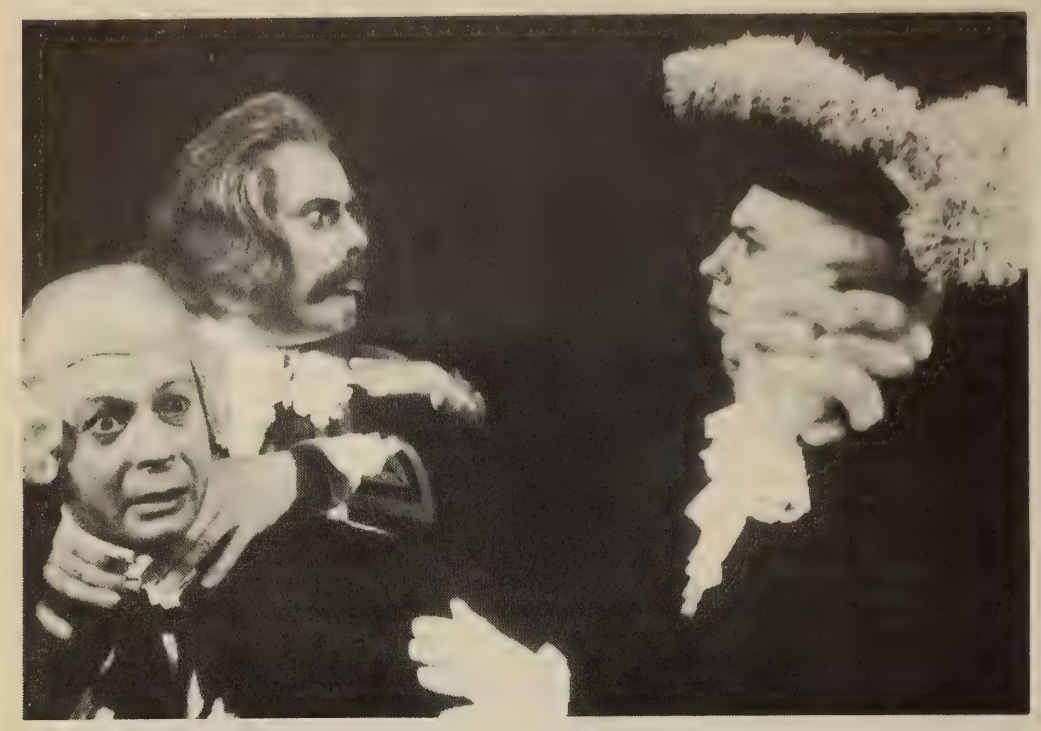
8:30 pm - What Shall We Tell Caroline - a play by John Mortimer presented by the Theatre Arts Department of the Faculty of Education. Admission $1.00. Phone 547-6666 for information. Duncan McArthur Hall Theatre.

9:00 pm - Department of Film Studies, American Screen Masters presents Band Wagon. (Vincente Minelli, 1953). Ellis Hall.

7:00 pm - Meeting for all Ski Club Members going on Christmas trip to Eastern Townships. Games Room, Lower Vic..

Friday, December 1

8:00 pm - G.S.S. Film Club presents I'm No Angel and The Bank Dick with Mae West and W. C. Fields. Ellis Hall.



7:30 and 9:00 pm - Department of Drama presents Chronicles 15, The Private Ear by Peter Shaffer, Studio Theatre, Room 102, Old Arts Building. Tickets free at the Drama Department.

Off Campus
Theatres

Capitol - Swiss Family Robinson. Starting Wed. - Prime Cut.
Hyland - Tuesday - The Rowdy Man. Starting Wed. - To Kill a Clown.
Odeon - Valachi Papers. Starting Wed. - Ulzana's Raid.
Grand Theatre - Kinsmen Club of Kingston presents Kismet - Music and Lyrics by Robert Wright and George Forest. Running Tuesday 28 - Sat. Dec. 2. 8:00 pm.

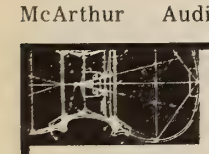
Nov. 27 - Dec. 2 - A Display put on by the Canadian Herpetologists' Society (the study of amphibians and reptiles) consisting of collections of both live and preserved, native and exotic amphibians and reptiles. Woolco Shopping Mall. Sponsored by Kingston, Cornwall and Toronto Chapters.

Le Barbier de Seville - elegant, amusing and professional!

Pierre Megemont, Jean-Claude Barbier and Phillippe de Nambride in Le Barbier de Seville.

by Christopher Todd

The overall test of a good production of Beaumarchais' Barbier de Seville is in its pace, whether it succeeds in keeping the audience continuously amused, as it is carried along by the show of wit and brazen insolence. There was not a lagging moment in the performance by the Treteau de Paris in the McArthur Auditorium on Thursday 23 November. The actors obviously enjoyed their roles; and this enjoyment was shared by the audience, which hardly seemed to notice the two and a half hours the performance lasted, despite the excessive heat in the auditorium.



The producer and the designer, Rene Clermont and Jean-Denis Vivien, are both to be congratulated on their respect for Beaumarchais' plans for total theatre. The songs were rendered with suitable mock expressiveness, and the operatic qualities of Beaumarchais' language in general came across nicely, all the actors taking care to modulate their voices and strike the right tone as the outrageously complicated situations tumbled one upon another.

A great deal of attention was paid to visual effect. The characters were magnificently dressed, especially Almaviva and the mercenary don Bazile. Almaviva was convincingly made up in his various disguises, before appearing in the dazzling brillance of the 18th. century nobleman. Don Bazile looked like a scrawny Church bat, and Jean Antolinos spoke the famous speech on the power of calumny beautifully, using his cloak to underline the birth of false rumour, creeping along the ground and then rising in triumph. Throughout the play, his mitt covered hand was always eloquently positioned in just the right place to accept a bribe.

Beaumarchais' stage directions were given the importance they deserve, and particularly well-handled were the various ballets, the silent and not so silent battles between Bartholo and the other characters over the incriminating letters. One must, however, voice one slight general criticism of the production. Doubtlessly encouraged by a young audience which was a little too eager to laugh at the visual gags, the actors over-stressed a little the farcical side of the play. Bartholo's words were lost as his servants sneezed and snored, something which happened, incidentally, at the first performance of the work in 1775 and which annoyed Beaumarchais intensely. An unpardonable exaggeration came at the end of Act III, with Figaro's physically assaulting Bartholo, by shoving the shaving brush in his mouth. There is no need, the language is already rude enough. This is farce, but it is 18th. century civilised intelligent farce, where words are the only weapons needed in the never ending duels of social intercourse.

The characters were just as they should be. Alain Hitier showed us a sympathetic Almaviva the young ever so young Lindor—with only a hint of the cynical rake that he will become in Le Mariage de Figaro. Figaro—portrayed by Jean-Claude Robbe was his resourceful self, agile, cheeky, and full of the gift of the gab. Hardly ever thrust into the centre of the action, he nevertheless controls all its movements. Francoise Caillaud captured in Rosine the young girl awakening to her first passion. She was like a chirping baby sparrow wanting to take wing. Jean-Claude Barbier carried off well the rather difficult role of old Bartholo, the victim of the others' plots, whose infinite precautions to ensure his marriage to Rosine will be powerless against the rights of youth. There were moments when he made the audience pause for an instant in its laughter, as when he left the stage slowly at the end of Act II, pathetically insisting to Rosine that he would learn to please her, thus reminding us that great comedy is never very far from tragedy; that only the manner of presentation separates them.

Apart from the slight over-indulgence in the farcical elements of the work, one can say that this was a elegant and amusing production of a very funny play by a highly professional troupe of actors, who have already amply proved their worth, and whom we look forward very much to seeing in Kingston again.

Two Concerts This Week

Concert by the Queen's University Wind and Choral Ensembles Grant Hall, 8:00 p.m. Thursday, 30th November 1972.

The first, for this year, of the twice-yearly concerts presented by the Music Department of Queen's University featuring the Queen's University Wind and Choral Ensembles will take place in Grant Hall, on Thursday, 30 November at 8:00 p.m.

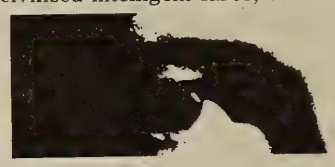
The Wind Ensemble has grown in number of personnel as each of the last three years has added more students to the Bachelor of Music program. It now has forty-five instrumentalists and is under the direction of Dr. Duane A. Bates.

The music in Thursday's concert by the Queen's University Wind Ensemble is representative of a wide-ranging period, dating from 1597 to 1967. Works by Gabrieli, Spohr, William Walton, John Barnes Chance and Norman Dello Joio will be played by the Ensemble of which the Whig Standard reviewer said in April of this year "This is an excellent group and it is now within an eyelash of really dynamic performance".

The Queen's University Choral Ensemble now has eighty-eight voices and is under the direction of Denise Narcisse-Mair who joined the faculty of the Music Department in September of this year.

The Ensemble will sing choral works by Palestrina, Ralph Vaughan-Williams, Gustav Holst, John Rutter and Pat Shaw. In performing "Serenade to Music" by Ralph Vaughan-Williams, the choir will be participating in the world-wide celebrations commemorating the centenary of the birth of that composer. Soloists will be Sharon Keates, soprano; Patricia Jones, alto; Phillips Minty and Craig Tompkins, tenors; and Norman Nurmi, bass. Accompanists are Margaret McLellan and Mark Sirett. There is no admission charge.

Concert by the Collegium Musicum Group of Queen's University 8:30 p.m. Friday, 1st December 1972, Grant Hall.



A taste of the Christmas music of the late Middle Ages will be part of the concert which the Music Department of Queen's University will present in Grant Hall on Friday the 1st December at 8:30. The performers will be the Collegium Musicum group which is made up of 16 vocalists and seven instrumentalists.

The concert features both sacred and secular music of the most prominent English composer, John Dunstable, and the most prominent continental composer, Guillaume Dufay, of their era. In addition, five annonymous 15th century English carols will be sung in middle English. The melodic, rhythmic and textural features of these carols exerted strong influence on the music of Dunstable and Dufay, particularly in their emphasis on the sonorities of thirds and sixths and on first inversion triads in a style known as fauxbourdon.

The music of the Middle Ages features a rich combination of instruments which either double or accompany the voices. Whereas the carols and some of the sacred works are suitable for large ensembles, most of the secular works are genuine chamber music for one or two solo voices with instrumental accompaniment.

The instruments to be used in Friday's performance are modern reproductions based on Medieval and Renaissance models. The Queen's Music Department's collection includes lute, bass gamba, rebec, recorders, cornetti, sackbut, shawm, krummhorn, and a table positive organ. The organ, built recently for the Music Department by Karl Wilhelm, Montreal, will with many of the other instruments be heard in public for the first time in this concert.

As with all events presented by the Music Department, there will be no admission charge.

WHAT SHALL WE TELL CAROLINE?

On Wednesday and Thursday evenings this week, John Mortimer's play "What Shall We Tell Caroline?" will be produced at Duncan McArthur Hall Theatre. Tickets are $1.00 and can be purchased at the door. Curtain time is 8:30 pm.

John Mortimer is probably the best known of the young British playrights. His most recent success "A Voyage Round My Father" is, at the moment, touring North America with a company led by Sir Michael Redgrave.

He is probably best known for his major plays "The Wrong Side of the Park", and "Two Stars for Comfort", but his one-act plays such as "The Dock Brief", "David and Broccoli", "Call Me a Liar", and "Lunch Hour", are also widely performed. Besides the success of "Voyage Round My Father", he has recently adapted for the stage Robert Graves' novel "I, Claudius".

In "What Shall We Tell Caroline" Mortimer has written what still remains in many ways his most completely successful play. Caroline is the enigmatic daughter of Arthur and Lily Loudon, who run Highland Close School, Coldsands, a small and dilapidated boys' prep school. It is her eighteenth birthday, but neither of her parents has noticed she is now nearly a woman. They have been too entangled in the curious emotional menage a trois they share with Tony, the assistant master, who carries on a continuous but merely formal flirtation with Lily (or 'Bin' as her husband calls her).

In terms of his own work Mortimer has said:

"Comedy is to my mind, the only thing worth writing in this despairing age, provided the comedy is truly on the side of the lonely, the neglected, the unsuccessful, and plays its part in the war against established rules and against the imposing of an arbitrary code of behaviour upon individual and unpredictable human beings. There may, for all I know, be great and funny plays to be written about successful lawyers, brilliant criminals, wise schoolmasters, or families where children can grow up without silence and without regret. There are many plays that show that the law is always majestic or that family life is simple and easy to endure.

Hockey Gals down York:; Kirby gets two!

Queen's Gals made an exceptional showing Saturday afternoon against the York University Yeoman.The Queen's Gals ended up on top by a 3-1 count. Queen's girls showed excellent power in puck control but had a definite lack of scoring punch.

During the opening period there were a couple of excellent plays that could have paid off in goals, but Queen's couldn't put the puck in the net. Gael McLeod led 2 rushes that should have been goals, but luck saved York. One one play, Gail started a rush at her own blueline and ended at the York net with the puck but still couldn't score. During the last 30 seconds the lack of scoring punch was very clear, because the Gals missed 4 or 5 excellent chances.

At the start of the second period, it was the same old tale, still no scoring ability. Queen's missed a couple of good scoring chances, especially near the start of the period when they had a three on one break, but because of poor passing, the Gals lost their chance. It was not until 6:42 that Jane Kirby scored on a wrist shot from the point.Queen's again scored at the 14:33 mark,this time on a goal by Karen Howatson.This goal was a rare one; it was one from behind the net. Queen's put on great pressure in leading up to this goal, by controlling the puck in the York zone until the goal was scored.

During the third period, praise must go to Queen's goaltender Wanda Gyde for holding the Gals in the game. She made several key stops that saved the Gals from losing the game. At the beginning of the period, she stopped a shot from point-blank range. She lost her shut-out at the 11:50 mark when a York defenseman scored. At this point in the game, the strong defense of the Gals looked like it might fall apart because they relied heavily on their goaltender to keep them in the game. Wanda Gyde's best stop was on a three man breakaway by York. This was the turning point of the game and from there on, Queen's kept control.

The final goal was scored again by Jane Kirby on a shot from the blue line. This girl deserves to be called the first star of the game because she had an excellent two-way performance in the game. She played particularly well while killing penalties.

Next week, the girls are on the road, meeting McMaster on Friday night and playing a return game against York in Toronto on Saturday afternoon. With a 3-1 mark, in league play, the Gals should do very well in the rest of their season.

Heidelberg

Brewed from pure spring water.

And that's the truth!

LADIES
ELECTROLYSIS
Avoid shaving, tweezing, or the use of dipilatories. Have your eyebrows styled and unwanted hair removed permanently by electrolysis. Physicians recommend our work. For a free consultation and information call:
HARRISON SALON 542-5595

VAN'S

Gifts Books Ltd.
253 Princess Street
542-6676 Kingston

Van's Adult section for
Adult Broadminded People
Adult: books, magazines, films
Adult: accessories, jokes, gifts
Adult: humorous cards & stationery
Adult: "Sex-to-Sexty" & "Super Sex-to-Sexty"
Adult: DeLuxe highgloss coloured posters
Yeah! Yeah! Comest ye all & select your purchase. Itt'll satisfy the soul of good 'harted' Van!
Open 7 days - till 11 pm

Canadian Handcrafted
Fully Briar Pipes
Different up to Date models

GREAT STEAKS

try the

Porterhouse Special

Limited Offer 3.99 Red Brand Beef Only

10 oz RED BRAND aged beef
Baked Potatoe - Vegetable
Rolls and Butter

For $1.40 more you get Soup or Juice - Tossed Fancy Salad (Best salad in town) Beverage and choice of Desert.

Aunt Lucy's Restaurant Tavern

Princess West at Portsmouth
No reservations
Relaxed Informal Dining

Great Place For That Special Date!

1972-73 Career Seminar No. 13

Jointly sponsored by the AMS & Career Planning and Placement

CAREERS IN THE ONTARIO GOVERNMENT

. . . an open discussion conducted by

Mrs. Janet McChesney,
University Liaison Officer

Tuesday, November 28, 1972, 7:00 p.m.

Students' Memorial Union
McLaughlin Room

WHEN IT COMES TO DIAMOND EXPERTISE WE'RE COMPLETELY COMMITTED

We make it our business to know our diamonds. And that's good business. We select every diamond with extreme care. Check each stone for quality of cut, clarity and color. And we'll gladly share our diamond knowledge with you. Show you how to select the most beautiful diamond your money can buy.

KINNEAR d'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO
CANADA

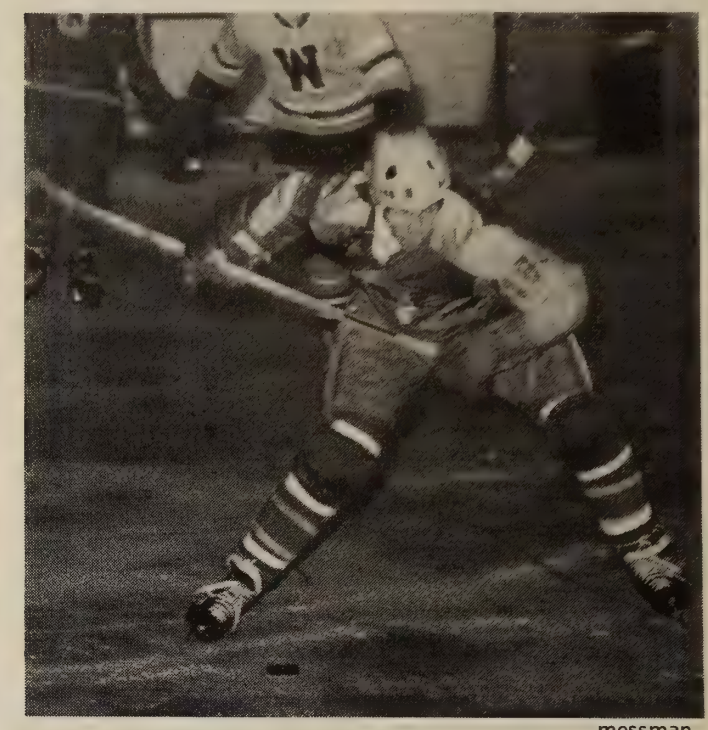
Hockey Gaels win, tie on road

by Peter Watts

Queen's Golden Gaels hockey team picked up a win and a tie in their two weekend games in Kitchener on Friday and Saturday. On Friday night, the Gaels played to a 3-3 tie with the University of Waterloo Warriors. The game was a fairly even one with Queen's dominating the first period and Waterloo holding forth in the second. Queen's led 2-1 after the first period and the two teams were tied at 2-2 after forty minutes. The Gaels regained the lead early in the third but the Warriors tied it up and the Gaels could not get another goal.

The Gaels scored the opening goal of the game at the 6:23 mark of the opening period. Defenceman Steve Gross combined with John Cerre and Dave Hadden to put Queen's in front 1-0. Less than 4 minutes later, the Gaels made it 2-0 as Jim Sunstrum scored on a pass from John Smith. Waterloo got their first goal near the end of the first period and tied the game in the second.

In the third period, Bob Kindon put the Gaels in front by 3-2 at the twenty second mark. Sunstrum and rookie defenceman Chris Clark drew assists on Kindon's goal. However, the Gaels could not hold the lead and Waterloo tied the game mid-way through the period.



The last two Waterloo goals were scored on the power play as penalties hurt the Gaels chances. Queen's had several chances to score on the Waterloo goalie who did not look particularly strong. Queen's coach Bob Carnegie noted that the defence were more successful at clearing the puck from in front of their own goal and at moving it out of their own end.

The Gaels performance was also pleasing to the Queen's coach because Waterloo had looked strong beating McMaster 8-3 and dropping a close 4-3 decision in overtime to the powerful Toronto Blues, in the Hockey Canada Tournament 3 weeks ago.

Saturday will be remembered by Waterloo Lutheran supporters as a particularly black day as far as their sports teams were concerned. At the same time that the football Golden Bears were being defeated 20-7 in the College Bowl in Toronto, the hockey Bears were mauled 6-2 by Queen's. The Gaels looked sluggish in the first period despite the fact that John Cerre got Queen's on the board at the 3:26 mark with assists going to Norm Goulet and Stu Lang. The Bears beat Queen's goalie Clyde Harris twice, however, and led 2-1 after the first period.

The period was highlighted by a fist fight between one of the Lutheran players and right winger Jim Tittemore of the Gaels. Both were thrown out of the game.

The Gaels finally came alive in the second period. Near the twelve minute mark, Jim Sunstrom tipped in a goal mouth pass from Colin Loudon; John Smith also got an assist on the goal. The goal seemed to inspire the Gaels and three minutes later, Sunstrum scored his second goal assisted by Loudon and Lang. It was 3-2 after forty minutes of play.

- mossman

Winger John Smith lines up a slapshot

The third period belonged exclusively to the Gaels as they scored three unanswered goals. Colin Loudon scored at the 4:46 mark with help from Dave Hadden. Less than two minutes later, Dave Melloy fired home a shot after taking a pass from Craig Shannon and Bob Kindon. Kindon completed the scoring at the 15:20 mark of the final period with assists going to Melloy and Shannon.

Clyde Harris played both games in goal for Queen's and did his usual competent job. Coach Carnegie also had praise for right winger Dave Hadden who has shown considerable improvement since deciding to play hockey this year. Hadden did not play hockey last season.

Another performer who is off to probably his best start ever is the veteran Kindon. In the first four games of the regular season, Bob has five goals. Another standout has been classy left winger Jim Sunstrum. Sunstrum, a former star with Loyola, has been getting goals in every game and controls the play anytime he is on the ice. With this type of leadership, Queen's students can look for a much improved hockey team in the remainder of the season. However, last year the Gaels were four games above .500 after January and wound up with 8 wins and 10 losses. Nonetheless this year's team looks stronger and better-balanced than last year's, and with continued improvement in the defensive aspects of the game, Queen's has a good shot at a play-off spot.

The last regular season game before Christmas will be played tonight at the Harty Arena at 8 p.m. The University of Ottawa GeeGees will provide the opposition. The GeeGees were victims of a 12-3 mauling at the hands of the Blues a week ago so they will be ready to get back on the winning track. It should be a good game and we hope that a good crowd will be on hand.

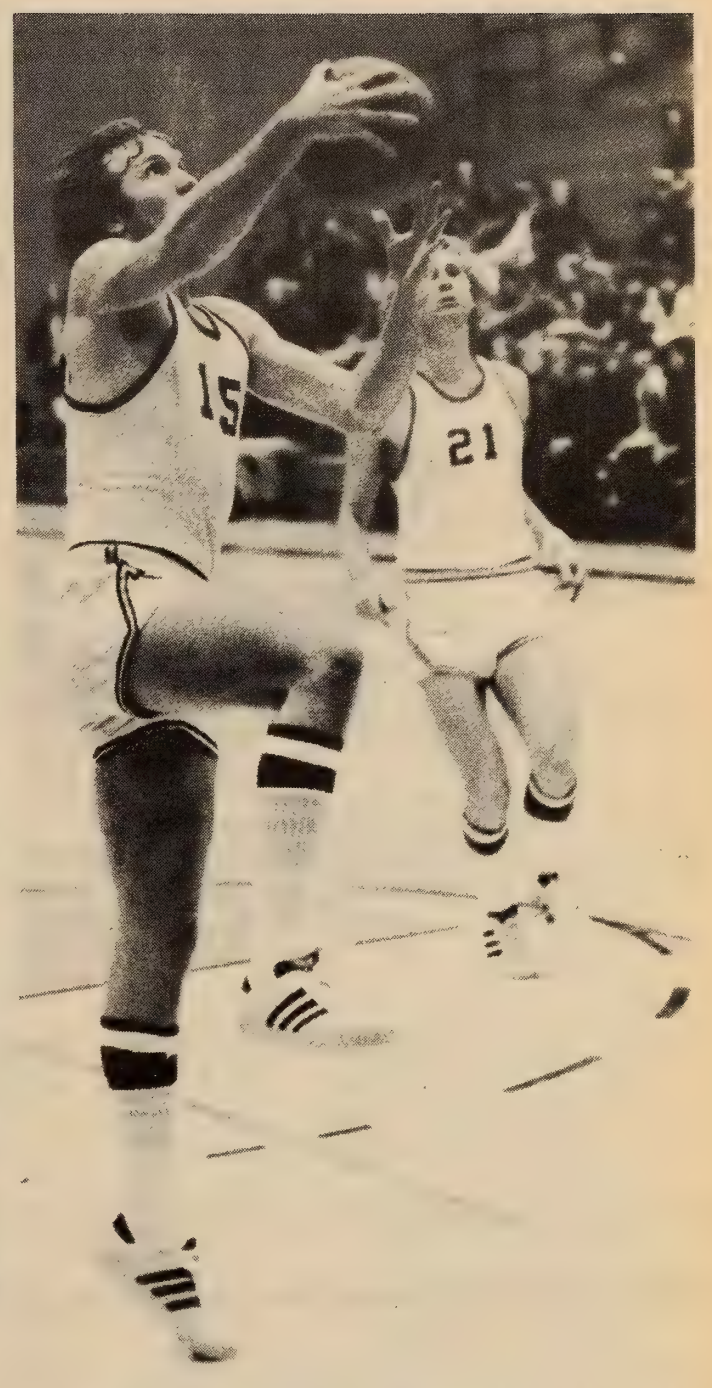
The Gaels will also play an exhibition game on Friday night at the Harty Arena. The visitors will be St. Lawrence University from New York State. St. Lawrence plays in the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Association, one of the top college hockey leagues in the United States. One of the St. Lawrence performers is Gord Rivoire, a former star with the Kingston Junior Frontenacs. Game time Friday night is 8 p.m. at the Harty Arena.

B-ball Gaels take two in weekend play: Toronto, 72-56; Brock, 64-61

by Chris Boon

The basketball Gaels racked up a pair of victories this weekend, dumping Varsity 72-56 in OUAA league action, Friday night, then coming from behind to edge the Brock Badgers 64-61 in a Saturday exhibition contest. The two wins give Queen's a 3-1 overall mark for the season, and an unblemished record in the OUAA Eastern Division.

Against the Blues, Queen's got off to a slow start, with Norm Hagarty and John Keck holding cold shooting hands. Only some fine work underneath by the Gaels' big men, Paul Howard and Bruce Hemming, kept things under control. Then Brian MacKenzie, who was coaching the team in the absence of Frank Tindall (The College Bowl, you know) took a leaf from the Celtic playbook and inserted rookie forward Derek Swinnard into the lineup. Swinnard, responding in fine form, hooped 18 points to lead all scorers in the game, while Howard added 17 (and some tough rebounds) and Bruce Hemming contributed 11 points, while leading the Gaels with 9 rebounds. Queen's enjoyed a distinct edge on the boards, outrebounding Varsity 35-21, and had the game well in hand by the closing minutes of the first half; Varsity trailed by five at the break.



Early in the second half, a couple of steals by Hagarty, who was giving Howard a breather, and Keck put the Gaels up by double figures, and they never looked back, leading by as many as 23 points before MacKenzie threw in his bench. The final 16-point margin did not reflect the edge in play enjoyed by the Gaels, especially in the second half.

Then, on to the Brock fiasco. About the only good thing you can say, we won. The Gaels got off to a quick lead, with Rob Smart hitting 9 of the first 13 points for Queen's, but some dubious fouls, courtesy of the old Kingston firm of Pester and Norris, and the sudden inability of anyone wearing a Queen's uniform to jump brought the Badgers back to within a couple of points. MacKenzie tried Swinnard again, but the rook didn't have the touch against the much taller Brock squad. In fact, the Gaels were getting hosed on the boards, with Brock frequently taking four or five tries before scoring. The crowning insult came when the Badgers went ahead 30-28 at the half despite some fine work in the dying minutes by Keck and Hagarty.

The Gaels got a big injection of hustle at half-time, mostly from some of the youngsters, and came out runnning. Keck picked up four steals, three of which went for quick hoops, Hagarty started to hit from the baseline, Hemming, Howard went to the boards, and the Gaels started to play basketball. In fact, they pulled ahead by as much as 8 points, before Rob Smart got into foul trouble, allowing the "Rabbit" (who actually started for Brock, and didn't play at all badly) to set some plays for the Badgers. Brock managed to pull within three points, but some clutch foul-shooting by Hagarty and a little solid defense made the difference. The final count was 64-61, and the Gaels even managed to out-rebound Brock, picking up 42 to 41 for the Badgers, as Howard and Hemming grabbed 11 boards each, and Norm Hagarty chipped in with 9. Hagarty also lead Queen's scoring with 18 points, while John Keck and Rob Smart added 15 each.

One final comment on the weekend: Stu Beck, who was used at guard both nights, is looking more and more at home there all the time. He played good defence, especially in the Brock game, and has a good "court sense". If his shooting picks up a bit, Beck will really start making an impression on Queen's basketball.

The Gaels will take on York this Friday, in their next league game. If the Gaels win, it will give them a 2-0 mark in the OUAA, and make their post-Christmas grind a little easier. York is still a tall, deep team, despite the absence of Don Holstrom, their high-scoring guard from last season, so Queen's will not be able to afford the luxury of another dull first half. We shall have to wait and see.

John Keck goes for two after a steal as Stu Beck (21) looks on sports shorts

Badminton Gals still first

Queen's women's badminton team held onto first place in the OWIAA Championships Saturday, edging out Western 28-27 in the second half of the first round of the double-round-robin competition. Toronto was third in the meet at Carleton, with 25 points. The overall standings, heading into the second round after Christmas, are: Queen's 70 points, Western 65, and Toronto 62.

The Gals were led by second singles Jane McMichael, who swept all her matches, and 5th and 6th singles players Irene Baron and Diana Edwards, who not only won their individual games, but combined, as Queen's third doubles pair, to blank the opposition there as well.

If the Gals can survive the rigors of the Christmas break in good condition (watch that skiing), Coach Beverley LaBreque could have herself a winner come the new year.

Badminton men 3rd

Queen's played host to a six-team invitational Badminton tournament here Saturday and Sunday. A team from the Kingston Badminton Club placed first, with R.M.C. second and a weakened Queen's team third. Several Queen's veterans were unable to take part in the competition, which had to be stretched over 'till Sunday due to the many long hard-fought games.

The Badminton team will not return to organized competition until January 27th, when they will travel to Toronto to take part in the Ryerson Invitational Tournament. This tournament usually attracts top players from Toronto and will be a good warm-up for the new year's season.

Squash loses at Waterloo dual meet

The men's squash team made the long trip to Waterloo on the weekend, but were turned back by a 6-4 count, by the University of Waterloo. Coach Howard Pearce was pleased, however, as several players turned in fine individual performances. Three of Queen's top five players were absent due to other commitments.

V-B Men in 1st

by Brian Kotila

Mens volleyball made a complete and utter rout of its opposition on this weekend at University of Ottawa. Carleton and Queen's with home team Ottawa played interlocking best out of three series and the results were heavily in the Queen's direction. First match saw Ottawa trounce Carleton twice with similar scores of 15-5. It was then Queen's turn to clobber Carleton and the scores were 15-1 and 15-3. The Queen's-Ottawa series was expected to be long and tough but Queen's, lead by their player-coaches, Vaclav Smola and George Janota, totally humiliated the Gee-Gees. The scores represented the power and drive the Gaels possessed for the important wins, Queen's over Ottawa 15-5 and 15-0.

Every member of the team played and every one without exception played a remarkable game. The Gaels were a unified team with consistently good bumps, sets, and spikes. If only one player had to be singled out it would have been John Capek. Both offensively and defensively he dominated the court, with his overpowering spike accounting for many points for the Gaels.

The Gaels take a break for Christmas with a substantial lead on first place in their section and we must congratulate the team for their play so far in the season. Good luck in January.

Senior Gals dump Vee's 40-26

by Maryanne Purdy

Defense was the key Saturday night, as the basketball Gals fought their way to a 40-26 victory over Laurentian in a game played at the Bartlett Gymnasium. The Gals' well-executed zone defense, and particularly the play of starting guards Laney Marshall and Karen Flemming, produced great quantities of steals, many of which lead to fast-break baskets by Miss Marshall. This quickness was also prevalent on offence, where Queen's deft passing and heads-up play baffled Laurentian. Even the presence of National Team veteran Kathy Williams did little to help the outclassed V's, as some fine drives by Karens Carson and Flemming soon had the Laurentian star in foul trouble.

Laney Marshall (45) eyes hoop for yet another fast-break layup

The Gals led 25-16 at the half, and kept things well in hand throughout the second half, despite some scrappy play on offence, due mostly to several errant fast-break passes and a couple of floor violations. Laney Marshall's 12 points led all scorers, while Karen Flemming added 8; the rest were distributed amongst eight players.

On the whole, the Gals look much sharper defensively than last year, although their rebounding abilities suffer when veteran centre Pat Patterson is out of the game. Karen Carson appears ready to take up where she left off last year, especially under the boards, and she has shown a tremendous ability to find the open man when the defense collapses on her. The real difference from last year has to go to Karen Flemming, a four-year veteran of women's intercollegiate basketball with Windsor. She has done a great deal to stabilize the Gals' offence, giving them the kind of floor leadership every winning team needs. Although she does have a tendency to free-lance a little too much, Karen also plays very tough defence; she and Laney give Queen's the best pair of ball-hawking guards in the league.

So, if Brenda Mackie can keep her charges at the ready state they displayed on Saturday, this coming weekend's games with Toronto and York could be a very pleasant experience. The Yeowomen are here this Friday for a 6:00 game, while the Blues are in town Saturday; game time there is 4:00 pm, and both games are in the Bartlett Gym.

Karen Flemming wheels into her base-line move while Laurentian player looks on V-B Gals win, but . . .

by Sue Moffat

Queen's Senior women's volleyball team continued the weekend sweep by defeating Laurentian three straight games on Saturday night.

The 15-3 score of the match's first game can safely be taken as indicative of Queen's superiority over Laurentian. It cannot be permitted to suggest any degree of excellence in their play. With the notable exception of Jane Petterson and a few others' work, Queen's court play can best be described as "too slow, too late, too weak". Throughout the match their slow positioning resulted in poorly controlled bumps and sets, weak or mis-placed spikes, and unnecessary net fouls. Granted, there was still evidence of the well-placed tips and co-ordinated team work which has lately marked this team's playing. Serving improved in both strength and consistency, while blockers used new height and better timing to their advantage. Overall, however, the play lacked determination or any concerted attempt at precision

The second game was a triumph of overconfidence and sloppiness as Queen's deteriorated into playing back yard volleyball and skinned out with a 15-13 "victory". In the final game there were a few good rallies, some of which were made unnecessarily long by Queen's persistent use of a push rather than hard spike over the net. A 15-5 score convincingly closed the game and match. While the match was undoubtedly a Queen's success on the scoreboard, it was a disappointment to anyone who appreciated the real potential of the team. It was not bad playing as much as it was mediocre.

While they probably have had their fair share of criticism already, our Senior Gals should not be allowed to escape without a brief mention of their embarrassing lack of sportsmanship. Elephant jokes and jolly repartee do not belong on a volleyball court, particularly that of the hostesses. No victory, however complete, justifies such a careless attitude towards the opposition, especially one which has travelled so far for one match. Sure you won, but you've got to have a little class!

The season opens again right after Christmas. This team has everything it needs to be really good, even the best, if our Gals can just "get it together."

X-C Ski Clinic

Queen's University's School of Physical and Health Education will be sponsoring a cross country ski clinic during the month of December. The clinic is open to anyone in the Kingston area who is interested in this very popular winter sport. The clinic will consist of three sessions, the first of which will be an indoor clinic to be held in the Physical Education Centre on Friday, December 8th at 7:30 p.m. The session will consist of discussions and talks about the care and selection of ski equipment and a discussion of techniques to be used in the outdoor clinics. The outdoor clinics will be held the following Friday and Saturday, December 15th and 16th at the West Campus Stadium, weather permitting. If there is no snow, the outdoor clinic will be postponed until the New Year. At the clinic, discussion of techniques and demonstrations by the Queen's Men's Nordic Ski Team will be featured.

The clinic is open to anyone in the city who is interested. There is no charge for the program. Anyone interested in obtaining further information is invited to call Queen's Recreation officer, Mr Howard Pearce at the Queen's Physical Education Centre at 547 6984.

Fencing Gals tied for 1st in OWIAA East Fencing

This past weekend was a most successful one for the members of the Queen's girls fencing team as they finished in a tie for first place in Part 1 of the OWIAA fencing championships in Montreal. Teams from Queen's, McGill Ottawa and Carleton took part in the day-long competition at McGill. The Queen's team was led by a fine performance by team captain, Judy Krupanszky, who placed third in the individual performances. Rosemary Knight, Erika Adelmann, and Sue Seto also did extremely well in the competition. Coach Jon Tondeur was particularly pleased with the performance of Miss Seto who is in her first year of intercollegiate fencing and who has attracted a lot of attention from the opposition.

Part 2 of the OWIAA eastern division fencing championships will be held in Ottawa on January 13. The top two teams and the best three individual fencers will be invited to the OWIAA fencing championships to be held in Toronto February 2nd and 3rd.

This coming weekend, Queen's enthusiasts will once again get a chance to watch some fine intercollegiate fencing as Queen's and RMC co-sponser a fencing tournmant on Saturday and Sunday. Action will get underway Saturday morning at 10:30 p.m. in Bews Gym. This will be a co-ed meet with teams expected from Toronto, Waterloo, York, Trent, Carleton, RMC, and Queen's. Plans call for the men's and women's foil competition to be held on Saturday and the men's epee and sabre to be completed Sunday morning. Because the Phys Ed Centre does not open to the public until 2 p.m., spectators will not be allowed into the building for the completion of the men's events.

Intermediates Undefeated!

Basketball Gals play sticky defense . . .

by Maryanne Purdy

This weekend the Intermediate Basketball Gals proved too much for their opponents of Ryerson, Brock, U. of T. and Trent, and walked away with an unbeaten record in the first part of a two tournment series. The intermediate team does not play league games, just tournaments. The gals, playing a zone defense, got off to a slow start against Ryerson on Friday afternoon. They seemed unorganized at first, by not passing the ball efficiently, or playing as a team. They didn't capitalize on all their shooting opportunities, which could account for the low score at the end of the half of 13-10 for Queen's. Because of their poor organization, Queen's found it hard to break through the tight zone defence set up by Ryerson, and our own defense lacked in rebounding abilities. However, as the game progressed, the Gals rallied together and began playing good basketball, pulling away from Ryerson with a final score of 27-17.

Jarmila Smola drives for 2 against Ryerson.

The starting lineup of Jarmila Smola, Eleanor Rice, Sue Hall, Ruth Reynolds and Jenny Bagnell contained two of the team's high scorers, - Jenny with 9 points, and Jarmila, whose unique foul shots and hook shots put eight points to her name. Substitutions were quite regular during the game, with coach Scott Cook putting in Sara Londerville, a good defensive player, Kathy Willock, a very good rebounder, Jane Boyce, Lesly Frazer, and Barb Beattie. With the exception of Jarmila, Jenny, Ruth Reynolds, Eleanor Rice, Barb Beattie and Devany Smith, who was absent the team was a team of rookies, who once the game got underway played well together.

The next game was against Brock Friday night. By now the Gals started to put effective passing plays into effect, dazzling their opponents. The score at the end of the half was 23-10. Again veteran Jenny Bagnell proved a big asset to the team with her accurate outside long shot to again be high scorer with 16 points. Devany Smith should be given mention here as a quick and aggressive player, stealing the ball from her opponents time and time again. Because of improved rebounding and a tight zone defense, Queen's let only 20 points be scored against their 42.

U. of T. seemed to want to give our Gals trouble in the third game Saturday morning, because at the end of the half for the first time in the tournament Queen's was losing by a score of 16-13. This was due to Toronto's shooting from outside our zonal defense with long shots that never missed. However, in the second half our girls rallied together with good passing plays to win with a score of 32-22. One of the outstanding players of the game was Jarmila Smola, with a total of 21 points. She scored 100 per cent on her 9 foul shots, with her distinctive one-handed style.

Queen's got off to a slow start Saturday afternoon against Trent, with neither team scoring until after the 6 minute mark. But once the Gals started shooting they chalked up the points, bringing the score to 16-4 at the end of the half. During the second half the game lagged with Queen's unable to take advantage of scoring opportunities, or else they were unable to get the shots they took in. This showed in the final score of 24-12 in favour of Queen's.

These games were part of a two series tournment, with the next one being hosted by U. of T. on February 9th and 10th. If the Gals play as well as they did in their first four games, then they should have little trouble winning their next four games.

. . .While Volleyball overwhelms on offence!

BY Sue Moffatt

Queen's hosted part one of the OWIAA Intermediate Volleyball Championships this weekend, and brought home fame, if not fortune, with victories over each of the guest teams.

The Gals' first match against Ryerson got them off to a fine start, with a three-straight-game victory, and they finished the day by taking Brock 3 games to 2. Saturday morning, before a capacity crowd of four officials and this reporter, Queen's beat the Torontonians 3 games to 2, and in a 34-minute match, set Trent on its ear with a total-points victory of 45-9.

Coached by 4th year student Karen Murray, the Intermediates are refreshingly enthusiastic and skill conscious. Considering how many of their players are still unfamiliar with the complex positioning patterns of power volleyball, their mid-court collisions are remarkably few, and their floor coverage excellent. A number of the Gals, Dorothy Cosgrove and Jane McCabe to name but two, have consistently strong drop serves. The team has one of Queen's best setters in their captain, Judy Bierma, a shortie who really jumps to make good on many spikes and blocks.

In their early games, their over-use of the bump in offensive action resulted in too little spiking and too much back court play. In later games, however, they were better able to control the ball on their side of the net, and make more effective use of their spikers. In the course of the tournament, they also developed a better sense of placement on spikes and tips and blocking improved immeasurably. Spikers, particularly Eleanor Barker, enjoyed much sweeter success once they began jumping to get above the net and aimed for corners rather than the centre. Calling the ball on each volley helped to raise the level of play to a very interesting and successful plane.

Against Brock, Queen's conclusively took the first two games but fell prey to "We-have-it-in-the-bag-now-itis" (it's a prevalent disease in any volleyball team) and proceeded to lose their next two games. The last game saw them find a new impetus to come from behind and win the match by a score of 15-11.

Slow starters on Saturday mornings, our Gals lost their first game to Toronto but picked up to take the next two in fine style, with a shutout of 15-0 in the second win. Toronto rallied in the fourth game, finding Queen's weak spots with good serves and allowing our gals to muddle their own plays in their confusion. Their 15-12 victory was followed however, by a 15-11 defeat. This last was an excellent game, with both teams playing the best volleyball of the tournament. It must be admitted that if Toronto had not suffered so many lifting fouls, Queen's may not have been so successful.

Trent valiantly sent its 6 players onto the court but the match was no contest. The first game, Queen's practiced serving and managed a 15-2 victory. The second game witnessed a few volleys and spikes, a few of which found Queen's unprepared. That 15-5 win was followed by a 15-3 triumph which had its few challenging moments but generally looked like a mixed technique drill on Queen's part. Throughout the match, however, both teams were enthusiastic and avoided turning the games into a rout of dignity as well as athletics.

Needless to say, our Gals are on top and their play this weekend promises to make their after-Christmas season a good one to follow.

World: Belgian government falls over languages split

BRUSSELS — Language conflicts dividing Belgium have forced the resignation of the year-old coalition government of Premier Gaston Eyskens. The coalition fell after the partners were unable to agree on the language rights of the Flemish and Walloon provinces, a conflict which has existed in that country since 1830.

An immediate effect of the resignation is the hold up of the ratification of the treaty that would admit Britain, Ireland, and Denmark into the European Common Market.

The question of language rights has caused conflict between the Socialist and Christian Democrat coalition partners and between Flemings and Walloons in both parties.

The major issue is the extent of the autonomy to be allowed to each language area and the delineation of such areas as many on the border speak a combination of the two languages.

LONDON — The Conservative government of Prime Minister Edward Heath suffered its greatest defeat in the House last week as members of the party rebelled to join the Labour and Liberal parties in defeating the government's tightening of the immigration rules.

Major concern is being expressed at the weakening of the ties between Britian and the Commonwealth countries since her acceptance of entry into the European Common Market.

The new immigration policy would allow greater freedom of entry to immigrants from European countries and a tightening of restrictions against entry of natives of many other nations.

LA PAZ, Bolivia — The Bolivian government has declared a nationwide state of siege and has ordered troops to surround major factories in the capital after that country's factory workers went out on a 24-hour strike.

The workers are demanding wage increases in the wake of a 66.6 devaluation of the Bolivian currency last month.

The Bolivian government is charging that leftists have infiltrated the labour unions and arrested many workers. Labour leaders later claimed that they would remain out on strike indefinitely if those arrested are not released.

DAMASCUS — Israel is maintaining a state of full alert in the Israeli occupied Golan Heights area in the wake of last Tuesday's battle with Syria, one of the largest attacks since the 1967 mid-east conflict.

Syria has called on all Arab governments to assist in repelling Israeli aggression and pledged that they would retaliate against any Israeli aggression with a tougher one.

The Tuesday Israeli raids on Syria were in retaliation for Syrian shellings of their villages and the planting of mines by Palestinian guerillas.

OSLO — Norwegian naval vessels have been seeking out a mystery marine object lurking in their waters for the past two weeks. It is believed to be a Russian submarine but no radio contact with the object has been established and no country has made any mention of their submarines being in Norwegian waters. As a result, there is considerable puzzlement as to its exact nature.

backpage

Canada: Davis throws money into transit

TORONTO — Queen's Park has announced a $1.3 billion plan to promote public transit in Ontario and to introduce a new type of rail vehicle in some urban centres.

The provincial government will increase their minimum transit subsidy from 50 per cent to 75 per cent for the cost of purchasing buses and trollies.

In addition,, Premier William Davis has announced that a new rail vehicle, lighter than conventional rail vehicles and powered by electricity will be introduced by late 1974 and that they would probably be installed in Toronto, Hamilton and Ottawa.

The vehicle will be capable of carrying 10,000 to 20,000 passengers an hour, and will aid in avoiding traffic jams and pollution problems.

OTTAWA — Manpower and Immigration Minister Bryce Mackasey has announced that he is out of the Trudeau cabinet because they needed a "scapegoat" for the high costs of the new unemployment insurance plan.

However a little while after this announcement he claimed that he was planning to retire anyway and return to private industry.

His first announcement was made at a conference for department officials. He claimed that the high costs of the unemployment insurance program should rightfully have fallen on the shoulders of Simon Reisman, Deputy Minister of Finance for the policies he advocated to the government.

In his later announcement, Mackasey claimed that the Trudeau government were not in fact treating him as a scapegoat and that he had told Tudeau much earlier that he was planning to retire from the Cabinet.

TORONTO — As New Years Eve falls on Sunday this year the Ontario government has announced that all licenced establishments in Ontario will be allowed to serve drinks from 6 p.m. to 1 a.m. on December 31 this year to enable people to celebrate in the traditional manner.

OTTAWA — There is a growing restlessness among Liberal MP's over the Government's low key attitude since the October 30 election, feeling that now, more than ever is the time to be in the public eye.

Many are equally unhappy that Parliament was not called for a December session but on January 4 instead.

QUEBEC — The residents of northern Quebec, never before on the provincial electoral map, will now get to vote in Quebec elections. The population includes approximately 1500 Eskimos, 3500 Indians and about 300 whites.

The province in the past had not bothered to enumerate them because of the great expense in going to the isolated settlements.

The bill now before the legislature will create 13 enclaves attached to the riding of Duplessis and will extend Abitibi riding to take in an additional 3500 voters.

While these measures take in most of the coast along Hudson Bay, Husdon Strait and UngavaBay many interior areas are still left out.

Federally the entire area is covered as part of two southern ridings.

TORONTO — Ontario's liquor laws will be brought up for total review for the first time in twenty-five years, and it is expected that many of the recommendations contained in a study done by Chief Justice James McRuer will be implemented.

McRuer's report called for a decrease in the powers of the Liquor Control Board and the Liquor Licence Bureau and a procedure for appeal of their decisions.

Also discussed will be the advisability of allowing universities to have bars on campus.

OTTAWA — Prices are rising in a visible pattern this year, notably on bread, milk, cigaretts and Christmas trees. The price of a loaf of bread is to go up another two cents, its second such rise this year. Weston Co. has blamed the increase on higher labour costs.

Milk prices are expected to be increased early next year, but the exact extent of the rise is not yet known. Cigarets have already experienced an increase of two cents a package by one company.

However, the greatest price increase in expected to come in the Christmas tree industry, where prices could jump as much as one dollar.

QUEBEC — Drivers of this province will be faced with a new system of demerit points beginning March 1, 1973. Any driver accumulating twelve demerit points in two years will automatically have his licence suspended and any driver with nine points will be liable for temporary suspension.

Three points will be lost for disobeying yield signs and signal lights, four points for speeding, five points for refusing to submit to a breathalyzer test and six points for drunk driving.

Looking About

By Peter Jensen

The Revolving Door

A 59-year old housewife died in front of the television cameras after being told she had won her round in a quiz show. Maud Walker was a contestant on the programme Temptation, an Australian effort. A television executive said the programme would not be shown, but "when the relatives recover from shock, we may offer them the film of the programme. I'm sure they would like to see how happy she was."

For he who is worthy of little and thinks himself worthy of little is temperate but proud; for pride implies greatness, as beauty implies a good sized body, and little people may be neat and well porportioned but cannot be beautiful. Aristotle.

In 1951, corporate income tax accounted for 28 per cent of government revenue, and individuals' income tax accounted for 26.7 per cent. In 1973, if last May's budget is left relatively untouched, individuals' income tax will account for 49.9 per cent of government revenue and corporations 12.2 per cent.

You can't hitch-hike your way to heaven the devil's blocked the roads. Sonrise.

Andre Bergeron, who wrote "Le Petit Manuel de l'Histoire du Quebec," will shortly publish in English his second popular tract, "Pourquoi un Revolution du Quebec." During a recent interview on the CBC programme, Sunday Supplement, he spoke of the historical inevitability of the proletarian revolution. He contended 'the dictatorship of the proletariat is justifiable as it would be the rule of the majority.'

Why is the dictatorship of the proletariat any more justifiable because it is of the majority? At one time, the bourgeois who replaced the aristocracies were also of the majority. If Mr. Bergeron's arguments were limited to this contention they would not bear further descussion.

However, one must allow him a finer sensibility. The historical inevitability of which he speaks rests in a perception of self, in that, as the proletariat becomes aware of its own distinctness it will no longer suffer its oppression. Yet Mr. Bergeron recognizes the mutability of this belief, for he writes to crystalize and form a proletarian consciousness. One might also ponder why it is that 'proletarian' thinking is done by 'bourgeois' intellectuals.

AMS calls for fee withholding; emphasize student aid, accessibility

by Charles Schwier

The AMS Outer Council Wednesday night voted to ask students to withhold their second term tuition fees at least until mid-February when the action will be reassesed.

This action came as a protest to the Ontario Government cutbacks in the funding of post-secondary education. Specifically, the AMS and, (through the Ontario Federation of Students), other student governments are asking that the Ontario Student Awards Programme be changed to lower the age of independence (from one's parents income) from 24 to 21; that OSAP aid be available to part time students; that the OSAP loan ceiling be returned to its pre-March level of $600 rather than $800; and that the government clarify its position on OSAP for the coming year.

External Affairs Commissioner Lyn Whitham said that the whole thing is summed up in one word -- "Accessibility." She said that the present restrictive government policies toward education do not seem to show that it is interested in having post-secondary education open to all citizens of the province, but only to those who can afford it.

When asked the University's position on withholding, Principal, John J. Deutsch, said that the university will apply the same policies as it had in the past with a person who had not paid his fees -- there will be a $15 charge for payment past the 31st of January, and academic information will be withheld if a student has an outstanding debt with the university at the end of the year.

Some Outer Council members expressed concern over the release of OSAP cheques to students who are withholding their fees. (Some 38 per cent of Ontario students at Queen's receive OSAP assistance.) To this Dr. Deutsch said that the University had always released OSAP cheques not contingent on payment of fees, and will continue to do so unless otherwise directed by the government.

There was little opposition to the general idea of calling the withholding, although there was some questioning of the effect of the withholdi g.

Ted Cape, ASUS president and delegate to the weekend OFS conference, emphasised that the withholding is not a waving around by students of political clout: "the Government holds all the marbles. No one thinks that this withholding will put pressure on the government,"

He said that the withholding is all there is left to do in an effort to show to the government and to the people of Ontario that students are upset with government policy, and to attempt to get a hearing for their grievances.

Lyn Whitham reported that she and others had conducted a small rather unscientific polls of student opinion on the fee withholding and found that students were for the most part in favour. She said she found that students stood behind the demands regarding student aid and accessibility very solidly and were acutely aware of the situation.

The Outer Council also directed that the executive of the OFS be instructed to press on the issues of accessibility and student aid. "If they fail to do this," Stu Clark, GSS vice-president, said, "the whole fee withholding action fails."

Nine other schools across Ontario have already voted to join the withholding.

Queen's Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 24

Friday, December 1, 1972

All the King's men.....

The Outer Council meeting last Wednesday showed the faces of some members who had not attended since the great Heffalump debate in October. This situation of lots of members did not last long as people drifted out fairly early in the meeting. Near the end, the meeting did not even process a semblence of a quorum (19 of 38).

At the bitter end (10:30 pm) the following remained: Dave Hudson (McArthur); Stu Clark (Grads); Kiloran German (WRC); Steve Brereton (IRC); Roy Kirkpatric (Arts); Ted Cape (Arts); Lyn Whitham (Arts); Alan Cruess (Meds); Bob Reid (Meds); Alfred Kormann (Grads); Bruce Trotter (Arts); and the Rector Gary Gananage) the speaker Graham Millington; clubs manager Ted Grandmaison, and one Journal reporter.

"Sorry about all the financial troubles..."

by Jennifer Grass

"We're all caught up in the midst of the changing priorities and attitudes of government, Principal John J. Deutsch told a meeting of the Alma Mater Society on Wednesday night.

He was on hand to answer questions on a wide range of subjects from student aid to the financing of universities.

Deutsch explained that it is not yet clear how the recent government freeze on capital construction of university buildings and hospitals will affect Queen's.

There are no major academic projects planned but there are renovations which need to be made. It is not known whether or not these will be affected.

Though mainly "financed out of private funds, the recent government measures may affect the scale" of the proposed new University Centre, Deutsch said but added "it will not be completely affected."

The implication of the freeze on hospital construction are still under investigation. But Queen's and the hospitals are likely to proceed with their plans as arrangements have already been made with the contractor.

Reconstruction of old hospital facilities is the main purpose of the proposed Health Sciences Complex although provision for more beds was to have been made.

However, the Provincial Ministry of Health has recently ordered that the number of patient treatment beds in Kingston be reduced.

Deutsch assured the meeting that construction of the lower campus parking lot was on time and grass would be put back in the early fall.

This project was financed by the university and the hospitals as the government does not allocate money for parking lots. The city had required that a lot be built before construction of the Health Sciences Complex got under way.

AMS rep Ken Wong asked if consideration had been made of a mall down the campus section of University Avenue.

Deutsch replied that there was little talk of closing the street but said that the "design and maintenance of the centre mall were being discussed."

In response to ASUS president, Ted Cape's remarks concerning the likelihood of the university turning into a concrete jungle, Deutsch said "it's not so much a problem of the grass being turned into concrete but of keeping it from going into mud."

If we hope to save the grass, "we really have to respect it," he said.

Considerable attention was paid to Kingston's tax problem. Queen's is the sorest point among many Kingstonians in a city where tax-exempt property including the university, hospitals, churches, government property and schools totals 35.4 per cent of all property valuation in the city.

The provincial government currently pays the city a grant in consideration of Queen's on the basis of $35 per student each year.

The city is now pressing for full taxation of the university and Deutsch said, "we have supported them in that."

IRC chairman, Steve Brereton asked if residence fees could be kept down by using part of the government grant to the university to cover some residence costs.

In reply, Deutsch said, "we are not allowed to use government money for this purpose." "Residences must be self supporting," he commented and added "if costs go up, a fee increase must follow."

Federal participation in post secondary education was another area of concern.

The Federal Government currently pays over to the Provincial Government one half of the cost of higher education.

Deutsch pointed out the "constitutional and political realities" related to trying to take education "out of the hands of the province."

Many provinces, particularly the larger ones insist that education should be their sole jurisdiction.

However, the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada has recommended that the federal government continue to take an interest in education, Deutsch remarked.

In response to a question concerning Elrond, made by Kathy Turner, AMS rep at large, Deutsch stated that even if the college does suffer a 6 per cent deficit this year, the university which holds the second mortgage will not necessarily take it over.

"Take over does not follow automatically because the college is not finished," he said then added, "it is an option not a mandatory thing."

Deutsch commented on the instability of the present method of university financing which is based on the number of students and the value of the Basic Income Unit. This latter term refers to the cost of educating a student in a particular discipline.

To avoid the financial embarrassment associated with shortfalls in enrolment, Deutsch hoped that the government would consider paying the university on the basis of a set target not on the basis of anticipations of students.

"Greater stability would be derived from making the budget on the basis of assured funds," Deutsch said.

He also pointed out that "this will prevent the scramble for student numbers."

Deutsch assured McArthur rep Dave Hudson that "we have been talking about possible arrangements."

However, he pointed out that "we are not free agents," "we have to get along with the city bus service."

St James Anglican Church

Rector Rev. Gordon Hendra, BA, BD
Assistant Curate and Anglican Chaplain to Queen's University
Rev. Eric Howes, BA, M.Div.
Organist and Choirmaster Mr. E. J. Brown, GRSM, ARCM

9.00 a.m. — HOLY COMMUNION

11.00 a.m. — HOLY COMMUNION Preacher The Rev. Eric Howes

7.30 p.m. — EVENING PRAYER The Rector

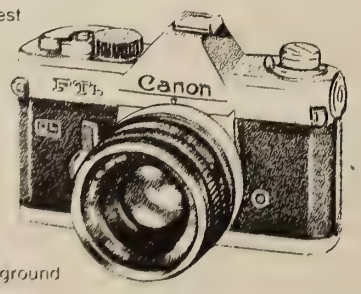
AE at the art centre

PROGRESS IN CONSERVATION
arranged by the National Gallery of Canada and continuing until December 10

SELECTIONS FROM THE PERMANENT COLLECTION
paintings, prints and sculpture

FILM: GERTRUDE STEIN: When This You See Remember Me 89 minutes colour

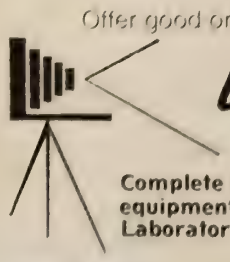
A special showing for university students in ELLIS HALL at 4.30 p.m. on Monday, December 4. Admission is free, Courtesy of AGNES.



The film will be shown again in DUNNING HALL at 8.30 p.m. for Gallery Association members and their guests.

Queen's Ski Club
presents
Snow Job II
(last beer bash of the term)
ALL WELCOME
FREE ADMISSION
LOTS OF BEER
Tomorrow Night, Sat., Dec. 2
8:00 p.m. Grant Hall

WE'LL GIVE YOU $10



to buy anything else in the store when you buy a Canon FTb or LTb from us

Having the FTb is the next best thing to having an F-1 And you can use the same lenses and accessories with it The camera has a shutter speed of 1/1000 of a second and a unique through the lens light meter system that automatically gets its reading from the center of your picture so you get the correct exposure for what you are photographing, not the background

Something Extra From Bell & Howell

Offer good only until December 31, 1972.

Linden-Photo Co.
229 Princess 546-7676

Complete line of new and used photographic equipment. Specialized finishing in our own Laboratory. STUDENT DISCOUNTS.

Doug Redden Gerry Finn Ron Fairley

newsbriefs

Public Relations reorganized; new head

Principal John J. Deutsch has announced a reorganization of the Public Relations Department at Queen's University effective December 1, 1972. Henceforth this group will be known as the News Department. Ross R. Daily, formerly a Supervisor at Queen's Computing Centre, has been appointed to head the Department as Director. Ross Daily will report to the Vice-Principal, Development and Information.

Vice-Principal J. M. Courtright noted, "The term 'News Department' more clearly defines the basic activity of this group." The Director of the News Department, assisted by an Information Officer and support staff, will be responsible for gathering news about Queen's and disseminating it through official University publications and to the campus, local andnational media.

Ross Reid Daily graduated from Queen's in 1970 with a Master's degree in Business Administration. For the past two and a half years he has been employed in a number of positions at Queen's University Computing Centre.

UBC students invade Arts faculty meeting

VANCOUVER (CUP) — The University of British Columbia Arts Faculty cancelled its meeting Nov. 23 after about 150 arts students marched into the meeting to press demands for student representation on faculty committees.

A slim majority of the faculty (49-43) approved a motion to adjourn the meeting as soon as it was convened.

Students and about 40 faculty members remained to hold their own public meeting, in which they passed a resolution calling on the faculty to elect members to a committee consisting equally of staff and students to examine student representation.

The meeting Nov. 23 included on its agenda a proposed new women's studies program and many faculty members are anxious to see it approved before the university calendar deadline of Dec. 31.

At their ad hoc public meeting, students called for an emergency Faculty meeting to discuss the resolution so the women's studies program could go through a regular meeting unimpeded.

If the emergency session is not held, students may be forced to again invade the regular meeting, thus disrupting discussion of the women's program, or wait for the following meeting which would be too close to the end of the academic year for any student-faculty committee to make recommendations for the following year.

A general meeting of arts students is planned for next week to discuss tactics for the next Faculty meeting whatever the type. Students also have the option of delegating representatives to the Faculty meeting to push student demands, rather than invading en masse.

Have a healthy Xmas

For students who will be in Kingston over the Christmas - New Year holiday period, the Student Health Service will be closed from 5:00 p.m. Friday 22 December until 8:45 Tuesday, 2 January, 1973. During this period 24 hour service will continue with answering service placing emergencies in touch with a duty physician through 547-6106.

Students sing again

The twenty-seventh Annual University Carol Service, sponsored by the Engineering Society, takes place in Grant Hall Sunday, December 3rd at 8:30 p.m. The ten Lessons will be read by members of the Alma Mater society Executive and the Queen's Choral ensemble under the direction of Professor Denise Narcisse-Mair will sing three carols. A Brass sextette formed of students in the University's Department of Music will accompany the singing of the Carols along with the organ played by Paul Harding.

classified

Renald Nadeau call 544-7292.

ROOM available in Leonard Hall for Second term. Single room with double room rates. Phone 544-7452 Weekdays 6 - 9 pm.

LOST: In men's locker room, Phys Ed Centre, 6 pm Nov. 28, man's black pop-open umbrella with case with sentimental as well as practical value. Reward for return. Call John, 544-9121, 6 to 7:30 pm.

SNOWBALL - needs people to decorate rooms in Kingston Hall for the semi-formal to be held Feb. 3rd. Any club, gael group, floor, etc can call 544-8182 or 544-8189 for more information. All money and materials are supplied.

FOR SALE - Lange ski boots, standards, excellent condition, size 11½ Phone 544-7181 after 7 pm.

WANTED - apartment for rent next year. 3 or 4 bedroom furnished or unfurnished. Call 544-8722 or 544-8723.

FOUND - a Queen's scarf. Call Harry Dodsworth 547-3270.

PHOTOGRAPHERS - For sale - set of Toshiba colour filters, 80B, 81A, 85, Skylight; 52mm mounts; with case $15. Set of closeup lenses +1, +2, +3; 52 mm mounts; with case $8. Perfect condition. Phone Derek 542-4133.

HAD it up to here with residence? Moving out in January? Getting lonely in that rented room with no stove? Join a fun house three blocks from campus. As of January 1 we have a spare room. Phone Ronda, Debbie or Janet at 542-9496.

ROOM AVAILABLE January 1-73. West Campus residence beside MacArthur College. Call Ian 549-0561. Room 202 E Wing.

DEAR LADY, Happy Anniversary! One down, many more to come (L.R.P.) Hopefully a new record. It's not common to all but it's the law of this land. Pleeze! Love, Me.

FOUND - a slide rule - call Jim at 544-7717.

TWO PERSONS are looking for a third to fill a vacancy in a 3 bedroom apartment beside the Phys Ed Centre. $50- month. 544-2159.

SNOW JOB II - Queen's Ski Club presents the biggest, best, and last beer bash of the term, tomorrow night, Sat Dec. 2 - 8:00 pm in Grant Hall. Everyone welcome, Free Admission.

FOUND in a stairwell in Vic Hall. One Wonderbra, Petal Burst, size 34B Call Denis or Mike at 544-3099. Claimant must prove that it fits.

BROTHER FLOOR up for adoption. 3rd Gordon has been left sisterless by a floor that would rather eat turkey than come over to Leonard and eat some real meat. Any floors or interested parties who desire genuine male companionship and an everlasting union, please adopt us, we're in your hands. Address all inquiries to 3rd Gordon Floor Seniors.

VACANT AMS HOUSE available for rent January 1-73. For more details contact AMS Office.

FOUND Monday - One pair of lady's leather gloves on William near Division. Call Chris after 11 pm.

LONDON for Xmas $179 Return BOAC. 66 lbs baggage. Free drinks all the way. Contact the AMS or ADSC 44 St. George St. Toron.. 5. 416-962-8404.

CONVENIENT single room now available in Vic Hall. Anyone interested please call Martha at 544-8472.

SKIS and BOOTS for sale. 195 cm Kastle Cpm T1 $90. Size 7 Humanic comps $40. Phone 544-3516.

HAMILTON and area Queen's students. 2nd annual Queen's Christmas bash at Paddy Green's (Main and Longwood) on Fri Dec. 22nd. Santa will be there from 8 pm.

ANYONE wishing to form a Queen's Boxing Club should sign the list on the board in the men's dressing room in the Gym before Christmas.

WE, the four survivors from last week's canoe trip on the Madawaska have brough back valuable information about the conditions of the water in that area, and have concluded that the conditions are excellent for a snowshoe trip this weekend along the exact route that was followed last week. If interested in going call Richard Ars 544-7318.

French dept.

Considers French Canadian studies

by Susan de Stein

A survey of 24 Canadian universities including two bilingual ones, has revealed a serious lack of French Canadian content in university French courses.

The survey which was released in mid-October is entitled "French Canadian Studies and their place in University French Departments: A Critique and Model for Change in English Canada."

Dr. Gerard Bissette, a professor of French at Queen's, and the department's only specialist in French-Canadian literature and studies, was among the group that compiled the report.

The study criticizes the French departments of English-language universities for failing to treat French Canadian language and literature as serious areas of study.

"In general, French departments seem to consider French-Canadian literature and civilization marginal and French Canadian language an unfortunate corruption of pure tongue: the so-called international French which is really the language propagated by the government and institutions of France and which remains culturally and linguistically foreign to many aspects of Canadian life." The report claims that French Canadian literature is treated in a "token fashion" by the universities.

The report attacks the tendency of French departments to concentrate on courses in 19th and 20th century poetry, theatre, criticism, and the novel, as if Canada does not exist. "Some courses prepare students, by major omission, to believe that work done in Canada is not 'serious work', especially when French Canadian literature is barely offered or is limited."

The report points out the lack, in both number and scope, of courses in language and linguistics. A distinct emphasis has been placed on the literature. Where such courses exist it was felt that students are taught "a language which is exclusively international" and are thus not prepared for contact with French Canadians, on the level of linguistics and culture.

The researcher's model of course-offering has three areas of concern. In each of French-Canadian literary studies, French literary studies and studies in language and linguistics, majoring students would take a minimum number of courses.

A university should offer a maximum of 13 courses in French Canadian literary studies, 15 courses in French studies, and 16 in French language and linguistics, the report advises. The report also states that the number of courses offered, would have to depend on the resources of the individual universities but that "a ratio close to the suggested one should be retained in order to provide a full and open programme that is fair to the integrity of each area."

Dr. G.W. Ireland, head of the French Department at Queen's made several comments to the Journal concerning the report.

Dr. Ireland believes that the figures in the report "look worse than they really are." He added that "we must bear in mind that every course, by teaching it in French, a Canadian language, has a certain Canadian content." He felt, the calculation of the number of courses with French Canadian content was ambiguous.

Dr. Ireland continued to say, "I do not believe that in any Canadian university, including French-speaking universities in Quebec that French Canadian literature should ever be studied instead of, or to the exclusion of, the study of metropolitan French." He added, "it would also be disastrous for the French-Canadian culture to shut itself off in order to separate itself from the great literary tradition of France. The French Canadian culture is a continuation and a part of that tradition."

Dr. Ireland said that he could conceivably "imagine the existence in a Canadian university, of a school of Canadian studies, of Canadian literature or even a school of French Canadian studies." However Dr. Ireland pointed out that it would be desirable that there would also exist a school of French.

"I believe that the report makes it insufficiently clear that French speaking Canadians, in inheriting the French language also inherit the French literary culture and tradition," Dr. Ireland commented adding that "the roots of French Canadian culture and literature can be traced back to the traditions of

Continued on Page 4

People's lib not women's lib

by Susan de Stein

"Why can't people learn to respect and admire each other regardless of sex? That's what it's all about. It's people liberation--not women's liberation," Marney Cousins said to the Journal concerning the role of the Committee on the Status of Women of which she is a member.

"We have found that the undergraduates, are not taking the committee seriously," Miss Cousins remarked. The committee, set up to study the status of women at Queen's, fears that the first and second year females at Queen's cannot relate to the programme and its aims. "It is often difficult for women in the lower years to identify with the problems they may come up against in the future. They don't realize that discrepancies and discrimintion do exist", she added.

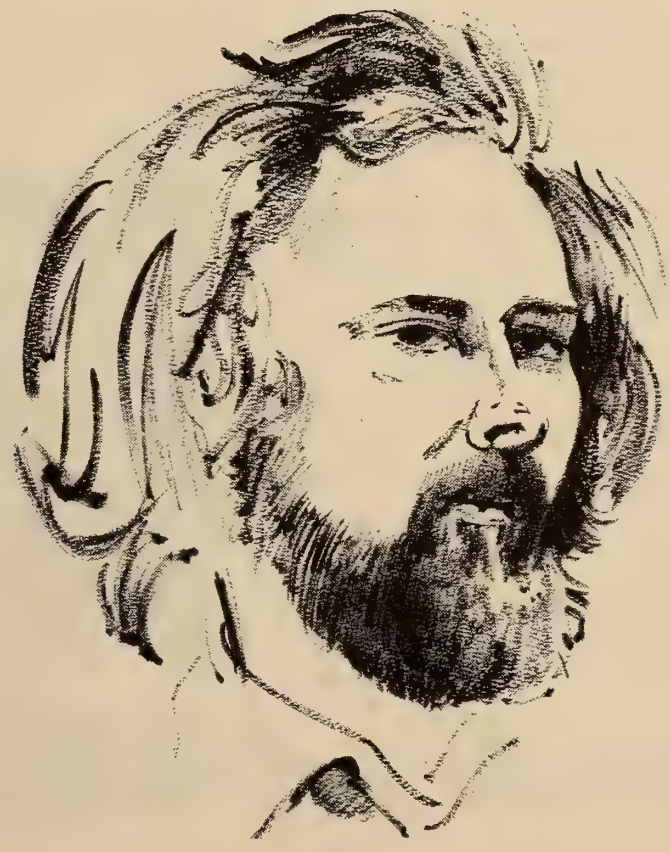
She felt that there are discrepancies existing at Queen's between positions held by females and male staff members, the salaries they obtain, and the benefits they enjoy. There also exist discrepancies in matters of tenure.

The average female undergraduate Miss Cousins said, is unaware of conditions she might come up against in the future.

A certain amount of discrimination also exists in admissions policies in faculties such as Law and Medicine, she pointed out.

Miss Cousins cited an example of discriminatory practices in the area of summer employment at Queen's. "The physical plant would not hire a female this past summer to do work of which she was capable It was merely a case of the application of an old policy," Miss Cousins added. "She was not hired because she was female."

"We should be on a basis of parity with men in areas of job and education. Sex should not matter," she commented.



Dr. Deutsch has given good support to the efforts of the committee. "He is concerned and went ahead to see that things are satisfactory in this area", Miss Cousins added.

In the spring the committee will present a report containing certain recommendations to Dr. Deutsch. However Miss Cousins said, "we can't go ahead with the report on the basis of pure statistics. We need examples. We want to know if we have missed areas and problems into which we should be delving. We want people to know what we are doing and that it concerns everyone."

For reasonable and responsible representation vote

Kenneth Rowley

on December 4th

high taxes ... create high rent
lower both
ELECT
ALEX
SAUNDERS
FOR ALDERMAN IN ONTARIO WARD
FOR INFORMATION CALL: 542-7777

NOTICE
SNOW REMOVAL
QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY
PARKING REGULATIONS

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY PARKING REGULATIONS STATE IN PART:

"FROM DECEMBER 1, 1972 TO MARCH 31, 1973 INCLUSIVE, VEHICLES PARKED ON THE CAMPUS BETWEEN MIDNIGHT AND 7.00 A.M. WILL BE TOWED AWAY IF THEY IMPEDE SNOW REMOVAL OPERATIONS"

Queen's - Kingston entry in the Grey Cup parade

Queen's University joins with the city of Kingston in the Grey Cup parade in Hamilton on December 2. This becomes a nostalgic salute to the Queen's University teams that won the Grey Cup three times in 1922, '23 and '24..

The joint Kingston and Queen's entry includes a pageant group that depicts Kingston's history through 1673 to 1973, the Queen's Pipe and Brass bands, majorettes, Highland dancers, and cheerleaders.

The City of Kingston-Queen's University entry in the Grey Cup parade in Hamilton on December 2 has many significant ties with Kingston and Hamilton.

The entry has a dual objective to publicize Kingston's Tercentenary and to salute the Queen's University teams that won the Grey Cup 1922-23-24.

Frank Leadlay, a native of Hamilton and now retired in Kingston, was a member of all three Queen's Grey Cup teams and captain of one of them, and was a star performer on the 1928 and 1929 Hamilton Tigers Grey Cup teams as well. He is a charter member of the Football Hall of Fame, located in Hamilton, and was named to the all-star Hamilton Team of the Century in 1967.

Jim Wright, also from Hamilton, and now associated with the Alumni Office at Queen's, was a member of the Grey Cup teams at Queen's in 1926 and at Hamilton in 1929.

Mike Rodden, a former star athlete at Queen's, and a Whig-Standard sports columnist, was coach of the Hamilton Tigers when they won the Grey Cup in 1928 and 1929.

Still another link is the Queen's pipe band which received its start during the academic year 1924-25.

Women support changes

In a referendum held on Tuesday and Wednesday,women in residence voted in favour of changing the majority required for changes in residence rules from a two thirds majority to a majority of the votes polled. 257 ballots out of a total of 376 supported this change.

At the time, 303 women voted to delete part of Article 13 of the WRC constitution which formerly read, "Additions and amendments to the constitution, changes in residence complex may be made by a two thirds majority of the votes polled. The section concerning alterations in the use of the women's residence was deleted.

French Canadian studies

Continued from Page 3

At present the Queen's department of French has on its staff, one specialist on French Canadian literature, Dr. G. Bissette. Being the only one, Dr. Bissette, it was noted by Dr. Ireland, spends a great deal of time in the teaching and supervision of graduate students. He has a limited amount of time to devote to undergraduate teaching.

"We have been pressing for an increase in staff," Dr. Ireland said. He has taken his plea to the Dean of Arts and Science, R.L. Watts to stress the desirability of making a further appointment in the area of French Canadian studies. The Dean was very sympathetic to the request, "so much so that he seemed almost to promise us a second specialist for 1973-74," Dr. Ireland said. The Dean however outlined the financial difficulties involved.

After a certain amount of time, "we received no firm commitment on the subject and we were lead to hope for and not count on a further appointment," Dr. Ireland said.

Several difficulties have arisen. Four senior staff members in the French department have obtained sabatical leave for the academic year 1973-74. It seems logical, Dr. Ireland felt, that by way of replacement the department will be offered three temporary junior lecturers. Dr. Ireland hopes one might be used in the area of French Canadian literature. He added that "this would however, place an enormous strain on other members of the staff. We have accepted this fact."

It would also place an awful load on these junior replacements. The new professors would be required to prepare and teach courses for the duration of one year with no guarantee for the future-no job security.

Dr. Ireland would like to see the introduction of several new courses if an appointment is made in the area of French Canadian studies. These courses include a course in Canadian Poetry (La Poesie Canadienne), a course in the Canadian Novel (Le Roman Canadien) which is mentioned in the calendar but has not been available for several years, one entitled "La Poesie Canadienne Contemporaine, and a course dealing with "Le Theatre Canadien Contemporaine".

A small committee of which Dr. Ireland is a member, has been set up to look into the possibility of establishing a programme, an honours B.A. programme with its orientation towards Canadian studies. "We are now gathering information; we are still in the fact-finding stage," Dr. Ireland stated. "We are studying the possibility of a programme that is Canadian and is more practical than academic," he added. In such a programme the students, instead of spending a year in France, would study for a year in a Canadian institution. Dr. Ireland also outlined his hopes of creating an interdepartmental programme of study in which the student would also include such courses as Canadian Economics and Canadian history.

Dr. Ireland added "I have given ample proof of my sympathetic concern for French Canadian studies and I am actively promoting these."

Brian Warrender Neil Steenberg Sarah Prichard Alan Ingram

QUEEN'S STUDENTS, AS RESIDENTS OF SYDENHAM WARD, ARE DIRECTLY AFFECTED BY CITY POLICY REGARDING HOUSING, SUMMER EMPLOYMENT, AND POLICE PROTECTION

HOUSING. . . "co-operative apartments are a positive approach to our housing problem."

SUMMER EMPLOYMENT. . ."I organized a pilot program last summer and hired 35 students. This year, with city co-operation we can aim for hiring several hundred students in this environmental program."

- FACULTY MEMBER - St. Lawrence College
- QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY GRADUATE B.Sc. '67 Civil Engineering M.Sc. Colorado, water resources
- 15 YR. RESIDENT OF SYDENHAM WARD
- ENVIRONMENTAL RESEARCHER

ANGUS
ROSS
SYDENHAM WARD

Help Elect Strong Representation
Call 542-7890 or visit 94 William St.

Dave Dobbin Bill Cook Sam Principi Abraham Szereszewski
Rick Hillary Sharon McFadzean Randy Coates Jean Cook Ted O'Neill

WE ARE WORKING TO ELECT ANGUS ROSS IN OUR WARD.

classified

The boys of the CA regret to announce that there are no new signings. However if you have the time, we have the applications. If interested contact Duke, Room 540 Gordon House or call Ralph (544-7594), The Big Bopper (544-7093) Jimbo (544-7575) or Huck (544-7584).

FREE beer if you have a lucky year card number. If you don't, don't give up -- you might win one of five prizes given out. Where is it all happening? At the Artsci '75 smoker Friday Dec 1 at 8:30 in the House of Commons.

TO DEAR OLD hard drinking' George alias Stringbean and chubby chicken from number one alias Cutie and Little One.

ARTSCI '77

NEEDS YOU

Think about orientation

GAEL

APPLICATION FORMS

AVAILABLE NOW

IN THE

A.M.S. OUTER OFFICE

MONDAY, DEC. 4

COMPLETED APPLICATIONS SHOULD BE RETURNED TO THE

A.M.S. OUTER OFFICE
THURSDAY, DEC. 14

ALL YEARS & FACULTIES MAY APPLY

HOME FOR XMAS

QUEEN'S EXCURSION

CLUB BUSES Dec. 8-20th

(as often as possible)

to such exotic destinations as

TORONTO, OTTAWA, MONTREAL

sign up period starts Dec. 4th in Outer AMS Office

SIGN UP EARLY

PLUS

Those interested in going to Florida for a week during the holidays (costs about $50) should also inquire at the OUTER AMS OFFICE

Mon.- Fri., 11:30 a.m.- 3:00 p.m.

letters

Pub closing

Dear Editor:

Due to the early date of pending exams and Christmas holidays, the pub will be closed until next term, effective December 7 at 12 pm. On that date we will be open from 12 noon to 12 midnight and it is hoped that patrons will drop in to have a beer and relax in the final hours before the onslaught of finals.

Many changes will be made over the holidays to the existing facilities (especially the House of Commons) which I hope will meet with approval.

My thanks go out to those presently working at the pub and to the student body at large for their assistance and co-operation this term. Merry Xmas and best wishes in the New Year.

Reg Rickaby
Manager

People in power

Dear Editor:

I have noticed the absence of the "People in Power" column in the last few issues of the Journal, a column which I think is badly needed in the Journal and one which is quite well written, satirically.

Perhaps it is felt that those students who are new to the campus will not derive any enjoyment from Mr. Jackson's entertaining portraits because they do not have the benefit of background and knowledge of the people he sketches. This,I believe, is a fallacy, for the material stands on its own as clever satiric, if perhaps heavy-handed writing and with the demise of the Dourmouse, the Journal does need some, shall I say, comic relief.

I certainly hope that Scoop Jackson will continue to do his sketches in the future and will not let criticism of any kind intimidate him, if indeed that is the case.

If one does not know the people about whom he writes they will, after reading his articles, to some strange degree anyway.

Perhaps he can also cover People Out of Power as well and thus mollify any objectors to the elitist subjects of his columns.

Either way, though I think this type of column is missed in the Journal and Mr. Jackson was giving us a bit of what we had last year in Mr. Broadbent's "Doormouse."

Yours truly,
S.L. Norris

Kraftco

Dear Editor:

It's not surprising that Kraftco should have friends and former (perhaps future) employees at Queen's.Mr. Charles defense of Kraftco and the company's reply are excellent diversions, neatly side-stepping the purpose of the NFU's Kraft Boycott. David Charles seems very sincere in asking us to have a look at both sides of the story and yet it's obvious from his letter and Kraftco's reply that neither party have bothered to consider the NFU's demands.

Perhaps if Mr. Charles were to take a close look at what the boycott committee is saying he too might question Kraftco's intentions. If the world's largest dairy producing company is really such a good company, why did the U.S. Federal Trade Commission forbid the company from acquiring any more dairy firms in the U.S. without FTC approval in 1963? Why did the FTC move to extend that order another 5 years in 1969? Why was Kraftco recently convicted and fined $5000 for running a dishonest contest in Canada? How did Nader's Raiders get away with saying on page 85 of "The Chemical Feast"-.. "One Food and Drug Administration official believes that Kraft has been responsible for a major decline in the quality of cheese made in the US but the agency can do nothing about it in spite of various cheese standards"...and continue on page 129 to outline the most important loopholes in the American law Kraftco uses to get around these standards. Why would Kraftco remain silent in light of such accusations? Where was their defense?

The boycott's success means a great deal to Canadian farmers. The giant Kraftco controls the milk industry in Canada and is rapidly squeezing the small farmer out. Kraftco has many influental friends working on its behalf throughout the various governments of Canada. Strangely the Ontario Milk Marketing Board which is supposedly the producers' voice in the price and distribution of milk seldom works in their best interests. The OMMB is responsible not to the farmers it represents but to a government committee which sits over it.

The dairy co-operative in Quebec Kraftco mentions is the Granby co-op. It produces 80 per cent of Quebec's milk supply and Kraft consumes 100 per cent of its produce. While David Charles hurries to his former employers defense and speaks of their benevolence, 1000 farmers a month go under in Canada. In the past two years Ontario has lost 44 independent cheese factories.

Huge companies like Kraftco will continue to expand and refuse to recognize the rights of the small farmer as long as we let them. By leaving their products on the shelves we can fight back and get their attention, through an empty cash register. If we can cut their margin of profit we'll hear a long, loud squawk from this giant because dollars are something they can really relate to. If the profit starts dropping perhaps they'll start listening.

I have forwarded a copy of Mr. Charles letter and Kraftco's reply to the NFU in Saskatoon Hopefully they will reply promptly and with more information than I have been able to supply.

Sincerely,
Dave Hunter

A complaint

Dear Editor:

With what strange malady is Michael Hodgson afflicted that his aural equipment should turn music as near perfection as the Vaghy Quartet into "squeeks and and groans"?

By publishing the nonsense written by Mr. Hodgson the Journal does a disservice to its readers and insults men we are most fortunate in having with us. If the Journal cannot find a competent music critic it would do better to refrain from comment.

Sincerely,
Wendy Innis

Queen's Journal

Vol. 100, No. 24
Fri. Dec. 1, 1972
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Patricia Devitt
Martin Jones
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
Backpage: Bob Mutrie
Photos: Pete Boag

Special thanks to Liz Trotter, Helen Gignac and to tipsy Sue de Stein.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society or the University. Offices are located in the Students' Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

Joi Bangla! It was good to be able to yell these words along with happy Bengalis on March 25, 1972 as they celebrated the eve of the first birthday of Bangladesh. This new country barely three months old previously had been the scene of the Indo-Pakistani war, a culmination of nearly nine months of terror for the Bengali people.

I am a pacifist and yet I was happy to hear of the Indian offensive in early December into East Pakistan. The situation of the refugees (estimates ran as high as 10 million) was hopeless and conditions in the camps were terrible. Continual reports of aggression committed in the name of Pakistani unity or the liberation of East Pakistan reached Canada, yet, attempts to mediate the situation continually ran afoul of the national sovereignty of Pakistan.

Bengalis have long rebelled against the control which West Pakistan exerted on the economy, an economy supported largely by products and resources from East Pakistan. Sheik Rahman, the leader of the Awami League ran in the democratic elections which Yahya Kham had permitted after several years of a constitutional presidency, on a 6-point platform of economic emancipation. He won a landslide victory in East Pakistan taking 167 out of the possible 169 seats and a majority in the 320 seat legislature of Pakistan.

Yahya Kham was unhappy with this situation and would not give a date for the opening of parliament. There was an increasing resentment of this denial of the election results in East Pakistan which was most apparent on the campus of the University of Dacca. It was here that the army struck on March 26, 1971 with the beginning of an armed repression which was to eventually result in the formation of Bangladesh.

Unquestionably, had the Bengalis remained passive, the repression would have quickly changed from a terror tactic to martial law. Understandably, the students and political leaders were unwilling to stand by and allow the army of Yahya Kham to perpetrate this limitation of their freedom.

Bangladesh Today

The armed conflict is now history. Bangladesh is a country of 75 million people spread across the delta area of the Ganges and Brahmaputra River in 55,000 villages. The 3 million people estimated killed in the war have long since been replaced, an indication of the phenomenally high birth rate. Feeding this population in a country which has the number of rivers to bridge or ferry across has been a nightmare for the United Nations Relief Operations Dacca (UNROD) but the operation was very successful and there are only isolated examples of severe food shortage complicated by transportation problems.

Central square in a Hindu area of old Dacca.

As Westerners, we have no idea of the difficulty of communication in a country such as Bangladesh. To illustrate, I talked at length to a Hindu restaurant operator near the Chittagong airport while waiting for a flight. His family slept on the floor of the restaurant at night but others from his village were not as fortunate. The village was destroyed twice by the Pakistan army and the people had gone to a camp in India until after the war. Now they faced an acute shortage of materials for building new homes and of food. He offered to take me by country boat to the village to witness their problems first hand but the journey was nearly half a day partially through mine fields. The distance was 10 miles. There was ample food in the harbour, indeed food rotting it was rumoured.

This distribution problem has been the first priority for many months and is far from being conquered yet. Rebuilding the King George VI bridge on the rail link between the major port of Chittagong and the capital city of Dacca will take some time. However a link between the other port of Chalna (which unfortunately is only suitable for shallow draft vessels) and Dacca has been established.

A train trip from Dacca which I made to Chittagong, a distance of 126 miles, took fourteen hours and included a short excursion by country boat at the King George VI bridge and a walk across another river and hastily constructed bamboo bridge in the dark.

A typical trip by Land Rover was into the delta area where the tidal wave hit in 1970, killing 600,000. A total distance of 54 miles, the first 34 odd miles took an hour and then we bounced over the remaining miles for two hours. These were major roads yet on the return trip we got stuck in the sand. Such are the problems facing a transportation network in Bangladesh.

There are several reasons why the distribution of food is so important in this agrarian country. Quite apart from the fact that the war destroyed many crops, there was frequently a shortage of seed and of water buffalo to work the land. In addition there has been drought this year which affected the fall crops.

An estimated 75 per cent of the fishing boats were sunk during the war and netting was similarly destroyed. The army killed much of the livestock and poultry for food. I visited a poultry farm operated by the Bangladesh Agricultural Development Corporation in Jessore and production of breeding stock had dropped to 10 per cent of the former level. In a country where the per capita consumption of eggs is normally 6 per year, this important source of protein or realistically of cash should be encouraged.

Oxfam Does A Superb Crisis Job

Relief is a dirty word with many organizations today. It tends to undermine the self-reliance of the people and is susceptible to corruption. Most organizations prefer to use food as payment for work, even if the work is construction of new homes. In actual fact, the government had the responsibility of allocating relief goods and supplementary feeding was undertaken by such organizations as UNICEF. UNROD supplied the means and know-how for distribution. Other organizations such as OXFAM which did a superb crisis job in the refugee camps, concentrated on helping the people to help themselves - providing everything from fishing nets to ferries.

The International Red Cross was present, coordinating with the UN the emergency medical work. There were isolated smallpox epidemics which were effectively controlled and considerable amounts of drugs were distributed. However, the functions of the International Red Cross were taken over by the Bangladesh Red Cross and the IRC asked to leave. There was considerable speculation as to whether the new organization would be up to the task but no reports of cholera epidemics or other serious medical problems have emerged.

The IRC has recently been under increasing criticism because of alleged undercover activity and because of the high amount of bureaucratic costs associated with the organization. Certainly, the Red Cross officials lived very well in Bangladesh at least while in Dacca or Chittagong. The large hotels where they stayed are expensive by our standards and these expenses were avoided by other officials by renting large houses and living together.

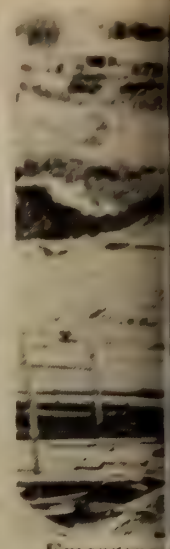
The percentage of total budget for administrative costs is always a sore point for an organization. I have heard reputable men who have every reason to know the correct figures state a figure for the International Red Cross of anything from 85 per cent to 97 per cent to keep the bureaucracy running. The work of the IRC does entail a lot of expensive medical expertise yet the Belgian doctors I met in Bangladesh were not getting a salary.

A recent report in the Globe and Mail stated that cynicism plagues those in the relief business for reasons big and small. Judging from what I saw of some IRC workers in the large centres, they would also be plagued with gout.

This article which came from the New York Times (Globe and Mail Oct. 6, 1972, P7) exemplifies the attitude which the American press have taken all through the troubles. There was a period of non-coverage while Kissinger and Nixon were putting all they could behind the army of Yaha Kham. Then they proceeded to attack India and suggested that there was far more than humanity behind her motives. When the war was over and the Indian army pulled out, they continually suggested curroption in the government, lack of control in the streets, Bihari persecution and sin of all sins, how much Bangladesh favoured Russia over the U.S. This latest report now complains that the U.S. Information Service in Dacca has a continual problem with broken windows. Quite apart from the fact that if one put the same building in areas of equal population density in the U.S., the windows might still be a problem, what do the Americans expect when the Nixon Administration is still highly pro-Pakistan and army relief aid from the U.S. was very slow in coming, not to mention formal recognition.

The article mentions that the government still seems disorganized and are having problems with certain decisions. Yet later it states that the total committments for aid have yet to reach $1 billion and this has to pay almost entirely for the administration of a population 1-3 of the size of the U.S. and for feeding and housing large numbers as well. Such sums are probably wasted annually by departments in the U.S. government.

Biharis Integrated Once Again Into Society



I spoke with EMAJUDDIN AHAMED, a graduate student in the department of Political Studies at Queen's who arrived in Canada only a month ago. He assured me that there was still an adequate supply of food, that there wasn't an appreciable problem with law and order, and that many of the Biharis had been integrated into the society once more. All of these comments confirmed my own impressions of six months ago.

There was a considerable amount of publicity concerning the Biharis in the press here. They were Muslims who came from the region of Bihar in India to East Pakistan following partition. They speak Urdu which is the language of West Pakistan and have often clashed with Bengalis as a result of their pro-West Pakistani views. The present problem grew out of the fact that they collaborated openly with the army of West Pakistan during the occupation of Bangladesh, and once the war was over, Biharis in certain areas continued to deny the reality of Bangladesh, verbally and by use of snipers and sabateurs. Understandably, they were gathered into camps in those areas where there was still a considerable degree of antagonism. Once in the camps, they continued to snipe at the Bengalis, and it was impossible for most of the agencies who must of necessity work with the government to operate in the camps safely. Whether or not this matter has been partially resolved is questionable; in areas of the country it will continue to create trouble, particularly if there are still Bengali P.O.W.'s in Pakistan.

I have the impression that newsmen often get their stories sitting at the bar in King George VI Bridge on railroad line from Dacca to Chittagong.

Emergency

the Intercontin is trying to imp onto a country would suggest that unfortunat

Anyone who while he instr tremendous p bureaucracy.
scarcely cause dealt the Trud question of the this democratic Party and son rebellion. Brita

As a final co
Jackson, at a p
American pres
Bangladesh."

I have said th
just recently pa
unit in the gove
fidence of Parli
An election is constitution. I
League of Sheil

I

It is difficult spaceship earth growing realitie on television tw Trek. While on Bombay. As a g trade Western dancing at their led into the roo
home of her hus

There was a the women of seclusion and at

Classes were the city but in a organization. I epitome of pres

I mentioned e near Noakhali. I hit as another ty formed land wh
Hastily formed and impoverish
the government farming commu
necessary to gro
nonite Central C

In other countr particularly in t confident that un succeed. By gat and medical ser hundred families agrarian techni
vest achieved.

I was told tha easily be quadru
chronic food defi

There are man
the recent crisis
help is still neede

There are prob yet the people's f continues. My fir
people was unfo

eing erected on the shoulder of a road in Dacca.

Joi Bangla!

Bangladesh After the War

by Nelson Coyle

r in front of the desk of an exasperated UN official, who re-bound Western systems onto an Eastern culture and sportation and communication is so very difficult. I mation at all would be better than this distorted view ed as the truth by many North Americans.

the health minister of a new country and has to pause retary on how to write a letter can appreciate the olved in setting up a new civil service, a new faced with a decline in the economic picture which change in their standard of living, in recent elections nent quite a blow. In Bangladesh, there is still the equate supply of essential commodities. Yet, when in ere is an opposition outcry from the National Awami strikes, newsmen hastily interpret this as seething easure is on the verge of revolution.

Director of the UN operations in Decca, Sir Robert nce on October 13 "ridiculed reports in a section of the ave a 'bleak picture' of the state of affairs in sh is a democratic country. The new constitution was provides for a Parliament as the single most powerful Cabinet and Prime Minister functioning with the con- elected President as the Constitutional head of state. arch 7, 1973 to form the government under this new nfortable majority at the very least for the Awami and why anyone would reject the global village, of the world approach in the light of present and ication and transportation. While in Dacca, I watched resentations of American drama, Ironside and Star India, I sang Beatle songs with two students from me of a very wealthy Muslim family, not only did we songs back and forth but did some Western style while a traditional wedding was in progress. We were new bride was spending a week in seclusion in the ur respects, to Salaam.

Songs With Two Students From Bombay

shortage of competent stenographers and nurses so were encouraged to leave the traditional Muslim (This was considered to be Women's Lib.)

nitiated with a good attendance of women not only in ntry areas where there was a coop or other umbrella hat the Cadillac in which Sheik Raman rode was the ohoon which left many people homeless in the area safe to remain in areas near where the 25 foot wave ver present threat. There were large areas of newly- gely unsettled ude to a high concentration of salt. previously existing ones to try and help the displaced ettle. Several young Bengali architects approached he concept of cluster village was used to organize the ese lands where a certain level of technology is anizations such as OXFAM and the Canadian Men- up the funds for the construction of the village.

ve been problems with the operation of these villages traditional vs. technical leadership. However, I feel ual conditions in Bangladesh the cluster villages can ple together, such problems as sanitation, education, achieved much more easily than if the average one attered villages as they would be traditionally. The be more effectively implemented and a better haration, fertilizer and registered seed, the crop can n year, an important consideration considering the gue that part of the world.

ns such as OXFAM which worked very hard during h. The country is still in a state of crisis and much ountry will again be functioning normally.

maginative, lazy, and corrupt government officials bandhu (Friend of Bental), Sheik Mujibur Rahman s that the hospitality extended to me by the Bengali usations of bias cheerfully accepted.

FELLOW STUDENTS!

without US there would not be an education system

FOR A VOICE IN EDUCATION

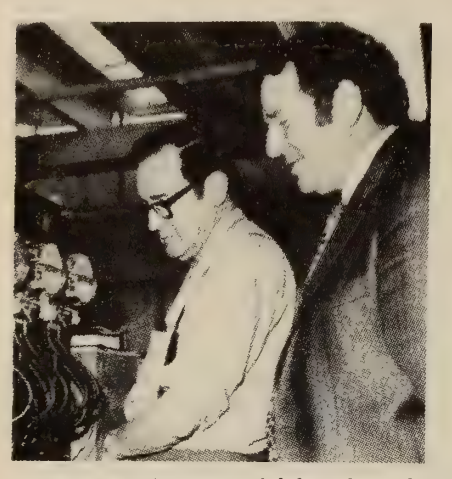
ELECT

Gord Kauppinnen

TO Frontenac Board of Education

M.B.A. STUDENT ARTS '72 GRAD

ELROND PUB NIGHT



MONDAY, DEC. 4th

8:00 p.m.

2nd floor union

quit studying for 15 minutes and come have a beer with some members of ELROND learn more about ELROND as the place for you to live after Xmas or next year

Federal employee explaining how he checks P.U.C. meters to Donald B. Good

ELECT

DONALD B. GOOD

FOR P.U.C.

- Lawyer in Kingston for 19 years.
- Educated at Queen's and Dalhousie (Halifax).
- Former City Alderman.

Donald Good stands for:

...More public disclosure of the affairs of the P.U.C.

2...Analysis of all transportation — private cars, taxis, trucks, inter-city buses, trains, motorcycles, bicycles, to see how the bus system best fits in.

3...Complete re-examination of the bus system, with drivers and users as well as management, to try to find ways either to reduce the deficit or to get better value for it.

4...Constant study of all utilities — electricity, water, gas, to keep ahead of needs, and full consultation with the users.

5...More cooperation between City Council and P.U.C.

Keep your utilities in good hands - Vote GOOD, DONALD B. for P.U.C.

classified

FOR SALE - Ladies Buckle ski boots, used one season. Size8B. Best Offer. Contact Janice. . Career Planning and Placement 121 Union St. 547-2992.

PAINT your room, decorate our massive Xmas tree, learn to cook, help manage your own living space. Do it all Elrond and do it now. Xmas is the time to make that fresh change before residence gets you down in second term.

"BUFFALO CHIPS" General Meeting Saturday Dec 2 at 2 pm in Dunning Auditorium. Find out what's happening. Information and helpful hints abouts acts and talent will be provided. Everyone interested is welcome.

SHIP IN A BOTTLE. Sent from Scotland. You pay customs etc duty. Hand Made. Complete in detail. In standard bottle -- Cutty Sark $29.50; QE 11 $31.50; The Fishing Boat $30.50 The Battleship $32.50. Yachts in full sail in upright bottle for lampmaking - The America $36.50) Gypsy Moth II $36.50; Lightening $36.50. Prices for custom work on request. J. W. Rogers Box 1471 Kingston.

TO the boys of the C.A..Don't count your chickens before they're hatched because I may not come back from Innsbruck. Joanne Emsley.

TO ALL campaign workers and friends, thank you for your support. Please come to the campaign party, 8:30 Monday, 94 William St. Angus Ross.

31 openings

We have at least thirty-one openings in two categories. Both involve the planning and selling of life insurance programs, not just policies.
We are interested in interviewing any graduate from any discipline, but only if you're at least open-minded enough to explore a sales career. (If you're not, see page 48 of the new Employment Opportunities Handbook. Available free at your placement office.)

London Life

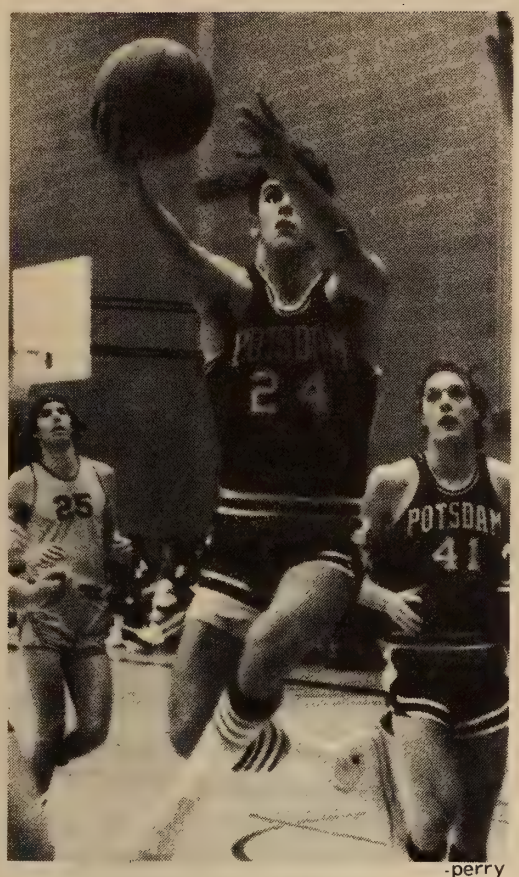
We will be on campus at Queen's Dec. 5 & 6

AOSC Official Student Charter Flights

TORONTO TO LONDON

FLIGHT	DEPARTURE	RETURN	CARRIER	BAGGAGE	EXTRAS	COST
E1	Dec. 15	Jan. 3	BOAC 707	66 lbs	free bar, transportation from Heathrow to downtown London	$179 return
E2	Dec. 21	Jan. 7	BOAC 707	66 lbs		$179 return

TORONTO TO VANCOUVER



FLIGHT	DEPARTURE	RETURN
T1	Dec. 20	Jan. 3

COST IS ONLY $129 RETURN

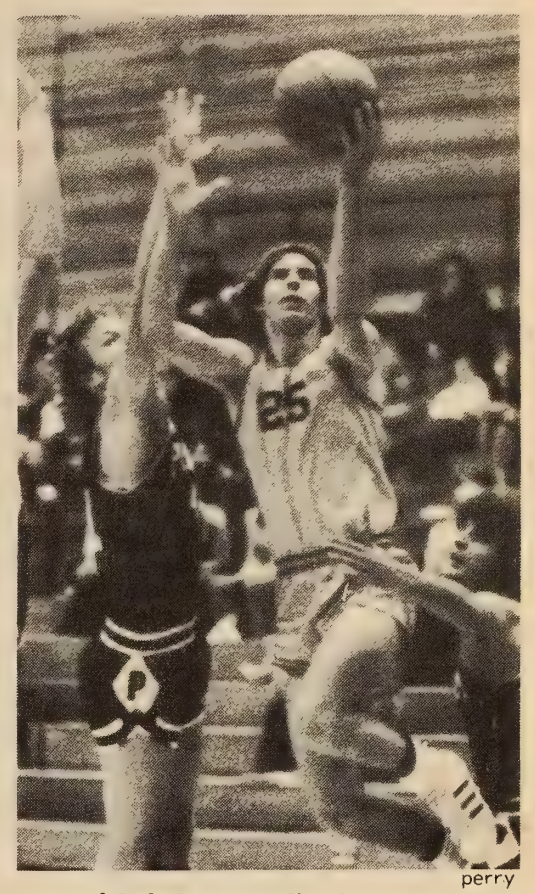
★ more information available at AMS Office

Mike Deane- 23 points, 10 assists

All-East guard sinks Gaels 91-52

perry

Mike Deane drives for Potsdam. . .



by Chris Boon

A 23-point, 10-assist performance by Postdam College guard Mike Deane, and the dominance of centre Ted Bence and forward Mark Dieschler under the boards gave the American school a 91-52 win over the basketball Gaels Monday night. The exhibition defeat was Queen's worst to date, but the Gaels' level of play was actually better than in their game with Brock on Saturday. The difference was the quality of the opposition.

The Gaels' effort was led by guards Rob Smart and John Keck, who hit 14 and 12 points respectively, while Norm Hagarty and Derek Swinnard added 8 each. Bruce Hemming pulled down a paltry 6 rebounds to lead Queen's in that department. Surprisingly enough, Deane proved to be beatable on defence. Smart hit most of his points on driving layups after turning the Potsdam star around. Of course, Deane did display an absolutely uncanny passing touch, and his outside shooting is on a par with the best I've seen, the NBA excepted.

The Gaels got off to a very slow start (apparently typical, this year), and found themselves facing the long road back very early in the contest. Although Potsdam put in the reserves mid-way through the second period, they still led 39-22 at the half. Some improved efforts by Keck et al pulled the Gaels to within 16 points in the third period, but coach Frank Tindall decided to take a look at his bench, and the Yanks pulled away thereafter.

So much for that one. Queen's hosts York here this Friday for a league contest, then travels south on Saturday for an exhibition game with Jefferson C.C. in Watertown. The one that matters is the York match-up. If the Gaels win, they will be 2-0 in their pre-Christmas OUAA schedule, and will have a little edge to take on the road in the new year. However, York will not play dead for the Gaels. A win is going to require a full-game effort from everybody, not just two or three people. Queen's big men, especially, are going to have to get agressive under the backboards, because rebounds mean points, and the Gaels aren't getting enough of either. Norm Hagarty and John Keck will have to find their shooting touch, especially from outside, and everybody is going to have to play some defence. Finally, a request: lets have one game when we don't miss so many layups!

perry

. . .and Rob Smart replies for Queen's

Hockey Gaels choke in 7-5 loss to Ottawa

by Peter Watts

At the start of the 1972 OUAA hockey season, I made a statement that the hockey Gaels performance this season would depend to a large extent on the attitude of the players themselves. Tuesday night's game at the Harty Arena convinced me that I was right. In the first period the Gaels looked lethargic. No one was skating, checking, or hitting. The result was that the Gaels went to the dressing room at the end of the first period trailing 3-0. While their performance in the second and final periods picked up somewhat, the final score was Ottawa 7, Queen's 5.

The Gee Gees came out flying in the first period. They had lost their first three games of the season, and they were ready for a good night. At the 50 second mark, Pierre Chartier scored the first of three goals on a pass from Bill Fox and Steve Aubrey. Three minutes later it was 2-0 Ottawa as Chartier got his second goal with help from Fox and Rick Hare. The final goal of the period was scored by Frank Coffey, a former Gael, with help from Bernard Gouin and Chartier.

The second period found the Gaels a little more lively but the steam was taken out of them rather quickly as Fox got his first goal of the night on a passing play from Hare and Chartier, at the 50 second mark. Ottawa got another goal from Chartier, his third of the night before Queen's finally got untracked. At 13:39, Bob Kindon started the Queen's comeback as he drove home a rebound after some hard work in front of the net by Dave Hadden and Jim Tittemore. Four minutes later, defenceman Steve Gross tipped in a pass from Jim Sunstrum with John Smith also drawing an assist on the play. It was one of the few times all evening that the power play showed any power; the Gaels enjoyed a man advantage several times but could not score.

With the Gaels trailing 5-2 going into the third period, Jim Sunstrum closed the gap with a goal at the two minute mark on a beautiful solo effort, Sunstrum picked up the puck at his own blueline, skated the length of the ice and scored on a backhand from the right side. A minute and a half later, Fox got his second goal of the night to make the score 6-3 Ottawa. The Gaels got two more goals before the 12 minute mark, both by Colin Loudon. The final goal of the game was scored with just 38 seconds to play as Dan Hurtubise fired the puck into the Queen's goal after goalie Clyde Harris had been lifted in favour of an extra attacker.

Once the Gaels got going in the second period, it was the line of Loudon, Sunstrum, and Smith which brought them close to Ottawa. Sunstrum picked up a goal and three assists and is right up among the scoring leaders in the OUAA. But one cannot deny that the star of the game was goalie Gary Doyle of Ottawa. Queen's outshot Ottawa 39-28, with 32 of those shots coming in the first two periods. Doyle time and again came up with several sprawling saves to keep Ottawa in the game. The Gaels had enough chances to win; they missed at least four open nets in their eagerness.

In summary, Queen's lost the hockey game in the first period. The Gaels were completely outhustled, outbumped, and outscored. Their performance in the second and third periods showed improvement. But hockey games are 60 minutes long and Queen's is going to have to play 60 minutes of hockey if it expects to win a game. Again, one must stress the importance of individual attitude and the desire to win. This club has a lot of ability and a lot of potential. I still think it is a better hockey club than the one last year. But it is a club that is not pulling together. There is too much reliance on the other guy to do the job. Queen's must work hard on its defensive game. Several Ottawa goals were scored after Harris had made a couple of stops.

Queen's has been blessed with a relatively easy schedule before Christmas. The fact that the Gaels came out of it with 2 wins, 2 losses and a tie does not speak well for 1973 when Queen's will meet Toronto, York and Laurentian, clubs which all finished ahead of Queen's last year. If Queen's plays like it did on Tuesday night in the first period, the season is over right now.

Friday night, the Gaels play an exhibition game against St. Lawrence University of the ECAC. The ECAC is one of the top college leagues in the United States. It would be nice to see a good crowd on hand. It would be even nicer to see Queen's Golden Gaels play hockey the way they are capable of playing.

Queen's Judo Club

Queen's Judo Club has a new practice schedule starting immediately:

Monday and Wednesday 5:30 to 7 p.m. in the combatives room of the Physed Complex. The instructor is Randy Genois, Blackbelt. New members, both male and female, are welcome to join immediately. If interested, come and watch or practice a bit. There are no obligations or membership fees. For more information, phone 544-7106.

Waterpolo Gals here Saturday

The waterpolo Gals open their season on Saturday, December 2nd here at Queen's with an exhibition game against a composite team of four CWPA teams from Ottawa. The gals will start their first intercollegiate season in January and in addition, will continue to play Canadian Waterpolo Association teams as they did last year. It will be a heavy schedule for the Gals and will also be a challenge as to whether or not they can match the Gals quick rise in intercollegiate waterpolo.

The Gals are ably coached by Gord Hurd, a former star with the Gaels waterpolo teams. The team lack playing experience as a unit. Returning veterans from last year's team, Di Eastham, Mary Henoch, Cathy Leadman, Heather Morley, and Pat Parr should provide some of the needed experience on offense as well as on defence. Newcomers Donna Hutchings and Robin Leighton are experienced players from the excellent CWPA Canterbury team in Ottawa, and should prove to be scoring assets. The team has practiced hard all fall and shows great potential. This first intercollegiate waterpolo season should be worth watching.

GET INVOLVED!
BECOME A
RED CROSS
VOLUNTEER

bews news

by Peter Watts

The intra-mural basketball season will get underway on Monday, January 15th. Entries close on Wednesday, January 10th but athletic sticks are urged to get them in before leaving for the holidays. Anyone interested in timing or scoring Bews basketball is invited to see Mr. Leonard in the Phys Ed Centre before January 10th.

Bews Curling will begin on Sunday January 14th. Entries will close on Friday, December 8th, and interested athletic sticks should register their teams with Mr. Andrew before that date. Mr. Andrew is located in Room 219 of the Phys Ed Centre. Each entry must be accompanied by a cheque for $12.00, payable to the Men's Intra-mural Athletic Committee. This money will be used to offset the cost of ice-rental.

Round four of the paddleball tournament is now posted on the notice board of the men's locker room in the Phys Ed Centre. Play must be completed by Monday, December 4 or entrants forfeit their right to continue in the tournament.

We're now into round three of the singles squash tournament. This should also be over by Monday, December 4. The fourth round should be completed by December 7th and the fifth by December 10th. The champion should be known by Tuesday, December 12th.

On Wednesday, January 10th, the finals in singles and doubles tennis will be played in Bartlett Gym. Action will get underway at 8:40 that evening.

Next week's column will be the last one before Christmas and I'll have a review of the Bews winners to date. Hopefully as well there will be a completely updated Bews standings list available. Again, the list on the board in the locker room is not official due to the fact that some sport supervisors are withholding participation points until after the completion of their sports. However the list as of November 24th finds Civil and Math hanging onto the lead they have held since the opening week of the season. Comerce '73 is second and Phys Ed follows in third. As has been the case for the last couple of years, Commerce and Engineering teams are prominant in the Bews Standings. The top ten are:

1. Civil and Math	17,045
2. Commerce '73	14,683
3. PHE	13,882
4. Mining	12,060
5. Chemical	11,805
6. Mechanical	11,711
7. Commerce '75	10,452
8. Law '74	8,879
9. Commerce '76	8,320
10. Commerce '74	7,308

classified

LOST: bracelet (fine gold chain) last Wed. somewhere on campus. Great sentimental value. Also small gold barrette at the semi. 544-5489.

WE may not be the last bash of the year, but we are definitely the cheapest. Artsci 75 Beer Bash. Buy first beer for 49c, get second for only 1c.

COME one, come all to the Artsci 75 Beer Bash, but don't forget your Artsci '75 year card or it will cost you 75c. Fri Dec 1 at 8:30 pm in the House of Commons.

ELROND is more than a residence. By allowing members to manage things themselves, Elrond educates people in practical experience. Come learn how to manage an operating budget of half a million dollars, run a co-operative kitchen or plan an education program that will educate you. People with just BA's need experience these days, you know.

YOU too ARE A

KINGSTON RESIDENT

in Sydenham Ward

VOTE

thompson

for effective representation

SPONSORED BY SUPPORTERS OF
JIM THOMPSON
- ALDERMANIC CANDIDATE

ARTSCI '76

smoker

FRIDAY, DEC. 8,

at 8:00 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

free with year cards

- 75¢ without

beer 3/$1.00

featuring

Honky Tonk Pianists

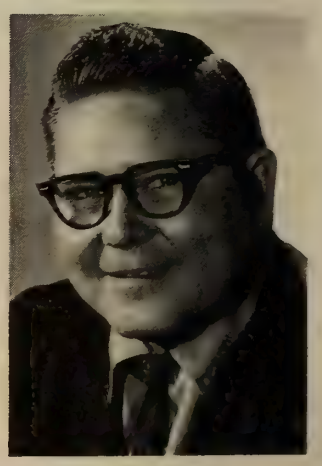
FESTIVAL '73
MUSICIANS

Sign up, try out for the music portion of the Arts Festival

Are you a single musician in search of a group?

Get together with other musicians

Dec. 5 & 6th, 7-8 p.m.



2nd floor Common Room
Students Union

VOTE

King

Enright

P.U.C.

"A man already active in our community."

—King Enright is a life-long resident of Kingston, 37 years of age, married.

—King, his wife and four children, reside at 654 Division St.

—A former Kingston Alderman for four years.

—Vice president, Kingston Area Real Estate Assn.

—Chairman of Closing Ceremonies, Kingston Tercentenary.

Queen's students rode buses free of charge in a recent experiment. What did you think of this test? Call 544-4100 and let me hear your views.

King ENRIGHT	X

Department of Film Studies

Presents

A TOUT PRENDRE

First Feature Film by
Claude Jutra
Director of MON ONCLE ANTOINE

Tuesday, December 5

9:00 p.m. Ellis Hall

Admission $1.00

The film has English Sub-titles

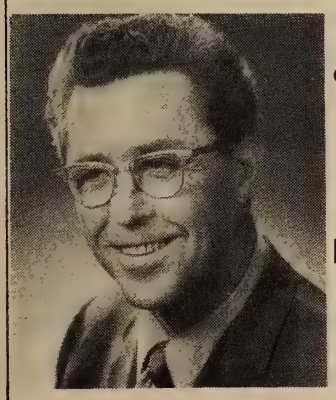
G.S.S. FILM CLUB

presents

a hilarious comedy double bill

"I'm No Angel"

starring Mae West & Cary Grant



and

"The Bank Dick"

starring W.C. Fields

Tonight, 8 p.m., Ellis Auditorium
Admission: $1.00 or Season's ticket

STUDENTS IN SYDENHAM WARD
RE-ELECT
W.T. Jim Cook
8 yrs experience

Has served on all committees of council. Is interested in Kingston progressing so that we will all have a better place to live and work in.

VOTE ON Dec. 4

RE-ELECT
W.T. Jim Cook

for information call 542-6827

AN ALDERMAN FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

From the sidelines...

by Chris Boon

Last weekend marked what is without doubt the most successful competitive period for Queen's athletes in many a moon. With the exception of an exhibition loss by squash and a 3rd-place finish by men's badminton, every Queen's team either won or tied its games. The women were especially successful, sweeping all league games, and coming up with some unexpected power on several fronts. Our hearty congratulations all around. . .but don't let it go to your heads.

While on that last-mentioned subject, it appears that several of the men's teams are going to have to learn to play a whole game as a team. Tuesday's hockey fiasco is discussed elsewhere, but by this point in time, there is no excuse for the kind of disjointed, almost lackadasical play that the Gaels displayed for the first period and a half. There is no disgrace in losing to a better team; there is a great deal in beating yourself with a half-hearted effort.

The men's swim team will be in action this weekend, competing in a three-way meet in Ottawa with teams from Ottawa U. and Potsdam. The swim Gaels expect to improve on last year's record, with rookie Darryl Penner providing some fresh spark.

John Albinson's wrestlers will be in action here today, against teams from Ryerson and R.M.C. The occasion is a wrestling clinic, which will run from 5:30 till 9:00 pm. The Queen's performers to watch are Mike Dwhyte, who finished 3rd in the 167-lb class last week in Toronto, and Rob Beamish, a veteran of Queen's wrestling, who was second in the 142-lb class to Olympian Egon Beiler of Waterloo. Two newcomers, Kim Knight and Randy White, are expected to turn in good performances as well. The team to watch will probably by Ryerson, who are coached by Pat Bolger, a five-year veteran of the Canadian National Team. The meet will take place in the Combatives Room of the Phys Ed centre.

The basketball Gals look like they could have themselves a winner, based on their performance against Laurentian on Saturday. The job that Karen Flemming, Laney Marshall, Karen Carson and friends did on National Team guard Kathy Williams was a pleasure to see. Not only did she foul out in the third quarter, but Queen's "swarming" zone defence held her to a scant two points. Not a bad effort at all. Considering that the Intermediates went undefeated as well, and has an overwhelming margin in play in all four games, women's basketball is on the way up, and should stay that way for a long time to come.

Finally, Hamilton will dump Regina 36-24 in the Grey Cup.

seven-more-days

Friday, December 1

6:30 pm - Shabbat Chanukah Services and Full Course Yom Tov Meal. $1.50. Songs, Music etc. at Hillel House. 26 Barrie Street. Call 542-1532. Reservations a must!

8:00 pm -G.S.S. Film Club presents "I'm No Angel and "The Bank Dick" with Mae West and W.C. Fields. Ellis Hall.

7:30 and 9:00 pm - The Department of Drama presents Chronicles 15, The Private Ear by Peter Shaffer. Room 102, The Studio Theatre, Old Arts Building. Tickets are free at the Drama Office, in the basement.

8:30 pm - Don't miss "Promenade" a musical child of the living theatre at the Guildhall Theatre, 233½ Princess Street. Tickets $1 at the door.

8:30 pm - Collegium Musicum Concert under the direction of Professor W. Maust of the Music Department. A free concert in Grant Hall. Works by Dunstable and Dufay.

Saturday, December 2

8:00 pm -Snow Job 11 Queen's Ski Club presents last beer bash of term in Grant Hall. All welcome, admission free.

8:30 pm - Don't miss "Promenade" a musical child of the living theatre at the Guildhall Theatre, 233½ Princess Street, Tickets $1 at the door.

Sunday, December 3

10:30 am - Folk Mass, Dunning Hall, Followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House, 164 University Ave.

4:00 pm - Eucharistic Celebration at Queen's Theological Hall. Faculty Lounge. (2nd Floor). All welcome.

7:30 pm - Folk Mass, Senior Common Room at McArthur.

7:00 pm - Chanukah Buffet. 5:30 - 7:00 pm. Kosher Cold-cuts. $1.50.

8:00 pm - A talk on Chanukah by Dr. Judah Sanders. Noted Author and scholar of early Greek History, Professor of Classics, Loyola College, Montreal. Hillel House, 26 Barrie Street.

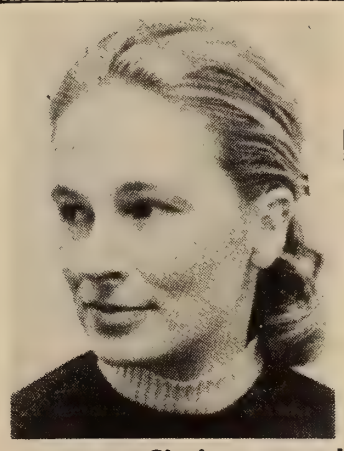
8:30 pm - Don't miss "Promenade" a musical child of the living theatre at the Guildhall Theatre, 233½ Princess St. Tickets $1.00 at the door.

Monday, Dec. 4

3:00 - 4:00 pm - Queen's improvisation group under the direction of Prof. David Keane of the Music Dept. presents a lecture - concert demonstration. No admission charge. Dunning Hall

7:30 pm - Kingston Psychiatric Hospital Christmas Concert. Westwood Auditorium.

Off Campus



Pubs

Commodore - The Versatiles
401 Inn - The Dianne Merrik Show
Lakeview Manor - Honey West
Town House - Wes Epae and the New Zealand Connection

Theatres

Capitol - Prime Cut
Hyland Theatre - To Kill a Clown
Starting Sunday - A Day In The Death of Joe Egg
Odeon - The Valachi Papers
Grand Theatre - Dec. 1 and Dec. 2 - Kinsmen Club of Kingston presents "Kismet" Music and Lyrics by Robert Wright and George Forrest. 8:00 pm.

On December 4th
ELECT
Alderman for Sydenham Ward
Nancy Foster

- for a strong voice for Urban Planning on City Council.
- for improved zoning to preserve the inner city for family living.
- for a responsive representative who accepts the need for greater public participation in city government.

Former Chairman and Member of the City Planning Board, Queen's Graduate, former Board Member of Elizabeth Fry Society, Housewife, Mother, Ward Resident for 11 years.

Canada: PM Trudeau announces new, improved Cabinet

A radical shakeup of the federal Cabinet was announced Tuesday by Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, with the ministers from Ontario taking the limelight and those from Quebec pushed for the most part into lesser Cabinet positions.

In announcing the makeup of his new Cabinet the Prime Minister stated that the changes were made in line with his new policy of appointing ministers who would take more care in explaining the government's philosophies and policies.

In line with this stance Trudeau placed the most outspoken Liberals in the major portfolios, notably Donald Jamieson who will take up the position of the Department of Regional Economic Expansion.

DREE came under considerable attack from the Conservative and New Democratic Parties in the last election campaign.

Hugh Faulkner a fluently bilingual spokesman has been appointed to Secretary of State and will be responsible for administering the official languages act, which caused considerable controversy in the Ottawa area ridings.

Both Ontario and Quebec received an increase in representation receiving twelve and ten portfolios respectively. Only four went to the west compared with the usual six to eight, but Trudeau only had a total of seven western MP's to choose from.

There are two Cabinet ministers from Vancouver: Jack Davis Minister of the Environment and Ron Basford, Minister for Urban Affairs. Both held those positions in the last Cabinet.

Former Minister of State for Science and Technology Alastair Gillespie was given one of the larger promotions, going to Industry, Trade and Commerce. His former position was taken over by Jeanne Sauve, one of the eight new members in the Cabinet and sitting for her first term in the House.

There was the usual strong representation from Toronto with Stanley Haidasz Parkdale, appointed to the position of Secretary of State, Allastair Gillespie of Etobicoke, Robert Stanbury of York-Scarborough in National Revenue, Mitchell Sharp maintaining External Affairs and Donald S. MacDonald from Rosedale maintaining Energy, Mines and Resources.

James Richardson, is now minister of Defence, filling the post vacated by Edgar Benson who was appointed to the Canadian Transport Commission.

Bryce Mackasey, who announced early on that he would not return to the Cabinet was replaced in Manpower and Immigration by Robert Andras.

Former Solicitor General Jean-Pierre Goyer, who received considerable trouble from the opposition for his prison reforms has been sent to Supply and Services, considered a "safe" portfolio.

Many familiar faces have been dropped from he Cabinet. Former Postmaster General Jean-Pierre Cote and Veterans Affairs Minister Arthur Laing were appointed to the Senate. Defeated in the last election were Labor Minister Martin O'Connell, Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, Agriculture Minister H. A. Olsen and Pat Mahoney, Minister without Portfolio.

The new Cabinet contains a total of fifteen lawyers, four businessmen, three journalists, two farmers, one doctor, a teacher and a union organizer.

Trudeau also filled the three traditional posts in the usual manner. Charles Drury, Treasury Minister is an English speaking protestant from Quebec, Jean-Eudes Dube is a French speaking member from outside Quebec and Eugene Whelan in Agriculture is a Roman Catholic of Irish descent.

'Voila!'

Lineup

New ministers

WARREN ALLMAND, 40, Notre Dame de Grace, Solicitor-General.

HUGH FAULKNER, 39, Peterborough, Secretary of State.

STANLEY HAIDASZ, 49, Parkdale, Minister of State.

MARC LALONDE, 43, Outremont, Health and Welfare.

DAN MacDONALD, 54, Cardigan, Veterans Affairs.

ANDRE OUELLET, 33, Papineau, Postmaster-General.

JEANNE SAUVE, 50, Ahuntsic, Minister of State for Science and Technology.

EUGENE WHELAN, 48, Essex, Agriculture.

Shifts in portfolio

ROBERT ANDRAS, 51, Port Arthur, to Manpower and Immigration from Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

ALASTAIR GILLESPIE, 50, Etobicoke, to Industry, Trade and Commerce from Minister of State for Science and Technology.

JEAN-PIERRE GOYER, 40, Dollard, to Supply and Services from Solicitor-General.

HERBERT GRAY, 41, Windsor West, to Consumer and Corporate Affairs from National Revenue.

DONALD JAMIESON, 51, Burin-Burgeo, to Regional Economic Expansion from Transport.

JEAN MARCHAND, 53, Langelier, to Transport from Regional Economic Expansion.

JOHN MUNRO, 41, Hamilton East, to Labor from Health and Welfare.

GERARD PELLETIER, 53, Hochelaga, to Communications from Secretary of State.

JAMES RICHARDSON, 50, Winnipeg South, to Defence from Supply and Services.

ROBERT STANBURY, 43, York-Scarborough, to National Revenue from Communications.

Unchanged

PIERRE TRUDEAU, 53, Mount Royal, Prime Minister.

MITCHELL SHARP, 61, Eglinton, External Affairs.

JOHN TURNER, 43, Ottawa-Carleton, Finance.

ALLAN MacEACHEN, 51, Cape Breton Highlands—Canso, President of the Privy Council.

CHARLES M. DRURY, 60, Westmount, President of the Treasury Board.

JEAN CHRETIEN, 38, St. Maurice, Indian Affairs and Northern Development.

DONALD S. MACDONALD, 40, Rosedale, Energy, Mines and Resources.

SENATOR PAUL MARTIN, 69, Government Leader in the Senate.

JACK DAVIS, 56, Capilano, Environment.

JEAN-EUDES DUBE, 46, Restigouche, Public Works.

RONALD BASFORD, 40, Vancouver Centre, Minister of State for Urban Affairs.

OTTO LANG, 40, Saskatoon-Humboldt, Justice Minister and Attorney-General, with responsibility for the Canadian Wheat Board.

World: NZ says no H-test

WELLINGTON — New Zealand has announced that it will take a strong stand against France's recently announced plans to resume nuclear tests in the Pacific and that they will oppose all such tests anywhere in the world.

In his first policy statement after being swept to victory in last week's general election, Prime Minister-elect Norman Kirk took a strong stand against nuclear tests in the Pacific.

Kirk stated that he will be sending a frigate into the Pacific test area if France follows through her plans for exploding a hydrogen bomb next year. He also stated that there would be at least one cabinet minister on board.

Major fallout is expected from the porposed detonation as France has no underground facilities, and is not a member of the agreement reached by most other nations which bans underwater or above-ground testing.

Jim Carns, an Australian Labor MP has contacted Kirk, stating that he would go on the frigate. Both Australia and New Zealand are following a hard line against all nuclear testing.

BUENOS AIRES — Former Argentine Dictator Juan Peron, leader of the country's largest political movement although he just recently returned from seventeen years of exile in Spain, has set his conditions for peace with the Argentine military government.

He has called for free elections without the qualifying rules which have been imposed, making it illegal for anyone including himself, not in the country before September to run.

The government's recent decision to return to civilian rule brought Peron back from exile to resume direct control of his party. However the government decree disqualifies him from running.

The major philosophy of the Peronist movement is a strong central authority and one dominant political movement.

CAMP DAVID, MD. — President Richard Nixon has announced broad changes in the makeup of his cabinet, giving preliminary reports of who will not be included.

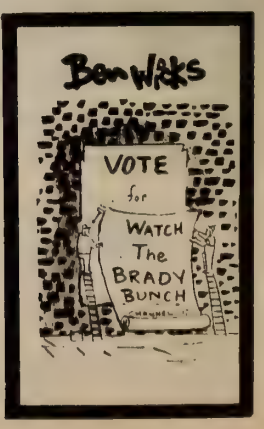
Treasury Secretary John Connally is to be dumped as will Secretary of Defence Melvin Laird. Nixon announced that he has received the resignation of Governor Nelson Rockefeller, but that he may be occasionally appointed to special assignments.

He also announced the resignation of Housing and Urban Development Secretary George Romney. Romney has stated that he will lead a concerned citizens coalition to advocate an erasing in the limitations of the country's political process.

CAIRO — Egyptian Premier Aziz Sidky announced that he is now ready to conduct a full scale war with Israel and reiterated his stand opposing any partial settlement to the mid-east conflict. He stated that Egypt has been giving top budgetary priority to their armed forces.

LA PAX, BOLIVIA — The conflict between the Labour Unions and President Hugo Banzer Suarez which led to a general strike over wages last week has ended but the nation's miners have now struck with an even tougher stand.

The miners want a reopening of the militant-dominated Bolivian Labor Centre Confederation of Unions which was closed after a bloody civil war in 1971. They are also calling for an anmesty for all those imprisoned or exiled for political reasons.

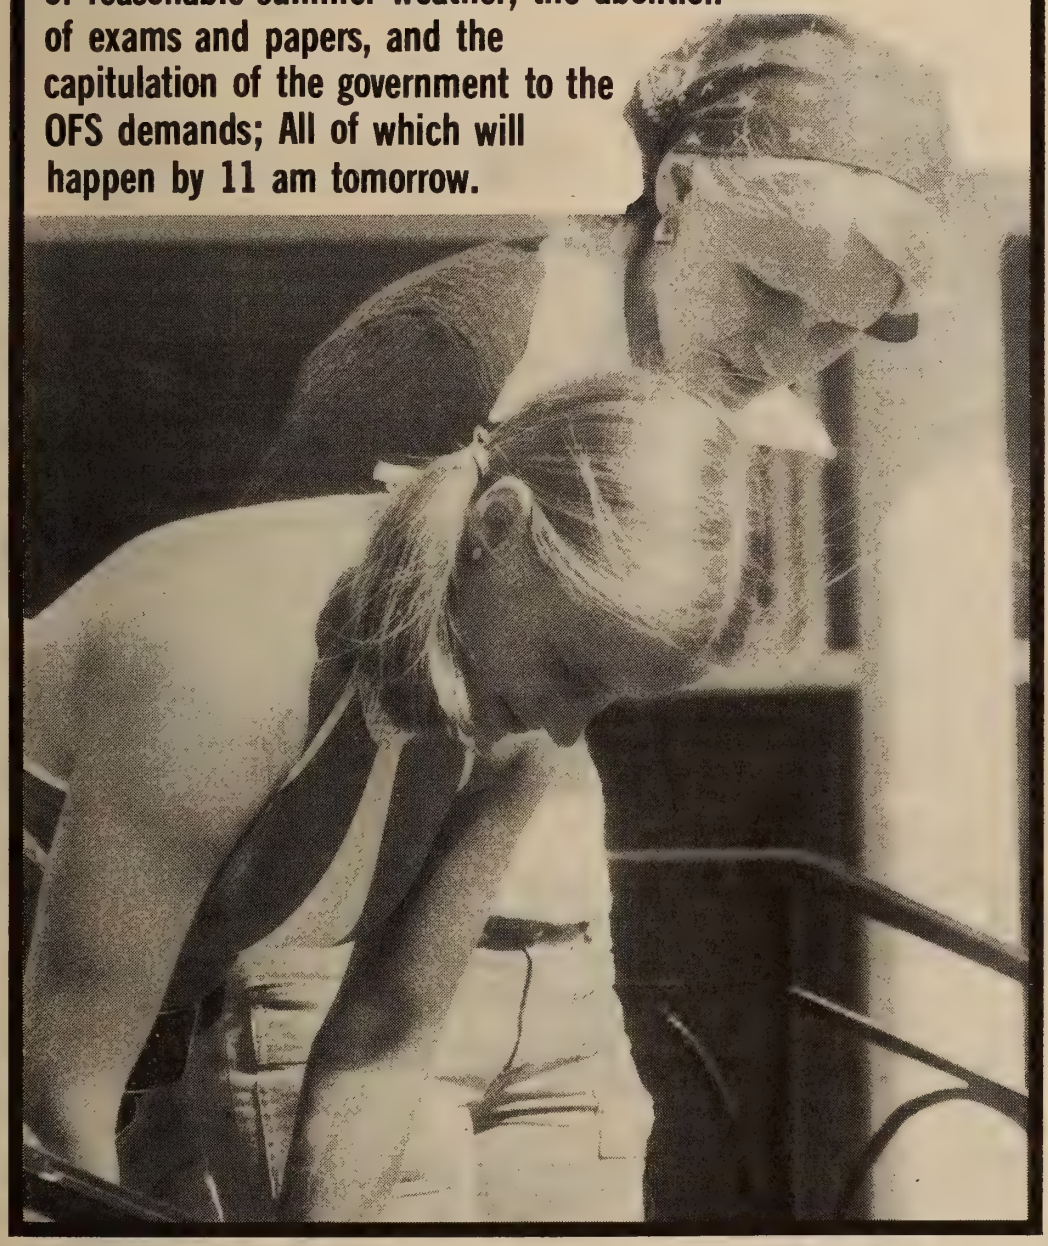


The other labour groups have returned to work, but wage negotiations are still being carried out.

OSLO — The mystery object that has been plaguing Norwegian waters, has escaped out into the Atlantic. Its nature and nationality was never determined, but it was believed to be a Soviet submarine.

backpage

'Here comes the new cabinet now!'



Queen's
Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 25

Tuesday, December 5, 1972

announces a reversal of editorial policy and calls for the return of reasonable summer weather, the abolition of exams and papers, and the capitulation of the government to the OFS demands; All of which will happen by 11 am tomorrow.

OFS fee withholding gaining provincial support

OTTAWA (CUP) — It appears the Ontario Federation of Students (OFS) proposed January fee withholding will happen, according to general co-ordinator Craig Heron.

The OFS co-ordinator has received votes on the issue from eleven of the organization's 19 members. Only the University of Waterloo voted no to the strike so far while Guelph University and Fanshawe College have abstained.

The Lakehead Summer and regular student councils, York, Glendon College, Western, Queen's, Laurentian, and Toronto student council executive have agreed to support the action.

Waterloo voted no because it would hurt their co-op students who must register every term. However they are discussing a week-long class boycott to publicize the issue.

Both the York and Laurentian votes have changed to yes since the OFS general meeting Nov. 25, Heron said.

Posters asking students to withhold January fee instalments are now being printed for distribution in the second week of December. A four-page tabloid explaining the OFS position will be circulated on member campuses before January classes begin and local student councils are being asked to do a mailing to all students before Christmas, explaining their position, Heron said.

More than 50 per cent of students at member campuses could withhold their second instalments, Heron said. At the Nov. 25 meeting, figures were presented showing the percentage of students able to do this ranged from 31 per cent at Waterloo to a high of 90 per cent. Most of the figures were about 75 per cent, Heron added.

The strategy will be reassessed in February, he said since individual campuses will do their own organizing.

Carleton university student council has established a trust fund for their students' fee instalments. The campus' Canadian Liberation Movement chapter (CLM) opened a similar fund on November 22, but the Carleton council decided to set up their own and not endorse CLM's fund.

1000s use buses

by Bob Mutrie

The final results of the survey on Bus-it have been tabulated by the Office of the Campus Planner. This experiment was sponsored by the AMS and Kingston public Utilities Commission in October.

Students were allowed to travel on city buses free of charge upon presentation of their green student card.

Campus Planner Kurt Gesell stated that the survey showed that as many as 6000 student trips were made on city buses during the one week survey.

Student trips during the week of October 19 and 25 averaged close to 1100 per day with the exception of Saturday when only 256 students used the service.

Gesell also noted that the highest usage period was on the half hour, at the time that classes change.

Fourteen people were hired to conduct the survey at eleven stations, two on west campus, seven on main campus and two off campus and the survey was conducted from 7:45 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. daily with an extension into Thursday night.

Surveyors estimated the number of students getting off buses at their station and then got on the bus and counted the number still on.

Gesell stated that, in tabulating the results, he had to eliminate a good deal of double counting but that the survey was a fair indicator.

It is to be presented to the Alma Mater Society and the Kingston PUC who are negotiating the possibility of charging the AMS a lump sum for city bus usage for a year.

Elrond still filling

by Susan de Stein

"The occupancy rate is going up daily," John Blanchard, business manager of Elrond College optimistically told the Journal. A lot of people have come to Elrond from the west campus residences and from on-campus residences, as well as many from off campus, he said. "We need the people," he added.

"We have lost some members, but by January 15, we should be ahead in the gain and loss of people ratio," Blanchard said.

It is inevitable that some people have decided to leave Elrond he felt. Those who applied last year had not anticipated the problems that Elrond encountered in the first months of operation, he said. Many have said they lost ground in their academics during first term. The fact that the Elrond members had to be billetted in hotels and rooming places, during the first weeks of term while finishing touches were made on the building, is said to be the major contributing factor. It was difficult not to be settled in immediately, Blanchard added.

"People came to Elrond for a place to live primarily," he said. Elrond did not quite live up to their expectations as a quiet, slick, complete, and well-functioning place to live, he added.

"The unfinished building has posed many small problems of inconvienience," Blanchard commented. "We have experienced a great degree of participation among members due to this; a greater amount this year than we anticipate in future years," he said, adding that "it has worked to our advantage. People are learning to cope with day-to-day problems. In learning the tricks of management and such, these people will be very valuable members in future."

In Blanchard's opinion "things are definitely shaping up." He added that "the kitchen is a co-operative triumph, although it took 2 or 3 months to get on its feet. The committees too are working well. I am filled with confidence in Elrond."

In the area of finance, Blanchard predicts a $40,000 budgetary deficit, which is not necessarily a cash deficit, he pointed out. The Board of Directors is now looking into ways of financing this deficit. "There is too much interest shown in Elrond by ourselves and by the Queen's administration not to follow this course of action," Blanchard stated.

The commercial space in Elrond is now only one-third occupied. However, Elrond itself is operating on approximately 80 per cent occupancy. "Had we not lost a number of people in the early weeks, we would be nearly full, and thus we would be experiencing a surplus at this time. It has been an unusual 8 months in this respect," Blanchard added.

A good number of current members will be staying in Elrond this summer. A summer revenue manager has been hired to handle the leasing. The major problem Blanchard cites is with the leasing of the six man and twelve men houses.

There will be two types of operations in the summer Elrond. One will be a hotel-type booking, in which linen, a maid service and breakfast will be provided for the occupant. The cost of this will be in a competitive range with the hotels. A co-operative type booking will also be available. Its cost will be competitive with that of the Science '44 accommodations, Blanchard said.

"We would like to maximize the occupancy during second term. We have an eager group on the membership committee who would love to see anyone interested in Elrond," Blanchard said.

CIVIC ELECTIONS

Mayor:
George Speal

Sydenham:
Nancy Foster
Keith Norton

Flouride:
NO

Wards:
NO

Pizza
Chalet
Generous Portions
Competitive Prices
Our Low Rent
Saves Money
544-1227
FREE DELIVERY

MBA graduates discuss job opportunities

by Sandra Bernstein

A meeting to inform students about the Queen's MBA program was held in Dunning on Thursday. A pamphlet which had been sent to all third and fourth year female students prior to this meeting, encouraging them to enroll in the program, had sparked some controversy, and about half of those present on Thursday were women.

Norman MacIntosh, Chairman of the MBA program told the group that the pamphlet had been accused of being mere tokenism and an opportunity of taking advantage of women's lib.

He glibly remarked, "I agree."

Various faculty members, current MBA students and former students were on hand to anwer questions and to outline the aims and future of the program.

There are about 115 students now enrolled in the MBA course. The entrance requirements are a B average on graduation, although this is flexible, and varies according to the institution, faculty, and other qualifications of the candidate. About 50 per cent have work experience before beginning work on an MBA, and this was described as a distinct advantage in the course. However, there is a trend towards direct entry as well.

The type of work experience is not important, according to faculty members. A wide variety of experience enriches a class, and just getting the feel of working in an organization is more important than working in one particular field.

Only about twenty per cent of MBA students were previously in Commerce, and experience has shown that these have no real advantage over candidates from other faculties, in their studies. A combination of an MBA and an Engineering degree, for instance, is common, and one figure quoted at the meeting was that 54 per cent of MBA students come from Engineering. Such a combination holds a very powerful advantage in corporations, since only 5 per cent of engineering graduates remain professional engineers all their lives.

Former students, when asked about job opportunities, were unanimous in answering that the job situation now, for MBA grads, is excellent. A large number of diverse positions are available for male graduates. For women the job market is expanding, although few employers are actually seeking women. However, the jobs are there if women really look, and women are often given as good a chance as men. One female graduate from the class of 1971 suggested the public sector as an opening area of apportunity for MBA grads. Apparently the trend towards hiring women for managerial positions, which is spreading through the USA, has only reached Canada to a limited degree.

Finance, marketing, sales, and accounting are still difficult fields for women. One problem is the small number of MBA candidates who are women. For example, one student who spoke at the meeting is the only female in her year

Queen's business school was rated by guests at the meeting as very high in Canada although still behind Western. The ability of the student to specialize here was praised.

Course content in first year concentrates on the problems of a complex organization. The areas of study fall into two categories: the construction of the organization, which is studied as a functional areas breakdown (marketing, manpower planning, information, production, and finance); and basic disciplines, the tools of the manager. These include economics, behavioral sciences, analytical and quantitative analysts, and management sciences.

Aggression, Crime and Society

by Steven Winnett

An interdisciplinary approach to the problems of "Aggression, Crime and Society" was explored by a panel of speakers from the point of view of psychology, sociology law and psychiatry on Thursday night at Etherington Hall. A very specific form of aggression was the speakers concern: the dangerous behaviour of one person to another.

Dr. Hugh Hayley of the psychology Department examined some of the theoretical aspects of aggression, with the caveat that "a general explanation does not appear possible." He pointed out the contrasting approaches of the Freudian instintual schools and the Watsonian behaviorist schools on the problem.

The instintual approach, that the death instinct as manifested in aggressive action is an attempt to eliminate inner tension and frustration, offers little hope that such behaviour can be modified. But the behaviourist approach that these actions are learned, does offer the hope that they can be modified.

A further differentiation, however, needs to be made. The purpose of instrumental aggression is not to harm another person as when a man kills someone, not for personal motives of hatred but for the money he has. Instrumental aggression must be contrasted with hostile aggression, where the aim is simply to cause harm to another person.

The behaviourist position seems to explain a fair amount of instrumental aggression but is less successful with hostile aggression.

Aggression can be explained by several things: a repetition of extreme situations, recalling earlier instances of violent behaviour; early rewards for aggressive behaviour; a lack of inhibitions on the part of the aggressor; or, the aggressor may see the world as hostile. The behaviourist view is that these things can be changed by altering environment and education. This more positive approach, said Dr. Hayley, presents a challenge to society: "What are we going to do about it?"

The second speaker was Prof. Terry Willett of the Sociology Department, who gave a forceful presentation on "Aggression,

Continued on Page 5

FACT OR FICTION?

1

You should avoid exercise during your period.

Fiction! The simple rules of good health are always important, especially during your period. Exercise, a proper diet and a good night's sleep go a long way toward relieving menstrual cramps or preventing them altogether. And remember, you're not "sick." So there's no reason not to follow your normal routine.

2

There's no odor when you use Tampax tampons.

Fact. With Tampax tampons, odor can't form. Odor is noticeable only when the fluid is exposed to air. With Tampax tampons, fluid is absorbed before it comes in contact with air; therefore, odor cannot form.

3

You should not bathe during your period.

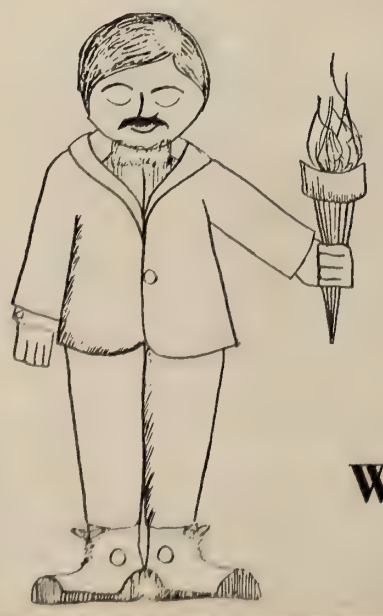
Fiction! Contrary to superstition, water can't hurt you. Daily baths or showers are a must throughout your period. Shampoo your hair, too. And don't deny yourself the chance to go swimming. Tampax tampons are worn internally, so you can swim anytime.

4

Single girls can use Tampax tampons.

Fact. Any girl of menstrual age who can insert them easily and without discomfort, can use Tampax tampons with complete confidence. Follow the easy directions in every package.

Our only interest is protecting you.



TAMPAX TAMPONS ARE MADE ONLY BY CANADIAN TAMPAX CORPORATION LTD., BARRIE, ONTARIO

WANDERLUST III

I.R.C. / W.R.C.

SEMI-FORMAL

Sat. Jan. 13th

8:30 p.m.

Tickets available in John Orr Room and in meal lines, Nov. 27th

WINTER OLYMPIAD on LEONARD FIELD

Kentucky Fried Chicken
542-2773
286 Montreal St.
Your closest Aunt Lucy's
Take Home Store

for your vacation reading 1000's of paperbacks
.30¢ each
4/99¢
NONESUCH BOOKSELLERS
225 Princess

CLARITY, CUT, COLOR . . . WE'LL TEACH YOU THE C C C'S OF DIAMONDS

A fine diamond must have excellence in clarity, color, cut. Must be clear and free from visible flaws under high magnification. The color should be white and pure. The cut must be exact to bring out the greatest brilliance. These are the basic facts of diamonds. Now, let's look at the diamonds.

KINNEAR d'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET,
KINGSTON, ONTARIO
CANADA

McMaster University Faculty of Business MBA Co-op Full-time Part-time

McMaster University now has a third option for students interested in proceeding to a Master of Business Administration degree: a co-operative work-study option, whereby students alternate four-month periods of study and relevant work experience. A limited number of applications will be accepted for the semester beginning in September,1973.

CO-OP WORK STUDY An M.B.A. degree from McMaster could help you to achieve your career objectives in the areas of management, administration, and education because the McMaster M.B.A. program offers a wide range of optional courses (that can be selected to your needs)as well as providing a core of basic knowledge and skills.Although admission is restricted to those who have proven that they have the potential and commitment required to complete a demanding program, graduates in any discipline may be accepted.

FULL–TIME Academic standing is not the only entry criterion but, as a general rule, you can have a reasonable expectation of completing the McMaster M.B.A. program if you have maintained at least a second-class standing in the last two years of your undergraduate program and if you can achieve a satisfactory test score in the Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business.

PART–TIME Applicants for the McMaster M.B.A. who have taken relevant course work may be granted advanced standing in our program. If you are interested in exploring this challenging opportunity further, fill in and mail this form-

TO: Assistant to the Dean
School of Business
McMaster University
Hamilton 16 Ontario

Please send me details about your M.B.A program
( )Full-time
( )Part-time
( )Co-operative Work Study

Name _____
Address _____
City _____
University attending _____ Province _____
Degree expected _____
When? _____

Arts caucus holds information session and discusses structure

The newly formed Association of Departmental Student Councils met last week to study a proposed executive structure for their organization, to elect officers and to hold their first information forum.

Interim Association Steering Committee member Gerry Buck proposed to the meeting a two part executive composed of a management board council and a financial committee.

The management board council, is to provide the liaison between the individual DSC's and other student representatives including Faculty Board representatives, Student Senators, ASUS and AMS representatives, all of whom are members.

Peter Iswolsky, chairman of the Russian DSC nad Gerry Buck, chairman of the Politics DSC were elected co-directors of the council and English DSC chairman Allis Terpstra is to be the secretary.

Also proposed was a financial committee comprised of a chairman, treasurer, secretary and a representative from each of the DSC's. A three-member steering committee was set up to consider its possible structuring.

Buck stated that he hopes to receive representation from at least one or two members of each area student representation on the executive board.

Cape addressed the association on the possibility of offering either a credit or non-credit course on World Problems, such as conflict, population or poverty, that would be available to students of all descriptions.

Student Senator Tim Garard proposed that the Senate reconsider the possibility of offering the world problems course and it was delegated to the Senate Committee on Academic Development for further consideration.

Cape stated that many people feel that the University has a moral responsibility to keep aware and to dispel ignorance of world problems and to generate a coherent view.

He pointed out that criticisms of its possible content claiming that the course would be intellectually lightweight were justified but that this might be outweighed by its creation of an

Continued on page 4

Grads suggest 3 convocations

"Is the significant factor of low graduate attendance the result of one convocation?" asks Doug Pritchard, President of the Graduate Student Society. Pritchard discussed the possibility of having a separate graduate convocation with the purpose of increasing graduate attendance. This idea rises fromthe fact that grad students don't necessarily finish by the May convocation, as graduates do not have the set date to finish. For example, a grad student may finish his thesis in June and then have to wait till the next May convocation. By this time, the student may be too far away to attend.

Pritchard suggests the graduates have separate convocations three times a year, when the student's degree is accepted by Senate in May, September, and December. This would cut down on the waiting period of the graduate and raise his or hers chance of attending convocation. Pritchard cites the graduate attendance number at probably below 40 per cent, whereas the medicine attendance is probably around 90 per cent. The reason for high medic students attendance as compared to grad attendance is that meds write their licensing exams three days before graduations, and are therefore around to attend.

Pritchard also cites a reason of low attendance to the lower interest of grad students in graduation, as they have already graduated once. There is less motivation to attend, especially if they are far away.

The purpose of separating grad students from the amalgamation of faculties would be to increase attendance. Pritchard admits that this question of one graduation has to be further analysed and discussed.

Commercial use of new centre discussed

by Bob Mutrie

The University Centre User's Committee last week reviewed its plans for the centre's uses.

The types of commercial facilities to be included in the main centre sparked major debate especially over the proposal to include a barber and a "sundries" store in the centre.

Student Committee member Marnie Cousins demanded a definition of sundries, claiming that an attempt to include all types of commercial facilities will mean that students "will not have any interaction with Kingston."

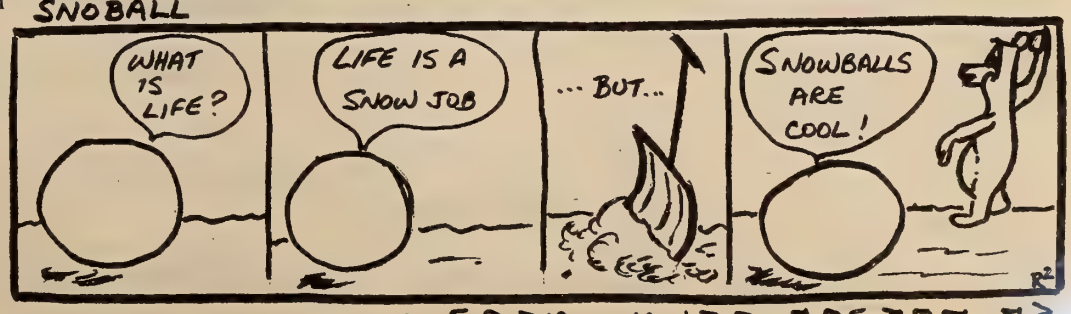
However, Law dean D. A. Soberman questioned whether the Committee should be telling students they should be buying on Princess Street because "It's good for you."

"Itt's a free choice economy," Sobermen pointed out, adding that the Committee should not be too authoritarian. He believed that if a merchant was ready to set up business in the centre, he should be allowed to.

Committee member, R. V. Poole, pointed out that inclusion of extensive commercial facilities would give the staff more incentive to come to the Centre, giving them an opportunity to get into the University community.

On the question of inclusion of a barber shop, Soberman stated that if a businessman felt he could make it work, then it should be considered.

Both Miss Cousins and student member Tom Holloway pointed out that neither barber shop nor a beauty salon would be used by students, but Holloway elaborated that a men's hairstylist might gain more business.



Poole also suggested that the centre was to be a means of bringing in the Kingston Community and that the community may very well be attracted by a barber - hairsytlist.

Committee Chairman Dan Norman summed up the general feeling in his recommendation to provide space and zoning for a hairstylist but that it would also be made known that this was not a "passion with us."

The Committee agreed that a sports shop would not be included as Kingston's facilities had broadened to a large degree since the initial recommendation.

Student member Sue Dowler recommended the inclusion of the Bitter Grounds Coffee House in the Arts and Sciences sub-centre. It was agreed that Dowler would look further into the possibility.

It was also agreed that the Committee would make it known to clergy of various denominations that space would be made available for them to hold meetings probably a general use area set aside.

More on the Arts caucus

Continued from page 3

increased awareness in the community.

Cape also stated that the course would have to be offered on a credit basis as people just don't go to "teach-ins".

It was pointed out to him that there are other courses which deal with these problems, notably Biology 030, a pollution and environment course and that there is a Sociology course which covers world problems.

However, Faculty Board representative John Bankes noted that many students of the Faculties of Engineering and Commerce and those in honours courses do not have many options open and that they would not be able to go from department to department to pick up a slate of world problems courses. He suggested that those dealing with the topic could be taken out of the departments, coordinated and centralized.

The AMS in 1969 made the first attempt at such a project with their counter-courses. But left on a voluntary, non-credit basis, it ended in failure.

When once again introduced last year, this time through the Arts and Science Faculty Board, it fell under much criticism.

Cape also reported to the meeting on the recent Ontario Federation of Students meeting in Toronto.

Student Senator Stewart Searle spoke to the meeting about business discussed at the last meeting of the Senate.

"The Journal has sent out a letter to the Arts and Science Faculty Board requesting that they be admitted to the meetings", Editor Jennifer Grass told the information session.

ASUS president Ted Cape threw strong support behind Miss Grass' proposal claiming that there were many things happening at Faculty Board meetings which the Journal could report if there and that misrepresentations can occur through usage of second-hand information. He elaborated that Journal representation at Board meetings would contribute to more conscientious reporting.

Miss Grass, in answer to a question on a Board member's right to confidentiality, stated that it has always been Journal policy to credit remarks to the people who make them and that if they believe in them, they should be able to make them public.

When questioned whether the Journal would keep an objective viewpoint in their reporting of Board meetings, Miss Grass stated that they need only look at their record of no misrepresentations in reporting Senate meetings.

Association co-director Gerry Buck pointed out that the Journal would get the information to the students adding to their awareness and that they will better be able to react and give the Board valuable feedback.

classified

IT'S FIVE A.M.! Pack it in Lyn.

ATTENTION SWEATHEARTS: Mending, love, comic, library. 25c for membership and all you can stand. 312 University or 544-1758. Great classics. Career girl romances, teenage romance, our love story, and just married. Unlimited supply.

LOST — A GOLD RING — watch, in the snow at the corner of University and Union. Of great sentimental-financial value. If found, please contact Kiffy at 544-0175.

TWO ROOMMATES NEEDED for 3 bedroom furnished apartment. Graduate student preferred. Perfect for a couple. Excellent location. Call 548-3293.

GARAGE FOR RENT — 30 seconds from Elrond. $15 per month. Call 544-4453.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY AMAZON, Best wishes for the 7th.

LOST — BLUE QUEEN'S notebook — if found, call Ian at 544-8941.

ROMEO, ROMEO, wherefore art thou Romeo? Di.

SKIS FOR SALE - Erbacher Careras: Original price - $200. Selling for $55 or best offer. Excellent condition. Call 544-7421.

READING WEEK IS COMING so come with us to London England. Drama Guild Theatre Tour phone 547-3177. 9:30 to 11 a.m. weekdays.

ANDY — was it gummy enough for you?

WATERBEDS: The perfect Christmas gift for yourself or your special friend. We have a complete line of waterbeds and accessories in stock so call us now — HALCYON WATERBEDS (544-9540, 6-9 p.m.). They cost less than you might think and we deliver free.

SCARED BY EXAMS? Leave one horror for another, as UNDERGRAD FILMS presents THE CABINET OF DOCTOR CALIGARI (1919 German horror classics) and Victor Hugo's LES MISERABLES (American 1935). Friday, December 8; Dunning Auditorium, Admission - $1.00 (cheap).

IF YOU CAN DO ANYTHING, why not cheer up. It's almost over. Welcome back to the world of the cheerful.

PEOPLE GOING BACK to your high schools, your next meeting is Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Stirling D.

MOST RESIDENCES AND apartment buildings in North America are designed for "efficiency". Unfortunately, any community life generated in them is often frustrated by the design. If you live on the 10th floor you never seem able to meet people on the 5th floor. High rises are seen rightly so, as anti-community.

Elrond offers hope for change. It has common space on the ground floor, sauna and craft rooms in the basement, rooms and offices at each elevator stop and houses that span three conventional stories. With only five corridors and elevator stops, the building does not seem so large. It's hard to believe that it is 16 stories and houses half as many students as Victoria Hall. The cafeteria is not large and clamorous but small and relaxed. After Christmas, students will be decorating the interior walls with carpet, fabrics, and graphics in lively colours. You can have a sauna before going to bed or get together with others to start a project. Elrond is a well designed building with initiative and interest to make it an exciting place to live and learn. If you want a new experience and are interested by the possibilities of Elrond, then Elrond needs you to start fulfilling them.

THE ABOVE is our longest classified.

LOST FROM CAR at 27 Pickwick Place, evening of Nov. 29: Nestler slide rule engraved with my name, in case; and spectacles with brown frame in alligator case. Anyone finding these articles, please let me know. Dr. Henry A. Becker, Department of Chemical Engineering, Dupuis Hall, 547-6978.

LOST - A PAIR OF silver framed glasses in a white "Cornwall Optical" case -- missing since Tuesday morning, somewhere between Humphrey Hall and the Douglas Library - necessary for seeing - if know whereabouts, please call Deb at 544-8512.

FOUND(WATCH in Union basement; retrieve same by identifying. Phone 382-2405 after 6 p.m.

GRADUATING? . . . OR LEAVING THIS YEAR? Do you have a 2, 3 or 4 bedroom house that will become available in the spring? If so, please call Bub or John at 546-9998.

DI — WHAT DOES THAT MEAN — a friend.

GIRL WANTED — to share nice, clean, double room. Twin beds, furnished living room, and kitchen included. Close to campus. Would consider renting 1 single room. Phone 549-0676 or 549-0751.

HERE'S ONE FOR you Grass — the staff.

LONDON FOR CHRISTMAS: $179 return, BOAC, 66-lb. baggage allowance, free drinks all the way. Contact the AMS Office or AOSC, 44 St. George, Toronto, 5, Ontario, 416-962-8404.

SHIP IN A BOTTLE. Sent from Scotland. You pay customs, etc. Hand made. Complete in detail. In standard bottle -- Cutty Sark $29.50; QE II $31.50; The Fishing Boat $30.50; The Battleship $32.50. Yachts in full sail in upright bottle for lampmaking — THE America $36.50; Gypsy Moth II $36.50; Lightening $36.50. Prices for custom work on request. J. W. Rogers, Box 1471, Kingston.

THE COVING THING: You saw it first at the co-op Christmas party. To see it again, please phone 546-3058 and ask for Alan Covington, care of SCUM. Signed: Al C.

WATERBEDS: Get rid of your deadbed and get a waterbed, the greatest advance in bed design in 50 years. Call HALCYON WATERBEDS (544-9540, 6 to 9 pm) tonight. We deliver free.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY TO JENNIE C. ON Friday, December 3. Party for all of her friends in the pub on Thursday.

CHRISTMAS PARTY for all Toronto people on Friday, December 22 at the Jolly Miller.

AUNT LUCY'S
1399 PRINCESS STREET
- KINGSTON, ONT.

TOLKEIN POSTERS
Lord of the Rings
The Hobbit
Tree and Leaf
at
NONESUCH BOOKSELLERS
225 Princess

Queen's University Music Department
A CHRISTMAS CONCERT
BY THE
QUEEN'S CHAMBER ORCHESTRA
DIRECTOR David R. Keane
Dunning - 3:30 p.m.
- Thurs., Dec. 7th

wanted
OFY
LIAISON PERSON
to serve as a liaison between Queen's students seeking OFY grants
and
the representatives of the Government
Apply in writing to
EXTERNAL AFFAIRS COMMISSIONER AMS OFFICE
by FRIDAY, DEC. 8th

THIS CHRISTMAS
Give your parents and friends
GIFT SUBSCRIPTIONS
to
QUEEN'S QUARTERLY
A CANADIAN REVIEW since 1893,
featuring articles on Politics, Foreign Affairs, Literature, History, etc., plus Poetry, Fiction, Book Reviews.

annual subscription (4 issues) $6.00
Three years (12 issues) $15.00

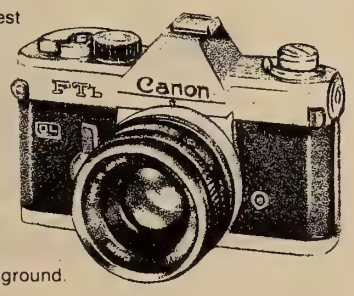
Cards announcing your gifts will be mailed early in December.

I enclose $..... for ... subscriptions to Queen's Quarterly to be sent to the addresses given below.

.....Donor

.....Address

Name .....
Address .....
Name .....
Address .....



cut out and mail to:
QUEEN'S QUARTERLY
Queen's University
130 Lower Albert St. (campus)
Kingston, Ont.

THE CHRISTMAS FIRESIDE poetry reading with DAVID KEMP in the armchair
Thurs., Dec. 7th
Coffee and Dessert at 5:45 p.m. Readings at 6 p.m.
BAN RIGH COMMON ROOM
The campus community is welcome!

The
"People People" are coming
January 29 & 30, 1973
Ontario Public Service interviewers will be on your campus to discuss career possibilities in Ontario's Public Service.
See your placement office for
• pre-screening cut off dates
• on campus interview procedure
ONTARIO
PROVINCE OF OPPORTUNITY

WE'LL GIVE YOU $10
to buy anything else in the store when you buy a Canon FTb or LTb from us
Having the FTb is the next best thing to having an F-1. And you can use the same lenses and accessories with it. The camera has a shutter speed of 1/1000 of a second and a unique through the lens light meter system that automatically gets its reading from the center of your picture, so you get the correct exposure for what you are photographing, not the background.

Something Extra From Bell & Howell
Offer good only until December 31, 1972.
Linden-Photo Co.
229 Princess 546-7676
Complete line of new and used photographic equipment. Specialized finishing in our own Laboratory. STUDENT DISCOUNTS.
Doug Redden Gerry Finn Ron Fairley

Excess classroom space at UWO

CUP — A sharp enrolment decrease has given the University of Western Ontario (UWO) excess classroom space equivalent to the size of the 2200 student Brock University in St. Catherines, Ontario.

The situation was revealed when a university report to the Committee on University Affairs was released recently. The report says UWO has more classroom space than it is entitled to under provincial regulations. As a result, no new buildings will be constructed on the campus for at least another five years, and likely longer.

Western enrolment projections drafted earlier this fall following this year's unexpected shortfall in students mean UWO will not be elibible to receive provincial funds to increase the square footage available for classrooms.

"Nobody knows if the age of the growing university is over," Adlington said. "The principle phenomenon that led to the rapid rise in university growth was the increase in the percentage of the population that wanted to go to university."

The shortfall in enrolment this fall caused drastic cuts in the university's operating budget which will force a deficit of not more than $400,000.

The Senate budget and finance committee has altered its budgeting procedures this year to a "slip year" system which uses the current year's enrolment figures for the next year's budget. The administration hopes such a system will provide more realistic estimates.

TAK needs volunteers

Telephone Aid Kingston (TAK) will be opening its lines on February 1, 1973 and it needs student volunteers to man the phones.

TAK is more than a distress centre. It offers an emphatic response to all people in need.

As TAK is student operated and oriented it will deal primarily with student problems, namely academic, financial, social and emotional. The service will operate between 7 pm and 7 am.

Training for new TAK volunteers will take place on Monday, January 15 and Wednesdays - January 17, 24 and 31 7 pm.

All those interested should fill out an application form in the AMS office.

More on Crime and Society

Continued from page 2

Role-Playing in Sex, and Social Change."

Dr. Willett's view of the problem of aggressive crime in society was basically a hopeful one. Out of many recent social changes, he argued, one of the most important has been changes in conceptions of social role. These are grounds for hope. "There is a less violent society today than 50 years ago, and much less violent one than 100 years ago." Dr. Willett advanced two reasons for a hopeful view of the problem of aggression.

1. Aggressive crime is predominantly a male phenomenon, due to primitive conceptions of the male role. This generalization is true of all kinds of crime, including a subject of special interest to Dr. Willett, crime on the roads (the word "accident" may be a misnomer in many cases). Much violent action is proving one's behaviour, proving one's maleness. But now, models of maleness are changing. Fighting is not as common or vicious as it used to be. "The number of reported assaults has increased markedly over the past five years - but these things were not reported in an age which was less tenderminded than our own." Now, the role models of male and female are coming together.

2. Lower-class disputes are settled by physical force. Here, the male is the boss. There is an immediate gratification of desires. Here, heavy drinking is an expected part of the male role. "But the signs are hopeful because middle-class ways of life are gradually making inroads into the lower classes. Perhaps wife-beating is less common now. The violence of the past could be the product of violent domestic situations." Dr. Willett thus applauded "the spread of middle-class values."

But hope does not excuse complacency - and there is enough aggression about for concern, especially on the roads. Here, violent offenders are predominantly young, male, and lower class. "I have grave doubts about using the term "accident", said Dr. Willett. Driving has become one of the main aggressive outlets of maleness, as others have been devalued by changing conceptiions of roles. There is a kind of perverted reasoning behind the thrill of violent driving: it demands a certain self-control, which requires more strength and control than a mere lashing out. Our own "tender-mindedness" about pain allows others to take advantage of us - and they do. Some form of deterrence is necessary: criminal cultures themselves believe in deterrance.

But prevention, not punishments, is society's best weapon against aggression. "The most effective detterant is the availability of an efficient police. The problem is that the police are spread too thin on the ground," a situation we can prevent.

Prevention can also pay off by society's concentrating on mundane acts of domestic violence rather than dramatic ones. Hence the value of the present police concern with domestic "crisis-intervention."

"But unfortunately," concluded Dr. Willett, "it is noticeable that prevention has a low social priority."

Professor Stuart Ryan of the Faculty of Law spoke next on "The Law and Aggressive Behaviour." "The rise of the state," he said, "was the result of co-operative efforts to restrain aggression. Some forms of aggression are socially favoured, such as economic aggression in cut-throat competition - and we reward these.

But other forms of aggression are regarded as crimes - and these must be dealt with by the law. But at the same time, we live in a society dedicated to political freedom - hence we place limits on the amount of control which the law can exercise.

We have laws to deal with all forms of violence, direct and indirect personal assault, violence in labour disputes; sexual aggression; indirect violence in noise, disorderly behaviour, obscene conduct; defamation laws to prevent violence in language. Of great concern in our society are laws respecting aggression against personal property. Economic aggression can be a crime as in conspiracies in restraint of trade or frauds.

The deterrant is "a very imperfect control of behaviour. Mankind is not composed by and large of reasonably deterrable persons."

A further relationship between the law and aggressive behaviour is that some forms of behaviour using force are justified by the law: self-defence, the defence of other or your home; suppression of riot; in some forms of medical treatment.

The law assumes that people are sane - which means it "takes people to mean what they say." The law does take mental conditions into account: to be legally insane is to be incapable of appreciating the nature and quality of one's conduct.

"The state, then," concluded Prof. Ryan, "has met all forms of aggression."

A brief presentation was then given on "The Potentially Dangerous Person as a Patient" by Dr. McAuley of the Psychiatry Department. "Just who is dangerous," he asked? "You run a greater statistical risk of being murdered by someone in your family than by a stranger."

The problem is predicting the dangerous patient - he is often identified only after the deed.

HOME FOR XMAS
QUEEN'S EXCURSION
CLUB BUSES Dec. 8-20th
(as often as possible)
to such exotic destinations as
TORONTO, OTTAWA, MONTREAL
sign up period starts Dec. 4th in Outer AMS Office
SIGN UP EARLY
PLUS
Those interested in going to Florida for a week during the holidays (costs about $50) should also inquire at the OUTER AMS OFFICE
Mon.- Fri., 11:30 a.m.- 3:00 p.m.

QUEEN'S DRAMA GUILD
LONDON THEATRE TOUR
during Feb. reading week
phone 547-3177
(9:30 - 11:00 a.m. weekdays)

Merry Christmas, Sally,
We miss you!
love from --- Susie, Dodo, Benjy, Bruce P, Ted, John, Chris, Jan, Gary, Craig, Allison, Penny, Liz, Mary, Annie, Barbie, Bert, Zizi, Shelagh, Barb P, Dave R, Roy, Bruce T, Ken, Al, Miriam, Leslie B, Mary H, Bob, Debbie, Linda, Heather F, Cate, Mary, Pat, Susie S, Duncan, Brian, Tom, Debbie, Peter, Ted A, John D, Bubba, Doug, Robin, Jim C, Stewart, Ross, Stu B, Chris, Rob S, Jim J, ETC.

letters

Kraft foods

Dear Editor,

Mr. Lowery of Kraft Foods is being highly disingenuous in trying to avoid the issue by claiming that it would be not legal to negotiate with the national farmer's union (NFU).

The NFU subscribes to the following principles and was indeed formed to uphold them:

1. Small and family farmers have an important role to play in our economy. It is not just for nostalgic or historical reasons that we should retain them.

2. Depriving a family farmer of his farm on the grounds that a bigger corporate unit would manage things more "efficiently" would only swell the ranks of the unemployed and that is a waste of human potential. Also, the proposition that the bigger corporations are more efficient is of doubtful validity.

3. Small farmers would serve the consumer better and would be amenable to better consumer control. We don't have to pay more for cheese in Kingston if the cost of living goes up in Boston or some far away place. This can hardly be avoided if cheese is being marketed by huge multinational corporations with interests in far flung areas.

4. A respectable portion of the retail price of a food item should return to the farmer, the primary producer. This problem of rightful share in the profits and all other matters between a farmer and a food processing-marketing corporation should be tackled by way of negotiations in the spirit of trade union parleys.

The question that then arises is:- Are the laws in Ontario helpful in subscribing to these principles? The NFU says NO. It is true the Ontario milk marketing board (OMMB) has 12 farmers and one official. But its decisions are not enforceable. The Ontario milk commission (OMC) which sits over OMMB is a body of civil servants appointed by the Ontario minister of agriculture. And in law the OMC is not responsible to OMMB. The OMC decide what price Kraft etc. pay the farmer but do not control the retail price of cheese.

The NFU wants the present OMC-OMMB set up scrapped and the issues decided by negotiations between the farmers and cheese producers. Kraft Co. has refused to discuss the attendant issues with the NFU and seeks refuge under the present Ontario laws. That is the genesis of the Kraft boycott. A consistent and concerted refusal by people of Kraft cheese products will 1. perhaps soften Krafts attitude, and 2. more importantly influence enough legislators to bring pressure on the Ontario govt.

The points at issue are:

1. Consumer voice in retail food prices,

2. Trade union principles for the benefit of the small farmers.

Why farmers alone should be denied application of such a universal principle as trade unionism.

Nobody is being asked to forego Kraft products for a lifetime. The consumer is being urged to prove that Kraft is not all that indispensable. No individual not even a corporation should become all that indispensable in a democracy. The point at issue is NOT if the Kraft Co takes good care of its employees; neither is it the quality of their products. About this last point there are well documented reports of Ralph Nader (see Queen's J article of Nov. 3.) They may help in delinking Kraft in a shopper's thinking.

At the Kraft boycott meeting on Nov. 13, Mr. Walter Miller (vice president NFU) mentioned rather approvingly of the consumer control over Bell-Canada. I am not all that impressed over that control. Anyway, it shows that the NFU and the small farmers in Ontario are not asking for the moon.

Sincerely,
Dore Subrao.

Book hassles

Dear Editor,

I fail to fully comprehend the reasons behind checking the due dates of the books borrowed at the exit of the Douglas Library. It seems to me that the accessibility and freedom to borrow any book any time in any of the branch libraries on the campus contrasts with the checking at Douglas. A further inconsistency is the failure of Douglas to accept books which have been borrowed from a branch library. At times one is stopped at the door if that same book is overdue and the branch library is contacted in order to discover whether or not that book was "stolen" or only needed to be stamped.

It will be a welcome change I think if Douglas could leave the responsibility - all of it - to other branches for their own books.

If the purpose of checking is to prevent books getting lost, obviously it is not effective. But it may inconvenience or punish a forgetful person during an exam time.

Mustafa Ibrahim
Grad

Thanks

African Liberation Study Group,
c-o Frank Okoh,
Jeffery Hall,
Queen's University,
Kingston, Ont.
Canada.

Dear Friends,

We would like to thank you very much for your cheque of $600 which we have recently received. Enclosed please find our official receipt.

Concrete support and encouragement of this kind coming from places as far away from Mozamibque as Canada is greatly appreciated by our people; we are assured that in our struggle against Portuguese colonialism and imperialism we are not alone. Please assure our supporters at Queen's University that the money will be used to develop social programmes in the liberated areas of Mozambique.

Once again, please thank all our supporters at Queens University for this very generous donation,

Jorge Rebelo
Secretary for Information

To the bands

TO THE MEMBERS of the Queen's University Pipe Band, Highland Dancers, Brass Band, Majorettes, and Cheerleaders:

Thank you for a great year and congratulations on your fine showing at the Grey Cup Parade in Hamilton on Saturday. There may have been entries in the parade which equalled, or even surpassed your musical and visual display, but certainly there were none to equal your enthusiasm - your QUEEN'S SPIRIT. My thanks also, to the Alma Mater Society, The AMS office staff, the Alumni Office, the Hamilton Alumni Association, the Office of the Vice-Principal for Development and Information, the City of Kingston, our many supporters, and especially the executive, without whose help our trip would have been impossible.

Yours truly,
Jeffrey Chan,
Manager, Queen's Bands.

and more

Prison group

As the name 'Self' implies, we, the inmates of Kingston Penitentiary, are striving to better ourselves through creative projects, with the results being two-fold: firstly, pride in a job well-done; secondly, helping others in the community by whatever means possible. We are a new inmate group formed just short weeks ago at the suggestion of Miss Debbie Fox.

Mr. Gordon Young, a Classification Officer, has assisted us by giving us direction, offering suggestions and representing us to the Director, Mr. A.J. Jarvis, who has granted his permission for our projects to begin.

Along with Mr. Young, we have been aided by five student volunteers from Queen's University:

Mr. Robin MacKay, a first year law student with a degree in philosophy, who states, "Since Plato has the job I wanted, I decided to be a lawyer".

Mr. Ian McLeod, who has travelled throughout Europe and hopes to obtain a degree in film studies. "I dropped the idea of law school when I saw the Light".

Mr. Frank Archibald, a sophomore in economics and mathematics who after years of tedious study has carefully calculated that 15 hours in class is considerably less than 40 hours a week working.

Mr. George Orr, a second year student who enjoys learning rather than riding the poop deck of a fishing boat.

Mr. John Mitchell, a sophomore taking business and commerce. Our one time aspiring scoutmaster has decided that it is much warmer behind a desk.

Also, several men on the staff of the institution are involved on a volunteer basis, assisting us in our endeavors.

Our first project is to repair used toys for those children that are less fortunate than others. The toys are being collected and donated by the Kingston Fire Department. These toys, when repaired, will be turned over to the local chapter of the Salvation Army and to Stabilize.

During the next few weeks we will invite members of the Salvation Army, the John Howard Society and Professors from the various schools and departments of Queen's University and hope it continues so that we, the inmates of these institutions, can meet with the knowledge and training that you volunteers so willingly give of yourself.

We wish to thank the Student Volunteers for donating their time to our cause . . . Rehabilitation.

The Members of Self
N. Coe, Chairman

Volunteer says

All prisons have a mentality and nature all to their own. This is reached by summing up all the attitudes, feelings and ideas of all who are directly connected with the prison, the administration, guards, and prisoners together. With all these men's minds added up, what you have evolved is the mentality and nature of a woman.

The prison can act logically, illogically; friendly, unfriendly; emotionally or unemotionally, depending on a mechanism deep inside it which does not follow any set precedents of predictability. All facets of the prison system are independently fickle giving rise to an overall picture of a true woman.

The public, who view the overall picture, cannot understand what is going on. They tend to see the bad aspects and ignore the good, but, the greatest tendency on the part of the public is that it tends not to try to understand what goes on deep within. They view prisons as the dregs of society and leave it at that.

From this anaolgy, you can soon then learn to understand how the prison system acts. What the prisoners feel, what the administration wants and how people within act. This is a very necessary step for true communication between society and the prisons. You must take the time and the effort to learn about the other side in order to be assured that you have the proper ideas about them and are forming the correct assumptions and the correct actions.

Along this same line, the prisoners have a great need and desire to learn about the other side of the wall, society. This is the main reason why university professors have been asked to come in and give a series of talks to the prison group.

The inmates are eager to understand, and to be understood by society which they will soon be a part of again.

G. R. Orr
SUB Volunteer.

classified

COUNTRY FANS . . . Y'all come. Jack & Dorthy McCaughen's "Fidlar Mills" Country Christmas Jamboree . . . Grand Theatre, Kingston, Friday, December 15, 8 p.m. In person: Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus, Don and Tony Band Nashville, Mike Graham GRT records, Lynn Jones of Capitol Records & CHCH TV Jamboree Hamilton, Eleanor Moorehead Lady Fiddler of RCA Records & TV, Ron Fitzpatrick of CKWS, and a terrific cast of our entertainers. Santa will have a free treat for all kids present. Advance tickets selling at Grand Theatre, Kingston (546-1756), Vern Napier Cameras in the Shopping Centre, and Sharp and Flat in the Frontenac Mall. Get tickets now. You may win a Christmas Turkey or records. Tickets: advance: $2.00; at the door: $3.00; kids; $1.00.

FOR YOUR XMAS PRESENT ROY: 'k'.

FOR THE MAN-WOMAN who has everything: get him-her a week in London, England. Drama Guild Theatre Tour. February 18-26. Phone 547-3177 between 9:30 and 11 a.m. weekdays.

HEY JEN — see above.

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 25
Tues., Dec. 5, 1972
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Patricia Devitt
Martin Jones
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
Backpage: Bob Mutrie
Photos: Pete Boag

Special thanks to Liz Trotter, Sue de Stein, Peter Watts, Jon Lawrence and Helen Gignac and Chris Brown.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society or the University. Offices are located in the Students' Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

CLOVER LEAF
HEALTH FOODS
490 Princess Street
16 Years Experience in Selling Health Foods
Everything in flours, powders, juices, oils, honey, peanut butter, herbs for tea, seeds, whole grains, beverages, nuts, Loma Linda Products, & all capsules & tablets from Vitamin A to Wheat Germ.

the great housing
lottery!!!
ITS COMING....
COMING....
COMING....
In January the A.M.S.
Housing Service will be compiling a waiting list for vacant houses in the spring.
COME AND TRY YOUR LUCK!

ARTSCI '76
smoker
FRIDAY, DEC. 8,
at 8:00 p.m.
HOUSE OF COMMONS
free with year cards
- 75¢ without beer 3/$1.00
featuring
Honky Tonk Pianists

Department of Film Studies
Presents
A TOUT PRENDRE
First Feature Film by
Claude Jutra
Director of MON ONCLE ANTOINE
Tuesday, December 5
9:00 p.m. Ellis Hall
Admission $1.00
The film has English Sub-titles

McArthur student government

The student government on West Campus (McArthur Student Council) resembles most faculty governments, at least in appearance. There is an executive, consisting of a President, internal and external vice presidents, secretary and treasurer. This is the decision making body. However there is also a larger body referred to as the 'Cabinet.' This consists of the executive as well as the four faculty board reps. at large, the two A.M.S. reps. and the Senator. There is also an ex-officio rep. from the non-education students in residence. There has been only one meeting of the entire Cabinet as there are very few issues which require the involvement of all members. However nearly all executive meetings are called with either the faculty board reps. or the A.M.S. reps.

Working with the student council are four standing committees; Curriculum Review, Publications, Pub and Social. The Curriculum Review committee is composed almost entirely of students holding seats on Faculty Board Standing committees. This committee is responsible for a large variety of duties from collecting and amassing material for a counter calendar to polling students on library hours and winter break. The overall purpose is to make constructive student suggestions for improving the entire Education program. This is an especially hard task as there is no continuous student government from one year to the next.

The Publications committee is responsible for all advertising of events as well as informing the public of the actions of the student government. This is done through the normal use of media services as well as a student paper, The McArthurism. Handled by a competent staff headed by former Journal writer Dianne Elliot, The McArthurism publishes a large number of articles of particular interest to education students as well as editorials and a calendar of campus events.

McArthur College also features a pub. Every week the pub features a theme or live entertainment. Last Saturday was 'Grey Cup Pub' featuring the raffling of a colour T.V., and Grey Cup films. This week will be a Greaser pub with live entertainment. Other pub themes have been Honky Tonk 1, and Nostelga night. The pub is never advertised off West campus as it is intended for the use of McArthur students and their guests and is always full to capacity.

The social committee is responsible for any activity that they can dream up, as well as the annual Children's Christmas Party for the children of the Porstmouth area. Next week this committee will be starting a coffee shop for evening relaxation Sunday through Wednesday. They also work on a wide assortment of things such as the planning of a tuck shop, snow sculpture, and other entertaining events. Unlike most other such committees, this one is largely responsible for all activities on the west campus and therefore under a constant barrage to produce.

However the student social committee is not the only committee of that name. Also, within the halls of west campus is a social committee for faculty and a social committee combining the students, staff and faculty. This latter one is responsible for maintaining and providing recreational services such as pool tables and a music room and equipment. This also overlaps with the student committee in such areas as the tuck shop.

The overall governing organ is the Faculty Board under Dean Ready. This board consists of 74 members of the faculty and 9 students. (the executive and four other elected members) The students are trying to improve this proportion a bit for the future year. Contributing to the board are eight standing committees all of which also have student representatives. However as all students on faculty board or the Curriculum review committee also hold seats of the standing committees of Faculty Board, the work done and information collected tends to be highly centralized.

Education students also have the dubious distinction of belonging to both the O.U.S. and the O.T.F. with one active representative to the Ontario English Catholic Teacher's Association. (A branch of O.T.F.)

Education programme

Undoubtedly the most distinguishing feature of west campus is the unusual program presented by the faculty of education. This is divided into four sections.

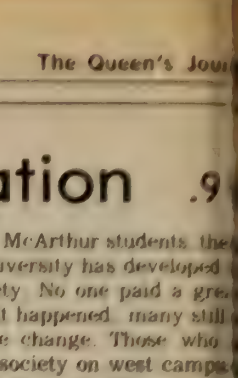
The first, and most distinguishing feature is practice teaching. For three weeks in October, two weeks in April and the entire month of February, students in education are out in high schools from Espanola (north of Sudbury) to Ottawa learning how to teach by trying to teach part of a regular class course.

Back on the main campus things are not so cut and dried either. Since nobody has ever really established solid guidlines different courses follow different goals according to the professor's concept of the need which his course is supposed to fill. Some feel a duty to produce a student which they can, in good conscience stamp "Grade A Large," capable of being allowed into public to teach their children. These professors tend to be found in the curriculum course area. These are the courses which a student takes in the subjects which he intends to teach. Each student takes one course in each teaching subject. Many, but not all insist that students reach a certain degree of proficiency in teaching technique of that subject. This is also graded in the practice teaching sessions.

The foundations courses are designed, or at any rate seem to be designed, to inspire students to think. These are courses in philosophy, psychology or sociology. Every student is required to take two of these courses. While very few strive for a particular degree of excellence all require a great deal of thought.

The really wild stuff is found in the 'Supporting' courses. These are short (half-term) courses of all variations. One course, 'Open Country' takes students out canoeing, hiking and orienteering all over the countryside around Kingston. Second term it features snowshoeing and cross-country skiing. Another, 'Cultural Contrast', involves a few weekends. You could find yourself camping in the middle of nowhere with only the barest of necessities and instructions on what plants are edible. You could be dropped at the corner of Jarvis and Queen with two dollars for the weekend (phoning friends is against the rules) or you could end up in a country commune. The M.S.C. Internal V.P. went to a commune, then on to the hospital to have his digestive system re-adjusted. (he was violently ill for three days) Another course involves playing simulation games such as 'Ghetto' or Diplomacy. Students learn to understand others' concepts of games and how to apply them to teaching. Different courses include learning to use all forms of audio and visual reproducing machines and media. (A.V. course and Teacher as T.V. Producer) Still others involve such things as Personal growth or Water Safety Controls. Rest assured that there are more 'normal' courses such as advanced conversational French and curriculum design.

Isolation .9



Home of the McArthur students the of Queen's University has developed within a society. No one paid a gre tention when it happened many still discovered the change. Those who care. But the society on west campu deal to offer to the rest of Queen's an to gain from main campus, if only the to close the gap between the two West Campus is separated from the by .9 miles of road and a number of ferences.

It is dominated by 710 students in education whose interests tend to different from those of most students, a marked lack of interest in the gener Queen's society and especially eve campus. This difference is not witho dations.

McArthur students are not all forme Queen's. In fact less than 50 per cent with Queen's. As it is unlikely that stu year professional course will adopt mater most students are indiffere problems pertaining to Queen's, es problems which do not affect west difference is further irritated by education students are out of town f

West

A soci a

Facilitie

It would be impossible to speak of c without describing the facilities at campus. McArthur has the benefit of a storey library and resource centre. contains all sorts of books, records, video-tapes, and movies as well as fac for watching and listening with headphones. Students can even do homework while listening to their f music right in the library.

Besides the library there are two auditoriums. The largest holds 650 st while the smaller holds only about 150 have tremendous sound systems and facilities as do many of the smaller theatres. Most classrooms also have machines to play any of the taped m available either from T.V. or produced studios at McArthur. Filling out the centre is the A.V. lab with every fo duplicating machine required for tea

The really different classrooms a gym and mezzanine; the change rooms might as well be 9 miles

two months of the school year.

The distance between campus also magnifies this isolation. Some people, however, are affected more than others For the 260 non-education students who live on west campus but attend classes on main campus, the problem is relatively simple. They have only to find transportation to and from classes at the beginning and end of their day. While this is a bit inconvenient, it is the same problem faced by many students who live out. It is even less difficult then for most as there are two direct bus routes and hitching down Union St. is extremely good.

For McArthur students the distance may as well be nine miles. Time is the main factor. Students in education have an average of 24 hours of classes per week. They are also involved in two to ten hours per week of non-compulsory activity. This required attendance at west campus takes up a major portion of their day. With an average of three hours off each day a student must be fortunate enough to have the hours run together before he will have any chance to get down to main campus before eveing when a number of services and activities are closed. Even students with cars seldom get time to do more than their shopping.

There is also a question of motivation. Practically speaking, students in education find that they must remain on west campus to do their work. Only McArthur has the wide array of equipment necessary to complete research assignments, especially in the audio and visual areas. At best student might be drawn to main campus for social enjoyment. Again however, the students tend to frequent the Manor which is only a couple blocks away. They are also closer to the Harold Harvey Arena than the Hardy and to the Kingston Mall then downtown Kingston. All of this affects students motivation to attend events held on main campus. But the greatest affect is information. (or the lack of it) Since there is no advertising to speak of ever done in west campus for general AMS or club events, there is little interest stirred up. The result is a distinct lack of interest in the rest of the Queen's society.

There is a possibility that arrangements may be made for free bus service between the two campuses next term. While this will improve ease of transportation, it will have no effect on the isolation of west campus unless the AMS, and individual students take the time and effort to ride west and inform the students in education that there are programs that could involve them. At present the only form of communication is the Journal. While this includes a full list of events, it is certainly not enough.

ampus

within

iety

vailable

tage (used as a seminar room because of tmosphere) the practice teaching room a room length two way mirror; the onal growth room furnished with only a and pillows and the Technical area. The r is equipped with every sort of machine, puter, electrical equipment or supply to a 727. As if it weren't already the pen of the century, they have their own pong table. (one glance leaves one lering how anyone ever said that the o kids were in technical) creational facilities also include a large ge with colour T.V., music room; eation room with pool tables, shuf- ard and darts and Student Street. This is all running from one end of the building e other. It is long enough to accommodate bands and is often licensed for major ts. The gym is also used for a fairly nsive program while the pub is held in the cafeteria. (seating about 300)

Written By Jim Wright

Photos By Terry Flahiff

Unique situation

The west campus complex, referred to as McArthur, is actually divided into two sections, academic and residence. Previously this was of no importance. The McArthur Student Council was elected by the students and had power to deal with both areas as both were occupied by education students only. Now that there are students from other faculties in residence people have found that the line between these two areas is not so well delineated. Questions have arisen as to who has jurisdiction over certain recreation areas and how much to accommodate students not belonging to McArthur. This is further complicated by the fact that there is no organized residence government. Aside from the problems of jurisdiction there are problems involving simple consideration of others.

There is a number of students with meal cards living on west campus, some of whom would like to eat there. There is a second group who do not have standard meal cards but would like to work out a special system for the west campus cafeteria. There is a third group who are perfectly happy just to leave things as they are and pay cash. Finally, there is the Dining Committee consisting of representatives of Beaver Foods, The M.S.S., staff and faculty who have to try to please as many people as possible. Add to this the fact that most students in education leave town for the weekend; then try to set hours and methods of payment. Considering the usual din of complaints which accompany any constructive suggestions, this committee is amazingly approachable.

Another problem, unique to west campus is the question of open and closed events. As the M.S.S. collects money from its members, like any other society it is responsible to its members to see that if it runs deficit events the event will be to their benefit. That's all very well but there are 260 other persons in the building who could also benefit or enjoy any events held on west campus. To this end, the student government uses a very simple rule of thumb: if an event is designed to meet some specific need of education students it is generally closed and run at a deficit. If the activity is deemed beneficial to all, the price is adjusted so that there is little risk of it being backed by faculty of education money. Balancing the books and meeting a moral obligation to provide for the needs of all members is a difficult job. However a number of education students have started projects which are making this problem easier. Perhaps, having this drawn to their attention, the other societies might confer with the M.S.C. to see how they might become involved so that their stranded members will be able to participate even more fully.

Activities

Activities at McArthur College are somewhat limited as the student body is fragmented several times during the academic year.

Continuous activities include the pub (Thursdays) and the coffee house (Just opened - Sunday through Wednesdays) Special events include dances, cheese and wine parties, a sleigh ride and variety night. These are particularly hard to plan as the year runs one month on, one month off. Thus, events must be planned two months or two days in advance.

Students also run an athletic program for men and women. This includes men's and women's basketball, co-ed volleyball and (hopefully) hockey. Due to the broken nature of the education year the main campus program does not satisfy this need. (An example is the Bews.) Education students returned from a three month absence to find that they were scheduled to play hockey the next night) The McArthur athletic program is open to all members of west campus.

However most of the activities are centred around the interests of the education community and are, therefore only of passing interest to the rest of the university.

Most of the social events sponsored by the college emphasize student - professor interaction. A great deal of importance is placed on getting to know one another as well as one's self at McArthur.

The theatre Arts Department and the Librarianship program have been the two most prolific contributors to the activity list so far this year. Both have sponsored student involvement programs for not only their own students but also to the general education community of Queen's and Kingston. There are also, many activities at McArthur that have been sponsored by individual professors, such as the Toronto Mass Concert and the Rideau Trail walk. Although most of the activities are directed at the McArthur student body, many are of interest to the Kingston community and in this way McArthur is establishing itself as not only an entertainment centre (ie. theatre arts) but also as a resource centre for the entire community.

There is little co-ordination of events between the main campus and McArthur. The theatre arts department through David Kemp, is working with the music department, on the main campus, on the production of "Facade". David Kemp, director of the Theatre Arts department at McArthur, and the music students worked out the dramatic poetry reading with complimentary music for the enjoyment of the whole university. It is hoped that through their co-operation a rapport will be built and both of the departments can rely on each other for their productions in the future. The productions of the drama department on main campus are well publicized at McArthur and the theatre arts students are strongly urged to attend these productions, however this is almost all the communication between campuses.

There have been, at McArthur, several events of the more social nature especially at the start of the year. The Human Problems and contemporary issues course and the social committee of the student council sponsored a weekend of activities after Thanksgiving. The weekend started with the social committee's Barn Bash in Joyceville, on Friday night. The Human Problems and Contemporary issues course ran a walk along the Rideau Trail for all those who survived the Barn Bash and were brave enough to venture forth in the pouring rain. The Sociology Department through Dr. Loken put on a barbeque, which was an authentic western affair with a side of beef and the open pit and by way of interest authentic Kingston rain. The evening, as well as the weekend's activities, wound up with the Toronto Mass concert. The concert was run for both the general public and the McArthur students and proved to be a most enjoyable concert by a relatively unknown group.

The Librarianship Program has sponsored two informative and interesting displays. The Artario display was set up and maned by the students of this course and was of interest to the whole community. The librarianship course also ran a film series in conjunction with Young Canada Book week. The films such as 'Wild Child' and 'If' were both of entertainment and educational value. They also displayed several books that have been banned in the public school systems around Kingston. The book display caused a great deal of surprise and discussion amongst the students at McArhur.

The Theatre Arts Department has produced "A Child Growing Up" a dramatic anthology about children compiled and presented by David Kemp. They have just completed "What Shall We Tell Caroline" which was presented on the twenty-nineth and thirtieth of this month. This production was completely student crewed in preparation for an entire student production in the new year "The Caucasian Chalk Circle" directed by a theatre arts student John Burgess. All of these productions are for both the educational value to the students and the entertainment value to the Kingston community in general. The Theatre Arts department is also taking several children's plays into the public schools of Kingston and surrounding area. They also run Youth Theatre workshops for the high school students of the area. It is hoped that some of the student anthologies will be taken to the Women's Prison for the entertainment of the inmates during the Christmas season.

The activities at McArthur are for both entertainment and educational orientation. The overall aim is to make the McArthur student an informed, enriched, and responsible educator and human being.

"What Shall We Tell Caroline?" - despite play, production excelled!

- macpherson

John Burgess and Lorna Wilson as Arthur and Lilly Louden.

by Paul Gompertz

John Mortimer is an angry middle-aged man who has had frequent exposure on the British mass media in recent years and who has done much to impress his overweaning self-confidence upon the public. His most fervent publicly-expressed belief is in the freedom of the individual, and his play, What Shall We Tell Caroline? concerns itself with the loss of freedom and spontaneity, and the crushing effect it can have on human lives. Each of the characters in this play is trapped in a skein of deceptions, and the McArthur College production went a long way towards vivifying the horrors and final sterility of their collective frustrations.

The biggest problem with plays of this kind, to which I must confess a personal aversion, is that they profess a naturalism on the surface which their basic action does not support. The themes are usually over-emphatic and slightly distorted; many of Pinter's plays work very cleverly and effectively in this fashion. This paradox demands a resolution from the actors, and John Burgess, as the head-master, Arthur Loudon, gave an admirable demonstration of how it can be done. His performance was masterful, and he created a character who was both unmistakably human and sufficiently egocentric, without ever becoming a caricature. The result was that his brashness, even his occasional absurdity, and the pathetic fragility of his final state, were all beautifully controlled and convincingly presented. The stature of John's performance cannot be sufficiently extolled and it was he who was responsible for setting the lead which the rest of the cast followed.

Lorna Wilson, as Lily Loudon, displayed an equally careful blend of the natural and the strained, and the composure of her performance provided the perfect foil for Mr. Burgess' dramatic pyrotechnics. Both of these performers deserve the utmost credit for creating homogeneous characters from roles that can very easily appear fragmentary.

Only David Kemp's performance, as Tony Peter, fell below this standard of excellence, and it did so by virtue of its lack of autonomy. He seemed at times not to be quite in touch with the rest of the cast, and there was an irking inconsistency or perhaps vagueness to his overall portrayal which was difficult to define but which seemed to stem from a periodic dramatic laziness. There were moments of relaxation into another mode of character which gave the impression of being a favourite standby to be resorted to in periods of crisis. His performance was, nevertheless, a fine one.

Mary Jo Dick deserves creditable mention for an adequate performance in a role that would need a lot to ever make it anything more than adequate.

Credit must also be given to director Larry O'Farrell for behind every good production there lies a skilled director. It was he who brought the elements of the production into such complementary unison, and who made such skilled use of a simple but effective set.

The precision of the stage effects alone were testimony to the high overall standard of production. It is to be regretted that such good theatre should have such a brief run while lesser productions overstay their welcome.

- macpherson

Mary Jo Dick and David Kemp as Caroline and Tony Peters.

"Promenade" - hilarious Bacchanalian part of life!

By Sandy Naiman

For those of you who enjoy the whimsy of Lewis Carroll's Wonderland, the frenzy of today's social merry-go-round and the advant garde spoofing of absurd situations and present-day conventions, the Guildhall Theatre's "Promenade" which opened a three-day run, Saturday night in the intimate studio at 233½ Princess Street, is just the kind of entertainment which will tickle your fancy and keep you continually chuckling, if not doubled over in your seat.

This "musical child of the Living Theatre", as it is billed, is not as concerned with message as it is with pure roguish fun. Maureen Byrne's direction was sensitive, and a carefully chosen cast performed beautifully, with constant energy and a gay sense of abandon. The entire production reflected, as well, a sense of sincerity and dedication to purpose, and enthusiasm in what was happening on stage and in the audience.

The music, adapted by Jack (Jake the Snake) Shirer had a perpetual bluesiness to it and the songs, which are conceived with hilarious incongruity and farcical almost capricious abandon are permormed delightfully, in a dramatic if not altogether musical sense.

Several comic performances were outstanding, particularly Graham Bock's rather ribald, gum-chewing, sleezy jailer. In the first comic role in which I have seen him, it seems clear that here indeed lies Mr. Bock's forte, for both his timing and his overtly pointed caricature of the sexually obsessed power-hungry jailer is carefully thought out and performed.

As Miss Cake, Marjorie Woodbridge was deliciously titillating and her song, "I am the peach of the west" performed in a Mae Westian jocular style and accompanied by a pseudo erotic strip tease, was clearly a highlight of the show.

Another high was Charles Hayter and Kathy Gould in a spurious operatic sequence where Miss Gould has been hit and Mr. Hayter has run, for Mr. Hayter's facial expressions the plasticity of his eyebrows, his Dracularian demeanor juxtaposed onto Miss Gould's somewhat everlasting wounding display of pain, mixed with concern over his body temperature, was performed to comic perfection.

Allan Higdons' performance as the digital warden who is entertaining the perennial party-goers and Patti Fardell's forlorn lament about her past love affairs, were other highlights in this production which never lost pace or its sense of playfulness.

Mary Ford, as the Mother scouring the city for her "babies", was as funny as the farcical caricatures which predominated the production, but in a totally different way, for her sobriety, her straight, sombre facial nonexpression, her heavy tread as she walks through the landscape of the wild world was hilarious as compared to the others on this mad carousel.

And finally, as 105 and 106, the two criminals out looking for evil and finding instead that "life is walking down the street with a wild look on your face, a cigarette in one hand a toothpick in the other," Andreas Jaupacis and Bruce Kyle, were physically well suited to their roles and epitomized both the innocence and the devilishness that their intrigue demanded.

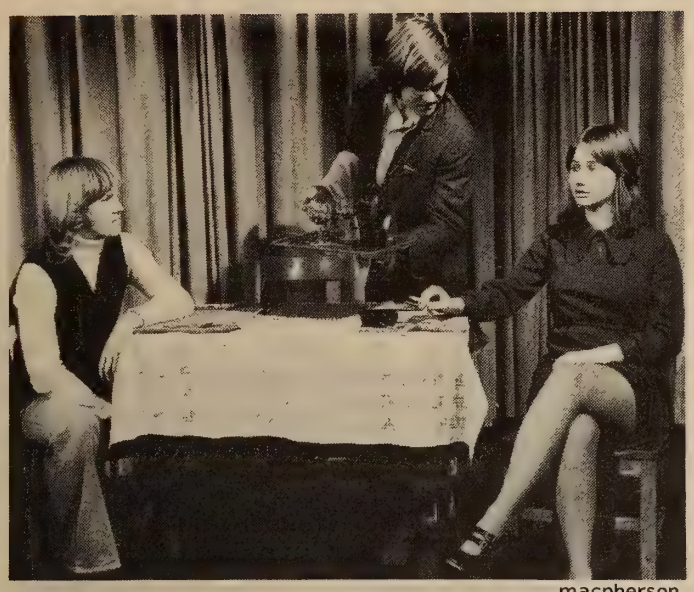
Ultimately though, the success of this show is due to some excellent direction and an uncanny ability to cast her characters with incisive precision. Miss Byrne's direction is close to impeccable. She has used the stage and her actors to their utmost, and her persistent sense of revelry and fun, of madcap frolic which pervades the show and makes no pretense to preach or comment, is what makes it so successful and entertaining.

The costumes, which are both colorful, and innovative, are well co-ordinated, and Miss Woodbridge's Cake costume, a crepe paper confection in pink and white, is divine.

I suppose if one is so inclined some allegorical interpretation can be taken out of this production, for this "musical child" is a product of New York City's Living Theatre, and much of the surrealistic gaiety of the party scenes, the apparent lack of values and the amorality embodied in the characters and the caricatures, particularly the jailer and the warden, could be comments on a deteriorating society.

There is no real story, no real plot, although certain threads are strung through the collage that is compiled on stage. Basically the word, "promenade" is the best explication of the show. For the actors, principally the two bestriped jailbirds, 105 and 106, take us for a stroll through life, they attend a party, and we follow them on their travels in search of the elusive evil they never find, or simply cannot see.

In another sense, Promenade also epitomizes the continual Bacchanialian party of life, the choreography that we all unwittingly perform as we step along, doing a jig or a minute or a waltz.



But one need not be concerned with such mental deliberations to enjoy. Promenade, for its music, its madcap, its merriment is really its message. Miss Bryne has directed her cast and co-ordinated the many elements of the production with a delicate and playful hand and "Promenade" reflects this sensitivity.

- macpherson

Marjorie Woodbridge as Miss Cake.

Why DID "The Private Ear" open?

- macpherson

John MacDonald, Barry Estabrook and Val Stephenson in The Private Ear.

by Paul Gompertz

Warning: the contents of the following are highly corrosive and are unsuitable for assimilation by anyone suffering from ulcers, heart weaknesses or criticophobia. If accidentally splashed on eyes, bathe immediately with a liberal helping of the same author's review of "What Shall We Tell Caroline?" Said author apologises for the necessity to write the following piece at all, and asserts to the best of his knowledge, he does not have sadistic or cannibalistic tendencies. Here endeth the palliative proem to the forthcoming Van Gogh treatment of a private ear.

The names of those concerned ought to have been changed to protect the innocent. Pax eiscum.

I must begin this review by making a public apology for a gross blunder perpetrated in my review of the previous Chronicles production, in which I averred that the standard of the chronicles plays could only get better. I was wrong, and I served my penance on Friday night when I sat through a production of Peter Shaffer's play The Private Ear. The Chronicles series, it is true, is meant to be a showcase for student talent and one does not expect the mantle of greatness to nestle snugly around the shoulders of every sacrificial offering. If, however, the end result is to be offered to an audience, even a non-paying one, then it has to meet certain standards. This production hadn't even made a rendezvous. Consequently, the ordeal for the audience was comparable to being unwilling tasters at a grade 7 home ec. class.

Watching this production, I was put in mind of a recent letter to the Journal in which it was suggested that student artistic enterprise was comparable to, though less interesting than, masturbation. If one were to accept and then extend the analogy, then watching The Private Ear was like being witness to the first self abuse of an inept adolescent, groping to fulfill some driving impulse of which he has no real comprehension. It was clumsy, awkward and aesthetically offensive.

There is very little that can be said about this production, since it defies analysis in any terms related to the dramatic. Barry Estabrook, as Ted, was lost from the moment he came on stage, and he spent the whole time blustering through his lines with a set of rigid and mechanical modulations that made the lines sound as if they were in fact alien to him. His movements, too suggested that he found his own physical presence acutely embarrassing. Every movement and every gesture would have done credit to a self-conscious stroke victim, and they gave a puppet-like quality to the performance. John Macdonald, as Bob, was more timid in his ineptitude and his terror made him swallow many of his words as he drifted aimlessly from place to place. There were brief flashes of competence, but they were generally submerged by the stiffness of the production as a whole. Both actors made their parts look like ordeals that were to be borne with grim fortitude, with the result that one could only wish the performance to spare them (and oneself!) further agony.

Commiseration is due for Val Stephenson as Doreen, who managed to be less than awful against overwhelming odds. She struggled bravely to give shape to her performance within a vacuum, for she had nothing to act with or against. She deserves a more conducive setting in which to display a talent which managed to pervade even this miasma. It was appropriate and inevitable that the best manifestations of her skills were the facial expressions she used to express her feelings not dependent on the other characters.

As for the director, what can one say? Was the mistake in the choice of play, in the choice of the actors, or in an inability to work with the chosen material? Or was the worst mistake in having the gall to put this so-called 'finished product' before an audience? With such a small cast and such a sound and simple play, it remains a mystery how the direction could leave the production so flaccid, rough, and mechanical. Something, somewhere, went terribly wrong.

Despite any impression to the contrary, I am a firm believer in constructive criticism, and I try wherever possible to give reasons for my assessment of any part of a production as a failure. Alas, I cannot in this instance begin to suggest improvements or even specific reasons for the failure. There was nothing in the way of commendable material, unless it was Val's performance, against which to assess the weaknesses of the production. Even the play itself was submerged, and it would be impossible to extricate the playwright's more subtle intentions from the morass.

I can only reiterate the wish that I did not have to write this review, or that I could take a leaf out of an earlier critic's book. There is a story, possibly apocryphal, for a scathingly simple review he wrote of a play just opened; had I adapted it to my purposes, this review would simply have read:

"Peter Shaffer's play, 'The Private Ear' opened last Tuesday in the Drama Department. Why?"

alertdays

Tuesday, December 5.

7:30 p.m. - Kingston Psychiatric Hospital Christmas Concert. Westwood Auditorium.

9:00 p.m. - Le Cinema Quebecois presents Les Maudits Savages (directed by Jean-Pierre Lefebvre, 1970). Ellis Hall.

Wednesday, December 6.

9:00 - 11:00 a.m. - The Montessori Method of instruction is being introduced at the Kingston Cooperative Nursery School St. Paul's Church, Queen at Montreal Streets. 2½ to 4 year olds will be accepted. An open house is being held at this time. For further information call 548-4586.

12:00 - Symposium for Nurses and Allied Health Professionals Gastroenterology Nursing. Auditorium Hotel Dieu Hospital.

5:30 p.m. - Union Program Committee holds an annual Christmas Dinner in the Student's Union. Wallace Hall. Tickets are $1.65 and can be obtained from cashiers in the cafereria and coffee bar.

8:00 p.m. - Queen's Music Department presents an Illustrated Lecture: The Music of Africa. Lecturer Dr. Roxanne Carlisle, Ethnomusicologist, Trent University. Dunning Auditorium.

8:00 p.m. - Queen's Christian Fellowship Christmas Celebration. All Welcome. Red Room, Kingston Hall.

Thursday, December 7.

3:30 p.m. - Queen's Music Department presents A Christmas Concert by Queen's Chamber Orchestra under the direction of David R. Keane. Music of Holst, Corelli, Anderson, as well as traditional Christmas Carols with audience participation. Dunning Auditorium. Admission free.

6:00 p.m. - Christmas Fireside - poetry reading with David Kemp in the armchair. 5:45 p.m. - Coffee and desert, Ban Righ Common Room. All welcome.

8:00 p.m. - "Orgy at Pooh Corner!!" A party by the Queen's Drama Guild - beer, mulled wine, spiked eggnog and Santa Claus. Dance to the live 'Lily White Memorial Band.' See members of the Drama Guild perform. Draw for the London Theatre Tour Raffle at midnight. Bring your ticket stubs or buy one there. Only 50c. Basement of the International Centre.

7:00 and 9:30 p.m. - Campus Movies presents "Ben." Dunning Hall. Admission $1.00.

9:00 p.m. - Department of Film Studies presents "The Awful Truth" (Leo McCarey, 1937). Ellis Hall. Admission $1.00.

Friday, December 8.

7:30 p.m. - India Association presents "Awara" a Hindi Film with English subtitles. Ellis Hall. Admission: General $2.00, Member - $1.50, and children 50c.

8:00 p.m. - Leave one horror for another. Drop your books and see "The Cabinet of Doctor Caligari (1919) and Hugo's "Les Miserables" (1935). Dunning Auditorium. Admission $1.00.

Queen's Drama Guild presents "The Ice Dragon" and "The Lollipop Princess" - 2 children's plays with an adult's slant; at the Guildhall Theatre, 233½ Princess Street. Friday at 8:00 p.m., Saturday at 1:00 p.m. and 3:00 p.m., Sunday at 1:00 p.m. and 3:00 p.m. Admission 50c at the door.

Coming -

The Toronto Alumnae are planning to hold their annual Christmas Skating Party on Wednesday, December 27, 1972, at the North Toronto Memorial Gardens, located in the park at Eglinton and Oriole Parkway. Skating to music is free, from 7:00 to 10:00 p.m. Refreshments will be available from 8:00 to 10:00 at a nominal price. A special invitation is therefore extended to all Queen's students who will be in Toronto at that time.

Off Campus
Theatres

Capitol - Prime Cut
Hyland - A Day in the Death of Joe Egg
Starting Wednesday - Doctor Zhivago
Odeon - Tuesday - What Became of Jack and Jill and The Strange Vengeance of Rosalie.
Starting Wednesday - The New Centurions.

CFRC am-fm

Special Programs

CFRC 1490 AM Highlights

Thursday December 7th

7:30 - The Goon Show; with Spike Milligan, Harry Secombe, and Peter Sellers. This week:
"The Burning Enemy".

8:00 - Issues and Images, a public affairs series featuring interviews, speakers, commentary and discussion.

Friday December 8th

6:30 - Spectrum, light music, with "Campus Happenings" at 6:55, and "In Perspective" at 7:15.

10:00 - Nocturne, rock music from Edison Lighthouse to Electric Light Orchestra, until 2:00 a.m.

Saturday December 9th

2:00 a.m. - Nocturne Request Show (CFRC's phone number is 547-6677).

Sunday December 10

7:45 - Montage presents a 2¾ hour documentary "Fifty Years of Queen's Radio.

LADIES ELECTROLYSIS
Avoid shaving, tweezing, or the use of dipilatories. Have your eyebrows styled and unwanted hair removed permanently by electrolysis. Physicians recommend our work. For a free consultation and information call:
HARRISON SALON 542-5595

AUNT LUCY'S RESTAURANT

- Licensed Dining Room
- Lunches, Dinners, Snacks
- Breakfast (summer only)
- Specialty Beverages — best in town
- Steaks, Seafoods
- Kentucky Fried Chicken Dinners
- Children's Menu (noted for Pleasant Service)
- Low Prices — Good Service
- Cleanest Restaurant in Town
- Located Princess Street West at Portsmouth
- No Reservations — come as you are

SPECIAL SERVICES

BULK CATERING — for picnics, parties, churches. We provide the food — you pick it up and serve. Prices from $1.00 per person.

BOX LUNCHES — from one to one hundred. Special rates available on Box Chicken Dinners for groups of 25 or more.

DIAL 542-2729 — and ask for the manager.

Prices Subject To Change Without Notice
Plus 10 Per Cent Provincial Sales Tax Where Applicable

TAKE HOME MENU

5 Stores to Serve You

BROCKVILLE
63 William St. at Pearl 342-4235

GANANOQUE
80 King Street (In the Heart of Town)

KINGSTON
Princess St. at Portsmouth 546-2277
Montreal St. at Markland 542-2773
Bath Rd. at Gardiners 389-5000 (across from Drive-In Theatre)

THE FAMILY BUCKET — $4.25

15 pcs. delicious chicken feeds 4-5 people

THE BARREL O' CHICKEN
20 pcs. chicken feeds 7-10 people
$5.50

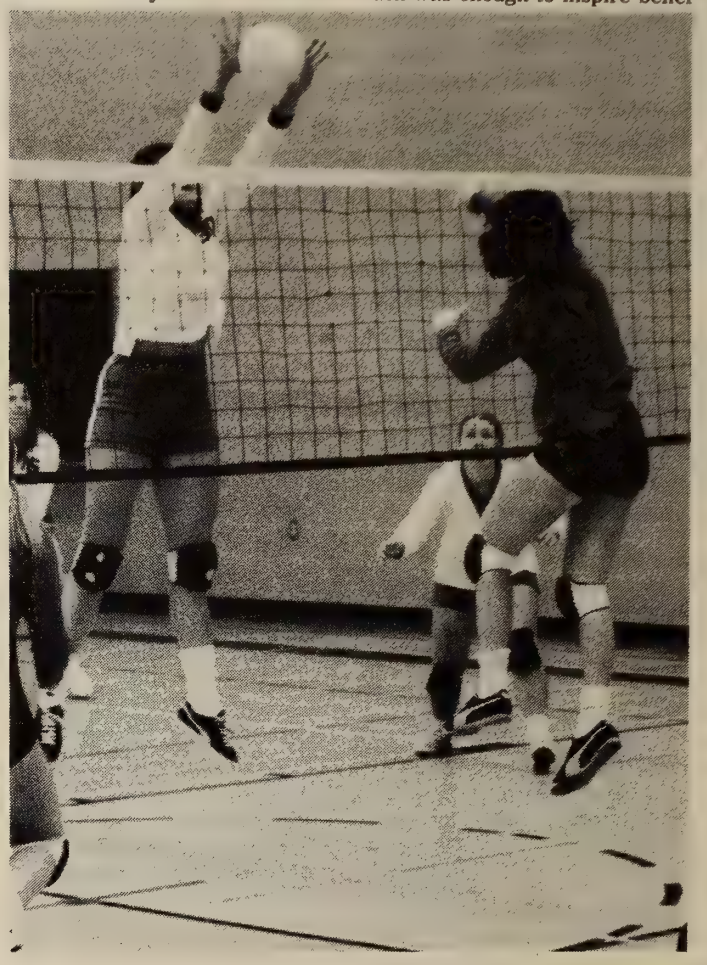
THE THRIFT BOX
9 pcs. chicken feeds 3-4 people
$2.75

THE SNACK BOX
2 pcs. Chicken french fries
.95

The Individual Chicken Dinner $1.50
3 pieces Chicken — Creamy Cole Slaw
French Fried Potatoes — Home Baked Bread

SALADS — 16 oz. - .60 8 oz. - .35 Ind. - .20

Creamy Slaw	Family Box of French Fries	1.00
Potato Salad	Individual French Fries	.30
Macaroni Salad	Drinks	.20
Baked Beans



Prices Subject To Change Without Notice

Volleyball Gals split; beat York 3-2; lose 3-0 to T.O.

by Sue Moffatt

Queen's Senior VB team closed their pre-christmas season at home this weekend with matches against York and U of T. Friday night held its tense moments with Queen's taking the first game, and then waiting to make good on the final two. Saturday night their success was more limited, as our gals dropped 3 straight games to T.O.

The first game of Friday's match was well played and well won. The 15-5 score seemed to promise a quick 3-up 3-down match for Queen's. The second game, however, saw a complete reversal of this prophecy with York taking Queen's by equally extreme scores: 15-2 and 15-8. These last two scores, however, are in no way reflective of the court play, and, much as York would like to think otherwise, are not indicative of the teams' relative abilities. Both games were marked with excellent Queen's back court play, particularly in the initial bumps. Sets were consistently high and well placed, and there were a number of plays in which Queen's anticipated York spikes with effective blocking, or recovered apparently doomed plays. Yet somehow, time after time, spikes were placed out of court or into the net. Tips would slide along the net to fall again on Queen's side. York serves would be left only to land miraculously on our end line. The behaviour of the ball at times seemed to defy the laws of physics, and the consistent bad luck was enough to inspire belief in the existence of jinx or malevolent genies. Fortunately our gals didn't become discouraged or too terribly unnerved, and came back with two strong victories: 15-12, and 15-5, much to York's surprise. In all honesty, the reffing against York was more than a bit unfair, while Queen's managed to get away with Linda Bell serving two rotations in a row! It was a delighted team of Gals which left the court with their second victory of the season, and their second well-played match.

What do you do with a girl who's 6'2" and built like a piece of Stonehenge? Right- put her on U of T's volleyball team and let her have fun. Unfortunately, Queen's losses cannot be attributed to the dexterity or height advantage of T.O.'s squad, although the physchological effect of such a giantess is alarming. U of T did not earn more than 5 per cent of their points on good play. Rather Queen's virtually handed them the scorecard after the first game and let them fill it in. Although the first game was very good for both teams, and the 15-11 score gave T.O. pause for thought, our Gals couldn't seem to co-ordinate their good intentions and desire to win with the techniques to do so. Much as they tried to avoid it, as the games progressed, and mistakes became more frequent, our Gals became increasingly rattled and confused. The state snowballed the situation of falling plays. More spaces, rather than fewer, appeared undefended on the court. Paradoxically, footwork became slower and less effective, the more they wanted to be in position. Every spectator must have felt the frustration of these gals, to say nothing of their coach, who wanted so badly to do everything right and ended up doing too many things wrong. It is hard to say why the Gals became unglued as they did, but it is of some comfort to know that they have the potential to have made the end result very different.

Queen's fencing

Women win - men 2nd

Queen's women's fencing team won its division in the Queen's-RMC Invitational Fencing Meet here this weekend, but the men were forced to settle for a second-place finish behind Carleton. Teams from Varsity, Carleton, York, Waterloo, Trent and CMR took part in addition to the host schools.

The Gals' finish was sparked by the performance of Judy Krupanskzy, who finished 3rd overall in individual standings, with a record of 9 wins and one loss. Rosemary Knight and Sue Seto also turned in strong performances for Queen's, much to the delight of coach Jon Tondeur.

In the Men's competition, Alan Christian led Queen's with an 8-1 record in the foil event, while Phil Buxton had a 5-3 mark in the sabre. Queen's finished fourth in both these competitions, behind York and Varsity.

Queen's second-place finish overall can be directly attributed to their fine finish in the epee competition. The Gaels' fencers placed one-two, with Alan Christian winning personal honours on the strength of a perfect 8 and 0 record, while teammate Wilf Backhaus posted a 7-1 mark for second spot.

If both Queen's teams continue to show the improvement after the Christmas break that has been apparent all fall, they could well pick up a couple of league titles. The women, especially, have shown real improvement, and considering the inexperience of most of the team, the future looks bright.

B-ball Gals split as injuries strike

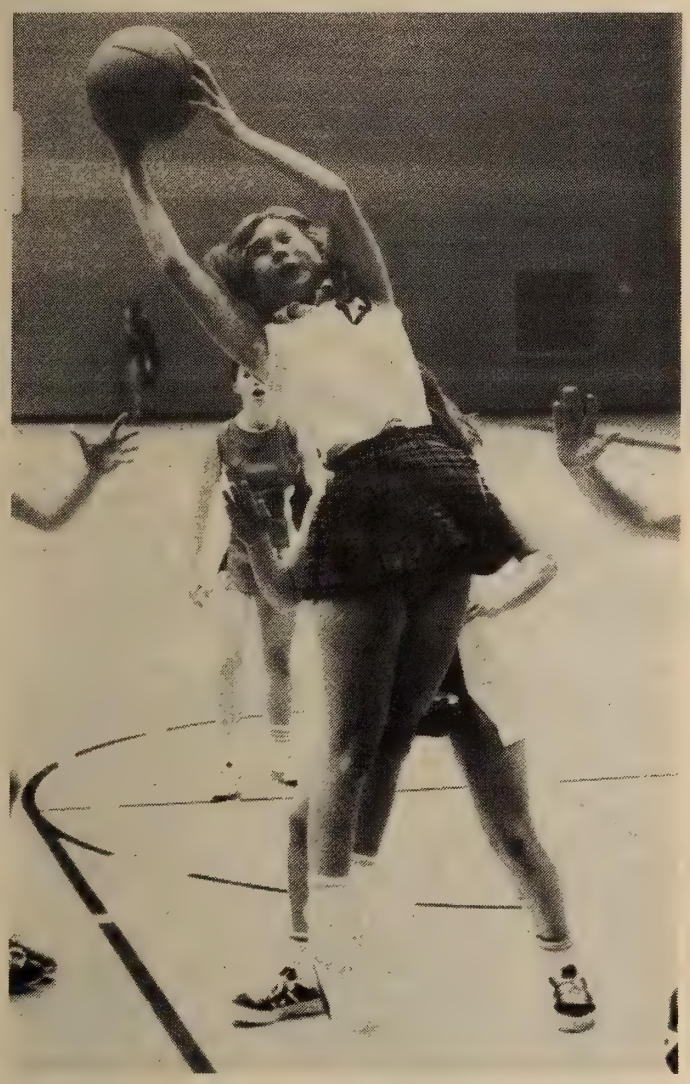
by Mary Anne Purdy

The Queen's Basketball Gals started their games strongly this weekend, only to end in injuries and defeat. The first game, against an offensively unorganized York team was won by Queen's with a score of 53-27. Laney Marshall again stole the show, netting eight baskets on her way to a total of nineteen points.

The starting line of Karen Carson, Janet Eady, Pat Patterson, Jean Critchon, and Karen Flemming found it hard, at first, to penetrate the tight defensive zone set up by York. Queen's seemed unable to score from the outside. However, because of York's inability to set up good plays offensively, Queen's was able to steal the ball and score on many fast breaks. The Queen's defense was a tight zone, as always, and York was unable to successfully score against it.

One reason for the great difference in the score was due to York's neglect of getting the rebounds. Queen's took advantage, getting almost 85 per cent of the rebounds. This gave them more control of the ball. It seemed that Queen's capitalized on York's mistakes, and this won them the game.

At the start of the second half with the score at 26-14 for Queen's, York applied a full-court zone press in an attempt to get control of the ball, but this proved ineffectual. York then switched to a man-to-man defence, but the Gals, who were still in their zone were more successful, and won handily.



On Saturday afternoon it was a different story. Here the teams were evenly matched, and Queen's had to fight to stay in the game. The Gals played against Toronto and it was a very close, exciting game, until injuries took out two of the Gals star players.

Both teams played a tight zone defence-forcing each opposition to shoot from the outside. Laney Marshall, Karen Carson, Pat Patterson, Jean Critchon, and Karen Flemming started, and kept the Toronto team down to an equal number of baskets with good rebounding and good defensive playing. During the first half, Karen Flemming, one of Queen's most aggressive and effective guards was injured.

The score during the first half was always at a one point difference between the two teams. One way that Queen's lost a lot of points was due to a large number of fouls committed by our players. Near the end of the half an ankle injury to Laney Marshall took her out of the play for the rest of the game. At the end of the half the score stood at 24-23 for Queen's.

The second half started out well, only to have Karen Flemming again injure her knee. She unfortunately sat out for the rest of the game. Queen's continued to play a good game, but without the help of Laney and Karen they were defeated by the Toronto team 51-43. Queen's defeat could be due to a number of inaccurate shots taken during the last quarter. Also, by the end of the game the Gals looked tired, as their opponents gradually pulled away from their one point lead. Special mention should be given to Jean Crichton, who hit 100 per cent of her many foul shots, and rookie Kathy Keely, who played a good game setting up plays and intercepting passes.

These were the last games of the season before Christmas for the Gals. Let us hope that they will do as well after Crhistmas as they have before.

Barb Platt hauls down a rebound vs. York

Laney Marshall adds fast-break points vs. Toronto

Hockey Gals take two; scoring punch appears

Queen's Hockey Gals ran their league record to 5 and 1 with an eminently successful road trip this weekend. The Gals used a new-found scoring touch to dump an outclassed McMaster Marlinette squad 5-2 Friday night, then capped their excursion by downing the York Yeowomen 4-1 on Saturday.

Against McMaster, the Gals opened up a two-goal lead in the first period, on goals by Sheila Pratt and Ginny Backus, and gave every indication of running Mac right out of the rink. Queen's were easily outskating their opposition, and their defense, which had been shaky in several earlier contests, was playing fine positional hockey. Un fortunately, the Gals suffered a slight let-down in the second period, and McMaster came up with a pair of quick goals, before Sheila Pratt netted her second goal of the game to give Queen's a 3-2 lead after two periods of play. Only some steady work in the Queen's nets by Wanda Gyde kept the Gals out in front, as Mac pressed hard late in the period.

The third period was again dominated by Queen's, with team captain Debbie Gilmour and Gail McLeod scoring insurance markers for the Gals. The Gals outshot McMaster 33-11, with most of the opposition's chances coming in the second period.

The York game was another high-scoring effort, with the Gals' line of Liz Wood, Gail McLeod and Leslie Ferrari scoring a goal apiece, and Jane Moran adding another marker. York opened the scoring, with Marg Post sliding the puck past Wand Gyde with about six minutes gone in the first period. The Gals got that one back in a hurry, when Liz Wood potted her goal from a net-mouth scramble. The first period ended in a 1-all tie, although Queen's enjoyed an edge in play, especially in the last half of the period. Jane Moran gave the Gals the lead for good mid-way in the second period, as she slapped home a rebound. The Gals picked up two more goals as linemates Gail McLeod and Leslie Ferrari,a quality rookie, found the range in the third period.

That the Gals managed to dominate the game as completely as they did was quite amazing. Some dubious officiating saddled Queen's with five penalties, although it was York that came up with consistently chippy play. The Yeowomen seemed to have especially sharp elbows in the corners, but the refs were less than observant. However, despite the penalty-killing, the Gals outshot York 24-10 over the course of the game.

Depending on the outcome of the Guelph-Western game(results weren't in at press time), the Gals are either tied for first, or all alone in second place, in the OWIAA. If they can keep the scoring touch shown here over the Christmas holidays, Queen's could have a really good chance at the league title. Since we host the OWIAA championships in mid-February, a strong home showing would very definitely be in order. If the Gals can avoid injuries and the post-Christmas slump (remember last year) this could be a big-win season.

Swimgals win

The Queen's Swimming Gals travelled with the men's team to take part in a dual women's meet against Ottawa. Although reduced to seven swimmers, the women won the meet 51-46 with everyone including the manager Sue Murdock showing their versatility by swimming in a total of 10 events.

In the 50 yard free style Cathy Brace and Ianna Swann placed first and second and Mary Jean Duncan won both the 200 and 100 Backstroke with Ginny Snowdon placing 2nd in the 200 back and Pat Matheson in the 100 back. Cathy Brace placed second in the 200 individual medley and first in the 100 yd. breaststroke. I. Swann also came second in the 100 and 400 free sytle with S. Murdock coming second in the 200 free style and third in the 100 free. All the girls improved their times and look really in good shape for their three meets in January.

St. Lawrence U. 3-2

Hockey Gaels drop another!

by peter watts

Queen's Golden Gaels hockey team ended the fall campaign on a losing note on Friday evening with a 3-2 loss to St. Lawrence University of New York State in an exhibition game at the Harty Arena. Despite the loss, the Gaels looked quite a bit better than they did last Tuesday when they lost a 7-5 decision to Ottawa. Coach Bob Carnegie was fairly well satisfied with his team's performance in the first and third periods but it was the second period that cost the Gaels the game.

The Gaels led 1-0 after the first period on a goal by Jim Sunstrum at the 6:21 mark. John Smith and Steve Gross picked up assists on the goal. Clyde Harris played the first period and part of the second until being replaced by Don Hall.

In the second period the Gaels could not get going and Eric Standford tied the score for St. Lawrence on an unassisted effort at the 37 second mark. The visitors forged ahead at the 6:03 mark when Kingston native Gord Rivoire fired a screen shot past former teammate Harris to tie the score. A few minutes later, Hall replaced Harris in the nets and at 16:47, Al McCormack scored from Scott Graham to make the score 3-1 for St. Lawrence at the end of the second period.

The Gaels got the lone goal of the final period as defenceman Chris Clark scored the goal with the assistance of Sunstrum, at the 4:26 mark. The Gaels put on the pressure throughout the rest of the period but could not get the equalizer.

Despite the loss, Carnegie was satisfied with the play of his club, although he felt that the Gaels could have won the game had they capitalized on their chances. He credited St. Lawrence with strong positional hockey, something which is stressed in American college hockey. Coach Carnegie was also pleased with the play of Jim Adair, Dave Hadden and John Cerre. Hadden was lost to them in the second period with a slight concussion; however, he will be all right. The Gaels also lost winger Dave Melloy near the end of the second period; however, this injury was slight also. The Gaels played without veteran defenceman Mike Lynch, who suffered an ankle injury in the game against Ottawa.

mossman

Gael defenceman Ron White (10) takes pass as John Smith (18) looks on Swimmers win twice in double-dual meet

The University of Ottawa's new pool proved to be the "waterloo" for Potsdam and the Ottawa Gee-Gees. A small, but versatile Queen's team left Potsdam (Queen's 75- Potsdam 42) and Ottawa (Queen's 74-Ottawa 31) floundering in its wake.

Everyone put in top performances with one team record being tied and two broken. John Ireland broke the long standing team record for the 1000 freestyle, and tied the 500 freestyle record after swimming for third in the gruelling 200 butterfly.

Another record breaker, John Pearson, smashed his own record by 4 seconds in the 200 butterfly as well as swimming from behind in the 200 individual medley to place first.

Queen's divers provided an enjoyable break in the races as Phil Millerd and Bill Kirkpatrick twisted and turned to first and second over Ottawa on the one metre board. Millerd grudgingly took second and Kirkpatrick third to Potsdam in this event.

Returning to the pool, the swimmers splashed through several more races with team captain, Steve "Rox" Patterson placing first in the 100 freestyle and second in the 50 free and Roger Rowan third in both events. Jamie Noakes and Bryan Warren took second and third in the 200 backstroke while Noakes pulled in more points in the 200 breaststroke. "Eagle" Craig outtouched a Potsdam Swimmer for second in the 200 individual medley, a personal best, and took third in the 200 Breast with a best time for the season thus far. John Kerr helped put the total out of reach with a close second in 200 free and third in the 500.

Back on the springboard, Bill Kirkpatrick and Tom Caswell showed the other divers what it was all about, taking an easy first and second over Ottawa and surprising Potsdam with a first and third. Coach Freedman was all smiles as the long weeks of training paid off in the 3 metre event.

Darryl Penner helped lead the team to a first in the 400 medley relay but a questionable call from a stroke judge spoiled the come-from-behind effort with a disqualification. Penner took second in the 200 Breast stroke over all and third in the 200 Individual Medley. After only three weeks of training, he looks promising for the 1973 season.

Jim Easto left his announcing duties at CFRC to keep the point total climbing with a third in the 200 free and a personal best in the 500.

Queen's Golden "ALES", swimming exhibition, waved goodbye to everyone in the last event of the meet with a record breaking 400 freestyle relay, as the old coaches, "Zach" and "Joe" joined Pearson and Rox to win by a half a length.

The 1973 pool season starts January 12th with first annual Queen's Mug Races.

VAN'S

Gifts Books Ltd.
253 Princess Street
542-6676 Kingston

Van's Adult section for
Adult Broadminded People
Adult: books, magazines, films
Adult: accessories, jokes, gifts
Adult: humorous cards & stationery
Adult: "Sex to Sexty" & "Super Sex to Sexty"
Adult: DeLuxe highgloss coloured posters
Yeah! Yeah! Comest ye all & select your purchase. Itt'll satisfy the soul of good 'harted' Van!
Open 7 days till 11 pm

Canadian Handcrafted
Fully Briar Pipes
Different up to Date models

FESTIVAL '73
MUSICIANS

Sign up, try out for the music portion of the Arts Festival

Are you a single musician in search of a group?

Get together with other musicians

Dec. 5 & 6th, 7-8 p.m.

2nd floor Common Room
Students Union

ARTS & SCIENCE

ORIENTATION '73

Gael Applications forms

available in the

A.M.S. OUTER OFFICE NOW

completed applications should be returned to the

A.M.S. OUTER OFFICE

THURSDAY, DEC. 14th

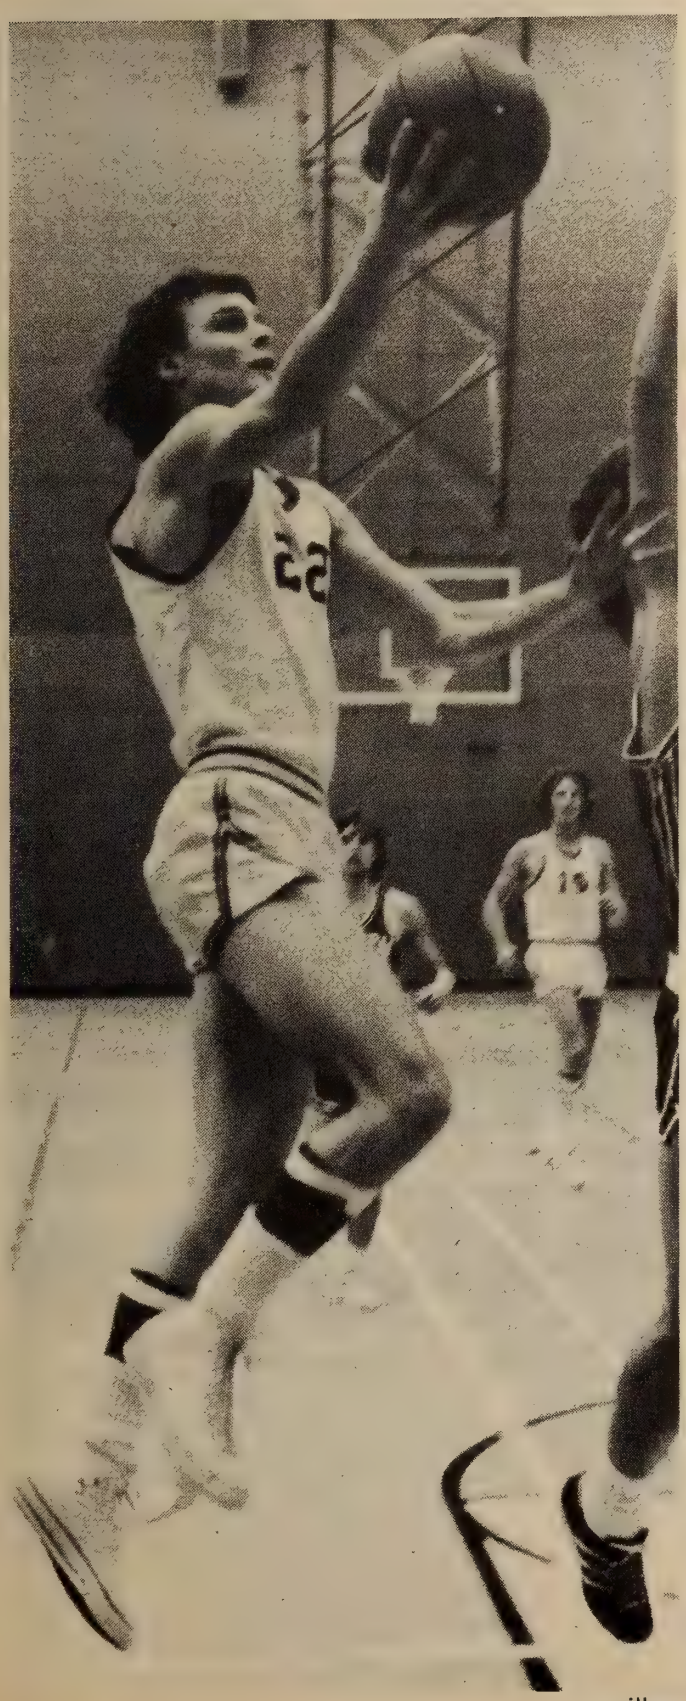
all years & faculties may apply

B-ball Gaels lose two

By Chris Boon

Queen's basketball Gaels dropped a pair of games over the weekend, losing 83-74 to York in a league contest Friday night, then getting bombed 97-63 by Jefferson C.C. in Watertown on Saturday. The Gaels were outclassed, personnel-wise, against the American school, but it was an inability to rebound, aided by confusion on in-bounds plays and a poorly-run press-break, that gave York its first league win of the season.

To be polite, the Gaels threw Friday's game away. I have seen junior teams in high school that showed a better knowledge of rebounding techniques, especially under the defensive boards. The number of times York had four or five tries at field goal boggle the mind; it's no wonder they managed to win. As if that wasn't enough of a problem, Queen's managed to throw the ball away nine times in the first half -- on in-bounds plays after a score, no less. Granted, York shot well, especially in the first half, but you can't win games if you give up the ball before you take a shot, and Queen's did just that with alarming frequency.



The Gaels's big men - Paul Howard and Bruce Hemming - contributed just 3 and 2 points respectively, while Bob Weppler, York's starting centre, led all scorers with 22 points. That in itself tells a lot. Otherwise, the Gaels got a good, balanced attack, with Derek Swinnard again pulling a John Havilchek routine, coming off the bench to lead the Gaels with 16 points. Rob Smart hooped 14, Norm Hagarty 13, John Keck 12, and subs Stu Beck and Corky McLeery 7 each. If Queen's can get consistent intercollegiate-level performances from Howard andHemmingthen the Gaels should win. If the current level of play keeps up, it will be a long season for somebody, because Corky McLeery at least shows some enthusiasm for the game.

The Gaels played York to a draw in the second half; they trailed by nine going into it, and lost by nine. On two occasions, Queen's came within five points, only to make a turnover or miss an easy shot, and lose the momentum they had gained. It could have gone either way. We lost the game, as much as York won it.

The Saturday contest offered no such consolation, although the Gaels showed some new tactics, platooning five men in, five men out, for the whole game. The results were interesting, with McLeery leading Queen's scoring with 12 points, while Don Sinclair, a rookie forward with great potential, added 10. The Gaels were close, down 5, just before the end of the first half, but Jefferson pulled away in the second. Faced with a stiff zone defence, the Gaels had to put the ball up from outside, and couldn't hit the hoop. The rebounding didn't pick up any, but Queen's did demonstrate an ability to break what had been billed as a tough press. The Gaels could get the ball down-court O.K.; they just couldn't score very well.

The Gaels are off from now until January 13th, when the league-leading Laurentian Voyageurs come to town. Queen's beat the Vee's last year here, 67-57, but lost in Sudbury. If the Gaels have any hope for success this year, certain people are going to have to want to play some tough, physical basketball under the boards. Better make some New Year's resolutions, gentlemen.

Derek Swinnard drives for two against York

- merithew

sports shorts

Hope springs eternal

Men's Gymnastics 2nd in York

By Chris Woods

Having lost all faith in the Queen's Men's Gymnastics team two weeks ago, this correspondent is once again forced to eat his hat. This past weekend, the Queen's gym squad proved that they weren't really so bad after all, and spoiled my sour grapes.

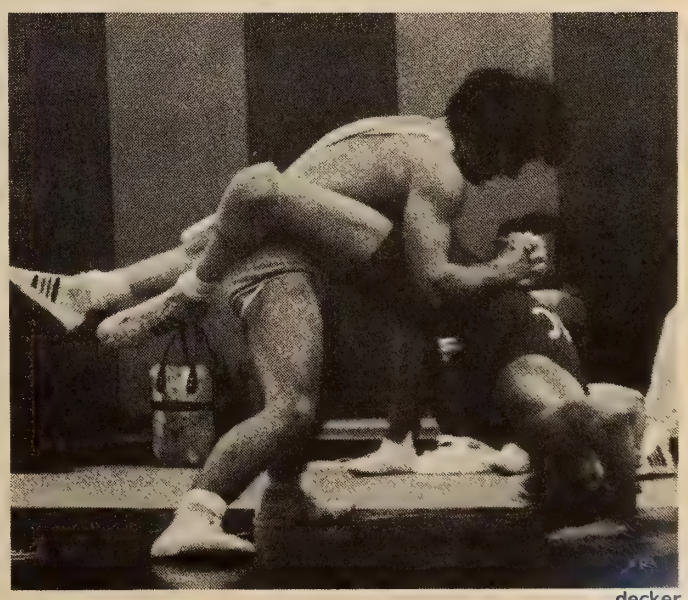
The Queen's team managed to come off with second place in the York University Invitational Meet, in which university competitors from U. of Toronto, Western, McMaster, York, and Queen's took part. With a score of 191.90, the Gaels edged Toronto by a little over three points in the overall standing. Meanwhile, York, supposedly the unbeatable powerhouse of the league, accumulated a grand total of 213.70 points.

The McMaster team, minus a couple of competitors, did not make a good team showing, but its key member, Steve Mitruk, did walk off with five gold medals and a silver in Vaulting, thus copping the top all-around honours in a completely expected victory. Mitruk, the top Canadian competitor at the Olympics in Munich this past August, can certainly be expected to win the OUAA Finals on an individual basis.

However, more and more, the team race looks like it might be a lot closer than thought earlier. The Queen's team was without its consistent top scorer, Drew Strickland, who was incapacitated by a case of those dreadful exam uglies; with him, the team can be expected to collect ten more points.

The team displays its talents to Queen's fans for the only time other than Snowball on the first weekend of the second term; if you want to see what might just prove to be a team with a chance at top spot in the OUAA it's your only chance. It should prove to be a good meet, with all the major contenders in the league competing. See you there.

Wrestling team second



Queen's wrestling team placed second in a three-way meet held here Friday evening, in conjunction with a wrestling clinic organized by Dr. John Albinson.

Despite some disappointing individual performances, the team placed second behind a perennially-strong Ryerson squad. RMC was third.

Individually, Rob Beamish and Mike Dwhytie were the out standing performers for Queen's, with Beamish recording two wins in the 142-lb class and Dwhytie the same in the 158-lb class. Beamish's second match, with an opponent from Ryerson, lasted just 27 seconds before Rob managed a pin.

Other Queen's victors were Randy White (177-lb) and Del DeMonte (191-lb) who split their matches; Peter Verhoeven, who has been recovering from rugger season, drew his heavyweight match with RMC.

Now, that's an interesting hold, gentlemen. . .

- decker

World: Second term Nixon Cabinet receives new faces

CAMP DAVID, MARYLAND — President Richard Nixon has begun naming appointments to his new Cabinet which is to take office in January.

Housing Secretary, Elliot Richardson, known as one of Washington's ablest administrators was promoted to the position of Secretary of Defence. Nixon stated that the appointment would "help bring a sense of excitement and renewed purpose to the government".

Caspar Weinburger, previously Director of the Office of Management and Budget was appointed to succeed Richardson.

Secretary of State William Rogers will be kept in his present position in which he is presently working on a solution to the Mid East crisis, as well as a mutual reduction of military forces in Europe.

William Rush, chairman of the Securities Exchange Commission was named Undersecretary for Economic Affairs and millionaire industrialist Roy Ash will take charge of the OMB.

William Porter, a negotiator in the Paris Peace Talks will be the new Undersecretary of State for Political Affairs.

DUBLIN- The militant Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army which has been the author of many of the recent killings and bombings in Northern Ireland has presented Britain with a peace proposal three times in the last two weeks but was turned down each time.

The terms included amnesty for all the Unificationists and IRA guerrillas as well as a declaration of intent by Britain for a United Ireland. It also called for a promise by Britain that all guerrillas presently on the run would not be arrested after the truce takes affect. Britain turned the proposals down flat claiming them totally unacceptible.

THE HAGUE — Holland has just completed their national elections but nobody knows who won. However, it is known that the former right-centre Dutch coalition government is defeated.

With the left wing picking up considerably from the eighteen to twenty-one year old first time voters, no party was able to gain more than 43 seats in the 150 seat lower house. With many parties holding seats, an innumerable number of combinations are possible, and, until one party manages to come out with enough strength, the former coalition will continue to look after the country's affairs.

WASHINGTON — In a meeting between the U.S. Chiefs of Staff and President Richard Nixon, they told him that they support the terms of a projected Vietnam settlement as proposed by North Vietnam. mmediately after the meeting President Nixon contacted South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu and told him to take a more affirmative stand toward the anticipated ending of the war.

LONDON — Britain has announced a series of measures to retaliate against Uganda's President Idid Amin after his expulsion of over 20,000 Asians.

Britain has announced that their ongoing technical assistance program through with $24 million in credits was given to Uganda has been cancelled and that the 1,000 teachers and agricultural workers involved in the program would be withdrawn. In addition Britain stated that they will not send a new high commissioner to Uganda to replace the one previously withdrawn.

LONDON — Britain's 3,000,000 students have begun a boycott of Distillers Co., a distributer of whiskey and chemicals, in a protest over its inadequate provision for deformed children born to mothers who have taken thalidomide, a drug which the company sells.

ROME — Work has stopped on emergency repairs to the crumbling colloseum because the money has run out. The government has allotted $70,000 to the restoration of the 1900 year old structure They were only able to repair the ground floor of the southeast wing with the funds that were made available.

FORT LAMY — The Central African Republic of Chad has announced the break-off of diplomatic ties with Israel so that all ambiguity over Africa's solidarity with Arab nations might be removed. At the same time they announced recognition of Communist China because they "could not ignore a nation of 800,000,000 inhabitants."

TOKYO — The leaders of the world's major cities met here last week to compare notes on their problematic administration. The meeting which involved London, Moscow, New York, Paris and Tokyo spent much time in discussing the problems of cars and road traffic.

The leaders of London and Tokyo were especially concerned with this problem as they are faced with some of the worst traffic jams in the world. Mayor Lindsay of New York decried the "mindless growth of automobile use in the 1950's."

The leader of Moscow told the conference that they plan to put as many roads underground as possible with diametrical and angular tunnels on two levels.

Canada: Corporate tax cuts to be enacted

OTTAWA — Finance Minister John Turner has announced that the government will go ahead with the tax proposals of the May budget scheduled to go into effect on January 1, despite considerable opposition from the other parties in parliament.

Turner outlined the new formula to be used by Canadian firms in determining the amount of their business income subject to the reduced rates of taxation and announced the further liberalization of the rules applying to small manufacturing. He also outlined the extension of the deadline within which certain corporations are permitted to pay the special tax free dividends from accumulated surpluses.

Bill C-222 in which these proposals are contained is subject to come up before parliament on January 1 for approval, but the other parties have shown little agreement with its terms.

OTTAWA — The Committee for an Independent Canada is falling on the rocks of financial difficulties as a result of its inability to meet membership projections.

The CIC set as its objective 100,000 members but at present it has only been able to attract 7,800. It has among its membership 56 Members of Parliament.

TORONTO - The Canadian dollar dropped sharply last week to a spot price of 100.72 cents (US) down from 101.72 at the beginning of the week. The weakness has been blamed on a net outflow of short-term funds in anticipation of a widening differential in the Canadian and US short-term interest rates. In addition the Canadian dollar usually shows weakness at the end of the month reflecting the outflow of interest and dividends to the United States.

TORONTO — Ontario Health Minister Richard Potter stated that Ontario hospitals will have to decide for themselves how to cope with the provincial restraints on grants for active treatment beds.

Liberal Opposition leader Robert Nixon accused Potter of initiating a policy which would force 1200 to 1500 beds out of use.

Potter replied that these are not necessary at present for adequate care of patients.

TORONTO — Dr. Heinz Lehmann has outlined an experiment undertaken by him in which dandelions were treated with amphetamines and tranquilizers. He stated that one treated with amphetamines died much sooner than the others and suggested that it may have worn itself out.

Two dandelions treated with tranquilizers spent all their time sleeping with their petals curled. He stated that one treated with caffeine seemed to come alert having unfolded its petals.

OTTAWA — Former Labour Minister Martin O'Connell, defeated in the October 30 election has been appointed by Prime Minister Trudeau as his chief assistant.

backpage

"So what's wrong in leaving the country with no government - we've done without one for years ..."

Looking about

by Peter Jensen

A Reminder to the Labour Party

The story goes that when, during the last war, those suspected by the authorities of Nazi or Fascist leanings were imprisoned in Brixton, Sir Osward Mosley, leader of the British Union of Fascists, found himself detained with a former supporter who had since become an opponent, presumably because Sir Oswald's views were not extreme enough. After contemplating the state of politics, Sir Oswald decided that his duty required him to form a provisional government. He dispatched a trusted lieutenant to the cell or quarters of the old supporter (it seems these people had some freedom of movement inside Brixton). The emissary knocked, entered, clicked his heels, and gave a smart salute.

"The Leader," he said, "firmly believes that at this great moment of national peril all men of good will must bury the past and work together for the common good. The Leader has therefore authorized me to offer you the post of Home Secretary in the government he is forming."

"You can tell your Leader", replied the old follower, "to go and get stuffed."

The reply was duly reported to Sir Oswald. A few hours later the emissary paid another visit to the old follower and went through the same heel-clicking and saluting routine.

"The Leader has instructed me to inform you", he said, "that if you persist in your attitude you will not be in the government at all."

Alan Watkins, Political Quarterly

I notice Mr. Trudeau is off to London this weekend. The subject of his conversation with the British Prime Minister, Edward Heath, has not yet been revealed. I should think it will concern the effects upon Canada of Britain's imminent entry into the European Economic Community.

The movement of the Western trading world toward blocs, centred on the district and powerful communities of the U.S.A., Japan and the E.E.C., raises a fundamental question as to Canada's future role and integrity. For some time past, it has been obvious to any thinking person that Canada must come to some arrangement with the EEC. As in all likelihood the drift toward blocs is inevitable it would be best to choose, while choice is still possible, the one with the least unfavourable political concomitants. Moreover, is some sort of tie might rest the counterbalance to the United States missing since the demise of the Imperial connection. Our country is sick, and one can only hope the present government, or its alternative, will not emulate the dog which returns to its vomit, or, as is the case, somebody else's vomit.

Queen's
Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 26

Friday, December 8, 1972

Freeze on hospitals came as no surprise

by Susan de Stein

"The announcement did not come as a great surprise to people in the health care field," Mr. James B. Flett, executive director of Kingston General Hospital told the Journal. Mr. Flett was referring to Ontario Health Minister Richard Potter's recent announcement of a one year freeze on the financing of hospital expansion and of a 5 per cent ceiling on increases in the hospitals' operating budgets. The freeze is designed to curb the rising cost to the public treasury of health services. "The move represents an effort to reduce the outflow of dollars in the health care field," Mr. Flett said.

At a press conference held after the announcement had been made, Potter stated that his research shows that "there are a number of areas in which hospital active in-patient treatment facilities are in excess of the eventual goal of 4 beds per thousand people." He cited Kingston as a municipality where the ratio was considered inefficiently high.

"As a result of the freeze, KGH and other hospitals will be forced to operate on a very tight budget," Flett said, adding that, "the 5 per cent increase is not sufficient to enable us to do all the things we have been doing in the past."

An estimated 1,200 to 1,500 hospital beds across the province will be eliminated by the provincial restraint on grants. KGH will be forced to reduce its present number of 597 beds by 35.

"The effect of the reduction will be most greatly felt in the area of teaching in the hospital. The cut-backs are causing a good deal of concern in the medical teaching field. However we are still not sure of the extent to which the reduction will be felt in this area," Flett commented. He felt that the cutbacks will affect the students that come to KGH seeking clinical exposure.

The announcement of the amalgamation of the obstetrical services of KGH and Hotel Dieu Hospital "was the least surprising and did not come as a shock to most of us," Flett said. "The amalgamation has been assumed by the government that the combined obstetrical unit will be in Hotel Dieu. However Flett commented that "this is not definite."

In the event that obstetrical services be based at Hotel Dieu, abortions will be performed in the gynecology department at KGH.

Flett speculated that "there will be some interesting readjustments made in the hospital." He added "we must now decide how to reallocate our available resources."

Continued on Page 3

merithew

classified

RICK KINGSTON and Jamie Fleming have moved to 560 Earl St. Phone 544-0043, for all the millions of people who are interested. After Christmas, we welcome Jamie Reid to our roost. Merry Christmas everyone and to everyone a good night.

MASSAGE:INTERESTED in learning Esalent technique of massage as taught by Anne Long? Student rate approximately $30. Call Jim at 549-0791 or 545-7287 or write Claremont Centre for Human Potential, 85 Spadina Road, Toronto.

LOST: ONE PAIR of Muskrat Mitts on 1st floor of Goodwin Hall on Monday, Dec. 4. Reward. 544-6260.

GUITAR AND CASE, for sale. Nylon strings. Good condition. Excellent for someone just learning to play. $25. Call 548-3230.

WATERBEDS. Get your boy or girlfriend an exotic gift this Christmas. A HALCYON WATERBED is your best buy. Call HALCYON WATERBEDS (549-9540, 6-9 p.m.) tonight and we'll deliver yours right to your door.

GIRL WANTED to share nice clean double room, twin beds, furnished living room and kitchen included. Close to campus. Would also consider renting 1 single room. Phone 549-0676 or 549-0751.

LONDON FOR XMAS: $179 return on BOAC. 661 lb. baggage allowance. Free drinks all the way. Contact the AMS office or AOSC, 44 St. George St., Toronto 5, 416-962-8404.

ATTENTION ALL OTTAWA area Queen's students. 2nd annual Queen's reunion. December 21 -- The Green Door Room (at the Chaud, Hull.)

FOUND LAST MONDAY - A pair of ladies leather gloves on William near Division. Call Chris after 11 p.m. 544-1596.

TO ALL OUR FRIENDS and relations on campus: 290 and 295 William St. especially Honeybunch; twinkle, twinkle little Marc - by the way, who the hell do you think you are; 362, 437, 435 and especially you know who at 325 Apt 7, Brock St.; all the guys on Earl St; the Pink Flames; the real John Green; those two blocks north of Elm; IRC Steve; Wrecktor Gary; last year's Craig house especially the Gentleman; Cowboy; 74 Wellington St; 248 Alfred; 375 King; Jane and John Right; Artsci '75 executive; the Ski Club executive, especially the pres; the Penthouse, Virgil, Tiger Lily, and everyone else we know and love but couldn't fit into the ad. Merry Christmas and a Memorable (but unremembered) New Year's. LOVE AND KISSES, Jennie, Joanne, Vickey and Debbie.

MERRY CHRISTMAS to Stu, Mike, Gord, Marsha, Richard, Nancy, Sue B, Kelly, Chris W, Jim G, Jane T, Jim H, Paula, John T, Chris B, Pam, Steve, Rob, Fred, Jamie, Linda, Fay, Mark, Ila, Carol, Sue C, Tony, Susan S, Anne Mc, Brenda, Grant, George, Sue D, Beth, Jamie, Derek, Simon, Ivan, Ray, Rob, Steph, Raj, Anne D, Anne Mc, Ann B, Liz, Phil, Chris P, Judy, Jan, Paul, A 1, Dave, Sarah, Steve B, Bruce, Sue H, John P, John C, Jamie B, Pat, Pam, Mary, Kirmet the Frog, and a whole bunch of other people I've forgotten - Dave.

STAYING IN KINGSTON over the holidays? Come to the New Year's Eve Party at the Queen's Pub. Admission $1.00. Sponsored by the ASUS Other Events Committee.

WELL KRISP MY KRINKLE! 5D have a Merry Xmas and a happy new year. Signed: Map and Spimoni.

HEY SUE, Thanks for the new elbow's. Love Zeus.

A VERY MERRY Christmas to Pete Flynn, our "Big Boy". Affectionatly, Vic A-E

TO SWEET, LOVABLE and sexy Fay, better known to us as Faysin raisin, cutie, little one, mother's favourite daughter, mini mouse, marshmellow, puddin, Little sister, Bubs, doll, beautiful surfer girl. She is all of these things and much more, but she has the quickest temper on campus. Signed: Jimbo, Duke, the Big Booper, Ralph and Huck.

TO ALL THE FIRST south Morris Hall Co-eds: Merry Christmas and happy keening. Dougie and Joanie.

TO THE SENSUOUS BEAUTIES in Ban Righ: We enjoyed the orgy. Thanks from the boys in the Pink Room Squad (TM, BM, MG, DH, and GR, with TLC).

PENTHOUSE APARTMENT: Two bedrooms, $170 from Feb. 1, 111 Notch Hill Road, Phone 542-7470.

I'M LOOKING FOR A girl to take over my furnished room in a great, big, beautiful apartment with two other girls for next term. Close to campus on University Ave. For further information call 542-9375 anytime.

LOST: BLACK IDENTIFICATION folder. Contains student card, birth certificate, social security and numerous other cards. Urgently needed. Please contact Stephanie Rogers, 544-8770.

HEY JOHN - I broke your record. 3 p.m. and I'm on take four. Chas.

RIDE WANTED TO WINNIPEG or any place along the way after December 18. Will share expenses. Please Call 546-9891.

LARGE COUNTRY HOUSE available immediately. $150 a month. Flexible lease. Nine rooms. Barn. Highway access. 544-4117.

WILL THE FINDER of one black, curled, new "Old Port" pipe, please phone Doug at 544-7132. Immense sentimental value. Reward.

MERRY CHRISTMAS and Happy New Year to everyone I know. Signed: the St. Catherines and Ridley Bum, Paul S.

PUMA OSLO RUNNERS, Blue and White for sale. Brand New. Size 9-43. 25 per cent discount. Phone 544-7343, Stephan, 6-9 p.m. weekdays.

FOUND: ONE KITTEN (female) around Physed Centre. Monday. Fur has grey stripes with cream tinges. Green Eyes. If it's yours, phone 542-8597.

TO MRS. BOMB - Happy Birthday on the 11th. Best regards to Fred and Alfred. 20 years old and never . . . how about tonight? From Mr. Bomb.

OWING TO AN ACUTE SHORTAGE OF Smegma, donations are being received by Fat Pat. 544-8222.

WANTED: JANITOR 15 hrs a week, nights and Saturdays. To start January 8. Apply in person to the Queen's Day Care Centre at 76 Queen's Crescent.

HAPPY BELATED BIRTHDAY to Janet B from the IBTC and Alumnae.

SKIIS AND BOOTS for sale. 207cm Head Challengers - used for one season. Large standard boot, size 10½ Medium, never used. Phone Pat at 544-3276.

MORE ON PAGE 4

TOLKEIN POSTERS

Lord of the Rings

The Hobbit

Tree and Leaf

at

NONESUCH BOOKSELLERS

225 Princess

Pizza

Chalet

Generous Portions
Competitive Prices
Our Low Rent
Saves Money
544-1227
FREE DELIVERY

Staying in Kingston over the holidays?

Don't miss the

New Year's Eve Party

IN THE PUB

Admission $1.00 Sponsored By The ASUS

wanted

THEMES FOR THE SC. '74 SCIENCE FORMAL

$10 prize for best theme to be chosen by Jan. 12th, 1973

all submissions should be sent to:

Science Formal Committee Eng. Society Office Clark Hall

BEFORE JAN. 12th, 1973

CHECK OUT OUR SELECTION

THEN SKI ON THE HOT ONES

Skis:

Atomic - The world cup winner
EXPERT, ATOMIC, GLASS 2000, ALUGLAS, C-111
Volk - the choice of pro-circuit racer Peter Duncan
ZEBRA, SAPPOSO, EXPLOSIV, EXPLORER, VS 400, WEDELGLASS
Norstar - the other half of the Nordica team
SUPERRACER, RACER GLASS 2000, GLASS 1000
Titan - a real value winner
TIGER, TCS
Rosignol - delivery promised this week
STRATO 102, ROC 550, GS 650

Nordica - a full line to choose from Henke - a full line to choose from Munori - mirage unistar, mirage hillstar
Tecnus - TECNICA, VELOX, GARDENA

10% DISCOUNT FOR QUEEN'S STUDENTS on the above items
cash, trade, terms
Plus our exam special

WORN BY THE US SKI TEAM

Henke spring boot
25 pr. only
US ski team boot foam injected for comfort and perfect response
$160 value for $89.95
(no discount in this special)

Henke
WORLD CUP WINNER

George Bailey sporting goods
401 Princess Street
Telephone 542-2393

Res students happy with meal plan

At recent meetings of the residences boards there has been discussion of possible modifications to meal plan arrangements for the session 1973-1974.

A survey of student opinion on this matter took the form of a fact sheet and a questionnaire that was circulated among residents. The purpose of the presentation was to give the residents information as to how costs are established for the present meal plans and to present possible alternatives to current meal plans. The residents were asked to state whether or not they wished to see the present meal plan arrangement retained, and to select an alternative if they were dissatisfied.

The number of students who answered the questionnaire was small. Kiloran German, president of the WRC told the Journal, "nobody really cares. There just isn't enough interest."

Only 258 women voted. Of these, a total of 193 voted to retain the present plan, 6 voted in favour of adopting the meal plan presently in existence in the men's residence cafeteria (3 meals a day, Monday to Saturday, and no meals on Sunday), and 59 voted for a plan that would exclude breakfast from the arrangement.

"The results show that people are fairly satisfied with the way it is now", Miss German commented. Although the voter turn-out was slight, "I am glad the information was brought out", she added.

Of the 234 men in residence who voted, 89 were in favour of retaining the present arrangement, 59 voted for the adoption of the meal plan in women's residence and 86 were in favour of excluding breakfast from the plan.

At the Residence Board meeting this Saturday, the results of the questionnaire will be discussed. At the same time adjustments in the fee structure for residence accomodation will also be discussed. A sizable increase is foreseen for the 1973-74 session.

Potter sympathetic to Rehab students

"Health Minister R. Potter was sympathetic to our situation," Sue Drowley, AMS rep from the Faculty of Rehabilitation Therapy told the Journal.

She was referring to a meeting students held with the minister on Tuesday to discuss the abolition of the rehab stipend.

Students of physiotherapy, occupational therapy, dietetics, hospital administration and pharmacology are required to serve in hospitals as part of their training.

Living allowances paid out by the Provincial Government amounted to $37.50 for junior interns and $50 for senior interns this past summer.

However, the Government announced in the spring that this remuneration would be cut off at the end of 1972 and it appeared students would be faced with the same work for no pay.

John Creelman, Commissioner of the Students administrative Council, University of Toronto told Potter that this would mean a student interning during the summer would have to take out one and a half times the loans of a regular student. As the prospective incomes in these fields are not large, students would not be able to pay off a large loan very quickly.

The delegation also pointed out that Ontario might lose students in these disciplines to other provinces which still pay living allowances during internship periods.

According to Miss Drowley, Potter was presented with a brief concerning the students demands along with a petition and several letters from Queen's professors and the Kingston hospitals.

Potter told the students on Tuesday he would take their case to cabinet and assured them they would know the results by February.

Regina campus: calm after storm

REGINA (CUP) The University of Saskatchewan's Regina campus is relatively quiet now compared to the previous week when students occupied the administrative offices.

They were demanding parity an policy making bodies of two departments.

Principal John Archer's co-operation with the student negotiating committee would be useful in stifling opposition to student parity from conservative faculty members, the committee's report said.

A motion calling for the creation of a three party committee to consist of students, faculty and the public to present demands to the government was passed.

The public representatives accepted by the students did not include the National Farmers Union who backed the students during the struggle, because of the inacceptability to the administration.

The steering committee says that if necessary the struggle will be moved out of committees and into the hands of students next semester.

Earlier in the struggle the principal said in effect that he could not legally back a decision which would force student parity on the department level, when the students demanded this. It was later pointed out that several years ago one department's decision to have student parity was overruled by the next highest administrative body.

At this disclosure, students selected a committee to negotiate with Archer and on the committee's recommendation, the occupation ended that day.

UNDERGRAD FILMS
PRESENTS
"The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari"
and
"Les Miserables"
FRIDAY, DECEMBER 8
Dunning Hall Auditorium
Adm. $1.00

Freeze

Continued from Page 1

Flett felt that staff reductions will definitely be necessary. "A reduction in staff follows cost cutbacks," he commented. However he hopes that "attrition will take care of many jobs. We don't want to have to flatly lay-off people."

It has been felt that the move of freezing finances for hospital expansion represents a shift in the priorities of the provincial government. Flett commented that "in the 1960's the government made far too much money in funds available for its various programmes." He felt that we are now paying for it.

Kentucky Fried Chicken
542-2773
286 Montreal St.
Your closest Aunt Lucy's Take Home Store

New course on how to get a job

The Office of Career Planning and Placement will offer a series of six discussion sessions on job opportunities and how to go about getting one.

"Employment opportunities are improving, not dramatically but there is a slight improvement," David Wroe Director of Placement Office told the Journal.

The project is designed to help students "find the tools with which to select a suitable career," Wroe said.

In small group sessions, students will discuss such topics as employer selection, the mechanics of job hunting, the art of being interviewed and how to take employment tests.

Resource personel selected from the staff of Placement office and the Counselling Service will be on hand to provide information.

Slots 11 and 23 have been selected as the initial times for holding the sessions which will begin January 22.

All those interested in joining the project should sign up in the Placement Office.

Southern Comfort: it's the only way to travel.

Join the fun on the S.S. Southern Comfort. The party takes off any night and the only baggage you need is some Southern Comfort, ice, and mix.
See you on the levee.

Arrivals from the South:

Cold Comfort
Pour 1½ ounces of Southern Comfort over crushed ice. Add a twist of lemon.

Comfort Screwdriver
Pour 1½ ounces of Southern Comfort over ice. Top up with orange juice.

Comfort Collins
Mix 1½ ounces of Southern Comfort with the juice of a quarter of a lime. Add some ice. Fill the glass with lemon-lime drink.

Try these, too:
Comfort 'n' Cola,
Comfort and Tonic,
Comfort Daiquiri, etc., etc.

wanted
OFY
LIAISON PERSON
to serve as a liaison between Queen's students seeking OFY grants and the representatives of the Government

Apply in writing to
EXTERNAL AFFAIRS COMMISSIONER
AMS OFFICE by FRIDAY, DEC. 8th

International Summer School
UNIVERSITY OF OSLO

June 25 to August 4, 1973

Graduate and Undergraduate courses
All Lectures in English
Two years of college required

Write to: ISS Admissions Office
c-0 St. Olaf College
Northfield, Minnesota 55057 USA

St James Anglican Church

Rector - Rev. Gordon Hendra, BA, BD
Assistant Curate and Anglican Chaplain to Queen's University
Rev. Eric Howes, BA, M.Div.
Organist and Choirmaster - Mr. E. J. Brown, GRSM, ARCM
9.00 a.m. - HOLY COMMUNION
11.00 a.m. - MORNING PRAYER The Rector
7.30 p.m. - CANDLE-LIGHTING AND CAROL SERVICE WITH K.C.V.I. GLEE CLUB AND STRING ORCHESTRA. Refreshments.

THIS CHRISTMAS
Give your parents and friends
GIFT SUBSCRIPTIONS
to
QUEEN'S QUARTERLY
A CANADIAN REVIEW since 1893,
featuring articles on Politics, Foreign Affairs, Literature, History, etc., plus Poetry, Fiction, Book Reviews.

annual subscription (4 issues)	$6.00
Three years (12 issues)	$15.00

Cards announcing your gifts will be mailed early in December.

I enclose $..... for ... subscriptions to Queen's Quarterly to be sent to the addresses given below.

.....Donor

.....Address

Name .....
Address .....
Name .....
Address .....

cut out and mail to:
QUEEN'S QUARTERLY
Queen's University
130 Lower Albert St. (campus)
Kingston, Ont.

letters

A reply

Dear Editor,

Mr. Franks' letter in last Tuesday's Journal is unfortunate and makes further debate through your columns futile. It is difficult to understand his abuse of the University Centre Committee and his misrepresentation of facts he ought to know about personally. At best he merely discredits himself.

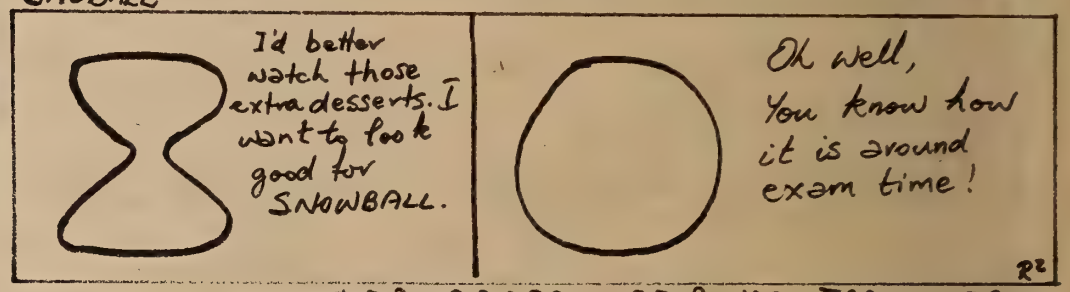
For example, he says "Every single proposal for a sub-Centre including the one in the Arts-Social Science complex has been pushed at them" (the University Centre Committee). Mr. Franks knows that the University Centre Committee was formed last fall. Within the first two weeks of this Committee's existence, the Users' Committee of the Arts-Social Science complex, finding it had a financial problem in attempting to finish the activities area in the basement of the complex, approached the University Centre committee about allocating a portion of its proposed funds for a sub-Centre in the complex. Not only did the University Centre Users' Committee respond positively, it insisted on a careful examination of the planning of the basement area and adjacent student street. Much of its first few meetings were concerned with the better use of the area as a sub-Centre. As a result the area was radically redesigned and much improved with the support of both the architect and the Arts-Social Science complex Users' Committee. The University Centre Users' Committee. The University Centre Users' Committee took an initiative in this matter: the sub-Centre was not "pushed" at it

There are other unfortunate distortions in Mr. Franks' letter, including the discussion of the book store. In our letter we made it perfectly clear that the future location of the book store was a matter of general university concern and was to be decided outside the Users' Committee.

Further correspondence generated by Mr. Franks in this vein does not deserve an answer.

Yours truly,
Daniel A. Soberman.

Soliciting support



Dear Editor,

On November 27, I was very dismayed to find a delegation (of one) in the Union soliciting, amongst other things, the support for an 85 per cent Canadian content on the University faculty.

How blind can we be? The university has been the scene of science and learning for years. We are only too fortunate to be able to entice the best qualified people here. Regardless of a person's origin, his stature and contribution to a learning community are our interests.

The past has taught us the folly of following the pleas of nationalists without looking at the consequences. It is not a time to be careless. To provide a community of achievement and advance let us not call upon the best Canadian but rather the best qualified to join us regardless of where he comes from.

E. F. LaLonde

more classifieds

TEE-HEE and BOO-HOO say grin and bear it. Snowball week is coming.

MY BIKE: WHOEVER made off from Donald Gordon with my back fenderless blue three-speed, please let me know where I can pick it up. Phone 544-7541.

SKI BOOTS FOR SALE: Lange Std. In excellent condition. Size 8½. Phone 544-7532.

WANTED: A COMFORTABLE HOUSE for five young girls for next year. Call Janet at 544-8590 or Whitney at 544-8504.

ARE YOU PRAGNANT and mistressed. Snowball can help. Call January 29th.

IF YOU ARE THINKING about living in Elrond next year, the 1973-74 information pamphlet will be available December 12. Applications will be accepted for next year commencing sometime during January.

ENJOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES - Winter help wanted. Winterviews begins January 29. Call SNO-BALL.

FOR ALL THOSE INTERESTED - Di got her cup ... finally.

MOST RESIDENCES AND apartment buildings in North America are designed for "efficiency". Unfortunately, any community life generated in them is often frustrated by the design. If you live on the 10th floor you never seem able to meet people on the 5th floor. High rises are seen rightly so, as anti-community.

Elrond offers hope for change. It has common space on the ground floor, sauna and craft rooms in the basement, rooms and offices at each elevator stop and houses that span three conventional stories. With only five corridors and elevator stops, the building does not seem so large. It's hard to believe that it is 16 stories and houses half as many students as Victoria Hall. The cafeteria is not large and clamorous but small and relaxed. After Christmas, students will be decorating the interior walls with carpet, fabrics, and graphics in lively colours. You can have a sauna before going to bed or get together with others to start a project. Elrond is a well designed building with initiative and interest to make it an exciting place to live and learn. If you want a new experience and are interested by the possibilities of Elrond, then Elrond needs you to start fulfilling them.

ROOM FOR RENT - in a great house three blocks from the Union, as of January 1. Rent is $65.00 a month (includes utilities) Phone Janet Rhonda or Debbie at 542-9496.

FOUND WATCH in Union Basement. Owner retrieve by identifying. Phone 1-382-2405 after 6 p.m.

LOST ON CAMPUS: Man's wallet. Reward. Phone Dr. Nugent at 544-4484.

DEAR ITCH: I'm really sorry about the "trip".

FOUND AT ELROND: one beautiful friendly grey (beige tinted) young cat (possibly 4-5 months old) if you seem to be missing one call Nancy or Ross at 544-0831.

SINGLE ROOM AVAILABLE in Victoria Hall after Christmas. You must be presently living outside of residence. Phone Linda at 544-8536.

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 26
Fri., Dec. 8, 1972
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Patricia Devitt
Martin Jones
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
Backpage: Bob Mutrie
Photos: Pete Boag

Special thanks to Chris Brown, Liz Trotter, Sue de Stein and Bob Wood.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society or the University. Offices are located in the Students' Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

and more

Kraft attacked

Dear Editor:

The letter David Charles received from Kraftco (published in Queen's Journal, Friday, November 24, 1972) is a standard form letter that Kraft Foods Ltd. has sent out to anyone who has questioned them about the boycott for the past year.

The main point Lowery is obviously trying to make is that it is illegal for the NFU and Kraftco to negotiate for the purchase of milk by Kraft Foods. The NFU is fully aware that Ontario law insists that dairy companies purchase their milk only through the services of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board. It is not our intent, nor has it ever been our intent, as R.F. Lowery infers, to break the law. Lowery knows that the boycott is not designed to force Kraft Foods into a position where Kraft Foods would be required to break the law. Lowery should know that negotiations with the National Farmers Union, or any other body for that matter, does not mean that Kraft would be purchasing the milk from the National Farmers Union.

The boycott was launched as a result of Kraft Foods unwillingness to respond to requests from the National Farmers Union for a meeting to discuss the process of negotiating milk prices. In other words, the National Farmers Union was attempting to become involved in negotiating the income which dairy farmers, who are National Farmers Union members, would receive.

Kraftco was the only major dairy company which we contacted that failed to respond to our offers to meet with them. The other dairy companies at least indicated a willingness to discuss it, but not Kraft Foods. This, I suppose, is understandable when one considers the size and power of their empire.

It is most discouraging to see businessmen like Mr. Lowery declare that what we are doing is illegal thereby, trying to dodge the real issue. If Lowery, on behalf of Kraft, does not wish to negotiate with the National Farmers Union or to have the National Farmers Union become involved in the negotiating process, he should say so rather than trying to smear us by branding us as law breakers.

It was with tongue in cheek that I digested Lowery's statement, "our (Kraftco) willingness to conduct our business in a moral manner and in accordance with local law" considering:

1. The fact that a Court of Queen's Bench judge in Montreal fined Kraft Foods $5,000 for false advertising October 18, saying the company treated Canadians like "imbeciles" during promotion of its "Explore Canada 70" contest. Kraft got a 30-day delay to pay the fine.
2. The fact that "one Food and Drug Administration official believes that Kraft has been responsible for a major decline in the quality of cheese made in the U.S.A. but the agency can do nothing about it in spite of various cheese standards." -- Pp. 85 The Chemical Feast by James S. Turner -- part of Ralph Nader's study group report on the Food and Drug Administration in U.S.A.

Sincerely,
Don Kossick
National Boycott Co-ordinator

West Campus

To the Unconcerned -

We Queen's students at West Campus still have a few gripes that we would like to get off our mind. We are paying the same fees as the students on Main Campus. Why is it that we must pay for the bus system between the two campus'? You must realize that this amounts to at least $3.00 a week, which is half the spending allowance of the average Queen's student. 'Bus-it' was a noble effort, but promises for next year are of no use to us now! We appreciate the thought, but we would like a little action. It's going to be a long cold winter. We are willing to pay a small fee ($3.00) to buy the privelege of riding "free" between Main Campus and here.

Secondly, one can find vending machine rooms in the other residences, did someone forget that there are over 500 students out here? We would at least like to see the two pop machines that we do have, accessible to all. (i.e. in the main hall) It would be nice if we could have a food machine, (i.e. chips and sandwiches) for on the weekend, our cafeteria is closed.

We feel that we should have equal privileges, for we also are part of Queen's.

F. Troop
West Campus

Comment

Crombie elected, Toronto voters make wise choice

by Dan Andraea
(The author is an Arts and Science student who worked actively in David Crombie's campaign.)

On Monday December 4th David Crombie was elected mayor of Toronto. The voters made a very wise choice in the most exciting and important municipal election in years. Mr. Crombie, at age 36, is dynamic, creative and farsighted. He has a keen understanding of Toronto's problems and he should give decisive leadership during the next two years.

Mr. Crombie entered the race for mayor last July as an underdog. He was not well-known and he was only a junior alderman who would be running against such prominent local political figures as Tony O'Donohue and David Rotenberg. Both men had proven their administrative abilities and loyal devotion to the city. David Crombie entered the campaign with little more than a strong desire and a sincere belief in certain principles. Several people advised Mr. Crombie to run for alderman again, as it was almost certain that he would win handily if he had decided to seek his old seat as alderman. Yet Crombie realized that Toronto was at a crossroad and that the next mayor would determine the future of Toronto. He had a vision of what Toronto should be like and no other candidate shared that belief. Mayor-elect Crombie believes that a city is for people. They should play a large role in determining the fate of their neighborhoods and of city policy.

During the campaign he advocated quiet neighborhoods, less cars and controlled development. He felt that is what Torontonians really care about and he was willing to gamble his political future. Judging by the election results he assessed the mood of the city correctly. All was not smooth for the Crombie campaign especially in the beginning. Due to a lack of funds he almost had to drop out last September. Yet he refused to because he did not want to let the people down who had already committed themselves to his cause. It was Toronto's gain that he decided to stay in. Funds began to trickle in and after the federal elections hords of people came down to the headquarters to help in the crusade.

Tony O'Donohue was still in the lead but it was eroding fast. David Rotenberg did not seem to be able to project his real self across to the voters. He is really a warm, intelligent capable man but he was perceived as a cold calculating friend of the developers. The voters seemed to be fed up with the old guard and O'Donohue and Rotenberg exemplified the status quo at city hall. David Crombie was new and exciting with fresh and intelligent ideas. His posters and literature were bold and refreshing.

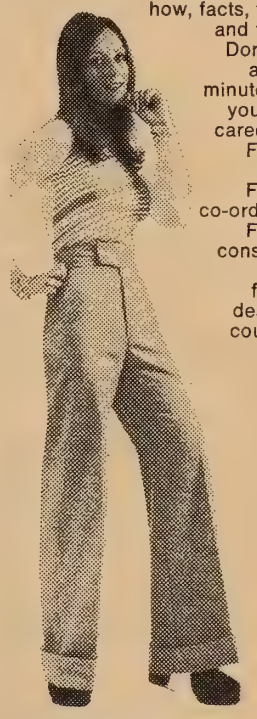
Of all the candidates Crombie has the most appealing personality. Whereas O'Donohue comes across as bland and Rotenberg as intense and aggressive, David Crombie comes across as very friendly, charming and genuinely concerned about the city and its people. Whether he was on T.V. or in the local school he always displayed a charismatic almost Kennedy-esque personality.

Three weeks ago it looked as if Crombie could beat Rotenberg but would probably lose to O'Donohue. There are many ethnic cultures in Toronto and O'Donohue over the years has secured ties with many of them. Naturally Crombie would be strong in the residential areas and in downtown Toronto but would it be enough to overcome O'Donohue's popularity in the ethnic oriented east and west ends? Two incidents probably defeated O'Donohue. About three weeks before the election O'Donohue's campaign manager made some derogatory comments directed at David Crombie. O'Donohue fired his manager and this ultimately hurt his chances at the polls. Later he sent a letter to Catholic voters stating that he would like to be the first Catholic mayor of Toronto. Tony O'Donohue's cheap play of introducing religion into the campaign seriously damaged his chances.

The Crombie workers were simply more dedicated than any other campaign workers. On election day they trampled through the snow and knocked on the door of potential Crombie voters to urge them to come out. No other candidate had his workers do that. The result was a smashing victory for David Crombie. A bitter O'Donohue came in a distant second and Rotenberg a dismal third.

David Crombie cannot change Toronto by himself. However, luckily the "reformers" captured control of the city council. Led by flamboyant alderman David Sewell and Karl Jaffery and buttressed by newcomers Colin Varghni, Anne Johnston and Dan Heap, they form a solid nucleus. If they can work together on council they can achieve some worthwhile goals. Mayor-elect Crombie has already shown his superb organizational ability and his ability to deal with people in the past council and should be able to mobilize the "reform" forces.

We should be able to look for undistured neighborhoods, downtown malls, improved rapid transit systems, better use made of Casa Loma, the old City Hall and the CNE grounds, and stricter pollution controls. Generally, we should be on the road to maintaining the quality of life that has already made Toronto a great city.



As Morton Shulman, M.P.P. for High Park said, "It's a very simple choice. If you believe in mechanizing our city and turning it into another Los Angeles you'll vote for Rotenberg or O'Donohue. If you want to keep the city human, then you're going to vote for David Crombie."

The people obviously agreed.

TOLKEIN POSTERS
Lord of the Rings
The Hobbit
Tree and Leaf
at
NONESUCH BOOKSELLERS
225 Princess

PRESTIGE excitement
GLAMOUR

Shaw Colleges Taylor Fashion Merchandising Course could be your introduction to the glamorous world of Fashion. Specialized, practical, up-to-the-minute career training . . . all the exciting fashion know-how, facts, figures and trends. Don't wait another minute. Find yourself a career as a Fashion buyer, Fashion co-ordinator, Fashion consultant, stylist, fashion designer, couturier.

SHAW
puts it all together!

Mail this coupon NOW
☐ Call or write for your free copy of Career Fashion Forecast
NAME:
ADDRESS:
PHONE: AGE:
EDUCATION:
SHAW COLLEGES
ADMISSIONS OFFICE
2436 Yonge Street
Toronto 12, Ontario • 481-6477
3 Colleges in Metro
1716

Listen To Your World

Old Dan's Record - Gordon Lightfoot - Warner Bros.

Gordon Lightfoot's music has a quiet and pleasing nature to it, and in general provides excellent background music. As such, it has rarely received my full attention. The reason for this is simple, with background music I am more interested and involved in myself or with another person, than I am with the music. Therefore I find it difficult to write on Lightfoot's latest, or anything he has ever done. Lightfoot's music is just not powerful enough, and as a result, has little impact on me. He has done nothing, with the exception of "Sitdown Young Stranger", that I have found moving or exciting. I have made these comments because I want all those who are in love with the man and his music to know that I'm not. I find that the people who enjoy him the most are those who play the piano, the guitar or just enjoy singing along. The reason for this is the simplicity of his music and thus its easy adaptability for the living room artists.

Gordon Lightfoot's songs all seem to sound alike. If one is to stop and listen to the words they would find that they all seem to deal with relaxing thoughts, such as "Lazy Mornin", or the love situations of a young man, "Can't Depend on Love." A strong point though, is his emergence as an artist, for musically he is continually improving as he adds instruments and strong people to his backup. On this album I feel that he continues this trend. I hope this continues, as someday he may achieve the level of musical excitement that I have stated he lacks. For those who presently enjoy Lightfoot, this album will fit your collection well. For those of you who don't, then forget it, it's all the same.

Class Clown - George Carlin - WEA

As a change of pace I thought that I would mention George Carlin's new album. It was almost a year ago that Carlin was at Queen's. He is a contemporary genius in the field of comedy, a modern stand-up comedian. His humour is based on the simple things of everyday modern life. He remains one of the few people who can make an entire audience roll by drinking a glass of water. Since his appearance at Queen's his stock has gone up, and today he is one of the most demanded humourists in North America. He has also been arrested in Milwaukee for the "indecency" of his show. For those who saw him, the album is almost a repeat of his performance here. Unfortunately though it loses something without his facial contortions. His bit on "Seven words you can never say on television", is included and was the reason for his arrest. Personally I enjoy this part the most. And as with any comedy album I question the point of buying it, but if you get the chance give it a listen.

Season's Greetings, Slip

classless days

Friday, December 8 -

7:30 p.m. - India association presents "Awara" a Hindi film with English subtitles. Ellis Hall. Admission: General - $2.00, Members - $1.50, Children 50c.

8:00 p.m. - Leave one horror for another. Drop your books and see "The Cabinet of Doctor Caligari" (1919) and Hugo's "Les Miserables" (1935). Dunning Auditorium. Admission $1.00.

8:00 p.m. - Queen's Drama Guild presents "The Ice Dragon" and "The Lollipop Princess." - 2 children's plays with an adult's slant, at Guildhall Theatre, 233½ Princess Street. Admission 50c at the door.

8:00 p.m. - 1 a.m. - Artsci 76 Honky Tonk Sing-Song night in The Pub. All welcome. 75c admission; free with year card. Beer 3 for $1.

Saturday, December 9 -

1:00 p.m. and 3:00 p.m. - Queen's Drama Guild presents "The Ice Dragon" and "The Lollipop Princess" - 2 children's plays with an adult's slant; at the Guildhall Theatre, 233½ Princess St. Admission 50c at the door.

6:00 p.m. - Elrond Christmas Dinner and Party. Gala Affair - Punch etc. Ground Floor, Elrond College.

Sunday, December 10 -

10:30 p.m. - There will be a Sunday Folk Mass in Dunning Hall followed by coffee and donuts at Newan House, 164 University Avenue.

1:00 p.m. - Planning Meeting for Queen's Outing Club trip to Mount Marcy. December 27 to 31. Everyone welcome. In the Lower Vic Common Room.

1:00 p.m. and 3:00 p.m. - Queen's Drama Guild presents "The Ice Dragon" and "The Lollipop Princess" - 2 childrens plays with an adult's slant. Guildhall Theatre, 233½ Princess Street. Admission 50c at door.

2:30 p.m. - Kingston Choral Society in concert with the Kingston symphony will perform Handel; Israel in Egypt. at the Grand Theatre. Conductor: Dr. R. C. Clarke.

4:00 p.m. - Eucharistic Celebration at Queen's Theological Hall, Faculty Lounge (2nd Floor). All welcome.

7:30 p.m. - Folk Mass in Senior Common Room at McArthur College.

Tuesday, December 12 -

8:00 p.m. - The Queen's Chamber Orchestra presents a Christmas Concert under the direction of Prof. David R. Keane of the Music Department. The orchestra will perform works by Holst, Corelli, and Leroy Anderson, as well as playing assorted Christmas carols to be sung by the audience. Admission free. Convocation Hall.

Off Campus

Theatres -

Capitol - Prime Cut
Sunday afternoon - Santa and The Three Bears.
Sunday Evening - Call me Trinity, and Promise at Dawn.
Hyland - Doctor Zhivago
Odeon - The New Centurions

Pubs-

Commodore - Billy Adams and The County Line
401 Inn - Dianna Merritt
The Manor - Charlie Eckstein
Seaway Townhouse - The London Bridge

CFRC am-fm

Special Programming For Christmas Season

CFRC and CFRC-FM,
1490 and 91.9
SPECIAL PROGRAMMING
FOR CHRISTMAS SEASON

THURS. Dec. 21 and Dec. 28th
6:30 Spectrum
7:30 The Goon Show
8:00 Music For Christmas
8:30 Let's Discuss It
9:00 The Spoken Word
8:00 Music Canada
9:00 Free Folk
10:00 Nocturne

SUN. Dec. 24th and 31st
8:00 Sunday Morning
12:00 Classics by Request
4:00 Music in Kingston
5:00 The Cleveland Orchestra in Concert
7:00 Montage
9:00 Contemporary Folk
10:00 Nocturne.

FRI. Dec. 22nd and 29th
6:30 Spectrum
8:00 The Living Classics
10:00 Nocturne

SAT. Dec. 23rd and 30th
12:00 Saturday Sounds
6:00 Soundstage
7:00 Music Around the World

PUBLIC NOTICE

OVERNIGHT PARKING

By-Law No. 973 of the City of Kingston provides that: "From December 15 in any year until March 31 of the following year, no vehicle shall be parked between the hours of 1:00 a.m. and 7:00 a.m. on any highway within the limits of the City of Kingston.

T. J. McKibbin,

City Clerk-Comptroller."

The above notice has been printed in the Journal as a courtesy to students and staff by the Office of the Vice-Principal (Administration).

honky-tonk sing song

ARTSCI '76 SMOKER

Friday, Dec. 8th

8:00 p.m.

House of Commons

free with year card

.75¢ without

beer 3/1.00

THERE'S MORE TO A DIAMOND THAN MEETS THE EYE

A diamond may be big. But dull. A fine diamond must be expertly cut to release the greatest brilliance and fire. It must be clear and white to radiate a rainbow of colors. We will show you all the factors that affect the price of a diamond. And make sure you get the finest value for your funds.

KINNEAR d'ESTERRE

JEWELLERS

168 PRINCESS STREET,
KINGSTON, ONTARIO
CANADA

QUAA problems: a spreading disease?

Too many Yanks?!

Recruiting comes to a head . . .

MONTREAL (CUP) — The question of active recruitment of athletes by member schools of the QUAA appears to be coming to a head. Following a league meeting November 29th, when the representative of Laval University tabled a motion to bar Loyola from further competition on the grounds that by having 11 Americans on its basketball team, Loyola was "violating the spirit of the league", the University de Quebec at Sherbrooke refused to play a game with Loyola, scheduled for December 2nd, and indicated that they would refuse to play in all further games with the Montreal school.

A vote taken at the November 29th meeting ended in a deadlock, with the French-speaking schools voting for the banishment of Loyola and the Englis-language Universities opposing the action. QUAA President Andre Huneau, of the Universite de Montreal, cast the deciding vote, supporting Loyola's position.

As a result of the action taken by U. de Q (Sherbrooke), a further QUAA meeting, on Thursday, December 7th, is scheduled to try and sort out the dispute.

Doug Daigneault, the head football and basketball coach at Loyola, defended his position: "This recruiting has been going on for years in schools other than Loyola, but now that we are in a position to win a championship, they (Sherbrooke) are complaining. It depends on your point of view. Either you want to win and work towards that goal, or you don't. It's a matter of philosophy. I think we've done a good job representing the league." (Ed. Note: Open or tacit recruitment, on the scale indicated here, has not been going on at other schools for years, at least not to my knowledge. It is one thing to make a young athlete aware that the school recognizes his abilities on the court or field, but quite another to bring him to the school because of these talents. Especially in a sport like basketball, the presence of a very few "imports" with exceptional abilities can destroy the opposition, if these other schools decide to keep to the traditional concept of athletics in the Canadian university environment. Loyola appears to be following a "win at all costs" approach to basketball - and judging from some second-hand reports - football as well. I am quite certain that a city the size of Montreal offers a reasonable supply of able basketball players. Certainly, given the level of overall competition in the QUAA, it should be possible to recruit a Canadian team whose abilities will produce a championship. . . . .but that would take work, and it might mean some real coaching would be needed. Recruiting south of the border is the easy way. . . . Personally, I would like to see the QUAA take a strong stand against this type of loading. Next week should tell the tale.

While . . .

McGill coach faces tampering charges

MONTREAL (CUP) — Charges of conflict of interest have been levelled aginst McGill Hockey coach Dave Dies. The charges, made last week by other coaches in the Quebec University Athletic Association, suggest that Dies, who also holds the position of "College Representative" for Pro Sports Inc., has been using his position to weaken opposing teams by enticing their star players to turn professional. Pro Sports Inc. is a group of lawyers who represent hockey players in their contract negotiations.

The controversey came to a head recently when Francois Ouimet, a top-flight defenceman with the Sir George Williams University Georgians, jumped to Philadelphia of the WHA. Ouimet was represented by Pro Sports Inc., and the Sir George coach charged Dies with interference. Dies, in reply, claimed that Ouimet acted against his advice, and that his subsequent return to SGWU was the result of Dies' efforts on behalf of Pro Sports Inc.

However, the damage had been done. The real question is this: where do Dies' interests lie? With his team, or with an organization which is interested in making money from college hockey players. When contacted on December 3rd, Dies himself denied that there was any conflict of interest, adding that press reports (in Montreal papers, especially) has been blown out of proportion. As yet, no one at McGill has questioned the coaches integrity, but it is an embarassing position to be in.

The QUAA council has passed a motion calling Dies' position a conflict of interest. When questioned, McGill athletic director Harry Griffiths implied the QUAA had given him an ultimatum. He reported that the QUAA had notified him they expect him to correct the situation, or they will "take the situation into their (the OUAA's) hands. Griffiths also mentioned he had discussed the situation with Dies, but nothing had been decided yet. It seems that Dies will be forced to make a clear decision as to where his true interests lie: with McGill or with Pro Sports Inc. Coach Dies indicated that his decision would be forthcoming within a week or two.

bews news

By Peter Watts

Despite the overwhelming obstacles presented by the play of their coach, Commerce '73 succeeded in winning the indoor softball championships earlier this week. They defeated Civil and Math 6-2 and 3-1 to take the best of three series. Eyewitnesses told this reporter that the play of the Commerce coach nearly cost them the series, but the rest of the team managed to cover for him and Civil went down to defeat. This same individual also should be barred from the inner-tube waterpolo league for conduct unbecoming an athlete. Dumping opponents in the midst of a game is against the rules. At any rate, congratulations to the rest of the Commerce team for beating Civil and their coach to win the softball championship.

Athletic sticks are urged to get their entries in for some of the sports that will begin right after the New Year. You are urged to attend to this matter before you leave for the holidays. Basketball entries are due by noon on Wednesday, January 10th and waterpolo entries close at noon on Friday, January 12th. Sticks are reminded that no one who has played innertube waterpolo will be allowed to play in the regular waterpolo league. The league will open Tuesday, January 16th at 10 p.m. in the Queen's Pool.

Curling gets underway on Sunday, January 14th at 2 p.m. at the Kingston Curling Club. Entries for this event close today. All entries must be accompanied by a cheque for $12 made payable to the Men's Intra-mural Athletic Committee.

Contestants in the paddleball, squash, and tennis events should continue to refer to the notice board in the men's locker room for the schedules of games that remain to be played. Sign-up for badminton is now underway with play to begin early in January. The sign-up sheets are on the notice board.

I had hoped to have a complete and up-to-date list of Bews standings; however, this was not available at press time. Here are the top ten as of December 1st.

1.	Civil and Math	19,870
2.	Commerce '73	17,183
3.	PHE	16,082
4.	Mechanical	15,161
5.	Mining	13,585
6.	Chemical	12,730
7.	Commerce '75	11,802
8.	Commerce '74	10,708
9.	Commerce '76	9,870
10.	Law '74	9,554

This is the last column for this term. Look for us again on Friday, January 12th. Until then, Merry Christmas.

for your vacation reading

1000's of paperbacks

.30¢ each

4/99¢

NONESUCH BOOKSELLERS

225 Princess

ARTS & SCIENCE ORIENTATION '73

Gael Application forms

available in the

A.M.S. OUTER OFFICE NOW

completed applications should be returned to the

A.M.S. OUTER OFFICE THURSDAY, DEC. 14th

all years & faculties may apply

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY

SCHOOL OF PHYSICAL & HEALTH EDUCATION

ANNUAL SKI SCHOOL

Below are the details of this years SKI SCHOOL which is jointly sponsored by the Recreation Services Committee and the School of Physical & Health Education. The registration fee for students is subsidized by the R.S.C. This year there are two 5 WEEK courses.

DATES : (a) Wednesdays - January 17th - February 14th
(b) Fridays - January 19th - February 16th

TIMES : (a) Wednesdays - 7:00 pm. - 9:30 pm.
(b) Fridays - 1:30 pm - 4:00 pm.

TRANSPORTATION : By buses leaving from the Physical Education Centre at
(a) Wednesdays - 6:30 pm returning at 10 pm.
(b) Fridays - 1:00 pm returning at 4:30 pm.

LOCATION: NACONA SKI HILL, NAPANEE.

INSTRUCTION: staff of nine instructors to give group instruction.

COST : Students - $9.00
Faculty, Staff & Spouses - $17.00

REGISTRATION : At the Physical Education Centre Athletics office, Weekdays 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. before January 12th. Maximum: 70 for each session EQUIPMENT : Participants are responsible for their own equipment.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT : HOWARD C. PEARCE, Recreation Officer.

AT : 547-6984

Canada: MacDonald will be watchdog on Indian Affairs

OTTAWA — Flora MacDonald, Member of Parliament for Kingston and the Islands has been named Indian and Northern Affairs critic in the Conservative Party House Caucus, recently announced by party leader Robert Standfield.

These are the people that would be given first consideration for a Cabinet position if Stanfield formed the government.

Former Liberal Party member Paul Hellyer will be the spokesman for Industry and Commerce. He left the Liberal Party to sit as an Independent and became the head of Action Canada before joining the Conservative Party.

Claude Wagner, one of the two Conservatives to be elected from Quebec, has been named party spokesman for that province as well as taking up the position of External Affairs critic.

There are also three former Diefenbaker Cabinet ministers in the caucus. Alvin Hamilton will be the spokesman for Energy, Mines and Resources, George Hees for Defence and Walter Dinsdale for Public Works and Supply and Services.

Former Ontario Justice Minister Allan Lawrence, who left provincial politics to join the Federal Conservatives will be the Consumer Affairs critic.

KINGSTON — George Speal, a former city Alderman of three terms, was elected mayor in Monday's election, defeating his opponent Paul Guindon 12,574 votes to 1,642. In Sydenham Ward, Nancy Foster and Kieth Norton will be the Alderman, defeating four other candidates, including James Cook, who had represented Sydenham on council for eight years.

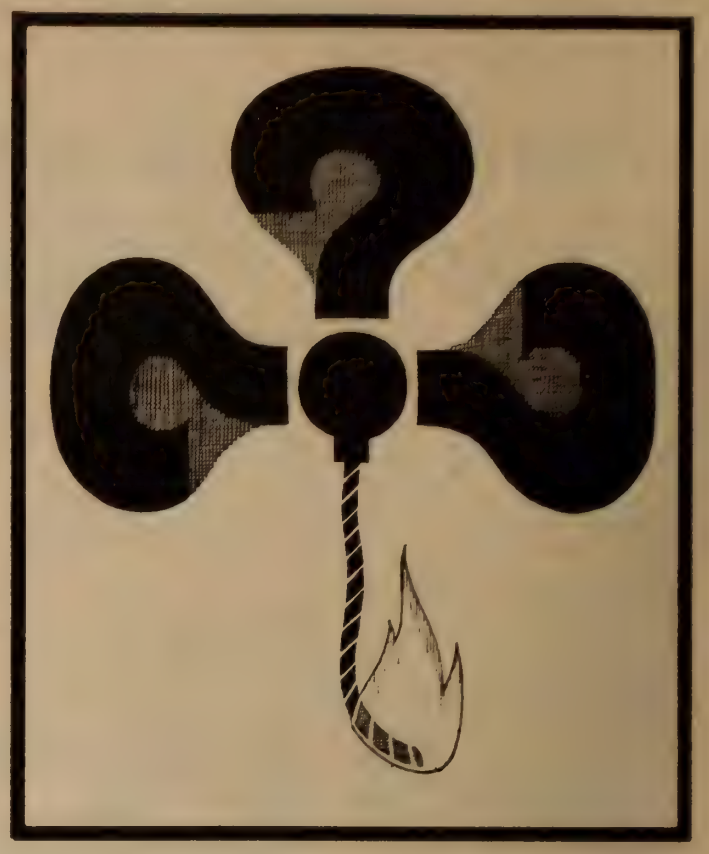
Flouridation of the city's water supply was strongly defeated, ending an issue which has received debate since 1958. The proposal to elect aldermen by general city vote instead of on a ward system, was also defeated.

There will be three new faces on the Public Utilities Commission with the return of Dr. R. H. Hay, a member of the PUC for twenty years. The three others are Donald H. Good, Reginald Potts and King Enright.

Elected to the Public School Board were Rev. A. M. Laverty, T. D. French, J. F. Whiting, N. J. Hyland, Bruce Warmington, J. Lyman Murray and Peter Watson.

CALGARY — Federal Auditor General Maxwell Henderson claims that the Trudeau government is attempting to hamper the effectiveness of his staff in their capacity of watchdog over the public funds in the hands of the federal government.

He stated that the Liberal government has been making direct attempt to impair his effectiveness, citing the 1969 move by the Treasury Board to degrade the senior positions on the Auditor General's staff. He claimed that each of his senior officials will lose between $1,000 and $3,000 as a result of the move and that many will be forced to leave.



TORONTO — Health Minister Richard Potter's bill to control the activities of denturists was blocked in its passage through the Ontario Legislature and was forced to be withdrawn. Potter stated that he would draw up new legislation which would place qualified denturists under dentists' supervision, instead of letting them go straight to the public, a reversal of his previous policy.

OTTAWA — In mayoral races across the province, Hamilton returned incumbent Vic Copps and Ottawa returned their incumbent Pierre Benoit. David Crombie swept Toronto against his six opponents.

One Ottawa poll probably experienced the lowest turnout of any across the province. Only two of its 273 voters came out.

Other mayors returned were Philip Turner in Peterborough, Bob Rutherford in Owen Sound, Paul Blundy in Sarnia and Ronald A. Irwin in Sault Ste. Marie.

OTTAWA — Heavy reductions in most industries with the exception of manufacturing swelled the unemployment roles during the month of November, Statistics Canada announced. Unemployment accounted for 5.9 per cent of the labour force, the highest for this month in a decade. The adjusted statistics dropped, however from 6.9 per cent to 6.6 per cent. This adjustment has the effect of averaging unemployment out over the year.

backpage backpage backpage

World: Queen may do double take on Canada next year

LONDON — The Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference in Ottawa this year may be opened by Queen Elizabeth, a move which would bring the sovereign to Canada twice next year. Although accepting the invitation from Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, Queen Elizabeth has first of all to make room in a heavy schedule.

Trudeau stated that it was one of two main purposes of his recent visit to London. The other was to discuss England's entry into the European common market with British Prime Minister Edward Heath and to express hope that the Market would be an outward looking trading block. However, he also stated that Canada is not looking for any special privileges from the ECM.

The other already scheduled visit to Canada by the Queen will be in June, when she will be visiting Toronto, Kingston and Prince Edward Island, where she will be attending their centenary celebrations.

The Prime Ministers' Conference will be held either in May or at the end of August.

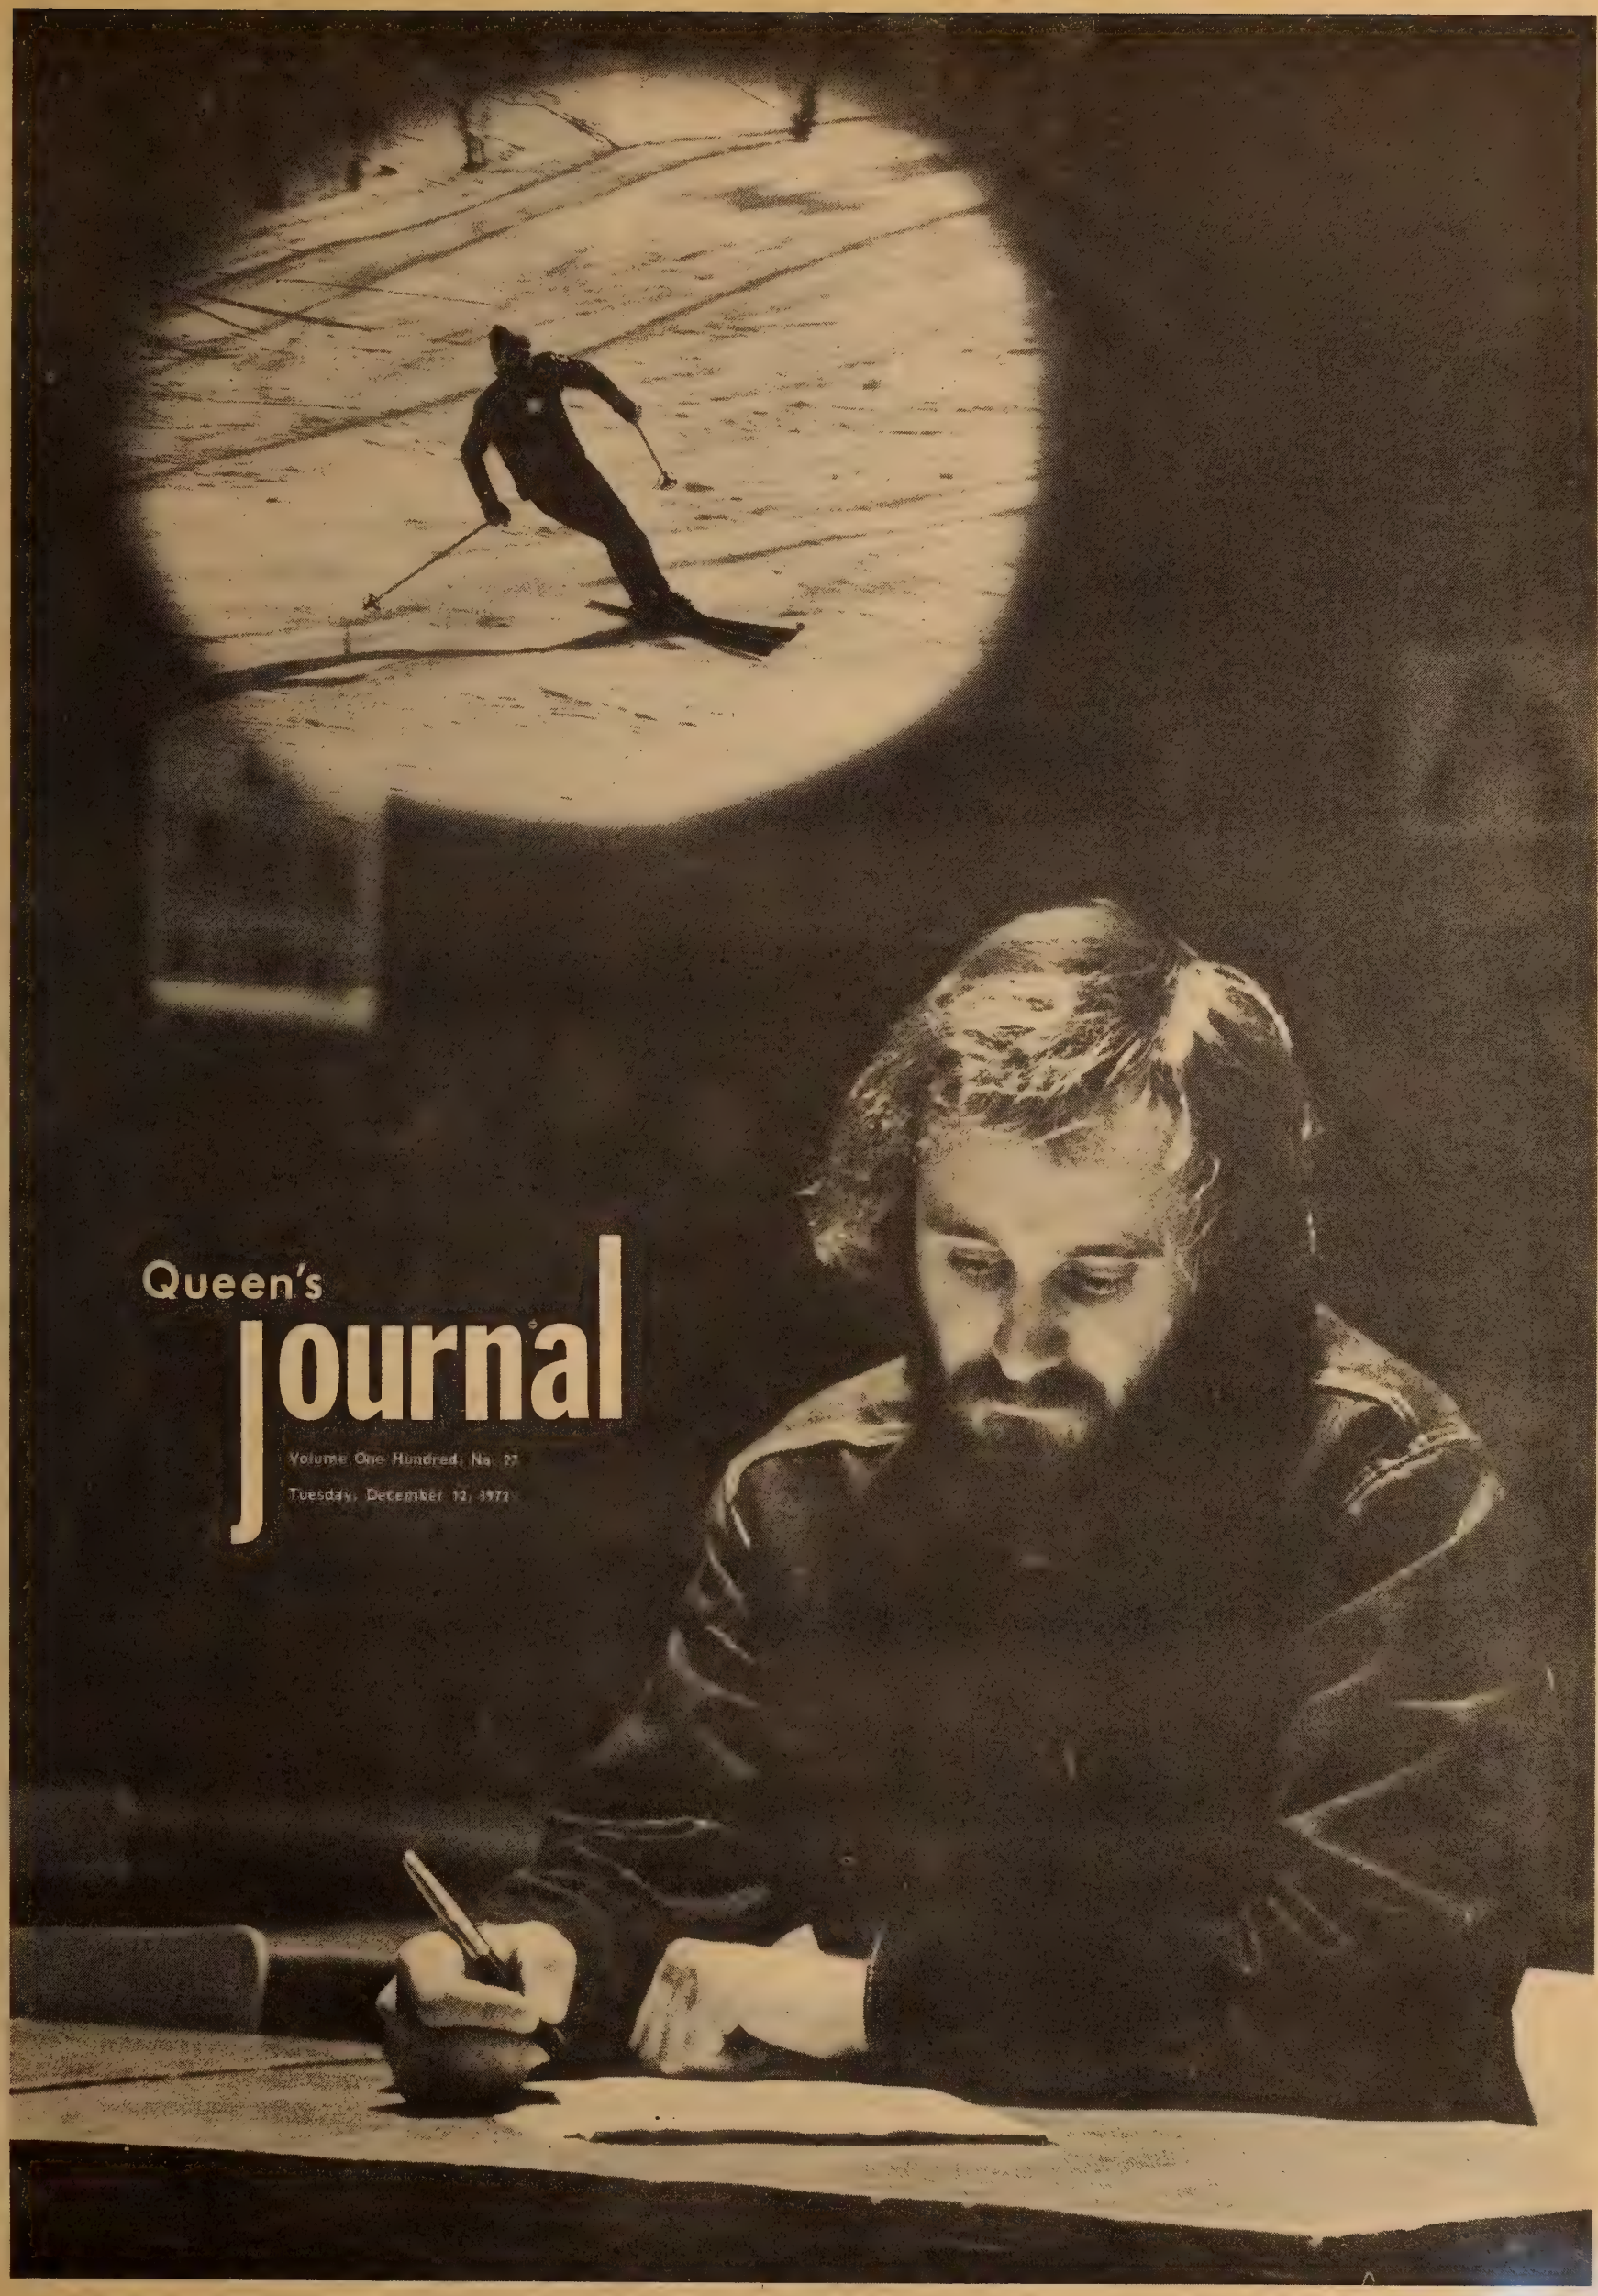
HONDURAS — General Oswaldo Lopez Arellano, Commander of the Honduras Armed forces took over the government in a bloodless coup which averted a march on the capital by peasants demanding land reforms.

The General ruled that Central American country from 1963 until last year, when he allowed the setting up of a civilian government.

However promised reforms were not met and Arellano had to take over the government to prevent riots.

MADRID — General Francisco Franco, long time dictator of Spain celebrated his eightieth birthday this week.

DUBLIN — President Eamon de Valera of Eire has set his approval to a strong anti-guerrilla treaty aimed at the Irish Republican Army, previously granted immunity.



De Valera was once the head of the IRA but has since become one of its strongest opponents. The new law will make it possible for a senior police officer to imprison anyone who he suspects is a member of an outlawed organization.

'You've just been denounced again by the UN.'

LADIES ELECTROLYSIS
Avoid shaving, tweezing, or the use of dipilatories. Have your eyebrows styled and unwanted hair removed permanently by electrolysis. Physicians recommend our work. For a free consultation and information call:
HARRISON SALON 542-5595

AUNT LUCY'S
1399 PRINCESS STREET
- KINGSTON, ONT.

Queen's Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 27

Tuesday, December 12, 1972

classified

DI and DONNA: Where were you. We're upset. The boys.

SAME TO YOU MORRIS.

MASSAGE: INTERESTED IN LEARNING Esalent technique of massage as taught by Anne Long? Student rates approximately $30. Call Jim at 549-0791 or 545-7287 or write Claremont Centre for Human Potential, 85 Spadina Road, Toronto.

WATERBEDS: Get a waterbed, the ultimate in bedtime comfort and recreation. We can supply all your waterbed needs at low low prices. Call HALCYON WATERBEDS (544-9540, 6 to 9 pm) tonight and we'll deliver yours tomorrow.

I'M LOOKING FOR A girl to take over my furnished room in a great, big, beautiful apartment with two girls for next term. Close to campus on University Ave. For further information, call 542-9375 anytime.

WANTED: ARTSCI '76 jacket. Size 38. Call Chris Porter 544-7122.

GIRL WANTED TO SHARE furnished house. Close to campus. Own room. Call Marilyn or Jan at 544-5710.

PAT R -- See the top of the classifieds and include yourself.

MERRY CHRISTMAS to the Little Ones and their Guppies in 406E. From their Mom and Godmother (VW and DD) PS - AT owes VW $1.00 for the extra guppies.

FOUND: MEDIC ALERT bracelet. May be picked up at the AMS Office.

COUPLE WOULD LIKE TO share 5 room partially furnished apartment with same. Rent cheap. Apply 527 Johnson St. Apt. 3.

WATERBEDS: Get your "special friend" a Christmas gift you both can appreciate. Waterbeds are exotic yet inexpensive and they last and last. We'll deliver right to you so don't delay, call HALCYON WATERBEDS (544-9540 6-9 pm) tonight.

FOR SALE: ONE LEATHER Science Jacket. Size 38-40, like new. Phone Brian at 544-4864.

MERRY CHRISTMAS to Boots; Korney et al; Deb; Nord; Sue; Di and 300 University; Trotts; Kirk; Buckwheat; the Cousins; 1220; Moo and Barb; 608; Winnie and 45 Wellington; Martha; Virginia; Jim; Richard; Ann; Page; Beth; 223 Nelson; No. 486; Spice, Rick and 3rd South; Vic, Dan and Friends; Ken; The boys in the Sahara; the Thursday nite at 7:00 Club; Mrs. Reid; 301 and 309 Earl; Leaside Alumni; 3rd Brockington-Gordon past and Present; Sedge; and any others I neglected to mention. Best Wishes for '73. S.J.B.

ANYONE WANT A RIDE TO FLORIDA? Leaving Dec. 21 (approx). Call Andree at 544-7217.

COUPLE WOULD LIKE TO share 5 room apartment with same. Rent Cheap. Apply: 527 Johnson Street, Apt. 3. 549-1713.

AOSC ANNOUNCES ifs Reading Week trips to Freeport Bahamas for seven days of sun and sand. Three flights to choose from: Feb. 7-14; 14-21; 21-28 with prices according to accomodations chosen. $165 with four in a room. $175 with three in a room. $189 with two in a room. Flee Freezing February For Frecking Freeport. THINK ABOUT IT.

"HEY BUDDY, no need to be sorry, It was great. Have a good life and I'll see you on the mountain -- Always, IT-CH."

MERRY CHRISTMAS to Org', Peter, Rang-tang, Molly Moochums, Sasafras, O'Rilly, and the other dead bears at FS McNeill, and Pam of HD from Bonzo Bonso bazzo. Apples, Org', Apple.

MIKE: REALLY did have a good time, and thanks 'specially for coming over Saturday. Sue.

SINGLE ROOM FOR RENT. Very reasonable. Breakfast and lunch optional. 7 min from campus. Call 542-9402 after 5 pm or 548-7162 before 5 pm.

MERRY CHRISTMAS TO the Chown Hounds from 199 William and also the big teddy bear.

COUNTRY FANS . . . Y'all come. Jack & Dorthy McCaughen's "Fidlar Mills" Country Christmas Jamboree. . . Grand Theatre, Kingston, Friday, December 15, 8 p.m. In person: Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus, Don and Tony Band Nashville, Mike Graham GRT records, Lynn Jones of Capitol Records & CHCH TV Jamboree Hamilton, Eleanor Moorehead Lady Fiddler of RCA Records & TV, Ron Fitzpatrick of CKWS, and a terrific cast of our entertainers. Santa will have a free treat for all kids present. Advance tickets selling at Grand Theatre, Kingston (546-1756), Vern Napier Cameras in the Shopping Centre, and Sharp and Flat in the Frontenac Mall. Get tickets now. You may win a Christmas Turkey or records. Tickets: advance: $2.00; at the door: $3.00; kids; $1.00.

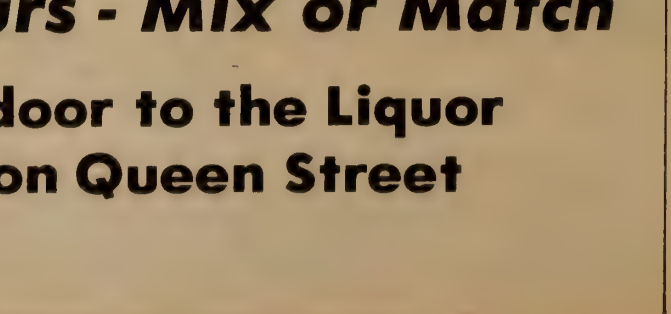
LONDON FOR CHRISTMAS: $179 return, BOAC, 66-lb. baggage allowance, free drinks all the way. Contact the AMS Office or AOSC, 44 St. George, Toronto 5, Ontario, 416-962-8404.

AUNT LUCY'S
1399 PRINCESS STREET
- KINGSTON, ONT.

Pizza
Chalet
Generous Portions
Competitive Prices
Our Low Rent
Saves Money
544-1227
FREE DELIVERY

VAN'S
Gifts Books Ltd.
253 Princess Street
542-6676 Kingston

Van's Adult section for
Adult Broadminded People
Adult: books; magazines, films
Adult: accessories, jokes, gifts
Adult: humorous cards & stationery
Adult: "Sex-to-Sexty" & "Super Sex-to-Sexty"
Adult: DeLuxe highgloss col oured posters
Yeah! Yeah! Comest ye all & select your purchase. Itt'll satisfy the soul of good 'harted' Van!
Open 7 days - till 11 pm



Canadian Handcrafted
Fully Briar Pipes
Different up to Date models

Kentucky Fried Chicken
542-2773
286 Montreal St.
Your closest Aunt Lucy's Take Home Store

for your vacation reading 1000's of paperbacks
.30¢ each
4/99¢
NONESUCH BOOKSELLERS
225 Princess

Skiing at its peak Prices at their bottom
30 superbly groomed trails. 10 lifts accommodating 7,500 skiers per hour, including the only gondola lift in Eastern Canada
• 2050' vertical drop (It's a real kick)
• Beginner's slopes (Look at me!)
• 5 day ski week: use of lifts $25., lifts & lessons $35.
• Season from November to May
mont ste-anne P.O. Box 40, Beaupré, Province of Québec (418) 692-0835
Toronto ski reports phone number (416) 483-4510

George Bailey Sport Shop
Correct Address 40 Princess St.
Not 401 Princess St. as noted in advertisement in December 8 issue
"Don't miss Bailey's Ski Savings"

Students' Discount at Lucky One POP MART
1.57 per case of 24 Plus deposit
10 Flavours - Mix or Match
Next door to the Liquor Store on Queen Street

LADIES ELECTROLYSIS

Avoid shaving, tweezing, or the use of dipilatories. Have your eyebrows styled and unwanted hair removed permanently by electrolysis. Physicians recommend our work. For a free consultation and information call:

HARRISON SALON 542-5595

THIS CHRISTMAS

Give your parents and friends

GIFT SUBSCRIPTIONS

to

QUEEN'S QUARTERLY

A CANADIAN REVIEW since 1893,

featuring articles on Politics, Foreign Affairs, Literature, History, etc., plus Poetry, Fiction, Book Reviews.

annual subscription (4 issues)	$6.00
Three years (12 issues)	$15.00

Cards announcing your gifts will be mailed early in December.

I enclose $..... for ... subscriptions to Queen's Quarterly to be sent to the addresses given below.

.....Donor

.....Address

Name .....
Address .....
Name .....
Address .....

cut out and mail to:

QUEEN'S QUARTERLY
Queen's University
130 Lower Albert St. (campus)
Kingston, Ont.

DECK HER HAND

WITH A HOLIDAY DIAMOND

This Christmas do something dazzling. Deck her hand with a diamond ring. We'll help you select a brilliant diamond to slip in her Christmas stocking. It will be a beautiful surprise. To sparkle on her finger like perpetual snowflakes. And be her most precious ornament for all the Christmases to come.

KINNEAR d'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET,
KINGSTON, ONTARIO
CANADA

holly days

calendar of events

Tuesday, December 12

The Queen's Chamber Orchester presents a Christmas Concert under the direction of Prof. David Keane of the Music Department. The orchestra will perform works by Holst, Corelli and Leroy Anderson, as well as playing assorted Christmas carols to be sung by the audience. Admission free. Convocation Hall.

Friday, December 22

Hamilton and Area Queen's Students 2nd Annual Queen's Christmas Bash at Paddy Green's (Main and Longwood). Santa will be there from 8:00 pm.

Wednesday, December 27

The Toronto Alumnae are planning to hold their annual Christmas Skating Party at the North Toronto Memorial Gardens, located in the park at Eglinton and Oriole Parkway. Skating to music is free from 7:00 to 10:00 pm. Refreshments will be available from 8:00 to 10:00 pm at a very nominal cost. A special invitation is extended to all Queen's students who will be in Toronto at that time.

at agnes

The Art Centre will close on Friday, December 22nd, and reopen on Tuesday, January 2nd.

cfrc

CFRC & CFRC-FM Special Programming for Christmas Season

The following programs can be heard on both CFRC, 1490 & CFRC-FM, 91.9 on the weekend of December 21st to 24th and again on the weekend of Dec. 28th to 31st.

Thursdays
6:30 - Spectrum
7:30 pm - The Goon Show (Comedy from the BBC).
8:00 pm - Music for Christmas
8:30 pm - Let's Discuss It
9:00 pm - The Spoken Word
10:00 pm - Nocturne

Fridays
6:30 pm - Spectrum
8:00 pm - The Living Classics
10:00 pm - Nocturne

Saturdays
12:00 - Saturday Sounds
6:00 pm - Soundstage
7:00 pm - Music around the World
8:00 pm - Music Canada
9:00 pm - Free Folk
10:00 pm - Nocturne

Sundays
8:00 - Sunday Morning
12:00 - Classics by Request
4:00 pm - Music in Kingston
5:00 pm - The Cleveland Orchestra in Concert
7:00 pm - Montage: Dec. 24 - Christmas Greetings from Boris Brott and the members of the Hamilton Philharmonic Orchestra.
Dec. 31 - A musical look at the past year.
9:00 pm - Contemporary Folk 10:00 pm - Sign off.

union

The coffee shop in the Students Union closes after hours on December 15 and re-opens at 9:00 am January 8.

Wallace Hall with provide coffee bar service and dinner service until 5:30 December 22nd. It will re-open on January 2nd at 7:30 am.

computing centre

The Computing Centre will close on December 22nd and open again on January 2nd.

health services

The Student Health Service will be closed from 5:00 pm Friday, December 22nd until 8:45 Tuesday, January 2nd, 1973. During this period 24 hour service will continue with answering service placing emergencies in touch with a duty physician through 547-6106.

library

Limited services means that only Circulation Desk, Stacks and Central Information Room will be open. Documents Unit, Periodicals Room, Reserve Room, Archives and Special Collections Unit will not be open during periods of limited service.

Wednesday, December 20 and Thursday Dec. 21 - 8:45 am - 10:00 pm
Limited services only after 5:00 pm.
Friday, December 22 - 8:45 am - 5:00 pm.
Saturday, December 23 - Tuesday, December 26 - closed.
Wednesday, December 27 - 8:45 am - 5 pm - Limited services only.
Thursday, December 28 - 8:45 am - 5 pm - Limited Services only.
Friday, December 29 - 8:45 am - 5 pm - Limited services only.
Saturday, December 30 - Monday, January 1 - closed.
Tuesday, December 2 - Thursday, December 4 - 8:45 am - 10 pm.
Limited services only after 5 pm.
Friday, December 5 - 8:45 am - 5:00 pm.
Saturday, December 6 - 8:45 am - 5 pm Limited services only.
Normal weekend service will resume Sunday, January 7. Regular hours will resume Monday, January 8.

physed centre

The Arena and The Physical Education Centre will be closed from 4:00 pm on Friday, December 22nd to 8:00 am on Tuesday, January 2nd. Except: Wednesday December 27th it is open from 2:00 pm to 9:00 pm. Thursday, December 28 it is open from 8:00 am to 6:00 pm. During the period January 2nd to the 7th inclusive the hours will be:
Tuesday through Saturday - 8:00 am to 9:00 pm.
Sunday - 2:00 pm - 11 pm.
The Arena will be closed 7:00 pm December 5th to 2:00 pm Wednesday, December 27th for exams.

Staying in Kingston over the holidays?

Don't miss the

New Year's Eve Party

IN THE PUB

Admission $1.00 Sponsored By The ASUS

AMS asks that fees be withheld

A number of students have been coming into the AMS office in the last week and a half, asking whether or not to pay their fees. They seemed confused by the AMS call for a fee withholding, so we sent out one of our ace news hounds to find out about it.

"The Alma Mater Society executive is asking Queen's students to withhold their second term fees," said External Affairs Commissioner Lyn Whitham, "as an expression of discontent with the government's policy in specifically the Ontario Student Awards Programme, and in a broader spectrum, with what appears to be a policy of closing university education to lower income groups.

"We are asking the Davis government to state definitely its policy for the 1973-74 academic year; to return the loan ceiling for OSAP to its previous level of $600; to lower the age of independence (from parental income for student aid) to 21; and to make provision in the programme for aid to part-time students."

Ms Whitham said that the demands, passed at the last AMS meeting, included the rollback of tuition increases instituted last spring. She said motion passed was one sent out by the Ontario Federation of Students, but "we aren't emphasizing the rollback in our (AMS) demands because we don't believe it is the most important issue, and more importantly, it is misrepresenting the intentions of the students.

"Surely, the most pressing issue is accessibility and we aren't a selfish interest group just out to get our $100 back. It would be naive to presume that the tuition will be decreased. In the referendum (October) campaign, most students expressed concern with the arbitrary steps taken by the Davis government and the decrease in accessibility grants."

The $100 rollback was passed at the November 25 meeting of the OFS over the protests of Queen's and the University of Western Ontario and received prominence in the public press, and was the subject of a rather vicious attack in a Toronto Star editorial. "It is things like this," says Ms Whitham, "that destroy the credibility of the federation and the majority of the students." She blamed this on irrational student leaders "who are not representative of their own campuses."

"What we have is a case of the government in some places claiming that it is pursuing an educational policy of 'openness', and then turning around and taking actions that definitely have the effect of restricting access to higher education," Ms Whitham commented.

All that the government is doing with its cutbacks in education is "limiting enrollment to those who can afford it," she continued, "the onus is on the government to reveal what its policy for higher education is."

The OFS executive has met with both Premier Davis and the Minister of Colleges Jack McNie a number of times, said Ms. Whitham, but always "with no effect. Oh, they did say that tuition would not go up this year and that they were sympathetic, but . . ."

What will a fee withholding do to reverse this? "We don't have any political clout, but we must stress to the government that we are upset with the direction in which education is going, and do all we can to get across our primary concerns." Ms Whitham warned, however, against taking a defeatist attitude saying that such action would only destroy things.

"The government cannot recognize our conviction unless we make some sort of sacrifice, and in this case it will be financial," she said. If students are going to withhold their second term fees, it is going to cost them money. There is a late payment fee of $15 levied at the end of January (Fees are due January 31), and an additional penalty of $10 levied at the end of February. On top of that, the university can hold back academic information of students who owe money to the university. Jokingly, Ms Whitham suggested that students should stock up on transcripts in January.

Yes, she had thought about asking to have late payment fees waived and "will discuss the matter with Dr. Deutsch (Queen's Principal) but don't expect it to happen for sure because the Board of Trustees doesn't meet until mid-February and besides, we cannot expect to have everything handed to us while we withhold."

"What can students do? Well, they can withhold their second term tuition by either not paying it, or paying it into a trust fund." That however, is not all. Ms. Whitham emphasized that students should think about the whole question of accessibility and explain it to their friends and relatives. "We must get our ideas and concerns across to the public," she said.

In January a trust fund will be set up by the AMS Ms Whitham said "in order to protect the student and to show that he has intentions of paying tuition eventually." This fund, which will be administered by a local lawyer and someone else (perhaps a university officer), will be available for anyone to pay his fees into for the duration. "Any individual student, however," she stressed, "will be able to ask that his fees be released from the fund to the university at any time."

Ms Whitham wouldn't say how long the fee withholding would last. "We will be reassessing the action in February and decide then what to do. It all depends on student support and what the government does."

Not believe in Santa Claus! You might

Course evaluation manditory

MONTREAL (CUPI) — A hotly debated motion to have course evaluation made mandatory throughout the day division of Loyola College passed easily through senate at its December meeting.

The resolution, aimed primarily at departments ready to opt out of course evaluation, met staunch opposition from some senators. Although he didn't admit he disliked the idea of mandatory course evaluations, Dean of Arts Russell Breen said he had received "a tremendous amount of criticism" of the evaluation process in the faculty of arts. Reading from a psychology department document, he called course evaluation at Loyola "nonsensical yet dangerous", and accused the senate of bringing in legislation "without much thought".

Peter Richardson, the administration official who moved the resolution to make the evaluation mandatory, said it intended to put the course evaluation on a much broader basis. Richardson called for the creation of a learning development council to administer and constantly suggest improvements to the evaluation.

Student senators had been convinced that course evaluation would deteriorate if more departments opted out of the evaluation process. One student senator pointed out that while 11 per cent of the professors decided last year not to have their courses evaluated, at least five departments would have chosen not to have their courses evaluated this year.

Commerce orienteers chosen

Rich Chown, chairman of the Commerce Orientation program selected his committee last week.

It includes Ann-Marie Sidlovsky, Communications; Doug Grundy, Academic; Will Kennedy, Social Convenor; and Bernie Koch, Secretary-Treasurer.

The chief boss will be selected in the first week of January.

Chown told the Journal that he was "happy with the type of people who applied." "We don't want a bush league organization, it's got to be tops," he said.

The Commerce program will be set up next term but Chown remarked that one of the major things that has to be done is to "establish ourselves with the other faculties."

Free Greek lectures coming

Beginning the second week of next term, Professor Bernabei of the Department of Classics will offer a series of 10 weekly lectures in the rudiments of Ancient Greek. In the first lecture students will learn the sounds associated with letters of the Greek alphabet. Gradually gaining knowledge of vocabulary, and syntax, they will apply those sounds to the poetry of Homer's Ilian in its original form. If time allows, they will also learn to understand and to recite passages from the poetry of Sappho, Aeschylus, and other Greek poets.

Although the lectures are oriented specifically toward students in Classical Studies 100 (Classical Literature in Translation), anyone may attend.

The lectures will be presented in Stirling Hall, Theatre B, at 7:30 to 9:00 every Tuesday evening for 10 weeks beginning January 18, 1973.

Queen's spared in drug busts

Kingston was the scene of a series of drug raids on Wednesday during the largest operation of its type ever carried out in this city.

No Queen's students appear to be among those arrested, and police officials say that none of the raids took place at "institutions".

Twenty-five persons in the area, faced 59 charges of trafficking in various drugs in court on Thursday, Dec. 7.

Not believe in Santa Claus!
Virginia says Santa but that is no sign that there is no Santa Clause. The real things in the world are those which neither children nor men can see. No Santa Clause! Thank God! he lives and he will live forever. Yes, Donna, there is a Santa Claus.

- wilson

Residence fee hike brings fears of vacancy

As expected, a tentative budget for residences indicates that fees will be increased in 1973.

Kiloran German, President of the WRC said the budget looks "pretty grim."

The final fee structure will be set in mid January.

She feared that the increase "would drive people out of residence." If there are more vacancies, "fees are likely to rise again," she remarked.

The fees in Women's residence will be raised by $184 while Men's residence will suffer an increase of between $157 and $167.

This increase will bring the fees for residence at Queen's on par and in some cases slightly above residence fees at other universities. Formerly, fees at Queen's were substantially below other universities.

Significant increases in expenses will be incurred over the next two years as compared to the past two years.

The additional cost of heat to the residences between 1973-1975 will be $82,640. The cost of heat was formerly paid by the university according to Miss German. A major part of the increase is the $288,000 interest due on the West Campus residence.

The Residence Board "will look at what services can be cut," she said but added even if they cut out breakfast and maid service there is still going to be a sizeable increase in fees."

Roughly 3000 students live in residences at Queen's and the OSAP allotment for residence is only $950.

"This is well below everybody's fees," Miss German commented. She indicated that a letter will be sent to the government stating that "the residence fee increase was substantial and OSAP should make a similiar increase in the allotment for fees."

There was some discussion at the Residence Board meeting on Saturday that future budgets will be calculated yearly rather than once every two years.

IRC chairman Steve Brereton told the Journal that "this would reduce the increase for next year."

He also indicated that another survey of alternate meal plan arrangements will be taken in men's residence. There was little response to a questionaire circulated earlier this term which asked residents whether they were satisfied with the present arrangements or whether they wished the number of meals to be reduced to lunch and dinner. However, a small sample taken recently by a few students in men's residence indicated that 60 per cent were in favour of this alternate arrangement according to Brereton.

No Friday Journal .... or

In a move reminiscent of recent administrations, Queen's Journal Editor Jennifer Grass announced that there would be no Friday Journal

"There will be no Friday Journal, or Tuesday, or Friday, or Tuesday or...No, not another one until the 12th of January," she told the assembled multitudes in the Journal office on Sunday afternoon.

After three Hallelujah Choruses, they finished the paper and went their several ways.

Student affairs types gather

Members of the Queen's delegation who attended the Student Affairs Conference in Guelph appeared very pleased with the meeting.

Jim Whitley, director of Student Affairs, told the Journal that "we picked up a lot of ideas, some of which we may be able to use and some of which we won't."

Sixteen universities and community colleges attended the conference which was organized by Treffle Lacome, Vice-Rector of Student Services at the University of Ottawa. A "very open ended format" allowed the delegates "to discuss at will things that interested them," said Marney Cousins, one of the Queen's reps.

Whitley indicated that there was "considerable surpise at the make-up of the Queen's delegation." With the exception of Whitley, all the Queen's delegates were students.

Most of the other universities sent administrators of student services with either no students or mere token student representation.

Ms. Cousins indicated that the problem of university funding and student aid received considerable attention. She also pointed out that first year university courses need to be updated as the content of high school courses has been greatly improved.

The difficulties facing foreign students was also discussed at length. These students now must have a landed immigrant status rather than a student visa. To apply for this students may not be residing in Canada. This has caught many students in a dilemma which the conference hoped to rectify by making representations to the Provincial and Federal Ministries of Education and the Canadian Association of International Education.

Whitley indicated that in response to discussions at the conference concerning health services, "we may make some attempt to get a resident gyneacologist at the Health Services."

Victoria Kemsley pointed out that she thought the real purpose of the conference was "to get the Ontario Student Afairs Association moving."

Previously, she said, "it was not a very significant group, but now it appears to be more cohesive."

Cheque list at Awards Office

Due to the possibility of a postal slowdown and the resulting delay in students receiving notification of the arrival of their first term grant cheques, a list of all the cheques received at the Awards Office has been posted on the Bulletin Boards on the main floor of the Union and opposite the Tuck Shop in the basement.

Any student who's name appears on this list can pick up his first term cheque in person at the Student Awards Office at 90 Queen's Crescent upon presentation of his green student identification card.

police officials say that none of the raids took place at "in Situations

Marcel Sauve, superintendant of the RCMP criminal investigation branch, in Ottawa said, "It is the biggest drug operation ever undertaken in the Kingston area." The Kingston raid is the fifth in a series of recent anti-drug operation carried out in Canada.

The raids followed an extensive investiagtion into the drug situation in the Kingston area. Two undercover RCMP officers have been living among those suspected of drug offences for four months gathering evidence.

Busses to West Campus

Prospects are very good, reports AMS Vice-president Wally Palmer, for the institution of free bus service for Queen's students between the main campus and West Campus. It is expected that such a service could start as early as January 8th.

He said that he has been in consultation with the university administration for some time regarding the service since the end of the Bus-it experiment in October.

Palmer said that the service would be funded jointly by the Alma Mater Society, the university and "hopefully, the McArthur Students' Society." The cost to the University groups (from the PUC) would be based on Bus-it statistics regarding student usage of the route.

Law students fight selves

The conflict which arose two weeks ago between law house and the Law Society "will be sorted out," Dave Hurren, President of Law House told the Journal, but he refused to make any further comment.

Walter Petryshyn explained that the problem arose when law house refused to pay the sum of $60 to the Law Society for a bill that the Society paid.

Petryshyn said that "according to law they did not have to pay, but according to equity they did."

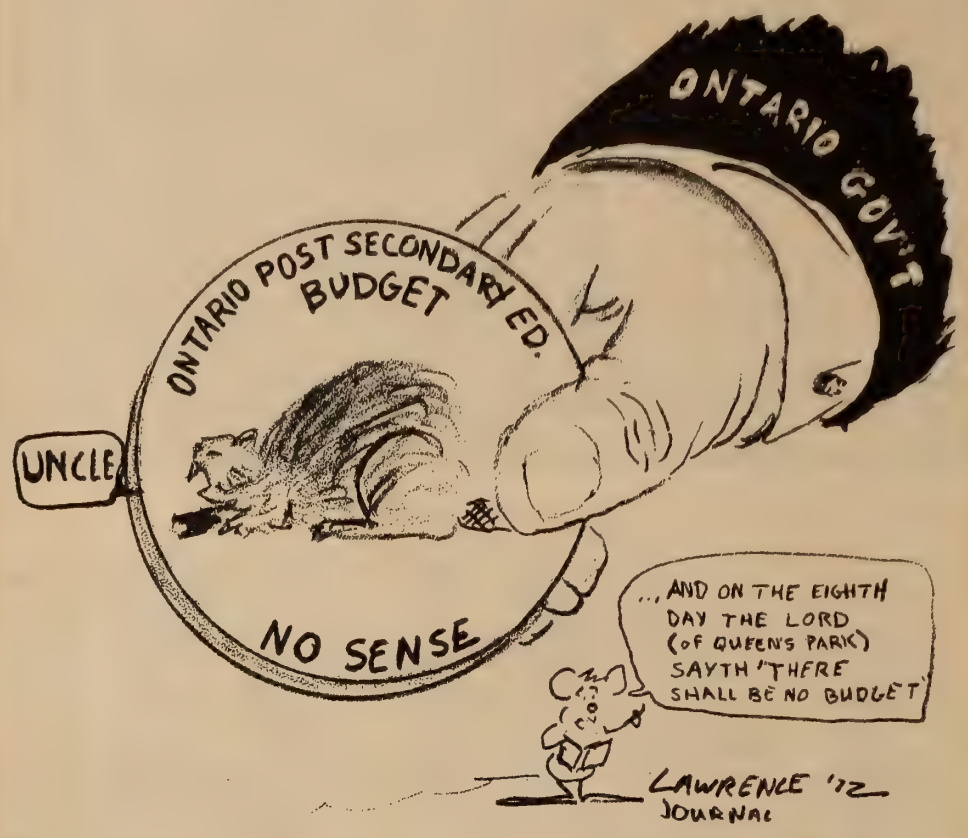
When Law House refused to pay the $60, Petryshyn in turn refused to sign a check over to Law House for other expenses.

However, "now they have received the money but whether they will honour the $60 commitment depends upon the outcome of a meeting of the directorate of Law House," Petryshyn said.

In response to a question concerning why Hurren refused to comment, Petryshyn suggested that "my very good friend, the President of Law House probably thought that the Queen's Journal should mind its own business which I suppose it was doing."

16 win music scholarships

Through the special co-operation of the University and the Kingston Symphony Association, sixteen music students at Queen's received music scholarships this year. Fifteen of the awards were made for the first time.



The Kingston Symphony Association gives five of these scholarships, worth a total value of $2,500. The students must play an orchestral instrument as their major instrument. A condition of the scholarship is that the holder becomes a member of the Symphony if invited to do so.

Totalling $42,500, the University has provided an additional five scholarships. There is no stipulation to area of specialization or year of enrolment attached to this scholarship.

Recipients are: Kingston Symphony Association: R. Gordon Craig; John P. Helmers; Howard Alexander; Stephen J. Irwin; Kirk J. Elliot; Wayne P. Tindale; Craig E. Tompkins; Valerie Joyce Newman; and Michael J. Bodzasi.

Queen's University: Thomas Cromwell; Paul Harding; Pamela Hodkin; Jan Salmon; Judith Bourne; and Arlene Pietrobon.

The Stanley Dunlop Scholarship: ($500). awarded annually to the student with the highest standing in the first year of the Bachelor of Music Program, was granted this year to Karen Skidmore.

T'hell with the hundred bucks!

Recent articles in the press indicate that the fee increase introduced last spring is the main object of indignation of university students. This, however, is not the issue involved and as a result students are receiving rather unsympathetic press. A recent editorial in the Toronto Star called the fee strike "economic blackmail" resorted to by "university students, those indefatigable indealists with the keenest social consciences."

We do not blame the media for taking such a stand because ever since the changes were announced last spring, student efforts to launch a campaign have been largely fragmented and ineffectual. The very working of the Ontario Federation of Students ballot for the October 11 referendum indicate that the increase in fees rather than the question of accessibility to post-secondary education had mistakenly become the main issue.

In fact, the increase in fees this year can be justified because undergraduate fees had remained stable since 1964, while the cost of living had risen sharply. It is the subsequent decrease in total amount spent on student aid along with the raise in the loan ceiling which have called the accessibility of higher education into question. A system which favours the rich is regressive and furthermore, it is likely to have a deteriorating effect upon the quality of education at these institutions.

The release of the Draft Report from the Wright Commission had little effect upon the provincial government last year. In fact, the government instituted the recommended fee increases but failed to include the necessary steps in terms of student aid to make the present system of education more accessible. The commission advocates a graduated scale of aid dependent upon the means test.

Factions in the OFS have lost sight of the essential nature of the problem, in spite of the efforts of Queen's, Western and Toronto to point it out.

We hope that the AMS will not compromise its belief in accessibility because of its fear of having a diversive effect upon the OFS. We urge the AMS to be more explicit about accessibility, the real issue at stake. A show of numbers in the fee withholding will not be sufficient to force the government into becoming more receptive to our demands unless it is accompanied by a massive education campaign which involves not merely the Kingston news media but particularly the Toronto media.

Queen's Journal

Vol. 100, No. 27
Tues., Dec. 12, 1972
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Patricia Devitt
Martin Jones
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
Backpage: Bob Mutrie
Photos: Pete Boag

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society or the University. Offices are located in the Students' Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

Birth Control and Abortion

Information and Referral services

1973 Hours: Monday to Friday, 1-9 p.m., Saturday, 1-5 p.m.

Closed Dec. 20 to Jan. 3

165 University, 547-2806

CLOVER LEAF HEALTH FOODS

490 Princess Street

16 Years Experience in Selling Health Foods

Everything in flours, powders, juices, oils, honey, peanut butter, herbs for tea, seeds, whole grains, beverages, nuts, Loma Linda Products, & all capsules & tablets from Vitamin A to Wheat Germ.

HOME FOR XMAS

QUEEN'S EXCURSION

CLUB BUSES Dec. 8-20th

(as often as possible)

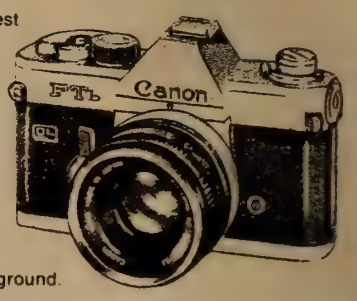
to such exotic destinations as

TORONTO, OTTAWA, MONTREAL

sign up period starts Dec. 4th in Outer AMS Office

SIGN UP EARLY

PLUS



Those interested in going to Florida for a week during the holidays (costs about $50) should also inquire at the OUTER AMS OFFICE

Mon.- Fri., 11:30 a.m.- 3:00 p.m.

WE'LL GIVE YOU $10

to buy anything else in the store when you buy a Canon FTb or LTb from us

Having the FTb is the next best thing to having an F-1. And you can use the same lenses and accessories with it. The camera has a shutter speed of 1/1000 of a second and a unique through the lens light meter system that automatically gets its reading from the center of your picture, so you get the correct exposure for what you are photographing, not the background.

Something Extra From Bell & Howell

Offer good only until December 31, 1972.

Linden-Photo Co.

229 Princess 546-7676

Complete line of new and used photographic equipment. Specialized finishing in our own Laboratory. STUDENT DISCOUNTS.

Doug Redden Gerry Finn Ron Fairley

Book borrowing

Dear Editor,

I know it's a bit uncouth to say anything that might be construed as approving of the university administration, but my infrequent contacts have been largely satisfactory. I admit one of the senior administrators I ran into needed a little nudge, but even he proved to be most cooperative.

It is therefore with some reluctance that I raise a minor problem concerning the regulations governing the access faculty and students have to various library materials. I am so certain it's an oversight -- and one that will be set right immediately on being apprehended by the appropriate authorities -- that I hesitate to bring it up at all. However, since I've gotten this far, I suppose I should continue.

My concern is with the privileged access to library materials faculty members enjoy or, to turn it around, the discrimination against students evident in library loan policies. It strikes me as being unthoughtful (and perhaps even unkind) that the university's clients, its students, are relegated to such an inferior position vis-a-vis the faculty in relation to loan priorities. I know there are more students than faculty. And I recognize the urgency behind faculty work programs, whether teaching or making a contribution to knowledge. But I can't quite come to grips with the proposition that this leads to a requirement for a three- or four-month loan period, nor can I see how faculty have the right to borrow from the documents section and students do not. But then again, students are an untrustworthy lot, and documents are, well, documents. And furthermore, if students were able to borrow books for four months, hell, they could be all the way to Wolfe Island, and we'd never get 'em back.

I did say it was a minor problem.

C. Dolan,
Grad Studies.

Circle group

Dear Editor,

The Circle Group would like to thank Queen's Journal and John Vollman Jr. for the article which appeared in the Journal on November 24, 1972. If anyone has further questions concerning our program and the Centre please feel free to contact us.

Thanks,
Stephen Reid,
Chairman,
The Circle Group
Roger Latreille,
Acting Liaison &
Classification Officer,
The Circle Group.

Carol service

Dear Editor,

Please allow me space in the Journal to compliment the Engineering Society for organizing the Christmas Carol Service that was held at Grant Hall. I appreciate the efforts put into such a programme by everyone and indeed think that it was a great success. The choral ensemble under the direction of Professor D. Narcisse - Mair must be mentioned for their performance. They are to be considered an asset to the University.

As a student in the Faculty of Education I think it would have been a good gesture if someone from the McArthur Student body took part in the service - preferably the reading of one of the lessons. It would have been a small step towards fostering the relationship between the Main Campus and West Campus.

Thanks to all who took part in presenting such a heart-warming service.

Sincerely,
Teach' 73.

to Mr. R. Alan Broadbent

Dear Alan,

I am writing you on behalf of the Alma Mater Society Executive and all the students at Queen's to sincerely thank you for all your fine efforts on our behalf as Rector of the University. We are all well aware of the many contributions you made to Queen's. Speaking for the AMS, we were always grateful for your sound advise and keen interest in our affairs. We know you represented us ably to the Board of Trustees. I am sure, also, that the Journal would wish me to pass on their gratitude for the help you gave them during your three year term. Your column "The Dormouse" is already sorely missed.

Also, it is my pleasure to inform you that at the last meeting of the Outer Council it was unanimously decided to elect you Honourary Life Member of the AMS. We are hoping that you will be able to attend our first meeting in January that we may make this presentation.

I understand you will be leaving Kingston shortly to take a position with QUIC-LAW in Toronto. May I wish you every renewed success. I hope you will not forget us back here at Queen's for we will surely miss you.

Have a Merry Christmas and take care.

Sincerely,
Gregory P. LeBlanc
AMS President

letters

Volunteers

Dear Editor,

The Student Volunteer Bureau is winding up the most successful term in its short history and would like to thank all the volunteers for their time and efforts. So far we have placed about 400 volunteers in 41 agencies in Kingston, and still have lots of needs to fill. The office will be open all this week, so if you would like to find out what you can do next term, please drop in (University entrance to the Union).

We are currently doing a telephone follow-up that will be continued in the New Year. However, if you signed up but were never contacted please let us know this week and we will try to do something about it. If anyone has any complaints or suggestions please let us know.

The SVB is now looking for people who would be interested in being on the Executive next year. If you think you might be interested, let us know (544-0517). We'll be getting together next term with all those who are interested, explaining things, and screening "applicants".

The SVB is sponsoring a closed conference late in January called "Students in the Community". In attendance will be representatives from a dozen other Universities in Ontario and Quebec. We will be sharing ideas on campus volunteer bureaux, hopefully encouraging others to establish them and coming away with ideas on how to better ours.

Our office opens on January 8th, 1973. We wish everyone who needs it, the best of luck in exams, a very merry and a happy!

SVB

Where's sweven

Dear Editor,

The Journal has not seen fit to print my last two letters, both of which were inquiries as to why SWEVEN has not appeared yet, and why there has not even been a mention of it since my letter to the Journal in early October. First term is now to all intents and purposes over. I would like to call the following facts to your attention, and others concerned:

1. In WHO'S WHERE 1972-73, pg. 46, the AMS budget for this year indicates that $5,400.00 has been allocated for SWEVEN itself.

2. In one of the first copies of the Journal this year, some person connected with SWEVEN wrote that there had been a proliferation of material submitted, and that monthly publication was being considered.

Following that statement, I offered criticism of SWEVEN's intent and content. It is now obvious that SWEVEN will not be monthly, nor bi-monthly. Apparently, it will not appear this term at all, and who knows about next term. I suppose we are to expect a proliferation of issues in the four months remaining of this academic year.

Obviously, then, this "magazine" is no such thing. Are we to be presented in the final term with at least one issue or two??? A token, a placebo effort. It is supposed to be a magazine, is funded as one, so I think it should perhaps be administered as one. Responsibly and not whimsically, if at all. It appears to be the latter case. It should appear regularly, not in one lavish, expensively printed, slight edition.

Assume it is to appear at all before the end of the year:

a) one appearance would apparently cost $5,400.00. An incredibly disgusting overexpenditure. That is, unless it is to be goldleafed.

b) Two appearances would cost $2,700.00 per issue. This is still pouring too much money into fanciness of appearance while avoiding the function of being a literary outlet where works may be published and a viable feedbackcreation cycle set up.

c) Let us stretch our credulity to the limit and assume the phantom magazine might appear three times next term. Each printing would cost $1,800.00. The quality of the literature that has so far appeared (in previous years) does not warrant any such lavish presentation, unless one's concern is with show, and not with content.

This magazine was supposed to be a "literary supplement" to the Journal. Not a magazine of pretty photographs expensively reproduced, and slight literary merit. More modest amounts of money would be necessary if this magazine (non-existent at present) would have the integrity to function as the thing it was supposed to, not some pretentious, foppish showcase for the inane exhibitionist of foolish and unjustified pretensions. This alteration to a literary function would facilitate many more appearances, perhaps even indicate a serious intention which is so lacking now.

With the amount of money that has been allocated for the purpose, were it administered with the least seriousness, or intelligence, or intention to fulfill the obligation, we could perhaps have a viable literary magazine, appearing frequently enough to be useful.

As the situation stands now, there is nothing, and not a word of explanation. I do not mean to suggest in the least that the money has "disappeared" - how is anyone to know? All that is evident is that there exists here a severe lack of responsibility, or stupidity. The lack of this supposed "literary supplement" for this long a time has shown that the person or persons "responsible" for SWEVEN have no conception at all of the opportunity that exists for an outlet for creative writing - they must be totally insincere, or lack the ability.

Several questions at this late date need to be answered by whoever or whatever is responsible for this sad state of affairs:

i) What has been or will be the detailed disposition of the $5,400.00 allocated for SWEVEN? How much of this is given over to paying those responsible for this lack of effort?

ii) What is the explanation for the absolute disappearance of SWEVEN? Does the editor of this phantom have any conception of what a magazine is?

Surely there is someone capable of handling such a potentially exciting possibility with creativity, responsibility and a bit of intelligence.

I hope the Editor will enlighten me with regard to this situation, if for some strange reason she does not wish these criticisms of SWEVEN's management known. Perhaps the Journal would rather I dropped the issue, so they could let it disappear from our memory? I am sure there is some absurdly simple explanation for it all Could we hear it?

Yours,
James W. Smith Arts 76.

ED. NOTE: sweven has not appeared this year for what the editors call a lack of good material. Earlier in the year we did report that there was an abundance of material, but monthly publication was never seriously considered.

The editors of sweven, Paul Gompertz and Lynette Hunter, are working on publishing plans for next term, but it still depends on the supply of material.

As for money, two years ago, by cutting corners and finding a lower cost printer, we managed to free enough to pay for sweven. If this money is not all spent on sweven, it will be used for normal Journal operations or returned to the Alma Mater Society as operating surplus.

By no means do we want to drop the issue of sweven. In fact, if you are interested in sweven, please contact the editors.

The pub

Dear Editor,

It just struck me.

The perfect name for the picnic room in the pub.

QUEEN'S PARK

Yours truly,
Yogi Bear M.P.P.

ED. NOTE: The pub is doing away with the picnic tables during the holidays.

Merry Christmas to all,
and to all a Good Night!

No, this isn't an administration attempt to muzzle Campus dissent. Nor is it the first shot in the AMS campaign to pressure the government into providing greater accessibility to post secondary education. It was the firing of a salute on the occasion of Kingston's 300th birthday.

The AMS isn't even planning to have fireworks. The major part of the campaign is a second term fee withholding which started yesterday when the accountant's office opened.

The withholding was called because, according to AMS External Affairs Commissioner Lyn Whitham, "it was the only way left for the students to show their discontent with the Davis government's apparent insensitivity to the problems of low income students. Their policies are making universities playgrounds for the rich."

For the specific demands that students are making of the Ontario government, see page eight of this issue, and read the next few weeks worth of Journals.

Queen's
Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 28

Tuesday, January 9, 1973

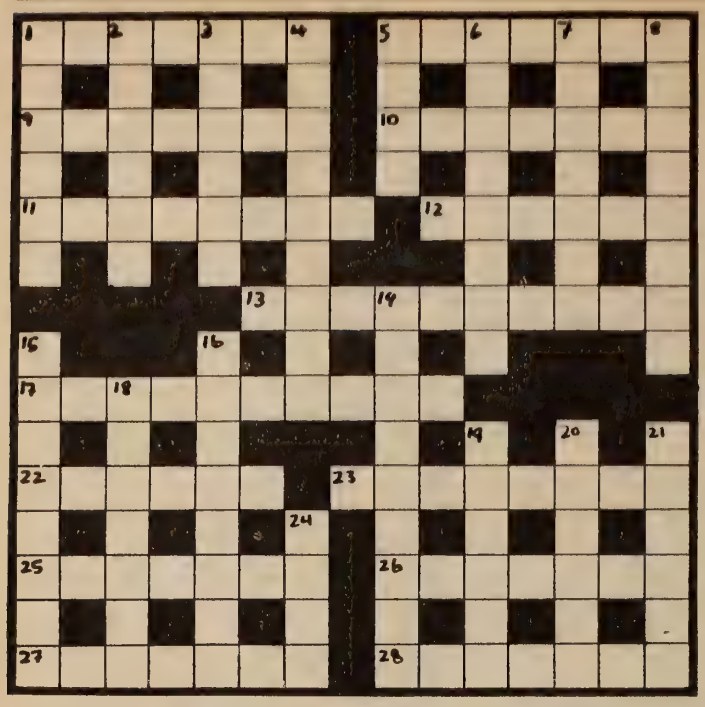
Large university centre may be off

The present Students' Union will be completely renovated, and an addition built on the present site of the Senate Office and Student Affairs Centre (163 and 165 University) if a proposal from the architectural firm of Arthur Erickson is accepted.

Keith Wagland of the firm explained the plans to the University Centre Users Committee yesterday. He said the new scheme will preclude the inclusion of a comprehensive bookstore, but would save on service and land appropriation costs. Other attractions of the redevelopment of the Union include keeping facilities in one building, a link with the Physed Centre, the elimination of a costly underground link, and better circulation.

Committee member and Dead of Law, Dr. A. Soberman called the new plan "imaginative and creative". He commented that there would be no point in moving the bookstore to a space of the same size as now, indicating that the committee "wasn't committed to putting it in anyway."

The bookstore issue seems to be a contentious issue, but a decision, will be made until costing estimates have been made.



Free buses start

The AMS, Queen's, and the PUC have made arrangements for Queen's students to ride Kingston PUC buses free between the Main and West Campuses.

This service is now in effect and lasts until April 7.

All a student need do is show his green ID card when he gets on at the designated stops. No transfers are allowed, and those getting on at other stops will have to pay cash.

The stops are (Eastbound) The south side of Union, just west of Sir John A. (Westbound) The north side of Stuart just east of University and the north side of Union just west of University.

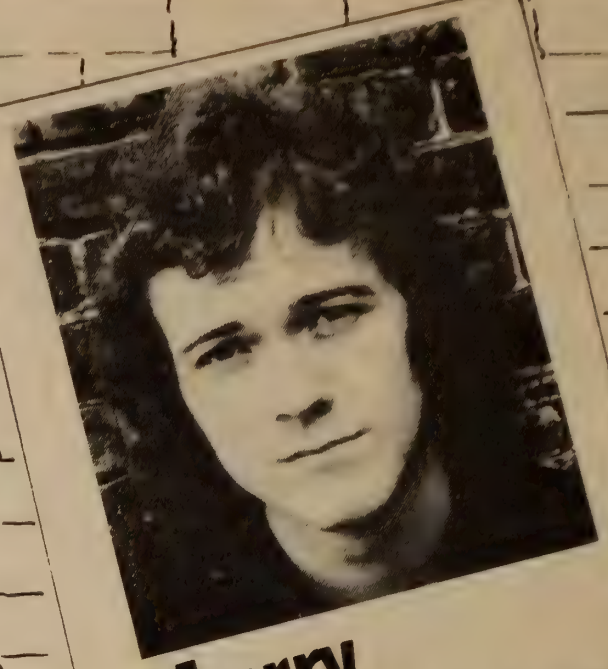
ACROSS

1. The last game of the season.
5. Casts aspersions on.
9. The Crimson Tide.
10. French song.
11. Gratified one's desires.
12. Break the news.
13. Mortician.
17. Give an organism a new home.
22. Business amalgamation.
23. Washing.
25. Type of line on ordnance map.
26. Put across an image of oneself.
27. Svelte.
28. Confused and distorted.

DOWN

1. Calm.
2. Miss Blake on Gunsmoke.
3. Source of predictions.
4. Brotherly.
5. About 2.54 cm.
6. Miss January, for instance.
7. Fuel repository.
8. Eugene Forsey and Wallace McCutcheon.
14. Making one more refined.
15. A cow can chew cud because it has these.
16. Small planet.
18. Put in order.
19. Evening meal.
20. Of a line.
21. New.
24. Brother, like Fox and Rabbit.

Solution in Friday's Paper



Family planning in Meds curriculum

Dr. Harv Haakonson, an intern from Victoria B.C. is making a coast-to-coast tour this month of all the medical schools in Canada. The purpose of the tour, sponsored by a federal grant, is to gather opinions regarding the expansion of medical student curricula in the area of family planning. The information gathered on the tour will be used at a conference of medical students in June 1973.

As well as meeting with medical students and members of family planning clinics across Canada Dr. Haakonson will be talking and showing slides on population problems, physician-patient relationships and prophylaxis as they relate to the teaching of family planning in medical schools and what this means to society.

Dr. Haakonson, who is a 1972 graduate of the University of Alberta, has been keenly interested in the population problem for sometime. Last year he was chosen as the Canadian delegate to the International Medical Student Conference which was held in New Delhi, India.

He will be visiting Queen's on Friday, January 12, 4 p.m. at Etherington Hall, where he will show slides and talk about family planning, followed by a question and answer period. Students, staff and the public are invited to attend.

Murry McLauchlan

Special guest: Michael Lewis

Tickets: $1.50 with card $2 - without

Available 10-4 John Orr Room

Sunday, Jan. 14

Grant Hall 8:30 p.m.

WANDERLUST III

I.R.C. / W.R.C.

SEMI-FORMAL

Sat. Jan. 13th

8:30 p.m.

Tickets available in John Orr Room and in meal lines.

featuring:

the OCEAN

WARREN BEATTY
and
FAYE DUNAWAY

IN

"BONNIE & CLYDE"

THURSDAY, 7:00 & 9:30 PM

DUNNING AUD., ONE DOLLAR

- CINEGUILD -

New 'device' devised

After some discussion, the Senate has approved a logo and "graphic device" for use by Queen's. The designs were proposed by Peter Dorn and the Graphic Design Committee at the November meeting of Senate. Senate members were thus given time to consider the proposed design.

There was little dissent on the design itself, the only suggestion being that the Saint Andrew's Cross be incorporated into the design in order to emphasize the Scottish background of Queen's. However, it was felt that this would produce a rather cluttered design. There was also some concern over the heraldic significance of parts of the design, notably the crown, which apparently does not correspond to any known heraldic crown. Dorn and the committee emphasized that this was deliberate, that the device was not a heraldic device and was not intended to be.

Some senators were uncertain about the proposed uses for the graphic device and the committee was then asked to make more detailed recommendations.

Queen's University

OGFs to continue for 73-74

Minister of Colleges and Universities, Jack McNie, announced on December 29 that the Ontario Graduate Fellowship Program will be continued for the 1973-74 academic year. The funding of the Program will remain at the current year's level of $3 million.

The purpose of the present O.G.F. Program is "to encourage dedicated, superior students to enrol in graduate programs in our universities and so be better able to contribute to the cultural, scientific and economic growth of Canada."

The Fellowships are intended primarily for Canadian citizens who are residents of Ontario and will be awarded to both prospective and continuing graduate students. Up to 10 per cent of new application at each university may be awarded to landed immigrants.

In the letter to university presidents, Mr. McNie noted that a new graduate scholarship program recommended by the Committee on University Affairs has yet to be considered by the Government.

For fellowships tenable in the 1973-74 academic year the deadline for submitting applications to university registrars of graduate schools is February 15, 1973. Application forms and folders gifting details of the Program will be available this month.

Open House coming in February

Queen's University has been making plans to join in the celebrations of Kingston's Tercentenary.

The most recent project is the Queen's Tercentenary Open House '73 which has been scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, February 10th and 11th. The hours of the Open House will be between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. on Saturday, and 12 noon and 4 p.m. on Sunday.

Open House '73 is supported by the AMS, the Queen's Tercentenary Committee, the Vice-Principal for Development and Information, the Alumni Association and the Secondary School Liaison Office. The intention of the project is to involve all departments, facilities, societies, and clubs at Queen's in a campus-wide display of the university's facilities, and to provide the visiting public with a 'student's eye view' of Queen's.

The program includes displays and many topical lectures planned to show the many facets to university life. Lectures will be scheduled at 30 minute intervals and are expected to be of 15 minute duration.

During Open House '73 there will be a central information depot for the distribution of programmes, maps, and minicalenders, and guides around campus to guide the visitors. In addition, Principal John J. Deutsch will host a reception for VIP's, invitation having been sent to the Provincial Minister for Colleges and Universities, members of the Queen's Board of Trustees, the M.P., the M.L.A., and the Mayor of Kingston.

Arts Gaels still wanted

Applications for Artsci Gaels are still being accepted, a spokesman for Orientation told the Journal today. He said that this was being done because a number of people were unable to hand in their applications before Christmas.

The applications will be available from, and should be submitted to, the Artsci Orientation box in the AMS Outer Office in the basement of the Union.

Deadline for applications is 5 pm on Monday, January 15.

Music department offers summer Venice course

The Music Department of Queen's University is offering its second Music in Venice program in Venice in conjunction with Queen's Summer School, from May 13 to June 23. The project is recognized by the university as part of its Intersession arrangements. Students who attend will be eligible for credit under the Bachelor of Music and General B.A. program.

The course, Studies in Baroque Music, will be under the direction of Dr. Rudolf Schnitzler, a specialist in the field of music in Northern and Central Italy during the late Renaissance and Baroque periods.

Some important Venetian libraries will be accessible to the student. As well, a basic library of pertinent scores, books, articles and tapes has been made available by the Queen's University Music Library.

Students will be requested to make their own travel and accommodation arrangements. The cost of the course is $115. Further information can be obtained by contacting Dr. Schnitzler in the Music Department (547-5783).

WELCOME BACK

We Think You Deserve a Break Today....

McDonald's®

277 Bath Road

Between Sir John A.

and Portsmouth.

Get Up and Get Away to McDonald's

Be our guest for a crisp, golden

Large

French Fries

Limit: 1 per customer
Offer expires Jan. 21, '73,
at 11 p.m.

Please cut this coupon out and bring it with you!

McDonald's®

McDonald's Restaurant

277 Bath Road

Local Initiatives Pro

Individuals find solutions to soc

INFORMATION KINGSTON

by Patricia Devitt

Need some help with your Crossword Puzzle? Just phone Information Kingston. One woman does and someone in the office always seems to come up with the right answer. Information Kingston located at 116 Wellington Street deals every day with finding out the right answer to people's questions, complaints and various needs. If the staff do not have the information at their finger tips they promise said Chris Allen, Co-Ordinator of Information Kingston "to call them back within twenty-four hours, or as soon as its humanly possible with either the correct information, or put them in contact with someone who has it."

People daily drop into or call with anything from consumer complaints, landlord-tenant queries welfare problems, drug and abortion information to questions about Kingston's Tercentenary celebrations.

Information Kingston was started with a grant for $21,000 as a Local Initiatives Project. Since its beginning in December, 1971, to help maintain its operation as an effective community organization, it has received from LIP three grant extensions making their total LIP grant $64,000. The last extension under LIP ends May 31 of this year. Having proven with a fair amount of success Information Kingston's value to the Kingston community over the past year Mr. Allen feels that "It will continue in some form or other after May 31 with funds coming possibly from the federal or provincial governments."

SPIRIT OF INFORMAL CO-OPERATION

Information Kingston began with a staff of ten researchers operating from a storefront location on Princess St. After their official opening on January 10, 1971 the initial reaction from some sections of the community was unfavourable, centering on claims by older, established agencies that they would be duplicating their services. Chris Allen states that "Our performance as an information and referral centre and our success in handling consumer complaints have proved our worth." He further states that "The initial reaction has been replaced by a spirit of informal co-operation throughout the community, with regular contributions to our newsletter from some of our former critics."

They did not have a lease for the store-front on Princess Street and had to move to their current location on Wellington Street. At the moment they are looking for another location on the main street in downtown Kingston because as Mr. Allen commented "easy accessability to the public is of prime importance to our operation."

They have now passed the experimental stage and are looking forward to becoming an established part of the community. From a staff of ten who were needed to do the basic tasks of researching local resources, assessing community needs and establishing contacts with agencies and service groups, they cut down to five members. Recently two more members were added to the staff to operate a consumer protection bureau to handle an increasing number of complex consumer complaints which they are receiving.

"Kingston has a long and undistinguished history of street agencies such as ours which have arisen spontaneously from within the community to meet the needs of specific segments of the populace. Most of them have been forced to close up shop and steal away into the night for lack of funds," stressed Mr. Allen. "This situation" he added, has left a legacy of skepticism and distrust for new agencies and was one of the major problems faced by Information Kingston when it first opened. We were immediately tarred with the same brush as our less fortunate predecessors. We have now achieved a high level of credibility through our continued level of service and the mere fact that we have survived for almost a full year."

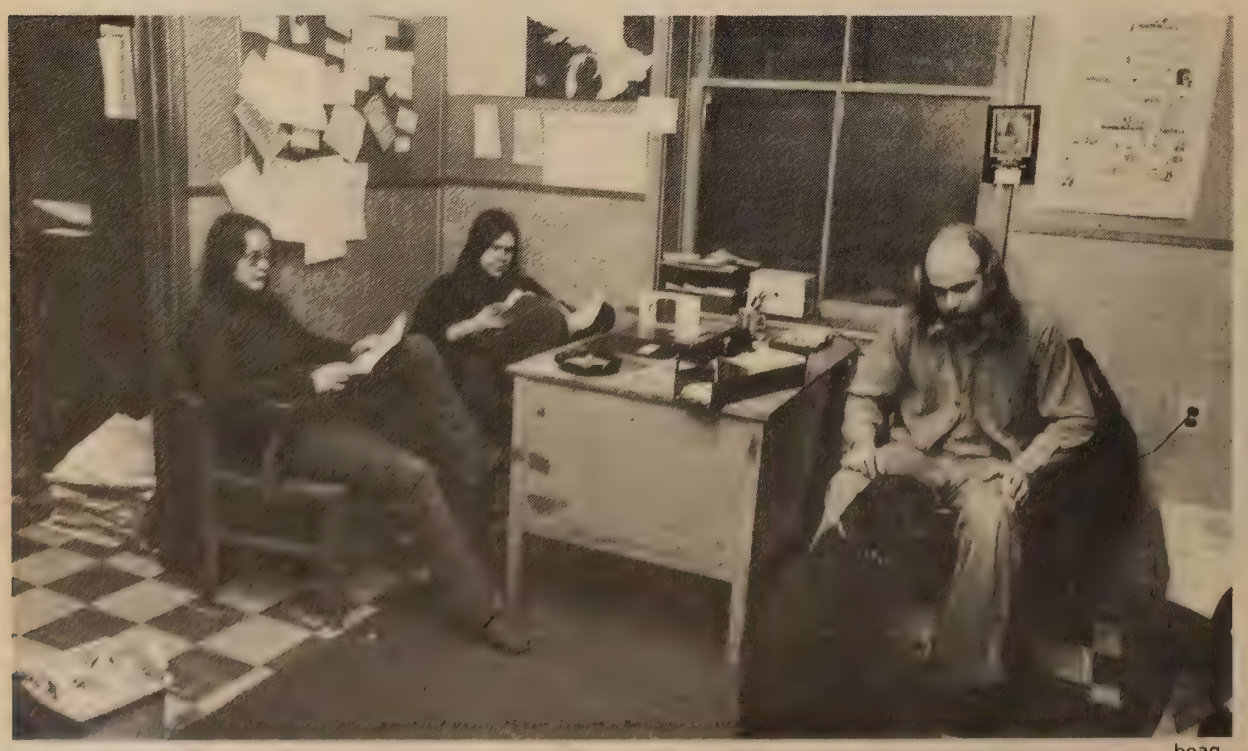
KNOWLEDGE IS POWER

One of the immediate objectives of Information Kingston is to provide up-to-date and accurate information on any subject to any person who asks for it. If the information sought is not on file or readily available, they will take the caller's name and phone number and research the question for them, providing the information within 24 hours of the original call. According to Chris Allen they wish "to improve the quality formation and advice readily avail Knowledge is power and providing it to ind to handle their own problems."

"When tenants are acquainted with Landlord-Tenant Act, for example, they their rights as guaranteed by law," said M to do so, Information Kingston will add t vocate's role, reminding third parties of

Mr. Allen explained that, "In handling so far, we have found the best tactic is to writing to managers, heads of companies behalf of our callers."

"The results have been very successfu felt. "One lone voice often receives scant but firm letter from an information ser trick."



INFORMATION KINGSTON N

From a small introductory sheet, their n a four page tabloid with a circulation o articles on consumer news, stories and groups, a library column, coming events.' and open to the public for contributions or been a continuing point of contact with the

Copies are distributed through dow agencies, libraries, and about 1,000 copies to-door by the staff. Advertisements ar merchants to help defray printing costs for "Their editorial policy," stated Mr. Al pointed out that "it must remain as unt presenting factual information for and ab

Kingston Public Library, the Volunteer Tercentenary Committee are among regul publicity is offered to any group holding sp organizations are offered a chance to intr the community. As well as appealing t newsletter serves as an informal link betw them informed of what each is doing in the

boag

Staff at Information Kingston manning the "hotline".

Photography by Peter Boag

Chri

ect practical al problems

making inndividuals.
ables them

ons of the o insist on
When asked
t in an ad-nsibilities.
complaints advocate - owners on cases," he out a polite

y does the

TTER

as become ey feature with new tter is free
s, and has

res, local uted door-rom local mple." He possible in mmunity."

Kingston
tors. Free
s and new nselves to idual, the es, to keep

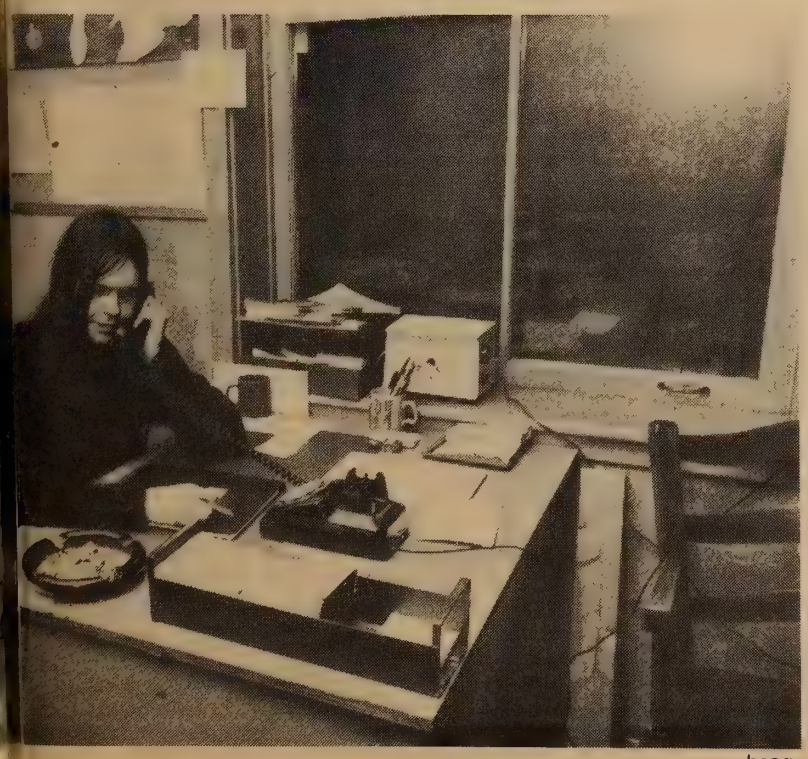
CONSUMER INFORMATION AND CONSUMER COMPLAINTS

On file at Information Kingston is information on product tests and recommendations from Consumer Report, Canadian Consumer, CSA, Consumer and Corporate Affairs, Ontario Consumer Protection Bureau and such groups as Pollution Probe. Details on warranties, comparative packaging, price surveys and ecological considerations are all part of their educational approach. "Well-informed consumers are less likely to need the second part of our program, consumer advocacy," said Mr. Allen.



LONG TERM OBJECTIVES

In the future Information Kingston would like to widen the scope of their contact to include the surrounding areas and communities on the outskirts of Kingston. Already such outlying centres as Seeleys Bay have phoned or written in complaints concerning such problems as contaminated wells.

Also, Brian Smith, Editor of the Newsletter would like to increase inter-agency collaboration possibly forming a network with other Community Information Centres throughout Ontario. "When people move to a new city they would be referred to the community organization set up in that area," commented Mr. Allen. "Changing Community Centres would be like changing bank accounts."

Mr. Allen would like to see as a future objective closer liason with government departments, acting as an objective partner for citizens through the sometimes bewildering array of Federal, provincial and municipal services. "It could, also, offer a source of feedback information for government departments," said Mr. Allen.

Mr. Allen, as Information Kingston's Co-Ordinator felt that "Local Initiative Project grants provide a type of research grant which enables individuals to find practical solutions to social problems. LIP grants are a unique experiment which lets people from within the community start their own community action groups." He felt that "Individuals who have the ideas are making them work and are putting these ideas into practice within their own communities."

- boag

, Co-ordinator, Information Kingston

New Programs

by Chris Allen, Co-Ordinator Information Kingston

Consumer Protection Bureau

Information Kingston has been handling an increasing number of complex consumer complaints. Of necessity, we have developed a degree of expertise in methods of dealing with consumer complaints and have had a good rate of success in resolving them. To this end we are proposing to set up a special branch of Info. K., operating out of the same office and utilizing I.K. staff working full-time researching, advising and processing consumer complaints. This protection bureau will seek affiliation with Consumer and Corporate Affairs, Ontario Consumer Protection Bureau and the Consumer's Association of Canada for advice and consultation. To put some teeth into the operation we will enlist the aid of members of Queen's Legal Aid and the Consumer's Interest Group, an association of Queen's law students specifically interested in the legal aspects of consumer problems.

There is no Better Business Bureau in town; the local Chamber of Commerce is too closely allied with business interests and the local chapter of the CAC does not have the resources, staff or availability to the public to be as effective as a special branch of I.K. devoted exclusively to the protection and enforcement of consumer rights.

Help Wanted

Information Kingston is starting a new program called "help wanted" - community learning exchange. The idea is not new - it has been tried successfully in the U.S. and recently in Toronto by an OFY group. The principle is simple - if you have particular skills or knowledge you would like to share, or particular skills you would like to learn, call us at 549-1073 or come and register with us. We will publish the list regularly in our newsletter under "Help Wanted" and also give it out over CKLC mornings at 11:30. If you can do any skills such as photography, dance, macrame, leatherwork, candlemaking or basic auto mechanics or want to learn how add your name to Help Wanted.

It is a great way to tap people's resources and a good way to meet your neighbours by sharing your skills. If we get enough people interested in the same subject we will try to set up workshops.

Kingston Accommodation Register

This program is aimed at helping newcomers to the Kingston area and families in need of emergency accommodation - whether through fire, eviction, relatives visiting inmates at local institutions or transients who need a place to stay overnight. In co-operation with local service agencies and landlords, we will keep an accurate and up-to-date list of rental properties which are immediately available.

For Newcomers: Finding an apartment or house in a hurry is a chaotic and trying process - reading the ads in the Whig, phoning to find out the location, price and condition of the property. The list is not intended as a substitute for the classified ads, rather as a resource tool to supplement them. Such a list will be of benefit to both landlords and prospective clients by providing an up to the minute list of just what is available, where it is, and how much the rent is.

For Emergencies: The list will enable visitors to inmates, families in distress and transients a fast way to find accommodation (at present there is no such system in Kingston.) The information will be available by phone for any individual or agency which encounters an emergency housing crisis. Such groups as Stabilize, Day Parole Centre and the Drop-In Centre for the Women's Penitentiary will be able to phone in direct for accommodation for inmate visitors.

24 Hour Service

If financially possible, Information Kingston will offer 24 hour service through telephone answering service. Callers will be able to dial our number after office hours and leave their name, number and request. These requests will be given priority every morning and requests will be answered on our call-back system as soon as the information is available. On our call-back system, any information that is not on file or readily available, whoever is on the hot line takes the caller's name and number and is responsible for finding the information and answering as soon as humanly possible; we provide "same day service" except in cases of large-scale research.

Home Remedies

Information Kingston is helping organize a new action group to help homeowners in the lower-income brackets and senior citizens. Staff will consist of five workers who have experience in the building trades and who will be available on a free labour basis.

Kingston has a high percentage of apartments in older buildings. For much-needed repairs to make some of these houses more livable during the winter months, Home Remedies will be available free for such things as repairing storm windows, fixing draughts etc. The only cost will be for the materials used in repairs.

For older members of the community, staff will be available to shovel walks, visit shut-ins and perform the small acts that make life a little easier for senior citizens. A simple task such as buying and delivering the week's groceries for an elderly couple during wet and icy weather will make life that much easier for them.

The group will also be available on a "free labour" basis for local service agencies, daycare centres and nurseries for construction or repair of existing facilities. If possible, Information Kingston and Home Remedies will share a storefront to help cut down operating costs.

hangoverdaze

Tuesday, January 9

8:00 p.m. Auditions for Drama Guild production of "Death and the Devil" by Frank Wedekind. Guildhall Theatre 233½ Princess.

9:00 p.m. Department of Film Studies presents "I Fidanzati", in Ellis Hall.

Wednesday, January 10.

8:00 p.m. The Department of Music sponsors a lecture, Patterns in Canadian History, by Dr. Helmut Kallmann, Chief of the Music Division of the National Library, in Dunning Auditorium.

8:00 p.m. Auditions for Death and the Devil (see Tuesday for info).

Thursday, January 11

7:30 p.m. Medical Sciences Lecture, "The Mode of Action of Local Anesthetics", will be presented by Dr. Ritchie in the Etherington Hall Auditorium.

7:30 p.m. The Department of History presents part of a special BBC Films Series on 100 Years of Marxism; The New Dynamic, The Theory of Revolution, The Socialist Dilemma, in Stirling D. Admission is 50c.

7:00 and 9:30 p.m. Dunning Hall flicks presents "Bonnie and Clyde".

7:30 p.m. Bridge Club meeting in the MacLaughlin Room.

7:30 p.m. Queen's Biology Society presents a panel on Nuclear Energy in Room 111 Earl Hall.

8:00 p.m. FREAKS FILM FESTIVAL: A continuous showing til midnight of a wide selection of shorts -- war, igloos, etc. Admission $1.00. Receive one GIANT COOKY. At the Guildhall Theatre, 233½ Princess.

9:00 p.m. Dept. of Film Studies presents "Singing in the Rain", in Ellis.

Friday, January 12

11:00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m. Nursing Science Backrub Day or Rub-a-Dub-Dub in the Polson Room. Free backrubs-get them while they're hot. (strong?)!

8:00 p.m. G.S.S. film club presents "The Birthday Party" in Ellis Hall.

Saturday, January 13

Evening Wanderlust III in Leonard Field. Tickets available in the meal lines.

Sunday, January 14

8:30 p.m. Murray McLauchlan in Grant Hall with special guest Michael Lewis. Tickets with concert card $1.50, without $2.00 are available this week in the John Orr Room from 10 to 4.

CFRC-FM

Thursday, January 11th

8:00 DUTCH SOLOISTS AND ENSEMBLES. A program of chamber music from Holland, featuring this evening, a selection of songs by Ton de Leeuw, Purcell and others.

Friday, January 12th

8:00 THE LIVING CLASSICS. A concert from the International Queen Elizabeth Contest for Piano, 1972, presenting music by Debussy, Schumann, Bartok, Scriabin, and Chopin.

Saturday, January 13th

8:00 MUSIC CANADA The Toronto Repertory Ensemble, with Marta Hidy, violin, and Leo Burkim, piano, play works by Kennis, Morawetz, Block, Bartok, and Kodaly.

Sunday, January 14th

5:00 THE CLEVELAND ORCHESTRA IN CONCERT Rafael Frubeck de Burgos conducts the orchestra in Brahms' Symphony No. 2 in D, and the Ballet Music from "The Three-Cornered Hat" by Falla.

AT AGNES

Jan. 9 exhibition of prints of Lichtenstein and Johns presented until the 28th.

Jan. 9 exhibition of sculpture by Colette Whiten presented until the 28th.

Jan. 15, 7:30 p.m. Teachers of Art in the schools of Kingston and district are being invited to an Open House evening at the Art Centre.

BARS

401: The Newcomers
Manor: Julie Lynn
Pub: O'Brian Six

classified

WARM, QUIET ROOM. Close to Queen's. 196 Union. Men.

SUSAN J, RICK J, Keven VanK, Ann D, Anne C, Janet Mac M, Mike K, John B, Chris B, and any others interested in writing this year's essay for Tricolor are asked to come to the first meeting Jan. 10 7 pm in the office in the basement of the Union.

ARTS FESTIVAL
workshops need helpers & demonstrators in macrame batik clay
Jan. 24-27
8 p.m. to midnight
contact:
Carol Rogers
544-1737
or 544-9196

FOUND BLACK LAB (or mostly one) on Union near the Library last Thursday AM, Male 1½-2 yrs. Collar mark but no collar, He is at the Humane Society.

TOO BAD about the cup.

DI: HOW DO you say yes to a barfly?

Delegates wanted to conference at Victory Burlesque on weekend of 19-21 January. Males only. Apply to Pamela L.

the ARTS FESTIVAL (Jan. 24-27)
still needs MUSICIANS

Warm up a cold January evening by rocking and rolling with musical friends.

If you're interested in playing in the Arts Festival, contact Hildi Adelhem

at 542-1816

or leave a note in AMS Office

FOR SALE

picnic tables, previously used in the Pub

$17.50 ea.

CONTACT: Reg Rickaby

542-6390

at the art centre

Jan. 9 exhibition of prints of Lichtenstein and Johns presented until the 28th.

Jan. 9 exhibition of sculpture by Colette Whiten presented until the 28th.

Jan. 15, 7:30 p.m. Teachers of Art in the schools of Kingston and district are being invited to an Open House evening at the Art Centre.

wanted

DELEGATE

for

O.F.S. Conference on Women

January 19 - 21

Apply in writing to External Commissioner, Lyn Whitham, AMS Office by Jan. 12-73.

NURSING SCIENCE

backrub day

POLSON ROOM

Friday Fri. Jan. 12 11 a.m. - 4 p.m.

Queen's University — Music Department

PATTERNS IN CANADIAN MUSIC HISTORY

LECTURER: Dr. Helmut Kallmann

Chief of music division of the National Library

Dunning Auditorium Wednesday
8:00 p.m. January 10th

admission free

FREE!

room in Grad House

VALUE $660

for: Social Committee Chairman
Graduate Student Society

duties include: Booking private parties at Grad House Managing "beverage" stocks

apply: Ralph Lortie 544-9914
Doug Pritchard 547-3198

AVAILABLE IMMEDIATELY to any interested grad student

NOTICE
SNOW REMOVAL
QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY
PARKING REGULATIONS

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY PARKING REGULATIONS STATE IN PART:

"FROM DECEMBER 1, 1972 TO MARCH 31, 1973 INCLUSIVE, VEHICLES PARKED ON THE CAMPUS BETWEEN MIDNIGHT AND 7.00 A.M. WILL BE TOWED AWAY IF THEY IMPEDE SNOW REMOVAL OPERATIONS"

FOR THE LOVE OF MUSIC CLASSICAL MUSICIANS

who would like to share their music-making with us-

THE ARTS FESTIVAL

CONTACT: B. CHOWN
(NOW) 544-1462

Your X-Mas Present

FREE
BUS SERVICE TO WEST CAMPUS

The AMS, Queen's, and the PUC have made arrangements for Queen's students to ride Kingston PUC buses free between the Main and West Campuses.

This service is now in effect and lasts until April 7.

All a student need do is show his green ID card when he gets on at the designated stops. No transfers are allowed, and those getting on at other stops will have to pay cash.

The stops are (Eastbound) The south side of Union, just west of Sir John A. (Westbound) The north side of Stuart just east of University and the north side of Union just west of University.

letters

French studies

The Editor,

We were very pleased to read your article (December 1st) on our recent "French Report" concerning the place of French-Canadian Studies in University French Departments in English Canada.

It is indeed good to know that Queen's French Department is thinking of increasing their number of French-Canadian literature courses. Let's hope such a move is taken, and soon, for its French-Canadian program is at the present time too restricted, despite Professor Ireland's sincere efforts to begin expansion of French-Canadian Studies.

We must however take issue with Dr. Ireland, chairman of the French Department, when he states that our figures for Queen's (3 literature courses out of 27, with no courses on or oriented around French-Canadian French) "look worse than they really are" as every course taught in French, a "Canadian language", has a "certain Canadian content".

Dr. Ireland seems to have not understood a very important principle explained in the Report: the French taught to English Canadians must be Canadian; it must apply to our North American social and geographical reality. We must no longer teach Canadians the Eiffel-Tower French whereby students learn about French cuisine, sports, clothing, yet are virtually incapable of applying their knowledge of French to our own continent. Practicality must win out over exoticism. We should no more expect to teach English-Canadians European French than immigrants British English. The cultural identity of Quebec must be respected. Students of French in English Canada would then, hopefully have a relevant and useful command of the French language which would enable them to converse with their French speaking compatriots.

Dr. Ireland states his fear that French-Canadian literature might be studied "instead of, or to the exclusion of the study of metropolitan French". It would appear that Professor Ireland did not read the "French Report" conscientiously as we drew up a model programme of offerings in French and French-Canadian literature. We also suggested that students should be obliged to take courses in these two areas, while still being able to specialize in one of them. The sixteen specialists from Universities all over Canada who signed the report to signify their agreement with its principles agreed that to be able to specialize in French-Canadian literature or in French literature, a program of 13 courses in French-Canadian studies and 16 in French studies would be desirable (or a ratio close to this proportion). Although it would be quite normal to have 2 or 3 courses in French-Canadian literature in a French Department of an American or a British University, such a proportion is just not adequate for a University in the Canadian academic scene.

Finally, Dr. Ireland adds that French-Canadian culture must not separate itself from the great literary tradition of France and that "French-Canadian culture is a continuation and a part of that tradition". If such was in fact the case, if French-Canadian literature was indeed a mere branch or extension of French literature, Queen's present program would adequately represent French Canada. But seeing that the imaginative mind of French Canada has been creating, for at least 200 years, an original culture that is distinct from other French-speaking countries, it is evident that French-Canadian literature and civilization should be studied in their own right as a self containing system of esthetic and thematic values. Despite the fact that Dr. Ireland does not seem to recognize that the imbilical cords between us and our former "mother countries" have long since been severed, he is open to reasonable expansion in this area. The teaching of Canadian literature will not be held back by administrators or others who do not recognize the growing and reasonable pressure for adequate representation of Canadian Studies. Canadian French Professors will have to realize that it is their duty, along with the teaching of French literature and civilization, to explore, codify, research and make accessible to students the dynamic body of knowledge created by the French-speaking inhabitants of Canada.

Yours sincerely,
Sinclair Robinson
Donald Smith
Assistant Professors
of French,
Carleton University.

Weather or not

Dear Editor,

The Journal should always be aware of its profound local, national, and international, indeed universal influence. It is your moral responsibility not to abuse that power. You should be aware of the possible effects of your demands, and you be responsible for those effects. By making an ill conceived demand for "the return of reasonable summer weather" in Volume One Hundred, No. 25, the Journal has subjected the entire Queen's community to a vile and inconvenient summer thunderstorm. As the Journal office is situated in the bowels of the earth, you are perhaps protected from the harsh reality that we must face in the streets. It is your responsibility to face that reality and to realize the hardship that you have inflicted in your trusting readers. We urge you to admit your error and to do what you can to remedy the situation as soon as possible. Please give us back winter.

Sincerely
Addy II

ED NOTE: Us, make a mistake? Never! Were you outside last night. It was ten below and windy -- very vile and most inconvenient.

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 28
Tues., Jan. 9, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Patricia Devitt
Martin Jones
News: Sue de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
Backpage: Bob Mutrie
Photos: Pete Boag

And special thanks to Helen who doesn't think the ads will fit; the Bobsie Twins, who were back by popular demand to do da daze; Sue who got trimmed on her way up in the ranks and got lost on the way back; CAR who did an X-Word; Lee who did the pics; and Peter who came in and did nothing. As for those who are still on vacation...! Oh, and goodnight Jennifer, wherever you are.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Students' Union, Queen's University. Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

GRADUATING?

If you had your grad photo taken at Wallace Berry Studios before Nov 22 it will be included in Tricolor 73. A list of all such students including their name, degree and subject will be placed in the outer AMS Office this week. Please check to see that you are listed, and that your listing is correct. Any errors must be reported to the Tricolor Office by Friday this week.

If you don't help,

The poor Little Journal will go to bed hungry....

Do you care? The Journal Foster Plan is sure you do. For as little as one or two hours a week, you can help put our needy little paper through life. Please care! Send or bring your copy, ideas, opinions, pictures, prejudices, insults, effort, expertise, and services to:

Journal Foster Plan
Basement, Students' Union, 547-5540
Sunday and Wednesday are nice nights to come!

Join other students across Ontario; show your concern about the future of education

Negotiations with the government have failed We are demanding that the government:

- Clarify its position on higher education for 1973-74;
- Provide greater accessibility through grants under OSAP;
- Lower the OSAP age of independence;
- Make OSAP open to part-time students.

THE AMS URGES YOU TO

WITHHOLD FEES

Queen's Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 29
Friday, January 12, 1973

Flahiff

MURRAY McLAUCHLAN
His new album says it all

From Murray McLauchlan's New Album

on TRUE NORTH Records and Tape DISTRIBUTED BY COLUMBIA RECORDS OF CANADA, LTD

(TN-9)

You can hear him!

Sunday, Jan. 14, Grant Hall, 8:30 pm

Tickets:

$1.50 (with card) or $2. (without) Available 10-4 in John Orr and at door

Social Sciences complex completed this year

By Raj Anand

The Arts-Social Sciences complex under construction at present will be completed before the end of 1973, Peter Stokes, Secretary of the project's Users Committee, said last Tuesday.

Its completion will mark the realization of an idea originally put forward in the spring of 1969. At that time, the Board of Trustees approved the use of the playing field area behind Victoria Hall for the construction of eight towers, each ten stories high, as well as a garage in the centre. Dean Watts (Arts and Science) and the Department of Physical Plant also agreed, but then the objection was raised that the playing field should not be removed.

Finally it was decided that the complex would be built on Lower Alfred Street, between Union and University Crescent. A low building, of five stories rather than ten, was agreed on; it would ensure that the existing structures would not become wall-bound. It was proposed that a sub-centre be built within the complex.

Protracted negotiations with the city followed. Building on lower Alfred Street meant blocking off the street at Union and taking out a parking lot. Eventually, however, the project was approved by all parties concerned.

The Politics Department Building Committee, headed by Ned Franks, then invited other departments to enter the project. Franks had gone through the process of hiring an architect for the building of Elrond College and "was aware of the possibilities available for the porposed complex."

The architect who was hired is Ron Thom, who designed the Trent University campus as well as Massey College at the University of Toronto.

An Arts-Social Sciences complex Users Committee heads the project. Its chairman is Dean Watts. There are eighteen members on the committee, which is further subdivided into sub-committees.

At any one time, there are usually about three students among the eighteen members. They do not represent specific faculties, as the others do; they are appointed by the ASUS. These students have played a large part in the planning of the project from the beginning. Val Traversy and Ted Parnell, two of the original members, got the idea of a university centre going. Janet Rodgers, a later member, proposed the concept of a sub-centre of the university centre within the Social Sciences complex. "In general," said secretary Stokes of the committee, "the students have contributed most to the planning of the more student-orientated areas, such as the sub-centre lounge, dining room, and reading room."

Present plans call for several departments of the Faculty of Arts and Science, as well as other departments, to occupy the complex. These include the departments of Economics, Business, Politics, Geography, Music, the School of Public Administration, Faculty of Law, Department of Extension, and the offices of the Faculty of Arts and Science. In addition, several services will be offered in the sub-centre.

The central theme of the design of the complex is according to Stokes, "vertical and lateral communication." It has great mobilty because of its division into several compartments or "modules". (The "A" module, for example, is the completed one across from the present offices of the Arts faculty.) Each department can then occupy a number of modules, consistent with its needs. The number of floors will vary from one part of the complex to another, and a department can locate itself on different floors of different modules. This, in turn, is possible because the modules will be interconnected; furthermore, the complex will share common stairwells with Macdonald, Richardson and Dunning Halls. "The building is designed to be flexible, in the event of sudden growth; alteration in allocation can be made," said Stokes.

As a result, a student in the Social Sciences may have several, or all, of his classes under the same roof. His needs will be served by lecture, theatres, faculty offices, and a social sciences library, as well as the sub-centre. "The building will be highly utilizable, as well as providing a basic core for the social sciences student." The Music building being constructed south of Watson Hall, while not physically linked to the social sciences complex, is considered to be a part of the project.

One interesting aspect of the complex will be the sub-centre's "student street" on the second floor. Branching off from a wide corridor on that floor will be a cafeteria, lounge, reading room, bookstore, and computing facilities. There will be "meeting" and "happening" places, including a stage in a large room.

Stokes told the Journal that the buildings now under construction represent only "phase one" of the project, but that "phase two" is less likely now than when it was originally proposed. He said, however, that "if there is the need in the future, the modules will be extended to the north and west. Peter Schell, of the office of Space Allocations, noted that the future use of the buildings which will be vacated will be reviewed, but that all of them would continue to be used.

For the immediate future, phasing of occupancy will begin later this year. Different parts of the complex will be completed at different times. "The "A" module," Stokes said, "could be open in a month, but it is not to the advantage of the departments too move in as soon as each module is completed." By the end of the year, however, full-scale occupancy of the largest and newest building on campus will have begun.

perry

Bookstore in Centre only an idea

By Susan de Stein

Tim Garrard, a member of the Interim Bookstore Committee, when questioned on the new porposal that would include a comprehensive bookstore in the new university centre, clarified the position of the Task Force. He said, "The Task Force did not say that the bookstore should be included in the complex." He said however that "we did think it a feasible idea providing that it did not place the owner of the bookstore in a bad financial position."

Garrard commented that the Task Force was "not equipped with the essential knowledge to make a hard business forecast." The Interim Bookstore Committee, whose chairman is Prof. C. Pullen of the English department, has been set up in order to study the financial aspects of the proposal.

In giving his reasons for supporting the bookstore move, Garrard said that he believes that "a location in the complex, be it across the street from the union, would be the best site for the bookstore." A location in the complex would "provide the most accessibility" he said adding that "from the commercial point of view, there would be a high volume of traffic in this area nd the bookstore would benefit."

"What we would like to see at Queen's is a comprehensive bookstore, which is not what we have now," Garrard commented. He pointed out that his would entail more space than is now available and would probably require new administrative machinery. The new location would open up the possibility of a better lay-out he added, giving the bookstore a fresh start, if the location were moved.

There are many variables that have to be taken into consideration should the bookstore be included in the university complex, he added.

Mr. Frank Gauchie, Manager of Technical Supplies, commented that "we would support the move, as long as it was economically feasible." He also pointed out that he operates on recommendations that are made to him by the governing board of Technical Supplies. "I will go along with their recommendations," he added.

He also commented that an effort to make Technical Supplies more than a store supplying the academic needs of the university has been made and extra books and materials are now available.

If a bookstore were to be included in the complex Gauchie felt that it would have to be subsidized someway and "probably by the university."

He also stated that the present facilities at Tech Supplies were adequate, but that further expansion in Clark Hall could improve the bookstore service.

Skiing takes a new turn

Cross-country skiing's the new craze. Everything about it is different. From the clothes you wear right down to your skis. Just the sport for a girl like you. One who's eager to try something new.

Tampax tampons give you the freedom to be that kind of girl. They're worn internally to give you dependable protection. There are no bulky pads to chafe or irritate. And nothing can show. Not even under your slim cross-country knickers.

With Tampax tampons, there's never a reason not to ski — downhill or cross-country.

The internal protection more women trust

DEVELOPED BY A DOCTOR
NOW USED BY MILLIONS OF WOMEN

MADE ONLY BY
CANADIAN TAMPAX CORPORATION LTD., BARRIE, ONTARIO

ARTSCI 76

Year Crests and Buttons are on sale now in Leonard and Ban Righ Meal Lines.

Crests: $2.50

Buttons: $ .25

ONTARIO

SELECT COMMITTEE ON ECONOMIC AND CULTURAL NATIONALISM

The Legislative Assembly of Ontario has established a committee to enquire into "the current status of information and opinion on Economic and Cultural Nationalism in Canada".

Without limiting the scope of comment, at this time the Committee wishes to ascertain in particular the views of the public concerning land ownership by non residents, foreign ownership in the resource industries, and foreign nationals on the faculties on institutions of higher learning.

The Committee will hold public hearings in Ottawa on Wednesday, January 17, from 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon and from 2:00 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the International Ballroom, Section B of the Skyline Hotel. A second hearing will be held in the Alumni Theatre of Carleton University from 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon, and from 2:00 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Thursday, January 18, 1973. Persons interested in making a presentation to the Committee should appear there at the appointed time. Further information may be obtained from the Clerk of the Committee, Room 104, Main Parliament Building, Queen's Park, Toronto. Telephone: 416-965-1406.

John A. Holtby
Clerk

THE CANADIAN MINERAL INDUSTRY EDUCATION FOUNDATION

offers

POSTGRADUATE SCHOLARSHIPS

in

MINING ENGINEERING

to GRADUATES in any branch of
ENGINEERING or APPLIED SCIENCE

$4,500 - 9 months

PLUS Planned Summer Employment

For information contact:
The Secretary,
Canadian Mineral Industry Education Foundation,
P.O. Box 91, Commerce Court West, Toronto, Ont.

CLOSING DATE 15 MARCH, 1973

What happened to Appraisal 72?

By Jerry Buck

Whatever happened to Appraisal 72?

This is not meant to be a diatribe but rather a personal observation on the fate of Appraisal 72.

Great ideas are often lost in the morass of red tape that serves to perpetuate what I call the modified "General Bullmoose" theory (i.e. what was good enough in the past is good enough for the present; - The shortfall in this philosophy is that it tends to perpetuate systems as package deals. The particular system which appraisal 72 dealt with is Queen's University from the academic perspective. Where appraisal 72 floundered was in the administrative echelon. As a "Spearchucker" I tend to view the present situation as the skirmish stage of a protracted and continuing re-evaluation of Queen's academic system in light of the rapidity of transition which our Society is undergoing.

A brief recapitulation of events to date indicated that the original study opened up Pandora's box of problems which were collated and dissenurated as Recommendations contained in Appraisal 72.

Both the Heads of Departments Committee and the Curriculum Committee are attempting to resolve the question posed in Appraisal 72. Those recommendations which involved the least disruption of the ongoing system met with approval. Not all of the recommendations have been either implemented or rejected. That's the stage we are at. The crux of the problem is to determine how each Department views Appriasal 72 from their particular perspective. The elliptical approach of having Appraisal 72 referred to committees for action without garnering specific imput from each Department doomed Appraisal 72 because no one omnibus formula could be defined to implement certain recommendations for all constituents.

Any re-structuring of the academic system to implement Appraisal 72 recommendations must ultimately be carried out in the various departments. With this thought in mind and fearing that procrastination and a certain reluctance to debate nebuluos points which can not be susbstantiated without specific input from all Departments a motion was tabled at the faculty board meeting 8 December 72, which would require Departments to submit views to that board in April 73. A consensus of opinion appeared to indicate that the responsibility lay with the respective committee and would only by time consuming and a make work project for the Departments. I agree with these points, however I doubt if anyone thought that critical analysis and debate could be possible unless it was known how the recommendations were viewed by the Departments.

Of course the committees should make the final recommendations for implementation or rejection and if required critical thought and debate within the faculty board; no one would but this as procedurally and democratically realistic.

The new year will see Appraisal 72 in a new light if at all only if positive steps are taken to ensure that it is not lost in committee and that input from the Departments will provide a rational basis upon which to determine the feasibility of implementing any of the recommendations.

The faculty committees have shown both interest and inovation in regard to Appraisal 72. In light of the reduction in the number of students applying to Universities for admission and the question of financing post secondary education. It could well be that Queen's emphasis on academic excellence will be of increasing importance in the future. And now a brief commercial-what happens to Apprisal 72 is important, what fails to happen could prove to be even more important. If you are interested in your University, contact your D.S.C. representative, organize faculty student discussion ensure that your Department has input: TUUM EST: Have a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

letters

Clarification

Dear Editor:

Your Tuesday headline "Large University Centre may be off" seems to have created some confusion. In fact, the Users have not made many changes in their list of recommended facilities. Because of the uncertainty about the bookstore, the Users' Committee asked the architects to propose approaches to two problems:

(1) a Centre (including renovated Union) which would include all the facilities we now propose, except a 20,000 square foot bookstore.

(2) a Centre (again including renovated Union) which would include all the facilities we now propose, including a 20,000 square foot bookstore.

The architect proposed that in case (1), the new space of almost 40,000 square feet could be created (without high-rise) by northward extension of the present Union. As your Tuesday article reports, this imaginative scheme has some strong functional and financial attractions. In case (2), the new space of 60,000 square feet (40,000 + 20,000) would have to be created across the street. The bookstore is the only facility included in the second scheme but not in the first; and the first scheme could accommodate a small bookstore.

The Users find the northward extension attractive in several respects. However, when we studied the bookstore last year, we felt that a bookstore was an attractive component in a Centre, and we do not now think we should close the door on a bookstore in the Centre without letting the Interim Bookstore Committee report.

It should be emphasized that the architects' proposals are really studies to provide the Users' with convincing answers to questions about the real usefulness and costs of linking buildings and renovating the Union as part of the development of a New University Centre.

Yours sincerely,
Dan Norman

Queen's Journal

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Patricia Devitt
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Sue de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National desk: Bob Mutrie

Special credits: Ann, Susan, Elizabeth, Helen, Jane, Raj, Morris, Cupott, Lee, Bob, Peter and dutyman Dave Wood.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Students' Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

Queen's will take "no punitive action" - withholding on

There will be no trust fund into which students may pay their second term tuition fees for the duration of the current fee withholding campaign, AMS External Affairs Commissioner Lyn Whitham announced Wednesday. She said that such a fund (administered by a chartered accountant or trust company) was "financially out of the question" as it would cost somewhere near $1500.

This, however will not affect the university's position with students who are withholding their fees. Ms. Whitham said she had been assured Thursday by Queen's Principal John Deutsch that the university would " 'take no punitive action' ", and would release student award cheques without requiring arangements being made to pay outstanding fee accounts.

"Dr. Deutsch has indicated that he fully supports our cause and endevours in the area of student aid," Ms. Whitham said.

In addition, she reported that he was receptive to the idea of not collecting the February 1 late payment fee of $15. "He said he would bring it up at the next meeting of the Board of Trustees."

(University regulations provide for late payment fee to be assessed at the end of January and a further $10 at the end of February. After that, the university will withhold academic information of any student owing money.)

Ms. Whitham said the fee withholding is to show the concern of Queen's students with government policy in the financing of the post-secondary education and especially its cutbacks in the OSAP programme.

"In a broader sense, we are protesting what appears to be government policy of closing university education to those in lower income groups, she said.

"Specifically demanding that the Davis government state definitely its policy for the 1973-74 academic year; return the loan ceiling for OSAP to its previous level of $600; lower the age of independence (from parental income for student aid) to 21; and make provisions in the programme for aid to part-time students."

The demands, passed at the last AMS meeting, included the rollback of tuition increases instituted last spring. Ms. Whitham said the motion passed was one sent out by the Ontario Federation of Students, but "we aren't emphasizing the rollback in our (AMS) demands because we don't believe it is the most important issue, and more importantly, it is misrepresenting the intentions of the students.

"Surely, the most pressing issue is accessibility and we aren't a selfish interest group just out to get our $100 back. It would be naive to presume that the tuition will be decreased."

"The fee withholding will not provide students with direct political clout," she emphasized, and people of Ontario that Queen's students are concerned with the future of education, and that the student awards programme as it presently exists is more of a deterrent to a university education."

All that the government is doing with its cutbacks in education is "limiting enrollment to those who can afford it," she continued. "The onus is on the governmnet to reveal what its policy for higher education is."

The OFS executive has met with both Premier Davis and the Minister of Colleges Jack McNie a number of times, said Ms. Whitham, but always "with no effect. Oh, they did say that tuition would not go up this year and that they were sympathetic, but... they certainly gave the impression that they doubted out sincerity."

The campaign will swing into full steam next week when members of the AMS Outer Council and others will be visiting residences talking about the issues and the reasons for the withholding.

York students win cheques

..TORONTO (LNS)--David Slater, President of York University announced late Thursday night that his administration had given in to the demands of students occupying the registrar's office, and release OSAP cheques without requiring payment of second term tuition fees, and that it would waive penalty charges for late payment of tuition.

TORONTO--Students at York University are occupying the student award office on the main campus, and the registrar's office at the Glendon Campus (Thursday afternoon) demanding that the University release OSAP cheques to students without requiring that they pay immediately any outstanding fees. The students are also demanding that all penalty charges for the late payment of fees be waived.

Glendon student president Dave Multon said the students took the action because the "university's action is jeopardizing our fee strike."

York President David Slater (former Queen's Dean of Grad Studies) said the university is demanding payment because it is government policy. He cited a document produced by the Department of University Affairs in 1969 which said tuition had first claim on any student aid money. Slater said it "would be against the interests of the students for us to run against confirmed Government policy."

(Most universities, including Queen's, are releasing the cheques with no demands for payment.

Students vowed their occupation would be indefinite, and university spokesmen say there are no plans for eviction of the occupiers.

Western threatens fee withholders

LONDON--At the University of Western Ontario, students are being asked to pay second term fees (or make satisfactory arrangements) before OSAP cheques are released.

The university does not regard a trust fund set up by the Western Student Council as "satisfactory".

Council president Bob Stikeman said Tuesday that "we are making an effort to participate in the action" and that a few students had deposited their fees into the trust fund.

He complained about the reaction of the administration at Western to the withholding saying that it had cancelled a request for a list of students owing fees to which the Council had planned to mail information.

The President of Western Robin Mathews at one point threatened to deregister students who refused to pay their second term fees. He has made no further statement on that threat. The Western fee office reported Wednesday that fee payments are running well ahead of previous years, but pointed out that the usual time for payment lasts about two weeks.

A Western administration official told The Journal that the university was basing its action on the fact that it "sees the fee withholding as an inneffective way to protest" not because it did not sympathaze with student demands.

When asked why Western had chosen to follow an old policy of not releasing OSAP cheques until a student had paid his fees in full while a number of other universities were not making this requirement, the only answer was "no comment."

SHAW puts it all together!

Now you have academic qualifications . . . but still lack practical business skills. You realize it takes more than a degree and nerve to get past that first job interview. Think seriously about the other half of your education . . . with a Shaw Career Course. Become a Legal Secretary, a Medical Secretary or an Executive Secretary. The ABC Course (Accelerated Business Course) is a fast secretarial Course designed specifically for the University graduate or student. Just 6 months . . . ½ the time it would normally take. Don't forget the Taylor Fashion Merchandising Course for that career in the Fashions of Tomorrow.

A Shaw Career Course could make the BIG difference

DROP IN THE MAIL TODAY!

☐ Show me how "Shaw puts it all together".

NAME:_____

ADDRESS:_____

PHONE:_____ AGE:_____

EDUCATION:_____

SHAW COLLEGES
ADMISSIONS OFFICE
2436 Yonge Street
Toronto 12, Ontario • 481-6477
3 Colleges in Metro

1715

GRADUATING?

If you had your grad photo taken at Wallace Berry Studios before Nov. 22 it will be included in Tricolor 73. A list of all such students including their name, degree and subject will be placed in the AMS Outer Office this week. Please check to see that you are listed, and that your listing is correct. Any errors must be reported to the Tricolor Office by 5 p.m. today.

the HOUSING LOTTERY is coming!

GRANT HALL

JANUARY 24th

8 p.m.

- The AMS housing list will be established by lot
- Entry forms will be available only at the door
- Draw at 8:30 p.m.

Part-time waiters & waitresses

Due to business, Brown Steak House requires more staff Must be neat in appearance

Apply in person
Capri Motor Hotel
271 Princess St.

wanted
THEMES FOR THE SC.'74 SCIENCE FORMAL
$10 prize for best theme to be chosen by Jan. 12th, 1973
all submissions should be sent to:
Science Formal Committee Eng.Society Office Clark Hall
BEFORE JAN. 12th, 1973

the ARTS FESTIVAL (Jan. 24-27)

still needs MUSICIANS

Warm up a cold January evening by rocking and rolling with musical friends.

If you're interested in playing in the Arts Festival, contact Hildi Adelhem

at 542-1816

or leave a note in AMS Office

ARE YOU AFRAID OF SNAKES?

Some of you may recall that last year two psychology students ran a program to help co-eds who were afraid of harmless snakes to overcome this fear. For the most part, it was very successful and we expect to publish the study this year in "Behavior Therapy". However, there were a few questions left unanswered by this project, which we plan to investigate over the next six weeks.

If you are afraid of snakes and would like to overcome this fear, in addition to making a contribution to the understanding of anxiety-related problems, we would appreciate hearing from you. The program will involve several 45-minute sessions over 4 weeks in January-February as well as two brief assessments one before and one after treatment. We would need you to come regularly and make up missed sessions.

If you are interested in this project please call Donna Polgrain (546-6103) or Joan Boutilier (544-0281) at around suppertime, as SOON as possible.

newsbriefs

Commerce Society reports

Queen's Commerce Society is sending a delegation to the Canadian Conference in Winnipeg. This is sponsored by the University of Manitoba, the federal government and a large number of businesses. This conference will last three days and will cover university-student business affairs. Papers will be presented on twenty-five major topics. Thirty-six business schools will be participating.

Four Queen's representatives will be presenting a paper on course evaluations, their purposes, and what they prove. These four are Professor Lawrence, acting as faculty advisor, John Telgmann, Bruce Hopkins, and Bob Rollwagen.

The results of the findings of these surveys will be sent to businesses, and the conference itself will be covered by Financial Post and the Globe and Mail.

This is the first conference of its kind in Canada.

On the entertainment side, Commerce is planning on having a variety night. Those interested see your Commerce year social convenors.

Beware of the Super-Stag coming in January.

The Course Evaluations are soon to be published. This will be done again for the second term courses in the middle of the term. These evaluations are done earlier than usual so that Profs can improve their courses before the end of the term, and that this time period will free students from feeling that their remarks will influence their marks.

For those interested in the Snowball Week Scupture, see Harry Ort.

A student-Prof lunch is being planned for this month, in the McLaughlin Room in the Union. The cost of entry is 25 cents and will be held from 11:30 to 1:30. Drop-in and talk.

To get Commerce spirit together in a group, the second annual banquet will be held with Eric Kierans as guest speaker. The date set is March 7. The banquet will include a pre-dinner bar, and informal discussion with the speaker.

A Queen's open house will be held on February 11th and 12th. Roy Wood and Rick Chown will be setting up displays for anyone interested. This is to allow high school students and citizens to talk to Commerce students about courses, subjects . . .There is a possibility that films will be shown to show problems that businesses face.

Ending off the year will be the Commerce formal on March 17. Commerce is aiming at getting students from all years out. This year's formal may be less formal than in previous years.

News from Meds Society

This weekend, a combined sport and social event will take place at the University of Ottawa. All medical schools are invited, and the purpose is to meet students from these schools. This idea was initiated two years ago by Queen's.

Dr. Harve Haakonson, a representative of Canada at the seminars on Family Planning held in New Delhi, India, is coming on Friday to speak.

Further sports news is the med student-faculty skating party scheduled for February 10th in the Queen's arena.

TAK needs volunteers!

Telephone Aid Kingston (TAK) will be opening its lines on February 1, 1973, and it needs student volunteers to man the phones.

TAK is more than a distress centre! So often when people think of organizations such as TAK, they think in terms of extremities. TAK will offer a listening, empathetic response to all people in need, regardless of their need. Because TAK will operate between 7 p.m.. and 7 a.m.; it is designed to facilitate and complement, rather than duplicate, existing facilities within the community.

Because TAK is student-operated and student-oriented, it will be primarily concerned with those problems which students most often have, namely academic, informational and referral, financial, social and emotional.

TAK needs more than just volunteers. TAK needs volunteers who sincerely want to help people. TAK needs reasonably well-adjusted volunteers who are willing to spend time being properly trained and are responsible enough to commit themselves to helping others. TAK needs warm, listeners who care about, and are accepting of, empathetic other people.

The training of volunteers will begin on January 15, at 7:30 p.m., room 127 Jeffrey Hall. This meeting will consist of speakers from the Health Service, Birth Control and Abortion, and the Student Counselling Service. Possibly a film on distress centers will be shown, and there will be group discussions on the meaning and responsibilities of being a TAK volunteer.

Volunteers will be trained in two groups. One group will meet each Wednesday evening, Jan. 17, 24, and 31. The other group will meet Thursday, Jan. 18, Monday, Jan. 22, and Thursday, Jan. 25 at 7:30. To facilitate continuity of training, volunteers will be required to attend all meetings of their group.

The purpose of such training will be to help volunteers to develop facilitating skills in encouraging people to talk, empathetic listening and reflection. Training will involve: role playing and simulation, presentation of information on existing services, group discussions and seminars with professional people.

What committments will you have to make as a TAK volunteer?

1) You will have to attend all 4 evenings of training.

2) You will have to be available for telephone duty approximately 4 hours every 2 weeks between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m.

If you think you are interested in becoming a TAK volunteer, please come to the first training session - January 15th - 7:30 p.m. - room 127 - Jeffrey Hall.

Termpapers defended

MONTREAL (CUP) Despite the implications of the name "Termpapers Unlimited", Peter Michaud, owner of the Montreal operation, claims that fears of wholesale plagiarism are unfounded, and that the vast majority of papers are used for research and reference purposes.

Termpapers Unlimited, which first developed in the United States and recently opened offices in Montreal and Toronto, claims to offer students a selection of 12,000 titles from which they may choose.

According to Michaud, he will aid students in any part of termpaper writing. If students have done research and are unable to organize or draw conclusions from it, and the company will even handle that part for them. At the post-graduate level, Termpapers Unlimited will assign someone to "work together with the student to produce the thesis".

The most important result of Termpapers Unlimited's operations, if they become widespread, could very well be the re-examination of the purposes and methods of university education.

A student can have an original paper produced at the undergraduate level for five dollars per page, or six dollars per page for difficult or unusual topics.

OSAA meet: a sharing experience

by Susan de Stein

The Ontario Student Affairs Association held its annual conference at the University of Guelph on December 8th and 9th with representatives from most Ontario universities attending. The Queen's delegation of 22 was among the largest groups and the only group whose student representatives constituted a majority.

The large group was divided into sub-groups for the purpose of discussing the various aspects of university student services. Among the areas touched on were those dealing with residences, student unions, food services, day-care centres, orientation programmes, counselling services, and foreign student problems.

Jim Whitley, Director of the Queen's Student Affairs Centre, felt that the student representatives benefited most from the conference. It was surprising to note he added, that the number of student delegates at the conference was "surprisingly low."

Marney Cousins, a student delegate from Queen's found the conference "enlightening" and was impressed by the fact that her views "as student were respected and carried as much weight as those of the administrators." She added that "people were receptive".

Wendy Blackwood, from the office of the Dean of Women commented that "the group was very loosely structured. People were searching for information and were prepared to share the difficulties and frustrations they were experiencing." She felt that the organization of the conference was "good for information sharing on a short term basis", but added that "some people would have liked more direction."

Her view was shared by Mr. D. N. Ellis, Assistant Registrar (Student Awards) who said he preferred "a more structured type of programme where the agenda committee had made some effort to delineate areas of common interest and problems." He also commented that "participants were lumped together without any consideration of common interests."

Others felt that the discussions were too broad and should have dealt rather in specifics. The groups seemed to be "what" oriented rather than "why", said D.G. Wroe, Director of Career Planning and Placement. He added that "the discussion leaders of my two groups failed to lead."

Many felt a certain frustration with the vague guidelines of the conference and the lack of any tangible accomplishments.

Miss Cousins noted that the individual's estimation of the conference depended greatly upon the group in which he participated. Many groups failed to get off the ground she felt, due to the ineffectiveness of the group 'leaders'.

Among other areas of student services discussed in Miss Cousin's group, questions concerning the drop-out rate between first and second year were dealt with. It was felt among group members that post-secondary education counselling in high schools was severely lacking and steps to remedy the situation should be taken. Counselling in high schools was looked upon as a "frill", Miss Cousins added.

A new approach to student services being explored at the University of Ottawa has taken the form of student service mini-units on campus. The units are comprised of staff members from the various areas of student services. The concept involves greater communication between the various departments. In this plan the various services are not concentrated in one place, thus providing liaisons between the various student affairs areas. The concept was discussed in detail in several groups.

Jim Whitley felt it was difficult to evaluate the new system, since the number of student representatives from the University of Ottawa was small. "It was frustrating not to be able to seek out student opinion," he added. However a sub-committee of the Senate Committee of to the University of Ottawa to get a better view of the system. Miss Cousins commented that in such a system the student would get lost in the beaurocratic machinery.

In the area of Student Health Services, a comparison of facilities at Guelph University was made with those at Queen's. Dr. H.W. Greenidge, Director of Student Health Services at Queen's felt that "Queen's Health Service appears more shabby when compared to the opulence of the one at Guelph." He pointed out that Queen's "lacks an infirmary with 24 hour nursing coverage as is provided at the University of Guelph." Jim Whitley however added that Queen's does, despite its shabby facilities, provide "one of the best student health services in the province." Dr. Greenidge added that the Queen's administration is "presently giving thought to new facilities which I hope will alleviate many of our present problems."

It was also felt that the food services at Guelph were of a superior quality to those of Queen's. However Jim Whitley commented that "as institutional food goes, Ban Righ and Leonard Halls do very well indeed." He added that the food service in the union may be lacking but that its service was hampered by the facilities available.

Some Queen's delegates felt that the main activity of the staff of the student services of some universities seemed to be centered around self-preservation in the face of dropping enrolments. It was felt that others seemed too concerned with the perpetuation of existing structures.

In the words of D.N. Ellis, "a number of participants seemed very eager in the light of current financial structures to justify their own particular tasks to anyone who would listen."

The question of funding was also raised. Most agreed that the method of funding the universities and the grant system had to be thoroughly investigated.

Victoria Kemsley, a student delegate from Queen's noted that "some workshops produced letters to the executive of the OSAA, posting their recommendations on specific pertinent matters." She added that "if the OSAA were to become a more cohesive group perhaps it would have some negotiating power and influence in the decisions of the government." She also felt that "whether or not this conference was worthwhile will only be seen in the future."

ARTSCI YEARS

PRESENT

✓ Entertainment

✓ Beer

✓ Bargains

DISCOUNTS - JAN. 18 - 19 - 20

Show your year card and receive discounts at:

✓ Yellow Submarine ✓ Linos

✓ Seto's Chop Suey ✓ Broadway Pizza

✓ Cotton's Sporthouse ✓ It's Leather

✓ The Inn of Shoes ✓ Joe and Pauls

(SEE POSTERS)

SOMEWHERE - SUNDAY, JAN. 29

Artsci Years will present The Pink Panther & The Good Bad & Ugly –maybe Tom Jones

50¢ with year card – $1.00 without

STUDENT-PROF SMOKER- JAN. 15

In The Pub. After 10.30 Beer 4/$1.00

FREE with year card - 75¢ without

VIENESE SKATING NIGHT

(tell you when in Tuesday's Journal)

9.30 to 11.30 at the Arena

Waltz Music- Warm Spiced Wine 3/$1.00

Free Admission with Year card

.50¢ without

L.B. Pearson

Our best hope for peace

History records few people so distinguished as Lester Bowles Pearson. He was widely renowned for his genius in negotiation and diplomacy, for his very human qualities of compassion and quiet humour, for his major contributions toward peace and the welfare of man.

Mr. Pearson and Canada entered world affairs together. He emerged as a gifted diplomat at just the time that Canada, coming out of World War II as a strong middle power, was able to play a role far beyond the Dominion's stature or strength. It was an era when the big powers of Europe were picking up the pieces of their war-torn societies and economies and when the U.S. and the Soviet Union were squaring off for the cold war. Vigorous, unaligned smaller nations could exert an influence for peace and world stability, and Lester Pearson, as spokesman for Canada, achieved a great deal. He was tireless in his efforts on behalf of the United Nations which he termed, "our best hope for peace".

But although he was a man of international stature, Mr. Pearson was first and foremost a Canadian. More than forty years of devoted service to this country culminated in his preparing the foundation for a truly united Canada: one based on the equal partnership of its two great racial streams. For the diplomat who turned politician at fifty, the Liberal Party had been the chosen instrument to build this Canadian unity. He desired a united Canada for its own sake, but to him a strong Canada would be an effective instrument for world peace. To see Canada become that instrument motivated his career more than did personal ambition or inclination which one felt leaned to the academic.

Queen's enjoyed a very warm relationship with "Mike" over the years. In 1967, he became a member of the family as a recipient of an honorary degree, and in 1969, as the first Brockington Visitor. In nine days on the campus he left an indelible mark as a man of great strength of character, warm and gracious, wise and far-sighted. With his amiable, easygoing manner and his penchant for blue polka-dot bow ties and rumpled suits, he soon disarmed those who did not know him very well. They found him to be a perceptive hard-working, deadly serious diplomat - a man dominated, in the words of the Nobel Citation, by "a strong faith in the final victory of the good forces of life".

Credit course in Venice

For the third consecutive year the Department of Spanish and Italian of Queen's University is offering a course in Italy, entitled Intensive Italian in Venice, May 13 to June 23, 1973. The project is recognized by the University as part of its Intersession arrangements and students enrolled in the course will be eligible for credit under the General B.A. programme. The purpose of Italian 202 is to achieve a fuller integration of course work and daily living into a unified learning experience. The prerequisites are Italian 100 or Grade 13 Italian, or equivalent. The course will be under the direction of Mr. Diego L. Bastianutti, a native of the Venice region who has directed the Italian programme in Venice since its inception in 1971. For complete information you may contact Mr. Bastianutti (547-6669).

classified

HEY, keep giving the DING-DONG's hell and we got it made.

ARTSCI 76, 75, 76, 73 presents STUDENT PROF SMOKER, January 15. ADMISSION - free with year card. Without yearcard 75c after 10:30. Beer is 4 for a dollar in the pub.

THEY ALSO present VIENESE SKATING NIGHT. Waltz Music, 9:30 - 11:30 at the Arena. Warm spiced wine something 3 for a dollar. Admission free with any Artsci yearcard. Others 50c.

HARMONY SOVEREIGN guitar for sale - with stand - good condition - asking $65. Call Tony at 544-4159.

URGENT: NEED SOMEONE to move into an apartment on 12th floor Elrond. Own room, rent only $63 a month. Call either Paul or Gary at 544-6358 or Dave at 549-0176.

THE QUEEN'S EXCURSION CLUB is sending a bus to Neil Yound concert in Ottawa Tuesday night. (the 16th) departing at 4 pm and returning after the concert at a cost of $4.50 payable at the desk in the Outer AMS office. Open 11 -3 daily. We are also attempting to obtain guaranteed seat tickets for the concert itself. Sign up now if it is going to go.

LEE: PLEASE don't discriminate when saying goodnight.

WATCH FOR "Just for the Hell of It". Saturday, January 20, 1973.

ROOM AVAILABLE: 7 minute walk to campus. Breakfast and lunch optional. Very reasonable. Call 542-9402 after 5.

FOR SALE: TELEFUNKEN 204U tape recorder. $150. Used Tape, 7" reels, over 37,000 feet. BASF?, Sony, Scotch, Charter in 2400, 1800, 1200 ft. sizes. $60. Phone 544-0338 and ask for Mark.

HOUSE OR APARTMENT wanted near main campus for 5 guys for next year. Phone 549-1669, 549-1624, or 549-1652.

REASONABLY SANE and intelligent gentleman aged twenty is isolated in the Yukon (and rapidly going "haywire") and would appreciate female correspondence. Geographic obstacles dictate platonic intercourse (classical definition intended) only. Please write Don Percifield, Elsa, Yukon Territory.

SUE - Don't go home so early.

LOST: LADY'S gold watch between Adelaide and Dunning Halls. Contact Susan at 544-8185.

COMPUTER PROGRAMMER available part-time; days; three years experience; local references. Call 1-353-2087.

FLASHER AVAILABLE for birthdays, weddings, barmitzvahs, walks, etc. Reasonable rates, fast service, products available in assorted colours and flavours. Call Andy (Flash) Reid 544-0087.

NEEDED: an apartment or house for 73-74. Please phone us at 544-0124 after six.

DEAR CALIFORNIA GIRLS: When's dinner?

WANTED: USED cross-country skiis, poles, boots (8-9). Good shape. Phone 544-0340.

DON'T FORGET ANDY, Chris and Norm are having their big bash tonight at 8:30. Beer on tap, bring rum if you want Rum Punch.

FOR SALE: Toshiba reel to reel tape recorder. If interested call 544-9559.

BOXING: Anyone interested in forming a boxing club, sign up in the gym.

BASEMENT FOR RENT in large house, separate bathroom, pleasant, well-fitted bed-sitting room, share kitchen, ten minutes walk from Queen's or McArthur campus. $105 per month. 546-4830 after 5 pm.

ARTS FESTIVAL '73. Start bringing your photos, art, crafts, to Carol Rogers 128 Earl, phone first 544-9196 or Jane Wicks 24 Barrie St., phone first 544-3280. The festival is from Jan. 24-27. Deadline: Jan. 23.

THE ZOO at 399 Brock is proud to announce the arrival of the biggest bash of the new year this Friday night.

ENG DSC SKATING PARTY Sat. Jan. 13, 8:30 pm Jock Harty. Tickets from your English DSC - 50c. Come!!

1967 MUSTANG, 289, Radio, New Paint, New Snow Tires, Excellent condition, $1200. 546-4620 after 6 pm.

ROOM FOR RENT to Student. 371 Johnson St. Call 548-8937.

BUFFALO CHIPS VARIETY NIGHT '73 is coming. Auditions for musicians, comedians, political impersonators, and anyone interested. Tuesday Jan. 16, Dunning Aud. 7-11 pm. Call 544-9381.

ANYONE INTERESTED in a ski week in Banff during reading week - including air fare, accommodation, transfers between hotel and hills, and lift tickets; please phone Dave at 349-2648 before Wednesday January 17.

WANTED: Applied Science jacket size 42-44, year 74. Will consider any other year. Phone 546-9648 after 6 pm; ask for Bob.

FOR SALE: Stereo component set; Dual 1218 changer with Shure V15 cartridge - $175; accoustic research amp., 100 watts RMS - $300; air tight design cabinets with RSC WR-12 woofer and horn tweeter - $150. Will sell together for $600. Phone Scott at 544-1957.

WANTED: A single room in co-ed residence. WHO?

WANTED FOR 1973-74; Two bedroom apartment; cheap, roomy, close to campus and comfortable. Contact Doug or Pete now at 544-7077 or 544-7132.

FIRST SOUTH MORRIS IS STILL ALIVE! Dougie, Joanie, Davie, Celia, Timmy, Janny, Billy, Murray, Lynda, Linda, Greggie, Robbie, Margie, Sandy, Mary Annie, Christie, Philly, Annie, Davie, Dianie, Gaily, Daley, Jimmy, Annie, Chrissy, Robin, Terry, Helen, Annie, Barby, Mikey, Vicki, Brucie, and Hamlet.

IF YOU SHOW A YEARCARD, you can get a discount (see posters) at Yellow Submarine, Lino's, Seto's Chop Suey, Broadway Pizza, Cotton's Sporthouse, It's Leather, The Inn of Shoes, and Joe and Pauls. This occurs only on Jan 18-19-20.

SOMEWHERE on Sunday Jan. 21, the Artsci years will present The Pink Panther and the Good Bad and the Ugly, and perhaps Tom Jones. Cost is half a dollar with a yearcard (arts) and a dollar without.

HELGA FISHER - if you go to Room 215, 207 Stuart St. (Soc. Dept.) you can get your birth certificate.

DEAR INFAMOUS DUO: who ¾ us, object? Never. Thanks. We promise to leave our cameras in the office.

GOING SOMEWHERE for reading week? Let Photo Image take your passport pictures. For only $5.00, you get three sets of prints. If you bring a friend, you'll both save a dollar off our regular rate. Group rates also available. Call 546-7770 for an appointment today.

THE QUEEN'S EXCURSING club presents its Reading Week (4 day, 3 night) Quebec Winter Carnival trip at a cost of $35. Everyone welcome. Deposits of $10 must be in before Feb. 2 at the bus service desk.

WANTED LUST III is pleased to headline MGM's recording artists Von Ryan's Express direct from Los Angeles. Be sure not to miss them on your travels.

FEE WITHHOLDING speakers. Lyn says there will be an organizational meeting at 9:30 pm in Lower Vic. Bring a friend and be sure to tell her you'll be there. And tell her before Saturday. . . . that's what it's all about.

ANNOUNCING DIRTY DAVE as this week's winner of "The Man with the Most Award". You too can be a winner! If interested call DIRTY DAVE at 549-2648 and ask him how he did it.

PHOTOGRAPHERS! Are you fed up with drugstore-crud photofinishing? Photo Image offers custom processing and printing at reasonable rates. Call us at 546-7770, or drop by our studio at 33 Brock Street.

QUEEN'S EXCURSION CLUB - All those interested in going to Florida by bus for Reading week please inquire at AMS Outer Office 11:30 am - 3:00 pm weekdays or phone 544-7233.

ROOM FOR RENT - Large bedroom one block off campus. Phone 548-3197.

LOST - I'm a lost German Shepherd. 2½ feet high, 65 pounds, light collar, male. Phone 544-1765.

STUDENTS have to make their own experience these days. Times are tough and the job market is demanding. Next year at Elrond, all the membership fees ($25) will be used for education. That's about $10,000. You can have an ooportunity to help spend this money, to help manage the college through one of the governing committees. Get some experience. Come live with us.

SUE de S: You were supposed to type these - why didn't you - the boys.

bews news

Hello! Happy New Year! And welcome to the second term Bews program, brought to you with the best wishes of the Men's Intramural Athletic Committee. Remember their slogan: If you don't play a sport, its damn well time you did!

Now, let's meet some of the stars of the program. Introducing . . . Bews Basketball. Entries have now closed in this program and competition will start on Monday, January 15th. Schedules and times are all posted on the notice board in the men's locker room and all the action will take place in Bews Gym. Mr. Lenard is still looking for a few timers and scorers and anyone who is interested should see him within the next few days.

Next on the show is . . . Bews Curling. This popular team sport, which this year has attracted 21 teams will begin on Sunday, January 14th and will continue on each Sunday thereafter until February 18th. Action gets underway each Sunday at 2 p.m. and all games are being played at the Kingston Curling Club, which is just behind the Arena on Clergy Street.

Next we present the popular 10-pin bowling event. The Cloverleaf Lanes will be the scene of the action in this sport every Tuesday and Thursday at 5 p.m. Action begins on Tuesday January 16th. By the time you read this, rules and schedules should be posted on the notice board.

If some of you having been thinking about entering a Bews sport all fall, why not take the plunge and join your local waterpolo team. This popular second-term sport will commence next Tuesday, January 16th at 10 p.m. in the Queen's Pool. That's right after the Gaels hockey game between Queen's and Carleton. Entries close at noon today. The rip-off is that anyone who played innertube waterpolo before Christmas is ineligible for waterpolo this term.

Coming up in the second half is Bews handball. Entry lists are now posted and will remain until Wednesday, January 24th. The event will start the following Monday and schedules and times will again be available on the notice board.

Finally, singles and doubles paddleball competitions are nearly completed and final winners should be known by next week. Competitors are asked to check the schedule and complete these events by Monday.

HERE IS A BULLETIN FROM BEWS:

Civil and Math still hold a slight lead over Commerce '73 and PHE in the race for the Bews Trophy. According to the board, Civil and Math have 23,495 points to 22,858 for Commerce '73 and 21,082 for PHE. However, Bob Carnegie, director of Bews, tells me that someone subtracted when they should have added and Civil and Math should have been credited with about 2,000 more points than they have. Nice going fellows!.

According to the board, this is the way they stand.

1. Civil and Math	23,495
2. Commerce '73	22,858
3. PHE	21,082
4. Mechanical	17,386
5. Mining	16,485
6. Chemical	14,405
7. Commerce '75	13,677
8. Commerce '74	13,633
9. Law '74	12,379
10. Commerce '76	11,470

Next week, the stars of the show include hockey, broomball and the first reports from the basketball competition. We'll also have a couple of mystery sports to introduce at that time. Until then, Watts My Line. And remember . . . If you don't play a sport, it's damn well time you did!.

sports info....

Wrestling

Any student - male or female - interested in managing the wrestling team this year should see Dr. Albinson in Room 213 of the Physical Education Centre as soon as possible.

Waterpolo

Any man interested in playing waterpolo for Queen's this term are invited to attend a tryout camp on Saturday, January 13th from 12 noon to 2 p.m. in the Queen's Pool.

Track and Field

Any student interested in indoor track and field this term should see Brenda Mackie or Rolf Lund in the Physical Education Centre as soon as possible. The first indoor meet of the season is at the CNE in Toronto on Saturday, January 13th. Indoor meets will continue on nearly every weekend from now on. The men will hold their OUAA indoor track and field championships in Toronto on March 3rd.

Swimming & Diving

Coach Larry Brawley has organized an intra-club meet for tonight at 6 p.m. in the Queen's Pool. The meeting will serve as a warm-up to the RMC Invitational meet to be held on Saturday at Anderson Pool. The Anderson Pool is located in Fort Henry Heights for anyone from Queen's who might be interested in attending as a spectator.

Hockey Charter

Anyone interested in going to the Forum in Montreal on Wednesday, February 14th for the game between the Rangers and the Canadiens should contact Mr. Howard Pearce in the Physical Education Centre as soon as possible. The bus will leave the Physical Education Centre on Wednesday afternoon, February 14th at 3:30 and will return immediately after the game. Cost for the bus and hockey ticket is $11.00.

STUDENT TYPING SERVICE

STUDENTS UNION BUILDING

The Student Typing Service offers a full range of typing and duplicating services. We have a 3600 Xerox Duplicator for large volume and high quality work, and a 2400 Xerox for books, notes, misc. (5c per original). Thesises, essays, and correspondence typed. A ditto machine is available.

HOURS 8:30 am - 8:30 pm -Mon-Thurs.8:30 am - 4:30 pm - Fri.

Skiing at its peak Prices at their bottom

30 superbly groomed trails.
10 lifts accommodating 7,500 skiers per hour, including
the only gondola lift in Eastern Canada

• 2050' vertical drop (It's a real kick)
• Beginner's slopes (Look at me!)
• 5 day ski week: use of lifts $25., lifts & lessons $35.
• Season from November to May

mont ste-anne P.O. Box 40, Beaupré, Province of Québec
(418) 692-0835

Toronto ski reports phone number (416) 483-4510

B-Ball Gaels down Big Blue 69-52

by Chris Boon

The basketball Gaels opened their new year's push on the right foot Wednesday night, downing St. Lawrence 69-52 in an exhibition game played at the community college. The Gaels got 20-point performances from Rob Smart and Norm Hagarty, while John Keck chipped in 14 points. St. Lawrence centre Mick Dowling led all scorers with 21 points.

Despite the decisive victory, the Gaels' level of play was not outstanding. Only a tremendous superiority in natural ability on the part of the Queen's athletes kept things on a respectable basis. As might have been expected, the Christmas break had taken its toll on the Gaels' shooting ability. Basically, it was nonexistent. Queen's managed to miss more layups than most teams get in a game, and even Rob Smart, who did shoot well from the outside, had his problems. Norm Hagarty, who has held a cool shooting hand since his high-scoring debut in Montreal, showed signs of returning to form, but still lacked consistency from outside. St. Lawrence never did fathom the fact that Norm is left-handed, and he owned the baseline on his side of the court all night. However, even given the shooting woes, the Gaels could have totally dominated the (hack, choke) "Big Blue", . . . if they had played some tough defense and hit the boards on offence.

In the battle underneath, Corky McLeery, a big rookie from Montreal, made his presence felt, hauling down 14 rebounds. Paul Howard, who appears to be reviving - a little - from his first-term doldrums, pulled down 11 rebes, and chipped in with 7 points, mostly on foul shots. If Howard can be pursuaded to play the kind of agressive defense he displayed last season, Queen's could be a real threat in the OUAA this year.

The Gaels take on Laurentian tomorrow night at 8:00 pm in the Bartlett Gym, and this will tell most of the tale about the new year. The Vee's are undefeated in the OUAA-East, with a 5-0 record, while Queen's needs a win to get above .500. Fans would definitely be in order.

- boon

Rob Smart takes two points over St. Lawrence foul.

Words from WIC

The W.I.C. will introduce the activities of the new term with an Athletic Night on Thursday, January 18 at 7 p.m. in the Phys. Ed. Complex. The sports for this term are Curling, Indoor Softball, Volleyball, Archery, Co-ed Bowling, Squash and a Jogathon. If you wish to participate in any of these, come out and sign up. Or if you're just curious, come out and see what the program has to offer for you.

The W.I.C. again urges all women on campus to consider the benefits of participation in a sports program. Isn't it time to do something about apathy in relation to physical fitness? Intramurals are a fun way to get rid of that sluggishness (and maybe those Christmas pounds, too). Further, because participation, not talent, is the essence of an intramural program, experience should not be considered a prerequisite.

The standings at the end of last term were as follows:

PHE	7500
Arts '73	3304
Arts '76	2544
Arts '75	1714
Arts '74	1542
Meds	1020
Com-Eng	750
Nursing	699
Rehab	685
Law	322

If you wish to know your individual points, they will be available from Claire St. Arnaud at Athletic Night.

Remember - Athletic Night - Thursday January 18 at 7 pm.

Blood, Sweat & Tears:

Queen's Hockey in '73

by Peter Watts

A new wave of optimism has flowed through the ranks of the Queen's Golden Gaels hockey team this week as they prepare for the resumption of their schedule on Saturday. The Gaels meet the McMaster Marauders in Hamilton on Saturday afternoon. As of this writing, Queen's holds down fifth place in the eastern division of the OUAA with 5 points. The University of Toronto Blues have climbed to their accustomed position at the top of the east division; the Blues sport a perfect 7-0 won loss mark and hold a 2 point lead over York. Laurentian and the surprising GeeGees from the University of Ottawa hold down third place with 8 points each. The Gaels are next with 5 followed by Carleton with 2 and Ryerson which is still looking for its first point after six league encounters. In fairness, the Gaels have played one less game than anyone else in the division. Saturday's encounter with the Marauders thus looms as a big one for Bob Carnegie's crew.

Perhaps this new air of determination has been due to the much tougher workouts which have been conducted by assistant coaches Dave Field and Graham Closs over the last week and a half. Some of the veteran players say it has been one of the toughest weeks of practice in their experience as Gaels. There is a good possibility that Queen's will be ready for the big games against Toronto, York, and Laurentian because they will be in good shape.

This reporter took in several practices over the last week and was most impressed with the quality of the work-outs and the spirit and hustle shown by the players. There seems to be a stronger desire to win than there was before Christmas. If this is the case, and if it can be maintained, Queen's hockey fans are in for an exciting second term in the Harty Arena.

The Gaels get a big plus this term with the return of ex-pro Jim Adair to centre ice. Adair has been out of the line-up except for exhibition games because he is required to sit out one full year from gaining his re-instatement as an amateur. He is now eligible for duty and his presence in the Gaels line-up will add considerably to its offensive performance. By putting Adair at centre, Colin Loudon will be moved to left wing on the line and John Smith will see action as the right winger. On the basis of past performance, this should be a most interesting unit to watch whenever it is on the ice.

One of the most pleasing performances in the first half of the season was turned in by centre Bob Kindon. The veteran Queen's player got four goals in the first five games and hopes are that he will be able to continue his strong performance in the second half. Kindon will centre Jim Tittemore and Mike Lynch who has been moved up from defense to play left wing. The third line will see several combinations from Norm Goulet, Craig Shannon, Dave Hadden, Dave Melloy, Bill White or John Cerre. Speaking of White, the second year man from Huntsville has looked sharper in practice in the last week than he has looked since coming to Queen's last year. A strong performance from this big left winger will be a big plus indeed. One wonders whether it has been inspired by the introduction of his kid brother Ron into the Gaels starting line-up. The younger White will see regular action on the right side of the defense in this second half. He will be joined by regulars Steve Gross, Stu Lang, John Jeffrey and Chris Clark. The goaltending remains one of the big pluses of the team with Clyde Harris holding down the number one spot. Harris, if he needs it, will get more than adequate support from Don Hall and rookie Dave Dungey.

One other player who hasn't been mentioned will also see plenty of service this term is Jim Sunstrum. The former Loyola star is currently the leading scorer on the Gaels with 6 goals and 8 assists for 14 points, only 4 less than scoring leaders Barry Jenkins and Al Avery of York. This term, Sunstrum will move over to play centre where his great talents as a playmaker and puck-handler will be better utilized.

The big question will be whether or not the Gaels can put together a sustained drive to carry them into the playoffs. They have 12 games left in the regular schedule and play them between January 13th and February 17th, a period of 35 days. In order to qualify for a playoff spot, the Gaels cannot finish lower than fourth; to get a home game in the first-round playoffs, they must finish second. It promises to be a most interesting winter term.

Wrestling here Saturday

Queen's University will play host to a ten team invitational wrestling tournament here on Saturday. The activities will get underway in Bews Gym on Saturday morning at 11 a.m. and will continue until about 8:30 that evening. Teams from Waterloo, Guelph, York, Ryerson, RMC, Carleton, Sir George Williams, and Queen's will take part in the competitions, as well as the Europa Wrestling Club from Toronto and St. Lawrence University from Canton New York.

The Queen's team, coached by Dr. John Albinson, is hoping for strong individual performances from Rob Beamish, Mike Dwhytie, Randy White, and Peter Verhoeven to lead the rest of the squad. Outstanding among expected visiting competitors is Egan Bicler of the University of Waterloo. Bicler is a member of the Canadian Olympic Wrestling Team and represented Canada at the recent Olympic Games in Munich Germany.

Murray McLauchlan, the other Gord Lightfoot

By Geoff Henning

Who is he? Well, I could tell you he has two albums out, but I suppose that doesn't help too much because there are probably hundreds of people who have recorded two albums that you haven't heard of either.

Well here's what some other people have to say about this artist:

"The finest young singer-composer to come out of Canada since Joni Mitchell" -- R.P.M. Weekly, 1968

"(He has) an expressive folk voice with a nasal cutting edge and a powerful communication of lyrics and feelings" -- Globe and Mail, 1968

"(He has) a strange mixture of J. D. Salinger and Bob Dylan" -- Toronto Telegram, 1969

"Another Gord Lighfoot" -- Bernie Fiedler owner and manager of the "Riverboat" in Toronto.

His background is undoubtedly similar to that of many other singers. He quit school at the age of seventeen and bummed all over Canada and the States. Teaming up with Lube Gibson (ex-Kensington Market member) he did several concerts and made a few television appearances including "Let's Sing Out" which at the time was Eastern Canada's answer to "Where The Action Is."

Travelling back to Toronto, he and his wife shared an apartment with Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Cockburn. Bernie Finkelstein, who was managing Cockburn, Gibson, Keith McKie and the Paupers, assumed responsibility for the other Gord Lightfoot's future recording and concert career. By this time many other people had been recording his material. Tom Rush had included two songs, the "Child's Song" and the "Old Man's Song" on one of his albums. But it was time that the other Gord Lighfoot did his own material on wax. So along came the album "Song of the Street" (True North Records - T.N. 4 - Columbia) which had ten of his own tunes including the previously recorded "Child's Song".

However, the other Gord Lightfoot found it hard to live up to the name. The music was every bit as good and I'd even say a whole lot better than anything the original Gord Lighfoot had come up with but it was his own name that appeared to hold up sales. The second album released a short time ago was called after his own name. The record showed ten more originals and soon after release the other Gord Lightfoot had received a well deserved name of his own, Murray McLauchlan.

This album has many good cuts on it which range from traditional type folk songs such as "Old Man's Song" to more contemporary folk-rock songs like "I Wanna Watch You Move." The background instrumentals and singing are tremendously complimentary to McLauchlan's strong resonating voice.

On Sunday night McLauchlan will perform his songs at Grant Hall. Along with him will be a blind singer-musician, Michael Lewis. Lewis has received tremendous recognition for his individual talent in the last couple of years especially for his performances at the National Entertainment Conferences of 1971 and 1972. Lewis says, "An entertainer has a responsibility to his audience and when he forgets this reponsibility he ceased to entertain." This responsibility is fulfilled when the audience starts watching the artist less and starts listening to his music more. So go to the concert on Sunday night at 8:30 p.m. at Grant Hall, and listen to the music, but don't expect the other Gord Lightfoot, expect Murray McLauchlan.

Rubinstein --- at 87!

By Michael J. Hodgson

During the Christmas holidays, I heard the great pianist Artur Rubinstein in recital in Montreal. Perhaps I should mention in passing that Rubinstein is 87 years old! But that is not really a very important statistic in his case, because his memory is still accurate, his technique impressive, and his musicianship endlessly surprising and deeply satisfying. Though I must confess I have approached his every concert of recent years with the fear that "this time he will seem old," this time--and every other--I have come away elated with the freshness of his interpretations and the energy of his playing.

The program began with the Beethoven sonata opus 31 no. 3, in E flat major. Its opening allegro was given a most original, very melancholy reading which made the bubbling staccatos and accents of the scherzo movement all the more exciting. The minuet unfolded very smoothly into the presto finale, which was taken very fast and played not with the usual playfulness but with urgency. Admittedly, this was very romantic Beethoven, but it was stimulating in its originality and in its discovery of many details too often neglected. And most important, it was as alive as if it had been written yesterday! Rubinstein, we musn't forget, was a pupil of Karl Heinrich Barth, who had been a pupil of Franz Liszt, and Liszt was a pupil of Karl Czerny--and Czerny was a pupil of Beethoven.

Next on the program were three selections of Brahms--the B minor and E flat major rhapsodies, and the B flat minor intermezzo. These were what I went to hear, because I have always felt Rubinstein captures the grimness and languor of Brahms better than anybody else. There are many pianists who can play the notes Brahms wrote and many who make beautiful sounds with them, but there are so very few pianists who can convey the spirit of this music as Rubinstein does! I won't soon forget the singing tone of the intermezzo or the controlled phrasing in the rhapsodies (which are so often played as mere showpieces), and the wonderful patience with which he superimposes melodies in the central sections of the B minor rhapsody. Brahms has always been a favorite of Rubinstein, and Rubinstein is quick to point out that, to him, Brahms is a contemporary composer! In fact, Rubinstein's [illegible] Joachim, Brahms' close collaborator and Brahms himself was alive for the first ten years of Rubinstein's life.

The second half of the program was devoted to music of Debussy (Ondine, Poissons d'or, and La Plus que Lente), Chabrier (Scherzo Valse), and Chopin nocturne op. 27, no. 2, Polonaise in A flat major). These pieces are often on a Rubinstein program--I have heard him do them several times--and yet he never plays them twice the same way. I have often heard him play a luscious Debussy richly pedalled, in the traditional "drowning piano" style of Debussy--playing guaranteed to win over any audience by sheer sonority. This time his playing was very dry indeed, and one became aware all of a sudden of the structure of these pieces, of their daring harmonies and contrasting textures. These old chestnuts seemed quite modern. How refreshing it was to have the haze burnt off Debussy! If you suggest that Rubinstein's affinity for Debussy derives from the fact he was in the salons of Paris when these pieces were written, he will answer modestly that he "only knew Debussy casually". And the Scherzo Balse of Chabrier, in Rubinstein's hands, becomes a little world of delicious details that charm you off your feet--this music that is thought to be mere fluff!

Of course, Rubinstein is generally known as an interpreter of Chopin, his compatriot. The A flat polonaise in particular has become almost his theme song. And just as the exhausted reviewer says "Oh no! Not the old standby again!", Rubinstein knocks him for a loop with a performance that brings a standing ovation! Not for Rubinstein a merely tidy Van Cliburn rendition of this piece! No! It thunders, it clangs out defiantly-and it swings with inimitable style! In Rubinstein's care, this piece goes back to its origin as an expression of passionate yearning for a subjugated Poland.

It was wonderful to hear this master musician once again still in such good form. Still he bowls his audiences over; still he has new ideas about the music he performs. As usual, he was his generous self, giving us three encores with the flash and energy of a man 60 years his junior! And as usual I pray this won't be the last time I have the very special experience of hearing Artur Rubinstein in recital!

WARNING: The Department of National Health and Welfare advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked

A.M.S. SECRETARY

Anyone interested in taking Council Minutes apply at the A.M.S. Office

THE CANADIAN MINERAL INDUSTRY EDUCATION FOUNDATION

offers

UNDERGRADUATE SCHOLARSHIPS

in

MINING ENGINEERING

$1,500 - 9 months

to students wishing to enter the first or subsequent professional year of a degree course in Mining Engineering

For applications contact:
The Secretary,
Canadian Mineral Industry Education Foundation,
P.O. Box 91, Commerce Court West, Toronto, Ont.
or
The Dean of Engineering
Applied Science

CLOSING DATE 15 MARCH, 1973

One Contac·C capsule gives 12 hours of relief from the symptoms of a stubborn cold.

freezingdays

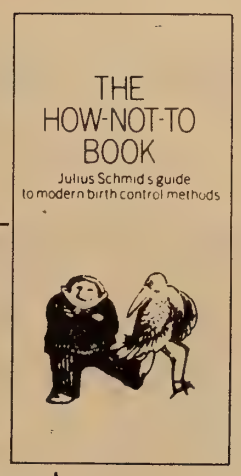
Friday, January 12
8:00 pm - Graduate Students Society Films presents "The Birthday Party." Ellis Hall.

Saturday, January 13
8:00 pm - Bowling Night. Transportation from Hillel House to Cloverleaf. Refreshments to follow at Hillel House, 26 Barrie Street.
Evening - Wanderlust III in Leonard Field. Von Ryan's Express.

Sunday, January 14
11:00 am - First University Service of Winter Term. Memorial Chapel.
3:00 pm - Exhibition opening at Agnes and the artist will be there.
4:00 pm - Eucharistic Celebration at Queen's Theological Hall. Faculty Lounge (2nd floor). All welcome.
5:30 to 7:00 pm - Hillel buffet supper following by Israeli Folk dancing and singing. 26 Barrie Street.
8:30 pm - Murray McLaughlin Concert. Grant Hall.

Monday, January 15
11:30 - 1:30 pm - Kraft Boycott Committee Information Table. Polson Room.
7:30 pm - Teachers of Art in the schools of Kingston and district are being invited to an Open House evening at the Art Centre.
8:30 pm - Inter Year Committee presents Queen's Pub. Free with year card, 75c without. 4-$1.00. Any old faculty welcome.

Tuesday, January 16
5:45 - 6:30 pm - Improvisations on the piano by Lubomyr Melnyk; coffee and desert. Contemporary Musical Sounds. Ban Righ Common Room. Everyone welcome.



Off Campus
Theatres
Capitol - The Getaway
Hyland - Funny Girl
Odeon - The Poseidon Adventure

Pubs
Commodore - Country Sounds
401 Inn - The Newcomers
The Manor - Julie Lynn
The Pub - O'Brian Six

When a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of 'LOVE'

He should at least be clued up on birth control. To get the facts in plain language send for the FREE How-Not-To booklet by Julius Schmid, makers of FOUREX, RAMSES and SHEIK Quality contraceptives for men. Sold only in drug stores.

JULIUS SCHMID OF CANADA LIMITED
32 Bermondsey Rd., Toronto 16, Ont.

Please send me FREE "THE-HOW-NOT-TO-BOOK"
(Print clearly)

TO: Name_____

Address_____

City_____ Zone_____ Prov._____

YS-73

Bitter Grounds

The Bitter Grounds is opening its 1973 season with two performers this weekend. Doug McArthur played a guest set at the Bitter Grounds last term and was so well received by Queen's students that he is returning for a second performance. Previously based in Kingston, he now works out of Toronto.

Thomas Handy, a versatile performer and an excellent guitarist follows Doug McArthur to complete a fine evening of entertainment.

Start off the New Year with a visit to the Bitter Grounds, on the second floor of the Union, Saturday and Sunday evening from 8 to 12 midnight.

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY

COMPUTING CENTRE

REQUIRES

A Software Programmer who is a recent graduate to work in the Software Systems section. A higher degree in Computer Science is preferred although relevant experience will be considered.

The system involves maintenance and implementation of software systems on an IBM 360-50 using MVT and HASP (with RJE) and a Burroughs B6700 dual processor system with APL and DC1000 RJE terminals.

Apply in confidence giving full details of qualifications, experience and salary requirements to:

Personnel Officer,
Queen's University,
KINGSTON, Ontario.

BUFFALO CHIPS

VARIETY NIGHT

AUDITIONS FOR

- musicians
- comedians
- political impersonators

and anyone interested

Tuesday, January 16
Dunning Auditorium
7- 11 p.m.

TRICOLOR AWARDS

for

Academic Session 1972-73

Admission to the Tricolor Society is regarded as the highest tribute that can be paid a student for valuable service to the university non-athletic, extra-curricular activities and is open to students in any year.

- Nominations for membership in the Tricolor Society will be received until 5 p.m. January 25,1973
- Names may be submitted by any member of the Alma Mater Society
- Nominations forms are available in the AMS Office

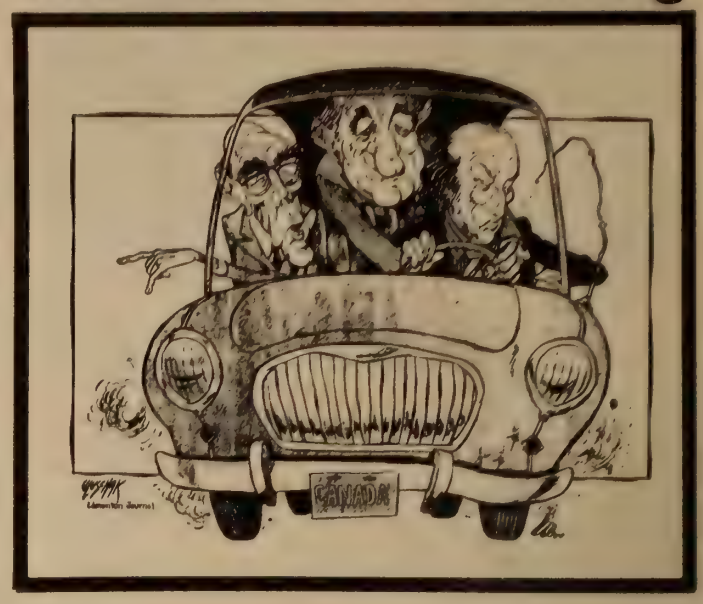
Wins House confidence motion

Canada: Trudeau reverses, admits this land is not strong

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, after campaigning for the October 31 election on the "this land is strong" theme has made a major about face during the opening session of Parliament and began emphasizing the fact that national unity is still a crucial question for Canada.

The Grits managed to clear their first major hurdle this week, easily defeating a motion of non-confidence with the aid of the New Democrats and the Social Creditistes. However NDP leader David Lewis warned that the price of his continued support would be legislation lowering personal income taxes and increasing old age pensions.

KINGSTON — A major crackdown on crime in this city is being initiated from several sectors with downtown businessmen, the mayor's office and the police commission all taking part in the move.



Hairdresser Kenneth Rowley is leading a vigilante group of thirty downtown merchants in an attempt to gain more police protection for downtown businesses. There have been several burglaries of stores and businesses in the past few months. The committee will primarily be taking on assignments to investigate and report on various problems in law enforcement.

Mayor George Speal has outlined a four point program which he wishes to put into effect to combat the city's high crime rate. His proposal includes open police commission meetings and closer dialogue between the police department and the public, a monthly publishing of crime statistics, the hiring of more civilian staff for clerical duties, thereby releasing experienced police officers for active duty and finally he is considering the addition of an auxiliary police force.

Police Chief Robert Nesbitt is looking for an increase of fourteen men to the force, allowing expansion of the traffic control division as well as the planting of policemen in various offices to prevent the recent rash of office break-ins.

'Data control? What's the technical terminology for "nice pussy"?'

OTTAWA — Once again Canada is faced with unusually high unemployment figures as Satatistics Canada released the December data. With an unseasonal increase in the national labour force, unadjusted unemployment was boosted from the November figure of 5.9 per cent to 6.5 per cent in December, falling largely on the 14-24 age bracket.

Ontario statistics registered a sizable increase moving from 4.3 per cent unemployed in November to 4.5 per cent in December.

TORONTO — Caught in misleading the public through advertising last spring, the T. Eaton Company has pleaded guilty to the charges brought before it.

During a sale the company misrepresented the regular selling price of a chesterfield suite to make it look like the public was getting a better bargain than what actually was the case. Although they claimed that the error was the result of a miscalculation, Eatons was fined the maximum $1,000.

TORONTO — The select Ontario legislature committee studying economic and cultural nationalism was told that it makes sense to import big name American stars for Canadian television commercials.

John Straiton of Ogilvy and Mather (Canada) Ltd., a large Canadian advertiser, stated that Canada has not been producing enough stars, noting especially English Canada. He stated that about the only stars he could think of were Wayne and Shuster and added that they were already taken up by an oil company.

TORONTO — Cross Canada Car Leasing Ltd. has been brought before the Ontario Commercial Registration Appeal Tribunal on charges of having rolled back the mileage on their high-mileage cars before putting them up for sale, an act they claimed was a "necessary business practice." The rollbacks, ranging from 10,000 to 20,000 miles on 120 cars were uncovered by government inspectors.

The company claimed that what they were doing was necessary because high mileage vehicles "do not sell."

backpage

World: Russia still reluctant to admit Western ideologies

MOSCOW — The Soviet state has once again reiterated its authority over the free flow of ideas within their borders in a move to head off pressure for its easing from some Western nations.

Pravda, the official organ of the Communist Party in Russia announced that a free flow of people and ideas across the Soviet borders would not be tolerated unless they were acceptable to the Soviet ideologists. The paper claimed that Western attempts to push through an ideological thaw are a cold war attempt to subvert the soviet bloc.

However, Party chief Leonid Breznev did not rule out altogether the idea of exchanges stating that he would be ready to discuss it but that respect must be maintained for the sovereignty, customs and laws of the country.

CAIRO — Egypt was rocked last week when police clashed with demonstrating students from that country's five universities and twenty colleges. The institutions have since been closed in order to "let tempers cool". President Anwar Sadat ordered a parliamentary committee to investigate the situation.

BERLIN — Two more European Economic Community members have taken the initiative in recognizing and extending diplomatic relations to East Germany. With the recognition extended by Netherlands and Luxembourg only France and Italy of the old EEC members are left to extend their hand.

SALISBURY — In the face of massive border raids by Zambia-based guerrillas, Rhodesia has ordered all road and rail traffic with that country cut off until the terrorists are evicted. The guerrillas had been aiming at farms and other civilian targets as well as mining rural roads.

The move leaves Zambia virtually cut off from her major importers and sharply reduces her means of transporting produce.

Queen's
Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 30,
Tuesday, January 16, 1973

Responsibility for diploma nurses transferred to community colleges

Responsibility for the education of diploma nurses will be transferred from hospital and regional schools of nursing to the colleges of applied arts and technology system, effective September 1, 1973, it was announced by Jack McNie, Minister of Colleges and Universities, and Richard T. Potter, Minister of Health.

The transfer means that more than 9,500 student nurses enrolled annually in 56 schools of nursing throughout the Province will become part of the student body of the 22 colleges of applied arts and technology. More than 1,500 administrative, faculty and support personnel now attached to the schools of nursing will be affected by the transfer. In guidelines issued to colleges, schools of nursing and participating hospitals, the Government has stated that no personnel should be disadvantaged if they choose to move to the colleges with the programmes.

The academic facilities in schools of nursing throughout Ontario will continue to be used for nursing education programmes in some capacity.

While some aspects of the transfer have been determined by the Provincial Government, much of the transition to the college setting will be planned and implemented by the local advisory groups that are to be established in each college area.

Immediately, regional meetings are being planned throughout the Province to acquaint the schools of nursing, participating hospitals and the colleges of the provincial guidelines established to help effect the transfer.

The transfer of nursing education from primarily a hospital setting into general education has been proposed for some years now. The establishment and growth of the colleges of applied arts and technology, which concentrate on diploma education, made the move more feasible.

McNie stated that his Ministry has a firm commitment to protect and, where possible, improve the quality of nursing education in Ontario. The transfer is not a criticism of the existing educational programmes, but rather an attempt to provide greater resources to the education of this important group serving the communities.

Health Sciences plan won't be scrapped

by Jennifer Grass

John Ackland, Acting Secretary to the Council for Queen's and Kingston Health Sciences Complex told the Journal that "we don't anticipate that the Complex will have to be scrapped" as a result of the recent freezes on hospital and university construction but "we will have more problems than we anticipated."

This is the second time that the medical centre has been the object of a government moratorium.

Plans for a new complex, first released in 1964 by Queen's and Kingston General Hospital were halted in January 1969. This was the result of a government policy designed to avoid duplication. Hotel Dieu had been planning separately, according to Ackland.

At that time the Queen's University and Affiliated Hospitals Council (Quafhop) was formed to undertake co-ordination of hospital planning in Kingston.

The proposed Complex now includes Kingston General Hospital, Hotel Dieu, St. Mary's of the Lake, Kingston Psychiatric, St. Lawrence College and the basic science department of Queen's University.

Two parts of the complex are already underway. These include an addition to St. Mary's and construction of a new ambulent-patient clinic at KGH.

Although planning will continue on the rest of the complex, construction will not start until the government again releases funds, "hopefully at the end of the one year moratorium", Ackland commented.

He also indicated that it is still not known how long the Health Sciences element of Queen's will be affected by the moratorium on university construction which Jack McNie, the Minister of Colleges and Universities said would last for "years."

The Council is presently in the process of setting up a meeting with senior officials in both the Ministry of Health and the Ministry of Colleges and Universities.

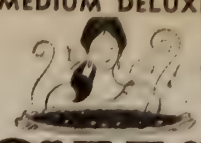
From this "we hope to discover what our future plans should be based on," Ackland said.

In negotiations the Council hopes to get recognition of the fact that many of the hospital facilities in Kingston are obsolescent and the Health Sciences facilities are small in relation to student input.

They will also have to reach a compromise with the Ministry of Health upon the appropriate number of beds in Kingston for long-term planning.

In November, Richard Potter, Minister of Health announced that the number of active treatment beds per 1000 people must be reduced to 4.5. Kingston, Sarnia and Thunder Bay were mentioned as municipalities where the ratio was considered inefficiently high.

Application of these government indeces is not accurate in Kingston because the hospitals provide community services



Continued on Page 7

- mossman

Nurses rub jocks the right way during the nursing back rub day. On Friday back rubs were available in the Polson room or wherever it could be arranged.

Kentucky Fried Chicken
542-2773
286 Montreal St.
Your closest Aunt Lucy's
Take Home Store

MEDIUM DELUXE

What a Pizza!
$2.90
PIZZA
PIZZA CHALET
544-1227
Open Daily 4 p.m. to 2 a.m.
FREE DELIVERY — CITY AND FORT HENRY HEIGHTS

newsbriefs

Intersession enlarged

The outlook for Intersession 1973 is very promising, according to Peter Stokes, the Administrative Officer for the Faculty of Arts and Science.

The positive reaction to last year's Intersession has encouraged several departments to offer additional courses, and the total number of courses proposed is substantially greater than last year.

Three courses, one each in Art History, Italian, and Music, will be offered in Venice, and have been recognized by the university as part of the Intersession program.

This year, for the first time, the School of Business will participate in Intersession, and five Commerce courses will be available.

Although no official forecast has been made, it is probable that enrollment this year will be higher than in 1972 because of the increased number of courses offered.

Students are strongly urged to register by February 16, 1973 because certain courses have only a limited number of places available and other will be withdrawn if minimum enrollment requirements are not met by that date. A late fee will apply for registrations after February 16.

All registration will be conducted through the Department of Extension, 25 Union St. and registration forms are available there.

IRC reveals policies

by Raj Anand

"The new residence fee structure will be released during the week of January 22", Kiloran German, President of the WRC , said after a Joint Residences Board meeting last Saturday morning. A statement about the proposed rise in residence fees will be sent to the Ontario government at that time.

The present maximum "allocation for living" allowance is thirty dollars per week, or $930 for thirty-one weeks, and is based on living out of residence. Under OSAP, Miss German said, residence life is considered a "luxury", but since one-third of Queen's students live in residence, this attitude must be revised. While the $930 maximum is fairly accurate in view of this year's fees, it will be far out of line next year.

Another topic discussed at the meeting was admission to the new West Campus residences. It was decided that for one year, the admission policy would be the following: the first priority would be to accommodate married, or pairs og single, Queen's students; unassigned rooms would then go to academic and non-academic staff, then to post-secondary students of other institutions, such as St. Lawrence College.

Bus-it referendum called

Bus-it referendum called

An agreement has been reached between the University, the AMS and McArthur College, whereby students may ride buses free between West Campus and Main Campus, this term only. This shuttle service is opposed to the total "bus-it" experiment in October in that the fare exemption only applies if you board at either end of the route. The plan is financed by the university.

However, there will be a preliminary meeting Tuesday between university representatives and the General Manager of the PUC, to agree on a final figure for twelve-month complete service, as based on the results of the survey taken in October.

Once this estimate has been reached, the AMS will hold a referendum on February 13 and 14 to establish whether or not students want this service next year enough to pay a few more dollars in student interest fees.

AMS Vice President Wally Palmer emphasizes that the stopgap measures taken this term between West and Main campuses will not apply next year. If the bus-it referendum is defeated next month, there will be no accomodation for West Campus students next year. He says that at first it is easy to reject the fee increase on the grounds that no one would ever use it, but that this thought falls apart after you think about it.He urges students to consider well before voting, since the value and possibilities of the scheme will become apparent.

The AMS wants to expand services to cover what students want, says Pres. Greg Leblanc. By testing out this idea, there is nothing to lose and much to gain.

11 openings

For Summer Employment

We have eleven openings to market essential teaching aids in our national teacher division.
Students earn an average of over four thousand dollars in twelve weeks.
If you are ambitious and want a "better" summer job, contact your placement office for an interview appointment.

Grolier of Canada

FOR INTERVIEWS ON JAN. 22
CONTACT YOUR PLACEMENT OFFICER

Queen's University Music Department
Festival '73
•Student films, feature films (Dupuis Auditorium)
•Art Workshops
•Art Demonstration
•Photography & Art Displays
•Blues & Folk Music
•Classical Music
Jan. 24, 25, 26, 27 8p.m.
Programmes at door Student's Union

to all DSC's
If your department has an idea that is:
1. academic
2. dealing with a reasonable sum of money
3. of some general appeal
If you can give a cost breakdown, location and time
There is $2000.available to DSC's to make use of.
Details will follow next week
start thinking

No sex discrimination in meds admissions

by Sandra Bernstein

The status of Women Committee of Queen's met Thursday with Dr. D.O.W. Waugh Dean and Vice Principal of Health Sciences and the chairman of the Admissions Committee for Medicine, who were aksed to explain their new admissions policy.

Although a few years ago there was a quota system, the policy in Medicine now is that sex must not be a factor in assessing applications.

There are over a thousand applications for seventy places every year. Forty percent of these are rejected initially, with the remaining applications being given careful study by the committee. Each committee member reads the applications independently of the other four, then the committee meets to evaluate the forms.

Students are admitted to Meds, as of September 1973, after two years of University, usually Life Sciences. The pre-med program is being discontinued at the end of this year. Applicants receive points for such qualifications as: marks in grade 13, first year, and second year; age (students over thirty are scrutinized carefully since their shorter careers would result in diminished returns to society); and certain subjective factors as the university attended (hard or easy marking), letters of reference, apparent motivation, and university program (difficult course or easy one). There is no definite written policy as to how this subjective analysis should be handled, which could be a cause of some unconscious discrimination, in the opinion of Miss Ida Smith, secretary of the Status of Women Committee.

However, figures support the claim of Dean Waugh that women are given equal opportunity. Fourteen percent of applicants are women, but nineteen percent of the class this year is women. This probably indicates that women who do apply are better qualified than their male counterparts. Meds accepts 6.5 per cent of the women who apply, as opposed to 4.5 per cent of men who apply. These figures, of course, vary slightly over the years. They tally with averages across the country, since the national average is 17 per cent female enrollment in Medicine. Saskatoon has the highest percentage, of 30 percent.

Reasons why sex is no longer a factor in admissions policies include the results of surveys and studies, which show that women make as good doctors as men, and continue to practice as often as male graduates. A study done at Western of its graduates in the sixties revealed that 85 per cent of its female grads in medicine were practicing, a figure as high as that for men.

The problem is, however, that although these policy changes have been effected, most women are unaware of this. Popular belief holds that women have great difficulty in being admitted to medicine. Mrs. Lin Good, chairman of the Status of Women Committee, is very anxious to find out why so few women apply to medicine, since in her view it is a career eminently suited (if such a thing exists) to women. She would like to hear from students who have perhaps considered applying, or who can give insight into the question. As head of Bibliographic Operations at Douglas Library, she can be reached at 547-3126. Alternately, students may contact Miss Smith in Academic Planning, at 547-2640.

Unlike other faculties, Medicine makes offers of admission to only as many people as there are vacancies, without making allowances for students who do not accept admission. Vacancies are then filled later in the year from a waiting list, when students may have already accepted elsewhere. Apparently, this is a policy common to all medical schools, based on limited beds in clinics and other limited facilities.

The admissions committee is chosen by election, but since Medicine has only four female faculty members, (not one of who is a department head), it is not surprising that the committee is all male. In certain subjective evaluations, some status of women committee members felt, this could be a source of discrimination. Applications have the student's name at the top, and Prof. Alan Green of Economics suggested at the meeting Thursday that it might perhaps be better if the top sixty percent of applications have the names removed during consideration of qualifications.

However, on the surface there does not appear to be any discrimination, and these suggestions were meant to improve the method of evaluation for applications.

The Status of Women Committee will be dealing next with the topics of University personnel policies, admissions to the Faculty of Business and Commerce, and Day Care on campus, a subject on which Mrs. Eva Flint, a committee member, is preparing a thorough report.

Mrs. Good, commenting on recent political pressure on universities to improve the status of women, said that the administration of this university has been conscious of the problem much longer than have politicians. She has also noted a marked change in attitude recently, as compared to ten years ago, in that there is a general awareness on campus of the need for equal rights.

Mrs. Good feels that many women who are in satisfactory positions now may not feel that the work of the committee affects them. However, one must realize how fast a person's status can change. Women must protect themselves against change, particularly in the matter of fringe benefits such as taxes, insurance, and pensions. As an example, Mrs. Good asks married women if they would be fully covered in these areas should they become widowed, separated or divorced. Could they act as the head of the house in all respects? Do unwed mothers with children have full rights if they are attending university or working here; are day care facilities adequate for basic needs and education? Often she says, young people without dependents do not ask themselves these questions. She hopes to hold informal group discussions in residences and with university employees.

Three faculties report

The Graduate Society is planning a "Grad Day" which will be a symposium open to the campus on February 10. This is the last day of International Week. The topic will concern the problems of foreign students in Canadian universities and various speakers will elaborate on this question. Jack McNie, minister of Colleges and Universities, is one of the scheduled speakers. The Grad Society is also getting organized for their elections which will be held in conjunction with the AMS elections on February 13 and 14. Doug Pritchard, President of Grad Society reported that he was glad to see that the Ontario Scholarships were renewed for next year, as over 2,000 students used them this year.

The Physical Education Society assisted the Tercentenary Committee Friday night when they acted as hosts to a skating party.

Coming events are the elections to be held in early March, and a grad banquet being planned for the forth year students.

From January 25-28, Ottawa U. is holding the annual Pecepoq, which is a big get-together of Physical Education Associations from Ontario and Quebec. These associations will contemplate the future of the Olympic games. Last year the Pecepoq was held at Queen's and the associations discussed "outdoor education."

For Open House on February 10-11th, Phys. Ed. will display dancing techniques and orienteering. They will also assist in guided tours for those interested.

Phys. Ed. is also organizing Snowball Athletic Night with Queen's competing against RMC.

Academically, the society is undergoing course evaluations.

Representatives of Queen's Engineering are gong to a conference next wekend in Toronto. This conference is being held by the Association of Professional Engineers. Queen's will present a paper on Technical Supplies as an example of student leadership and involvement.

In planning, are the Blood Drive in February, a Beer-Brewing Contest and elections.

In the next few weeks, the Engineering Society will be working on the problem of summer jobs. The Engineering Society will work on this as well as giving money to Job Bank. A survey is being conducted by Dave Rowe of the Placement Office and the Engineers on fourth year students and the jobs that they have worked on. This is to be able to find companies that have not hired students and then contact them abour hiring Queen's students.

Douglas Library

Budget cuts result in shorter hours

By Susan de Stein

The recent cutbacks in library hours and services is a result of a decision made by the Senate Library Committee. The move was made in light of the necessary library budgetary cutbacks, which amount to approximately $116,000 in the 1973-74 budget.

A motion stating that the highest priority should be given to maintaining funds for library resources, and where possible using funds from other sources, was passed 7-1 in favor, at a recent meeting of the committee.

First response had been to propose proportional distributing of the cuts among the budget items, such as service, books and materials.

The faculty representatives generally supported the motion of concertrating cutbacks in the area of services and seemed determined to preserve the book budget. It was also pointed out that even the same dollar budget would, because of price rises, mean a loss of 10-20 per cent in volumes acquired.

It did not seem that significant economies could be made by reducing hours of service; there would have to be a very marked reduction in hours of service to users before cost of direct service would be significaty reduced. There was the prospect of reducing by attrition some eighteen nonprofessional positions, especially many in the area of calaloguing.

The implications of staff attrition and redundancy must be discussed with the non-professional staff union. It should be possible to identify the redundant positions reasonably rapidly, so that attrition could be phased over six months leading into the new fiscal year. There was no thought of staff lay offs.

Dr. George A. Harrower, Vice-Prinicipal (Academics), said the university's real resources were increasing less than costs, and all areas of the university were facing budget reductions. It would be very difficult to retain the dollar value of the book funds, but he would be satisfied to see this attempted provided staff savings could be accomplished through attrition and natural causes. He pointed out that not all types of library materials might be equally vital. He said he would like to see the committee subdivide needs into categories by priority of use. He also felt tbat there should be a thorough review of possible savings through other changes.

One faculty member noted that the library is a major priority, a highly important area in an era of increasing competition for students. It was also pointed out that the maintenance of a strong academic staff could only be encouraged by a research library of high quality.

Dr. R. G. Greggs of the Geology department said he deplored the cutting of services merely to buy more books. Not only books but access to them was required, he added. He pointed out that the Geological Sciences branch library was now dependent on student help to maintain access. He suggested that modest cuts in departmental budgets would enable library services to be maintained.

Miss V. Parker (Health Science Librarian) also stressed that balance must be retained, and she felt that it was useless to stock books but to be unable to give service with them. An adequate interpretation of the library to readers is necessary with adequate cataloguing and reader assistance or there would be a waste of books not being used.

Bernard Gobin, the senior student representative on he committee felt very strongly against the service cutbacks, believing that a better balance between the areas of the acquisition of books and service could be made. He felt that a review of priorities was needed and recommended that the committee look into which areas were most important and which books were most used.

According to Gobin, the slight cutbacks in library hours, has not been the only result of the decision. The morale of the library staff is deteriorating, he commented. Gobin also said that "it was also open to question how representative faculty members on the committee are."

Boohoo and Teehee say:
SNOWBALL IS HAPPENING,
Jan. 29th - Feb. 4th

Queen's

Division of Concerts

presents

SECOLO BAROCCO

Quintet

DUNNING HALL SERIES NO. 2

Friday 19 January

8:30 p.m.

SOLD OUT

UBC students up in arms

(CUP) arts professors at the University of British Columbia may have forced a showdown with students following their emasculation of a proposal calling for student participation at all levels of the Arts faculty.

While the faculty voted to "accept the principle of student participation at meetings of the faculty and it committees" in addition to establishing a committee to consider appropriate arrangements for student representation, they were extremely unspecific as to where students will get voting power. In addition they have relegated the already established student negotiating committee to mere consultative status.

UBC Arts Undergraduate society president Brian Loomes has called for students to make a strong response to the motion which he called insulting.

The protest began in late November when 150 students invaded a faculty meeting to press their demands. They later met to form their demands and elect six members to sit on a negotiating committee which met with the faculty in December.

The focus of the present dissent is the exclusion of the phrase "at all levels of the faculty" in the faculty proposal, effectively limiting student power.

Objections were raised by Loomes to the exclusion of students from the faculty committee and their relegation to a consultative role.

Economics Professor Peter Pearce, who proposed the Dec. 13 motion, said he did it because the student position was inevitably unacceptable to the faculty.

Pearce said the faculty could not impose rules on individual departments, so he moved the deletion of "All levels of the faculty". He rejected the proposed student faculty committee to discuss representation because, he said, "The faculty needs a report from itself first."

Loomes said many students he had spoken with recognized they have been sold out and added that he will ask for a vote from students at a forum whether to accept or reject the proposal.

Loomes said he has been talking to some of the faculty members present at the meeting and his impression from them was the teachers were being arrogant and patronizing. He also felt some teacher were not taking it very seriously.

MONDAY, JAN. 22

a discussion with

SYL APPS

8:30 p.m.

Polson room

Student's Union

SKI SUTTON

Queen's Ski Club is making a return appearance Jan. 27-28

$30. weekend including

•bus • tows •accommodation meeting tonight

• 7:30 p.m. •Lower Vic

tickets on sale

• Jan. 18 • 7:30 p.m. • John Orr Room

Tickets for day trip to Whiteface (Sat., Jan. 20) go on sale Thurs., Jan. 18 at 8:30 p.m. in John Orr Room - price $14.00

Brandon U faces crisis

BRANDON (CUP) Brandon University faces a financial crisis, so severe its continued existence is in doubt. The university may be forced to give notice to at least 30 professors - between one quarter and third of its faculty - by the end of February, university president Lloyd Dulmage says.

The institution has been beset with mounting operating deficits and now a supplementary grant for being a new, developing university is no longer available.

A hypothetical budget prepared by Brandon U's advisory budget committee, found that about 30 professors and 27 members of the support staff would have to be fired.

The athletic budget would have to be cut from $101,000 to about $48,000, ending all inter-university sports.

Under the proposed budget no money would be available for student recruitment, fund raising programs, development programs or information services. A pension plan could not be implemented, and there could be no faculty sabbatical leaves or replacement of leaving staff.

Dulmage claims that if the university is to avoid making staff cuts it will not only need a 10 percent increase in its operating grant, but an additional $234,000. It would also need another $50,000 if a pension plan is to be implemented.

The committee which prepared the budget is composed of 13 administrators and staff members and only one student. There has been no indication whether greater student representation will be provided on committees that will decide which staff member to cut.

Stewardesses vs sexism

NEW YORK (CUP) Some 70 militant stewardesses, representing Stewardesses for Women's Rights and the Stewardesses Anti-Defamation Defense League, have pledged themselves to a drive designed to organize all stewardesses against sexist commercials, books, and movies.

JoAnne Chaplain, organizer of the Stewardesses Anti-Defamation Defense League, criticizes books such as "How to Make a good Airline Stewardess," movies such as the X-rated "Swinging Stewardesses", and commercials with slogans such as "Fly me" or "She'll Serve You All the Way".

"It is all very annoying and degrading," Chaplain said. "Especially bad is that book which has an especially lewd and suggestive title."

Judi Linsey, representative of Stewardesses for Women's Rights, suggested that such suggestive publicity often has a definite effect on some male passenger. "We are grabbed, pinced, felt, and even slapped," she said.

Lindsey also rapped the airlines' policy of forbidding stewardesses from objecting to offensive behavior on the part of passengers because the passenger may become angry and chose another airline next time.

"We are guilty until proven innocent," Lindsey said. "We are always wrong and the passenger is always right - no matter what."

The stewardesses also criticize the discriminitory practices of the airlines. The practices include physical requirements for stewardess but not for pilots; requirements forcing stewardesses to share crew quarters while pilots are allowed private quarters; requirements that stewardesses remain single while pilots are allowed to marry; and requirements of underwear inspection for women crew members.

One stewardess said "We want to get across that we are dedicated, hardworking girls who resent being labeled as anything else by idiots who are making money by slandering us."

AMS OUTER COUNCIL MEETING

Wednesday, January 17

7:00 p.m.

McLaughlin Room

ALL WELCOME

Kingston disabled get help

A new group, Operation Concern has begun to provide a new service which is directed primarily at assisting the aged and disabled. The programme will be funded through the Local Initiatives Programme. Since the majority of those in the group hopes to assist are likely to be living on rather low fixed incomes, the service will be free.

The service will undertake to give assistance to these people in several ways: to make necessary emergency repairs to homes, equipment or appliances; to help with snow removal from pathways and steps; to clean yards and basements; to do light housework; to wash windows; to cut lawns; to help with letter writing; to read to the aged; to provide periodic companionship; to walk dogs; to provide free transportation; and to do other services which may be requested.

It is hoped that the student community can help the Operation in a number of ways; first, to refer anyone they feel could use our service to us; and second, by offering your assistance in any way possible.

The members of Operation Concern can be contacted during the hours 9:00 to 5:00 at the office at 544-5433, or in the evenings by contacting Robert Pellarin at 544-4659.

Presence of guards, reduces theft

By Michael Burrows

The Queen's Physical Education Centre has been experimenting with commissionaires for almost two months as a means of halting theft and vandalism in the building. The commissionaire is located inside the Union St. entrance to the Centre. Mr. R. W. Allan, Manager of Facilities and Services, seemed pleased with the almost immediate drop in the number of incidents. "Our problem was not as bad, maybe, as that in other local rinks, but it still warranted some kind of action."

Not only had there been thefts in the locker rooms, broken fixtures and equipment, and cases of men in the women's dressing rooms, but members of the staff, including Mr. Allan, had been physically threatened when trying to expel teenagers from the building.

One thing which the presence of a commissionaire has no control over, obviously, is theft and vandalism when the building is vacant and supposedly locked for the night. "People manage to find some way in and go to great lengths to destroy whatever they could," Mr. Allan said Patrollers, among other means, are being used at night as well as together with the commissionaire during the day.

One problem, which was more a nuisance than anything else, was that of kids wandering through the building and playing on equipment. (There is the possibility of legal action if a child is injured). Their removal has resulted in quite a noticeable improvement, as far as most users of the facilities are concerned.

Unfortunately, children and teenagers are not the only abusers of the facilities. Mr. Allan hinted at older persons, possibly from Queen's, being responsible in some instances. Students, themselves, could be helpful in reporting such cases.

The cost of the commissionaire vs. the reductin in expense due to the almost complete removal of theft and and vandalism incidents has made the experiment a solid success. Mr. Allan also emphasized that the added safety (and privacy) of those using the facilities could not be measured.

Although the commissionaire's installation has proven effective, Mr. Allan fears a renewal of trouble if the programme is stopped and indicated an indefinite term for the uniformed door attendant.

perry

Debate proceeds on interdisciplinary studies

Dr. George Whalley of the Department of English is expressing fears that the Senate Committee on Academic Development is headed toward a "shop window" approach to their discussions of interdisciplinary studies. He warned that with the trend towards departments becoming disciplines in themselves, a "more fundamental basis to all studies must be found."

Heated discussions have been brewing in the Committee over the establishment of courses which would cross faculty lines and take a generalized approach to specific human problems, a mandate which SCAD received last year.

The course has been the subject of discussion since the AMS made an attempt at establishing its counter-courses in 1969. It was brought before the Senate last year and then sent to SCAD for review.

Dr. A. J. Coleman head of the Mathematics Department and a member of SCAD, felt that ultimately the university has to develop skills in dealing with issues of important demand and this is the role of interdisciplinary studies.

Coleman, stressed that the university's role is more than just an intellectual exercise. He pointed out that "it is easy for a professor to get lost in fascinating intellectual exercises and forget that ultimately the university has no meaning apart from its overall interaction with society."

Dr. Whalley has shown serious concern in SCAD that the course would be far too superficial, noting that a "little knowledge" is easy to come by for anyone with a reasonable university training.

"It is not the responsibility of the university to offer superficial courses on peripheral minority pre-occupations simply because it is possible," he remarked. For Whalley the university must be a much more universal experience.

Coleman stated that, "he heard it alleged that a course on nature, science and man co-ordinated by the Department of Chemical Engineering does not have sufficiently deep philosophical content to be worthy of credit in the Faculty of Arts and Science". He reported that this was "pure nonsense" and that it "certainly has more philosophical content than a course in any language such as Old English, Russian or French which have been accepted for decades as proper courses in the faculty."

However, Whalley has expressed a more radical function for the university than that espoused by Coleman. "We must develop the mental and emotional capacity of students so that they will know how to find the problem and sustain their thinking on it". He feared that, in an interdisciplinary course such as that proposed, information can not be presented in such a way that it will encourage sustained reflection.

Coleman showed more partiality towards professors of definite beliefs who could "analyse the human situation, diagnose our problems and using all the intellectual resources that could be brought to ear from the scholarly disciplines, suggest possible solutions.

He questioned the objections to using material pertinent to some large social issue in training students' minds. He called for use of an issue as the material in which the student exercises his mind.

Whalley emphasized the importance of defining what is a discipline in determinging their structure. The definition, he felt, centres around a specific function of mind that involves certain mental capacities. It is the purpose of the department, he claimed to invoke this function.

The ideal structure, he felt, is one which will find the functions of mind central to all departments, the ones which would "penetrate and sustain inquiry". It is the bringing together of issues on an interdisciplinary level which concerned him as being a distraction from that primary purpose.

"All the government is doing with cutbacks in education is limiting enrollment to those who can afford it. The onus is on the government to reveal what its policy for higher education is."

Show your concern with the future of education in Ontario

THE AMS URGES YOU TO

WITHHOLD FEES

BBC, 100 years of Marxism

On Thursday, January 11th, the Department of History presented the first three films in a series of nine entitled 100 Years of Marxism, a BBC TV produced series.

The first film, The New Dynamics, suggested that although history has not proceeded as Marx predicted, it was a popular theory. The film offered the fundamental reasons for this popularity.

It was suggested that Marxism established an intellectual framework for the politicians. According to Marx, socialism and consequently communism were inevitable for the advancement of society. A second reason given for the popularity of Marxism was cited as its revolutionary appeal. As the dialectical theory states, capitalism contains the seeds of its own destruction. Thus it gave hope to the working class that things would be better.

The revolutionary myth in the theory creates an idea of ineluctable power. Marx believed that as the proletariate were the largest class they should control the governing of the state. This thinking has produced a psychological effect on the proletariate, in that they are no longer considered insignificant.

The Theory of Revolution, the second film, describes the build up of socialism in the 19th century. The movie spent a good deal of time describing the physical stature of Marx and the respect that he held as a great thinker.

It was pointed out that Marx believed society would progress to the point at which everyone would work according to his ability and receive according to his needs. Because there would not be any surplus produce, men would be able to spend more time thinking. Marx, suggesting how this would come about said there would be a revolution in highly industrialized societies, leading to a dictatorship by the proletariate and leading eventually to the dissolution of the 'state'. This then would be communism in the true sense. Thus it was emphasized in the film that Marx, in his deterministic theory, felt that communism was the logical progression from capitalism.

The third film, The Socialist Dilemma, traced the movement of socialism in Europe. As it became evident that there was a vast difference between the opulence of the land-owners and the squalor of the workers, Marx's ideas became popular. When Marx formed the first International Working Mens Union, which eventually collapsed due to internal disagreement, the industrialists began to realize that there was a need for improved working conditions. A second International Working Mens Union was more successful due to the increasing optimism that communism was inevitable.

When war broke out in 1914 the Socialist Democratic Party in Germany, thought to be the leaders of the movement agreed with the German government and decided to support the war effort. National chauvinism replaced Marxiam dedication.

The movies showed a general trend toward the thought that 'Marx may have been wrong, but if he was, he was more effectively wrong than anyone else in history".

The next three films in the series are entitled The Strategy of Revolution, Was Stalin Necessary?, and Education and Goulash. They will be shown on Thursday January 18th at 7:30 in Sterling 'D'.

Vanier will come to Queen's

Jean Vanier, son of the late Governor General and Madame Vanier, will return to Queen's campus on February 2, to speak to Education students and faculty. This event is open also to all members of Queen's and will take place in the Auditorium of McArthur Hall on the west campus, 10:30 - 12:30, on the morning of February 2.

Last year, Dr. Vanier spoke to capacity audiences on both parts of the campus as well as downtown in the Grand Theatre. This year, only this one address will be given, sandwiched between morning and afternoon visits to two district prisons, before he leaves at 4:00 p.m. for other visits in Montreal.

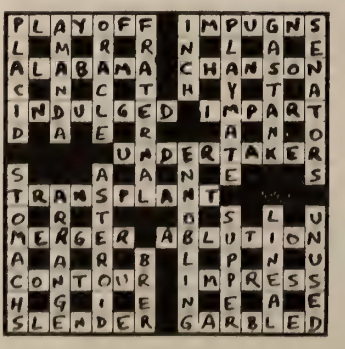
Jean Vanier has become widely known and admired for his work and life among mentally handicapped persons in France, India and now in Canada, at Richmond Hill, Ontario. He took up this work after experience in the British and Canadian navies, followed by doctoral studies in philosophy, and teaching in Saint Michael's College, Toronto. His sensitive feeling for the predicament of both "wounded" people and so-called "normal" people is powerfully expressed in his books, Tears of Silence, and Eruption to Hope.

In recent years he has enlarged his efforts to include work with prisoners. It is primarily his concern for the prisoners in the Kingston area that brings him here each February.

WUSC welcomes new members

Once a cross-Canada campus phenomenon, the World University Service (of Canada) has carried on quietly and in a much smaller way on many university campuses in our country. Here at Queen's interest has been maintained largely by faculty members who worked actively with the organization while they were students and some who have continued to take an interest after participating in a World University Service of Canada summer overseas travel-study seminar. Dr. Deutsch, Principal of Queen's himself directed one of these seminars.

The lack of student involvement in World University Service of Canada led to its virtual eclipse on the Queen's campus as a force for making campus and community aware of educational problems in the Third World. However, a small group of involved students has begun activities; a local committee is forming.



World University Service is in a sense the United Nations of the universities of the world; it is dedicated to overcoming the barriers to education in whatever form these arise. World University Service of Canada has pioneered in many worthwhile areas in the past, such as student health (especially mental health), universal accessibility to education, organizing services to foreign students in Canada and instigating Canadian University Service Overseas, to name just a few. Internationally as well, Canadians have been in the forefront, and the present Chairman of World University Service International is a Canadian, Prof. Walburn Fox-Decent.

World University Service is a unique organization in many respects; it is really the only organization in the world that has consistently brought together faculty and students as equals in the pursuit of common goals. Locally three students have gone overseas on seminars in the last two summers, and others are applying for 1973. We have several members of faculty working with the local committee, particularly in such areas as development of education for the public and fund-raising for overseas relief projects.

The local committee would be pleased to welcome anyone who wishes to work with us - no qualifications or experience is necessary. You will find it a useful learning exercise, meet some fascinating people, and perhaps discover some realities of the world about us. A party has been planned to meet everyone informally; if interested call Kaspar Pold at 547-2807 or Ilyas Absar at 547-2986.

crossword solution

Tuesday, January 9,

NB: High School

LIAISON Committee People

All people who returned to their high schools over the holidays will please meet

7:30 p.m.
Wednesday, Jan. 17th
Stirling D

Ban Righ Fireside

TONIGHT - 5.45 p.m.

Featuring: Lubomyr Melnyk (piano)

Faculty of Education
Queen's University
Kingston, Ontario

BACHELOR OF EDUCATION DEGREE

University graduates are invited to apply for admission to the eight-month program leading to the Bachelor of Education degree and Ontario teacher certification for elementary or secondary schools. Applicants must have an undergraduate degree or be eligible for graduation by September, 1973.

FEATURES

The Faculty of Education occupies a new academic-residential complex, Duncan McArthur Hall.

The Faculty of Education's forward-look program, in line with current and emergent educational needs, emphasizes the human dimension in education. The students have many options in course selections where, consistent with the importance of personal and professional development, evaluations are based on continuous assessment, not term examinations alone.

The students participate fully in the administration and planning of the Faculty of Education.

INFORMATION

For further information and application forms, telephone 613-547-6280 or write to:

The Registrar,
Faculty of Education,
Duncan McArthur Hall,
Queen's University,
Kingston, Ontario.

Are you taking a fresh look at life and people?
Where you fit in?
Welcome to the Listening Post
Ban Righ, opposite the grandfather's clock
Tuesday 10-noon, 3-5 p.m.
Wednesday 2-4 p.m.
Thursday 8:30-10:30 p.m.

UNDER GROUND COMIX
Fabulous Furry Freak Brothers
Mother's Oats
Slow Death, etc.
Lou Williams Smoke Shop
213 Princess St.

Part-time waiters & waitresses
Due to business, Brown Steak House requires more staff Must be neat in appearance
Apply in person
Capri Motor Hotel
271 Princess St.

Department of Film Studies
Presents
L'AVVENTURA
MICHELANGELO Antonioni, 1960
With English Sub-titles
8:00 p.m. in Ellis Hall
Admission $1.50

If interested in a place to live next year
SCIENCE '44 CO-OP
will be holding information nights
Tuesday, Jan. 16 Victoria Hall
Wednesday, Jan. 17 Leonard Hall
Thursday, Jan. 18 West Campus
Monday, Jan. 22 Morris Hall
7 p.m. each night
come and meet us

Charlton Heston
in
The OMEGA MAN
THURSDAY, 7:00 & 9:30 PM
DUNNING AUD., ONE DOLLAR
- CINEGUILD -

2500 withholding

Western students win OSAP cheques

LONDON (CUP) — Student action in the Ontario fees withholding scored another victory Friday, when the University of Western Ontario agreed to release student aid money to students who haven't paid their second tuition installment.

The administration concession followed an all-night sit-in at the UWO fees office by about 40 students.

As of Friday some 2,500 students have reportedly not yet paid their full fees. Student Council observers would not guess how many of this number were actually withholding, but say if the administration had agreed to release the cheques at the beginning of the week rather than at the end, the number would have been "higher". Final figures will not be available until the end of the week.

were the first displays of student militancy on those usually staid campuses in recent memory.

The UWO administration had taken the hardest line against releasing student award money until second term fees had been paid, although five other universities had agreed last month to release the cheques.

The UWO students occupied their fees office Thursday evening after an ad hoc student council meeting voted for the move. First on their minds were the actions on the two York campuses, and they decided to emulate the tactic.

UWO President Carleton Williams spoke student leaders, to York President David Slater who had given in to identical student demands the previous day, and to Jack McNie, Minister of Colleges and Universities. McNie advised Williams to release the student aid money but give students a note saying the money was granted on the condition tuition would be paid with it.

The struggle suffered a setback at the University of Windsor only minutes after the UWO occupation had succeeded Friday. About 20 Windsor students occupied their fees office and chained the door also demanding the release of student aid money, but about 15 minutes later the chains were cut by campus security officers.

The occupiers remained seated across the doorway but students wanting to pay their fees were able to pick their way through them.

"Business was normal" fees official Joseph Schiller said. "In fact better than normal." After a few minutes the occupiers decided to leave.

The University of Ottawa Students Federation has called off the withholding on its campus because only 14 students paid their fees into the federation-sponsored trust fund, rather than pay to the University. U of O administrators sent stern letters to students warning them of late fees and deregistration procedures should they fail to pay tuition.

Davis ducks student's questions

LONDON (CUP) — There must have been somewhere else Premier William Davis would rather have been Sunday afternoon.

At home in Brampton watching the Super Bowl game or continuing his earlier luncheon meeting with delegates to the Ontario Progressive Conservative Campus Association and other party faithful at the University of Western Ontario's Great Hall.

Anywhere but in the Business Administration Building at that same campus avoiding questions from hostile students about cutbacks in university financing.

About 40 students marched from the fees building (which was being occupied by students) to the business school to confront Davis. The group paraded in the hallways and entered the room greeting him with boos and jeers and shouts of "no more cutbacks".

But OPCCA delegates backed up Davis with cheers and applause.

"Where were you, chickenshit?" yelled one student, referring to Davis' not attending a proposed meeting with demonstrators in the occupied fees building.

"Sit down," shouted the Davis supporters.

Jeff Lawrence, a third year law student read a statement from the students who occupied the fees building, which outlined the group's reason for opposing the tuition fee increase, and the university's decision to withhold Ontario Student Aid cheques if tuition fees are not paid. (The administration decided Friday to release remaining student aid cheques.)

Lawrence's reading brought applause from most of the 250 members of the audience but no reaction from the PC delegates

Student Council president Robert Stikeman asked Davis how the university could cope with rising costs and fewer grants.

Universities must cope with cost increases within themselves using "creativity in methods of administration" to do so said Davis.

Davis claimed the number of university students began decreasing before the financial butbacks. The enrolment drop was due to other factors.

"They found out what sort of places the universities are," said one audience member.

"No one forces one to go to university," replied Davis to applause from PC members.

"What's the alternative,

Continued on Page 10

1673 QUEEN'S TERCENTENARY OPEN HOUSE
Kingston, Ontario

Queen's Tercentenary Open House '73, a part of Queen's participation in Kingston's Tercentenary celebrations, will be held Saturday and Sunday February 10, 11. Open hours are scheduled for Saturday 10 am to 4 pm and Sunday from 12 noon to 4 pm. This column will be a regular feature in the Journal in the closing weeks before Open House '73 to keep you informed on what will be presented.

Features:

Richard Tinline of the Geography Department will be giving a mini lecture on "Spread of Contagious Diseases Among School Children in Kingston."

Any visitors interested in participating are invited by the Music Department to get involved in an electronic piano laboratory.

Occupational and physical therapist students will demonstrate crutch walking, electro stimulation and psychiatric testing.

The Psychology Department offers tours of their research facilities. Planned tours are also scheduled for the Computer Centre and the Mechanical Engineering Labs.

"How I found true happiness becoming a statistician and helping doctors to detect brain damage, meat companies decide how to cut hogs for bigger profits, and farmers to store manure odorlessly" is the intriguing topic of Dr. Donald Watts lecture in Jeffrey Hall.

As well, the Economics Department will be presenting a lecture on "The Macro Policy Game."

Take a different look at household objects and materials when the Mechanical Engineering Department makes stress and fatigue tests on them.

Watch this column for more information on Queen's Tercentenary Open House '73.

Medical centre

Continued from Page 1

along with special regional services to a geographical area with a population of 300,000, according to Ackland.

Another anticipated problem is that while building around KGH, they must ensure that the existing hospital can go on functioning.

Although uncertain about when funds will be released, Ackland assured the Journal that "nothing has come to a grinding halt."

The course

The increase in the use of student evaluation of teaching performance has paralleled the developing involvement of students in university government. In the United States student evaluations have been in evidence at least since the Second World War (Harvard had an anti-calendar as early as 1924), while in Great Britain such evaluations are relatively rare even today. In Canadian universities student evaluations were virtually unknown until relatively recently, but now they are in evidence almost universally. In a recent survey of Canadian universities by the Committee, 31 out of 36 responding institutions indicated that some use was made of student evaluations of instructors. Five institutions said no such use was made, but of these, three of the negative responses were somewhat equivocal ("not on any formal basis", "no, but next year yes in Natural Sciences", "not supposed to be").

—From the Report of the Professional Orientation Committee to the Council of the Canadian Association of University Teachers (C.A.U.T.), April, 1972.

Scene One. It is the second week of the first term at quiet Queen's. The instructor faces his class, knowing he must dispose of a piece of rather tedious business. "By now you've probably all heard of the DSC, and this class must elect . . ." Through the yawns, the avoided eyes and the pokes in the ribs a wavering hand is seen to surface, somewhat reluctantly volunteering to undertake the hazardous task. His or her name is forgotten at once by half the people in the class, filed under "Irrelevant."

Scene Two. A colder December afternoon, with Christmas exams fast approaching. Everyone's time is valuable. Another piece of irritating business, taking up everyone's valuable time.. "Please fill out this questionnaire and return it to me in the next class . . ."It is buried under three weeks' notes, perhaps to be answered, perhaps not.

It isn't hard to be apathetic. Student course evaluation questionnaires have become an accepted (or so it seems) part of our annual academic environment, a ritual to be performed with less and less discussion. But just how valuable are these surveys? And are they accepted by all members of the university - or is opinion polarized between those who are enthusiastic, those who condemn them, and the vast middle who don't really care?'

REALLY CARE?

A faculty viewpoint of some of the limitations of student evaluations is found in an article in the December, 1972 edition of the CAUT Bulletin. Except perhaps in introductory courses, argue the authors, "the use of evaluations as an aid to course selection is extremely limited due to the large turnover in the assignment of individual faculty members to particular classes." A second problem is that the content of courses is often changed from year to year by the faculty, making a past evaluation out of date. "And even greater limitation is the fact that evaluations of this sort usually stress classroom performance and pay little attention to the teaching activities which take place outside the lecture hall-ranging from informal advice to the structured seminar or tutorial." Sometimes a "political" bias will taint these evaluations, if students envision their role as "watchdog of the faculty."

But the CAUT report does not completely condemn course evaluation. "Whatever the scientific limitations of student-initiated evaluations, the results from our survey clearly showed that they can be a source of beneficial indirect pressure on faculty and that in many universities evaluations of teaching by administration or by faculty themselves was only begun after the student association had set up plans to produce a counter-calender."

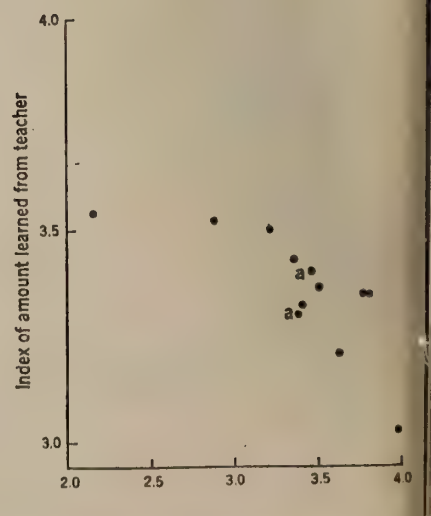
Queen's University has had an official system of course evaluation in the Faculty of Arts and Science for two years now. Both "counter-calendars" produced have caused some controversy, and many have questioned their accuracy. This university, then, should be especially interested in some of the recommendations of Professors Knapper, McFarlane and Scanlon, authors of the CAUT report. They conclude, among other things, that:

1. Evaluations by students should be encouraged as a means of providing faculty with feedback concerning student attitudes to teaching performance.
2. The instruments involved should be as reliable and valid as possible.
3. The use of results from student evaluations of classroom performance to provide evidence for decisions on the granting of tenure, promotion or merit increases should be treated with extreme

Do entertainment and marks go together

It has often been argued that a "bad" professor, who is not very successful or "entertaining" in "putting across" his subject, will have the best students, because his students will have to work on their own in order to make up for his own "deficiencies". This thesis receives some support in an article by Miriam and Burton Rodin, two California professors, in an article in the September 29, 1972 issue of Science.

The authors surveyed twelve sections of an identical calculus course, with a total of 293 students. As a control, one instructor had two sections. Three measures were obtained for each of the sections: initial ability in calculus, amount learned by the students (objective measure of teacher effectiveness), and student evaluation of the instructor (subjective measure of teacher effectiveness). The amazing consistency of the results is shown in the diagram. "The points labelled a represent the outcome for the two sections taught by the same instructor; their closeness is informal evidence for the reliability of the data. The instructors with the three lowest subjective scores received the three highest objective scores. The instructor with the highest subjective rating was lowest on the objective measure."



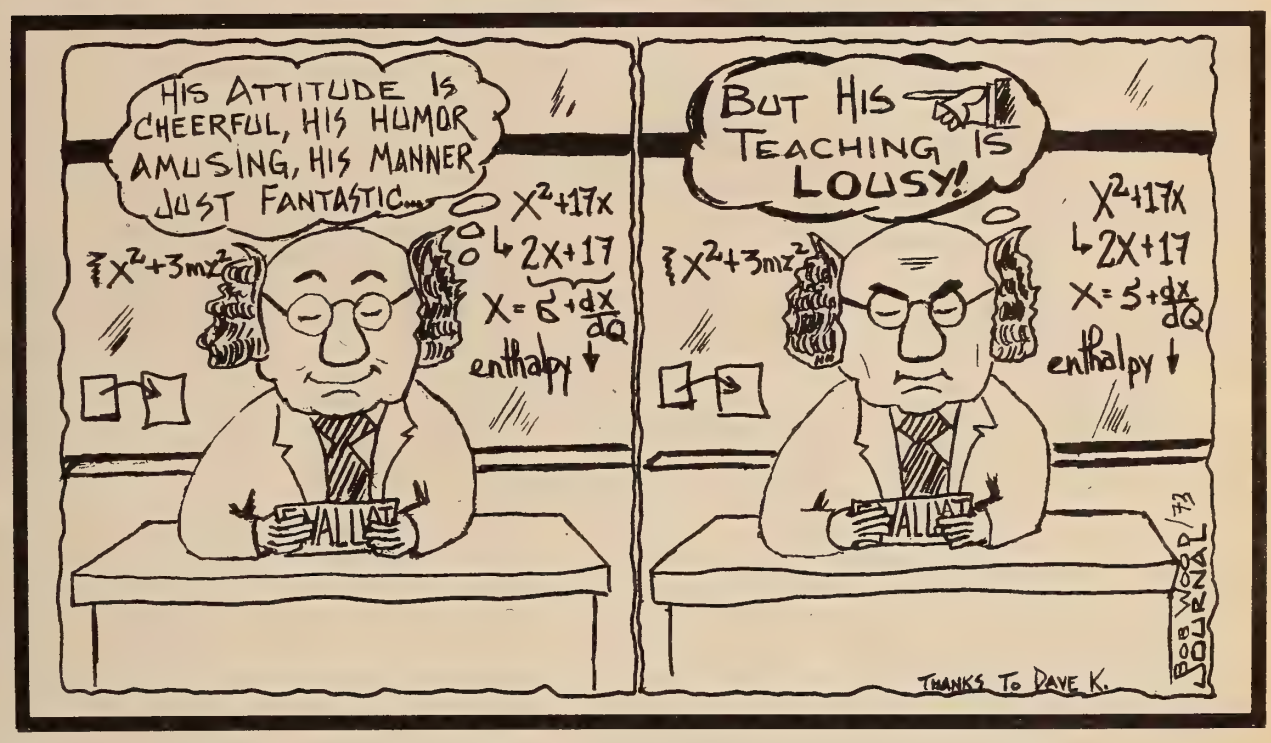


Fig. 1. Relationship between objective and subjective criteria of good teaching ($r = -.75$). The points labeled a are for two sections taught by the same instructor.

evaluation

caution.

4. Evaluation procedures, to be effective, must have strong faculty involvement in planning, administration and interpretation of results.

5. Such evaluations should under no circumstances be used by university administrations as the principal means of assessing teaching performance.

Opinion among faculty at Queen's it is often said, is far from unanimous on the question of the merit of course evaluation. To test this, I asked the opinions of four Heads of Departments on course evaluation - and received two responses which could be called positive, two which could be labelled negative. Whether this is indicative of faculty (and, perhaps, student) opinion on the whole remainsto be seen.) (Letters, please, campus.)

Dr. A. J. Coleman, Head of the Math Department, told me that in his opinion, and in the opinion of most of his colleagues, course evaluation had been "very worthwhile" - despite certain limitations. He noted that evaluations made during a course, and those made of the same course two years after completing it, tended to differ in their estimate of the course's merit. He pointed out that a recent article in Science had demonstrated that "Students rate most highly instructors from whom they learn least," - i.e., that there may be an inverse ratio between professorial "entertainment value" and student achievement. (See article elsewhere on this page).

The Math Department has been carrying out such surveys for 10 years. Generally, the reaction of students has been found helpful - and the most valuable comments have often been in asides where a student remarks, coughs too much, or has illegible handwriting, or turns his back to the class while making an important point.

Student opinion is sought on the question of tenure in the Math Department, but not by means of course evaluation questionnaires. Rather, submissions are sought from 10 students who have attended the staff member's classes in the last two years.

Dr. Coleman was emphatic that these evaluations, though of use in improving a staff member's courses, were "not being used in a significant manner to determine the career of a staff member."

Education is a learning-teaching process - and learning is the main part of the process, not teaching. A "bad" professor often makes his students work the hardest. This is not to say, said Dr. Coleman, that the idea of a university is to have horrible professors. Ideally, students and profs should interact, and the profs will encourage the students to learn. He noted Cardinal Newman's preference of a university with poor professors and good students to one with good professors and poor students.

Finally, he commented on Jerry Buck's article in last Friday's Journal. Buck argued that the recommendations contained in Appraisal 72 (i.e. Profiles 72) were being lost in a welter of Departmental red tape. The Math Department, however, has taken some notice of the pamphlet, for on January 5, 42 staff members, and several students, went over the recommendations in Profiles 72. So it would appear that in one department, at any rate, the course evaluations are having some positive, if limited, results.

Dr. A. T. Stewart, Head of the Physics Department, also reported positive results from the system of course surveys which the Physics Department have been carrying out for some time - long before there was such a thing as the DSC. "Our students wondered why DSC was invented." Student opinion is taken into account in questions of tenure, but this is only one factor taken into consideration. He told me that he had not seen Profiles 72 but would like to for the previous countercalender had contained "some reasonable comments". On the whole, he said, physics students evaluated courses "fairly reasonably", and hence their comments had been found valuable and had been taken into consideration.

The Head of the Psychology Department, Dr. Dodwell, was not so enthusiastic about the present system of course evaluation. The results obtained, he felt, needed to be "taken with a very large grain of salt", because (1) the proportion of the class answering tended to be small (i.e. apathy), and (2), there was a real problem and danger in confusing entertainment value with educational value. He cited the article in Science as an example of the limitations of surveys. As an alternative, the Psychology Department is considering the method known as "Behavioural Objectives", which hopefully will take some of the pressure of student course evaluations off professors. The Professor under this system will state at the beginning of the course what he is trying to achieve and what he expects students to do. At the end of the year, the class rate how well the objectives have been met. The method of assessment is "behavioural" in the same fashion as a typing course whose objective is that students should learn how to type 40 words a minute.

Dr. Lele, Head of the Sociology Department, was not pleased with present methods of course evaluation. He told me that he had not seen Profiles 72. He argued that present course evaluations attempt to quantify elements of the learning-teaching process which are qualified. The only meaningful kind of course evaluation, he said, was one which recognized that education is a joint learning experience of students and professors. A constant evaluation of a course under those guidelines might be possible - but it would require a lot of work, and Dr. Lele, who said he was "somewhat cynical" about the business of course evaluation, argued that "Most students don't care."

He objected to the idea of course evaluation as conflicting with his basic philosophy of university. If the university is simply a mirror reflection of society, then the students can be seen as consumers and the professors as producers of an educational product - or vice versa, when the process is viewed from the point of view of the professor's pocketbook. The comparative spirit in which you evaluate people is the same as the comparative spirit in which you evaluate products - but this is not what learning is all about. The basic problem of student course evaluations can never be solved,regardless of the methods used, because they are based in mistrust. "Rather than evaluating each other, we should see what we can learn together."

Energy crisis is an international problem

by Sue Wishart

The energy shortage currently facing many countries, especially the United States, concerns Canada as much as any other nation, according to W.G. Morison, designer of the Pickering nuclear power station and assistant director of the Generations Project at Ontario Hydro. In a panel discussion here last week on "Nuclear Power and the Energy Crisis", Dr. Morison claimed that although Canada's energy resourses are more than adequate to satisfy domestic needs, "energy is an international commodity" and cannot be considered in a nationalistic sense.

This opinion was echoed by Major A. Nellestyn, a nuclear engineer from National Defense Headquarters. As international energy requirements grow and fossil fuel reserves diminish, the need for alternate power sources becomes more and more critical. Aaccording to Maj. Nellestyn, this need can best be met by the use of nuclear energy because it is an unlimited power supply. Nuclear power also provides energy "With less detriment to the environment than most fossil fuels" - it produces much less air pollution.

G.E. Radcliffe, a "concerned Kingston resident" expressed anxiety about the potentially hazardous effects of radioactive contamination from nuclear reactors. He claimed that the incidence of leukemia and birth defects would rise as more reactors were operated to meet the need for nuclear power. Dr. Morison, Maj. Nellestyn and Dr. E.G. Letourneau, who represented the Department of Health and Welfare, were all quick to emphasize that the government's stringent regulations on nuclear power production are designed to prevent any leaks of radioactive material, and that because of this, nuclear reactors are very safe.

"It was no rooftop shootout..."

"It was no rooftop shootout, but I had all these mental images that someone was out to get me" joked Queen's student Joy Farmer, referring to the five pellet shattered windows in her third floor apartment. Last Friday night Joy heard what sounded like stones hitting her kitchen window only to discover that it had been shattered by a 22 pellet. Saturday morning four more of her windows were hit by more than a dozen shots. Ms. Farmer said "I grabbed the cat, and on hands and knees I crawled to the refrigerator, got a beer and a ham sandwich, and still on hands and knees returned to my study to wait for the police to arrive." Although the pellets shattered five three by two foot double-paned. aluminum storm windows and pierced two screens, they lost their momentum by the time they reached the interior windows and merely ticked them. Upon inspection police also discovered the windshield of a car in the parking lot next to her Princess Street apartment which had also been the sniper's target, and this proved to be his undoing. By tracing the angles of the shots, police pinpointed a Brock Street apartment across the parking lot. The "sniper" turned out to be a fourteen year-old who had received a new 22 pellet gun for Christmas from his mother. Danny is now looking for a job to pay for the windows.

Davis faces students

Continued from Page 7

Bullshit Billie," shouted another member of the audience.

Student Council Vice-President (education) Adrien Hershell referred to a section in the report of the Commission on Post Secondary Education which calls on students to pay half the total cost of their education. Davis refused to comment on the grounds the report is not yet final. He repeated an earlier promise that tuition fees would not increase in 1973-74.

"And the loan ceiling?" Hershell asked.

Davis replied "I don't know. I know what you want. . ."

Davis said the COPSEC report recommendation could lead to a "completely new approach to student assistance" which could be based on the "ability of the person to pay related to the income they've earned" after graduation, Davis said.

Second year law student Ross McGregor asked what students could do to stop the "Deterioration in the quality of education caused by the cutbacks in the universities." He cited inadequate library facilities and faculty cuts as potential sources of deterioration.

Davis replied "we do not want to see the quality of programs deteriorate. As to what each individual institution can do, I can't help you with that".

Not everyone was satisfied with the response to their questions. Peter Trodscha accused Davis of dodging questions, after a query about student housing.

"When we ask a philosophic question you answer with a specific example. When we ask a specific question you answer with generalities. And that's just your style, Bill."

Queens Arts Festival

(Jan 24-27) still needs helpers and demonstrators for craft workshops, macrame, batik. No workshops without your help. Contact Carol Rogers at 544-1737 or 544-9196.

INTERSESSIONAL PROGRAMME

May 14 to June 26, 1973

This Intersession program has been designed to make available a selection of both introductory and advanced degree courses to both currently registered intramural and extramural students at Queen', and applicants who meet the admission requirements of the University. Candidates for this program are urged to take note of the fact that registration by FEBRUARY 16TH, 1973, is highly advisable since certain courses have only a limited number of places available, and others will be withdrawn if minimum enrolment requirements are not met by this date.

Biology
12 030 - Living Systems
12 307 + and 12 407 + Field Camps
12 537 Problems in Biological Research

Chemistry
17 283 Organic Chemistry

Commerce
20-112 + Accounting II
20-121 + Introduction to Finance
20-151 + Human Behaviour in Business I
20-315 + Current Issues in Financial Accounting
20-381 + Business Law I

Computing and Information Science
22-101 + - Introduction to Computing (May 8 to June 8)
22 102 + - Computer Organization and Programming I (May 28 to June 22)

Economics
29-110 - Principles of Economics
29-210 - Modern Economic Theory

Film
34-310 Fundamentals of Film Production
34-423 - The Director's Cinema

French
35-011 - (1st part)- En France comme si vous y etiez (This is a full course taught over both Intersession and Summer School sessions)

Geography
38-323 + - Historical Geography
38-336 + - Spatial Interaction: Movement and Networks

History
46-274 - Race Relations in North America
46-277 - Europe Since 1870
46-284 - The Seizure of Power in Historical Perspective

Mathematics
55-005 + - An Introduction to Algebra (the first half of 55-004)
55-162 - Probability and Statistics

Music
64-314 - Studies in Mediaeval and Renaissance Music

Philosophy
77 110 Introduction to Philosophy

Physical & Health Education
78 241 + History of Sport and Physical Education (Also Level II activity courses in Rugger, Soccer, Field Hockey, Track and Field)

Physics
79 102 General Physics

Politics
81 280 Empiral Analysis of Political Behaviour
81 332 American Government

Portuguese
85 100 Introductory Portuguese

Psychology
84 100 Principles of Psychology
84 205 + Experimental Psychology: Learning (the first half of 84-210)
84-230 - The Study of Personality

Religion
89-345 - Christian Interpretations of History: Augustine to Toynbec

Sociology
92-122 - Introduction to Sociology
92-274 - The Sociology of Deviant Behaviour
92-341 - Canadian Society
92-370 - Social Change

Intersession Courses to be Offered in Venice (May 13 to June 23)

Art History
05-245 - Venetian Art and Architecture

Italian
49-202 - Intensive Italian in Venice

Music
64-211 - Studies in Baroque Music

Deadline for Application for Intersession Courses in Venice - March 15, 1973

+ Denotes half course

Length of Session
May 14 to June 26, 1973 (including Victoria Day);
Examination Period - June 25 and 26.

Admission:
Admission to the University is mandatory before registration in Intersession courses. Students not currently registered at Queen's should make application immediately through the Department of Extension, 25 Union Street, Kingston.

Registration:
Registration by February 16th is highly advisable. Individual courses may not be offered if a minimum number of registrations is not received by that date. Certain courses also have a maximum enrolment quota and it will be improbable that a student who attempts to register later than February 16, 1973 can be accepted.
In any case, registration subsequent to February 16th will involve a Late Registration Fee. All students should register through the Department of Extension, 25 Union Street, Kingston, Ontario.

Counselling and Authorization:
Academic Advisors within each department are available for consultation and enquiries concerning courses. Prospective students should seek academic advice in departments before determining their courses and load for the Intersession program.

Registrations in all courses must be authorized by a Departmental Academic Advisor or by the course instructor, or by the Department of Extension. Any student wishing to take two full courses will be required to obtain the approval of both departments or both instructors before registration.

Eligibility:
Registrations will not be valid unless course eligibility requirements are met by May 14th, 1973. Students are not permitted to register for an Intersession course similar or identical to a course already taken except with the permission of the Associate Dean (Studies).

Fees:
All Course Fees are due May 1, 1973.
For each full course — $135.00, For each half course — $67.50

Residence:
Accommodation for both men and women will be available in University Residences during the Intersession term. Enquiries and applications for accommodation should be made to the Business Office, Students' Memorial Union.

REGISTRATION BY FEBRUARY 16, 1973 IS MOST IMPORTANT. A LATE FEE WILL APPLY FOR REGISTRATIONS RECEIVED AFTER THAT DATE.

Admission Applications and Registration forms are available from:

The DEPARTMENT of EXTENSION
25 UNION STREET, KINGSTON, ONTARIO
or phone 547-3283.

"Wax Works"

Neil Diamond - Hot August Night

By Geoff Henning

"Thursday, August 24, 1972. A hot sultry summer night, in California they call it earthquake weather, with the air hanging heavy over the open glistening shell of the Greek theatre. Over 4500 people comfortable on the broad seats, over the countless other 'tree people", clamboring up the mountain and the surrounding trees, casting eerie shadows against the walls, anything to have a glimpse of the stage and the man who will fill it. Hot August Night, and many of the people had been there on Tuesday and Wednesday and will be there again on Friday and the nights after that because, after all, Neil Diamond had come back to the Greek.

Then, softly, the music begins, the lights dim. Slowly, the heavy fire doors roll back; the music rises, the stage is a smoky, opalescent jewel in the darkness. But one light shines brighter than the others, a white poll in the brilliance, and, for an instant, sound hangs suspended, only the air breathing. Then he's there, the crowd exploding, Neil Diamond, as casual as if it's the most natural thing in the world, those 5,000 people demanding his soul. And, for the next 107 minutes, he gives it to them, a spontaneous exhausting display of energy and sensuality. And the people are right there with him screaming and cheering and applauding and beseeching, knowing all the words to all the songs but hearing them as if for the first time, because that's what Neil Diamond gives them, singing as though he too were just discovering the heart and soul of the music, every number unique and exhilarating.

Too soon, almost before the moment is realized, it's over. The encore, the ovations, the bows - Neil Diamond has gone, in joy and triumph. And as the people begin to leave, reluctant, unwilling to relinquish the intimacy and the sensation, the silence again settles on the Greek, heavy and still until the next evening when once again Neil Diamond the hot August night."

These last three paragraphs is the blurb written on the inside of Neil Diamon'd latest album. The short story told sums up the emotions shown by the audience and the atmosphere of that hot August night. But believe me, it sums up the vision I could see in my mind the very first time I heard this tremendous collection of Neil Diamond's best. Diamond had come up with many albums to this time including, Stones, Moods, Touching Me Touching You, each of which had two or three of his hits. But this album could have easily been subtitled: "Everything You Always Wanted to Hear by Neil Diamond but Couldn't Get Get on One Album Before."

This is an album that should be listened to from the first cut on side one to the last cut on side four without interruption. If only one side was to be listened to, however, it would have to be number four. This side starts with Holly Holy - it begins nice and gentle and builds up to such a pitch that you can just about feel the record about to explode, then Diamond says "I need, I want, I care, I weep, I ache, I am, I said, I am" and soft guitar introduces "I am . . .I said" and once more the intensity slowly builds up to the end, Diamond thanks the audience and a powerful, slow roll announces the apparent exit of Diamond and the forty-three member back up group (thirty six strings plus Diamond's own band) continues the background music of I Am . I Said.

A few minutes into this, with the audience still wildly applauding ever since Diamond's exit, an African drum beat creeps in on a hard rocking beat, Diamond returns and finishes up the show and the album with Soolaiman-Brother Love's Travellin' Salvation Show.

This album turns out to be the best of Neil Diamond's material done by himself in probably the best manner be ever did them. The span of years encompassed by Solitary Man (approximately six years ago) and Play Me (late 1972) shows many good hits; Shilok, Cherry Cherry, Song Sung Blue, Cracklin' Rosie etc.

Anybody who likes Neil Diamond will love this album; anybody who likes good "live" albums will love this album.

(P.S. Listen for Diamond's latest single off the album Moods called Walk on Water.)

Number 32879, I Love You!

By Sandy Naiman

"If you don't have what I want in stock, please don't send me any substitutes!"

The statement sounds innocent enough. It could be and, in fact, it is a meat order of sorts, but not the usual type. This comment was written at the bottom of last fall's Q.U.P.I.D. (Queen's University People Interested In Dating) questionnaire and whether this customer was satisfied with her order or not, only posterity knows for sure.

QUPID is a computer dating service which is presently under the direction of John Dafoe, a third year Applied Maths student who, as Chief Program Advisor is supervising its third running which started yesterday. It will culminate on January 29th and 30th when print outs will be distributed to those who filled out the questionnaire and paid the 50c fee which entitles them to five names of possible conpatibles chosen by the IBM 360-50 computer.

The computer dating service, before it got its present name, was instrumented last spring, much as an experiment. The response was so enthusiastic that a fall programming was planned. "The questionnaire was improved and refined," states Mr. Dafoe, "so that a more accurate reading could be given." In the fall, QUPID print outs entitled the holders to a discount on one of the events of Suzi-Q week, and this present program will be coordinated in some way with the events of Snoball Week, "but the specifics have not yet been finalized", Mr. Dafoe stated.

This fall, 450 questionnaires were purchased, and 330 were returned for processing. The ratio of participants was 2 to 1, male to female, which meant that there was about a 99 per cent success rate with only two or three girls failing to make it onto somebody's list.

There were several cases of girlfriend-boyfriend teams turning up on the top of each others lists, which states Mr. Dafoe, "although it seems improbable, indicates the incisive nature of the questionnaire."

However, according to the comments on the Fall '72 questionnaire, many people showed some dissatisfaction with its vagueness and the general nature of the questions.

Mr. Dafoe mentined that concerning last year QUPID program there were some problems. "People seem to have a built-in prejudice against computer dating. They seem to feel that only losers would get involved in it and that in the long run its a busy way to have to meet people." He also mentioned that the advertising was not as extensive as it could have been and "that is why we only sold 450 questionnaires when we wanted to sell 1,000."

Many comments indicated that people tried QUPID last fall out of curiousity and not desperation, and the way in which the questionnaire is set out insures a certain amount of personal selectivity. There are two important climination criterion questions, pertaining to height and age preferences which narrow down the spectrum of possible dates at the very beginning. Other questions concern personal appearance, your own and your preferences, hobbies, interests and sports, and what you like to do on a date.

The answers correspond to numerical scales as opposed to a more arbitrary system which proved in prior programmes to be too difficult to compare and program into the computer accurately. The Winter '73 QUPID program now in progress will offer those who participated last fall a 50 per-cent (25c) discount if they wish to try again.

"Although the feedback was limited," Mr. Dafoe stated, "most of it was pretty good and alot of people who have heard of other university computer dating services were very impressed with the quality of our service and the accuracy of the questionnaire."

QUPID personnel will be selling questionnaires this week in the John Orr Room on the Student Union and print outs will be available thereon January 29th and 30th.

shiverdays

Tuesday, January 16

5:45 - 6:30 - Improvisations on the piano by Lubomyr Melnyk; coffee and desert. Contemporary musical sounds. Ban Righ Common Room. Everyone Welcome.

7:30 p.m. - Meeting for all interested in attending Queen's ski club Trip to Sutton (Jan. 27-28). Lower Vic.

8:15 p.m. - Life Sciences Smoker, Students Union. Beer 40c. Come and meet your professors.

9:00 p.m. - Department of Film Studies, Italian Cinema presents "L'Avventura." (Michelangelo Antonioni, 1960). Ellis Hall.

Wednesday, January 17

7:30 pm - The legal sciences for low income groups course at the Faculty of Law is presenting an evening of films dealing with the work of Saul Alinsky, the American Community Organizer. These films will be shown in Theatres D & E at Sir John A. MacDonald Hall.

Thursday, January 18

7:30 pm - Ticket Sales for Ski Club Trips: Sutton Trip (January 27 - 28.) John Orr Room.

8:30 pm - Tickets for the Whiteface Trip. Saturday, January 20. John Orr Room.

9:00 pm - Department of Film Studies, American Screen Masters presents "It's Always Fair Weather." (Donen - Kelly, 1955). Ellis Hall.

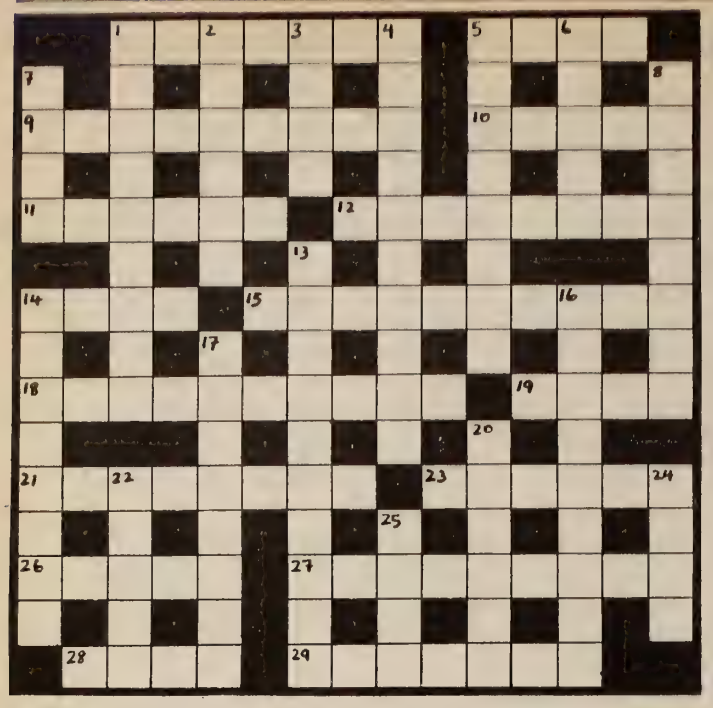
7:30 pm - The Department of History presents 100 Years of Marxism A special BBC Films Series. The Strategy of Revolution. Was Stalin Necessary? Education and Goulash. Stirling 'D'. Everyone Welcome. Admission 50c.

Friday, January 19

8:30 pm - The Division of Concerts presents the Secolo Barocco Quintet, consisting of flute, oboe, violin, bassoon and harpsichord Dunning Hall.

10:00 pm - CFRC-AM Highlights "Nocturne on The Airplane". A special four hour Nocturne Show on the music of the Jefferson Airplane and Friends.

Off Campus
Theatres
Capitol - The Getaway
Hyland - Ryan's Daughter
Starting Friday - Young Winston



CFRC am-fm HIGHLIGHTS

Thursday, Jan. 18th
7:30 "The Goon Show." Peter Sellers, Spike Milligan and Harry Secombre in "The Great Satute Debate".

Friday, Jan. 19th
10:00 "Nocturne on the Airplane". A special four hour Nocturne show on the music of the Jefferson Airplane and Friends.

Saturday, Jan. 20th
12:00 Noon "Emission Francaise", our weekly one hour program of French music and conversation.

Sunday, jan. 21st
12:00 Noon "Classics by Request" -- 547-6677 brings your favoourite classical piece on 1490 AM of 91.9 FM.

Solution A

ACROSS

1. Put on a show for each style (7).
5. Skips over ingredient for beer (4).
9. Lifts little cars on a vertical track (9).
10. Of the moon, th'inconstant moon (5).
11. What the country has been said to lack is a good five-cent one (6).
12. The holder of such a position is Ready at Hand (8).
14. At which time you should stop pouring (4).
15. Order particles and their routes (10).
18. The field of letters (10).
19. To fasten collar on retired horse (4).
21. Common, though proper enough (8).
23. How a tongue may be in illness -- with a pelt of auburn (6).
26. Spooky section of great lake (5).
27. Convenient (9).
28. Where soldiers may eat sloppily (4).
29. Wanted to be bereft of male parent (7).

DOWN

1. Able to predict what will happen when priest and CNE come together (9).
2. May be a primer, or he may have advanced beyond that (6).
3. Bovine on British campus (4).
4. The Rifleman; The Rifleman; The Rifleman (10).
5. No! A minim! (8).
6. A tiny bit of trouble (5).
7. Be one vegetable (4).
8. Propositioned? No, quite the opposite (8).
13. Nun and her garment, in that order (10).
14. March ended with easy victory (8).
16. Ad outrage shook up and convinced (9).
17. Book-makers (8).
20. Sounds like a furor produced by Germans (6).
22. Lament destruction of ridge (5).
24. Artistically tied it up (4).
25. Imitates monkeys (4).

Solution B

ACROSS

1. About a tilted square.
5. Stables, little streets.
9. Element K.
10. Predecessor of television.
11. Founder of a dynasty.
12. Spreads out.
14. Begin to evaporate rapidly.
15. Illegal wrestling hold.
18. Urge to travel.
19. Nasty or cheap.
21. What's left out.
23. Country minister.
26. Come in.
27. Vanish.
28. Goes with born.
29. Cooked in the oven.

classified

ALL THOSE who are going to talk about FEE WITHHOLDING in Men's res, tonite assemble at 6:30 in the Gordon House Common Room. (Those who do not show will not be talked to again).

DARK BLUE BLAZER; size 40 tall, made in Glasgow, silver buttons, good for dances, weddings etc. $40 not less. Mrs. Winifred Coutts, 125 Van Order Dr. Apt 205. 542-8704.

HELP! FOUR GIRLS searching for a four bedroom house close to campus for the 1973-74 school year. Phone 544-3678 after 6 pm; 544-8518 after 9 pm; 544-8537 after 9 pm or 544-8172 after 7 pm.

WANTED: ACCOMODATION for 3 of 4 girls for Sept. 73. If you have a house or apartment that will be available at that time, please phone Sarah or Donna at 544-8691.

ROOMS AVAILABLE in Science '44 co-op. If interested call Ruth Fraser at 544-2793 or 544-3550.

SCUBA GEAR for sale. Voigt twin 40 tanks with back pack and sportways regulator. $70 or best offer. Phone 542-3058.

12 STRING GUITAR for sale. Hoffner accoustic. $30 or best offer. Phone 542-3058.

FOR RENT now until May with option for summer and or next year. One room in a 7 bedroom house. Nice people, quiet room, co-op type arrangement. $50 a month. 56 Wellington. 5 min from campu. Phone 544-9207 or 546-5669.

UPSET ABOUT THE future of education? Show your concern with government policy. The AMS urges you to WITHHOLD FEES.

BOB HAS HAD enough and will spill cokes.

WHAT ARE THE two words, Sue.

QUEEN'S SKI CLUB ticket sales. Thurs Jan. 18. John Orr Room. Sutton Trip: (Jan 27-2) Sales at 7:30 pm. Meeting tonight in Lower Vic at 7:30 for all interested. Whiteface trip (Sat Jan 20) - ticket sales at 8:30 pm.

LEE -- Bob says he is hundry.

COLLEEN, HEATHER, Kathleen, MU and Sue are looking for a house to sit them all for 73-74. Phone 544-8697, 544-8014, 544-8035, 544-8171 or 544-8138 if you want to be a sweetie.

THE NATIONAL DESK is offering toilet training courses.

The News desk and Passepartout doesn't need them.

GOING SOMEWHERE for reading week? Let Photo Image take your passport pictures. For only $5.00, you get three sets of prints. If you bring a friend, you'll both save a dollar off our regular rate. Group rates also available. Call 546-7770 for an appointment today.

SINGLE ROOM AVAILABLE in Women's residence. Immediate occupancy. Call Judy at 544-8247 or 544-6388.

HOUSE OR APARTMENT wanted near main campus for five guys for next year. Phone 549-1669; 549-1624; or 549-1652.

ROOM AVAILABLE: 7 minute walk to campus. Breakfast and lunch optional. Very reasonable. Call 542-9402 after 5.

YOU MAY HAVE FOUND OUT by now that the courses you take do not give you quite enough to meet the demands of the specialized technology we live in. The onus is on you to distinguish yourself, to seek out needed practical experience. Some summer jobs, and some volunteer work to this. Elrond can allow you the opportunity as well. We have a $500,000 operating budget and $10,000 to spend on education. We need people who want to make their education at Queen's or St. Lawrence something more than a piece of paper.

GIRLS -- HOW WOULD YOU LIKE to donate your body to science for a few hours. All you have to do is ride a bicycle for twelve minutes. It's different and fun. If you are interested or curious, call John Ker at 544-1957.

APPLICATIONS OF CALCULUS

1) $d(FAT\ PAT)/dt = d(PV)/dt$

2) $d(\pi RhR)/d(\pi R.R)$

-Think about it, Pat
signed: Capt. Calculus
& Lt. Love

SUE -- You are forgiven.

WANTED APPLIED SCIENCE jacket Size 42-44 Yr 74 Will consider any other year Phone 546-9648 and ask for Bob after 6 pm

ARTSCI 76, 75, 74, 73 presents STUDENT PROF SMOKER, January 15 ADMISSION free with year card Without year card 75c after 10:30 Beer is 4 for a dollar in the pub.

THEY ALSO present VIENESE SKATING NIGHT Waltz Music, 9:30-11:30 at the Arena Warm spiced wine gluwein 3 for a dollar. Admission free with any Artsci year card Others 50c

SATURDAY, JANUARY 20, at 8 pm, UNDERGRAD FILMS presents WEEKEND directed by Jean-Luc GODARD. This celluloid masterpiece will be screened at Dunning Hall Auditorium. Admission is a mere dollar.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN: there is no gore to hide from.

IF YOU SHOW A ARTSCI YEAR-CARD, you can get a discount (see posters) at Yellow Submarine, Lino's, Seto's Chop Suey, Broadway Pizza, Cotton's Sporthouse, It's Leather, The Inn of Shoes, and Joe and Pauls. This occurs only on Jan 18-19-20. Watch the posters.

Sunday Jan. 21, the Artsci years will present The Pink Panther and the Good Bad and the Ugly, and Tom Jones. Cost is half a dollar with a yearcard (arts) and a dollar without, in Dunning Aud.

LOOKING FOR A PLACE to live next year? Two single rooms will be available next year in comfortable three bedroom apartment at 217 Colborne St. Rent is $65 a month, utilities included. If you or a friend are interested, call Dave Grimes at 544-5715.

MONT STE. ANNE is coming. The Queen's Ski Club is again running a reading week SKI TRIP to Mont Ste Anne (Feb. 18-23). Price approx $100. Includes bus, tows, accommodation and food tickets. Sales on Jan 25 in the Johnn Orr Room. Watch for details.

GUYS: GIVE YOUR girlfriend something different for valentines' day . . . a casual portrait by the skilled photographers of Photo Image. Call 546-7770 for information or an appointment.

Heidelberg

Brewed from pure spring water.

And that's the truth!

at the art centre

Two exhibitions:

Colette Whiten

Lichtenstein and Johns

continue until January 28

STUDIO WORKSHOP in Life Drawing.

January 26 to January 28.

A few vacancies are remaining.

Register at the Art Centre.

the HOUSING LOTTERY is coming!

GRANT HALL

JANUARY 24th

8 p.m.

- The AMS housing list will be established by lot
- Entry forms will be available only at the door. No proxies allowed. 1 entry per QUEEN'S student.
- Draw at 8:30 p.m.

CHOOSING THE RIGHT CAREER ISN'T EASY

We'd like to offer you a challenge — a career in dealing with professionals — a career in Life insurance sales and/or sales management.

It's one of the few careers that offers you freedom of action and decision and an unusually high measure of security and personal satisfaction.

We know it isn't easy choosing the right career. Perhaps we at Metropolitan Life can help you make the right choice. Why not drop by and see us. We'll be on Campus on:

January 23, 1973

Metropolitan Life

We sell life insurance
But our business is life

letters

Time to get off our butts

An Open Letter
Dear Students,

While often being dismayed at the proceedings of Outer Council this year I find a vitally important issue has now come to a head, one which students on this campus cannot afford to ignore any longer. Let's remind you what that is -- the strangely unresponsive, underhanded manner in which the Ontario Government has chosen to deal with the 120,000 college students in this province.

Like most students on this campus I have seldom felt any burning desire to become embroiled in the supposedly "important issues" facing our horde of campus political-types. But now, dear students, you and I must get off our butts. We must demonstrate our displeasure with this government to have it listen to and act on our demands. I urge you all to become aware of the issues involved and how they affect you. Take a mature, sophisticated stand by withholding your fees on February 1st and for as long as is necessary.

Clay Rubec
Arts and Science Rep.
Outer Council

Complains about library hours

To the Editor,

This letter is meant as reply to the recent decision of the Douglas Library administration to reduce the number of hours which the Reserve Reading Room will be open, i.e., by closing at 10:00 as opposed to the original 11:00 p.m. I consider this decision to be opposed to the general interests of the student body.

The reading room is an integral part of the library complex and serves a necessary function for a wide variety of the student population. The argument that the reading room is not used as much by the students during the last hour in the evening and thus justifies its closing is simply unacceptable. The early closing is unjust to those people - as small in number as they may be - who have come to rely upon the use of the reading room at this later hour. Surely they are no less important than other users of the library.

If the argument of cost is employed, I do not believe this to be an adequate justification for the decision either. The amount involved in employing one student for one extra hour each night is certainly a paltry sum in light of vast amounts of money with which the government and the students provide the library. If the administration is attempting to reduce costs, they might consider reducing their personnel during this last hour. The early closing of the reserve room, however, has ramifications which extend far beyond those of simply cost.

There is a final argument which has been employed.

This argument suggests that the early closing won't affect people because they will be able to come in before 10:00 to get any books which they might require. The argument fails to appreciate that a burden is thus being placed upon students for them to conform to the whims of certain callous library officials. I ask you, are not the students entitled to the maximum benefit which can be gotten from library facilities? I believe this suggestion becomes all the more pressing when it is seen, as I earlier noted, that an unburdensome cost would thereby be incurred. It is to be remembered, furthermore, that the demand placed upon the Reserve Room will increase as the year draws to a close. If anything, the implication is that attempts should be made to extend the availability of library facilities, not to curtail them.

H. B. Barnett

Running for office

Dear Editor,

I regret to inform you West Campus dummies that I, Crumbword Crapathy, am running for AMS rep from McArthur College. My platform is as follows:

1. McArthur to be renamed Main Campus; old campus to be henceforth referred to as East Campus.
2. All non-Main Campus residents will require passports, inoculations, and chest x-rays to enter from East Campus.
3. Free trade between Main and East Campuses.
4. East and Main Campus coins, stamps and Donald Duck medallions to be interchangeable.
5. Engineering Society to be renamed 4-year technicals.
6. Henceforth the football team will be referred to as the "McArthur Golden Gaels."

In addition to this platform and my qualities of integrity, intelligence, foresight and virility, I am proud to have been endorsed by:

- the Wonder Warthog Fan Dancing Club
- the Black Beauty Stickpen Mending and Watchmaking Society
- the Housewives of Canada
- the Justice League of

Finally, and most proudly, I present the following: "I have found Crumbwood to be a ge whiz, good Canadian Kid" - Batman

So come out and vote for me. Mug a McArthur student and steal his card if you have to - they never vote anyways.

Yours,
Crumbword Crapathy

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 30,
Tues., Jan. 16, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Patricia Devitt
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Sue de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National desk: Bob Mutrie

Special credits, laurels, thanks, and tips o' the hat to: Susan, lucky Helen, Elizabeth, Heather who was quiet, Mike, Vicky, and Peter pats himself on the back; and the Argosy for last week's ad: and the unnamed new feline recruit, and John the Printer who put up with all sorts of trouble last week.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Students' Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

BUFFALO CHIPS

Snowball Variety Night

Auditions For

- musicians
- comedians
- political impersonators

Call 544-9381 If interested

Tuesday, January 16 7 - 11 p.m.

Dunning Auditorium

Want to Exhibit

Your photos, Arts, crafts, etc. at Festival

(Jan. 24-27)

We need contributors. Don't be shy. Phone and bring them to Jane Wicks at 24 Barrie (544-3280) or Carol Rogers at 128 Earl (544-1737 or 544-9196). The Deadline is January 23.

V ball Intermediates down Brock

by Sue Moffatt

The girls' intermediate volleyball team began their new year's season Saturday with a resounding three-straight-game victory over Brock. The Gals overcame some initial uncertainty in positioning (the result of the Christmas break, no doubt) and inconsistency in service to take the first game 15-4, with a notable lack of fluster. However, all was not well.

Serving, the bogeyman of any team, especially after a layoff, continued to be the Gals' real offensive weakness in the second and third games. On the positive side, these hard-working shorties have lost none of their fine sense of timing, which makes their spikes and tips do surprisingly effective. While the 15-5 score is nothing to complain about, the play of the second game contained, at times, an unnecessary number of last-minute saves on what should have been routine points.

The third game promised to be another clean sweep, which it perversely refused to become. Brock took the lead, and although Queen's quickly recovered it, either team could have won on several occasions. A failure on the part of back-court players to move quickly into position for the initial bumps became the Gals' serious point loser. Unfortunately, the defensive net play, particularly blocking, lacked the timing of the offensive work, and allowed Brock to chalk up a commanding lead. The Gals' diminutive but excellent captain, Judy Bierma, took command of the situation at that point, calling the offensive and defensive plays for her team, and infusing them with some much-needed confidence. So rallied, Queen's took over service, and went on to a satisfying, albeit close, 16-14 win.

While the eventual outcome of this match was never in serious doubt, it was good to see this enthusiastic and well-prepared team in good form after their layoff. Next weekend, they will take on Trent and Toronto, two teams which have already gone down to defeat at the hands of Queen's. History should repeat itself.

Swimmers dominate RMC Invitational

On the basis of Saturday's performance it might be in order to give Queen's swimmers more time off. Despite a layoff of over a month and only four days of workouts since coming back from the holidays, the Gaels swimmers made a rather embarassing shambles of the RMC Invitational Swim meet held Saturday at the RMC pool. Four teams: Queen's, RMC, Ryerson, and Laval took part in the competition. Queen's won 11 of the twelve individual events and all three of the relays to take the team championship with 157 points. Ryerson was second with 47 followed by RMC with 31 and Laval with 16.

Several of Queen's swimmers set individual records in a number of events. John Pearson set a personal mark of 2:06.2 in the 200 yard butterfly, breaking his own record set in Ottawa early in December. Pearson went on to win the 200 yard individual medley, and the 100 yard butterfly. He also teamed with Bryan Warren, Darryl Penner and Steve Patterson to win the 400 yard individual medley. Another rookie, John Ireland, erased another team record by a second and a half as he broke Rob Herman's long standing record in the 500 yard freestyle. Darryl Penner and Jamie Noakes added wins in the 100 yard and 200 yard breaststroke while Steve Patterson won both the 50 yard and 100 yard breaststroke while Steve Patterson won both the 50 yard and 100 yard freestyle events. Bryan Warren won the 100 yard and 200 yard backstroke, setting personal best times in both events. John Ker picked up another first place finish in the 200 yard freestyle.

All in all, a very fine performance for the team. The meet actually was little more than a good practice for the team but it will also be good for morale. Both qualities will be needed next weekend as the team travels to Waterloo on Friday night to take part in a tri-school meet with Waterloo and Genesco State College of New York State. Then its on to Oswego on Saturday for another multi-school meet, this one hosted by Oswego State College.

Another reason for optimism is the fact that perennial challenger Rob Herman will be swimming for Queen's again this term. Herman did not swim at all before Christmas and his presence in the lineup should add considerably to Queen's strength.

Trackmen open indoor season

Queen's track contingent opened their indoor season in Toronto on Saturday, competing in the CNE All-comers meet. Segments of both the men's and women's teams took part for Queen's.

Despite the absence of such proven winners as Hugh Fraser and Brian Aiken, the Gaels showed well. Don Price and Mark MacCauley placed 2-3 in the 50-m hurdles, while Dave Jarvis, a perrenial hurdles winner, passed up the event for a second in the 400-m. Price also finished 4th in the high jump, with a 5'10" leap. Ian Watts of Toronto won with a jump of 6'10".

In the distance events, Dieter Stein and Bill Bryden came 4th and 6th in the 3000-m, both in personal-best times. The lone woman to place for Queen's was JoAnne Ronan, who came up with a fifth in the women's 50-m hurdles.

Next weekend, the men will travel to Cornell for a major indoor meet. The Gaels should get a good workout.

Swimgals improve at Waterloo

The members of Queen's women's swim team showed "consistent and encouraging improvement" in the Waterloo International Invitational meet this weekend. Competing against 14 American and Canadian schools, the Gals were anchored by team captain Cathy Brace, who made it into three consolation finals (3rd in 50 yd freestyle, 4th in the 100 breaststroke, 5th in the 200 breaststroke) and helped move the 400 freestyle relay squad up to 4th from their 6th-place finish of last year. The relay results would seem to indicate an improvement in conditioning, since the race was held after almost 12 hours of competition. Beth Randle, Brenda Prosenyak, and Ianna Swan were the other relay team members, and these same three posted much-improved personal times in the 400 freestyle on Friday, then continued this trend in the 100 and 200 free style events on Saturday.

Sue Pritchard and rookie Pat Matheson also turned in consistent results for this stage of the season, while Mary Jean Duncan and Jane Alexander showed the greatest improvement in personal times.

The Swim Gals will be in action at Guelph next weekend, then return home on the 27th when Queen's will host its first annual Women's Invitational Swim Meet.

Matmen meet stiff opposition

Queen's wrestling team ran into some stiff competition on the weekend as they opened their second term schedule. The occasion was the third annual Queen's Invitational Wrestling Tournament held on Saturday in Bews Gym. A total of 136 competitors representing thirteen American and Canadian schools took part in the day-long competition.

Veteran Queen's wrestler Rob Beamish was the only Queen's competitor to finish high in any class; Beamish picked up a second in the 142 pound class. Mike Dwhytie and Peter Verhoeven wrestled well for Queen's but failed to finish in the top of their classes. Beamish lost only one bout all day; that was his first one of the day, and even that could be considered a victory of sorts. The loss was to Egan Beiller of the University of Waterloo. It was a points decision. The last time the two met, Beamish was pinned by Beiller. Beiller is a member of the Canadian Olympic Wrestling Team and competed in Munich last year. He was the winner in the 142 poind class.

The Europa Wrestling Club from Toronto won the meet with a total of 56 points. They dominated the heavyweight divisions, picking up first place finishes in the 177, 190 and heavyweight classes. Waterloo finished second and picked up most of their points in the smaller weight classes. St. Lawrence University was third and St. John Fisher High School from Rochester New York was fourth.

Despite Queen's showing, coach Albinson was satisfied with the performance of several of his team. Dwhytie, Beamish and Verhoeven all did fairly well in their first action of the new year and hopes are that they will improve as the season continues.

The team will get a stiff workout next weekend as they travel to Waterloo for a meet against the Warriors. It will see another rematch between Beiller and Beamish. Sometime this year, Rob is going to beat this guy. Here's hoping that it's next wwekend.

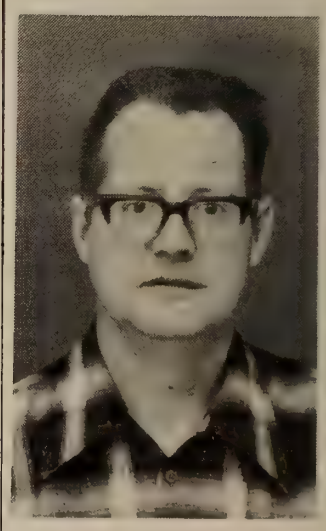
Why wait for tomorrow?

If you think the Seminary is a place of study and meditation, you're right. But there is so much more.

As a Paulist you become involved from the start.

We were founded with the belief that each man has a place. Each man has a job. Sometimes, many jobs. And each contributes his own unique talents and is given the freedom and the support he needs to achieve his goals.

The Paulist is a man on the move. His mission is to people, particularly the people of North America. The issues and problems we face today—injustice, poverty, peace, war—must be the concern of the Church.



Wherever the Paulist student serves the Christian Community—in a parish or an inner city school, a youth center or a campus, or in communications, he is concerned. Involved. Right now.

When you commit yourself to the Paulists, it isn't a someday thing. It's today.

For more information write: Father Donald C. Campbell, Room 102CA.

Paulist Fathers.
647 Markham Street
Toronto 174, Ontario

Labatt's Ontario Breweries are pleased to announce the appointment of Lyle R. Stevenson to the position of Special Representative, Queen's University. Mr. Stevenson is a Queen's undergraduate in Arts & Science

Gaels on the warpath: two points

by Peter Watts

The Queen's Golden Gaels hockey team got the second half of their schedule off to a good start on Saturday afternoon with a convincing 12-4 victory over the McMaster Marauders in a game played in Hamilton. The Gaels got two-goal performances from Jim Adair, Colin Loudon, Bob Kindon, and Jim Sunstrum. John Cerre, John Smith, Jim Tittemore, and Dave Hadden added single markers.

The Gaels led all the way in the game, leading 5-0 after the first period and 7-2 after the second. The play at times got very chippy and Bob Kindon suffered a bruised ankle as a result of a slash across the skate. The Gaels had some difficulty in the first five minutes of the opening period but some clutch goaltending by Clyde Harris kept the Marauders off the scoresheet and finally Queen's got going. From then on it was a rout as Adair scored twice and Kindon, Sunstrum and Hadden added singles to make the score 5-0 after the first period.

Coach Bob Carnegie singled out several players for praise, among them veteran Mike Lynch, Lynch saw duty at all three forward positions and also served time on defense, picking up three assists and playing a solid game. Bill White also played well for Queen's. Adair, in addition to his two goals, also got five assists. At that kind of pace, he'll have the scoring title wrapped up in a couple of weeks, despite sitting out the first part of the schedule.

The Gaels were without the services of Steve Gross who made the trip to Hamilton but could not play because of the flu.

What concerns this reporter is the fact that McMaster got four goals. That may sound a little facetious; nonetheless admittedly McMaster has a poor team. They still got four goals. What's going to happen next week when the Gaels have to play Toronto? For the past few years, a trademark of Queen's teams has been the problems they have had in clearing the puck from in front of their own goal. Harris has had to make three or four saves on innumerable occasions this year, only to have the next shot get by him. We are fortunate to have one of the best goaltenders in the entire OUAA playing for Queen's; yet his goals-against average is over four goals per game. Something must be done about this problem at once. Furthermore, it has to be done rather quickly. The Gaels see their next action tonight as they host the Carleton Red Ravens in an eight o'clock encounter at the Harty Arena. While the problem may not be quite as acute against Carleton (but lets not brush the game off as no contest) it will be pretty funny in Toronto next Friday night if the Gaels can't get the puck out of their own end more consistently. Perhaps the addition of Adair will help. At any rate, tonight's game offers Queen's fans a chance to show their support for Gaels' hockey. A good crowd would be in order. See you there.

mossman

Gaels' Jim Adair (at left) pots one of his two goals against Mac.

Vees down Gaels 82-67

by Chris Boon

Laurentian Voyageurs took advantage of foul troubles by three Queen's starters and the hot second-half shooting hands of guards Mel Bishop and Guy Vetrie to rack up an 82-67 win over the Gaels here Saturday night. Centreman Paul Howard picked up his fifth personal midway through the third quarter, with the Gaels ahead by three, and the Sudbury contingent seemed to catch fire. Guard John Keck and forward Norm Hagarty followed Howard to the sidelines in the fourth period, as the Vees pulled away.

For the Gaels, who played what was probably their best game to date, Norm Hagarty hooped 16 points, while Rob Smart added 12 and Paul Howard 11. Howard's third point marked a career milestone for the Queen's veteran, his thousandth point in competition for the school. Ken Sagadore added 8 points, as did Keck, and Corky McLeery hit for six. Derek Swinnard scored five to round out Queen's attack.

The Gaels started out very strongly, playing some close-checking agressive defense, but had trouble hitting the net. In fact, Queen's had a clear edge in play for the first eight minutes. The Vee's began to pick up from that point on, aided by the shooting of forward Dave Visser, who finished with 17 points, and some very dubious officiating. The Gaels trailed by seven at the half, 35-28.

The second half started out like somebody had given the Gaels an infusion of mean pills. With Howard collecting two beautiful hoops inside (on passes the likes of which haven't been seen since Ron Wash hung 'em up) and the whole team playing tenacious defense, Queen's came back to tie the score 35-all, then forge ahead. The bubble burst about halfway through the quarter, when the ref managed to find a fifth foul for Paul (and it really must have taken an effort). With him out, Laurentian began to dominate the boards, and the Gaels stopped moving on offense. Coincidentally, both Bishop and Vetrie found their outside touch in a big way, and started pouring in the points. Between them, they accounted for 47, with 31 of them coming in the second half. About 25 of those 31 were on 25-foot jumpers - hard shots to take away against that pair, although the Gaels managed for a half.

So, Laurentian won its seventh straight game, and the Gaels slipped to 1-2 on the season for OUAA competition. The Gaels have a very critical road trip coming up this weekend, when they play York and Toronto in Hogtown. Put bluntly, they need wins. If they can keep out of foul trouble, they may get them.

Sports Shorts

Curlers undefeated

Queen's curling team won all three of its games in the Brock Invitational bonspeil Saturday, but had to settle for second behind the host school on points. The Queen's rink of Mark Burch, Wayne Peterson, Malcom Florence, and skip Tom Walsely downed York 11-8 in their opening match, edged Mohawk 9-7 in the second game, then devastated Waterloo 12-2 in the final draw. It appears that the Gaels could be in a position to make a run at an OUAA title this year, after coming close last season.

Fencers 3rd

Queen's girls fencing team returned from Ottawa on Saturday somewhat disappointed with their performance. The Girls finished third in the competition held at the University of Ottawa. They had begun the day in second place with a good chance to take over the lead but ran into some stiff competition from Ottawa and McGill and finished third. Ottawa was first and McGill second. Carleton wound up in fourth. The loss cost the girls a shot at an OWIAA championship as only the top two schools advance to the finals. However, in individual standings, Judy Krupanszky of Queen's continued her strong performance, winding up in second place and qualifying for the OWIAA individual fencing championships next month in Toronto.

While the loss was a disappointment, at the same time considerable credit must go to Jon Tondeur and his team for their fine performance over the year. This is a fairly young and inexperienced team. A couple of girls are in only their first year of competitive fencing and with a year of experience they will be much stronger next year.

Journal sports requires male editorial trainee. Apply Journal office Wednesday after 8:00 pm

Intermediate Gals still undefeated

by Mary-Anne Purdy

The intermediate basketball Gals chalked up their first victory of the new year Saturday, downing Brock 50-39 despite numerous turnovers and some typical 'Christmas break' shooting.

The Gals started off slowly in the first half, with their loose zone defense stifling Brock's offense. Unfortunately, the Gals managed to throw the ball away on offense, with bad passes and poor rebounding the main problems. However, some accurate shooting by Jenny Bagnall, Jarmila Smola and 'sixth man' Kathy Willock gave the Gals a 25-18 half-time bulge. Jarmila missed most of the second quarter after picking up a cut over her left eye, but came back in the second half to help the Gals control the boards.

Queen's pulled out to a commanding lead early in the third quarter, then coasted to victory as coach Scott Cook put his bench into the game. The Gal's next encounter will be this coming Saturday against Trent.

W.I.C. Athletic Night
Thursday, Jan. 18th
7:00 pm
Physical Education Centre

Canada: Food rip-off gets worse as trend continues

OTTAWA — Fruit, beef and egg prices ran amuck last month according to Statistics Canada who reported a 1.4 per cent increase in food prices for the month of December.

According to the report food prices for 1972 were up 8.6 per cent from a year earlier and the consumer will now have to pay $14.71 to purchase a basket of goods which cost $10.00 in 1961.

Fruit prices advanced 1.8 per cent, beef by 2.1 per cent, and tobacco and alcohol 1.3 per cent. Eggs took a whopping 11.2 per cent jump in price.

The increases in the food price index was a major influence in the 1.0 per cent rise in the Consumer Price Index during December. Other price increases included clothing, which went up 0.2 per cent and the cost of building, buying, renting and operating a home which increased by 0.7 per cent.

OTTAWA — The fiery Member of Parliament for Kingston and the Islands Flora MacDonald heaped her wrath on an unsuspecting House of Commons last week as she made her demands for more government responsiveness to the people.

Delivering her first speech before the Commons, MacDonald let Parliament know that the Canadian people are developing a more thorough understanding and that they are looking for more involvement and wider participation in government.

She called on the parties to build a credibility in our party process and to once again take up the forefront of social progress. MacDonald pointed out that, to many, the machinery of government seems to be operating in its own way for its own purpose and castigated the government as one which has become remote from the people and insensitive to individual concerns.

OTTAWA — Industry, Trade and Commerce Chief Alastair Gillespie has announced that the forthcoming session of Parliament can expect to see some new policies dealing with Foreign Investment in Canadian Industry, including a government screening board.

The screening board would be responsible for looking at all new foreign direct investment and recommending whether or not they should be allowed to enter Canada. Also promised by the minister is legislation to give aid in financing and counselling to Canadian owned business. Gillespie also hinted that there may be a proposal brought before the House to require a majority of Canadians on the Boards of Directors on federally incorporated Canadian companies.

OTTAWA — In response to attacks by Conservative Member of Parliament John Diefenbaker, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau has announced that a redistribution of seats would not reduce the total number held by a province. According to Diefenbaker, the redistribution plan being drafted would reduce the seats allocated to Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Quebec.

Behind the Lines

By Bob Mutrie

Q. Well John Q. Consumer, I understand that your 1961 food dollar is now worth only fifty three cents.

A: That's right, Bob and I don't see any end to it. The prices have risen half as high again since the war and the trend seems to be actually speeding up; they say next year food prices might increase by another ten per cent...

Q: Where does your fifty three cent food dollar actually go?

A: Well, nineteen cents of it goes to the farmer, Bob, and the other thirty-four cents goes to the processor. I can actually remember when the farmer was getting fifty percent.

Q: Is that rather an unequal distribution, John?

A: If you consider that the average farmer earns $3700 a year and the President of Kraftco has an income of $250,000 over the same period, you might say it is. With all this talk about surplus crops going around and Ottawa asking farmers to reduce their acreage, it really seems strange that I am faced with higher and higher prices - it just doesn't seem to figure.

Q: Do you think that you might be able to find some sort of solution to this dilemna?

A: Well, I've switched to food pills.....

backpage

World: Governor makes bid to end drug sales

NEW YORK — New York drug pedlars will be faced with life imprisonment without any chance of parole if a controversial new bill introduced by state governor Nelson Rockefeller is passed by the Legislature.

The debate on the legislation has become especially heated in New York City, inhabited by 150,000 of the nation's drug users. Criticism of the new proposal has come most strongly from the New York Civil Liberties Union.

The new law would also include payoffs of $1,000 for turning in a pusher.

WASHINGTON — The United States has abandoned their long lived price and wage controls after managing to bring inflation increases to a low 3.1 per cent last year.

However, in announcing the freezing of prices for everything with the exception of problematic areas in food, health and construction, Nixon stated that he expects voluntary maintenance of price increases reflecting manufacturing costs. Failure of the voluntary controls would result in the re-imposition of mandatory laws he added.

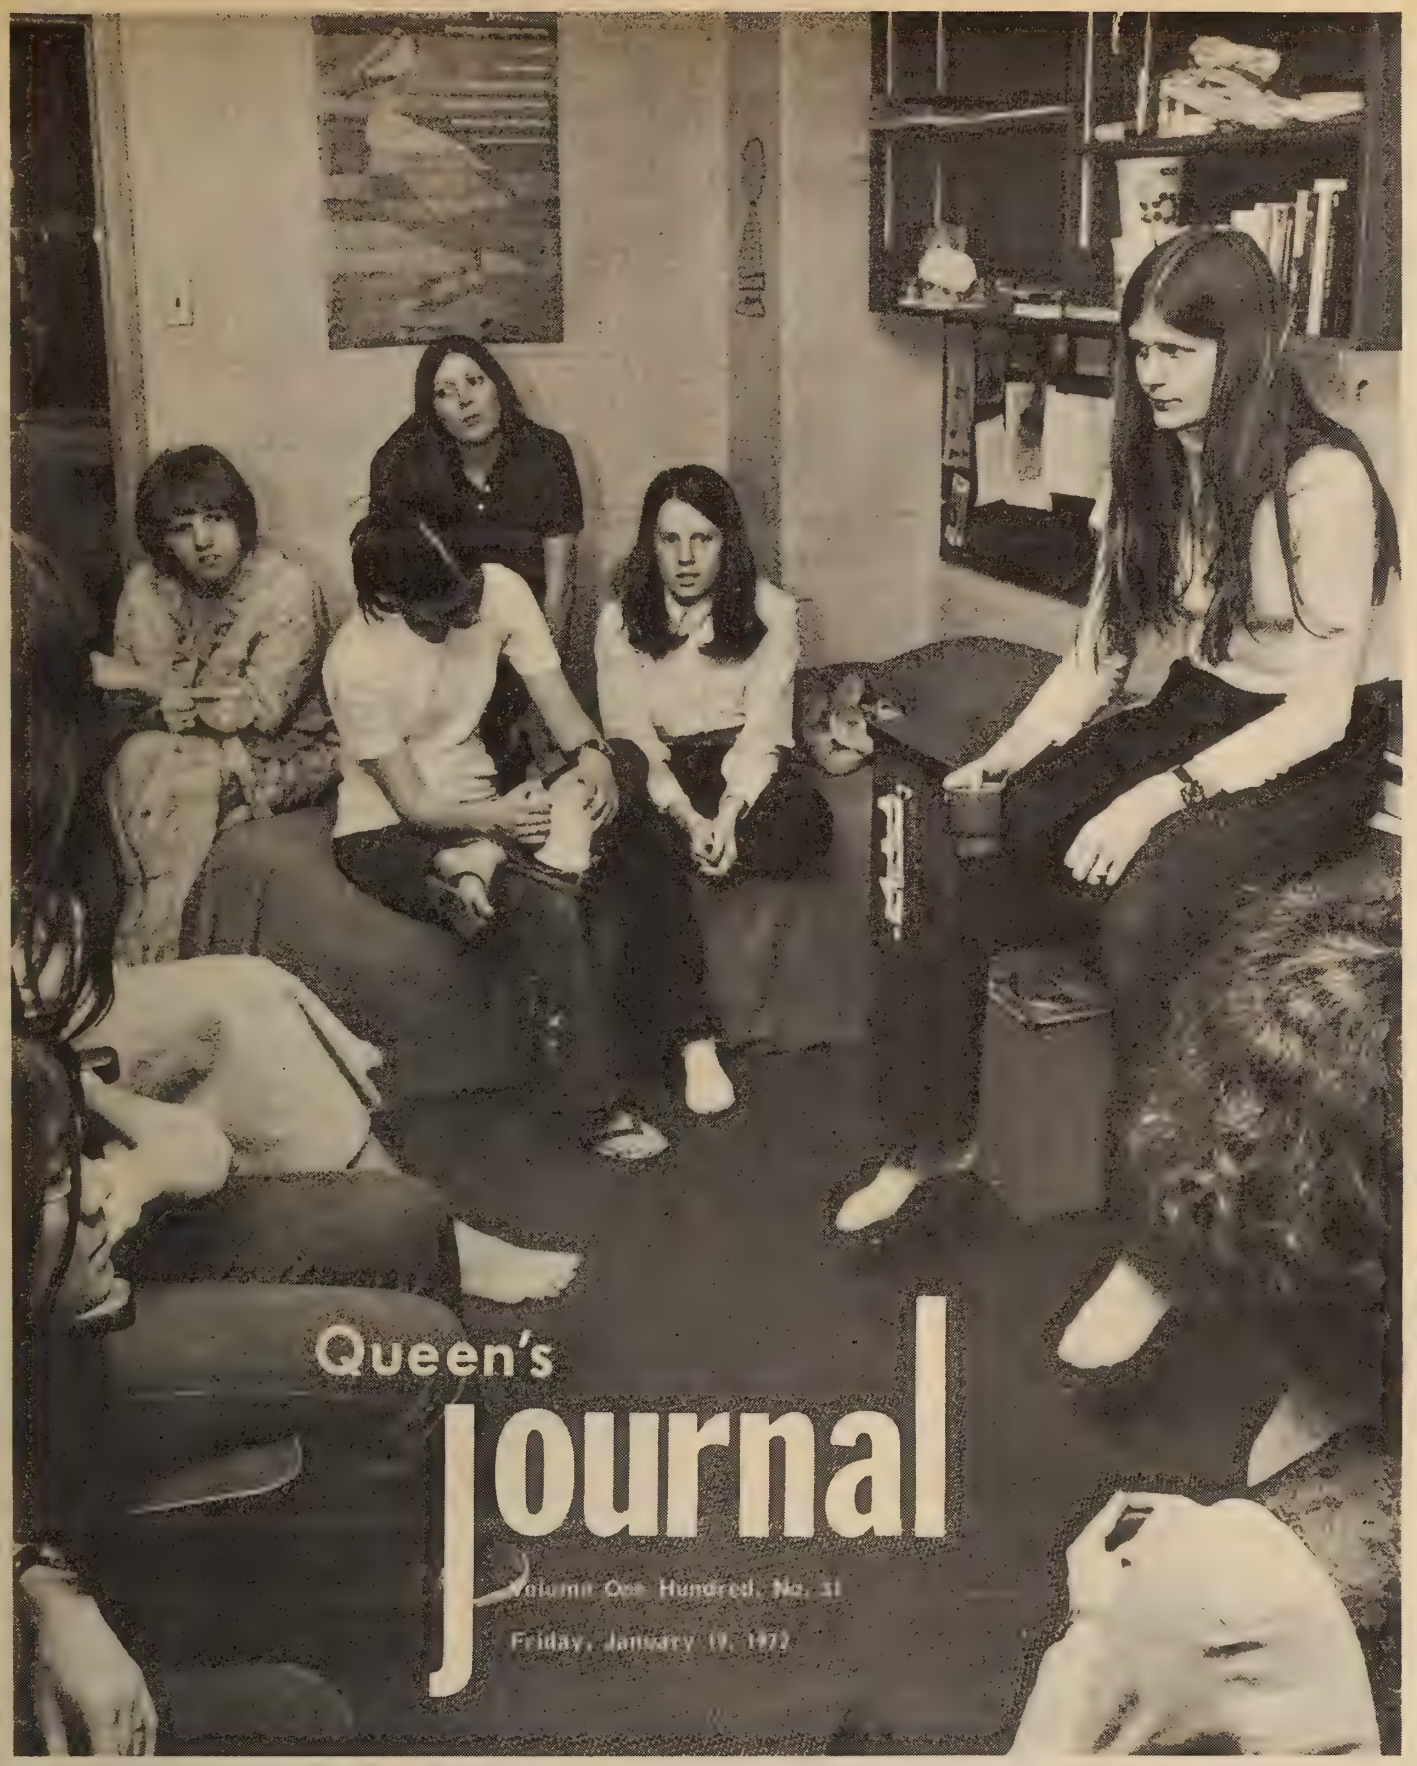
PARIS — An unusally large number of aides have joined both North Vietnamese negotiator Le Duc Tho and US Presidential advisor Henry Kissinger at the Paris peace talks, signalling that they are reaching crucial levels. In addition, the call for an official photographer from the US Embassy has added to the mounting speculation that a settlement of the war in Vietnam is near.

NEW YORK — Schools were closed and industrial employees laid off as New York faced a serious shortage of fuel oil and heating gas last week. The scarcity of petroleum in the state has led to rationing and the White House Office of Emergency Preparedness is drafting a plan for rationing fuel. The plan will include cutting average gas sales to consumers by 40 per cent and ordering a 30 per cent decrease in heating fuels.

WASHINGTON — Cosmetics have been receiving an ever increasing degree of scrutiny with an increasing number of complaints occurring as the result of physical damage through use of certain products.

The National Commission of Product Safety in the United States began to focus attention on the problem when they reported in 1970 that 60,000 people had been injured through the use of cosmetics, presently devoid of government regulation.

The Federal Drug Administration has reported that 314 complaints have been registered against hair cosmetics alone reporting cases of hair loss, itching, burning, or severe allergie reactions.



JOHANNESBURG — Zambia has found itself almost totally isolated as South Africa and Mozambique join Rhodesia in imposing trade sanctions against that country. The sanctions came in retaliation to raids from Zambia-based African nationals seeking to oust white regimes in neighbouring countries.

The sanctions by South Africa means that Zambia will be cut off from most essential supplies, including foodstuffs. The only alternative route now open to them is the seldom used road to the Tanzanian port of Dar-es-Salaam.

Guerrilla raids on Rhodesia have since intensified and are beginning to receive a measure of support from Africans inside that country.

BEIRUT — President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, seeking to improve his strained relations with Russia has called on President Tito of Yugoslavia to mediate a reconciliation between the two nations. Tito has since agreed and set up a meeting between the leaders of both countries.

LOS ANGELES — The American Medical Association publication, Archives of Environmental Health has reported that a number of toothpaste brands contain a dangerous level of lead. The list of such brands include the popular Crest toothpaste, which presently is in command of 40 per cent of the market.

A number of AMS Outer Council people and others spent Monday and Tuesday going through residences explaining the reasons behind fee withholding and fielding questions.

Withholding going well

by Susan de Stein

"The response was overwhelmingly in favour of the fee strike," External Affairs commissioner, Lyn Whitham told the Wednesday night meeting of the AMS Outer Council. She was referring to the renewed efforts of the AMS to inform students of the issues, to answer questions and to clear up problems. The campaign began in residence on Monday and Tuesday nights. "The student body is concerned and will participate in the strike," she added.

Miss Whitham also mentioned that Syl Apps will be at Queen's on Monday to speak to students on university financing and student aid. He will be in the Polson Room, in the Student's Union, at 8:30 p.m.

She also reported that Jack McNie will also be at Queen's to talk to students about government policies, on Saturday, February 10 at 10 a.m. Miss Whitham commented that "he seems to want to avoid us."

A constitutional amendment was presented, dealing with the possibility of the remuneration of the student activity fee upon withdrawal from the university. In the past, the fees were not returned to the student upon his withdrawal. Palmer felt that "such a move could not be justified." Now, "refunds of the student interest fees are calculated at the rate of one eighth for each month of session remaining to April 30."

The question of campus student entrepreneurs was also dealt with at the meeting. A report, made by Steve Brereton, Andy Pipe, and Ken Wong submitted to the Council, included several recommendations. The report proposed that "the AMS refuse to lend its support to individuals who wish to undertake campus events likely to return them a profit." It was felt by the committee that "there are sufficiently large numbers of organizations and clubs with a sufficiently great range of activities to satisfy most individuals interests and tastes. We are sure that these organizations would welcome the ideas and energies of any individuals with common or related interests."

Fee withholding blitz sparks discussion

The AMS fee withholding blitz has sparked a good deal of discussion. Many students were concerned that they might incur a late payment penalty, and expressed fears that the university would be unable to continue operation without the additional tuition revenues. A number seemed undecided as to whether or not they would withhold their second-term fees.

Fears of a late payment penalty aroused the most concern. Several people wanted to know if and when the penalty would be waived, and commented that they would withhold their fees, but only if they did not have to pay the extra fifteen dollars.

Lyn Whitham, AMS External Affairs Commissioner, told the Journal that "Dr. Deutsch has indicated that he fully supports our cause and endeavours in the area of student aid". He was receptive to the idea of not collecting the February 1 late payment fee of $15.00. "He said he would bring it up at the next meeting of the Board of Trustees" which is slated for mid-February. Normally University regulations provide for late payment fees to be charged at the end of January and a further $10 at the end of February. This could be changed at the February meeting. If fees or any other debts are still outstanding after the end of February, the university will withhold the student's academic information. Marks will be released upon payment which may be made any time before next year's registration.

Others were concerned that if they withheld their fees, OSAP would blacklist them, and be ineligible for further loans, which in some cases would prohibit returning to Queen's next year. OSAP, however, is not in communication with the university and has no way to be able to 'blacklist' award recipients.

Seven universities besides Queen's are distributing OSAP cheques regardless of the student's financial standing with the university. They are York, Carleton, Lakehead, Laurentian, Ottawa and Toronto. Eight other universities have revealed sharply different policies. Brock, Guelph, McMaster, Trent, Waterloo, Waterloo-Lutheran, Western and Windsor are not awarding cheques unless they pay outstanding bills.

Although the deadline is not until April, a number of students wondered how they would be able to fill out their income tax forms if they had not paid their full fees. In response, student spokesmen stated that deductions should be made for the paid portion of the tuition.

That much of the current dispute over loan ceilings could have been avoided was another common comment. Several persons claimed that OSAP should be more efficiently administered in order to keep abuses of the system to a minimum, and to give greater aid to those who need it most. This echoes Ms. Whithams statement (Journal, Jan. 12) "We are protesting what appears to be government policy of closing university education to those in lower income groups." Other AMS demands include that the government clarify its position on higher education for 1973-74, lower the OSAP age of independence, and make OSAP open to part-time students.

newsbriefs

Speaker to review defense in the 70's

After the former Minister of National Defense, Paul Hellyer introduced the policy to integrate the Canadian military into one force Prime Minister Trudeau redefined Canada's military role in her foreign policy as a sovereignity of the north. The result of these policies has been a reduction of personnel from 145,000 to 85,000 and to a large extent, the re-equipping of the Forces with American military hardware.

For the past decade the Canadian Armed Forces has generally kept a low profile with the exception of aide to police forces in the repression of prison riots; they also aided provincial and municipal police forces during the Quebec Crisis following the enactment of the War Measures Act.

Inter-action III's guest lecturer on January 29th will be Lt. Col. R. Baumgart, Deputy Commandant of the Canadian Forces Land Staff College who will present views on The Role of the Canadian Forces in the '70's.

Faculty members and students are invited to attend the presentation of Lt. Col Baumgart at 7:30 p.m. in the Faculty Lounge in Watson Hall.

Queen's-RMC game 86 years old

As part of its Tercentenary events Kingston will again stage the Historical Hockey Game between Queen's and RMC. The first recorded game was played in 1886 on the harbour ice by the shoal tower in front of Kingston City Hall. Queen's won that first game against RMC 1-0 and they duplicated that win in 1969 when the series was revived as part of the Kingston Winter Carnival. The two seven-man teams re-enact the historic game with replicas of the original playing equipment. Armed with short, field hockey-type sticks and a rubber puck similar to a sliced lacross ball. Queen's and RMC play according to the rules of the earlier games. Players must remain onside and not raise their sticks above their shoulders. Penalties are given out at the discretion of the referee and an umpire, armed with a signal flag, stands behind the goals. Unlike today, the goalkeeper had no large gloves; he uses the same short stick and was forbidden from kneeling or lying on the ice to stop the puck.

This year's historical games will consist of 20-minute round-robin contests between Queen's, RMC, and No. 2 Royal Canadian Horse Artillery of CFB Petawawa. The winner receives the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery Brigade Association trophy. The celebrations for this historic hockey series will begin at 1 pm on Saturday, February 10 with the traditional parade down Princess street to the waterfront where representatives of the Canadian Forces Base here will clash in a game of shinny. At 2:30 pm the hockey game will begin with Queen's and the Army trying to capture the honours from RMC who has won the trophy for the past two years.

Applicants to get a better chance

The Senate of Queen's University recently approved an experimental 'special admissions project'. The primary aim of the project is to discover means of assessment, for persons wishing to enter university, in addition to the traditional Grade 13. In the first stage of the project, a limited number of persons who do not meet the formal entrance requirements, but who show academic potential and promise of benefiting from university work, will be admitted as full-time students to the Faculty of Arts and Science for the 1973-74 academic year.

A variety of tests and other selection procedures will be carried out on applicants to the project, and successful candidates will be chosen on the basis of ability, achievement, and motivation. After admission, specially admitted students will be expected to meet normal standards of performance, but the maximum possible help, in terms of academic and personal counselling, will be made available to them. Their progress will be carefully studied and compared to the progress of a control group of regularly admitted students.

To be eligible for participation in the project, applicants must have reached the age of 18 by September 1, 1973, and have completed a minimum of Ontario Grade 10 or the equivalent. Persons who are presently registered as full-time high school students are not eligible. Preference will be given to persons under 21 years of age on Decmeber 31, 1973, and to those who have not previously attended university. Individuals 21 years of age or older, who have not attended university may apply for admission under the 'mature student regulation' already in effect at Queen's University.

Further information may be obtained by writing to the Assistant Registrar (Admissions), Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario. Enquiries must be received by February 17, 1973.

Yearly housing lottery time again

Do you want your name on the list for AMS housing? This year, positions on the AMS housing list will be determined by a lottery to be held on January 24.

The main purpose of the lottery, according to Steve Sugar, an AMS spokesman, is to ensure that everyone gets an equal chance for available housing.

Each person will be given a ballot at the door, which he should fill out with his name and the type of accomodation desired. The entry will then be placed in a box along with other applications for that type of housing. The draw will be held by type of housing, and the list will be compiled in the order that the ballots are drawn.

Only one entry is allowed per person and proxy votes are not permitted. If several people want to live together, they should all attend in order to improve their chances.

A preliminary housing list will be available immediately after the draw is made. The AMS hopes to have a rough idea of which houses will be available by March.

The lottery will be held in Grant Hall on January 24. The doors will open at 8 p.m. and the draw will take place at 8.30.

544-1227
• Free Delivery
• Fast, Friendly Service
• Most consistent quality
• pizza in Kingston
286 Montreal St. North
PIZZA CHALET

ART EXHIBIT
CONTRIBUTORS
FOR FESTIVAL '73
Photos, art, crafts batiks, sculptures.
Bring them to Jane Wicks, 24 Barrie
544-3280
Carol Rogers, 128 Earl
544-9196
Deadline: Tuesday, January 23

MONDAY, JAN. 22
a discussion with
SYL APPS
8:30 p.m.
Polson room
Student's Union

Opportunities for Youth '73
is here
Contact Roy Beechy
at 547-5766

AMS elections, February 7th, 8th

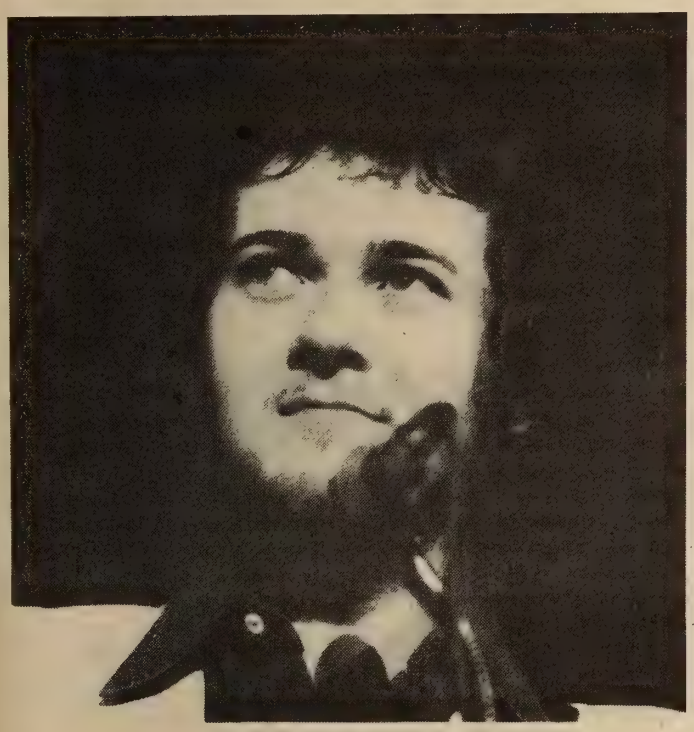
by Susan de Stein

It was agreed at the AMS Outer Council meeting on Wednesday night that the AMS elections will be held on February 7th and 8th. An advance poll will be held at McArthur College on February 1, to "prevent disenfranchising those education students who will be absent from McArthur for practice teaching for five weeks beginning Feb. 2," commented Wally Palmer, Vice-President of the AMS. This would thus give the candidates almost a week of campaigning at west campus. Palmer added that "McArthur college represents an integral part of this campus although they aren't here tonight."

Nominations for President and Vice-President of the AMS close at 5 p.m. on Friday, January 26. It was also noted that faculty elections will be held in conjunction with AMS elections.

An election procedure committee consisting of Wally Palmer, Marv Bloos and Bruce Trotter, presented a report to the meeting. A motion to limit the amount of money to be spent to support the election campaign by the candidates or on their behalf to $50, was presented.

Some objection was raised to this amount, in light of today's rising prices. Bloos commented that he considered this amount fair. Queen's, he said "is a poor man's campus", and added that "the possibility of running for election would be open to all students" and not a select few. Bloos added that in this way, "we would not have a lot of extraneous spending" and it would not force candidates into the necessity of trying to keep up with other contending parties.



Another motion was introduced, dealing with methods of campaigning. It was proposed in the report that "under no circumstances may campaign materials of any description be placed on anything other than bulletin boards."

Andy Pipe, Meds rep on the AMS, was in agreement to all other motions included in the report, but said that this clause was "ridiculous". Pipe, in his own words, "an old sinister backroom politician", commented that "the last place a student would look at a poster would be on a bulletin board." He outlined the usually important places for a campaign poster as being "on windows, in stairwells, on construction fences" and the like. "We would like the election to generate the interest of the students, through imaginative campaigning, and posters," he said "however, we don't want the 'band wagon' political campaigning that characterizes American electioneering."

Leblanc agreed with Pipe in stating that the paragraph exhibited a sense of "over.-fairness".

Bloos agreed with the principle that imaginative campaigning generated interest but stressed that "what we need are better people, and not better campaigning." In the past, elections have produced a "circus" atmosphere, he said. Palmer agreed that "things have gotten out of hand in the past."

In conjunction with the AMS elections a referenda will be held, proposing a change in the financing methods of the Tricolor from a $4.00 student activity fee and a $1.50 levy against the faculty societies for graduate photographs, to a $5.00 student fee.

News from Societies

Elections were held on Thursday 18, for the new executive. The annual grad banquet will be held in early March. The Theological Student's Society is planning its blood donor clinic for Donald Mathers, the past principal of Theological College, who died in September.

The Mathers International Student's Fund has issued an invitation to a student in Brazil to continue his studies here at Queen's. Each year, a student or students is invited to attend Queen's and receive a scholarship on acceptance. Last year, the invitation was accepted by two students from the West Indies.

Views from McArthur

The McArthur Student's Society reports that their one night a week pub will hopefully be extended to two nights. Other social news is the Drama Club's play that is now being prepared. Bitter grounds is trying to extend their entertainment to McArthur one night a week.

A Course Curriculum Committee has been set up by the students to question some of the necessary courses required by the department.

The Society is in the midst of negotiating with the AMS to get a better deal for the West Campus students. The West Campus student fees are the same as main campus' and there is an attempt to get some of this money back to West Campus or work out an arrangement with the AMS to increase services. These fees are going to the main campus and McArthur students are also questioning if they should pay the Students' Union fees. What is desired is to get West Campus more involved with Queen's as a whole, and to increase the awareness of one for another. There has to be increased communication as more students are going to be living in West Campus.

REHABitually:

The Rehab Student's Society is getting ready for coming elections, a smoker, and open house. For Snowball Week, a skit is being rehearsed with the Civil Engineers. The Rehab girls are also engineering a Sunday night skating party on the lake with the Civil students. March 10 is the date set for the Rehab formal.

Hooray for Meds

Dear Editor:

Hooray for equal chance in the medical school sweeps! ie no discrimination by sex in admissions! Unfortunately, I have to go back several spaces--I waited fifteen years for an equal chance and now that I'm over thirty, here's the medical school saying I would be of reduced value because of a shorter career! Maybe I should just turn on the gas.

Is the admissions board buying quantity instead of quality? Who knows at this point which it would be? If I promised to live an extra fifteen years, would that help? When people start talking about selection based on a concept of reduced value to society because of shortened career due to age, it seems nearly time to make more spaces available for applicants so society isn't deprived of the extra years.

I hope this kind of thinking isn't catching.

Yours in support of geritol.

BUFFALO CHIPS

Snowball Variety Nite

We need TALENT OF ALL KINDS

--Canadiana Theme
-- Musicians
-- Skits
-- Folksingers

Auditions for all interested Wednesday, January 24

Ellis Hall Audit. 7:00 pm

Please call Charles (549-1941)

or Steve (544-9381) if interested.

St. James' Church

UNION AND BARRIE STREETS
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

Rector:
Rev. Gordon Hendra

The Rectory
156 Barrie Street
546-5623

9.00 a.m. - HOLY COMMUNION

11.00 a.m. - MORNING PRAYER
Preacher - The Rector

7.30 p.m. - LITURGY OF QU'APPELLE

8.10 p.m. - OPEN FORUM on "Are overseas missions valid today?"
-The Rev. William Zion, Cliff Hospital & Eric Reble
-ALL ARE WELCOME -

Thursday, Jan. 25
Feast of Conversion of St. Paul
10.30 a.m. HOLY COMMUNION

AE at the art centre

Don't miss the two exhibitions:

COLETTE WHITEN: structures, slides, film, casts, video tape

LICHTENSTEIN AND JOHNS

Both finish on January 28

SCOOP JACKSON says hello and warns the campus heavies that he will be . . .

WANTED: metal backpack. G. C. Buck, 549-1408.

I'M TYPING and its 2:32 a.m. THANKS. . .SUSAN.

NEEDED Responsible students to serve in an organizational capacity or otherwise in the planning of a Tercentenary seminar featuring outstanding members of the Queen's and Kingston communities. Fresh ideas and enthusiasm are the main qualifications. If interested contact Jamie Flemming at 544-0043 or leave name on the External Affairs desk in the AMS office.

CATHY -- a dime isn't enough for all of F-troop.

CARNAVAL DE QUEBEC: final big weekend, March 2, 3, 4. $30 includes accommodation in downtown area and bus to and from Quebec. All welcome; only four buses going.

BOOK NOW. Limited space. Deposit of $10 due before Feb. 9. Balance due before Feb. 21. Sign up at the bus service desk in the basement of the Union. Sponsored by Artsci '76.

LEAVING YOUR APARTMENT permanently in May? Young couple looking for large two-bedroom apartment with character. In small apartment building or house. Call now, 544-8598.

LUNCH PROGRAMME IN north Kingston provides meal and activities for children at noon needs volunteers if you could spare a couple of hours one day a week, please call Debbie at 544-3482 or Ann at 546-7191.

JORDY . . . Thanks for making the Sutton trip such a fine time for all . . . Love, the folks from suites 15 and 18.

PAM DAVIES . . . Call Bob . . . 546-9998.

CHARLIE Where is My Saw?

MARIEN . . .Where is Palmer's Saw?

ELROND WAS DESIGNED as an alternative to the Queen's residences. It has short hallways, a higher proportion of single rooms, many different types of apartments. It is a co-educational, self governed and has its own education programme to be operated on $10,000 next year. The dining room for those in the houses is small and run co-operatively You can paint your own room. Elrond needs students who have a desire to mould their own environment and help themselves to a more practical education. Got any ideas how to spend $10,000

HOUSE WARMING at Jim, Ted, Chris and Dave's on Saturday, night at 437 Brock St. All friends welcome and beer is available.

WANTED COUPLE or individual to share five room apartment Close to campus. Rent $50. 545-0185.

SATURDAY JANUARY 20 at 8:00 p.m. Undergrad Films presents Weekend directed by Jean-Luc Godard. This celluloid masterpiece will be screened at Dunning Hall auditorium. Admission is a mere dollar.

HOUSE OR APARTMENT WANTED near main campus for five guys next year, Phone 549-1669, 549-1624 or 549-1652.

LOUISE - Happy Birthday from the News desk.

ACAPULCO FOR $199.00 (8 days) Departures every SUNDAY in Feb. (Study Weeks) from Toronto, includes jet transport, accommodation (doubles), parties, discos. Contact AOSC 44 St. George St., Toronto 5. 416-962-8404 or your Student Council.

EUROPE SUMMER 73 TORONTO to LONDON from $79 one way or $155 return - Take a dependable charter. Contact AOSC, 44 St. George St., Toronto 5 416 962 8404 - or your Student Council. BOOK EARLY AND SAVE

Travelling in Europe INTERNATIONAL STUDENT I.D. card, student railpass, car rentals, cheapest and most dependable charter flights, camping tours etc. all available now from: AOSC, 44 St. George St., Toronto 5 416-962-8404. (The Student Travel co-op owned by your student Council)

WANT TO CAMP in Florida Keys during study week? Room for 2. Cost approx $50 each. Includes transportation to coral reef state park. Key Largo, camping fees and food. Call Lyle at 544-9571.

LOST: One pair of black reiker ski-boots on carrier near vicinity of 221 Albert. REWARD. Phone 542-8855.

IF YOU DIDN'T LIKE last year's yearbook (or even if you did), come to the Tricolor Office on Tuesday January 23 at 7:30 pm to give your ideas to make the year essay better. If it's a poor essay, it's your fault.

WANTED FOR '73-'74, 2 or 3 bedroom apartment. Fairly close to campus. Please call 544-7077 or 544-7132.

THE COMMITTEE OF Bitter Grounds Coffee House would like to apologize to those patrons who arrived at our doors Sunday night after 9:30 pm. Due to our talented opposition, we could find no justification (or patron) to warrent remaining open. And the boss forgot to leave a note on the door. We apologize and hope to see you this weekend.

CHICK: to the girls that was led astray by The Happy Hooker. Your mom phoned. The rent is due. We miss you. Please come home.

COLLEEN, HEATHER, Kathleen, MV and Sue are looking for a house to fit them all for '73-'74. Phone 544-8697, 544-8014, 544-8035, 544-8171 or 544-8138 if you want to be a sweetie.

ARTSCI 76 YEAR crests and buttons on sale now in Leonard and Ban Righ Meal Lines.

VIENNA SKATING NIGHT: 9:30 - 11:30 pm at the Arena Friday (tonite), January 19. Waltz music -- hot gluhwein 3 for a dollar. Free admission with any year card. 50c without.

Want to help shape people's minds?

We're looking for an orientation convener for the AMS

Apply in writing to
The Education Commissioner,
Alma Mater Society,
Students' Union

ASUS ELECTION

Nominations are now being received for the following ASUS positions

- ☐ President and vice-president (team)
- ☐ Secretary
- ☐ Treasurer
- ☐ Senator (Two-Year term)
- ☐ Senator (One-year term)
- ☐ Nine (9) AMS Representatives at Large

Nominations must include acceptance by the candidate, name and address and the supporting signatures of 25 ASUS members with their years. Nominations must be handed in to the AMS office by 5 pm, Wednesday, January 31. The election will be held the following week.

Need information? Contact Doug Donald at 544-0657

CARNAVAL de QUEBEC

Final Big Weekend (March 2,3, 4)

$30 All Welcome

- Includes accomodation in downtown area and bus to and from Quebec.
- Only 4 buses going.

BOOK NOW! LIMITED SPACE!

- Deposit of $10 due before Feb. 9. Balance by Feb. 21.
- Sign up at the Bus Service Desk in the basement of the Union.

Sponsored by ARTSCI '76

SNOWBALL TICKET SALES

Tickets for the following SNOWBALL events, as well as SNOWBALL buttons and programmes, will be on sale at the John Orr Room in the Union from 10:30 to 3:30 pm and in the Meal lines from 4:30 to 6:00 pm beginning Monday, January 22.

Fruit of the Vine:

Wine and cheese --$1.50 couple

Chimo: Semi-Formal -- $7.00/couple

Buffalo Chips: Variety Night - 25¢

Snowball Button and programme for the week - $1.00

ARTSCI 76

Year Crests and Buttons are on sale now in Leonard and Ban Righ Meal Lines.

Crests: $2.50

Buttons: $ .25

ELROND COLLEGE APPLICATION FORM
SEPTEMBER 1973

Name: .....

Current Address: .....

.....

Phone No.: .....

Home Address: .....

Phone No.: .....

Birth: ..... Sex: .....

Course Concentration: ..... Year: .....

Other Information: .....

.....

CHOOSE YOUR HOME

Indicate 1st, 2nd, 3rd Choice

No. of Units	Houses
	12 person house (meal plan)
16	Single	$1155 (8 months)
	Double	$ 995 (8 months)
	Double as Single	$1295 (8 months)
	6 person house (meal plan)
7	Single	$1155 (8 months)
	Double	$ 995 (8 months)
	Double as Single	$1295 (8 months)
	1 person house (meal plan)
4	Single	$1155 (8 months)
	Double	$ 995 (8 months)
	Double as Single	$1295 (8 months)
	2 person house (not on meal plan)
20	Each Large Single	$105/month
	Apartments
	1 Bedroom apartment (1, 2 people)
	Small Corridor Apt.	$140 month
2	Large Corridor Apt	$160 month
6	Large Thru Apt.	$175/month
8
	2 Bedroom apartment (1, 2, 3 people)
	Small Corridor Apt.	$195/month
2	Small Thru Apt.	$225/month
24	Large Thru Apt.	$245/month
8

Parking $10.00 per month.

When applying with a room mate or for the same house, please staple the applications and enclose them in one envelope. Mail or bring them to: Elrond College, 401 Princess Street, Kingston.

Elrond OPEN HOUSE

coffee and donuts

Take a look at 2 person 4 person 6 person

12 person, 1 bedroom, 2 bedroom units.

WED., THUR., FRI., JAN. 24-26 6.30 pm

ALL DAY SAT. JAN. 27

AMS backs Brock sit-in

The Queen's University AMS has sent out a telegram of support for the more than two hundred students presently occupying Brock University in protest of recent administration cutbacks.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CUP) — The usually-quiet southern Ontario campus has been rocked by militant student action, as the province-wide protest against restrictive educational policies continues.

The Brock students Jan. 16 occupied the board of governors chambers and lounges surrounding the university president's office to protest the firing of 16 faculty members.

Thier action followed successful occupations the week before by students at the University of Western Ontario and at York University's two Toronto area campuses. Students convinced their administrations to reverse their stands not to release student aid cheques to students wishing to support the Ontario Federation of Students' boycott of second term fee payments. (see earlier CUP stories)

The Brock occupation began after a general meeting of the Students Union attended by about 600 Brock students. Student leaders have decided not to support the OFS fees strike but were still angry with the massive firings.

The general meeting resolved: "whereas the administration of Brock University has chosen to discontinue (fire) 16 faculty members, thereby decreasing the quality of teaching at the same time that tuition costs have risen by $100 per year for this lower quality education.

"Therefore let it be resolved that the Brock University Student Union condemn the actions of the administration in the firing of faculty and that the administration be informed that the minimum requirement of council in this situation be that the administration rescind its termination notices for the 16 faculty members and, that the administratiin assure the University that there will be no further attempts to cut back any areas of staff or courses at Brock."

The students at the meeting decided the way to "inform" the administration was to occupy some of the 13th floor of the Brock Tower which houses the president's and other administrative offices.

Citing budget cuts, the Brock administration has sent termination notices to five full-time and 11 part-time lecturers. According to University Provost, Dr. Alan Earp, the teachers terminated "were chosen from departments with a high student-teacher ratio. Some Departments are continuing to get more students each year, and cannot do without their part-time staff. Others can."

Realizing that Brock's is not a unique situation, the occupiers are pressing for action by the Provincial Government and students at other campuses. Faculty cutbacks have become an issue at many Canadian Universities this year.

The occupiers have decided against occupying the lobby of the tower and preventing the use of the elevators. The university president would have to pass through occupied territory to get to his office and occupiers are divided on whether to let him in.

A second meeting was called January 17 attended by 1300 students of Brock's total population of 2000 who voted almost unanimously to continue the occupation until all their demands were met without compromise.

The faculty association is negotiating with the university administration for a decrease in the cutbacks. But the association has taken no stand on the students actions. Some individual faculty members are supporting the occupation.

U of Montreal militants in court

MONTREAL (CUP) (CUPI) — The University of Montreal got its day in court beginning Jan. 17, in its continuing campaign against student militance.

Some 35 students and campus workers are charged with "mischief to private property", arising from alleged incidents during the bitter strike by U of M maintenance workers in October 1971.

The trouble began when the university hired professional strikebreakers at $96 a day. The action hardened attitudes in what to that point had been a peaceful strike. Students formed a strike-support committee to urge people not to cross the picket lines and assist the strikers.

While performing night patrol duty, the strikers who are on trial were attacked by 50 helmetted, club-wielding thugs.

About 900 maintenance workers, members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, stayed on strike for about six weeks before reaching a settlement with the university. Classes were shut down for most of that time.

On Feb. 19, another group of U of M students go to trial charged with the same "mischief" offence levelled by the university.

About 20 students are accused of occupying the International Centre of Comparative Criminology last May.

The centre is notorious for giving aid and advice to police and military forces in fascist and ouasi-fascist regimes in the third world, such as Brazil, Iran and the Ivory Coast. Its main source of funds are the Ford Foundation and the Canadian International Development Agency.

The occupation took place on the eve of a criminology symposium at Mont Ste-Adele, which brought together police chiefs and criminologists from around the world, including ones from third-world totalitarian administrations.

Observers believe the case will be used as a precedent for all future university occupations in the area.

Student power offensive starts at Loyola

MONTREAL (CUPI) — Attempting to increase student involvement in university government, student leaders at Loyola College have initiated protests against a new registration scheme, faculty opposition to course evaluations, poor food service, and inadequate library resources.

As he initiated the "Too Far to Turn Back" campaign, Student Association President Peter Fedele said "students have always been getting the worst end of any deal on this campus." He said a food boycott would take place January 12, and a moratorium on the library January 15. The Students' Association will initiate discussions on course evaluation and will hold a referendum on a proposed four-day school week.

The campaign, aimed primarily at increasing public awareness of the issues that have been troubling student leaders for the past two years, is also intended to embarass Loyola officials and pressure them to change their policies.

Tricolor Society nominations being accepted until January 25

by Michael Burrows

Nominations for an important Queen's tradition, the Tricolor Award, are being accepted until January 25. Members of the Tricolor Society are Queen's students "who, in the judgement of a committee, have made a substantial contribution to the university in their non-athletic extra curricular activities." The Chairman of the Committee this year is Roy Kirkpatrick and the committee has also representatives from the faculty, societies the combined Journal-Tricolor staff, and from student senators.

Any student is eligible for an award, but obviously it does take a considerable amount of time to make the necessary contribution to the University and gain recognition for it.

Since the Tricolor Society was established in 1940, 350 members have been admitted (an average of about 10 a year). The Tricolor Society, to maintain the distinction of the awards, tries to keep the numbers to a minimum each year. Over the years, there has been some criticism as to how this number shall be chosen and what constitutes "valuable service" as far as choosing one candidate over another is concerned.

Past winners have, on the whole, fared well on leaving the university and the list of some of the well-known members includes J. R. Matheson (designer of the Canadian flag, Supreme Court Judge), J. M. Courtright (Queen's Vice-Principal), M B Dymond (Head Ont Science Centre, former Ont Health Minister), John Richardson (Former Minister of National Defence).

Nominations will be accepted until 5 p.m. January 25. Forms are available in the AMS Office in the Student Union.

Throw a Kegger.

A "Kegger" is a draft beer get-together that you can enjoy anywhere, anytime. All you need for a "Kegger" is an Oktoberfest Tap'n Keg with Mini-Keg refills, and you're on your way to good times. Draw as much as you want whenever you want it. When you run out, just drop in a Mini-Keg refill and draw another 16 eight-ounce glasses of fresh, cool Real Draft Beer.

Oktoberfest Real Draft Beer

editorial

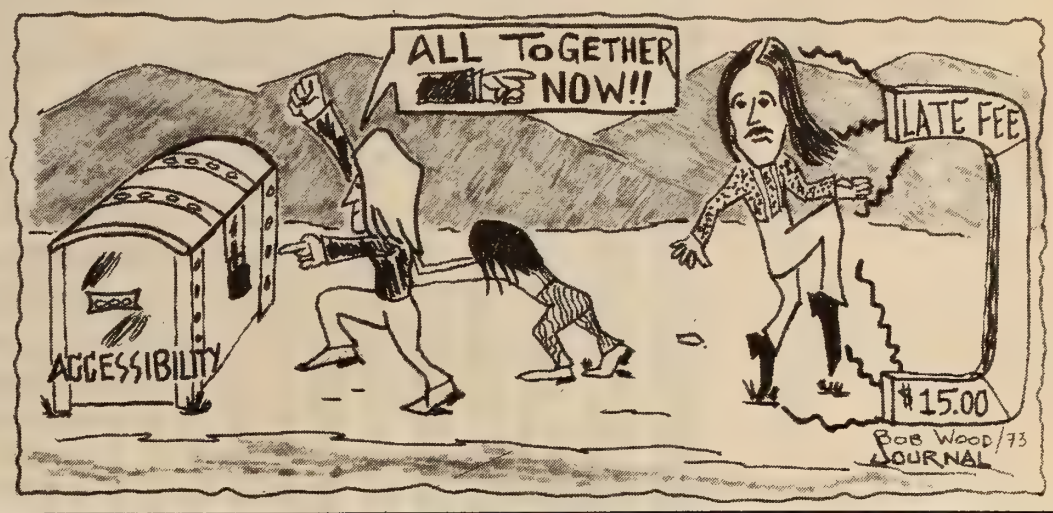
Students at Queen's must back up their demands by withholding fees

As the fee withholding campaign gains momentum at Queen's and other universities across Ontario, students are asking two questions: What is the withholding designed to accomplish; and will there by any punitive action by the university against students who withhold fees.

The campaign is designed to emphasize students discontent with government policies on higher education. Voting yes in last October's referendum was not enough to show the government that we mean business. Following through by withholding fees is essential to the credibility of student protest. This protest is concerned with accessibility to higher education, a concept that the government is denying with their changes in the Ontario Student Award Program (OSAP).

Last spring the government announced that the loan portion of an OSAP award would be increased from $600 to $800, which means that the debt incurred by a student under OSAP for four years would rise from $2400 go $3200. Students are demanding that the government restore the $600 loan ceiling so that low income students will still be encouraged to come to university.

They are also asking that the age of independence be reduced from 24 to 21 years. Under OSAP a student is considered dependent on parental income until the age of 24, whether or not he in fact receives any assistance from them.



Provision of aid for part time students (OSAP) as presently constituted is only available to full time students) is another part of the demand that accessibility to higher education be ensured.

Throughout the fall, this accessibility issue has been confused by association with the increase in tuition fees. This was only a 20 per cent increase over 8 years (much less than inflation) and the AMS has quite rightly ignored the increase as an issue.

Many students contemplating withholding their fees are worried about what action may be taken against them by the university. Queen's principal John J. Deutsch has expressed sympathy with the student demands and has assured the AMS that "no punitive action" will be taken against students who withhold their fees.

He has announced that he will put forth a motion at the Board of Trustees meeting in February to waive the late payment fee this year. In the, hopefully unlikely, event that this motion does not pass, he will ask the Board to give students a period of grace before charging the late payment fee.

Students at Queen's must make a concerted effort to back up their demands by withholding their fees in order to convince the government of the sincerity of their concern about accessibility.

letters

Questions fee withholding

Dear Editor:

By now a small percentage of Queen's students will have begun explaining the reasons for our fee strike to local residents.

Meanwhile, back at the campus there is silence about the smoldering issue of the day. Unfortunately the symptom is ambiguous. Either there is general apathy concerning the fee strike, or there is the taciturnity of convinced thinkers who having made up their minds have nothing to say. There are no questions, therefore as a minority of one in ignorance or curiosity, I have a few.

In a time of inflation how does one justify condemning the first fee increases in ten years?

Is it appropriate to call a government "highhanded" that exercises its mandate?

Why is it a horror to take on a thirty-two hundred dollar debt which will be reimbursed by higher salaries later, when it is quite acceptable to run up the same debt for a new car?

How many of the truly needy survive secondary school and become eligible for university?

Forty percent of all students attending university have received grants. What percentage of this group comes from middle class homes?

How much poverty exists on campuses which translate reading week as "Ski Week"?

In the face of the generally poor turnout for the fall referendum what credibility does OFS have with the government?

Is interest in the fee strike only centred in a few individuals in the student press and student government?

What is the general attitude of the faculty to the fee strike?

How will OFS convince the government that it is not "a selfish interest group"?

Isn't it true that the obolition of the late fee would be a detrimental relief?

Perhaps if the late fee is waived, as Ms. Whitham hints it might be, Queen's students could each place fifteen dollars in a fund to do a proper public relations job (unless such funds are made unnecessary by vast numbers of student volunteers). Or perhaps the accumulated amount could be set aside for very needy students next year.

Certainly something can be engineered that will demonstrate the constructiveness and commitment of student response. There should be no reason why Queen's could not take the lead instead of stumbling verbally down the road that the other universities are taking. The fee strike, particularly if the sting of the late fine is removed, seems to be shaping into a ploy where we do nothing to appear to be doing something, where we do nothing and expect to succeed.

Perhaps my ambivalence towards the whole issue is obvious. I am not impressed with the OFS campaign, yet I am sympathetic to the stated aims of Queen's AMS.

Sincerely,
Terry Crowley

Dear Editor:

Contrary to the AMS's opinion we agree with the Ontario Government that the increase in university tuition fees is warranted. We also do not sympathize with the other demands that the AMS is making of the Davis government.

We do, however, object to the very large advertisements that over the past few weeks have been appearing in the Journal - urging students to withhold their fees. Partly because after this length of time we are finding them rather boring, but mainly because we object to the amount of money that it is costing the students - particularly us. For the unfortunate advertisements under discussion are of course supported by our mandatory contribution of sixty-three dollars to the AMS.

It is interesting that the AMS has become so hostile toward a mere hundred dollar increase in fees, on the grounds that it may help to inhibit some students educational pursuits, when it itself demands such a large monetary sum from the student- a sum which in many cases (ours included) supplies little or no benefits which are appreciated by the student.

In any case, although we feel that a couple of hundred dollars cannot affect a serious student from attending university we object (as we have always done) to being forced to pay the AMS so-called student fees. Out of the sixty-three dollars that the AMS decided it had a right to demand from each student this year, only three dollars of it (according to the AMS budget) will go towards anything that any of us are concerned with, or make any use of whatsoever - and that is the Journal.

If then, according to the AMS, the accepted manner of in fluencing an administration's policies is by a fee strike we feel that it is our duty to demonstrate against the collection of student fees by the AMS. We are sure that the AMS will respond to our demands in the same manner that it expects the Davis government to respond to their demands.

We are hoping that a great number of students may be willing to join our little fee strike and that Principal Deutsch will give in to our demands as easily as he gave in to those of the AMS. If this happens, perhaps such stirkes will catch on - we are sure that if they do a large percentage of taxpayers would be willing to demonstrate in favour of higher university tuitions. All they would have to do is withhold their taxes - which of course really support the universities and student grant programs.

The Committe For an Elitist Queen's University

ED NOTE: We will ask a couple of members of the AMS Outer Council to reply to the above two letters for next Tuesday. Some very good points have been raised. One thing we would like to point out is that the AMS has disassociated itself from the demand for a rollback in tuition. Another thing which should be pointed out is that students approve all the non-academic fees. They, not some small group, are the Alma Mater Society. The AMS Outer Council has only $5.30 from each student to spend at its pleasure.

Exasperation!

Dear Editor:

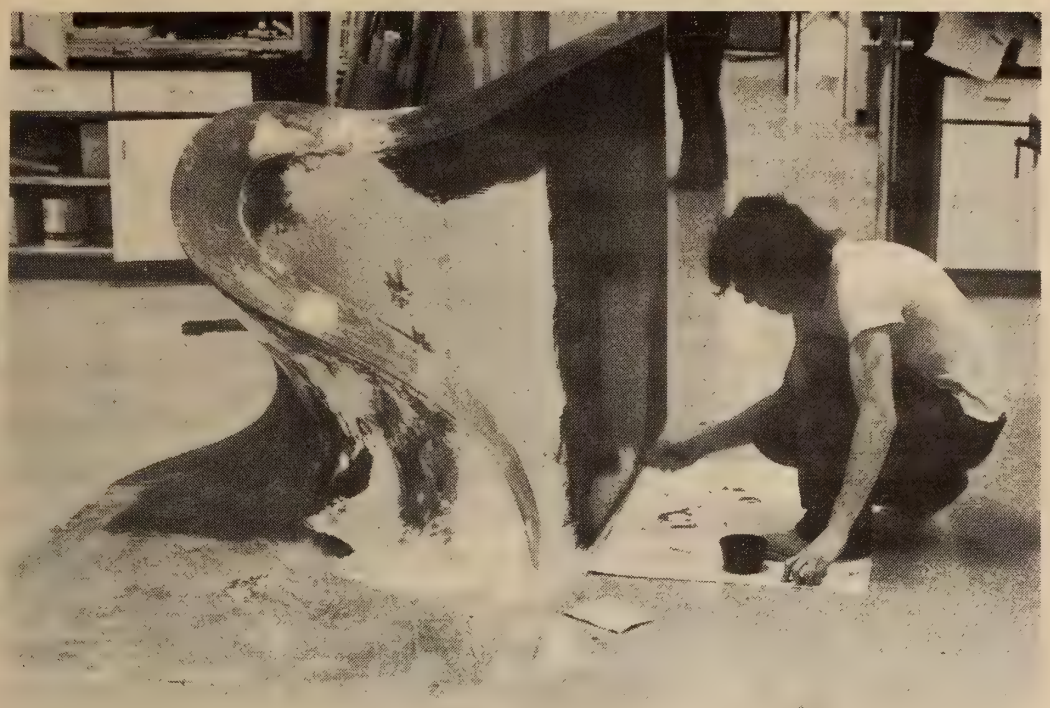
This is a short note of exasperation. Last evening, Tuesday, I, along with several thousand other Queen's hockey fans, had the unhappy and revolting experience of witnessing an unprovoked malacious attack upon a Queen's hockey player. One member of the Carleton hockey team after being cleanly checked to the ice by Queen's John Smith, paused momentarily and then slammed the heel of his hockey stick into the mouth of the unsuspecting Smith who was standing by the goal crease waiting for a new face-off.

Apparently the medical report is that John Smith has lost all of his lower front teeth and received a broken jaw. He is lost to Queen's for the season. Moreover, he will be suffering from extreme pain for some time to come. Only the Carleton player is to blame. His action goes beyond unsportsmanlike conduct. This player did a criminal act. Perhaps he witnessed the Wayne Maki-Ted Green battle in Ottawa several years ago and thought he should gain his notoriety in the same fashion as Green and Maki. In any case, he should certainly receive the same type of punishment as Maki and Green. Expulsion - remove this damned spot. This Carleton player is not an athlete, he is a vicious animal. We should urge the Ontario Universities Athletic Association to ban him from the ice forever before he strikes again.

R. Ross Dunsmore

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 31
Fri., Jan. 19, 1973
Queen's University at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Patricia Devitt
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National desk: Bob Mutrie



And a tip o the hat to Liz, Susan, Heather who wishes to remain nameless, Ernie who did pics, Ann and Jan, Hildi, Peter, etc and the editor who we wish gets well soon.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc. Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Students' Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

years Festival is your participation.

Rejoice, create, learn, listen and see. Maybe the spirit of creativity will grow.

Arts & Crafts

Join in the festivities of joyous revelations of long buried creativity. Come to Festival craft workshops where you can learn to bridle your ideas, saddle your wild talents. Come just to meet folk.

There are workshops in batik, macrame and ceramics in the Polson Room, first floor of the Union, on Festival evenings. Some batik workshops will be in the lower International Centre Thursday and Friday. People who know and enjoy these crafts and others will be around to help you discover new techniques or experiment with ones you already know.

Upstairs in the small common room is the exhibit of art for you to witness and contribute to. Last year we experienced a variety of contributions, eg. a Zumberger tapestry, silk screen prints, snowy photographs, xeroxed faces and carvings.

Essentially the spirit and substance of Festival depends on you. Contributions of photos, paintings, tapestries, sculptures are still needed to create an exhibit. Lend your creations. Bring them to Jane Wicks, 24 Barrie Street, 544-3280 or Carol Rogers, 128 Earl Street, 544 9196.

Students Memorial Union
Dupuis
Auditorium
8 p.m.
- midnight
January 24-27

Classical Music

Classical music at the Arts Festival, International Centre Lounge. Hopefully, it will be a group of friends getting together to enjoy classical music. What? You don't like classical music. Have you tried it? Even if you don't understand the mathematical intricacies or know why Bach is great, it can still be enjoyable. Just sit back and let your mind wander. It can be very relaxing. The presentation will be structured in half-hour segments. Come in and try it for a while. And you're welcome to stay all night.

by Hildi Adehelm
Carol Rogers
Kathy McSweeney
Bruce Chown

Film

One of the purposes of Festival is to give students, faculty and friends of Queen's the opportunity to dabble in or plunge headfirst (depending on your temperment) into a variety of the creative arts. One of these is film-making and Festival has sponsored the production of half a dozen films. Those contributing their work are Jeff Hemmings, David Charles and Peter McHale, John Guthrie, Doug Shane, Doug Vallery, and Willard Broucek and Jane Thompson. The student films will be shown on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. In addition a wide variety of National Film Board films will be shown. All starting at 8 p.m. in Dupuis Auditorium.

On Friday, January 26th, Festival will host free fun films. You can see the Marx Brothers in Duck Soup and Horse Feathers. For something to keep your Friday night memorable see Mae West in I'm No Angel. Laugh and enjoy yourself to good old comedy from 8-12.

On Saturday, January 27th, NFB films and a feature film. Monte Hellman's Two Lane Blacktop with James Taylor. Good free Saturday entertainment from 8-12 p.m.

Folk - Blues

The mood's the thing . . . sometimes the constant pub rabble and the jukebox sounding out Gary Shannon's top ten sours one's spirits. Maybe, for a change, you'd like to mellow out an evening with a bit of blues, ballads and candelight. Festival's musicians will be making music in the large second floor common room in the Union. Walk in anytime after eight, sit down, sing along, clap your hands, take a coke, take it easy and have a good time. It's all for free, so why not? There will be a half-hour break from 10:00-10:30 every evening. Scheduled performers in order of appearance are as follows: Wednesday: Larry Moore and Dave Hurly, Margrethe de Neergaard, Jay Kassirer, Brian Comrie and Jamie McGill, and Debbie Chartrand, Bill Bosworth and Randy Liepnik. Thursday: Tom Mawhinney, Gary Holmes and Don Fraser, Graham Bird, Tom Kennedy and Eric MacDonald, Steve Brown and Jeff Chan and the Lily White Memorial Band. Friday: Doug Mann, Karen Egan and friends, and Thomas Handy and Doug McArthur. Saturday: Dana Richardson, Peter Sabor, and Will O'Hara, Chris Ashman and C. Ryder who is appearing courtesy of Apex Talent.

"Wax Works"

A Musical Look at 1972

Top Ten Songs of 1972 CKWS and CKLC

by Geoff Henning

1. American Pie - Don McLean.
No comment needed.

2. Horse With No Name - America.
The group's first single showed promise. Later singles continued in same tradition.

3. Love Me Love Me Love - Frank Mills
Ex-Bells' singer shows simplistic piano and vocal work. Story in lyrics is revolting.

4. Sylvia's Mother - Doctor Hook's Medicine Show.
Shel Silverstein's song is said to be a true story. Only single by them to receive recognition.

5. First Time Ever I Saw Your Face - Roberta Flack.
Popular song from movie Play Misty for Me was one of the most moving songs of the year.

6. I'd Love You to Want Me - Lobo
Attempt to change style after Me and You and a Dog Named Boo pleased thirteen year olds.

7. Nice to Be With You - Gallery
Sounds like 8,000,000 other songs and 8,000,000 other groups.

8. Puppy Love - Donny Osmond.
Donny Osmond is really a 65 year old eunuch midget.

9. Lion Sleeps Tonight - Robert John
Still sounded the same, third time around.

10. Brand New Key - Melanie
Top novelty song of the year.

Top Ten Albums in 1972 CKWS and CKLC

1. Harvest - Neil Young.
Perhaps not quite as good as his first two solo albums but the name sold the disc.

2. America - America.
Good new group with fine accoustic guitar and vocal work - New album "Homecoming" even more promising.

3. American Pie - Don McLean
One song sold the album. It's a good thing there was one good song, the rest is mediocre.

4. Thick as a Brick - Jethro Tull.
If Ian Anderson ever left the group it would be nothing. Cover explains and criticizes album.

5. Honky Chateau - Elton John.
His sixth album, still showing improvement. Good songs include Rocket Man, Salvation, Mona Lisa and Mad Hatters.

6. School's Out - Alice Cooper
Single School's Out, misleading - better than the rest of the album.

7. Music - Carole King
Popular singer's tunes off this album recorded by many other people. Good cuts include Sweet Seasons, Brother Brother.

8. Hot Rocks 1964 - 1971 - Rolling Stones
Good collection of top hits but missed many songs - these incorporated in Hot Rocks II (soon to be released).

9. London Sessions - Chuck Berry
Unpolished. Single "My Ding a Ling" helped sales tremendously.

10. Catch Bull at Four - Cat Stevens.
No singles yet but many songs could be. Mostly slow songs, but what else is new for Cat Stevens.

Murray McLauchlan and Michael Lewis

Once more it appeared that the wrong person was given top billing. When I asked other concert attendants their opinions, it seems that Michael Lewis was the better performer. Perhaps the lack of background musicians for McLauchlan save the bass guitarist, left his music with a rather shallow sound. I think its about time Queen's had an all round good concert, for a change.

Solution to Tuesday's A

Solution to Tuesday's B

Welcome to the Listening Post

Are you taking a fresh look at life and people?

Where you fit in?

Ban Righ, opposite the grandfather's clock

Tuesday 10-noon, 3-5 p.m.
Wednesday 2-4 p.m.
Thursday 8:30-10:30 p.m.

St. Lawrence Parks Commission
Summer Employment At
OLD FORT HENRY
Kingston, Ontario

The internationally known Fort Henry Guard is a CIVILIAN unit dedicated to the creation of a living picture of British Army garrison activities during the nineteenth century. Find out about this unique summer job at an

Information and Films Night
describing the
FORT HENRY GUARD
Wednesday, January 24th, at 7:30 p.m.
Student's Memorial Union
McLaughlin Room, 1st floor

Members of the guard must be eighteen years of age by next spring, and at least 5'11" tall, (height restriction not applicable to members of the band).

Applications forms available at the Placement Office, 121 Union Street. Sign ups for interviews begin on January 17th, and campus interviews are being held on February 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9th.

Want to be on the Elrond College Board of Directors?

Applications for the positions of AMS appointees to the board will be accepted until Wednesday, January 24 at the AMS Office in the Union.

REMINDER

The second installment of fees due by January 31, 1973 can be paid in person at the Accountant's Office, Richardson Hall.

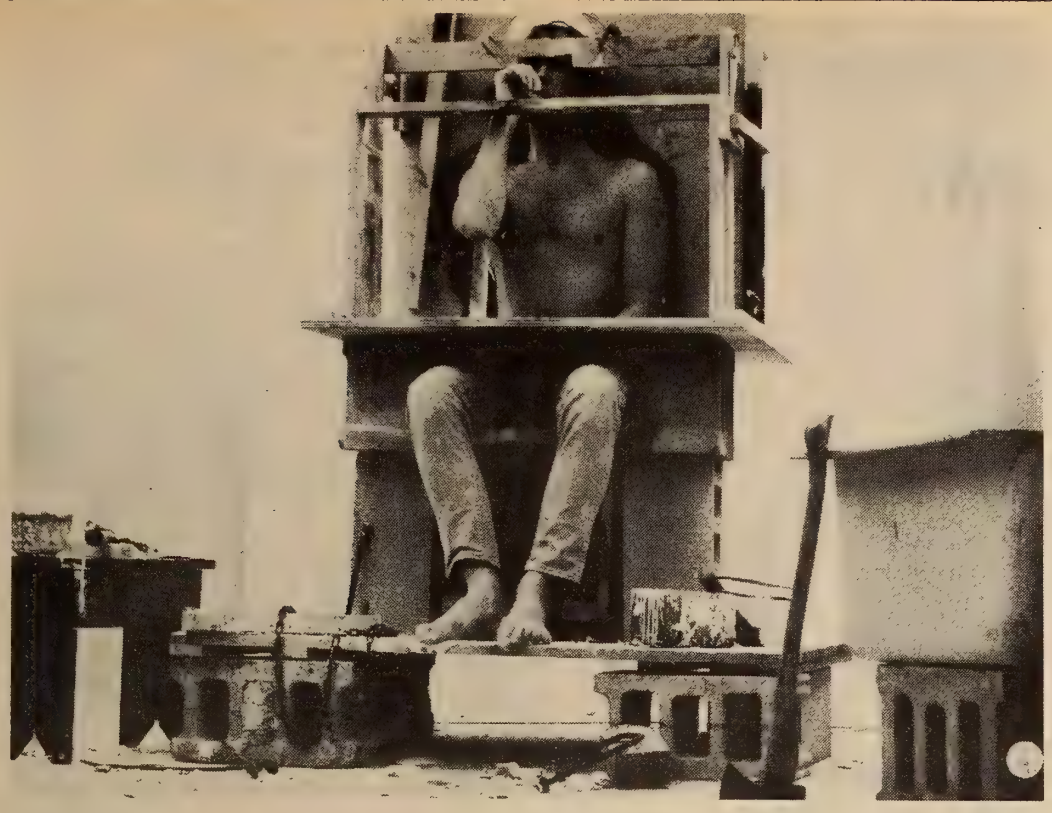
If you find it more convenient to mail your cheque to the Accountant's Office, please record your student number on the face of your cheque.

Newman House Presents

Cultural Feast & Coffee House

Saturday, Jan. 20 8:30 p.m.

26 Barrie Street



Free Admission - All Welcome

Coffee and Donuts

Festival '73

- Student films, feature films (Dupuis Auditorium)
- Art Workshops
- Art Demonstration
- Photography & Art Displays
- Blues & Folk Music
- Classical Music

Jan. 24, 25, 26, 27 8p.m.
Programmes at door Student's Union

At Agnes

Wonderful World of Fantasy

by Paula David

If you haven't yet seen the display of Toronto artist Colette Whiten at the Agnes, the special effort is well worth it. Representing a forward step in contemporary art shows, this dispay has completely transformed the large gallery into a weird and wonderful world of fantasy.

Wandering through the gallery, I heard such enticing descriptions of the work as female chauvinistic, sado-masochistic, perverted, disturbingly inspiring, and plain ridiculous. In view of the lack of pat definitions for today's art, none of these comments was justified, and yet all have some merit.

The show consists of large concrete brick and timber constructions resembling fantasy torture apparatus, photographs describing the technical process, flashing slides, a closed-circuit television showing the actual procedure, and bits and pieces of the "finished product".

This finished product consists of plaster cast impressions of man's various appendages as well as head and torso sections. They are technically well produced in fibreglass, but it is their segmented presence and lack of presence in the whole scheme of things that proves so fascinating.

They stand as small tokens of the actual process that produced them -- a long ritualistic one that uses the various structural sculptures, which turn out to be functional as well. Their racks, chains, and pulleys are used to support and secure a man in a predetermined position.

Photographs and video tapes describe how the anatomical section about to be plastered is shaven and lubricated, and then locked into position while the plaster is applied and then sets. The process is both exhausting and uncomfortable for the subject, and he is totally at the mercies of the plasterers.

It takes several workers to complete the job, and from a first-hand report it is a challenging task, that produces a positive camaraderie within the group. It should be mentioned that subjects are always volunteers, and there seems to be no lack of them. While they claim it is not a pleasurable procedure, I imagine the total physical and mental submission is a fascinating experiment in trust.

There is likely no greater appreciation of an art than for those who have been strung, locked and plastered in it.

One gets a vacarious satisfaction in examining the ingeniously constructed scaffolding, and the individual imagination has the psychological impetus to pursue any fantasy it wishes.

At first I felt strangely uncomfortable and it reminded me disturbingly of a friend in a local hospital's orthopedic ward who is similarly encased in plaster. Further examination replaced trepidation with fascination, and new elements emerged continually. It is definitely a show to be experienced at leisure and one I plan to revisit several times.

There are many potentially intellectual and in-depth interpretations of the meaning of the show, and probably many people will attempt to analyse the psyche that produced it.

Not so subtle sexual allusions, tones of Kafka's Penal Colony and the sadistic elements are perhaps all there, but it seems the real meaning exists through one's private experiences with the show.

It strikes me as a highly personal conception that is now presented in a darkened gallery to discover personal reactions. Rather than verbalizing or criticizing the visitor should enter the peculiar unfamiliar atmosphere, exploring and experiencing it with an open mind.

Bill Mysson, assistant curator of the art centre, has arranged the display so that the large gallery takes on a whole new dimension. This is a show that holds excitement and fascination for anybody, and is worth making a special effort to see.

Whatever the reaction, there will definitely be one. The work of Colette Whiten will remain at the art centre until Jan. 28th.

Secolo Barocco, Tonight!

Tonight at 8:30 p.m., the Division of Concerts at Queen's presents the second concert in the popular Dunning Hall Series. The featured artists will be the Secolo Barocco from France. The music of Telemann, F. Couperin, A. Scarlatti, Corrette, Rameau and Vivaldi will be performed.

Very frequently, Baroque works are scored for an unusual combination of instruments, not for a string trio or quartet, woodwind quintet or other group typical of the Classical and Romantic periods. Since the Secolo Barocco ensemble consists of flute, violin, oboe, Bassoon and harpsichord, the works on the programme can be performed as they were originally composed.

All of the players in Secolo Barocco are accomplished musicians and first prize winners at the Conservatory of Paris. Four of them were principals or assistant principals with the Orchestre de Paris, France's best orchestra, and were picked by Charles Munch as among the best musicians of their generation.

Secolo Barocco has played throughout Europe and also Japan, always to favourable reviews. They have recorded works by Vivaldi and Couperin, on Chant du Monde and Columbia records.

Dream Whip Days

Friday, January 19

Seminar Bible Study on the book of Habakkuk with Dr. Bush. 208 Kingston Hall. Slot 14.

7:15 pm - India Association presents President Award Winning Movie - "Chetna" starring Rehana Sultan (with English subtitles). Ellis Hall. Come one, come all.

8:30 pm - The Division of Concerts presents the Secolo Barocco quintet, consisting of flute, oboe, violin, basoon and harpsichord. Dunning Hall Series.

Saturday, January 20

10:00 am - noon - Faculty staff and students are reminded that Family Membership cards for the Phys. Ed. centre are valid for use only in specified facilities during advertised times. Family swimming and Family skating during these hours on Saturdays.

8:00 pm - Undergrad Films presents "Weekend" by Jean-Luc Godard. Dunning Hall. Admission $1.00

8:30 pm - Hillel House and Newman House presents a Coffee House at 26 Barrie Street.

Sunday, January 21

11:00 am - University Service. Memorial Chapel.

2:00 - 4:00 pm - Physical Education Centre Family Memberships valid for Family Swimming, Family Skating and Family Badminton.

8:30 pm - Prof. Philip Goldman of Queen's Applied Science will talk on "Politics, Science and Morality" at Hillel House, 26 Barrie Steet. Refreshments after. Open to all.

8:30 pm - Hillel House Buffet supper. Israeli Folk Dancing. Guest Speaker - Prof. Phillip Goldman.

Monday, January 22

3:00 pm - Geography Visiting Speaker - Dr. L. A. Brown will speak on "Spatial Diffusion at the Macro and Meso Scales." Room 310, Ontario Hall.

Tuesday, January 23

7:30 pm - Chronicles 16. Fragments: Murray Schisgal. Tickets free. Available at Drama Department. Studio Theatre, Room 102, Old Arts Building. Continues until Jan. 26

8:00 pm - The Dept. of Music presents a chamber music recital of works for viola, cello, and bass. Admission free. Dunning Hall.

8:30 pm - The History Dept. presents Prof. J. M. S. Careless, distinguished Canadian Historian speaking on "Urban History and Regionalism in Canada" in Room 517 Watson Hall. Followed by informal discussion and coffee.

9:00 pm - English Smoker. Queen's Pub. All welcome.

9:00 pm - Dept. of Film Studies, Fellini and The Italian Cinema presents "Variety Lights." (Fellini, 1950). Ellis Hall.

Wednesday, January 24

2:30 pm - The Department of Spanish and Italian is pleased to announced the screening of the film Don Quixote at the Hyland Theatre. Advance tickets at 50c will be available in the Department of Spanish and Italian Secretarial Office Kingston Hall, Room 416. Tickets will also be sold at the Theatre at 75c.

Off Campus

Theatres

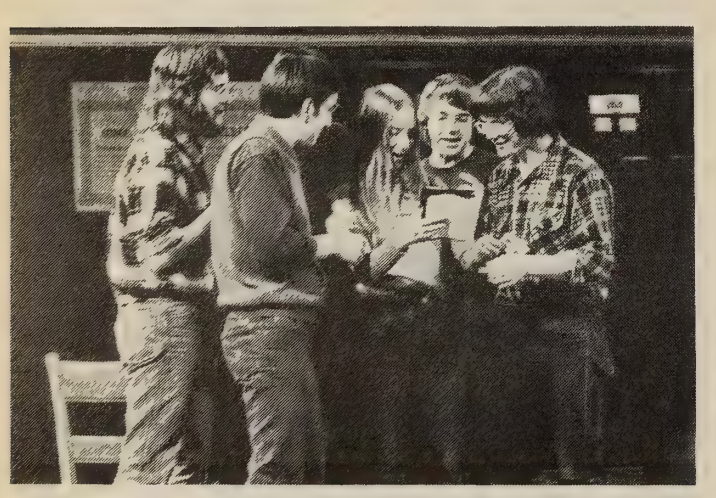
Capitol -The Revengers
Hyland - Young Winston
Odeon- The Poseidon Adventure

Pubs

Commodore - The Gleasoniaires
401 Inn - The Newcomers
Manor - Julie Lynn
The Townhouse Pub - O'Brien Six

Queen's Musical Theatre

"Wonderful Town" is progressing!

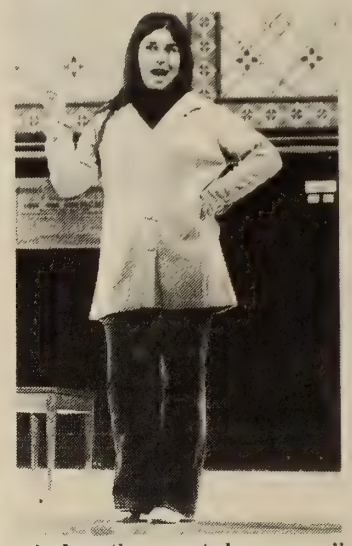


Director Jill Hodkinson

by Sandy Naiman

Rehearsals are well under way for this year's Queen's Musical Theatre production, "Wonderful Town" with music by Leonard Bernstein and lyrics by Betty Comden and Adolph Green.

After a weekend workshop which entailed 15 hours of singing, dancing, scene run throughs and general excitement, some of the cast members seemed slightly fatigued as their numbers came up for scrutiny by Director Jill Hodkinson. The Grant Hall stage was bare except for a few chairs to suggest the set which Alan Watts is busily constructing at McArthur College. Cathy Robertson, Sharon Keats and Lee David, who play the central roles sisters, Ruth and Eileen Sherwood, who come to New York City from Columbus, Ohio to make it in the big city. Ruth, the smart, hardheaded older sister wants to be a writer. Eileen, although not as intelligent, is extremely charming, particularly to men, and wants to become an actress. The story which takes place in the original Broadway version in the 1930's, has been updated to the early 60's in the Queen's production.



Sharon Keats, as Eileen with all the cops.

were wearing blue jeans and T-shirts, as were eight policemen who broke into a spontaneous barbershop number before they were stopped by Mrs. Hodkinson.

Marg Wood, who is collecting and designing costumes is having particular problems with this group. She wants authentic police uniforms but since there are only 19 policemen in Kingston and most of them need their uniforms regularly, she will not be able to borrow them for the show's four night run and will have to improvise something else.

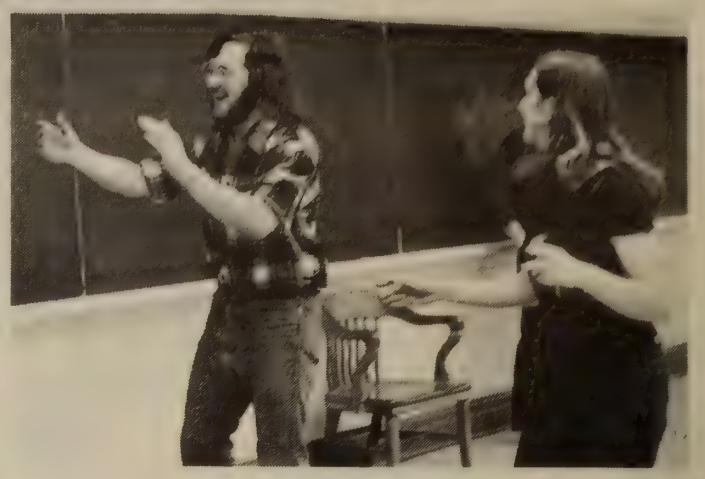
Even though only one musical number was performed at the Monday night rehearsal, Randy Leipnick's easy tinkling piano seemed always to be in the background. It has been a steadying influence, I am told, throughout the trials and tribulations of rehearsals which have been going on since last November.

"Wonderful Town" is about two

"And another way to lose a man"

According to choreographer Andrea Howard, the numbers are timeless and "as a dancing show it has a lot of variety, from Irish jigs to jiving". She also mentioned that the cast is showing a great deal of enthusiasn and "although they don't know it yet, the orchestra sounds great."

Then the eight cops trouped into room 200 in Kingston Hall for their dance lesson. Although Miss Howard and Liz Driver, who is also doing choreography, thought the basic step of the Irish jig would be easy for them to learn, they were sadly mistaken. After



A less serious moment for Jill.

"May I have this dance?"

Story by Sandy Naiman

Photography by Brock MacPherson

Learning to do the Irish Jig.

watching them struggle with it for about half an hour I decided to go back to Grant Hall to see how the rest of Act II was going.

Several of the members of the cast who I talked to were still not too familiar with the characterizations they are supposed to be playing. But since scripts are still being used it will probably be a few more days until the second act begins to fall into place. Act I was concentrated upon during the weekend workshop.

The cast of "Wonderful Town" seems to have been plagued with misfortunes of various kinds. Lee David, who plays publisher Robert Baker, was in hospital for a knee operation in November and just got off a cane about six weeks ago. Cathy Robertson as Ruth, just got a cast taken off her leg last week and her singing numbers have been re-choreographed so as not to put any extra strain on her leg.The cast was spotted with stand-ins because several of the actors are home in bed with the flu.

But as the evening progressed enthusiasm began to grip

Randy Leipnik's soothing piano!

everyone and in a number called "100 Ways To Lose A Man", Miss Robertson got a round of applause from the half dozen spectators spread over the Grant Hall floor.

"The music is great, but is never seemed to make it", someone said, and although the music charming, and the lyrics clever, they do not ring of familiarity. The other Bernstein, Comden and Green collaboration "On The Town" has a much more memorable score.

"Wonderful Town" opens in the Grand Theatre on Wednesday, January 31 and runs through Saturday February 3 beginning at 8:30 pm. Tickets are $1.50 for students, and $2.00 general admission. They are on sale now in the John Orr Room of Students Union and will be available at the door of the Grand Theatre on the evenings of performance.

I wash my hair of the whole thing.

Computing Centre
Programming Competition '73

The Closing Date for Entries is January 31st., 1973.

Further details are available from F. M. Larkin, Computing Centre (local 6901).

The History Department presents

Professor J.M.S. CARELESS

from The University of Toronto

Distinguished Canadian Historian

SUBJECT: "Urban History and Regionalism in Canada"

DATE: Tuesday, January 23, 1973

TIME: 8:30 pm

PLACE: 517 Watson Hall

Informal lecture followed by a discussion period and coffee.

ARTSCI YEARS PRESENT

✓ Entertainment
✓ Bargains

DISCOUNTS - JAN. 18 - 19 - 20

Show your year card and receive discounts at:

- ✓ Yellow Submarine
- ✓ Linos
- ✓ Seto's Chop Suey
- ✓ Broadway Pizza
- ✓ Cotton's Sporthouse
- ✓ It's Leather
- ✓ The Inn of Shoes
- ✓ Joe and Pauls

(SEE POSTERS)

Dunning Hall - Sunday, Jan. 29

Artsci Years will present The Pink Panther & The Good Bad & Ugly , Tom Jones

50¢ with year card – $1.00 without

VIENESE SKATING NIGHT

9.30 to 11.30 at the Arena Friday, Jan. 19

Waltz Music - Warm Spiced Wine 3/$1.00

Free Admission with Year card

.50¢ without

Two in a row for hockey Gaels

by Peter Watts

The hockey Gaels continued their winning ways on Tuesday night with a 7-3 victory over the Carleton Red Ravens in an OUAA game at the Harty Arena. It was a chippy affair with 22 penalties being called, 12 to Carleton and 10 to Queen's. Even the officials got involved as referee Pat Hegarty was cut for five stitches after a minute and a half of play in the first period.

For a while, it looked like the Gaels were in for the king of evening they experienced against Ottawa before Christmas. Bernie Ingamundson got the first goal for the Ravens at the 4:14 mark of the first period. Less than two minutes later, defenceman Dave Smith blasted a shot from the right side that seemed to mesmerize goalie Clyde Harris. The Gaels got back into the game at the 7:04 mark when defenceman Stu Lang got his first goal of the year on a drive from the point. John Smith scored the second Queen's goal at 17:32 of the first period as he took a pass at his own blueline and broke away by himself, deking the goalie and tucking the puck neatly between his legs. The score remained 2-2 after the first period.

The second period featured more of the same chippy style of play. The Gaels scored four unanswered goals to take command. Bill White got two of them in the space of 61 seconds; for White they were his first two goals of the year. Jim Sunstrum and John Cerre got the other two goals. The teams exchanged goals in the third period with Andy Clark scoring for Carleton and Jim Adair replying for the Gaels.

While the victory meant two points to Queen's and enabled them to climb into a fourth place tie with the idle GeeGees, it was a costly win. The Gaels lost the services of right-winger John Smith midway through the second period. The veteran Queen's player had fired a screened shot from the right side at the Carleton goal and had raced in looking for a rebound. He wound up on his knees behind the net, the victim of a high stick from Dave McKenny of the Ravens. McKenny was given a five minute penalty for slashing. Smith was taken to the hospital with a broken jaw; he also lost four teeth. The injury could mean that Smith will be done for the year and his loss has to be regarded as a key blow to the Gaels' playoff hopes.

The win puts Queen's into a tie for fourth place with Ottawa, each with 9 points. The Blues still hold down first place in the east division of the OUAA with 16 points on the strength of eight straight victories. Friday night, they bombed Ryerson 16-1, pouring 72 shots at the Ryerson goaltender. Laurentian and York are tied for second spot, each with 12 points. The GeeGees tied Laurentian last weekend in Ottawa. For a team which was supposed to be considerably weaker than last year's squad, Ottawa is not doing too badly.

In the individual points race, Jim Sunstrum, who picked up a goal and an assist on Tuesday night, has moved into a three-way tie with Don Pagnutti of Toronto and Al Avery of York for second place, each with 20 points. A point ahead is the scoring leader, Barry Jenkins of York.

The two victories in the last week have given the Gaels a big life heading into the weekend's activities. And the Gaels will need plenty of help. Tonight the team is in Toronto to clash with the Blues at Varsity Arena. Game time is 8 p.m. On Saturday the Gaels move on the Guelph to meet the Gryphons. Anyone going home for the weekend and who will be in the area is encouraged to drop in for either one of the games.

On Tuesday night, the Gaels go back to Ottawa for a rematch with the Ravens. On the basis of Tuesday night's game there is bound to be bad blood between the teams. Hopefully cooler heads will prevail - like good beer - and the teams will concentrate on playing hockey.

OUAA STANDINGS

HOCKEY - STANDINGS, UP TO AND INCLUDING JAN. 14

WESTERN SECTION

	GP	W	L	T	F	A	TP
Western	9	6	3	0	61	38	12
Waterloo	6	5	0	1	41	16	11
Guelph	6	4	2	0	32	25	8
Lutheran	7	3	4	0	31	35	6
Windsor	7	3	4	0	28	37	6
McMaster	9	2	7	0	33	68	4
Brock	8	0	8	0	20	68	0

EASTERN SECTION

	GP	W	L	T	F	A	TP
Toronto	8	8	0	0	75	16	16
York	8	6	2	0	60	32	12
Laurentian	9	6	3	0	50	32	12
Ottawa	8	4	3	1	53	43	9
Queen's	6	3	2	1	40	25	7
Carleton	8	1	6	1	32	50	3
Ryerson	7	0	7	0	15	86	0

BASKETBALL - STANDINGS, UP TO AND INCLUDING JAN 13

WESTERN SECTION

	GP	W	L	F	A	TP
Windsor	5	4	1	440	365	8
Waterloo	2	2	0	172	141	4
Guelph	3	2	1	219	207	4
Western	4	2	2	321	362	4
McMaster	4	2	2	305	279	4
Lutheran	4	1	3	245	272	2
Brock	4	0	4	251	327	0

EASTERN SECTION

	GP	W	L	F	A	TP
Laurentian	7	7	0	563	417	14
Ottawa	2	2	0	140	123	4
Carleton	3	2	1	216	200	4
Toronto	5	2	3	366	369	4
York	7	2	5	445	479	4
Queen's	3	1	2	209	221	2
Ryerson	5	0	5	277	407	0

B-ball Gals dump Potsdam 56-32

Queen's senior basketball Gals had a little bit more success against their counterparts from Potsdam Community College Wednesday night than the Gaels did before Christmas. The Gals downed the American school 56-32 behind a 15-point perfromance by veteran centre Pat Patterson and 9 points from rookie Kathy Keely, who started in place of injured guard Karen Flemming. Laney Marshall, Queen's other high-scoring backcourt star, played briefly, but sat out most of the game to rest a recurring ankle injury.

Despite a decided height advantage, the American girls appeared befuddled by Queen's swarming zone defense and aggressive rebounding (Gaels, take note, please), while the Gals' fast break worked as well as ever. Overall, Queen's appeared much quicker, especially while working the ball on offense, than the Postdam squad, and were certainly better coached. The Gals' bench appears to be developing well, since there was very little fall-off in efficiency when the reserves were in.

The Gals resume their OWIAA league schedule this weekend, as they make the long haul to Sudbury for their return match with Laurentian. Although Queen's won easily here, Laurentian will be tough at home. With Karen Flemming still out (but improving - another two weeks, maybe) and Laney on the limp, the Gals will need a big team effort to win. They should get it, if Wednesday is any indication.

VIENESE
SKATING NIGHT
WALTZ MUSIC
FRIDAY (tonight)
HOT SPICED GLUWEIN
3/$1.00
Entry free with Artsci Year Cards
50¢ without
9:30 - 11:30 - The Arena

Dance
"Just for the Hell of it"
Featuring: Atlantis and Sweet Blindness
Saturday, January 20, 8 pm
GRANT HALL
Admission $1 Beer: 3 for $1
Sponsored jointly by Science 74 and 75

Nominations for the position of

President and Vice-President of the Alma Mater Society

must be submitted to the AMS Office by 5 pm, Friday, January 26. Nominations are for candidates running as a team, and must be supported by the signatures of 200 AMS members and the acceptance of the candidates.

TRICOLOR AWARDS
Academic Session 1972-73
Admission to the Tricolor Society is regarded as the highest tribute that can be paid a student for valuable service to the university non-athletic, extra-curricular activities and is open to students in any year.
- Nominations for membership in the Tricolor Society will be received until 5 p.m. January 25,1973
- Names may be submitted by any member of the Alma Mater Society
- Nominations forms are available in the AMS Office

Alpine Skiers at Waterloo

The Queen's men's alpine ski team will kick off its season this weekend with the Waterloo Invitational being held in Collingwood. The team was selected last weekend during the Ottawa Ski Club Alpine Championships held at Camp Fortune last weekend. It includes several graduates of the National Capital Division of the Canadian Ski Association. Among them is Graham Bird who has taken part in Pontiac Cup races; these races are part of the regular national alpine ski schedule and take place in various parts of the country. Also included on the six-man team are the brothers Neilson - Jamie and Ian who are also veterans of the national capital division and who have competed on the Pontiac Cup and Can-Am circuits. Jamie is a former member of the New York State Alpine Ski Team.

The other two members of the team are Bob Archer from Labrador City and Dave Church, another graduate of the national capital division. Archer is a transfer from Carleton and was a member of last year's Canadian team that competed in the World Student Games in Lake Placid New York. Church skied last year in Europe while he was a student at the University of Grenoble.

In addition to the six regular members of the team there are also three alternates: Gord Shelley, Doug Watson, and Mike Keast. They will also see action in at least one meet this year.

This year the team will be handled by Terry McTague, a teacher at LaSalle Secondary School in Kingston and a former member of the alpine team at the University of Toronto.

This year, the team will compete in a series of six invitational meets being sponsered by the makers of the "good smooth ale." Molson's will provide trophies and help to pay some expenses while the host universities will organize and coordinate the meets. The Waterloo Invitational this weekend will be the first of these meets. A maximum of six skiers from each university will be allowed to participate with the best four times being counted toward the team standing. Individual and team standings will be computed over all the meets in order to determine an individual and a team champion. Individual skiers must enter at least four of the meets to qualify for top honours.

The team will see action in Collingwood again on January 26th although this time the meet will be hosted by the University of Toronto. The week after it will be York's turn; the place and time have yet to be determined. Then on February 9th and 10th, Carleton will play host to the OUAA championships to be held at Mount Ste. Marie.

This year's team representing Queen's is considered to be a good, well-balanced, team with considerable depth. All the regular performers have had considerable competitive experience although little of this has been at the intercollegiate level. Nonetheless, Queen's can expect a good performance from the mens' alpine ski team. Good luck guys.

V-B Gaels Undefeated

The men's volleyball team resumed its schedule last weekend in Ottawa and took up right where it left off before Christmas. Despite showing the effects of a month off the court, the Gaels came through with strong wins over Carleton by scores of 15-2, 15-3, and Ottawa by scores of 15-6, and 15-1.

The two victories over Carleton and Ottawa leave the Gaels the only undefeated team in the eastern division of the OUAA. However, the battle is not yet won. The Gaels are in Toronto this weekend for crucial games against Toronto, York, Ryerson, and Laurentian. Victories over these teams will ensure Queen's first place, and the right to host the OUAA volleyball championships here next weekend. The cahmpionships will feature the top two teams from the eastern section against the best two teams from the West.

Only a complete disaster (like losing all four series) would eliminate the Gaels from the playoff picture. Still, it would be nice to have the OUAA championships here this year. Queen's has a strong team and would dearly love to win the OUAA at home.

Ski Team dominates Ottawa Championships

by Gail McTague

Led by two first place finishes by Jamie Neilson, (Arts II), Queen's racers took five of the first seven places in the Ottawa Ski Club Championships held at Camp Fortune last weekend. Other top times in the field of 70 racers were recorded by Ian Neilson (Arts I), fourth; Bob Archer (Arts I), fifth; Bruce Cummings (Arts I), sixth; and Doug Watson (Arts I), seventh.

Icy conditions and falling snow made both runs in this giant slalom event a real test for the large number of extremely strong contenders for positions on this year's Queen's Alpine team. A team chosen on the basis of last week's results will race this weekend in the Waterloo Invitational Team Giant Slalom, to be held at Blue Mountain in Collingwood, Ont.

Men's Gym Team

On the way to a title?

by Chris Woods

This Saturday Queen's will get to view what may be a championship men's gymnastics team by the end of February.

The Queen's Ivnitational Gymnastics Meet, the oldest established invitational competition in Ontario university gymnastics, takes place in the Bartlett Gymnasium this weekend, with teams from York University, University of Toronto, and Universite d'Ottawa competing.

It's hard to remember when Queen's has had such a good opportunity to win one meet, let alone the big bundle. Queen's coach Barry Brooker feels that the Tricolor team has a very good chance this year to win the OUAA Championship. The home team is looking exceptionally strong, while last year's Canadian champion, York University, is displaying some serious weaknesses.

If anything keeps the Queen's team from taking the Invitational, it will be the fact that one of the squad's most consistent performers, veteran fourth-year student Dave Ross, will only have returned from a trip to Santiago, Chile on the day before the meet. Hopefully, Ross will be right on in his performance on Saturday, and the Queen's team will step out of the shadows as the perennial contender and become the winner.

But it's definitely not just the Queen's Invitational which is engaging the attention of the Queen's squad; an OUAA championship would be a very suitable culmination to three years of underdog slugging and a berth in the Canadian university invitatiinal would make a very happy team. Here's hoping they make it--with a Queen's booster section that fills the stands on Saturday at 1:00 p.m. See you there!

Part-time waiters & waitresses

Due to business, Brown Steak House requires more staff Must be neat in appearance

Apply in person
Capri Motor Hotel
271 Princess St.

TEMPUS FUGIT

January 23
Your Nalaco man will be on campus.
Your placement office will give you a career kit and arrange for an interview.
Business Administration, Commerce, Arts and Science graduates, put your career together with style.

nalaco NORTH AMERICAN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY a better lifestyle.

the HOUSING LOTTERY is coming!

GRANT HALL
JANUARY 24th 8 p.m.

The AMS housing list will be established by lot.

Specific houses and apartments will not be assigned until the beginning of March.

No pre-registration for the lottery is required.

Entry forms will be available only at the door.

Only one entry form per Queen's student is allowed. Any more shall result in disqualification.

No proxies allowed.

Please bring a pen or pencil.

Draw is at 8:30 pm.

Queen's Women

Gymnastics open season Jan. 28th

You could get:
SKIS and BINDINGS for $1.50
Read on!

The girl's Senior Volleyball team - yes, that talented group of 11 provacative, gorgeous specimens of womanhood, has been challenged, on Feb. 10, to try its hand against what Acadia has to offer. For you un-geographical fans, that's down Nova Scotia way, and it's a long walk. Therefore, these lovely girls have decided to raise money in the way they know best. In meal lines, the phys. ed. centre, anywhere you find them, they'll make you an offer you can't refuse.

That's right! You can buy a LOTTERY TICKET for a mere 50c, or better yet - 3 for a dollar. The first prize is a choice of

SKIIS:
dynastar 430 rossignol strato 102 hart competition and salomon 502-505 or nevada BINDINGS:
or
complete CROSS-COUNTRY equipment:

all provided by Alford's. Where else could you get great skiis for such a price? Help send these deserving gals a little further down the road to success. (If you help enough, they might even make it back). Remember, you can win!

Sunday, January 28th, will see the opening of the women's gymnastics schedule. First on the list is a meet at Glen Forrest Secondary School in Toronto. This will be the first qualifying meet for the provincial championships. Only those girls who plan to compete in all four exercises - floor exercises, uneven bars, vaulting, and balance beam - will be taking part in this meet.

The Queen's team, coached by Betty Pyear, will be represented by Vivien Symington, Chris Goodbrand, Leanne Hoar, Peggy Hutchison, and Suzanne Menard.

In addition to these six girls, eleven more will join the team for the OWIAA gymnastics championships to be held this year at the University of Ottawa, February 2-3. Queen's finished third in the team placings last year. York University, from which over half of the Canadian Olympic team is drawn, placed first while Toronto was second.

bews news

by Peter Watts

Curling, waterpolo, and 10-pin bowling got underway this past week. Waterpolo began Tuesday night and unfortunately two of the three games played were decided by default. Arts '73 beat Law '74 by default while Chemical Engineering lost to Civil and Math by default. In the other game, Commerce '74 beat Business Grads 4-2.

The curling program got underway last Sunday afternoon at the Kingston Curling Club. Despite the fact that the Super Bowl was on, there were no defaults. However, there were several walk-away victories; the only game which was close was one in which the score was 9-4. All the others were decided by such scores as 14-1, 16-2, or the like.

Action will resume again this Sunday afternoon at 2 p.m. at the Kingston Curling Club. The draw sheet is posted on the notice board in the locker room.

Basketball also got underway last Monday and if the first night's play is any indication, it will be a very competitive sport before a champion is decided. Sport director Al Lenard is still looking for a couple of people to help time and score games on Monday nights. If you're interested, see Mr. Lenard in the Physical Education Centre.

A look at the Bews race as of January 12th, finds Civil and Math rolling right along towards the championship as they have been doing since the opening week of the season. Here are the top 10.

1.	Civil & Math	28,293
2.	Commerce '73	25,338
3.	PHE	19,976
4.	Mechanical	18,196
5.	Mining	17,550
6.	Commerce '74	15,192
7.	Chemical	14,901
8.	Commerce '75	14,213
9.	Law '74	13,193
10.	Commerce '76	11,890

Figure-skating here Saturday

Queen's University will play host to its annual women's figure skating invitational at the Harty Arena on Saturday. Action will get underway around 9 a.m. Teams from McGill, Toronto, McMaster and Queen's will take part, although the meet is open to any individual from a university in the OWIAA. An estimated fifty competitors will take part.

Coach Gwen Neilson of the Queen's team is expecting some stiff competition from McMaster University which won the team championship last year. The Queen's team itself is considered quite strong and it shapes up as a tough, interesting battle between the Marauders and the Gals. Queen's hopes rest with Cathy Martin in the senior events, Sue Drowley and Kita Szpak in the intermediate, Mary Bythell in the junior and Carol Farquharson in the novice.

Following Saturday's meet, the team will take part in the McGill Invitational on January 27th in preparation for the OWIAA championships in Toronto February 16-17.

Words from WIC

by Susanna Trubass

Calling all jocks

The Women's Jogathon began on Thursday night - January 18th. There are no sign-ups for the Jogathon; all you need to do is run a few laps around the track (that's above the seats in the arena, girls) and write your name, faculty, year and the number of laps you ran on the sheet in the gym. The jogathon will continue until January 31st, so go and run off a few pounds. You only need to do a few laps at a time.

Volleyball begins January 23, running until March 13, Tuesday nights in the Bews and Ross gyms. Time of games will be posted on the WIC bulletin board in the women's locker room. If you would like to play, contact your faculty rep.

Curling, at the Kingston Curling Rink (Clergy Street, behind the gym), begins this Sunday afternoon, 2-4 p.m. for those who enjoy this sport. Sign up with your faculty rep.

A great game - Indoor Softball - begins Thursday night, January 25th. Entries close on January 22nd, so if you would like to play one of the summer sports with a difference, sign up soon.

Ringette - the game on ice - continues this term, beginning January 24th. This is a co-ed sport, so bring a guy if you wish. Howard Pierce will be on hand Wednesday night to give a few pointers on how to play If you are one of the Morris Hall co-eds, why not pull out some of the guys?

If you wish to sign up for a sport, or obtain any information about intramurals, contact your faculty rep. They are:

Rehab: Anne Besley	544-8199
Rehab: Ianna Swan	544-8740
Arts '73 Maureen Fraser	542-7824
Arts '74 Anne Bennett	542-6547
Arts '75 Sue Bunting	544-7210
Law Kathy Ford	544-8259
Meds Barb Thompson	544-1206
Nursing Gail Mooney	544-8049
PHE Pat Jameison	548-4288
PHE Barb McDermott	544-8679
Commerce Engineering Sue Fletcher	549-1336

If any girls are interested in officiating Volleyball or Ringette contact Sue Foster at 542-6547. Officials will be given a brief training session and will be paid for the games they officiate.

Canada: Ontario may be left cold and dark by 1990

TORONTO — Ontario is slated for a serious energy crisis within the next twenty years and sharp increased in fuel prices within the near future according to the Ontario Advisory Committee.

Prices are expected to rise across the board for all heating and power-generating fuels, including electricity, a large part of which is produced using coal and natural gas. The blame for the higher costs was primarily levelled at the Alberta government which recently legislated price increased on fuels.

It was predicted that by 1990 conventional fuels would be falling far short of domestic demand and that serious shortages could be expected to develop.

New York State recently faced fuel shortages causing schools and factories to close temporarily.

Ontario Premier William Davis has appointed former treasurer Darcy McKeough to the position of parliamentary secretary with special responsibility for the formulation and implementation of energy policy in an attempt to head off the trend through immediate action.

OTTAWA — The Progressive Conservative Party failed in their second bid to oust the government in a non-confidence motion but managed to pick up the support of the Social Credit members in the House.

The motion put forward attacked the Liberal government for not presenting immediate legislation to combat unemployment and inflation. However the New Democratic Party maintained their attachment to the Liberals, claiming that they are willing to see what definite measures the government will introduce after the Speech from the Throne debate.

The Social Credit support for the Conservatives came for what they termed a more definite and precise reasoning behind the non-confidence motion.

TORONTO — John White, recently appointed to the position of provincial treasurer, has announced that he will be concentrating on aggressive job creation programs and will-push towards a guaranteed annual income. The former minister of Industry and Tourism was appointed to replace acting minister Charles McNaughton who bad been filling in since October.

The job creation program will be through means other than "make jobs" programs and welfare White announced and he further stated that his future goal will be to ensure everyone a basic minimum income.

Member of Parliament Claude Bennett was appointed to replace White in the Industry portfolio.

KINGSTON — Mayor George Speal took a hard line against crime and punishment in a recent speech. He called the government's position on punishing crimes too permissive and demanded a reassessment of their policies.

He also called for Kingston citizens to study closely the causes of high crime rates and to make their feelings known to politicians at all levels of government. Kingston had the lowest crime-solving rate of twenty Ontario cities last year.

Speal also attacked the sale and use of drugs, stating that we must rid ourselves of this "cancer in our society."

"So we do have 'inertia, indifference, parliamentary incompetence' AND David Lewis . . ."

backpage

World: Nixon concedes - Vietnam conflict may end soon

SAIGON — United States President Richard Nixon will sign a ceasefire agreement ending hostilities in Vietnam on the eve of his inauguration according to informed sources in Vietnam. Nixon recently sent his aide, General Haig to Saigon to talk with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu, after important advancements were announced in the Paris talks.

The ceasefire, which would take effect on January 20, would pave the way to the signing of a total peace agreement, effectively ending the war in Vietnam and allowing an exchange of prisoners.

Nixon has already ordered an end to the bombing of North Vietnam in order to help speed the ongoing negotiations in Paris.

NAIROBI — An irate Zambia has threatened to blow the recent tensions in South and Central Africa into a confrontation which would make South Vietnam look "like child's play."

Rhodesia, followed by South Africa and Mozambique recently closed off their borders to Zambia in protest to raids by Zambia-based guerrillas seeking to oust white governments in Africa.

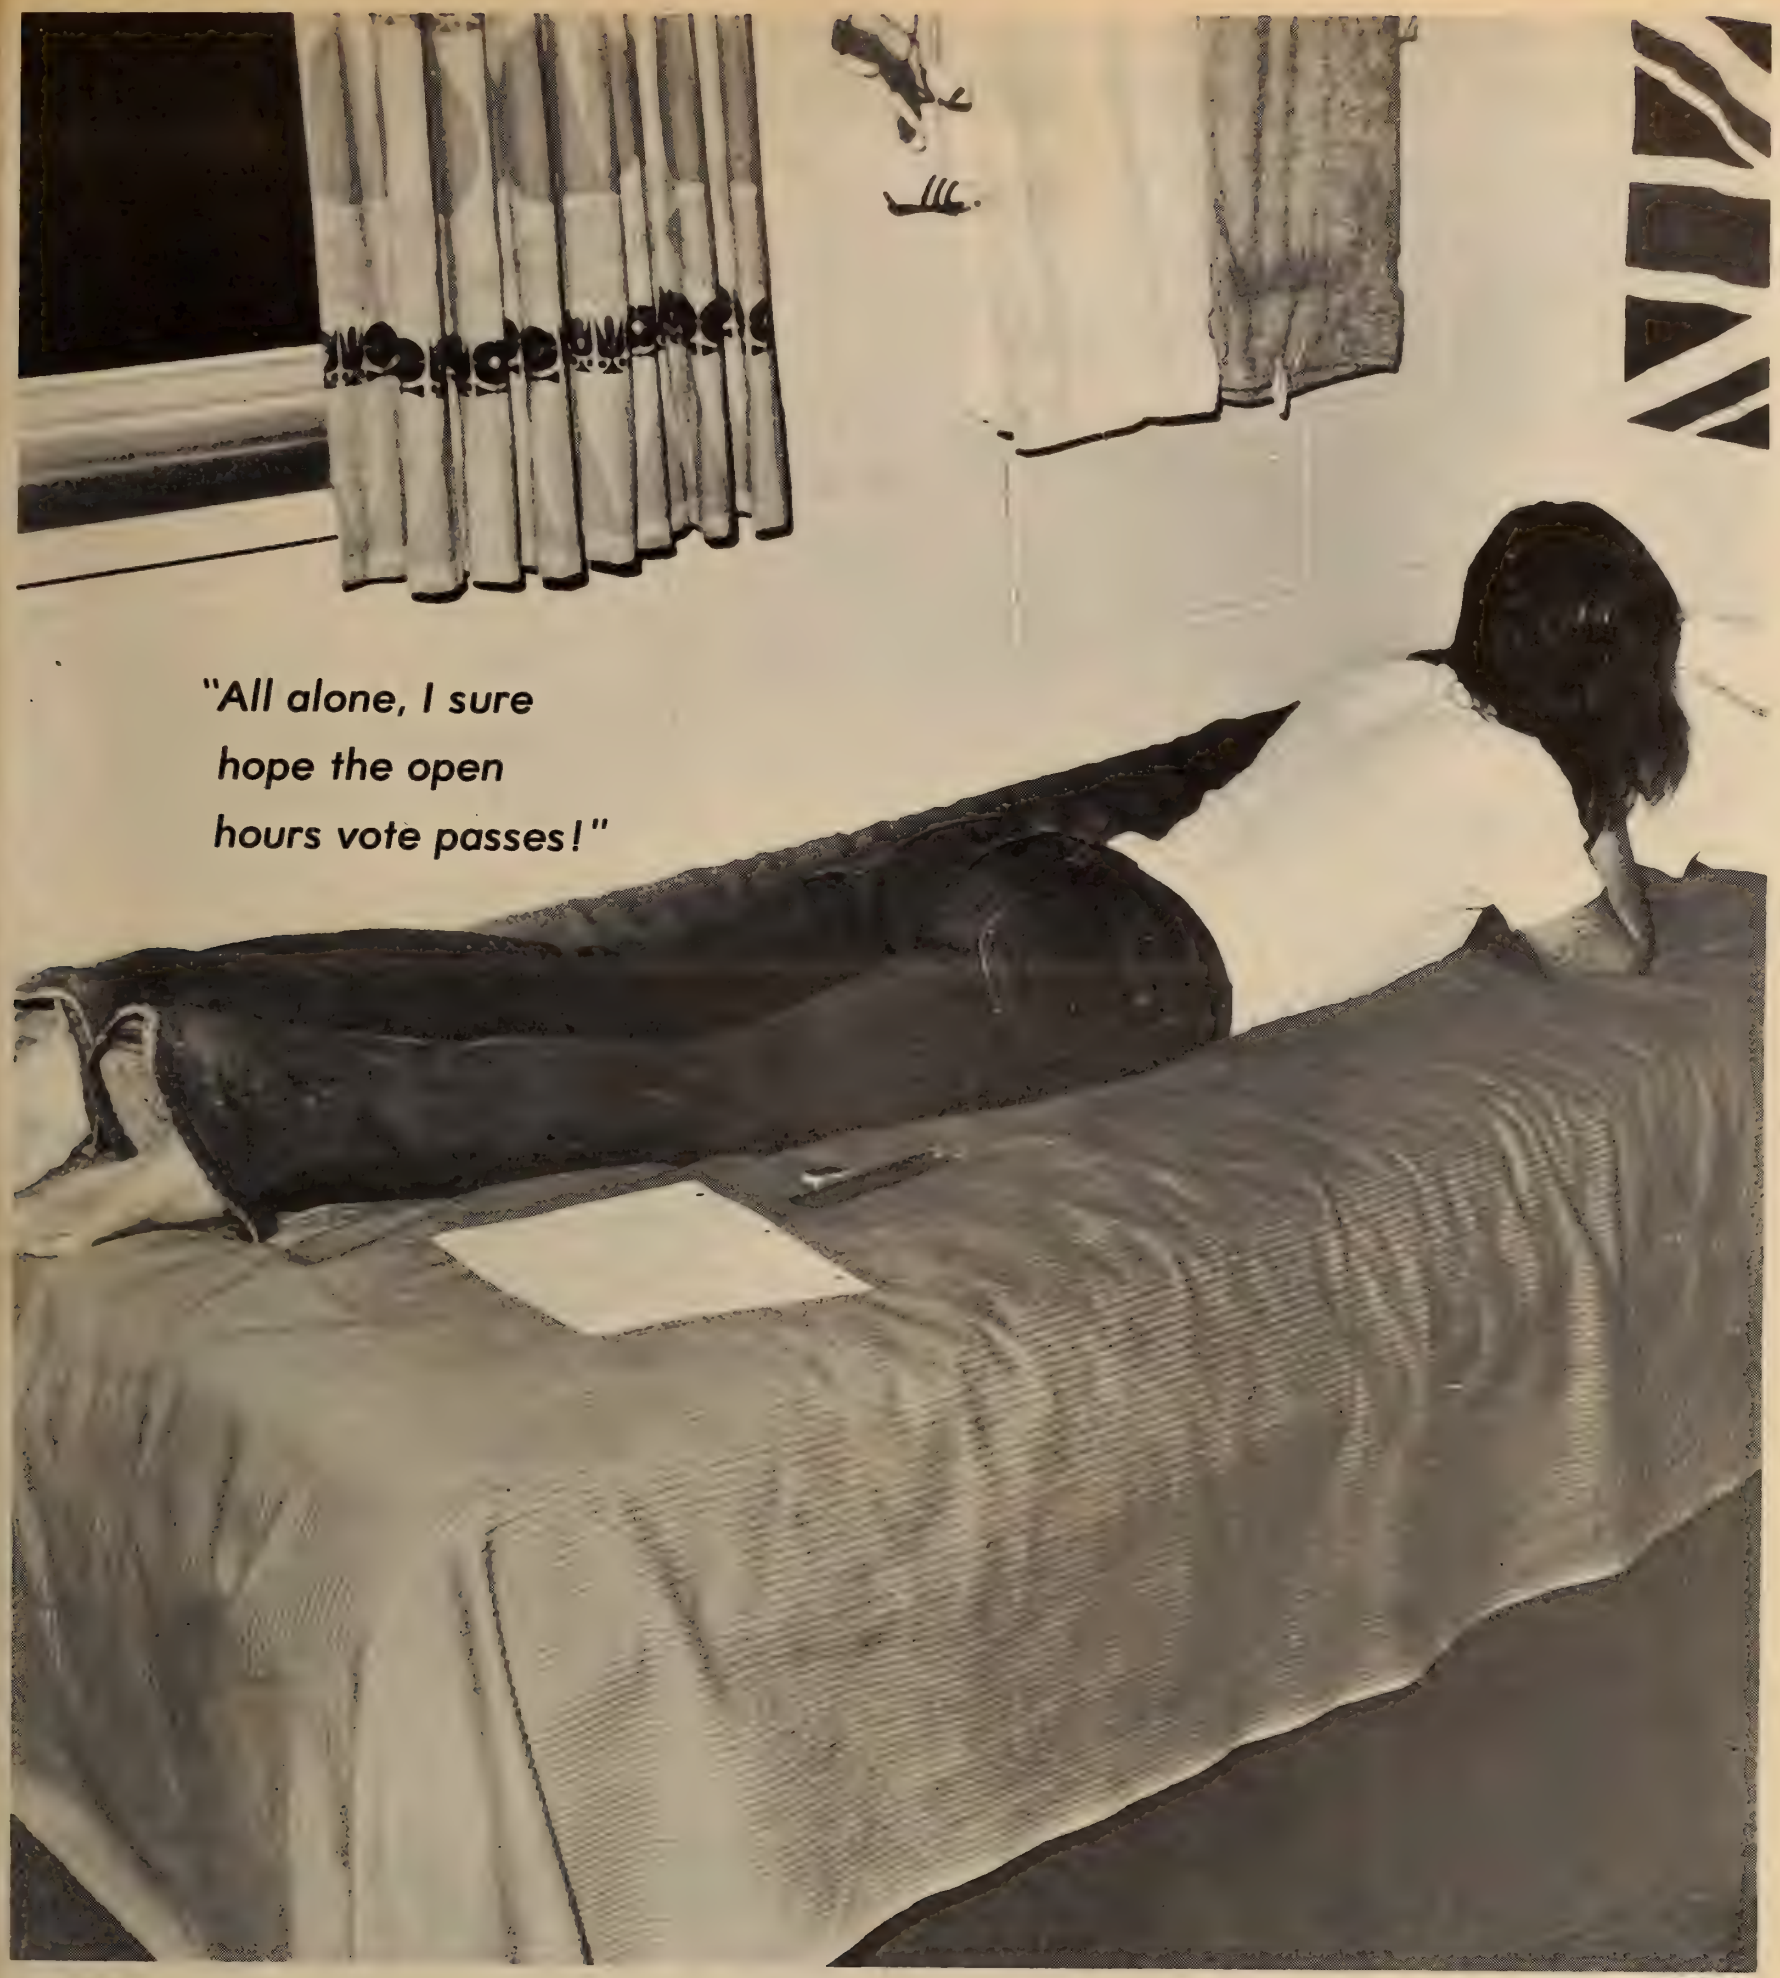
Zambia troop reinforcements have been reported moving into the Rhodesian border area and both Uganda and Ghana have promised their support, in addition to calling for an international brigade from African national countries to aid Zambia's fight.

SANTIAGO — Chile has become the first country to be economically ruled by a computer. Secretly in operation since last spring, the computer has taken over regulation of a large majority of the economy, operating on daily inputs of data from industry and processors.

The computer has been fed a set of pre-set norms by the Chilean government and it indicates any anomalies through comparison with the inputs. The ministry has then issued directives to the problem area.

In addition the government has used the computer system in testing the effectiveness of policy alternatives before putting them in operation.

LOS ANGELES — Pollution has come under fire in this city and the United States Environmental Protection Agency has been pressured into hammering out a number of recommendations, most of which are to be left until 1977 for implementation.



The proposals include gasoline rationing of up to 82 per cent of demand to deal with the smog being given off by Los Angeles' innumerable cars. In addition, the Agency has recommended that there be mandatory vehicle inspection, anti-smog devices on cars and conversion of fleet vehicles to natural gas.

The Agency afterwards pointed out that some of the proposals were not feasible but that they were forced into them by irate municipalities.

NEW YORK — Noted mobster Vincent (The Cat) Siciliano has been called to do his citizen's duty by a New York City court. The gangster turned juryman has served in prison for fourteen years on charges of gambling, weapons possession and armed robbery.

"We can finally keep up with the Joneses — he was laid off today!"

rossman

Queen's
Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 32

Tuesday, January 23, 1973

Principal's statement
Page 3

Raise your hands
Page 5

Interdisciplinary studies
Page 9

Deadlines for summer jobs fast approaching approaching

The past few years have seen an increasing effort on the part of the Federal Government to maximize the number of summer jobs available for secondary and post-secondary students. Since the deadline for most applications for these government-oriented jobs are rapidly approaching, students, interested in this type of summer employment should start seriously considering applications.

The Opportunities For Youth Program, which was begun in 1970, has become a popular form of summer employment. Last year the program received more than 20,000 applications! Unfortunately its budget allowed it to fund only 3,200 projects which, made the process of selection very difficult. Dave Wroe, of the Career Planning and Placement office in the Dunning Annex, explained that priority is given to those applicants whose intended projects maximize the number of people involved and the social impact they will have on the community.The payments for the students range from seventy dollars a week for secondary school students to nearly ninety dollars a week for post-secondary students. Most projects are funded for a maximum of thirteen to fourteen weeks, although in special cases, this can be extended to sixteen weeks.

The deadline for submission of OFY applications is March 1st. Application forms can be picked up at Career Planning and Placement office or at the Canada Manpower Centre on Princess St. If a student has any queries, he should contact Ray Beechey, the OFY liaison, at the Canada Manpower Centre.

In April, the Department of Manpower and Immigration is setting up one hundred and ninety-six special Canada Manpower Centres for students across Canada. These centres hope to aid approximately $1,272,000 secondary and post-secondary students seeking summer jobs. About 900 university undergraduates and recent graduates will be employed in these special centres. Anyone who wishes to have additional information and those intending to submit applications should contact the nearest Canada Manpower Centre.

Health and Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde has just announced that 1,100 students will be employed in three programs this summer by the Department of National Health and Welfare. For example, the Non-Medical Use of Drugs Directorate plans to involve about one hundred and seventy-five students in a research project on drug abuse. Most students employed in these programs will be from post-secondary institutions although a few from the upper secondary school levels will be included.

Student employment is also planned by the Public Service Commission. About 4,000 career-oriented jobs were made available to post-secondary students but the deadline for applications was December 31st, 1972 It is possible, though to contact Government branches and departments directly concerning career-oriented jobs. The Commission has now made available application forms for non career-oriented jobs. These will be basically clerical and secretarial jobs. Interested students should apply at a Canada Manpower Centre or Student Placement office.

Although it is only January, there is not much time left in which to apply for government-oriented jobs. But one should not get the impression that the Federal government is the be-all and end-all for summer jobs. This article, in fact, is only an outline of one facet of summer employment opportunities. If you wish to find out more about other kinds of possible employment, contact the local Canada Manpower Centre or the Career Planning and Placement office.

Students call for classical concerts

by Steve Winnett

Five students associated with the Division of Concerts series of classical offerings have charged that the AMS Concert Committee have not been providing enough classical concerts. They have organized a meeting for Thursday, 25 January, at 3.30 p.m. in Room 301 B of the Interim Office Building (207 Stuart St.) "to discuss measures to rectify this situation."

The five, Hugh Agnew, Bruce Chown, Marlene Coates, Bernard Gobin, and Anthony Morgan, argue that classical music should form a larger proportion of the musical fare subsidized by Queen's zstudents. "The AMS Concert Committee has been in existence for almost 172 years. Each student contributes $3 to this committee, which allows the committee to budget for a deficit in excess of $20,000. During this time, only one concert of a "classical" nature (with an approximate budget of only $750) was presented by the committee."

Hugh Agnew told the Journal that a discussion of forthcoming concerts of last Wenesday's Outer Council meeting has not included definite plans for a classical concert this term sponsored by the Committee, as has been promised. "They are afraid of losing money on Ritchie Havens."

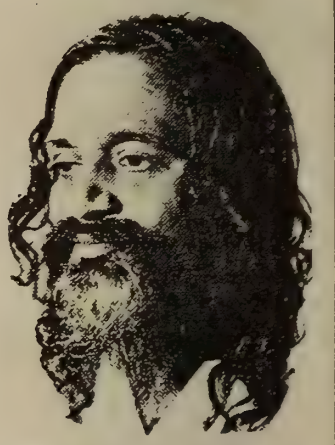
In reply to Agnew et al, Steve Sugar, Chairman of the AMS Concert Committee, told the Journal that two concerts of a classical nature are definite for this term. They will be held the week of February 3, in connection with Amity 300, a Tercentary project of the International Club. Students holding concert cards will receive a substantial discount to see a troupe of 30 Chinese Classical dancers, and a Filipino group.

In addition to these two classical concerts, said Sugar, the Committee "is committed to something additional this term" - but he could not be more specific because neotiations are still being carried on. The Committee will provide one more blues concert, one more jazz concert, and the Haven's concert on February 4 - and they do not expect to lose money on Havens.

High school Liaison

Macli's hopes are shattered

by Sandy Wilson



Sometime back in November Terry Macli's hopes soared. He had called a meeting of students interested in going back to their former collegiates to spread the plain truth about college life and had been greeted by a generous mob of 48. Last Wednesday he asked them all to meet again to report back on their experiences. Four people (including Terry and a Journal reporter) showed up.

The idea was definitely a sound one. Each year Ontario universities blanket high school students with the statistics of higher education: admission requirements, fee structures, award programs, etc. All very straight forward and purposeful but neglecting the more human side of university. It was Terry's hope that university students could use their experience to fill this information gap while they were home during Christmas. The feedback on the experiment may have been meagre but what there was of it was encouraging. All in all some 500 students had been reached by 3 of the volunteers and questions had ranged from campus sex life to the cost of living away from home to the real value of a post-secondary education today. The volunteers had been warned that this was not to be a promotional job for Queen's and so they tried to keep their remarks as general as possible.

In spite of the turnout Terry hopes to repeat the project next year with a real budget and an advertizing blitz.

Anyone interested in going to Parliament Hill in Ottawa on Tuesday January 30, should call 544-8576.

INTROUCTORY LECTURE
and
PHYSIOLOGICAL SLIDE PRESENTATION
ON THE TECHNIQUE OF

TRANSCENDENTAL MEDITATION
As Taught by Maharishi Mahesh Yogi

Expands awareness
Dissolves tensions and anxiety
Increases creative intelligence
Easily learned and enjoyed by everyone
Scientifically verified in such journals as "Scientific American", Feb. 1972.

McARTHUR HALL A-343
WED. JAN. 24th
8:00 p.m.
Everyone Welcome Free Admission

OFS fee withholding action not getting full student support

The Ontario Federation of Students fee withholding action across the province is not going as well as originally anticipated.

Student leaders from Windsor, Western, and Waterloo reported to a weekend meeting of the OFS executive that the students there were not withholding in great numbers. They blamed the lack of success on a variety of factors including "poor reactions among university administrators", and "apathetic, disorganized council members who appear to be more interested in fighting than in working in the campaign."

Carleton, York, Lakehead, and Glendon representatives all reported mild success but final figures were not yet available.

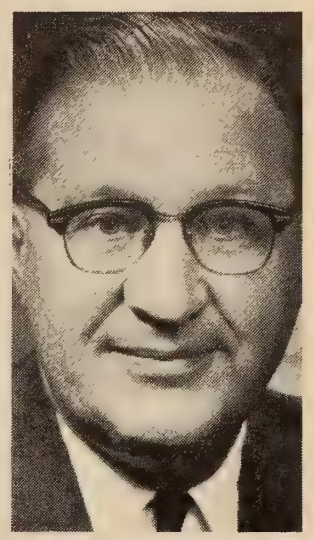
At Laurention University in Sudbury, the withholding is being supported by 52 percent of the students. "The results are better than our referendum," declared student president Jack Kushner. He said the Senate there had passed a motion opposing government action in the financial changes in university financing and the cutbacks in the OSAP programme, which "had helped immensely."

At the University of Toronto, the situation was called "uncertain" as the number of students reportedly owing second-term tuition had been changing daily. U of T representatives (and others) reported that they had been having some trouble and confusion with the Canadian Liberation Movement who were setting up private trust funds for students to pay tuition into. The CLM blames the cut-backs in education on the 10 per cent United States import surcharge instituted a year and a half ago.

At Queen's the campaign is still in full swing with fees not due until a week from tomorrow. Final effects of the fee withholding will not be known until mid-February, although a fees office official told the Journal last week that payments seemed to "be going slowly".

AMS External Affairs Commissioner Lyn Whitham commented that there appeared to be limited success on some campuses due partially to "administration action."

"Certainly the level of awareness of the issues at stake among students and the public is increasing," she continued, "and discontent among students is not decreasing."



Whitham pointed out that she held high hopes for the success of the withholding campaign at Queen's. She said "it is necessary for Queen's students to show the public and government that they are concerned about the educational cutbacks. The government at times gives the impression they think we aren't."

The OFS decided to call a province-wide moritorium for three days beginning next Monday during which each member school is to continue its action against the government action. The executive dismissed a movement to hold another provincial demonstration.

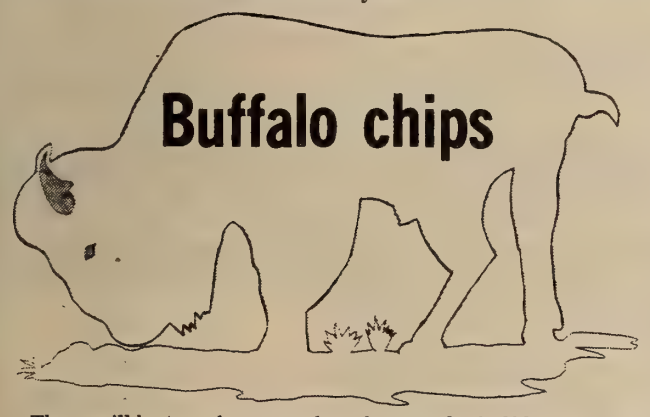
See related stories on page 6 and editorial on page 7.

Fees and OSAP

Principal's statement

Dr. John Deutsch

I am concerned that there should be no misunderstanding. I have made it clear on numerous occasions that I support the students' efforts to improve the Student Aid Programme. The changes which were made last year were very undesirable in their effects on the lower income students. I shall continue to do what I can and to work with students and others to try to bring about a better student aid scheme. With regard to the late payment charge which goes into effect if fees are not paid after the end of January I have pointed out that this regulation which is designed to compensate for the extra costs ensuing out of the delayed payment of fees, can be changed only by the Board of Trustees. The administration has no authority in this matter. I have said that I am prepared to bring the matter of the late payment charge before the Board at its next meeting in mid February. Obviously, neither I or anyone else can make any predictions regarding the Board's decision. The Board will have to review all the circumstances at the time, including the difficult budgetary situation we are in, along with the other universities.



Buffalo chips

by Janet Ritchie

Queen's annual Snowball Week presents its traditional Variety night under the name of Buffalo Chips on February 2nd. In keeping with Kingston's Tercentenary, the theme of Snowball Week is Canadiana - a theme which will be humourously reflected in Buffalo Chips.

Buffalo Chips promises to be different from the customary Variety night of the past. Steve Sibold, its organizer, stated that he wants to break away from the traditional talent show which has been characteristic of the Variety nights of previous years. He mentioned that many of the changes proposed by the executive of Buffalo Chips have met with considerable opposition. However, they have been able to introduce substantial alterations which Sibold hopes will serve as a basis for further revision.

Buffalo Chips will be presented in Grant Hall, which, according to director Charles Hayler, "makes it more accessible to different types of talent and provides a greater feeling of intimacy between the audience and the actors than was possible in the Arena" where it was held last year.

There will be two shows, each an hour and a half long at 7:30 and 10 p.m., instead of one, and tickets will be sold in advance. It is hoped that this will reduce the long line-ups of past years and allow a greater percentage of students to see the performances.

Sibold is also confident that the reduced length of Buffalo Chips will make it a more cohesive production. The individual skits will be linked together in a common theme but, unlike other years, this will not be accomplished by a master of ceremonies.

Instead, it is hoped that Buffalo Chips will portray the history of Canada in successive skits tied together by an orchestra, under the direction of Ron Hare, which will provide music between numbers and back-up music during some of the acts, and by Marjorie Woodbridge, a third-year drama student, who will personify the growth of Canada, appearing first as a baby and gradually maturing into a young lady.

It will be interesting to see how these changes affect the success of Buffalo Chips. And it will be even more so to see whether the improvement of this year's Variety night will result in a future break from the more traditional aspects of the past.

Frontier College

Community development project

by Susan de Stein

Frontier College, in an operation designed to aid in small community development, will send representatives to Queen's on Thursday in order to familiarize students with its programmes.

Approximately 80 students are hired each summer by Frontier College. The students are sent to various locations in Canada to be employed as a labourer in some capacity. He is to act also as a "resource person", according to Queen's student, Tom Mawhinney, a participant in the programme last summer. The focus of the programme recently has been on community development and on education.

Many students in the programme worked on railroad gangs, in mines and in various other jobs in the bush, at the same time, organizing recreational programmes for the community in which he worked.

Tom Mawhinney, worked on a railroad gang with 40 other men in northern Manitoba for the summer. As part of his duties, he organized a book library and ran films twice a week for the benefit of the community, as well as conducting French lessons. Besides being an "interesting experience", Mawhinney said, "it gave me insight and exposure to the problems encountered by the Indian and Ukranian peoples of the north." The work was hard, but "enjoyable and the country, beautiful", he added. "I was struck by the individuality of the people and their consciousness of this, whether or not they were educated."

Frontier College is "interested in those students who have a "strong interest in acting on their own and helping other people in the community," says Mawhinney. The programme provides a great "creative opportunity" for the individual, he added.

According to Mawhinney, the government provides education for adults whose level of education is beyond Grade 8. Those adults who have not reached this level cannot benefit from government programmes. Frontier College then aims at providing some education for these people, involving in many cases, teaching English in frontier outposts.

Frontier College, whose head office is in Toronto, is supported through private donations and is not sponsored by the government. Queen's University itself contributes annually to its operation. The College was founded in 1890 by a minister whose aim it was to provide a university for the working man.

Before the individual is sent out, he participates in a three day briefing session. Frontier College guarantees an income of $1200 for four months, as well as an honorarium of $100 at the end of the programme.

Representatives of Frontier College will be meeting with students on Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in Jeffery Hall, Room 126.

Bus-it plan discussed

by Sandra Bernstein

A meeting was held Friday, at which representatives of the AMS, PUC, and university administration discussed details of the proposed Bus-it plan for 1973-74.

The first item discussed was the time period to be covered by the scheme: twelve months or just the school year. The decision reached was that for the first year of operation, students would be able to ride buses free from Sept. 1 to May 15.

The next topic dealt with was the extend of services to be offered. In the trial period in October, services did not apply to routes with higher fares, such as those to outlying townships (5 cents higher) or to Dial-a-Bus (10 cents higher). Next year, however, the Queen's student card will apply for the basic fare anywhere, and the student will be responsible only for paying extra tolls where these are charged.

The proposed cost of the programme was established at this meeting; it has yet to be approved by the PUC and the student body. Probably, the PUC will be paid $5.00 per student, of which the university will pay a portion and the remainder will be financed by a raise in student fees. The exact proposition which will be subsidized by the university will be established at a meeting Tuesday morning, between the AMS and the administration; it is unlikely that this will be over 50 per cent. The figure arrived at Tuesday will not be final, however, it will have to be approved by the university.

The referendum in which students will approve or reject the proposed plan will be held in March.

Film series

Alinsky, organizing for power

by Lori Houzer

On Wednesday, January 17th, the legal sciences for low income groups course at the Faculty of Law, presented a series of 3 films dealing with the work of Saul Alinsky, the American Community Organizer.

In the first film, Alinsky headed a discussion with various younger community workers on the qualifications necessary for an organizer to be successful in effecting social change. "Selection of an organizer is done like the selection of a little league baseball team", said Alinsky. He pointed out that we must assume that anyone who has the potential and the desire to be an organizer is driven by the anger of injustice, and using this anger as a starting point, he will take action. He also explained that it is a mistake to enter the field of community work with a set dogma which you plan to impose upon the people you are working with. "They aren't looking for a utopic society," he stated, "just a bigger fatter piece of degenerate bourgeois values."

The second film in the series examined the problems that an organization entitled Scope encountered while attempting social changes in Chicago and Detroit, during the racial riots of 1966 and 1967. Alinsky examined the reasons for their failure and offered a variety of solutions. He insisted (and this idea prevails throughout his discussions), that it is impossible to attempt social change without proper organization. In fact, Organization for Power, basis of all Alinsky's work, has become a standardized method of approach for many community workers, and is labelled the "Alinsky Approach".

Using this philosophy, the organizer must pick out an institution and organize the community in a spirit of hostility against that group.

Alinsky illustrated this method in the third and last film, in which he brought forward the example of the T.W.O. organization in the black ghetto of Woodlawn, Chicago. Here, the problem of housing, poverty and disease had reached such a level of intensity that he had been called in to help reorganize T.W.O. according to his own philosophy and method. Accordingly, he worked with the organization, until it was in a position of power, allowing negotiations to take place with both the institution (University of Chicago), and the mayor of Chicago.

This was, in part, accomplished through sit-ins and picketing, and positive results were obtained within a few months.

Why must people be organized into a power group? Alinsky replied that in this way alone, it is possible to instill in a community spirit, dignity, and the knowledge that they are functioning as citizens in the democratic process and making a very positive and effective effort towards bettering their situations.

Skiing at its peak Prices at their bottom:

30 superbly groomed trails, 10 lifts accommodating 7,500 skiers per hour, including the only gondola lift in Eastern Canada

2050' vertical drop, 1½ mile run, Beginner's slopes, Look at rates

• 5 day ski week - use of lifts $25 - lifts & lessons $35
• Season from November to May

mont ste-anne P.O. Box 40, Beaupré, Province of Québec (418) 692-0835

Toronto ski reports, phone number (416) 483-4510

Anyone interested in going to Parliament Hill in Ottawa on Tuesday, January 30, should call 544-8576

classified

EUROPE SUMMER 73 TORONTO to LONDON from $79 one way or $155 return - Take a dependable charter. Contact AOSC, 44 St. George St., Toronto 5, 416-962-8404 - or your Student Council.

BOOK EARLY AND SAVE - Travelling in Europe INTERNATIONAL STUDENT I.D. card, student railpass, car rentals, cheapest and most dependable charter flights, camping tours etc. all available now from: AOSC, 44 St. George St. Toronto 5, 416-962-8404. (The Student Travel co-op owned by your student Council).

SURE CURE FOR LEPROSY Queries quered at the Burmese institute for the blind; Phone 544-7318. Ask for Major Squeezemore or Dr. Sculpin Scrimshaw. Thank you.

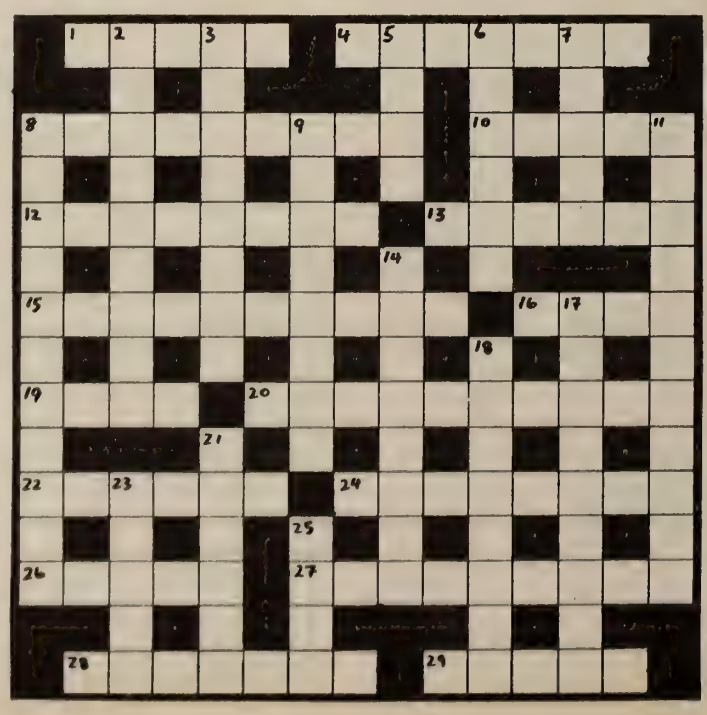
FOR RENT: available immediately, house at the very edge of Queen's campus on Collingwood. Three bedrooms. Garage. Living and dining rooms. Unfurnished. Phone 542-5061.

ESCORIAL - Watch for Escorial.

FOUR OR FIVE BEDROOM HOUSE AVAILABLE, May, 268 University, 2 blocks from campus, 544-9321.

WRC deplores res. fee increase

by Kiloran German



Statement of the Women's Residence Council
January 18, 1973

As we are the elected representatives of the women in residence, it is our responsibility to do whatever we can to counteract the serious effects which might result from the residence fee increase. We deplore the possibility that the higher costs will limit residence to the upper income sector of the population. The increase in residence fees when added to other increasing university costs brings the entire accessibility question sharply into focus. It is clear that the Ontario Student Awards Program must be revised so that those costs can be met by all students requiring aid. We therefore support the demands that the OSAP loan ceiling be lowered, that the age of indepencence be lowered and that the government clarify its position on higher education. These are of direct concern to all students. If the fee withholding campaign is successful and the government revises its policy, the effects of the increase of residence fees will be less serious. We must commit ourselves to attain that end. We completely endorse the campaign and on behalf of the women of residence we are contributing $200 to its operating fund.

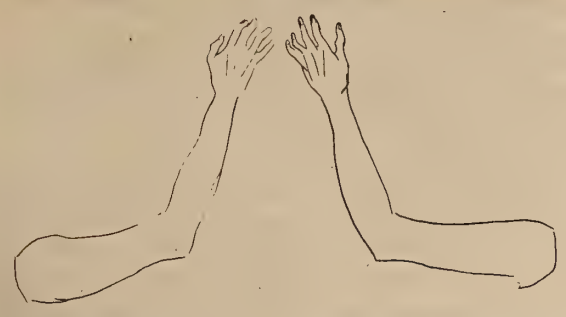
Journal Crossworld Puzzle

ACROSS
1. Wood fastener.
4. Impossible, even if you should decide to accept it.
8. Allowed.
10. Whisper made to the audience.
12. Unmoving astral body (4, 4).
13. Admire Paul the revolutionary hero.
15. Animal with one horn.
16. Ire.
19. Lower extremities.
22. Spanish nights.
24. Brightness.
26. Rock.
27. Groups of cooperating nations
28. Bits hanging on the edges.
29. Stomach.

DOWN
2. Singing Christmas songs.
3. What's given off.
5. Annual race of 500 miles.
6. Drip at the mouth, or a guy who owns people.
7. Black or green middle Eastern food.
8. Aircraft tossed from theatre balconies (5, 6).
9. One who journeys.
11. Small contrivance to protect woolens.
17. Not in the shape of a cone.
18. Show.
21. Lessen, make petty.
23. Church singers.
25. Female horse.

AMS OUTER COUNCIL MEETING

Wednesday, January 24
7:00 p.m.
Third Floor Common Room, Union



ALL WELCOME

Nominations for the position of

President and Vice-President of the Alma Mater Society

must be submitted to the AMS Office by 5 pm, Friday, January 26. Nominations are for candidates running as a team, and must be supported by the signatures of 200 AMS members and the acceptance of the candidates.

The Pentecostals raise their hands for Jesus Christ

by Carol E. Wood

The Pentecostals met to celebrate their own happiness in Jesus and to display themselves to Queen's University (rather poorly represented by three or four students sitting mutely at the back) in Jeffrey Hall on January 18th. The room was not ideally designed for spiritual experiences, being one of those vertiginous math lecture pits where if you sit at the back you constantly imagine yourself to be on the point of tumbling in headfirst and turning somersaults to the bottom.

God was in this place, we were told at the beginning of the meeting, so there was no reason why we should not all go home with our needs met, feeling satisfied. The hint of consumer fulfillment made me suspicious. The first song "It's Bubbling" precipitated instant elation upon the converted, who sang and clapped to the rousing strains of three accordians. They certainly seemed happy, but the combined effect of so many people's instant emotion felt like as assault. The schedule for the evening consisted of the testimonies of "witnesses" interspersed with other songs such as "We're a Happy People", and "It's Real", and winding up with a sermon.

The music was pleasant, people seemed to be enjoying themselves singing and clapping. But I watched the faces of the three young ladies on the accordians. (There being few faces that I could see as I had chosen to situate myself at the back near the door to facilitate a speedy exit if my fragile psyche looked like getting fractured). They were very extremely earnest and in moments of intensity almost agonized. I have never seen strain so clearly written on human faces; though all the witnesses testified to the real calm and happiness which Jesus had brought to them, I had to wonder what kind of peace could look so tense.

The witnesses were varied. Either they had always known that they were unhappy or had falsely imagined themselves to be happy 'in the world' before they met Jesus. Most bubbled rapturously for a couple of minutes as though they had been recorded at 33 rpm and were being played at 45 rpm. Their enthusiasm was appealing. One convincingly confessed to the Long Disintegration through Further Drugs - after a two week high that created suicidal fantasies, only God could bring him down. His choice of commitment restored his mind. Unlike some of the others, he did seem calm and happy.

The most unnerving quality of this part of the evening was a constant low booming sound as of thunder in the distance, which was at all times the result of expressions of 'Hallelujah' or 'Praise the Lord' from the devout in response to the witnesses, general remarks, or personal volition. Every now and then individuals would raise one hand in rapt salutation of the invisible. On occasions they all raised their hands to Jesus esctatically (the 'Hallelujah) gesture is halfway to 'Heil Hitler' but more gentle and with an air of involuntary awe).

The audience, the witnesses, the music, seemed to form a perfectly valid expression of Christianity; the intensity, even the strain was explicable in terms of the 'hevy' quality of spiritual experience. The preacher who blew the credibility of the evening for me. Reminiscent of a 19th Century American Revivalist, he used the most obvious forms of psychological bludgeoning, repetition of basic phrases, archtypal gestures of sincerity, all appeals beng fused in one offer of 'fulfilment': Jesus was the answer to our need for Peace, Security, Happiness, Reality. Kids who fail to find it in the Establishment look in 'Forbidden Territory', its not there either. They pay a high price; become physically bankrupt through Drugs, morally bankrupt through illicit Relationships. They're not bad kids - all the time they have this Craving which has never been satisfied. You can see it in their eyes. Satisfy that Craving. Jesus is Fulfilment.

In another century it might have been Hellfire and Damnation. Render not thyself to those Eternal Flames. Frustration is now a more likely psychological ploy than Fear. Don't miss the religious orgasm that will finally fulfill you. This is what you've always been looking for whether you know it or not: The final, definitive omnisatisfying package deal; Instant Christ.

And the individual spiritual pilgriminage, the doubts and trials and fears and conflicts and struggle to master one's ego? The dark night of the senses? Of the soul? The quest of a lifetime now abbreviated to a spiritual jet flight to fulfilment. Round the wheel of life in a second. Commit yourself and find all your needs met in the Pentecostal Experience.

The three or four other presumably curious Queen's students sat through this ordeal stolidly trying to look bored. I thought it brave of them to have come. To anyone with a genuine interest in religion and a mind sufficiently open to be vulnerable the evening would have proved an authenticity test! The preacher made a fairly heavy psychological attack upon this handful of people, first asking anyone who had been drawn towards God by his speech to raise his hand, then, as a lack of response formed an immediate 'practical criticism', asking anyone who simple felt a lack inside them that might be filled by religion to raise their hands, anyone who was honest enough to admit their need. 'Is there ayone?' he repeated, 'Is there anyone?' Presumably there wasn't. Or perhaps they simply refused to demonstrate their need at his bidding. Who, after all was pulling the strings?

Of course, the essential element of the Pentecostal religion is their assertion of experimental proof of the Holy Spirit by 'speaking in tongues'. Well, during the final scheduled spontaneous prayer, largely a babel of 'Hallelujah' and 'Praise the Lord' one of the speaker broke out into gibberish which I assumed to be Indian - he had told us that he had spent a period of time in India. I seemed to pick out a few rods however, among the barbled noise, which I afterwards repeated to a friend, who recognised them to be Hebrew. Of course, it remains possible that he just happened to posses a faculty for speaking fluent Hebrew very fast and in an almost autonomous, trance-like state. But maybe not. I suggest you make up your own minds. They're returning in two weeks time. They deserve at least a larger audience, whether you come to mock, pray, argue or simply to gaze stolidly.

DSC's get money

ASUS has made a total of $1800 available to the various DSCs for worthwhile academic projects. Application forms will be sent to DSC chairmen this week, the DSC Co-ordinating Committee announced Thursday night.

The projects must be of an academic nature, deal with a reasonable sum of money, and have some general appeal. Applications must be made in the form of a written brief, stating the nature of the event, the name of the DSC or DSCs involved, a cost breakdown, the location and the time.

All applications must be approved by the DSC Co-ordinating Committee, the group responsible for the distribution of the ASUS grant. The committee is made up of DSC representatives from the Social Sciences, Natural Sciences and Humanities.

When asked for an example of the type of project they would approve, the committee cited the $200 grant awarded to the History DSC to sponsor tonight's lecture by Professor J.M.S. Careless, a "distinguished historian" from the U of T.

The programme of sponsoring academic events will continue until the end of March, when any leftover funds will be returned to ASUS. If the undertaking is successful, ASUS plans to set up a permanent committee next year, which would operate with a larger budget, perhaps as much as four thousand dollars.

DANCE
LIVE ENTERTAIN.
DRINKS

HILLEL HOUSE
(26 Barrie St.)

Sat.
Jan. 27
8:30 p.m.

Beer and other refresh.

$1.00 stag
$1.50 drag

Fee withholding

Information

Daily
John Orr Room
11:30 - 3:30

I'M NOT PAYING

Trent stormy over proposed cuts

PETERBOROUGH (CUP) — Students and faculty at Trent University have reacted angrily to a proposal calling for massive faculty cuts to accomodate restrictive government educational financing policies.

President Thomas Nind proposed Friday the release of between 30 and 40 faculty members in the next 15 months in order to cut a projected university deficit of $5,000,000. He agreed to cancel classes yesterday so students, faculty and staff can discuss the proposal in a day-long moratorium.

The Trent moratorium follows a call by the Ontario Federation of Students for its member student councils to organize moratoria and mass meetings against the province's cuts in educational spending, during a three-day period beginning January 29.

Nind's announcement of his proposal prompted a demonstration by more than 250 Trent students. Trent student union chairwoman Sue Genge charged Nind was capitulating to government pressure, and urged the administration to join students in fighting Queen's Park.

Sociology teacher Andrew Werenick said the situation in the universities is analogous to a production slowdown in factories when workers are laid off:

"The university has engaged in intellectual and cultural producton and the provincial government has decided it no longer wants to finance intellectual producton," he said. "Therefore the university will have to lay off faculty."

Wernick proposed that all faculty members take a cut in pay to ensure no teachers will lose their jobs.

Nind said his proposal was not to be considered an edict. The Board of Governors and Senate have both discussed it and he plans to meet with student representatives today.

"I am looking for suggestions and guidance," he said. "I anticipate some modifications will be made. The budget review and priorities committee participated very little in the preparation of the porposals. The committee wanted leadership. The problems were too difficult for them."

Wave of protests hits Laurentian

SUDBURY (CUP) — Students at Laurentian University joined province-wide actions against the Ontario government's educational policies Thursday, when they occupied the only elevator in the administration building.

The occupation took place just before a scheduled meeting of the Laurentian Senate, and the approximately 40 students involved succeeded in discouraging about half the senators from attending. Senate meetings are held on the 11th floor.

Students left the elevator after about four hours. They wanted to dramatize their views to senate members in opposition to government-ordered fee increases and hikes in the student awards loan ceiling.

The action followed a General Student Council meeting which decided to call a maratorium on classes for tommorow to discuss the issues involved in the province-wide fee withholding protesting government policy.

Some 50 percent of Laurentian students have not paid their second term fees, providing the strike with its strongest support so far.

The occupation was also a symbol of support for students occupying administration areas at Brock University in St. Catharines, to protest the firing of faculty members because of cuts in government aid to the university.

(The Brock students are continuing their occupation with about 40 students remaining in the occupied territory while others circulate petitions of support in the St. Catharines Community.

The Brock students scored a major victory Jan. 20 when they convinced the board of trustees to hold an emergency meeting. The board issued a news release "expressing our concern" over the cuts, and arranged a meeting between Brock students and administrators and Minister of Colleges and Universities, Jack McNie.)

Tercentenary Open House coming

Queen's Tercentenary Open House '73 will be held on Saturday and Sunday, February 10th and 11th. In this column, the Journal will announce some of the events of the Open House. Events will be open between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. on these days, unless otherwise specified.

A display of the AQUATIC LIFE IN THE BAY OF QUINTE, by the Biology Department; in room 111 or 117 of Earl Hall.

KINGSTON ARCHITECTURE (1840-1850), a lecture with slides, by the Classics Department; in Stirling Hall.

FOX AND HOUNDS, a simple board game, by the Computing Department; in Goodwin Hall. A reward for any successful challenger!

Demonstration of LANDSLIDES and experiments on QUICKSAND by the Civil Engineering Department; in Ellis Hall, at 2 p.m.

CANADIAN STUDENTS ABROAD, a lecture by Dr. F. V. Tonge, for the French Department; in Room 208 Kingston Hall, at 1:30 p.m., Saturday only.

STUDENT FILMS, showings every hour on the hour in the Faculty-Film House, 154 Stuart Street.

LIFE BEYOND THE EARTH, a lecture by Dr. A. H. Bridle, for the Physics Department; i n Stirling Hall, Theatre B or C, at 2 p.m. on Saturday only.

The Music Department is givingMINI-LESSONSON VARIOUS INSTRUMENTS, at 32 Queen's Crescent.

CREATIVE DRAMA PRODUCTION, an original student production, in Room 102, Theological Hall.

HEART DISEASE, a discussion, by the Physiology Department, in the Physiology Building on Arch Street.

Tours

Guided tour of the PHYSICAL EDUCATION CENTRE.

A tour of RESEARCH FACILITIES, by the PSYCHOLOGY Department. Start at the south door on the 4th floor of Humphrey Hall; every half hour between 1 p.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Students get hiring, firing power

TORONTO (CUP) — Students in the University of Toronto's sociology department scored a major breakthrough January 15 when they won parity representation on the department's staffing committee.

The victory came when the assembly, the department's supreme decision-making body, decided by one vote to give students an equal say on the committee that hires, fires, and promotes staff. Students already have parity with faculty on all other departmental committees, including the executive and those that set curriculum, as well as on the policy-making assembly.

Students have long regarded a say in staffing decisions as crucial for long range planning and for meaningful control over course content.

The sociology assembly approved the student staffing decision in principle last February but implementation was held up by opposition from the then-department chairman and the retiring dean of arts and science. Their successors seem willing to accept students in this area of decision-making.

REMINDER

The second installment of fees due by January 31, 1973 can be paid in person at the Accountant's Office, Richardson Hall.
If you find it more convenient to mail your cheque to the Accountant's Office, please record your student number on the face of your cheque.

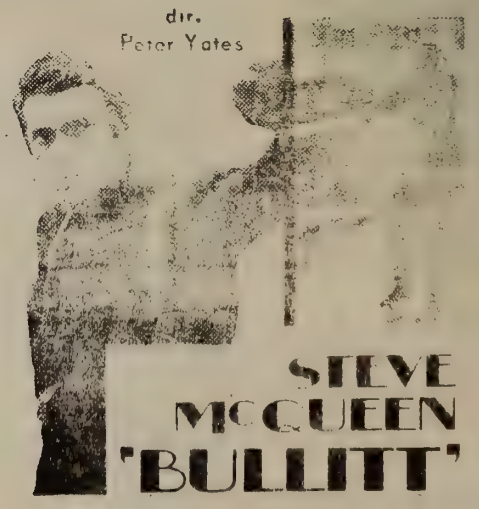
Computing Centre

Programming Competition '73

The Closing Date for Entries is January 31st., 1973.

Further details are available from F. M. Larkin, Computing Centre (local 6901).

MOVIES



DOUBLE - FEATURE

1. King of Swordsmen King (SWORD EPIC)
2. The Bride And I (Comedy)

JAN. 27 (Sat. 2.00 pm)
28 (Sun. 7.30 pm)
DUNNING HALL AUDITORIUM

Admission: $2.00

Tickets are available from International Centre Office, Student Union.

Thursday, Jan. 25, 7:00 and 9:30
Dunning Aud. Admission $1.00
A Queen's CINEGUILD Presentation

editorial

Future of education

The future of higher education is of concern to all who learn and work at Queen's and at this very moment the nature and quality of this institution is being threatened by government efforts to decrease accessibility to it. The Davis government has made no effort to assess the needs or stage of universities. It is imperative therefore, that students accept the challenge of the government by withholding their fees.

The changing priorities of government have resulted in a reduced committment to education. This reduced committment in the area of student aid is acting as a deterent to many students who may be contemplating university education. Such a deterent can only have a devastating effect on the quality of higher education and may in fact cause a flood on the job market with the subsequent effect of increased unemployment. Students unable to receive provincial aid will soon be requiring federal unemployment assistance. By passing the buck the Ontario government may be able to decrease its own budgetary deficit but we question the validity of using the changes in the aid programme as one of the means to accomplish this.

The Wright Commission suggested last November that fees be raised. Accompanying this recommendation was a proposal for a graduated scale of aid designed to ensure that education was accessible to all. We wonder why the government bothers to waste money on such a commission if it is not prepared to at least consider its recommendations and announced its reasons for accepting or rejecting them.

Similarly, the Committee of University Affairs, a body supposedly set up to advise the government on all matters concerning education was not even consulted before the changes in fees and student aid were announced. We can only surmise that a government acting in a vacuum will not be very responsive to its people. It is our responsibility as students therefore to prove our concern for the future of higher education by withholding our fees.

More on accessibility

Dear Editor,

In the January 19 issue of the Queen's Journal Mr. Crowley raises a number of his concerns in the fee withholding which I think can be summarized under four headings: 1) Fee increases - as the Editor pointed out the AMS has dropped the fee issue from its list of demands but again these are not "the first fee increases in ten years." Graduates have had four increases in four years. And several groups are suffering considerably more than other undergraduates: McArthur + $585; Rehab + $900; Nursing + $1250.

2) Student awards programme - As for who gets student awards, the provincial student awards officers themselves are concerned that low income groups are not well treated by the programme. Part of this concern stems from the Parental Contribution Table which is based on old income data. A standard of living requiring a gross income of $6000 a year in 1965 might require $9000 or $10,000 now. As income inflates, fewer and fewer people are getting any provincial grant portion at all and the loan limit increase only accelerates the provincial withdrawal from the student aid field. The question of education debts as opposed to car loans is admittedly a difficult one to answer. A car bought on borrowed money is a tangible asset in the driveway, more tangible and obviously useful than a student loan to a family with no post secondary educational experience. And the Davis government isn't much interested in answering the Question. Little or no data was gathered by the government to assess the state of accessiblility and they have no interest in determining any changes in accessibility created by the loan ceiling increase. They are changing policy in a vacuum and this is high handed. The question about secondary school survival by low income students is also important but again no one knows and the government isn't asking. Even so society's concern should then be rectifying injustices in the secondary system not heightening the barrier at the post secondary level. There are better aid schemes possible - contingently repayable loans is one; the Wright report proposal is another. But the government is not yet considering them and continues to reduce its commitment to low income students. "Ski week" is a red herring. Besides, its an appellation by the idle rich.

3) OFS - The turnout for the referendum was most certainly not poor. Forty thousand voters are far from insignificant. On this campus the turnout was the highest in history on any issue - five thousand. The OFS met four times with the government and were stonewalled each time on the student aid demands. That is not sufficient cause now to lie down and play dead. OFS has split over tactics in implementing the withholding but student credibility is questioned only by a media that focuses on a handful of radicals in Toronto, ignoring the rest of the forty thousand. Queen's continues to take the lead in this issue and this genuine concern from the most well-to-do campus destroys the "selfish interest group" charge.

4) Faculty attitude - The Ontario Confederation of University Faculty Associations is on record as favouring a considerable increase in tuition so that universities would be less dependent on the government! Whether they would then be willing to increase proportionately student power on Senates or Boards is an open question. While they pay lip service to the need for increased aid to low income students are wonders whether they aren't thinking BIU increases would be easier to extract from their students than from government.

Mr. Crowley closes his letter stating that he is sympathetic to the AMS aims but is concerned about the public relations job being done - we need your help, Terry, in this campaign and your honest concern. We must withhold. Whether or not a better tactic could have been found is immaterial now because there is only one game in town.

Sincerely,
Doug Pritchard

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 32
Tues., Jan 23, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Patricia Devitt
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National desk: Bob Mutrie
Photography: Peter Boag

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

letters

AMS defends its stand

To the Students of Queen's University,

I would like to reply to the letter in the January 19 edition of the Journal from The Committee For An Elitist Queen's University (I am pleased to note that the writer of that letter at least realizes the inevitable consequences of the Government policies he supports).

Initially, I must point out the factual errors in the subject letter. The AMS has not stated and does not now allege that the recent increase in tuition fees is unwarranted. On the contrary, I and other members of the AMS executive have supported the concept of increased tuition fees which are more reflective of the actual costs of the education each student receives. What we are concerned about and are currently protesting are the cuts in accessibility grants to students which will eventually result in the creation of financial barriers to university education which will be insurmountable to members of lower economic groups.

Another error is the suggestion that the AMS Executive receives sixty-three dollars from each and every student at Queen's University. Only seventeen dollars and fifty cents are actually seen by the AMS. The substantial remainder goes to such things as the athletic program, the Student Health Service, the Student Union building and as a contribution to the capital costs of the construction of the new University Centre. Of that seventeen fifty the Outer Council allocates only five dollars and thirty cents. The rest is already assigned to such things as the Journal, Tricolor, and concerts. I would estimate that the Fee Withholding Campaign will cost each student a maximum of three cents.

I would also like to uncover the numerous flaws in the writer's analogy between the current province-wide withholding of tuition fees by university students in protest to the Government's policies and the writer's suggested withholding of fees from the AMS.

Our ways of influencing the policies of the Ontario Government are limited. We can meet with Government officials and make our concern known. This we have done. However, since we have been disregarded by those people, our only alternative is to attempt new methods of demonstrating the depth and sincerity of our concerns. There is no other procedure for influencing government policy.

The AMS operates on a much more direct system of democracy than that used on the provincial level. All Student Activity Fees which the students now pay have been established in campus wide referenda. The initiative for holding referenda to change fees need not come from the AMS Executive; a student petition can and has resulted in referenda which change fees. Also, in some cases there is provision for greater personal selection in the fees students pay versus the services they wish to receive: refunds of both the four dollar Tricolor fee and the three dollar concert fee are available at the beginning of the academic year.

Apart from the level of fees, the policies of the AMS are also subject to the direct control of the student body. Any student can move or second any motion and enter into debate at any Executive meeting. Furthermore, a petition of the student body containing two hundred signatures can call for a general meeting of the AMS. At such a meeting, all members of the Ams (i.e. all full-time students) have a vote and the passing of any motion would determine the policy which the Executive must follow.

The analogy also fails in that there is a distinct difference between the students who are now withholding their tuition fees and the Committee for an Elitist Queen's University. The Executive of the Alma Mater Society has both independently and through the Ontario Federation of Students explored all possible avenues for making our concerns known. We have fully investigated the policies and programs of the Ontario Government and have made ourselves aware of the situation which now faces us. We are not protesting merely because the Government does not spend all its money on programs which benefit us directly; we are attempting to make our concerns about recent changes in policy known and we are protesting in the only rational way possible because we have been ignored thus far.

The author of the letter to which I am responding obviously did no research into what the current structure at Queen's is nor into how he could make his concerns known and change the system if it really is so unjust.

In conclusion, I would like to comment generally on the current campaign in which the AMS has engaged. The executive of any organization has a responsibility to act on behalf of and in the best interests of its members. The Outer Council of the AMS, based on the convictions of its voting members, the input received from the student population at large and the results of the October referendum. has taken a stand. We have come to the conclusion that the current policies of the Davis Government, if continued, will have serious detrimental effects on post-secondary education. Also we have decided that the withholding of tuition fees is the best course of action now open to us. Having so resolved, we have thrown all of our efforts and a portion of our financial resources behind the campaign. It would have been a lot easier to sit on our collective, complacent behinds and do nothing. If you are not happy with what we are doing or if you feel that we are wasting students money or misrepresenting your interests, then come in and tell us; constructive criticism and intelligent, rational feedback are always appreciated.

Who knows, having taken the time to discover the issues and understand their true implications, perhaps even the Committee for an Elitist Queen's University will realize that the whole thing isn't such a big joke.

Yours sincerely,
Wally Palmer
Vice-President,
Alma Mater Society

First candidate announces AMS intentions

The upcoming race for AMS president rose to a heated pitch this morning as Greg LeBlanc, AMS president, called a press conference.

The conference was to announce that Shane, a seven month old cocker, has thrown his collar into the political arena making him the first candidate to publicly announce his intentions.

Shane enters press conference with infamous admirer

It was made clear that this was to be a serious campaign that was prompted by "grass roots support" that Shane had been given to date. He intends to run a "low-pee" campaign that will spearhead what could be described as a reform ticket.

Shane has indicated he plans to impeach the library staff for their constant use of the phrase "dog-eared". In the Pyschology department, he sees a more wide use of humans in the experiments as an important issue to deal with.

On the issue of safety, Shane has called the campus a fire hazard and intends to institute a plan that would treble the number of hydrants on the Queen's grounds.

The question of food took a sound thrashing as the candidate made public a desire to see Burger Bits on the menu in every cafeteria on campus.

Shane was harsh on the Day Care Centre asserting that it gave preferential treatment. "Some of my best friends did not get into the Centre even though the grants were there . . . sort of leaves them out in the cold, doesn't it?" Attacked Shane.

Shane sees the campus in need of more grass and less and less concrete and that the quality should be superior to the quantity.

The Journal asked if he anticipated a dog-eat-dog fight to the finish, and was assured that it would be a clean fight, but if it became a mud slinging contest, Shane could sling more than mud if the situation warranted it.

The SPCA will be standing by throughout the campaign to make sure that nothing underhanded happens to the candidate.

All this is in aid of the fact that nominations for AMS president and vice-president close at 5 p.m. on Friday. Anyone so rash as to think they could run against Shane and beat him, can have himself nominated (with a running dog lackey) by gathering the signatures of 200 members of the AMS and bringing them, and his acceptance to the AMS office before that time.

Volleyball men undefeated

by Brian Kotila

A sign of a good team is one that plays up to the calibre of their opposition. That is precisely what happened this weekend in men's volleyball. Going into the tournament at Ryerson, Queen's was undefeated but one point behind York due to the fact that York had played one match more. Queen's had eight potential points to York's six with the Queen's - York final series an all-important one. Out of the seven teams assembled - Queen's, York, Toronto, Laurentian, Ottawa, Carleton, and Ryerson - only two would make the playoffs.

Queen's opened the tournament with victories over Laurentian by scores of 15-9 and 15-6. Against York, the Gaels did not play particularly well but managed to win the series in two straight by scores of 15-11 and 15-12. Next they polished off Ryerson 15-10 and 15-3, setting the stage for the grand finale against Toronto. The Gaels won the first game 16-14, but in the second game, all hell broke loose. The Gaels at one point trailed 14-6 but some last-minute heroics and great volleyball enabled the boys to overcome the deficit and beat Toronto 16-14.

The victory caps an unbeaten season in regular league play for the men's volleyball team and sets the stage for the OUAA championships here at Queen's on Saturday. Two teams from the western section will meet the top two teams from the east with the winner to advance to the CIAU national championships in Sudbury later this month. Queen's won the OUAA last year and finished third in the nationals.

Skigaels finish second

by Gail Munro

Slush, rain and ruts at Friday's Waterloo Invitational Team Giant Slalom race caused difficulties for a few of Queen's skiers, and held the team to a second-place finish in the field of thirteen Ontario University teams. A crash half way through the second run spoiled an otherwise good day for Bruce Cummings, who had skied well in the first run. However, three other Queen's racers had no difficulties at all. Jamie Nielson once again led the field and finished in first place with the fastest time of the day over two runs. Ian Nielson's combined time placed him fourth in the individual standings. Bob Archer, another strong and consistent performer for the team, came seventh.

The team held a commanding lead until the last racer's second run. As it turned out, Queen's gave up first place to the University of Toronto. Nevertheless, coach Terry McTague feels that he has a winning team and is looking forward to the next race in the Molson's series, the Toronto Invitational, which will be held in Collingwood February 2nd.

UNDER GROUND COMIX

Fabulous Furry,
Freak Brothers,
Mother's Oats,
Slow Death, etc.

Lou Williams Smoke Shop
213 Princess St.

"Due to the mail situation in Toronto, we are temporarilily out of stock of these comix"

St. Lawrence Parks Commission

Summer Employment At

OLD FORT HENRY

Kingston, Ontario

The internationally known Fort Henry Guard is a CIVILIAN unit dedicated to the creation of a living picture of British Army garrison activities during the nineteenth century. Find out about this unique summer job at an

Information and Films Night

describing the

FORT HENRY GUARD

Wednesday, January 24th, at 7:30 p.m.
Student's Memorial Union
McLaughlin Room, 1st Floor

Members of the guard must be eighteen years of age by next spring, and at least 5'11" tall, (height restriction not applicable to members of the band).

Applications forms available at the Placement Office, 121 Union Street. Sign-ups for interviews begin on January 17th, and campus interviews are being held on February 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9th.

QUEEN'S MUSICAL THEATRE

presents: Jan. 31, Feb. 1, 2, 3

WONDERFUL TOWN

music by Leonard Bernstein

in

GRAND THEATRE

doors open 8 p.m., curtain 8:30 p.m.

Tickets available from cast, John Orr Room & meal lines $2.00 students $1.50

1673 QUEEN'S TERCENTENARY OPEN HOUSE
Kingston, Ontario

•GUIDES •HOSTS

•VOLUNTEERS

Anyone interested in taking part in OPEN HOUSE '73

phone: 544-2157

The History Department presents

Professor J.M.S. CARELESS

from The University of Toronto

Distinguished Canadian Historian

SUBJECT: "Urban History and Regionalism in Canada"

DATE: Tuesday, January 23, 1973

TIME: 8:30 pm

PLACE: 517 Watson Hall

Informal lecture followed by a discussion period and coffee.

ELROND COLLEGE APPLICATION FORM
SEPTEMBER 1973

Name: .....
Current Address: .....
.....
Phone No.: .....
Home Address: .....
Phone No.: .....
Birth: ..... Sex: .....
Course Concentration: ..... Year: .....
Other Information: .....
.....

CHOOSE YOUR HOME
Indicate 1st, 2nd, 3rd Choice

No. of Units	Houses
	12 person house (meal plan)
16	..... Single - - -	$1155 (8 months)
	..... Double - - -	$ 995 (8 months)
	..... Double as Single	$1295 (8 months)
	6 person house (meal plan)
7	..... Single - - -	$1155 (8 months)
	..... Double - - -	$ 995 (8 months)
	..... Double as Single	$1295 (8 months)
	4 person house (meal plan)
4	..... Single - - -	$1155 (8 months)
	..... Double - - -	$ 995 (8 months)
	..... Double as Single	$1295 (8 months)
	2 person house (not on meal plan)
20	..... Each Large Single - -	$105/month
	Apartments
	1 Bedroom apartment (1, 2 people)
2	..... Small Corridor Apt. -	$140/month
6	..... Large Corridor Apt -	$160/month
8	..... Large Thru Apt. - -	$175/month
	2 Bedroom apartment (1, 2, 3 people)
2	..... Small Corridor Apt. -	$195/month
24	..... Small Thru Apt. - -	$225/month
8	..... Large Thru Apt. - -	$245/month

Parking $10.00 per month.

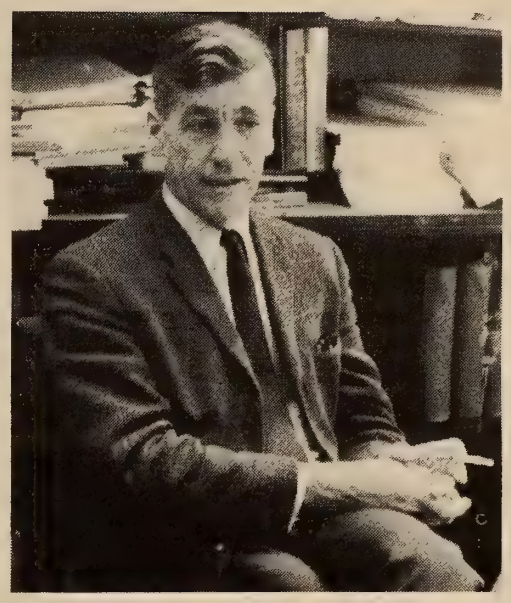
When applying with a room mate or for the same house, please staple the applications and enclose them in one envelope, Mail or bring them to: Elrond College, 401 Princess Street, Kingston.

Elrond OPEN HOUSE

coffee and donuts

Take a look at 2 person 4 person 6 person

12 person, 1 bedroom, 2 bedroom units.



WED., THUR., FRI., JAN. 24-26 6.30 pm

ALL DAY SAT. JAN. 27

Reaching for the roots of reason

by Bob Mutrie

In this world of technical knowhow and handed down procedural rules, it appears that the human race is losing its ability to ask questions and answer problems which do not appear in a textbook.

For Professor George Whalley in the Department of English, traditionally the most intellectually oriented of the humanities, a university education seems to be losing its mind stimulating value.

When the subject of an interdisciplinary course on world problems came before the Senate Committee on Academic Development, last spring, Dr. Whalley took issue with the workings for he university in general and the proposed course in particular for all the "technicall" as opposed to "contemplative" concepts that were being carried over to it.

An interdisciplinary course on world problems is not the answer to student awareness, Dr. Whalley told the Journal.

What is needed more is the development of the mind's "dynamic postures" through a set of "germinal" courses aiming at "how I feel, see, know and think".. This, is stressed is the basis for knowing.

The Senate Committee on Academic Development was mandated last spring to evaluate interdisciplinary studies with a view to possibly establishing a course dealing with world problems which would deal with such issues as pollution and population. The ultimate goal of such a program would be to generate awareness of the issues in the world around us.

However, Dr. Whalley has pointed out that awareness is generated at a level more fundamental than simple dealing with straight issues. "The world has become dominated by the technical mind", he stated and the continual dealing with specific problems instead of concepts has made us "inert recorders", he confided.

True knowledge, he claimed, comes more basically from contemplative thought and self discovery so that instead of accepting what is given we should be thinking things out for ourselves.

"If a professor deals exclusively with issues, a screen is set up which disallows any projection into mental functioning", he stated.

Dr. Whalley has brought his thoughts on the subject together into what he calls a "germinal" course structuring, one which would strike at the roots of knowing and give students a basis for discovery no matter what field they enter. What we must do is make people confident in the functioning of their mind", he suggested.

Dr. Whalley has invited a group of people with "philosophical accumen" to discuss the idea of courses oriented toward the contemplative mind and shape the proposal into functional form. "The ways of releasing the resources of the mind are far greater than many people think, he added.

Dr. Whalley was critical of the scientific approach to problems, which he claimed has narrowed the field of inquiry to, "exclude the field of artistic apprehsion and experience." In studying problems a person normally is required to call up many different and complex fields of knowledge, he commented, adding that the person must know how to acquire this understanding. The field of knowledge cannot be limited to history, psychology, philosophy or the sciences alone, he said.

Dr. Whalley also feels that calling in experts from each of these individual areas "to do their stuff" then leave, is the wrong way around the problem.

"In trying to establish a radical release and exercise of the mind, the professor must be able to get to know his students, their purposes, needs and what they want to be", he suggested and then went on to say that this would be lacking under a many-expert structuring.

A student must be able to get into a frame of mind to look at issues, according to Dr. Whalley and the materials must be avilable to induce these functions.

"How does one confront a student with material in Physics and Chemistry that induces a leap of discovery?", he asked.

Courses dealing with individual subject areas give a minute training when taken individually unless more years are tacked on, he noted in questioning the proliferation of subject areas now available in the university.

The course structure should be more like a tree, Dr. Whalley suggested. An individual should start at the roots then go out to the branches. It is toward this radical approach that a person's first year in the university community should be oriented, he claimed.

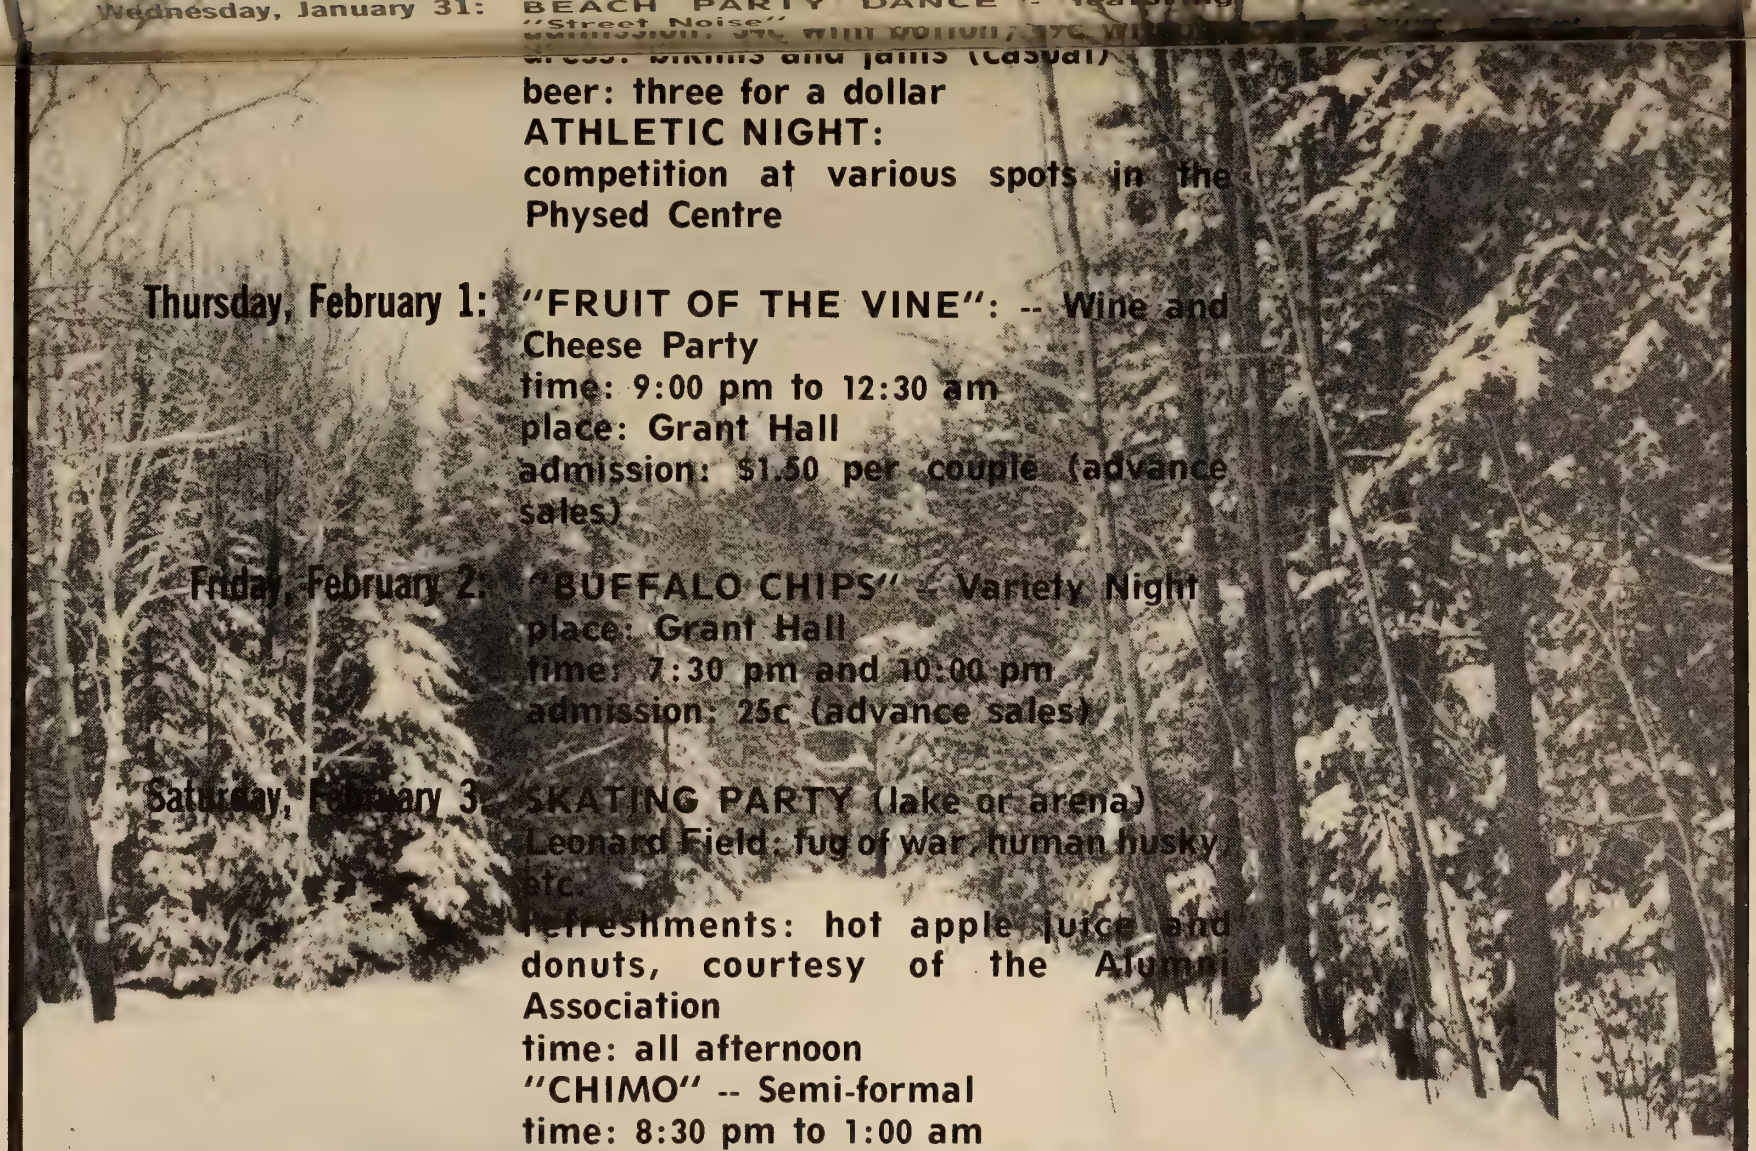
Dr. Whalley illustrated his approach with the example of a person unscrewing a light bulb.That person can easilly unscrew the bulb with instruction, he suggested, but there has been no arousal of the contemplative mind.

He noted that it is unfortunate that the interdisciplinary course proposal was introduced to SCAD the way it was and called for a reappraisal of the forms that it might take.

In its present form he feels it is far too simplicitic. Having dealt with the field of literature for many years, he stated that he has gotten used to dealing with the complex. He explained that the simple approach to a problem taken by so many courses is not always possible in the real world.

"The astonishing thing is", he admonished, "is that with the accumulation of the last 150 years, more is known about the complexities of the mind than had ever been accesible before. Yet it is vertually being ignored."

An individual should start at the roots then go out to the branches.



SNOWBALL '73

Monday, January 29: "FIDDLESTICKS" Hoedown in Wallace Hall
Time: 8:30 - Midnight
Admission: 50c with button; 75c without
Featuring; The Tommy Hunter Show's Al Cherney

Tuesday, January 30: CULTURAL NIGHT
Featuring five prominent Canadians:
George Nyckolchuk, manager of Lighthouse, Ban Righ Common room
Lars Thompson, NDP Candidate in federal election, Watson 517
James McBain, poet, existentalist, world traveler, Lower Vic
Jack Mangold, head of operations at Ontario Place, involved in the Ed Sullivan Show, Red Room
Ron Thorn, architect, Polson Room
Time: 8:00 pm to 10:00 pm

Wednesday, January 31: BEACH PARTY DANCE - featuring "Street Noise" time: 8:30 to midnight

Wednesday, January 31: BEACH PARTY DANCE - featuring "Street Noise"
admission: 50c with button; 75c without dress: bikinis and jams (casual) beer: three for a dollar
ATHLETIC NIGHT:
competition at various spots in the Physed Centre

Thursday, February 1: "FRUIT OF THE VINE": -- Wine and Cheese Party time: 9:00 pm to 12:30 am
place: Grant Hall
admission: $1.50 per couple (advance sales)

Friday, February 2: "BUFFALO CHIPS" -- Variety Night
place: Grant Hall
time: 7:30 pm and 10:00 pm
admission: 25c (advance sales)

Saturday, February 3: SKATING PARTY (lake or arena)
Leonard Field: tug of war, human husky, etc.
refreshments: hot apple juice and donuts, courtesy of the Alumni Association time: all afternoon
"CHIMO" -- Semi-formal
time: 8:30 pm to 1:00 am place: Grant and Kingston Halls
admission: $7 per couple (advance sales)
NIGHT OWL: All Night Movies main feature: Up the Down Staircase
time: 11:00 pm to 4:00 am place: Ellis Auditorium
admission: $1.00
"APRES SKI" -- featuring a live band place: Leonard Hall
time: 8:30 pm to 1:00 am admission: 50c with button; 75c without

Tickets, buttons books for sale in John Orr Room in the Union from 10:30 to 3:30 pm daily, and in Meal lines from 4:30 to 6 pm

Secolo Barocco

Lesser known works by better known composers

by Merle Bolick

Secolo Barocco, "the Baroque century", played to a delighted audience here Friday night as part of the Dunning Hall concert series. This quintet, founded in 1965, is devoted to the playing of Baroque works which, in their original instrumentation, require flute, oboe, violin, bassoon and harpsichord, or any combination thereof. The program consisted, as expected, of lesser-known works of better-known composers. What was not expected and could only be hoped for was the enthusiasm of the musicians, who managed to convey in irrepressible spirit in all the works they performed.

There were some uneasy moments in the opening minutes of the concert, during the Tafelmusik No. 2 in D minor of Telemann. These arose largely from uncertain intonation on the part of violinist Jacques-Francis Manzone, who showed himself capable, in the same number, of much more. We enjoyed his close work with oboist Jacques Chambon, and the Tutti passages with their closely and delicately observed dynamics. In short, the audience was just settling down to enjoy the work when a painful mis-reading on Mr. Manzone's part in the final movement Allegro caused more than one swift intake of breath in the small area around me. This was not repeated in the course of the performance, and seemed to have been caused by a desire to modulate when none of the other members of the group had the least intention of doing so.

Next, the Concert Royal No. 4 in E major by Couperin, a tortuous work for flute, was executed with ease by Michel Debost. It also had the advantage of displaying the talents of Joel Fernand Pontet, the young harpsichordist who replaced Guy Condette, especially in the Courante Francaise and Forlane en rondeau. It was typical of Mr. Pontet that the more technically demanding works were played with the most exactitude and feryour. He seemed capable of almost anything. In the next work, the Sonata in A minor, No. 4, by Scarlatti, this led to a bit of rushing, but never to a feeling of discomfort with the pace.

The second half of the concert began auspiciously with the Concerto in E minor, opus iv, No. 6 by Michel Corrette who, the program notes tell us, "has the dubious distinction of being one of a very few composers to write a work for four bassoons and continuo." The work is illustrative of the polyphonic art, giving us a chance to hear each member of the group at his best, and certainly drawing attention to the bassonist, Amaury Wallez in numerous well-articulated runs.

The next work, the Troisieme Concert in A major of Rameau's "Pieces de clavecin en concert", featured, along with Mr. Condet, the two founding members of Secolo Barocco, Michel Debost and Amaury Wallez. A major, I am informed, was one of Rameau's keys for expressing joy. It was truly a joy to hear the first, second and fifth movements of that work as played by musicians so obviously and joyously devoted to their chosen work.

It was this mood of exultation, in performers and audience, that carried through into the Vivaldi Concerto in D major, P201, and beyond into two encores. It has always seemed to me that a kind of triumphant feeling is necessary to carry off a Vivaldi continuo part without its becoming chunky. Mr. Wallez's playing, never obtrusive even in the most difficult multiple-tongued octave passages, and Mr. Condet's virtuosity, even perhaps the rushing we felt in the last movement contributed to the note of triumph on which the concert ended.

Rushing is a generous fault, if it is a fault at all. In the case of Secolo Barocco it seemed to stem from a desire to get on with the performance, to get to the interesting stuff and to show off - admirable motives in a performer. This group gave so much to their audience that even the propensity to accelerate may be just a bit more of a good thing. For myself I could never have too much.

Festivaldays

Tuesday, January 23

7:00 p.m. - Slot 14 - Seminar Bible Study on The Book of Habakkek with Dr. Bush. 208 Kingston Hall. Tues., Wed. and Friday.

7:00 p.m. - Spanish Club Meeting. Talk and slide presentation on modern life in Peru. Everyone welcome. Chown Hall Common Room.

7:00 p.m. - Meeting of Queen's Amateur Radio and Electronics Club. Room 454 Goodwin Hall.

7:30 p.m. - Queen's Ski Club meeting. Details about Ste. Anne Ski Trip. Films by Lange and Rossignol and Ski Care Clinic. Stirling D.

7:30 p.m. - Chronicles 16. Gragments: Murray Schisgal. Tickets are free- available at the Drama Department. Studio Theatre, Room 102, Old Arts Building.

8:00 p.m. - The Dept. of Music presents a chamber music recital of works for viola, cello, and double bass. Admission free, Dunning Hall. Music by Karl Ditters von Dittersdorf, Gioacchino Rossini, Michael Haydn. Instrumentalists in this recital are Dr. Charles Small, viola, Konrad Wolf, Cello, and David Keane, double bass.

8:30 p.m. - English Dept. Staff-Student Smoker. Beer 4-$1.00. The Pub.

8:30 p.m. The History Dept. presents Prof. J.M.S. Careless, distinguished Canadian Historian, speaking on "Urban History and Regionalism in Canada." Room 517, Watson Hall. Followed by informal discussion and coffee.

9:00 p.m. - The Dept. of Film Studies, Fellini and The Italian Cinema presents "Variety Lights." (Fellini, 1950.) Ellis Hall.

9:30 - 11:00 p.m. - Take your coffee break in Chown Common Room and meet the members of the Principal's Committee on the Status of Women. All persons welcome.

Wednesday, January 24

2:30 p.m. - The Dept. of Spanish and Italian is pleased to announce the screening of the film Don Quixote at the Hyland Theatre. Advance tickets at 50c will be available in the Department of Spanish and Italian Secretarial Office, Kingston Hall, Rm. 416. Tickets will also be sold at the theatre at 75c.

7:30 p.m. - Chronicles 16. Fragments: Murray Schisgal. Tickets free at the Drama Dept. Studio Theatre, Room 102, Old Arts Building.

7:30 p.m. - Queen's Ski Club Ticket Sales for Edelweiss Trip, Saturday,January 27. John Orr Room. $8.50.

8:00 till midnight - Arts Festival: blues, folk and classical music, art workshops and demonstrations, student films and feature films. Student's Union and Dupuis Hall.

8:00 p.m. - Jesus: The Revolutionary? Queen's Christian Fellowship with Keith Brown. Red Room.

8:00 - 11:00 p.m. - International Centre Upper Lounge For the Love of Music presents "The Music Room". Any persons who enjoy playing music and would like to share it with us are welcome to come in and do so. Here's a chance to play a properly tuned piano. Again on Friday.

Thursday, January 25

7:30 p.m. - Queen's Ski Club ticket sales for Ste Anne reading week trip. $30.00 deposit required. John Orr Room.

7:30 p.m. - Department of History presents 100 Years of Marxism. A special BBC Film Series. War or Rice? The Appeal of Communism, The End of Ideology. Everyone welcome, 50c, Stirling D.

7:30 p.m. - Chronicles 16. Gragments: Murray Schisgal. Tickets are free. Available at the Drama Dept. Studio Theatre, Room 102, Old Arts Building.

8:00 p.m. - Geography Dept. Smoker in Red Room, Kingston Hall. Beer 3-$1.00.

8:00 p.m. - midnight - Arts Festival. Blues, folk, and classical music, art workshops and demonstrations, student films and feature films. In Student's Union and Dupuis Auditorium.

9:00 p.m. - Dept. of Film Studies, American Screen Masters presents Carefree. (Mark Sandrich, 1938). Ellis Hall.

Friday, January 26

8:00 p.m. - The Music Dept. presents Lecture-Recital by Christopher Weait (bassoon), Co-Principal Bassoon, Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Accompanied by George Brough, Piano. Dunning Auditorium.

8:00 - midnight - Arts Festival. Blues, folk, classical music, art workshops and demonstrations, student films and feature films. In Student Union and Dupuis Auditorium.

8:00 p.m. - GSS Film Club presents The Shop On Main Street." Academy Award, Best Foreign Language Film. Ellis Hall.

Off Campus

Theatres

Capitol - The Revengers

Hyland - Young Winston

January 26, 27, 28 at 9:00 p.m. - "The Quiet Rebellion of Mrs. Mary Gordon" at the Domino Theatre. Tickets available at the Domino and Mahoods Drug Store. The Quiet Rebellion. ." continues the following two weekends as well.

Pubs

Commodore - The Gleasoniaires

401 Inn - The Newcomers

Manor - Julie Lynn

The Townhouse Pub - Carnival

Coming

In Concert - Richie Havens.

BIRTH CONTROL, ABORTION INFORMATION & REFERRAL SERVICE

Monday to Friday
1-9 p.m.
Saturday
1-5 p.m.

165 University Avenue
547-2806
PLEASE DROP IN

the HOUSING LOTTERY is coming!

Tomorrow, Grant Hall, 8 pm

The AMS housing waiting list will be established by lot this year. Specific houses and apartments will be assigned sometime around the beginning of March.

Here are the rules:
- No pre-registration is required (or possible)
- Entry forms will be available only at the door.
- Only one entry form per Queen's student.
- Absolutely, no proxies allowed.
- You must put your own name, address, phone number and type of accommodation desired on the form.
- The drawing of more than one entry form which has the same name will invalidate all entry forms drawn with that name.
- Please bring a pen or pencil, we will supply none.
- The draw is at 8:30 pm
- Winners must be able to present suitable Queen's ID.

We have the following houses available:
7 singles, 12 doubles, 4 triples, 3 four-persons, 3 five-persons, 11 six-persons, 7 seven-persons, and 1 eight-persons, units. Some of these will be available in the spring. The new tenants will be taken from the AMS housing waiting list.

"Theatrically speaking"...some exciting things coming!

by Sandy Naiman

Tonight, the Queen's Drama Department presents Chronicles 16, Murray Schisgal's "Fragments" directed by Christopher Miller. This opening marks the beginning of a very hectic theatrical season for Queen's and for Kingston, with a rash of tercentenniary productions and some exciting special attractions.

Friday, January 26th at the Domino Theatre, an original play by Bill Harding opens. "The Quiet Rebellion of Mrs. Mary Gordon" is a farcical play written in honour of Tercentenniary and tells about some of the wild antics of Queen's students in a local boarding house. Norma Edwards directs and the production will run Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings at 9:00 pm. For three consecutive weekends.

On Wednesday, January 31, two productions will open simultaneously. "Caucasian Chalk Circle" by Bertrolt Brecht at the McArthur College Auditorium will run through Friday February 2nd. This is the first production mounted totally by students and it is directed by John Burgess. The Queen's Musical Theatre production, "Wonderful Town" opens at the Grand Theatre on January 31st as well and runs through Saturday February 3rd. Tickets for both shows will be available at the door.

Frank Wedekind's "Death and the Devil" will run from February 1st to 4th, at the Guildhall Theatre, 233½ Princess Street. This production is directed by Gordon McCall and the cast includes Morrison Bock, and Diane Rutter. The doors open at 8:30 pm.

Tuesday and Wednesday, February 6th and 7th, a Vancouver based touring company will give a performance entitled "Manfrog" in the Studio Theatre of the Old Arts Building, at 8:30 pm. Admission is free.

And finally, for the week preceding Reading Week, the Queen's Drama Department will present its second major production of the year. William Shakespeare's "As You Like It" with an innovative interpretation by Rod Robertson, and with original music by David Keane of the Music Department. "As You Like It" runs Monday, February 12 through Saturday, February 17 at 8:30 pm in Convocation Hall. Students tickets are $1.00; General admission is $2.00.

And is you happen to be in Toronto between now and February 10th, try to see the New York Shakespeare Festival's production of "Two Gentlemen of Verona", produced by Joseph Papp and starring, Clifton Davis and Larry Kert. The music is not the greatest, but the production is absolutely astounding. The dancing has a highly improvisational look to it but it is tightly and beautifully choreographed, the costumes are gorgeous and the acting is superb.

Incidentaly this is not a touring company, but the original Brodway cast and every production element of the show, from the highly flexible sets to the frantic, playful finale is worth seeing. The entire show moves with originality and spirit.

Unfortunately, though Galt MacDermot's score (he wrote the music for Hair; is rather forgettable, and John Guare's lyrics are little and lame, but the sentiments are Shakespearean with few updatings, including an obscene telephone sequence, between Thruio and Proteus. Valentine rides a glorious gold guilded bicycle and the production rings with rock and roll and a hilarious kind of frolicsome pretense.

Conceived around the idea of the Big City, "the megalopolis that forces the kaleidoscope of races and colours and cultures to come in constant friction with one another", there is a Cuban Julia, a Black Valentine and Syliva, an American Proteus, a Yiddish Launce and a Puerto Rican Speed and a Japanese Eglamour.

The vibrance and the spontaneity of the show its colour and movement are however extremely exciting. Although the show took a few minutes to get started and although Skakespeare might turn over in his grave if he saw how little of his original script remains and although the music and lyrics are certainly not the strong points of the production its an evening of good entertainment and the O'Keefe Centre thundered with applause after the preview performance on Saturday night.

"Two Gentlemen of Verona" runs until February 10th at the O'Keefe Centre in Toronto. There are Wednesday and Saturday afternoon matinees at 2:00 pm. and performances every evening at 8:30 pm. except Sunday.

"Wax Works"

Carly Simon "No Secrets" and others

by Geoff Henning

There's no doubt in my mind that this album will be in the top 10 for 1973 and the single "You're so Vain" will be very close to the top song of the year. Carly Simon wrote and arranged most of the basic material on the album with Kirby Johnson, who arranged and conducted most of the string and horn accompaniment.

Some of the other people who contributed to background music and vocals include Mick Jagger (background vocals in "You're so Vain"), Paul and Linda McCartney and Bonnie Bramlett (background vocals in "Night Owl"), Nicky Hopkins (piano in "Waited So Long") and James Taylor (background vocal in "Waited So Long"; also he is Carly Simon's husband). Husband).

I really don't think there is a bad cut on the album but some of the ones that especially stand out are You're So Vain, THhe Right Thing To Do and When You Close Your Eyes. Close Your Eyes.

Carole King - Rhymes and Reasons

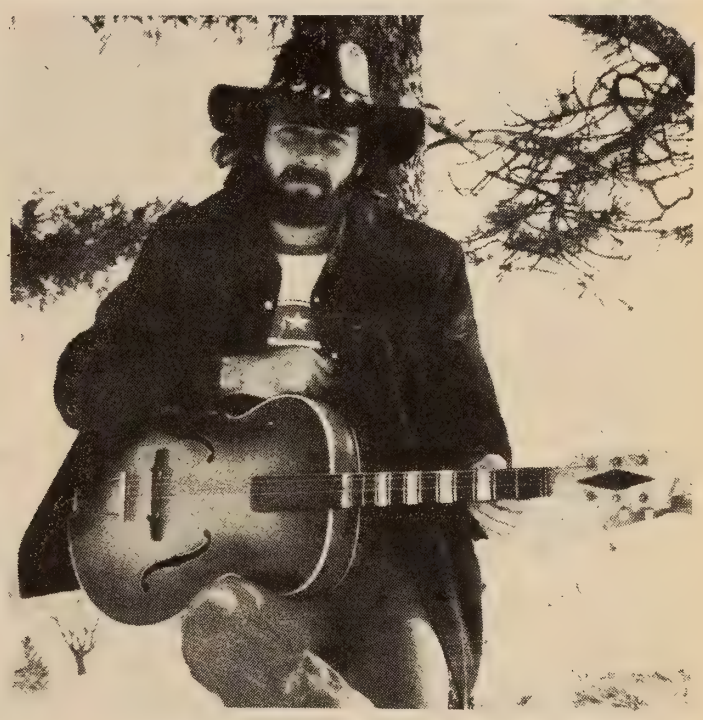
This is Carole's fourth album. Her first called Writer really never became very popular until the relase of Tapestry. (which is, indicentally the all-time best selling album). Tapestry produced many singles: It's Too Late, So Far Away, and You've Got a Friend made famous by James Taylor. Miss King received four Grammy awards basically for her work on this album.

Her third album, Music, was also very popular Songs such as Brother, Brother and Sweet Seasons seemed to be the most popular. (Sweet Seasons was the only single taken from the disc.)

However, the sales of this fourth album have not showed the success that Tapestry and Music did. It could be that once you've heard Tapestry and Music, you've also heard Rhymes and Reasons because the songs (words and music) are very similar in all three. The only good, ie. slightly different songs, are the First Day in August and Been to Canaan.

Chi Coltrane - Chi Coltrane

This is another female continuing in the Carole King - Carly Simon tradition. However each of these people have a different enough style of their own so as not to be mixed up with each other. Even though each of them do the main piano work for themselves and rely on piano as their primary background music their voices show the real difference.



Chi Coltrane's album includes the single Thunder andLightningwhich was very popular in the U.S. but never received much air time on Canadian radio stations. This single is by far the best song on the album. Some of the fairly good songs include You Were My Friend and Time To Come In.

I don't think Miss Coltrane will ever receive the recognition that Miss King and Miss Simon have already received. Perhaps it's because there are no James Taylors or Mick Jaggers on her album; just Chi Coltrane.

In these three albums we can see three different stages in three careers. Chi Coltrane is struggling to receive recognition. She has got nothing really different to contribute to this type of female vocal - piano genre buy she has a strangely pleasing voice that sets her apart from the other two.

Carly Simon is right in the middle of her success and recognition. She has the great fortune to have such a tremendously popular single and album that will make people start buying singles and albums on her name alo e (regardless of the quality of her music.)

Unfortunately Carole King may have relied on this trick too much. Even though Rhymes and Reasons is mildly successful, she will have to come up with something new and refreshing if she ever wants to receive the acclaims again like those she got for Tapestry.

Doug Steiger at the Bitter Grounds

Doug Steiger, "an up and coming underdog" will be playing at the Grounds this weekend. One of Canada's new talents this will be his first visit to Queen's. Doug has played the bar circuit in Ontario and has been well received everywhere he has played.

A good guitarist, he sings about today's world and many of his songs have a slightly plaintive and melancholy sound. He is under contract to Arpeggio and has two singles out "Is Someone Listening" and "Sweet Thing."

Come up and see Doug this weekend, Saturday and Sunday nights, January 27 and 28, 8 - 12 pm, 2nd floor of the Union.

classified

WANTED FOR '73-'74, starting May 1, '73 a two-bedroom apartment for young couple at reasonable cost. Preferably close to campus and KGH. Please call 546-6832 or 544-0697.

AVAILABLE: a double room in coed Morris (for a male preferably) and a single room in Victoria Hall. Phone 544-7848.

NEEDED INTERESTED PERSON TO continue Children's Playgroup in the mornings. Phone 544-4117.

THREE GIRLS ARE INTERESTED IN LIVING NEXT YEAR in a co-ed house with three guys. We supply the house. 544-0207.

LOST: Silver Shaeffer Fountain Pen. Thursday January 11 Ellis Auditorium 544-3280 or Journal Office.

BETTY (or TALBOT) Happy Birthday. You still look like the bear on the wall. Love from 264 and the News Desk.

SOMEONE from the Kraft Boycott Committee please phone Bob, 544-5860.

PASSPORT or identification pictures from Photo Image cost only $5.00 for six prints. We guarantee quick service. Call 546-7770 or visit our Gallery at 33 Brock St.

unclassified

SLIDE SHOW ON PERU — come to Liberation Study Group meeting. Wednesday, January 24, 9 p.m. Downstairs in the International Centre.

DEAR DI and DONNA: We will be there. GUESS WHO.

FESTIVAL 73 WORKSHOPS Setting up workshops and important meeting for workers in batik macrame. Tonight at 7:30 in the Polson Room, Union. Please come, or phone Carol Rogers at 544-9196.

SPECIAL MEETING to find a PIG for the LADY in the Pub all this week.

TWO STUDENTS are seeking passage to the sunny south during reading week. Will share driving etc. Call Jim or Larry at 548-7194.

What is this FEE WITHHOLDING all about? Wanna know, have some ideas, don't understand? Come to the John Orr Room (in the Union) daily from 10:30 - 3:30 and find out.

SUE — we warn you in advance to please show up on Wednesday press nights for the next two weeks. You never know what might happen at them . . . or what you might miss.

DEAR UNCLE BOB: are you still looking for a Tricolor?

SCOOP sez . . . and you thought today was bad. Wait til Friday. He'll blast it wide open.

DON KRESTEL AND VICKY WILGRESS request the pleasure of Gael Group 81 to the pub on Wednesday night, January 24, at 8 p.m. Regrets refused. Gael Group 81 is still alive!

DEAR ANN TALBOT, Have a very happy birthday. Love, Mooch.

GET A VIEW OF KINGSTON from the roof of Elrond. Come on a tour during open house: Wed., January 24 to Saturday, January 27. 6:30 p.m. till ? All day Saturday.

QUEEN'S SKI CLUB GENERAL MEETING tonight 7:30 Stirling "D". Details about the Ste. Anne trip, films by Lange and Rossignol, and Ski Care Clinic.

QUEEN'S SKI CLUB TICKET SALES: 1. Wednesday January 24, 7:30 John Orr Room for Edelweiss Trip (Saturday, Jan. 27) Price $8.50. 2. Thursday January 25, 7:30 John Orr Room for Ste. Anne Reading Week trip - $30, deposit required.

BEEFS? COMPLAINTS? WORRIES . . . All Open House '73 department organizers meet tonight, 7:30 p.m. Jeffery 225. Come and iron out problems with the Open House Committee.

THE WORD IS . . . Open House '73 is only three weeks away. Hosts, guides, volunteers needed. Call 544-2157.

A CASUAL PORTRAIT by photo Image is the ideal gift for Valentine's Day. Our black and white package rates start at less than $15.00. Call 546-7770 or visit us at 33 Brock Street.

8 TRACK TAPES FOR SALE. Used but in absolute mint condition. Titles include Harvest-Neil Young; Lee Michaels, 5th; Janis Joplin, Pearl; After the Goldrush-Neil Young; Faces - A Nod is as Good as a Wink to a Blind Horse; Fillmore, The Last Days Part One; Sweet Baby James - James Taylor; Yes-Fragile; Santana-Abraxas; Every Picture Tells a Story-Rod Stewart; Carl King - Tapestry; Elton John - Tumbleweed Connection; $3.50 each. Double tapes include Live Steppen-wolf; Woodstock Two; Chicago no. 1,2,3; George Harrison - All Things Must Pass; The Association - Live; $5.00 each. Call 549-2028 any evening around 6 p.m.

WANTED 1 MALE OR FEMALE to rent half of a two bedroom apartment. $80 per month, utilities included. Phone 544-1964.

EXTRA ROOM IN YOUR HOUSE or apartment? Girl looking for a place to stay immediately. Call Pat after 5 p.m. at 544-8096.

DO YOU WANT A HOUSE FOR FIVE? We'll trade if you find us a good 3- or 4-bedroom house or flat. Call 544-1708.

WOULD THE QUEEN'S STUDENT WHO witnessed a boy being beaten up at Brock and Division street at 10 p.m. on about Dec. 14 please phone Greg. AMS 544-1442.

PHILLIPS CASSETTE RECORDER, microphone, earphone, with batteries and adaptor, including 7 Phillips C-120 tapes. $50.00. Also one General Electric Curling Iron. $8.00. Call Bev at 544 3364.

The ad below is DEAD SERIOUS and we mean it.

CANDIDATES running for office in the February elections. If it is for AMS pres., you must have your campaign statements (you get an amount of free space) to the Journal office by the evening of Tuesday, January 30. If for faculty office (you too get space), you must bring your statement (and yourself for a picture) between 7 and 11 p.m. on Thursday, February 1.

DEAR ID (or perhaps IDS) — your drinks await . . . but not long.

ACAPULCO FOR $199.00 (8 days) Departures every SUNDAY in Feb. (Study Weeks) from Toronto, includes jet transport, accommodation (doubles), parties, discos. Contact AOSC 44 St. George St., Toronto 5. 416-962-8404 or your Student Council.

Want to be on the Elrond College Board of Directors?

Applications for the positions of AMS appointees to the board will be accepted until Wednesday, January 24 at the AMS Office in the Union.

SKI

MONT STE. ANNE

READING WEEK (FEB. 18-23)

●DETAILS AT QUEEN'S SKI CLUB GENERAL MEETING TONIGHT -7:30 STIRLING"D"

●$95.00 - BUS-TOWS -FOOD-ACCOMOD·

●$30.00 DEPOSIT REQUIRED THUR. JAN. 25 7:30 JOHN ORR ROOM

ALSO TICKET SALES for EDELWEISS TRIP (SAT. JAN.27) 7:30 WED. JAN. 24 - JOHN ORR ROOM -$8.50

Queen's University Music Department

MUSIC FOR: VIOLA CELLO DOUBLE-BASS

Charles Small, viola
Konrad Wolf, cello
David Keane, double-bass

FREE

Dunning Auditorium
8 p.m.
Tues., Jan. 23rd

ASUS ELECTION

Nominations are now being received for the following ASUS positions

- ☐ President and vice-president (team)
- ☐ Secretary
- ☐ Treasurer
- ☐ Senator (Two-Year term)
- ☐ Senator (One-year term)
- ☐ Nine (9) AMS Representatives at Large

Nominations must include acceptance by the candidate, name and address and the supporting signatures of 25 ASUS members with their years. Nominations must be handed in to the AMS office by 5 pm, Wednesday, January 31. The election will be held the following week.

Need information? Contact Doug Donald at 544-0657

AOSC

ASSOCIATION OF STUDENT COUNCILS
44 ST. GEORGE, TORONTO 5, 962-8404

Acapulco Mexico '73

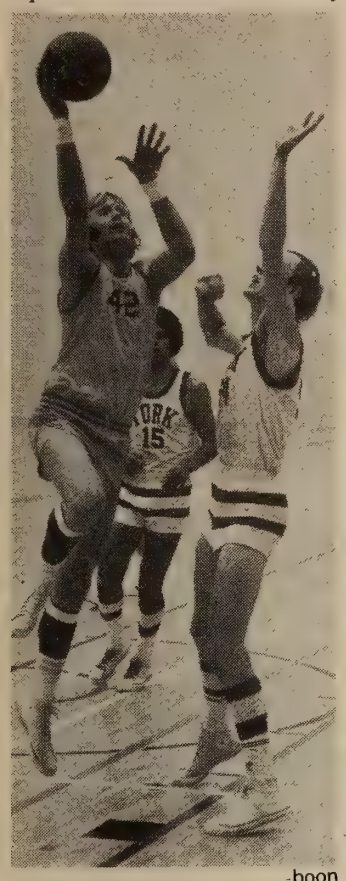
Study week flights $199.00

Dates: Feb. 4-11; Feb. 11-18; Feb. 18-25; Feb. 25 - Mar. 4

YOUR FARE INCLUDES:

- 1st class travel by Trans International Jet featuring complimentary meals and bar
- 1st class accomodation (double occupancy) Delmonte Hotel Acapulco
- Transfers between arrival airport and hotel
- Welcome cocktail party (2nd day)
- Farewell cocktail party (7th day)
- Free admission to two top Discotheques (Normal charge $2.50 per head)

★ For all prices add $10.00 Hotel Service Charge.



Applications available in the AMS office, Union

Want to Exhibit Your photos, Arts, crafts, etc. at Festival
(Jan. 24-27)
We need contributors. Don't be shy. Phone and bring them to Jane Wicks at 24 Barrie (544-3280) or Carol Rogers at 128 Earl (544-1737 or 544-9196). The Deadline is January 23.

B-Ball Gaels: backs to the wall

by Chris Boon

The basketball Gaels have their collective back to the wall. Queen's dropped both ends of their Toronto road swing this weekend, losing 76-69 to York Friday, then allowing Varsity to squeak out a 80-79 victory Saturday evening. Both games were heartbreaking to watch.

- boon

Paul Howard hooks for two over Bob Weppler

The York game was decided in the first five minutes. The Gaels came out flat, or at least played that way, and York, who were shooting phenomanally well from the outside, ran up a 13-0 lead. The Gaels never really got untracked until midway through the second period, and trailed by as many as 22 points, before closing the gap to 16 at half-time, 47-31.

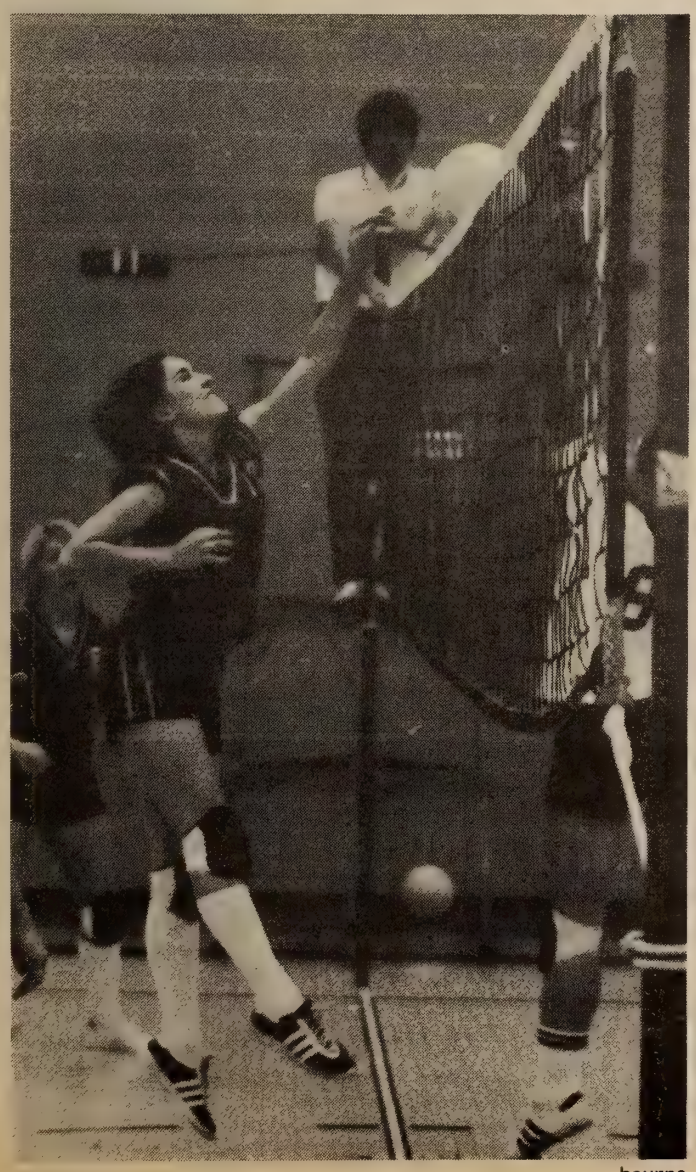
Something happened in the locker room at half-time - something that got the Gaels fired up. They came out running, hustled on defense, worked hard on offense. And, led by guard Rob Smart, who finished with 22 points, and the shot-blocking heroics (ten in about 15 minutes) of centreman Paul Howard, the Gaels stormed back. With less than two minutes to go, they had cut the Yeoman's lead to 4, 68-64, on some clutch hoops by Norm Hagarty and Derek Swinnard. It was too little, too late, though, and some intentional fouls in the dying seconds left the Gaels on the wrong end of the 76-69 final. Swinnard, Hagarty and Howard all added 11 points to Smart's game-high output, while Corky McLeery, making his first league start, pulled down 7 rebounds to lead Queen's in that department and hooped 4 points. Guard John Keck had six points and five rebounds.

For the Yeomen, who shot 53 per cent for the game, after hitting at a 66 per cent clip in the first half, Bob Weppler had 18 points and 16 rebounds, while Mike Spence added 12 points, Vince Santero 10, with 11 rebounds, and Alex Simbrin 11 points.

The game was marred, as Toronto basketball games so often are, by some abysmal refereeing. Queen's players had several offensive fouls that were imagination specials on the part of the officials while a lot of blatant roughness went, apparently, unnoticed. The Varsity game was better in that the refs were consistent, but even there, they choked out at the very end.

The Toronto contest was a mirror image of the York adventure. Queen's came out running, and opened up a 10 point lead in the first half. However, people seemed very inclined to take a vacation shortly thereafter and the Blues came back to tie the score, mostly on "garbage" hoops at 36-all after the first 20 minutes of play. The Gaels' biggest problem was some abysmally cold shooting.Most of their second-quarter points came on foul shots.

The last half was a real ulcer-builder. Varsity went out in front, and led by as many as eight points at various times during the third and early fourth quarters, but the slashing drives of Rob Smart and improved shooting by Paul Howard and Norm Hagarty closed the gap to three points. Howard fouled out; and a drive down the key gave Derek Swinnard two points on foul shots. The Gaels trailed by one, 80-79, with seconds left. Varsity threw the ball in, moved it over centre - and Queen's Bruce Hemming came up with it. Time out, Seven seconds left. The ball came in to Smart, who moved up court, was fouled, shot, was fouled, and the game was over. Like I said, the refs sort of choked at the end.



Even so, Queen's gave the game away, by going to sleep on defense in the first half, by going 27 of 46 from the foul line during the game, and by letting Toronto players who were in foul trouble off the hook. Rob Smart had 26 points for Queen's, while Howard, who seems to be out of his early slump, hit 19 points and pulled down 15 rebounds. Norm Hagarty added 17 points, and 11 boards, John Keck chipped in with 8 points, and Derek Swinnard, who saw very limited action, added four. Bruce Hemming had three points and seven rebounds, and McLeery pulled down five rebounds.

- boon

Rob Smart drives . . . .and drives . . . and drives

The Gaels are now faced with the considerable task of winning their remaining games, if they are to have any hope of a playoff berth. They'll have to start tonight, when they take on the Ottawa U Gee-Gees, a big, strong team that gave Queen's some trouble last year. Come out and support them. Game time is 7:00 p.m., and a good noisy crowd would be welcome.

- bourns

Intermediates

V-B Gals knocked out of 1st

by Maryann Purdy

The Intermediate girl's volleyball team was knocked out of first place this weekend in their second match of playing at Queen's this Saturday.

The first set of games against Trent Saturday morning was an easy win with the Gals taking the match in three games straight . .The consistently hard serves of Rhonda Rumley, who served fourteen points straight in the first game, was too much for the unorganized Trent players. In the second and third games the second string was put into action, and they had little difficulty in defeating the opposition. Team captain Judy Bierma held the team together and resulted in a co-operative victory.

The second set of games had Queen's more evenly matched against the University of Toronto team, and unfortunately our girls did not come out on top. This match marked the first loss of the season for the Gals.

Toronto won the first game due to their difficult serving delivered to the Queen's players. The Gals were unable to effectively set the ball up and return these serves. The second game Queen's won soundly, with a score of 15-3. Putting the ball far back on the court by Queen's seemed to baffle the U. of T. players, who seemed to be unable to play together in this game. Dorothy Cosgrove played well for Queen's, with hard spikes and effective serving. However, U. of T. pulled together for the third and fourth games, defeating Queen's and putting them in second place behind U. of T. by only one point.

Next game for the Gals is this Saturday at 2:00 pm against Ryerson.

- bourns

Gail McLeod leads hockey team to 4-2 win

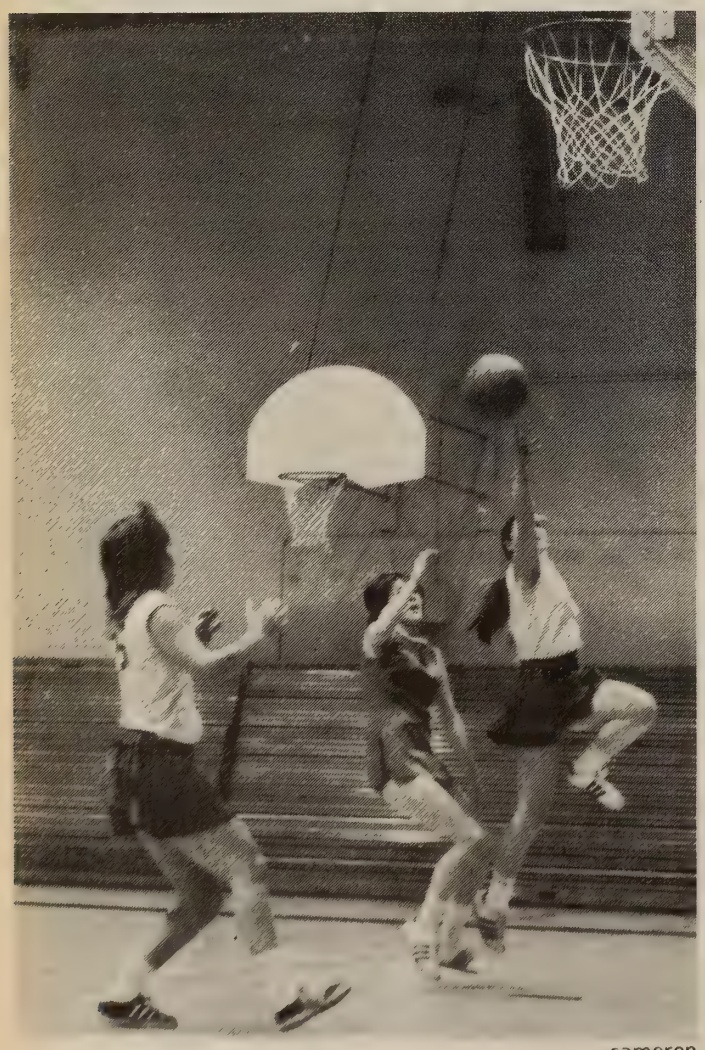
by Nada Bogdanovic

The Golden Gals chalked up another victory this weekend in OWIAA hockey play, here against McGill University. It was Queen's game all the way in the 4-2 victory with Gail McLeod potting two of the goals and Ginnie Backus and Leslie Ferrari each contributing single markers.

McGill demonstrated their prowess in quick line rushes, but Queen's goalie Wanda Gyde proved she was capable of handling McGill's best. Kathy Wright took over goaltending duties in the third period and also played a fine game. The line of Gail McLeod, Leslie Ferrari and Liz Wood played well, netting 3 of the 4 goals for Queen's. Although the Gals had a bit of difficulty extracting the puck from their own end, they managed to keep their lead throughout the game. McGill took every advantage they had and doled out solid body checks to the Gals. This resulted in a rather 'chippy' game and numerous penalties to both teams.

The Gals have a heavy schedule next weekend playing against Western on Friday and Guelph on Saturday.

clark

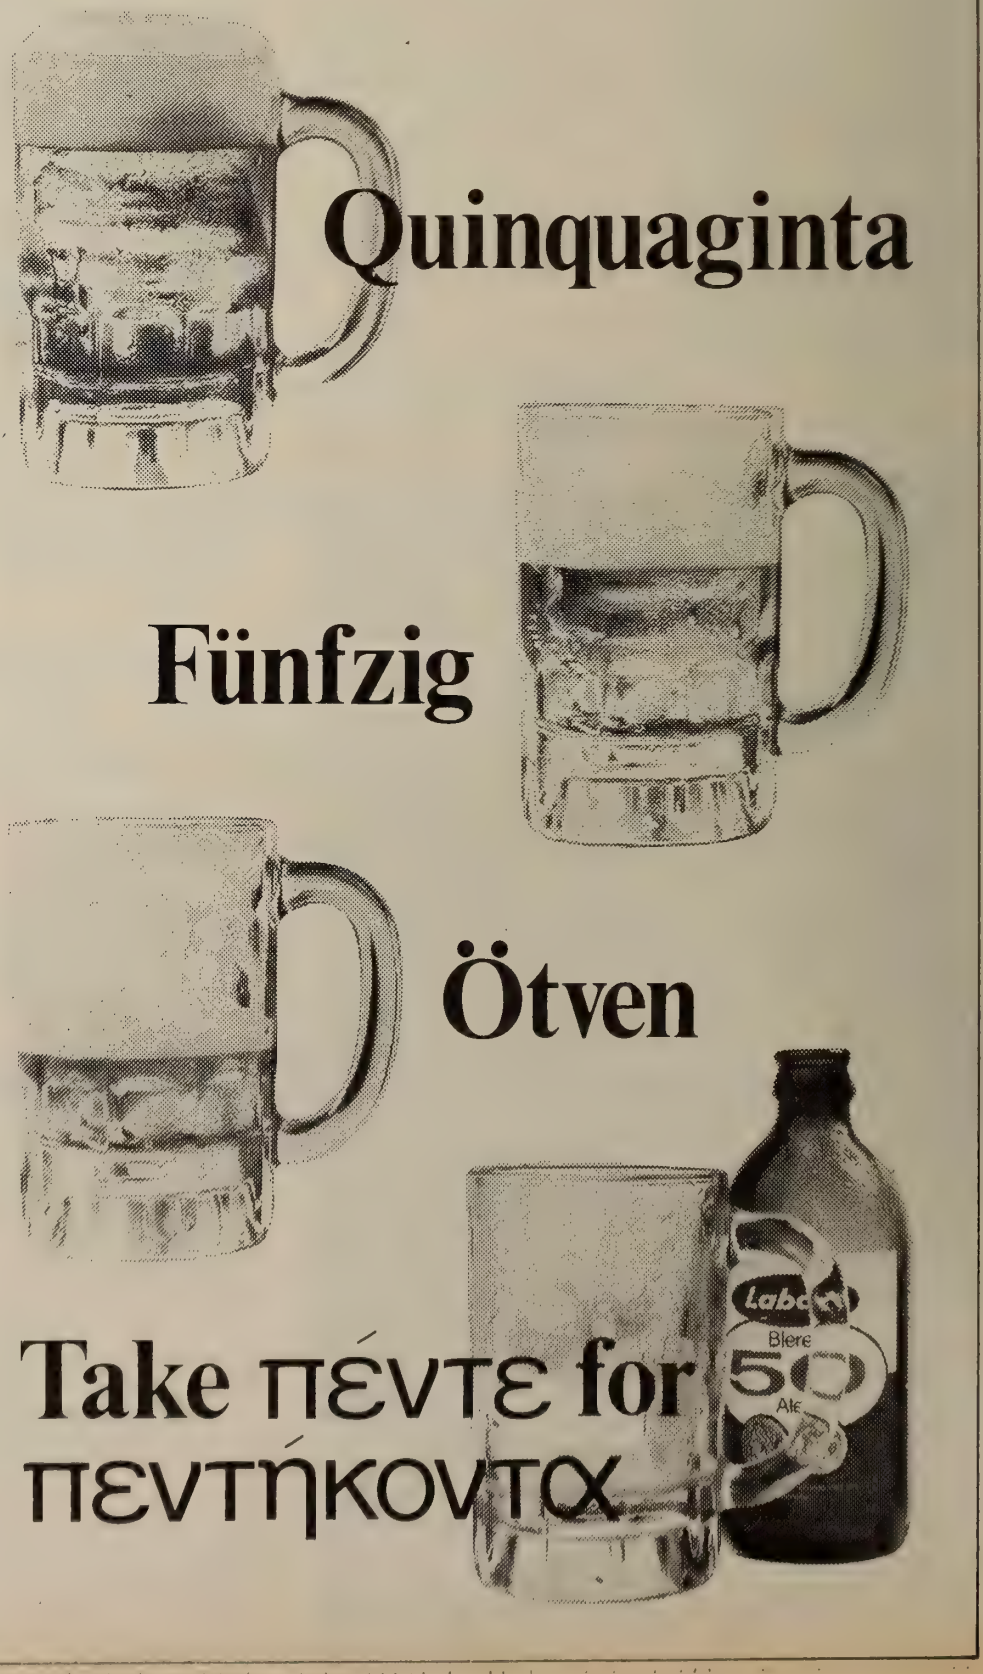


Intermediate:

B-Ball Gals chalk up two

by Mary Anne Purdy

The weekend proved to be victorious for the intermediate basketball Gals as they chalked up two wins against U. of T. and Trent University.



The first game against Trent Saturday morning was slow in starting, and this showed in the low halftime score of 16-14 for Queen's. The team seemed to be unorganized, and this was evident in inaccurate shots and poor rebounding. However, the second half was a different ball game with the Gals swiftly pulling away from their opponents to finish with a winning score of 44-28. This change in play was due to the fact that they simply began to run and to utilize their fast break. High percentage shots were taken, most of which were attributed to Jenny Bagnall, who netted 14 points, and Jarmela Smola putting in 12 points with her tricky hook shot.

cameron

The second game against U. of T. was almost a repeat of the morning performance. Again, a low halftime score of 17-15 for the Gals was due to the poor shooting and rebounding. The U. of T. team was very aggressive, forcing the Gals to take hurried shots. During the second half the opposition put a press defence on Queen's in an attempt to slow them down. But this did not stop our girls from ending ahead with a score of 42-34. 22 of these points were earned by Jarmela Smola, who managed to get quite a number of foul shots, as well as key shots in. Substitution was quite regular during the second half of both games.

The Gals have managed to win 100 per cent of their games this year. Next game will be This Saturday at Queen's at 2:00 against Ryerson.

Pool Gaels on move in dual meets

Queen's swimmers and divers gave a strong University of Waterloo team some surprises last Friday night in a dual meet with the Warriors. Although the final score was in favour of Waterloo, the Gaels didn't make it easy for them.

A come-from-behind performance by Warren, Penner, Pearson, and Patterson, allowed Queen's to take an early lead with a win in the 400 medley relay. This seemed to give added incentive to the Gaels, as rookie John Ireland broke his own team record by a full 20 seconds (11:20.3) in the 1000 yard freestyle, and Jim Easto placed third while improving 55 seconds to establish a personal best time in this event.

The 200 freestyle saw John Ker miss first place by a narrow margin with Ker establishing a personal best in the 200 yard freestyle and adding second place points

Sprinters Patterson, Rowan and Penner finished third, fourth and fifth in the 50-yard freestyle with less than half a second difference between the first and third place times.

Rookie John Pearson helped Queen's to another first by swimming a personal best in the 200 yard individual medley, while Rob Herman added third place points with his best time this season and George Craig wrapped up fourth.

After this event, only one point separated the two teams.

Divers Millerd and Kirkpatrick took second and third to Waterloo's Newby after a high-point battle in the one metre event.

The butterfly saw John Pearson break his own team record for the fourth consecutive time, easily winning over Warrior swimmers by almost a length of the pool.

Waterloo outsprinted Queen's in the 100 freestyle but it wasn't from lack of effort that team captain Steve Patterson placed third, swimming to a personal lifetime best.

John Ireland increased Queen's total as he copied his teammates earlier attempts as he broke his newly established 500 freestyle record by 10 seconds.

Although Waterloo thought it had the meet wrapped up, the Gaels gave them real cause for concern in the next two events as rookie Darryl Penner and Jamie Noakes outswam Waterloo's 200 yard breaststroker to take first and second on the last length of this event.

Gaels' divers Bill Kirkpatrick and Tom Caswell took first and third place in the 3 metre diving event, bringing the Gaels even closer to Waterloo. The divers came up with a fine performance, beating Waterloo's Newby substantially as Kirkpatrick came up with a personal-best total.

A strong Waterloo relay team outswam the Gaels to win the meet and the last relay. Waterloo's larger team and greater depth kept the small Queen's team from winning the meet.

Saturday had a different story, though, as a tired Gaels team travelled overnight to New York to compete against Oswego Lakers.

Any thought of fatigue was soon forgotten as the Gaels came from behind again to win the 400 medley relay event in their best time this year. Penner, Pearson and Patterson swam fantastic catch up races to erase Oswego's smiles as Queen's touched in first place.

Freestyler Ireland immediately took the hint and boosted the point total by winning the 1000 freestyle by a wide margin. John Ker swam for second place in the 200 free and established another personal best in the same event.

Captain Steve Patterson established a personal best in the 50 closing fast on the team record with Penner and Rowan in close pursuit.

John Pearson won the 200 individual medley for the second day in a row and Rob Herman took second dropping his time for another best of the season.

Phil Millerd grudgingly took second in the one metre diving, keeping Queen's leading in total meet points.

Using the diving as a rest, Pearson swam the 200 fly, winning again and joined this time by John Ireland, who swam his personal best. Rob Herman picked up second place in the 100 freestyle lowering this season's time and Bryan Warren took 3rd in the 200 back just missing second by a touch.

Oswego was gaining on Queen's at this point, but after only two events rest Ireland boosted Queen's ahead with a first in the 500 free. Teammate John Ker joined him swimming from last place to outtouch Oswego for second. Jim Easto took fourth with his 3rd personal best time in two days.

Penner and Noakes took third and fourth in the breast stroke, against strong Oswego swimmers, both repeating personal best times for the second day in a row.

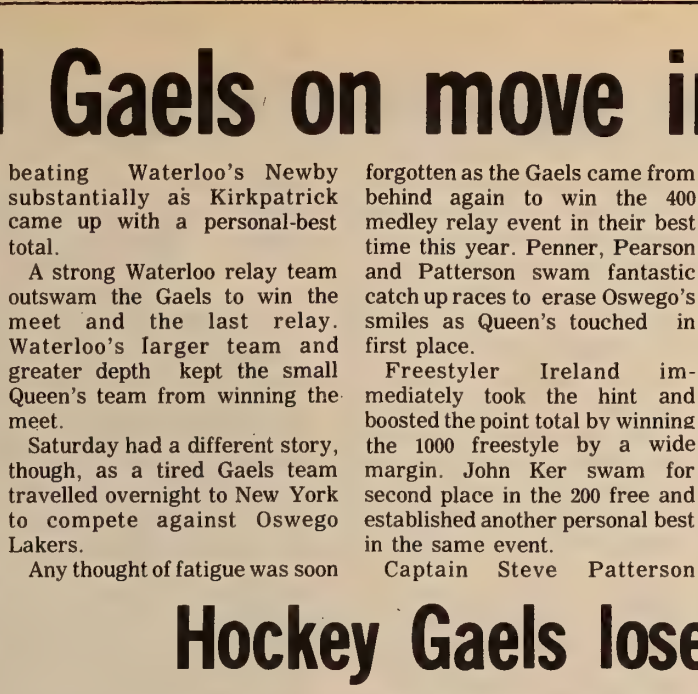
Tension really began to build as both teams knew that the meet's outcome depended on the last two events, the 3 metre diving and 400 yard freestyle relay.

Queen's needed a difficult first and third against Oswego in the diving to wrap up the meet. Kirkpatrick and Caswell both dove well but when the point totals were announced Kirkpatrick was second and Queen's had to win the last relay to win the meet.

The score at this point was Queen's 54- Oswego 52. The points on relays are all or nothing (7-0). Both teams were on their feet as the swimmers lined up for the relay event. Going into the 3rd leg of the relay both teams were still tied but veteran Rob Herman was the "clutch" performer as he put in a great race to outswim Oswego's third man. Anchorman Steve Patterson kept the lead all the way and won by holding off a strong bid by Oswego on the last length.

Final score Queen's 61- Oswego 52.

Queen's hosts the powerful Plattsburg team from New York this coming weekend, Saturday, January 27, 7:00 p.m. in the Queen's pool.



Hockey Gaels lose twice

by Peter Watts

Hopes for a berth in the hockey playoffs this year took a real nose-dive on the past weekend as the Queen's Golden Gaels lost both games on a western road trip. On Friday night, the Gaels lost 6-0 to the defending CIAU national champions, the University of Toronto Blues. The Blues came out flying from the opening face-off and the Gaels had to work to stay close all evening. But for the play of goaltender Clyde Harris, Toronto would have had at least another half dozen goals. The Camel was little short of spectacular as he faced a barrage of 59 shots. Goalie Gary Inness of the Blues faced only 25 in the Toronto goal.

Bill Buba and Bob Monro led the Blues attack with 2 goals apiece. Warren Anderson and Bruce Herridge got the others.

Friday night's game was the first real chance I have had this year to actually watch a Gaels game and I was somewhat disappointed by their performance. One cannot help but be impressed by the Blues calibre of play; they are truly one of the finest amateur hockey teams in Canada. Despite losing ten members of last year's championship team, the Blues are a cinch to be in the finals again this year. They can all skate and pass and shoot and at times on Friday night the game looked like more than a good practice.

- mossman

The Gaels for their part appeared to be in awe of the opposition from the start of the game. Only Harris and the White brothers, Ron and Bill, looked like they were in the game. Even the normally reliable Jim Sunstrum and Colin Loudon did not have good games. Unfortunately no one else was able to take up the slack.

On Saturday afternoon it was little better. Goals by Bob Grisdale with 2 and Kim Miles and Doug Weaver ensured a victory for the University of Guelph and solidified their hold on third place in the west division of the OUAA. Dave Hadden and John Cerre got the Queen's goals, both of them unassisted which seemed to be significant in the light of how the Gaels played. There was little evidence of team play. On several occasions coach Bob Carnegie could have thrown a large paper bag around his ice troops. Positional play was, in a word, terrible. The result: The Gaels are solidly entrenched in fifth place losing ground on a surprising Ottawa hockey club which solidified its hold on fourth place with a victory over Waterloo this weekend.

Under the circumstances, one begins to wonder whether or not anything can be done about this years hockey Gaels. The loss of John Smith will be costly -- there is no question about that. Smith will be discharged from the hospital this week but will see no further action this year. Mike Lynch played right wing on the weekend and he was one of the few bright lights. Personally, I think that Colin Loudon should be playing centre, not left wing. He should be reunited with Jim Sunstrum immediately. The problem is that we have about seven guys who can play centre but no one who can play the wing. Until we find some guys who can go into the corner and come out with the puck, we can start thinking about next year.

Tonight the Gaels go to Ottawa for a rematch with the Red Ravens. A couple of spectator buses are going to the game. Tickets are available through the Queen's Excursion Club; the cost is $5 and includes bus and tickets into the game. Perhaps a little fan support will help the team. It was certainly nice to see some Queen's supporters in Toronto and Guelph on the weekend. It might inspire the team to put out a little more effort than they've been doing.

Wrestlers 3rd at Waterloo

Queen's Golden Gaels wrestling team came third in a 3-team meet at the University of Waterloo on Friday night. The Gaels finished with 27½ points to 32½ for Waterloo. Lakehead University of Thunder Bay finished in first place with 46 points.

The big bout between Egan Beiller of Waterloo and Rob Beamish of Queen's turned out badly for Beamish who again lost on points to the Waterloo wrestler. In the 158 pound class, Mike Dwhytie lost a tough battle to Don Roy of Lakehead. Al Stewart of Queen's won his match over Roger Price of Lakehead in the 126 pound class.

Saturday saw the Gaels run into some stiff competition from Oswego State College. Ritt College finished second while Queen's and Kings College of Wooksbury, Pennsylvania finished in a tie for third spot. The Gaels lost Dwhytie in his first match of the day when he suffered a separated shoulder. It is not known how long he will be out of action. Peter Verhoeven put on a strong display on Saturday winning his first two matches on pins but losing on points to a wrestler from Oswego.

Despite the loss, coach John Albinson was fairly well satisfied with the performance of the team. About four years ago, Queen's went to Oswego and were soundly defeated in the opening rounds of their matches. The much stronger showing by the Queen's team this time shows again that Canadian intercollegiate wrestling is indeed becoming much more competitive.

Next week, the Gaels are in Guelph for an invitational meet hosted by the Gryphons.

classified

TWO LITTLE WAIFS-TO-BE WOULD like a two bedroom apartment for next year. Residence has driven us to desperation. If you can help call after 6, 544-8015 or 544-8086.

EIGHT BEDROOM HOUSE FOR RENT near campus on Albert Street. Available March 1. Lease required $450 a month. Bookshelves in every room. The house is clean. 542-5964.

LOST: ONE SMALL SILVER RING with a gold Queen's crest on it Jan. 16th. Of great sentimental value; $5 reward. Call Linda, 544-6833.

ONE OR TWO FRIENDS WANTED IMMEDIATELY to share a house very close to campus for the rest of term. House fully furnished; bedroom furnished or unfurnished. Marlene Creates and Jan Beath. 542-5061.

FOUND GLASS CASE AND SPECTACLES. Wednesday night near Johnson on Albert St. "Griswold Detroit" on glass case. Phone 546-5619.

ALL 7-UP LOVERS - Ann, Benita, Bruce, Carl, Carol, Carla, Janice, Kendra, Paul, Peter, Phil, Sharon, Sue. A., Sue M., Uve, Wendy (and Scott, wherever you are?). You have not been forgotten. Check your mailboxes this week. Fizz! Jeff and Court.

WANTED: I WOULD LIKE TO BUY A REASONABLY priced dissecting or monocular microscope (used) for a budding 7 year old scientist. Please call K.M. Brodie, 547-5885 during the day or 389-0995 in the evening.

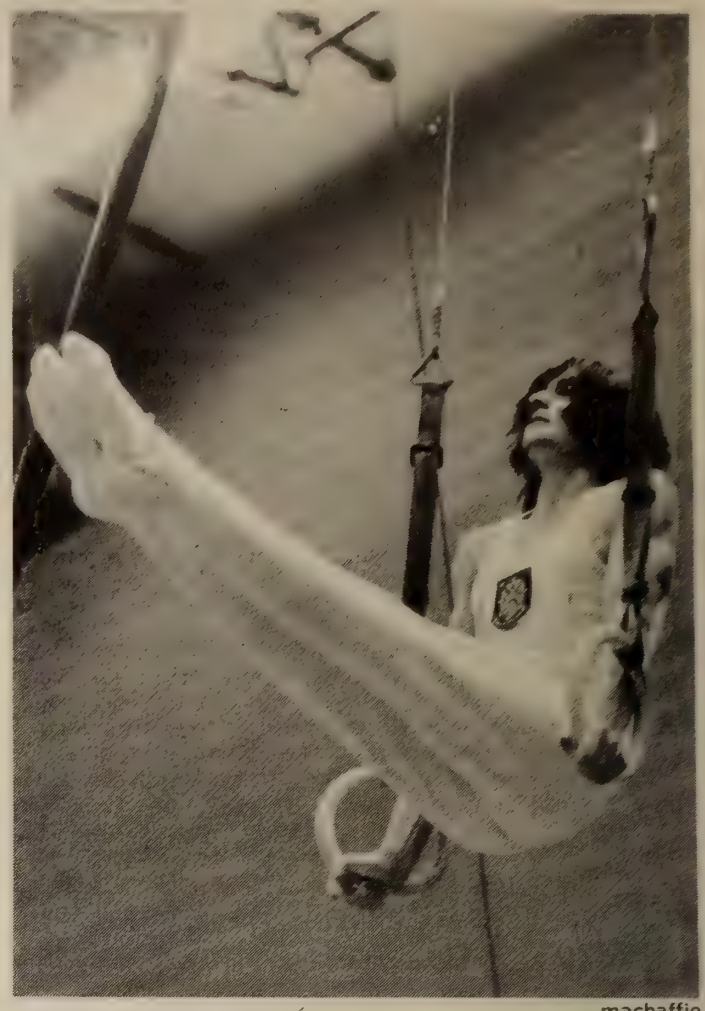
WANTED TO BUY: Used Lynol Train and Mechano Sets, in working order. Phone 544-5547. After 5 p.m.

A very tight race . . .

Queen's gymnast tops....but but York wins team title

by Chris Woods

In a hard-fought contest in the Bartlett Gymnasium on Saturday, the Queen's man's gymnastics team came off a brilliant second best. Confronting Canadian university champion, York University, at the annual Queen's Invitational competition, the Gym Gaels forfeited the meet as a team on Horizontal Bar and Still Rings, in which they gave up 1.66 and 1.45 points respectively. But on the winners' stand, the Gaels came out on top, copping first, third, and fifth spots while holding the York team to a second place spot for Dave Hunter.



As a team, Queen's conceded .36 points to York in Floor Exercise, which could be considered an upset of sorts, although most of the margin here can probably be attributed to the fact that veteran Dave Ross had some difficulty during his performance. The Queen's team showed its polish, however, in the Parallel Bars and Side Horse events, which it won handily with one-point margins. Finally, the Vaulting event, which is generally acknowledged to be the Gaels' key weakness, was a complete surprise, for although they placed third as a team in the event, they only trailed first-place York by .35 points.

The Queen's team's strength is obviously in its very competent and consistent all-around individual performances. While the York team managed to accumulate team points on the basis of excellent specialist performances on various apparatus, the Queen's team displayed much greater versatility in all events, and thereby managed to accumulate a considerable number of gold medals. Not the least among the Gaels' strengths was veteran Dave Ross who, although he only returned from Chile one day prior to the meet, turned in a very creditable score of 38.00, placing fifth in the individual all-around standings. One should expect a forty-plus score from this competitor in the near future.

But by far the best performance of the day was turned in by Queen's Drew Strickland, a third-year Biochemistry major who is swiftly gaining a reputation for his spectacular routines. Strickland, a member of last year's Ontario Junior team to the national championships, took first spot in Parallel Bars and Side Horse with scores of 8.90 and 7.15. He also accumulated a second place ribbon in Vaulting and thirds in Floor Exercise, Still Rings, and Horizontal Bar. With 47.18 points overall, he took the individual all-around trophy, to the delighted cheers of a Queen's crowd of about two hundred and fifty.

Not to be ignored was the performance of Jamie Archibald, the Queen's team captain, who placed third all-around, and in the process managed to take second spot in the Floor Exercise event, thus fulfilling one of his lifelong ambitions -- to beat Strickland.

With that record in the Queen's Invitational, the Gaels obviously still have a good chance to win the OUAA Championship. Coach Barry Brooker obviously thinks so, for he decided to defer any comments to the press until February 24th -- at his OUAA victory celebration where, incidentally, he hopes to collect a few wagers. With the return of Delio Tortosa, who was unfortunately too sick to compete on Saturday, and a lot of hard work, especially by the team rookies and Alex McLaren, the Gaels could break into the big time on February 24th. In the meantime, they run a downhill course until the OUAA Eastern semi-finals on February 10th. Next weekend they meetU. of Ottawa in an away competition, and since Ottawa trailed them by 35 points in the latest meet, I can make my first confident prediction of the year: Queen's will win.

- machaffie

Drew Strickland holds an L-seat on Still Rings

Track Men impressive

An impressive performance was turned in by Rolf Lund's track and field Gaels last Saturday at Cornell University in Ithaca, New York. It was easily the most competitive field that Queen's performers have been pitted against this year. Teams from Penn State, Colgate, East Carolina, Syracuse, Bucknell, and Cornell also took part.

In individual performances, Axel Becke finished fourth in the final with a leap of 21 feet 2¼ inches. Keith Berriman was first in his section in the 600 yard run. Ralph Yarnell was third in his section in the 880. Dave Jarvis was second in the 440 with a time of 51.2 seconds. Jarvis also won the 60 yard high hurdles and tied a meet record with a time of 716 seconds. Hugh Fraser won the 60 yard dash with a time 6.4 seconds and tied a meet record in his heat with a time of 6.4.

In the 4 x 440 yard relay, the team of Hugh Fraser, Pete Fedyczko, Keith Berriman and Dave Jarvis finished first in their section and second overall with a time of 3:29.1.

Overall results indicate that Queen's is very strong in the sprint events and would have done better in the middle distance events but for the absence of Brian Aiken. Several competitors gave good personal performances in strong-seeded finals which would have won better placings but for the stiff competition

Heidelberg
Brewed from pure spring water.

And that's the truth!

V-Ball Gals dump Laurentian three straight

by Sue Moffatt

The gals of the Senior Volleyball team convinced any spectators last Saturday that they do indeed possess championship potential, as they downed Laurentian with expediency and style. Last weekend's Waterloo tournament seems to have been a time of maturation and stabilization for this team. They play a fast aggressive game. Confidence in the system and in their ability to play it; alertness to their own, as well as the opponents' weaknessess enabled them to control both sides of the net. Hopefully these new attitudes are of a permanent nature and not fortuitious accident. Possessed with this optimistic determination and provided they can maintain their technical improvement, these gals could really make the big time.

While over-all the gals undoubtedly deserved the foregoing pat on the back, particularly during the first game they could better have used a few firmer prods in the backsides. Far too often 6 players would obediently move to cover the ball, and 4 would decide to take up permanent residence in the quarter of the court. This found an undue number of players in various positions of uselessness come the next critical moment. This made Queen's big problem defence. In point of fact they didn't really have one.

The front line was affected by a similar lethargy which made blocking virtually non-existent. Laurentian was a worthy foe, and made good use of Queen's stubborn refusal to play the net, to drive mercilessly hard spikes down onto the back court. Credit must be given to all back row players who made numerous excellent recoveries on these shots despite the lack of assistance from their front line. At times they surely must have felt the game to have had unpleasantly strong over-tones of murder ball.

Front line players also refused to back up with the ball, and staunchly played the net by seeing how closely they could stick themselves to it without being called. Although net fouls were by far the most frequent and unnecessary calls made on both teams, neither team really had to fear the wrath of the omniscient ref. She appeared to be provided largely for local colour, and willingly called both teams with equal and genial ineptitude.

Offensively, Queen's played a strong game. Excellent back court work provided all but a few plays with well-controlled bumps. Unfortunately sets were often too low or too far back to make the most of spikes. Tips continued to be point winners, and Queen's played the lines to better advantage than the home team. The 13 minute game brought in a 15-10 win for our girls.

The start of the second game revealed the essential improvement in this team. They had learned from their mistakes and continued to consciously overcome them throughout the game. Blocking became an art rather than an unknown phenomenon. The low, consistent serving which had held them in such good stead in the first game, continued to keep them offensively on top. Their former inertian became a thing of the past and the improvement in court distribution was marked. The game was highlighted with brilliant plays by individuals who had always been quite consistent players, who had never seemed too interested in being the nights three stars as it were. Special mention must be made of Linda Bell, Pat Johnson, and rookie Kathie Jeffries, who each made unusually fine plays.

The excellence of the offensive play and the 15-1 score indicated perhaps erroneously, that the gals were "this close" to perfection. Actually, their defensive work continued to be a weak link whose degree was disguished by the over-powering strength of the offence.

In the 3rd game, local Donna Gallagher chose to mingle her line-ups in an attempt to give each player experience in every position. The orations of power volleyball are enough to boggle most simple minds (thus they work extraordinarily well on refs and umpire) and changing positions is a cause of some distress. The result, not too surprisingly, was a great deal of barely concealed confusion and a lack of well co-ordinated plays. Excellent individual skills and concerted efforts to call a team game, allowed this experimental team to pull out a 15-10 victory.

They must also be commended for managing, albeit with difficulty to prevent this game becoming a joke. Their serious attention in a situation which readily lends itself to half-hearted joviality was a credit to their sportsmanship.

While the weight of criticism may seem disproportionately great in relation to the initial praise, it is largely of a trivial nature. Unfortunately as was this team's experience in the pre-Christmas season, such trivial errors can rapidly undermine the most well-intentioned game plan and team spirit. Without a doubt this team has improved. We wouldn't want to swell their heads too much before next weekend game against Carleton. I seem to recall they suffered from this malady when they met this team in November and lost accordingly. Thus, in the interests of a re-write in sports history, it must be pointed out that this team can, and must go further to be number one.

Of course you'll want to see these inspirational samples of polchritude and talent at work next Saturday at 4:00. After one look, you won't be able to wait to buy your lottery ticket (3-100) to export these imminently pleasing products of Queen's. Skiiers, they have your interests at heart. Help them do their thing in Acadia, and they'll help you do yours. Support our gals. They're well worth it.

OWIAA:

B-Ball Gals lose

by Sue Moffatt

A 20-point performance by Kathy Williams powered Laurentian to a 44-30 win over the Golden Gals in an important OWIAA basketball game played in Sudbury. The starry guard, a member of the Canadian Women's National Team, took advantage of Queen's injury problems, controlling the game for the Vees and setting up teammates Nancy George (12 pts) and Pat Smith (10 pts.)

The Gals never seemed to get untracked during the game, and appeared to miss the floor leadership of Karen Flemming, who is still recovering from a pre-Christmas knee injury. Offensively, they were unable to penetrate Laurentian's tight zone, and suffered from a bad case of outside-shooting blues. Laney Marshall, although the Gals' leading scorer with 14 points, is still showing the effects of a badly-sprained ankle, which hampers her quickness, especially on defense.

To be perfectly blunt about the whole matter, Queen's played well under their ability Saturday, even given the injury situation, and should improve. If Karen Flemming can make it back into the lineup, the offense should stabilize a little bit, but Brenda Mackie will have to get morepoints out of her front line to finish on top this year. If she can, watch out. The Gals take on Carleton this weekend, and should win. They'll have to work for it, though.

- boon

Laney Marshall goes up for 2 against Laurentian.

Badminton Gals on top

The Queen's women's badminton team moved into a commanding first-place lead after round three of the OWIAA championships this weekend. The Gals defeated both Toronto and Western, and are now in a strong position to win the overall title, barring a total disaster in the fourth and final competition February 9th and10th in Western.

The Gals were led by their second, third and sixth singles players, Jane McMichael, Mary Lee Robbins and Diana Edwards, all of who sport undefeated records over the three competitions to date, and lead in the individual competition in these categories. As well, the second doubles pair of Miss Robbins and Patsy MacKimmie, and the third doubles, Diana Edwards and Irene Baron, won their matches. They also lead in the individual groupings. As well, first singles Diane Lougheed, facing the toughest competition the league has to offer, has been a consistent, though not undefeated, point-getter for the Gals.

The weekend wins could spell a title, since Western and Toronto, who are in second and third place respectively, do not play Queen's again head to head. It will be difficult for either of them to make up Queen's lead.

Swim relay in Guelph

The women's speed swim team competed last Saturday at the Guelph Invitational Relay Meet. This is the only all relay meet held all season, and gives the swimmers a change of pace and opportunity to experiment with different strokes and distances. Beth Randle obtained her best time of the season in the 400 free-style relay, swimming the 100 in 1:07.8. Barb Whitehead, swimming for the first time since her knee injury in the fall, had good times in both her freestyle and backstroke races. Ianna Swann dropped her time by two seconds in the 100 free-style and obtained her fastest time of the season in the 200 freestyle. The remainder of the team showed encouraging time improvements over last week, and expect to do better on homeground at the first annual Queen's Invitational next Saturday.

Figure skating

Queen's women's figure skating team put on a strong showing Saturday at the Queen's Invitational Figure Skating Tournament held at the Harty Arena. Sue Drowley of Queen's won the intermediate singles crown while Mary Bythlel won the Junior singles and Carol Farqharson and Janet Cox cominbed to win the junior dance competition. Beth Peters of Toronto won the senior ladies singles and Ellen Sawyer won the novice championship. Jane Patterson and Beth Peters combined to win the open dance crown for the University of Toronto.

The girls go to Montreal next Saturday for the McGill Invitational. This will serve as final preparation for the OWIAA Figure Skating championships at the University of Toronto, February 16th and 17th.

Correction

In the AMS story in Friday's Journal, the information on the upcoming Tricolor referendum was incorrect. The proposal is to raise the student fee to $4.50 (from $4) while eliminating the $1.50 charge to the faculty societies for printing grad photos. This will bring Tricolor about the same income, but it will remove a large expense from many faculty societies. (last year ASUS paid over $1000). Students will still be able to opt out of the Tricolor fee if they so deisre.

World: Nixon desperate, opens up Canadian oil quotas

WASHINGTON — Faced with critical shortages of domestic heating oil and a number of blackouts in several regions, President Nixon has opened up restrictions placed on oil imports from Canada.

In announcing a 51 per cent increase in imports of the fuel from Canada, Nixon heaped severe criticism on American refiners for having concentrated too much on high profit gasoline and too little on heating fuel.

There have been a number of regional shortages resulting in many American institutions and schools having to close because they lacked heating fuel. An emergency plan now exists which will impose oil rationing if the situation becomes any more serious.

Even with the announced increase in imports from Canada it is expected to still be a tight winter for our neighbours to the south.

DETROIT — The Big Three Auto manufacturers have been caught and charged with meeting to form some sort of mutual assistance pact and Ford and General Motors have been further charged with price-fixing.

The United States government has brought charges against the top executives of Ford, General Motors and Chrysler for colluding to devise a pact to share out the cost of strikes during seven meetings held in 1969 and 1970. It was further reported that Chrysler Corp. claimed during the meetings that they could not participate due to financial constraints. Ten days later Ford and GM agreed to lift competitive pressures on the company.

The charge laid accuses Ford and General Motors of agreeing to fix the price of cars for their fleet customers.

KEY BISCAYNE, FLA. — The United States and North Vietnam have issued a joint statement announcing that a draft agreement has been reached to end the war in Vietnam and that Presidential Advisor Henry Kissinger and North Vietnamese negotiator Le Duc Tho will meet again in Paris to complete its text.

The contents of the agreement was not announced and it is not known what concessions have been made, however President Nixon was very optomistic that agreement can be made and in his inaugural address Saturday he gave what sounded like an epitaph for the war.

PEKING — Senior North Vietnamese officials credit Canada with having played an indirect part in bringing about the ceasefire agreement reached recently. The ceasefire was worked out in Paris and now requires only the signature of President Nixon to go into effect.

North Vietnamese Premier Pham Van Dong claimed that the anti-war resolution passed by the Canadian House of Commons shortly after the new session opened was instrumental in bringing about pressure on the Americans for a ceasefire.

The resolution which passed the House unanimously registered grave concern at the continuation of the war and called for a halt to the bombing of North Vietnam.

MOSCOW — The second of the Soviet Union's lunar robots has landed on the moon and has begun taking samples of the moon's surface. Entirely remote-controlled, the robot has been directed on an exploration course around the lip of a deep lunar crater.

HOLLYWOOD — The most expensive electoral campaign is underway with an expected $1 million dollar campaign by film companies in their attempt to gain Oscars.

With 3,128 members in the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences, the campaign costs work out to about $3,000 per vote.

The high cost of entering the Oscar race, however, reaps large rewards for the winner. The French Connection last year added more than $5 million dollars in income after collecting its Oscars for best picture, best actor and best director.

backpage

Canada: Pollution improving but air still not clean

"Stop griping - not only are we protesting the gasoline price increase but we're getting - cough - cough - healthy fresh air at the same time."

OTTAWA — The national air pollution surveillance program has announced that while air pollution in thirty-seven Canadian cities was still bad in 1971, it had shown marked improvement.

The report pointed out however that sulphur dioxide pollution in 16 of the sample cities was higher than federally acceptible guidelines. Where the government is acceptible level is 0.02 parts per million over the year, some reached as high a level as 0.08. Downtown Montreal was found to be approaching that point, but it was said to be better than that in 1970.

MONCTON — Moncton City Hall has removed their coat of arms recently erected over the entrance at the request from their landlord, Assumption Mutual Life Insurance.

The coat of arms and attached collar were of English language and sparked considerable opposition from the city's one-third Acadian population.

OTTAWA — A minority Liberal Government passed their third test of confidence in less than a week as Commons approval was given to the speech from the throne. The motion was opposed only by the Conservative members in the House.

The House will now be embarking on discussion of government supplementary spending estimates, an area in which the Liberals will not be able to count on New Democratic Party support as in the past.

TORONTO — Specialists have found that there is evidence linking the incidence of schizophrenia to gluten a component highly prevalent in Canadian wheat.

It has been known for some time that a gluten free diet is the best means of treating celiac disease, especially prevalent in infants and with an incidence of one in every 3,000 people.

This disease has often been a predecessor of schizophrenia and when a group of schizophrenia patients were given wheat, they were found to suffer a relapse.

KINGSTON — The city may get money from the province for the 1976 sailing Olympics but there are strings attached.

Ontario Premier William Davis told Kingston mayor George Speal that the province will contribute $500,000 to the event but that first the federal government must promise to spend $2.3 million on improving harbour facilities in Portsmouth Bay.

Status of Women

An attitude problem

by Sandra Bernstein

The east common room of Chown Hall was the scene of an informal meeting between members of the Principal's Committee on the Status of Women at Queen's, and interested students and staff, on Tuesday evening. About thirty men and women were in attendance.

The meeting began with a brief introduction to the aims and activities of the committee, which was given by Lin Good, who is the chairman. This was followed by an open discussion of the status of women on university campuses and in Canada in general.

The conversation sparked a good deal of interest among those present, and most stayed longer than the scheduled length of the meeting to exchange ideas.

Many women stated that the problems exist more in individual attitudes and less in stated policy. For instance, women have equal opportunity in admission to medicine, but they must then cope with the public image of the good doctor, which is all too often a male image. Andy Pipe, a third year Medicine student, suggested that in subjective evaluations such as oral exams, male professors sometimes try to intimidate female students and give them a harder time than they would a male student. He said that people often expect female doctors to become paediatricians.

Another student whose husband is in physiotherapy commented that he was meeting with some discrimination from female physiotherapists. She added that a great many women in this field cease practising after a period of eighteeen months, which she feels is a waste of potential.

A discussion was then sparked by Dean Reid as to why women seem so afraid of the term "Women's Liberation". Marnie Cousins, student representative on the committee, stated that she feels the term "People's Liberation" to be more accurate and less intimidating.

Miss Cousins will be one of several Queen's delegates attending a conference at the University of Toronto this weekend on the role of women in society.

A female law student explained several subtle problems which women encounter in her profession. She has found that male students cannot accept women both as good lawyers and

Continued on Page 3

-cameron

Lots of losers at housing lottery and a few winners too

AMS outlines election campaign policies, procedures

by Susan de Stein

Restricting the location of campaign posters in the upcoming AMS election "would have a negative effect on the student body," Andy Pipe, Services Commissioner said at the Wednesday night meeting of Outer Council.

He was reiterating his objection to a motion presented by the election procedures committee that states, "under no circumstances may campaign materials of any description be placed on anything other than bulletin boards."

Besides the obvious purpose of an election, that of electing people to office, Pipe pointed out the second purpose of an election as that of "focussing the attention of the student on the issues and increasing student awareness of the AMS".

He stressed his belief that to limit a campaign in such a way would be to "diminish the amount of interest generated by elections."

Greg Leblanc, President of the AMS, agreed with Pipe contending that a restriction of such a character "would inhibit participation." He added that "although the placing of posters in certain areas could be considered objectionable, it is only a matter of days that posters will be in evidence." It is required that candidates remove all campaign materials right after the election.

Marv Bloos, who is a member of the committee that presented the motion, argued that "in the past there has been too little emphasis placed on the issue and too much placed on personality." If the restrictions on the location of campaign posters were imposed, Bloos pointed out that this "would force the candidate to deal with the issues of the campaign."

Ross Dunsmore, Law Faculty's AMS rep agreed that the election "should not be a personality contest, which is fundamentally what a poster campaign is." He added that if the university is to have a good student government, the issues must be spoken to."

Wally Palmer, referring to the amount of advertising material present at the entrance of the Union, commented that although posters may "create interest, the situation is getting out of hand." He stated that the motion may be "taking things too far but we must start somewhere." His sentiments were echoed by Kathy Turner who stressed that something should be done "to clean up some of the mess."

John Macdonald, Vice President of the Engineering Society commented that "in order to convey information concerning the issues to the students, the attention of the students must be attracted."

Pipe contended that the "economic restrictions provided for in the motion provides the guarantee that there would not be an uncontrolled campaign." He emphasized that a "good well-organized advertising campaign can benefit both the AMS, the candidates and the student body." If the restrictions were implemented we would experience a "drab, dry and sterile election campaign." Pipe added that "the students are not easily duped" by a fantastic display of posters.

John Green, Commerce AMS representative and former Campus Activities Commissioner, commented that "with all the objections presently being raised concerning the limiting of accessibility to post secondary education, it doesn't seem in keeping with this proposal to limit campaigns as much as possible."

Bloos continued to point out that the motion would "cut down on the extraneous junk" that election campaigns produce.

If this motion were accepted Leblanc commented that "the campaign would turn out to be as dry as the discussion we have just had."

The motion to limit campaign posters to bulletin boards was defeated but the remaining clauses of the motion concerning the control of campaign expenditures was passed unanimously.

Queen's
Journal
Volume One Hundred, No. 33
Friday, January 26, 1973

Open hours vote-yes

by Susan de Stein

Women in residence this week have voted overwhelmingly in favour of the extension of the present open hours to 24 open hours. Of those who voted, 517 (or 75.7 per cent) voted in favour of the extension and 166 (or 24.3 per cent) were opposed to the proposal.

Kiloran German, President of the Women's Residence Council, noted that although the majority needed to pass the change was obtained, it would still be one month before the Ban Righ Board meets on Feb. 24th. The change is subject to be ratified by the Ban Righ Board. In order to implement the change, the Board must give its approval.

However, Miss German added that since such a "resounding majority was met with, it would be worth implementing 24 hours on a trial basis." She will be meeting with the Dean of Women this week to discuss the matter.

The tentative, and in Miss German's words, the "probable", fee scale for residence accommodation in the 1973-74 academic year was released by the WRC. The cost of accommodation in womens residence has been increased by $148. Next year a single room will cost $1085 and a double room $1046.

In a referendum held in mens' residence this week, 54 per cent of men in residence voted in favour of cutting out the maid service in order to reduce residence costs. This, however did not meet the 60 per cent required to implement the proposal.

Steve Bereton, President of the IRC reported that the increase in the cost of accommodation in men's residence, is approximately $135. He noted that this includes the cost of the installation of kitchenettes and sitting rooms on each floor in the residences.

Amity 300 - an international festival at Queen's by R. Thakur & T. Grandmaison

In keeping with past tradition, there will once again be a week long international festival at Queen's, Amity 300. As the name suggests, the programme is part of an effort by the foreign community in Kingston and at Queen's to get involved in and contribute to the Kingston Tercentenary celebrations. The week will witness an extensive range of events including seminars, audiovisual presentations, concerts, live entertainment and cuisine with an international flavour. The programme is sponsored jointly by Queen's University, the A.M.S., A.M.S. Concerts Committee, A.S.U.S. and the G.S.S., and is to be run by the overseas clubs at Queen's.

Grad Day Symposium

This will be a panel discussion, open to the general public, on the subject of foreign students in Canadian universities. Included among the panelists are such distinguished personalities as Bryce MacKasey, Jack McNie, Pierre-Yves Paradis (Associate Director of International Development Research Centre), Ceta Ramkalawansingh (a foreign student and a member of the Ont. Comm. on Student Awards), Colin Issacs (Chairman, Ont. Union of Grad. Students), Mel Preston (Executive Vice-Chairman, Advisory Comm. on Academic Planning)), as well as speakers from CUSO, CBIE and the Quebec provincial government.

The discussion will focus chiefly on the question of tuition fees for foreign students. Should overseas students be required to pay higher fees than their Canadian counterparts? What would this imply in terms of financial assistance programmes for such students? Do Canadian universities and society benefit from the services of foreign students such as would justify a continuation of the present parity of fees payable? Presumably, Canadian students studying abroad would also be affected by decisions pertaining to foreign students in Canada. Have we made any study of the implications involved for such Canadian students? - especially those on exchange programmes and Commonwealth Scholarships. These are the types of issues to be raised and thrashed out. EXPRESS YOUR OPINIONS - DON'T BE APATHETIC!

Seminars

The seminar series takes off in Africa. Prof. S.O. Anozie, Chairman of the African Studies Dept. of the State University of New York, will present a talk on "African Language Structures and Igbo Traditions". From Africa we take a temporary look at "The Ugly Canadian". D'Arcy Martin and John Robes (International Research Centre of Toronto) will lead a discussion on the economic interests that Canada has in the West Indies and Latin America. One hears a great deal about American rape of the Canadian economy. This seminar questions the underlying assumption of virginal innocence on Canada's part. As an alternative to such capitalist systems, the next seminar will analyze the "Tanzanian Road to Socialism and Its Side Effects". Present will be a member of the Tanzanian High Commission to discuss government systems in Tanzania since its independence. The martial law and reform programme of President Ferdinand Marcos of the Philippines will be explained and analyzed during a seminar on "Current Problems in Philippine Politics, Economy and Society".

The Department of Engish and the Institute of Commonwealth and Comparative Studies are jointly sponsoring a series of six weekly Commonwealth Seminars. The roster of speakers will include members of the High Commissions of Ceylon, Malaysia, Barbados, Guyana, Tanzania and Ghana.

Concerts and Variety Shows

The Chinese Students Association and A.M.S. Concerts will present a concert featuring quaint instruments with traditions that date back to the Chou Dynasty (circa 1500 B.C.).

The theme of the Filipino concert is "Courtship in a Village". The romance and courtship tradition in the rural towns in the Philippines will be captured by serenades and folk dances in a two hour programme. A mini fashion show displaying the differnet costumes made from delicate pineapple fibres will precede the concert.

The West Indian Club will present three aspects of West Indian life: native dances, folktales and steelband. Two dances are featured; the Trinidadian Shango named after the Toruban Thunder God, and the Jamaican Pocomania which

Continued Page 6

SVB needs volunteers

Have a look at the needs listed below, and it you are interested, come in to the office in the Union. We are usually open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. (unless the secretary is at class) or call us at the office 547-5766.

Swim program at the Queen's Pool for the Frontenac County Board of Education. Qualified lifeguards are needed. Thursdays from 10:30 a.m. to noon. The kids are in special education classes.

—An 18 year old handicapped girl needs someone to visit her.She needs someone to talk to and perhaps assist her and interest her in a craft program. Anytime.

—People are needed to read law theory into tapes for the CNIB. The blind student goes to Queen's. The equipment is supplied. The times are at your convenience.

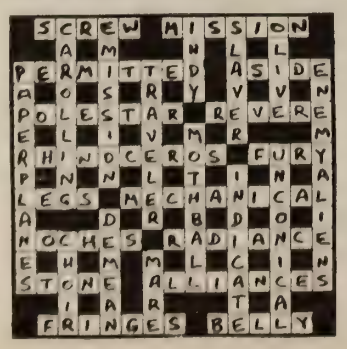
—The after school program at Chalmers is in need of two people to assist with their craft program on Wednesdays. ALSO, from Feb 5th to March 2nd, the program will need volunteers to help EVERY afternoon from 3:30 to 5 P.M. (with the exception of Reading Week).

A new program is starting at Joyceville - an Encounter Group. Four students, with their own transportation, on an afternoon.

House of James, requires a female, possibly bilingual, to work-visit another 'stranger in town' from Quebec.

Also, we remind those volunteers who have signed up with an agency and have not been contacted, to come to the office or give us a call. All of the volunteer should have been called by the Bureau - if you have any complaints or suggestions, or would like to become involved with the Bureau next year - via a position on the Executive, come and see us!

Jean Vanier is coming



Jean Vanier, son of the late Governor-General and Madame Vanier will return to Queen's on Friday, February 2nd to speak to Education students, faculty and any other Queen's person. His address, which will include his reflections on life and the problems we all face in this world, will be in the Auditorium of McArthur Hall, West Campus from 10:30 - 12:30.

During his one day visit to Kingston on February 2 he will spend the greatest proportion of his time with prisoners in local institutions, as it is primarily his concern for prisoners in this area that brings him to Kingston.

As well as his more recent involvement and concern for prisoners, Dr. Vanier has a long standing concern for retarded people and he worked and lived with these people for nine years in France and India. Recently he has opened another centre in Richmond Hill, Ontario for his work.

His experiences of studies and teaching the retarded as well as his work with prisoners has enabled him to be profoundly sensitive to our human predicament.

Crossword Solution

Rip off Europe.

STUDENT-RAILPASS

The way to see Europe without feeling like a tourist.

Student-Railpass is valid in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland.

Eurailpass, Box 2168, Toronto 1, Ontario

Please send me your free Student-Railpass folder order form.
Or your free Eurailpass folder with railroad map.

Name _____

Street _____

City _____

Zone _____ Prov. _____

"QUE-1"

So you plan to spend the Summer in Europe this year. Great. Two things are mandatory. A ticket to Europe. And a Student-Railpass. The first gets you over there, the second gives you unlimited Second Class rail travel for two months for a modest $135 in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, and Switzerland! All you need to qualify is to be a full-time student up to 25 years of age, registered at a North American school, college or university.

And the trains of Europe are a sensational way to travel. Over 100,000 miles of track links cities, towns and ports all over Europe. The trains are fast (some over 100 mph), frequent, modern, clean, convenient and very comfortable. They have to be. So you'll meet us on our trains. It really is the way to get to know Europeans in Europe.

But there's one catch. You must buy your Student-Railpass in North America before you go. They're not on sale in Europe because they are meant strictly for visitors to Europe—hence the incredibly low price. Of course if you're loaded you can buy a regular Eurailpass meant for visitors of all ages. It gives you First Class travel if that's what you want.

Either way if you're going to zip off to Europe, see a Travel Agent before you go, and in the meantime, rip off the coupon. It can't hurt and it'll get you a better time in Europe than you ever thought possible.

Prices quoted in U.S. dollars

York pres resigns amidst the storm

York president David Slater has resigned from his precarious position after months of entanglement in budgetary conflicts and student unrest.

Dr. Slater's resignation will not take effect until June 30 but he has requested a leave of absence until then "in the best interests of the university".

Richard Storr, an American modern history professor at York was originally named acting President but resigned shortly afterwards for health reasons. Apparently Storr was suffering from a bad heart.

After a long Wednesday session between the York senate executive and the university Board of Governors, Board member John Yolton, also an American citizen was appointed to fill the vacancy.

Professor Yolton, a teacher of Philosophy at York since 1963, describes himself as a, "hard nosed academic" and announced that his goals while in office will be to clear up the university's dubious budget situation and then to return the campus to it's primary business- that of teaching.

During his stormy two years in power at York, Dr. Slater had lost the confidence of much of the university community. A pre-Christmas struggle with a $750,000 budget deficit resulted in the turning of two senior members of the university teaching staff against each other and the resignation of a third. Slater had been faced with student occupations and sit-ins over various issues.

Former vice-principal of academics Walter Tarnopolsky, who was forced to resign in December over disagreements with Dr. Slater, stated that, "generally you can't hate David Slater but he's the wrong man for the job".

In handing in his resignation, Dr. Slater commented that he felt that he could not be fair to his own standards in serving the needs of the university under the present circumstances.

Dr. Slater, an internationally known economist was dean of graduate studies at Queen's before his 1970 appointment to York. It is speculated that he may now return to Queen's.

Dr. J.J.Deutsch, principal of Queen's, stated that he will undoubtedly be seeing Slater to "talk about his future plans".

Professor Yolton, Slater's temporary replacement, is a compromise candidate according to the excalibur, the York student newspaper. Marilyn Smith of the Excalibur noted that by no means was he a strong administrator. However, when members of the Board were questioned as to whether this appointment meant a reassurtion of power by the Board, they flatly denied the claim.

York student president

Optimistic about fee withholding

by Susan de Stein

"I am very optimistic about the success of the fee withholding campaign at York", commented John Theobald, president of the students council of York University, who is also an executive member of OFS. "An insignificant number of students have paid their tuition," he reported. He was present at the Wednesday night meeting of the AMS Outer Council, to inform council of province-wide developments on the fee withholding issue.

The second installment of fees was due at York on January 15 as is the case on the majority of Ontario campuses. "We are receiving a level of student support of approximately 50 per cent," he added.

A moratorium was held at York last week in order to better acquaint students with the issues and with the demands of the OFS. He added that the administration was co-operative with the efforts of the student council.

He outlined the York student council's platform as being that of the OFS. York, unlike Queen's, is demanding that the $100 increase be recinded. However, Theobald agreed that the "key issue is the student aid issue."

When questioned about what was the next step in the fee withholding campaign, Theobald said, "we will continue to sit tight until we consult further with other Ontario campuses."

Gary Gannage, Queen's University Rector questioned the fact that the OFS represents a united voice. "Is it really a viable lobby for student opinion?" he asked. Theobald answered that "it is the most viable lobby. We have to start somewhere. The OFS is something to build on."

It was mentioned at the meeting that a number of proposals that reflected the recommendations of the OFS concerning student aid were submitted to the Ontario Committee on Student Qwards (OCSA). Theobald reported that "nothing has been done by that committee."

In a report submitted to the OFS by the OFS representatives on the committee, the committee was described as a cross between a "circus and an insane asylum". The report states that the committee has no real power over student award policies of the Ontario government. It was also felt that serious problems of personnel and structure have hampered the operation of the committee.

Theobald also reported that elsewhere Laurentian was experiencing "quite a good response, that is, 50 to 60 percent of its students are supporting the cause." He also informed council that "approximately 7000 University of Toronto students are at present withholding." Other campuses report to be active in the fee withholding campaign but Theobald was unable to quote any figures.

It was the concern of several members of the AMS, present at the meeting, that the OFS has not been doing enough in the area of direct negotiation with the government. However it was the general feeling that all meetings with the government have been monologues and have proven futile.

Status of women - an attitude problem

Continued from Page 1

as women as well. Many women present agreed, saying that a great number of men are frightened by competent women, and see ability as "aggression" or a threat.

The students continued to say that women, unlike men, must often choose between a home and a profession early in their careers. For instance, women may be reluctant to enter law before they know whom they will marry. This is because a husband who is transferred frequently in his job will expect his wife to follow him, and this precludes setting up a practice of her own. These problems are not in existence for men.

This topic led to a discussion on prejudicial laws and practices. Legally a wife must accompany her husband if he moves, or she is not entitled to support from him. However the reverse is not the case. A wife's domicile is, by law, that of her husband, even if he resides in a different continent.

A woman is a child, by law, one student concluded. If she mortgages her own property, the spouse must co-sign the document as being responsible for his wife's debt should she default. However, women are not responsible for their husbands' debts.

Some persons in attendance at the meeting expressed interest in courses in Women's Studies. Mrs. Good explained that there is such a course offered at McArthur College, and an evening course at St. Lawrence College.

The committee hopes to hold similar meetings during the rest of term, in various locations. Several of those who went Tuesday expressed enthusiasm for the idea, and stated that they intended to return for the other discussions. Mrs. Good also welcomes private discussions with students and staff, and mentioned that her office in Douglas Library is always open for grievances and comments on this topic.

SNOW SCULPTURE '73

•Snow sculpture begins Monday, Jan. 29th

•List of designed snow sculpturing areas is now posted outside AMS Office

FIRST COME-FIRST SERVED

•Sign-up sheet for materials and water is now posted outside AMS Office

St James Anglican Church

9.00 a.m. - HOLY COMMUNION

11.00 a.m. - MORNING PRAYER

4.00 p.m. - Ecumenical Service in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church

7.00 p.m. - ORDINATION SERVICE St. George's Cathedral

Queen's University Music Department

An evening of music for BASSOON

Christopher Weait and George Brough - piano & harpsichord

FREE

Dunning Auditorium 8:00 p.m. Fri. Jan. 26

Regina priorities found misplaced

REGINA (CUP) — Widespread questioning of the priorities of the University of Saskatchewan's board of governors has resulted from several recent decisions affecting the university's Regina and Saskatoon campuses.

Although the board of governors decided to retain the engineering program at the Regina campus, the Social Studies department may be eliminated, because of budget limitations. These decisions come shortly after the installation of an $8,000 luxury stone floor in the campus library.

In Saskatoon, the Student's Union is appealing the board of governors' decision to fire sociology instructor Nola Symor.

The proposal to phase out the Regina Social Studies department, one of the most progressive and innovative interdisciplinary departments on the campus, was made at a closed meeting of the executive committee of the Social Sciences Division on January 15. There are no student representatives on the executive committee.

To meet budgeted expenditures, the division would have to eliminate a visiting professorship, the position of a retiring professor and some sessional assistants. Since most of these cuts would be made from the Social Studies department, which now has only six faculty members, the program would have to be abolished.

In its decision to retain the Regina engineering program, the board of governors rejected a recommendation that the Saskatoon campus be the site of the province's only engineering school. The recommendation was made by the Lapp commission after the Saskatchewan government refused to allocate funds for the construction of an $11.3 million engineering building at Regina.

The university has requested the funds despite declining enrolment and doubts of Saskatchewan's financial ability to support two engineering colleges.

The board also decided to reduce the courses offered at Regina from third to second year engineering.

While budget cuts are being made in both the engineering and Social Studies programs, "aesthetics" is the main reason for putting an $8,000 stone floor in the campus library.

The decision to install expensive stone slate tile instead of less expensive vinyl-asbestos was made at the end of November, 1972, shortly after the release of two popular professors because there was not enough money in the university budget to retain them.

The university maintenance directors said that they thought the expenditure was fair, even considering the faculty cuts.

Neither the librarians nor the students were consulted to obtain their opinion on the installation of the stone floor.

In Saskatoon, the Students' Union is appealing the board of governors' firing of sociology instructor Nola Symor. The students contend that Symor is a very competent teacher.

The student council sees the situation as an opportunity to push for evaluation of teaching ability, and as a test of the student course evaluation.

UBC expands student participation

VANCOUVER (CUP) — The Univeristy of British Columbia senate has passed a motion requiring student participation at all levels of UBC's 12 faculties - with one exception.

The motion includes all faculty and departmental committees but excludes those concerned with hiring, firing, promotion, tenure and scholarships. It also assures a faculty majority in all cases.

The senate contradicts an earlier motion by the faculty of arts, which claimed that the faculty could not legislate student participation in individual departments. The senate has apparently rejected this argument for so-called "departmental autonomy".

Students have been actively demanding representation in the arts faculty since Nov. 23, when they invaded a faculty meeting. The meeting was immediately cancelled. Students later formed their demands for representation on all levels of the faculty, and requested a committee of equal numbers of students and professors to implement the changes.

On Dec. 13 the faculty amended the student position to exclude any mention of participation in departments, and established an all-faculty committee to implement student participation in restricted areas. Students reluctantly agreed to work with the proposal.

The senate motion appears to give some impetus to the push for student participation in the arts faculty.

Although some arts faculty senators opposed the senate resolution as a violation of departmental autonomy, it passed through the senate easily.

Graduate student senator and campus activist Stan Persky credited passage to good organization among student senators and pressure by arts students. "But student representation is not a goal initself but merely a tactic in making this university a more humane place," he said.

Student senator Svend Robinson said passage represented an important first step.

"I don't think they realize what they've done," Robinson said the senate motion imposes a minimum standard for student representation on all faculties and departments. Although some senators think the motion is merely principle, it does say students shall have representation, and the only way they can get out of it is by back tracking, he said.

NS students demand loan change

HALIFAX (CUP) — Executive members of the Nova Scotia Association of Student Unions will go to Ottawa soon to press for changes in the federal regulations governing Nova Scotia's student loan program.

The delegates will accompany provincial education minister Allan Sullivan.

The decision to approach federal officials came from a meeting between Sullivan and association executives Jan. 10.

Sullivan called the meeting to discuss proposed changes in student aid for next year and to continue discussions begun in October about general student loan procedures.

The association wants changes in the way student loans are administered. Association secretary Marg McEachern is optimistic.

"We want a standardized simplified system," she said. And judging by the response that we're getting (from government) we'll probably get it.

"Right now there are a lot of bugs in the system," she said. "We want changes in the area of required parental contributions, a standardized summer savings table, a shorter, more simple application form, a more realistic definition of independent status, and more easily obtainable bursaries."

Proposed Maritime union shelved

HALIFAX (CUP) — The proposed Maritime Union of Students may be longer in coming than organizers hoped.

Local problems in New Brunswick are hampering the provincial student union's progress toward a regional union.

As well, local union elections are being held – making it difficult to co-ordinate action to build a regional union.

Atlantic region student leaders proposed a Maritime union after Atlantic delegates walked out of the founding conference of the National Union of Students last November in Ottawa.

The delegates, angry at the way local unions will be represented in the national union, proposed to start a regional union. They wanted equal representation for each province, while the majority of delegates, from western Canada and Ontario, opted for representation by population.

A meeting to form the Maritime Union of Students was tentatively scheduled for this month, but several of the New Brunswick unions have lost interest for the time being. It has now been postponed indefinitely.

G.S.S. FILM CLUB

"The Shop On Main Street"

(Czech., 1965, subtitles)

ACADEMY AWARD best foreign language film

Fri. Jan. 26
8:00 p.m.
Ellis Hall

Anyone interested in helping to run the G.S.S. Film Club should come along or phone 549-2532

St. Lawrence Parks Commission

Summer Employment At

OLD FORT HENRY

Kingston, Ontario

The internationally known Fort Henry Guard is a CIVILIAN unit dedicated to the creation of a living picture of British Army garrison activities during the nineteenth century. Find out about this unique summer job at an

Information and Films Night

describing the

FORT HENRY GUARD

Still time to apply

Members of the guard must be eighteen years of age by next spring, and at least 5'11" tall, (height restriction not applicable to members of the band).

Applications forms available at the Placement Office, 121 Union Street. Sign-ups for interviews begin on January 17th, and campus interviews are being held on February 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9th.

unclassified

ANYONE in Artsci '76 interested in doing a snow sculpture for Snowball please call Dave 544-4399.

LOST: A pair of steel-toed work boots lost somewhere in Gordon House (or possibly Brockington) on Friday night. If found please phone Paul 544-7585.

O.T.B.-H.O.D. WE'VE GOT TWO IF YOU'VE GOT THREE The Ontario Turkey Board is willing to trade their splendid two bedroom apartment near KCVI for an equally splendid three bedroom apartment. Phone 544-2110 around suppertime.

NEXT MEETING for year essay writers next Tuesday at 7:45 in the Tricolor office. If you didn't come to this week's meeting phone Bill Kirby 542-6209. He's mad at you!!

ANYONE LOCATING the whereabouts of my thin lost black leather wallet please contact Bob Mutrie. It's not worth your while to keep it as I was pretty poor at the time. 544-5860.

STERO SALE: My landlord is becoming quite irate. His ludicruous demand for rent is forcing me to sell my brand new (Sept.) top-performing KLH model 34-FM stereo system. This system, rated a best-buy by Consumer Guide, incorporates a Garrard turntable with Pickering magnetic cartridge, an excellent FM section with tuning meter, 20 watts RMS, KLH model 32 speakers and dust cover. Retail price was $567 but my desperate need for liquidity forces me to ask for $400 or best offer. Please phone 544-5275.

LOST: One red purse in Kingston Hall on Tuesday. If found please phone 544-1972.

LOOKING: for three females who would be willing to share a six bedroom house with three males. We supply the house. 544-0207.

DOUBLE ROOMS are available on Leonard Field, in Co-ed Morris Hall and in McNeill House. Please apply at the Business Office, Leonard Hall, Miss Smithies 547-2685.

A SINGLE ROOM in Co-ed Morris Hall is available. Please apply to Miss Smithies, Business Office, Leonard Hall or phone 547-2685.

BOBO, BERTHA, BELINDA AND BETTY WOULD LOVE TO RELIEVE YOU of that decrepid 3, 4, or 5 bedroom apartment. Please phone us at 544-8739 or 544-8738.

An integral part of SNOWBALL WEEK (Jan. 29-Feb. 4) is SNOW-SCULPTURING. All presidents of years and societies have been sent instructions on SNOW SCULPTURING '73. If you want to participate in your society's or year's snow sculpture, contact your year president or society committee now.

LOST: in Bio. 101 labs - man's gold ring with yellow stone. If found please call Bob 544-7049.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY to the conoisseur of fine teas. Boston Tea Elites.

WANTED: 3-bedroom apartment for next year. Phone 544-8926 after 11:00 p.m.

A BIRTHDAY WISH TO SHEEP: may your chief source of corruption never be further than Western.

WANTED: We are looking for a 3 or 4 bedroom apartment or house for May 1, 1973. Call 544-8740 or 544-8469.

LOST: a silver bracelet somewhere on Leonard Field during Wanderlust III. Please contact 544-9361.

BECAUSE Macardie's and Matio's gargantuous Lasagna Feast was such a success last Saturday, they wish to announce the coming of "Pheasant Under Glass" same time, same place, same show.

ONE OR TWO FRIENDS WANTED IMMEDIATELY to share a house very close to campus for the rest of term. House fully furnished; bedroom furnished or unfurnished. Marlene Creates and Jan Beath. 542-5061.

PASSPORT or identification pictures from Photo Image cost only $5.00 for six prints. We guarantee quick service. Call 546-7770 or visit our gallery at 33 Brock St.

3 LIBERATED WOMEN would like to meet well groomed 3 bedroom Apt. Call 544-8095 or 544-8369. after 6 p.m.

WAGNER ST5A for sale; includes 5 yd. bucket, four wheel drive, power steering, dual braking system, 8 speed HD power shift automatic, in line 6 cyl. 240 hp diesel Turning radius of 22 ft. Take your friends for a ride, have a laugh with your department head. $80,000 priced for quick sale. Phone Al at 547-5821.

LOST: 1 pair hockey gloves somewhere between the Arena dressing room and Dupuis Hall Locker room Friday 19 January afternoon. Please phone 544-1349.

WANTED: 2 or 3 bedroom apartment fairly close to campus for 1973-1974. Please phone 544-7077.

FOR SALE: ONE ELECTRIC GUITAR AND CASE. It cost $185 new and the only thing it's done in the past four years is collect dust. It's in excellent condition. If you want it cheap, give me a call. Chris 544-9790.

CO-OPERATION - CO-EDUCATION Science '44 Co-op will be having an Information Pub Night on Jan. 29 at 8:00 pm Come and meet the members over a brew.

WANTED: A six bedroom house close to campus for 1973-1974. Please call Bev. 544-8368; Barb 544-8363 or Colleen 544-8364.

ONE BEDROOM APARTMENT close to campus wanted for May for married couple, for $120 per month with utilities. If you can help, please call 544-4674. Ask for Ann.

WILL THE PERSON who "borrowed" a wallet from the arena last Friday noon please return it (with or without money if necessary). Send it to, or leave it at, C. Kidd, Ellis Hall. Thank you.

LOST: One Science '75 Chemical Engineering jacket at the dance in Grant Hall, Jan. 20, 1973. Size 40. Initials W.P. on mickey pocket. If found, call 544-6484. Reward offered.

WANTED - a house for 4 girls close to campus from May 1, 1973 Call 544-8346 or 544-8381 or 544-8499.

TRY SOMETHING DIFFERENT this weekend and watch the Chinese movies, featuring Chinese Kung Fu and comedy. Jan. 27 (Sat. 2:00 pm) and 28 (Sun 7:30 pm), Dunning Auditorium. Admission $2.00.

8-BEDROOM HOUSE available May 1. Sept. - Sept. lease. 544-9207.

WANTED: 4 person house or apt. (preferably 4 singles; for next year. Phone 544-8053.

WANTED: a 4 or 5 bedroom house for next year, please call 544-8051 or 549-1663

ROOM AVAILABLE in 8-bedroom house with option for summer and next year. Quiet room, nice people, live co-operatively. 544-9207

THE BURMESE INSTITUTE for Research into the Causes and Prevention of Blindness, Leprosy, Blindness due to Leprosy and Leprosy Due to Blindness (the B.I.R.C.P.-B.L.B.D.L.L.D.B.) is pleased to announce the completion of a new wing. For prompt service with a smile phone 544-7317 or come to room 319 Leonard Hall and ask for Dr. Bloody Bernowski (he knows everything). Please give generously.

FOUND: One ladies Timex wristwatch at West Campus bus stop. Call 549-1848 and identify.

Dear ID: If you don't drink your cache pretty soon, someone else might!

544-1227

- Free Delivery
- Fast, Friendly Service
- Most consistent quality
- pizza in Kingston

286 Montreal St. North

PIZZA CHALET

BAN RIGH FIRESIDE

Feb. 1st

French String Trio

Elrond OPEN HOUSE

coffee and donuts

Take a look at 2 person 4 person 6 person

12 person, 1 bedroom, 2 bedroom units.

SAT. JAN.27, 2 p.m.

Meeting

SAILING CLUB

Wed., Jan. 31

7:30 p.m.

Stirling C

- FILM
- ICEBOATS
- ELECTIONS

ARTSCI '76

ELECTIONS

Tuesday, Feb. 13, 1973

7:30 pm

Stirling D

ALL POSITIONS OPEN

For information call

Richard 549-0499

Castonguay: a new concept for Quebec professions

by Janet Ritchie

"In Quebec, the traditional concept of what constitutes a profession is undergoing a fundamental change."

Claude Castonguay was appointed chairman of the Commission of Enquiry on Health and Social Welfare in Quebec in 1966. On Monday, Castonguay, now Minister of Social Affairs for Quebec, addressed a joint seminar from the School of Public Administration and explained the proposed legislation to reform professional organizations which had resulted from the findings of the commission.

The legislation, which includes a Professional Code and bills relating to particular professions, has been termed "revolutionary". Castonguay hastens to defend it from those who criticize it. He sees the professional organization as "an important form of decentralized public administration which has an urgent need of modernization" and adds that its relationship with the state "constitutes a significant factor leading to adequate services to the public and its protection."

Castonguay noted that the importance of the protection of the public is evident not only in the principle of the legislation advocated by the commission, but in its examination by the Parliamentary Commission in Quebec which permitted those concerned to give their opinions and suggest modifications.

In his discussion of the proposed legislation, "a fundamental part of a more general administrative reform," Castonguay dealt with what he saw as the essential components of the reform.

He stated that the professional corporation must be maintained as "a valuable mechanism for the protection of the public" and indicated that it could be preserved as such by internal and external limitations on its autonomy. On the inside, this would be achieved by external members representative of the public interest; on the outside, by the supervisory actions of a Quebec Professions Board.

Since he sees the protection of the public as the main function of the present-day professional corporation Castonguay feels that they "can no longer claim to play the dual role of protecting the public and protecting the social and economic interests of their own members". For this reason, he is confident that unionism in Quebec, especially in the professions of medicine and engineering, "will definitely continue to expand".

In addition to the criteria of the protection of the public, the legislation offers certain standards defining the conditions which must be met by those persons forming professional corporations. These include for example, "the level of knowledge required of members of the future corporation in the practice of their activities".

An alternative to this would be the constitution of professions with either the exclusive right to practice, when this can be shown to be in the interests of the protection of the public, or a reserved title guaranteeing competence, adequate training, and observation of ethics.

A main function of the professional corporation as protector of the public interest is their controlling power over the issuing of licences to practice. To this end Castonguay sees the establishment of "a sound equilibrium between the respective role of the professional corporation and that of the teaching institutions" as desirable in co-ordinating the requirements of academic and professional training.

Castonguay also stresses the need for differentiating between "professional inspection", ensuring professional competence, and "discipline", controlling professional misconduct. The Professional Code establishes, within each professional corporation, two distinct statutory committees responsible for performing each function.

The proposed and soon-to-be adopted legislature requires "a change in the mentality and attitude of the professionals" if they are to adapt to the needs of contemporary society. However, Castonguay warns that "if the professionals wish to continue to play the leading role which has been theirs in our society, they have no other choice."

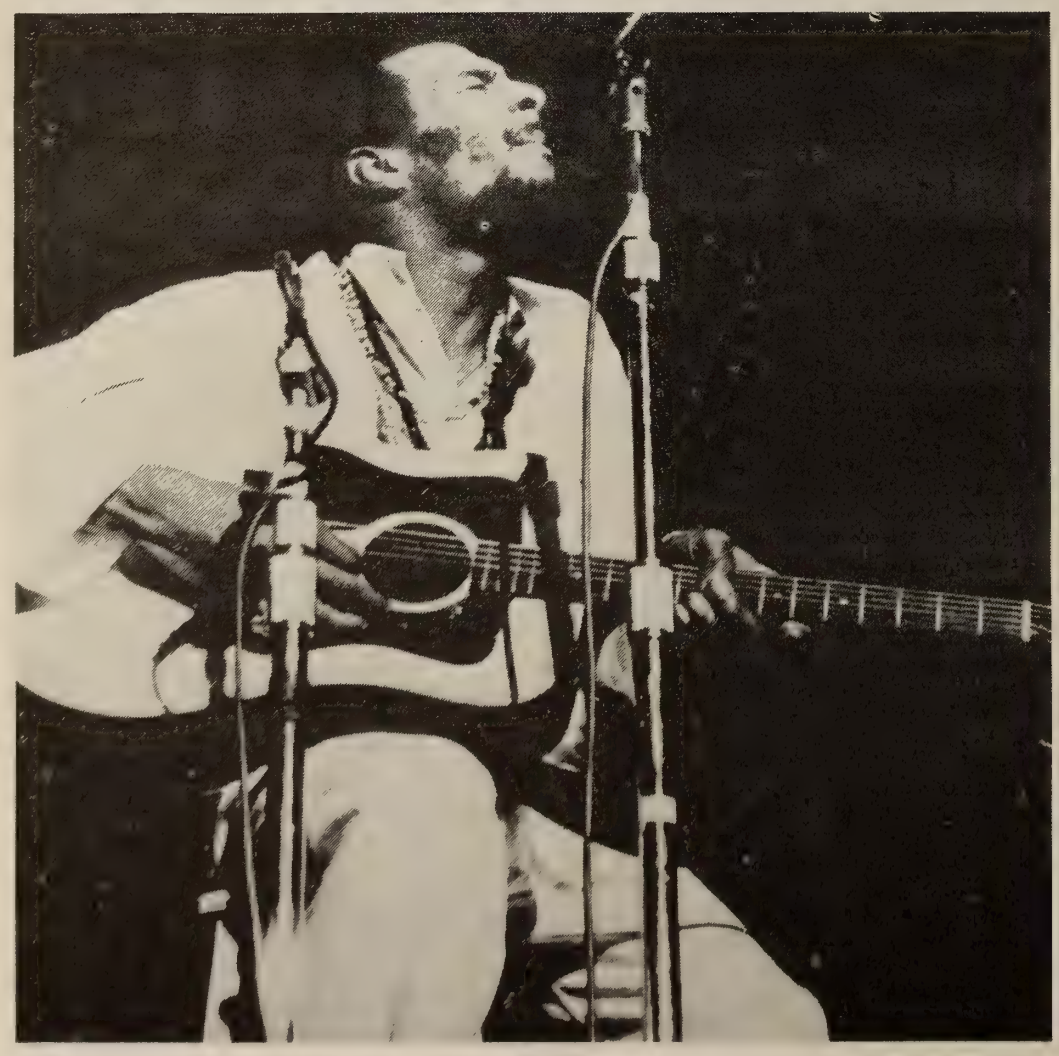
Amity 300

like Shango, features some of the characteristics of Haitian vodou (voodoo). An additional feature presentation is the Amity 300 Variety Show. Live entertainment, colourful cultural exhibits and international cuisine provided by all participating clubs in Amity 300 will accommodate everyone's interests in one grand evening.

Movies

The India High Commission will present three special colour movies on India: "Glimpses of India" (a colourful documentary on many aspects of life in Western India), "Indian Women", and "Kathakali" (describes how a dance form brings to life the legends and myths that abound in India).

The Indian movies are to be followed by a revolutionary transformation. The Chinese Literature Society will screen "The Red Detachment of Women" - a dance drama, plus the last act of "Taking Tiger Mountain by Strategy" - a Peking opera. Broaden your horizons: experience Indian and China in celluloid.



Queen's Journal

Vol. 100, No. 33
Fri., Jan. 26, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Patricia Devitt
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National desk: Bob Mutrie
Photography: Peter Boag

Special thanks to Janet, Anne, Sue, Lee and Jeff who waited patiently.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

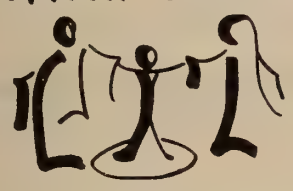
Jock Harty

SUNDAY

FEB. 4th

$3.00

& $3.50



RICHIE HAVENS

Computing Centre
Programming Competition '73

The Closing Date for Entries is January 31st., 1973.

Further details are available from F. M. Larkin, Computing Centre (local 6901).

McArthur Theatre Arts presents
BERTOLT BRECHT
THE CAUCASIAN CHALK CIRCLE

Wed., Thurs., Fri., Jan. 31, Feb 1 & 2
at 8.30 PM
McArthur Theatre - Union Street & Sir John A.
Tickets $1.00 or phone 547-6666
Wed., Thurs., Fri. Jan 31, Feb 1 & 2

GRADS
Annual General Meeting
(Grad House, 157 King St. E.)

Wed., Jan. 31st
8 p.m.
FREE BEER

Nominations for President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer, AMS Reps (3) will close at this meeting.

All graduates are urged to attend, to hear what we've done, where the $60,000 went, make nominations.

B.A.S. immediately afterwards.

ARTSCI '76

Year Crests ($2.50)

Year Cards ($2.00)

Buttons (25c)

STILL AVAILABLE

Call Chris 544-7034
or Sue 544-8510

QUEEN'S MUSICAL THEATRE

presents: Jan. 31, Feb. 1, 2, 3

WONDERFUL TOWN

music by Leonard Bernstein

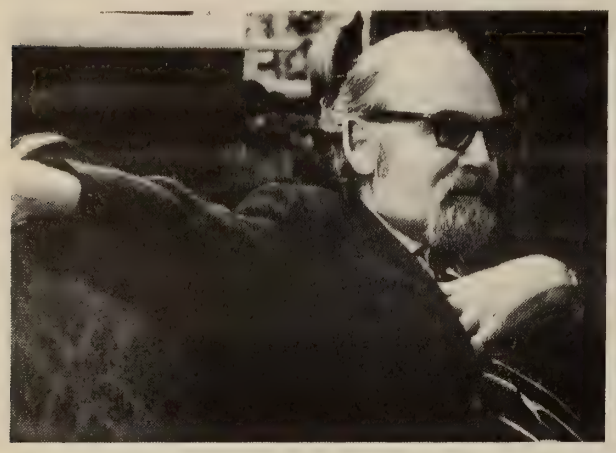
in

GRAND THEATRE

doors open 8 p.m., curtain 8:30 p.m.

Tickets available from cast, John Orr Room & meal lines $2.00 students $1.50

SNOWBALL
WINE & CHEESE
PARTY



M. Bonvivant wishes to announce his upcoming harvest festival, Fruit of the Vine, to be held in the warm, friendly atmosphere of his villa Grant Hall, on Thursday Feb. 1 from 9 pm to 12:30 am. All guests are asked to contribute $1.50 per couple in advance, to the festivities, which include nibbling cheese and sipping wine to the tunes of piano playing entertainers.

M. Bonvivant is once again throwing open his wine cellars and many excellent vintages will be available for purchase. For an informal evening of good company and good wine, attend the social event of the year, M. Bonvivant's harvest festival, Fruit of the Vine.

Bill Harding - Playwr

by Sandy Naiman

Bill Harding, author of "The Quiet Rebellion of Mrs. Mary Gordon" which opens tonight at the Domino Theatre has had extensive experience in theatre and television. He's worked in the States, in London as well as in Canada. Born in Delhi, Ontario on March 29, 1917, he first got interested in theatre when he went to Detroit to see the Marx Brothers in something called "Horse Feathers". He says he skipped school for three weeks straight to watch that show and then he was hooked. He's spent 11½ years in Kingston and last week I talked with him in the lounge of the Domino Theatre about his career in showbusiness and his prophesies about the theatre.

Journal: You've worked, I'm told, with many well known television and film personalities.

Harding: Yes, I used to work for quite a few American performers, actually, when they came to London, England. People like Red Skelton, Bob Hope, Jack Benny, Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis, Danny Thomas. We tried to adapt their material to make it more Anglosized so that the English people would understand what it was all about.

Journal: How did you do that?

Harding: Most people that are comedy writers have pretty good memories. And if you live in a country long enough, and I lived in Britain 18 years, you have a pretty good idea of what expressions to cut out and what would be topical and acceptable to the British public.

Journal: Tell me about your present play, "The Quiet Rebellion of Mrs. Mary Gordon"?

Harding: It's in todays idiom, all the dialogue is contemporary. I use flashbacks, going back to the twenties and thirties. I wanted to write a play about Kingston but if you write a play about Kingston you're limited to your subjects. Kingston seems to be famous not only for its university but for its prisons. I didn't want to write about prisoners so I wrote a comedy about Kingstonians. I chose students, Queen's students. I got the idea from some of the ones who lived in my own home on Gore Street. I bought a large house there one time and it was held up for quite a few weeks, the deal was, because I had to accept the five students who were living on the top floor of the house. It was written into the deed that they had to be allowed to stay in this house until they graduated, which was in another three or four months. They had been with the previous owner, Col. Grant for four years.

But I was quite happy, after I looked them over, to keep them.

Journal: How did your own experience help in writing this play?

Harding: I think all sorts of things happen when you have students. You have youth in the house to start with and that's condusive to high jinx and romance and love, not necessarily in that order. And out of that comes comedy. We had four boys and then we used to have four girls on the other floor. Then we found it was much smarter to go back to just having the boys. They go out to call on the girls and if you have girls, the boys come over to call on them. We had quite a few funny experiences with them.

Journal: The title of the play, "The Quiet Rebellion of Mrs. Mary Gordon" implies a rebellion. What is Mrs. Gordon rebelling against?

Harding: Well, actually she's caught up in the rebellion she isn't really rebelling against anything. Although she is rebelling in one sense of the word in as much as her home is being expropriated and they're tearing it down and going to make a parking lot. It's up to the Queen's students to try and save the house. And she's an old, old woman, she's in her seventies and she's not too sure of some of the legal deals that have gone through in her lifetime and about the deed. For instance it turns out that she's never paid taxes, but it didn't bother her so she didn't bother Ottawa.

Journal: What kind of comedy do you write?

Harding: I write comedy which is much like "Laugh In". At one time I wrote domestic comedy. I wrote a show for an old time movie actress named B. B. Daniels and she and her husband Ben Lyon and their two children. It was sort of equivalent to "I Love Lucy" but I would say although it was farcical, it was still very much the human comedy, with some satire but not too much.

Journal: Are your characters bigger than life, particularly in this play, or are they more realistic?

Harding: I think they're realistic. If they're bigger than life it's because now life is bigger than life. We're living in a schizophrenic world. If at one time you saw a man walk around the street with hair down to his shoulders and a feather in his head and he asked you which way to the bank you would show him which way to the Kingston Psychiatric Hospital. Today, it turns out he's a Ph.D.

Journal: What were you doing just before you wrote this play?

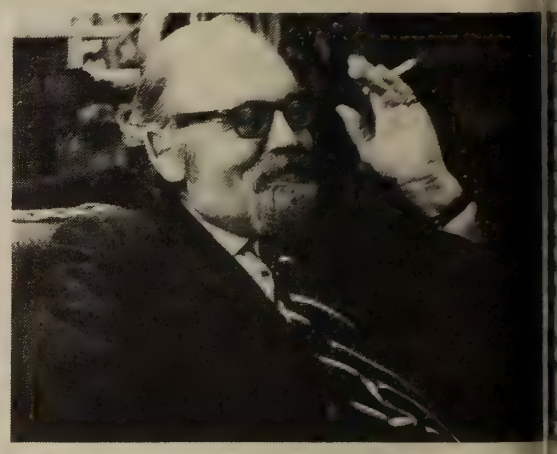
Harding: I work at the Kingston Psychiatric Hospital. I'm a councellor there. A psychiatric assistant. We work with behavioral problem people, with disturbed children.

Journal: How did you get from writing farcial domestic comedy to doing psychiatric councelling?

Harding: To me they look very much the same. I don't notice any difference at all. I think all actors and actresses are larger than life, off stage. I think most of them are on or you can turn them on quite easily. Take, for example, Auntie Mame, there are really many Auntie Mames in this world and not all of them are on the stage.

My present play has been sold to the BBC. I write two or three a year that go to England. I got a cheque today for another repeat deal from November and that one was written 15 years ago. It was about Christmas, so they've repeated it four times in England, poor British.

Journal: What do you plan to do after this?



Harding: I'm working on another play called "Naked in the Tree of Love" but it hasn't got as many people. "The Quiet rebellion" has a cast of twenty. It's rather like doing Quo Vadis in a telephone booth. The next one is about a psychiatrist whose marriage blows up but by a strange coincidence I live next door to a psychiatrist and so I may have to change some of the plot.

Journal: Do you ever go beyond your own experience when seeking material for a play?

Harding: I wrote a very successful film, if I say so myself, at one time and I'd better say so because it's so old now most people wouldn't remember it. It was called "Four In A Jeep" and it took place in Vienna in 1946 and it won the Cannes prize for second best film in 1951 or 52. It took a couple of years to make but it was based on the idea of refugees coming back from Russia and at that time Vienna was an international city. We had a jeep with four soldiers in it, an Americ Frenchman, a Russian and an Englishman. It wa original story without any comedy in it. It was just a se drama.

Journal: Which do you prefer writing for, television, fi the stage?

Harding: I think I prefer television because its satisfying, it's faster, you can get on with it. If you do a you work on it and then somebody else might work without you knowing and then you go to a cocktail part find that five other writers are working on your ori script, changing it, fixing it here and there and it's pletely different. Some of the people who are backing the have certain ideas and they don't want to disturb the fee of certain groups. This is to a large extent no longer tru have so many off beat films right now.

Journal: If you had a choice to work in any city in the which would you choose?

Harding: London, England. There's a market for my k material there. There's no great market for creative w or acting in Canada. When I was 18 or 19, the actors i wanted to be successful went to Great Britain, took co and eventually got into films or on the stage where they taught their craft and they became successful. A few of went to Hollywood but I don't recall anyone ever mak In the post war period quite a few of my friends have from television in Toronto into film in Hollywood. No Jewison, In the Heat of the Night, Sid Furie. I knew S Toronto and then met him in London. It was a diff Sidney Furie. Much like when I knew Norman Jewison he was struggling in London. He didn't do too well in To but had wonderful creative ideas. He was able to bridg gap from television to get to Hollywood. Hollywood changed though, it's not what it used to be at all. The old have their foot prints in the cement in front of Graun Chinese Theatre, but that's about all.

Television runs at a hectic pace and most peop television are a generation younger than myself. But as there's no great market for writers in Canada yet. But will be. People say, why put on a Canadian play? I've heard people say that in Kingston. Well then, why use Canadian actors, Canadian composers, Canadian artists. We're so self conscious about our Canadian artists. We're so self conscious about our Canadian image that if we're Canadian we apologize for being Canadian and they apologize for trying to do something. And this has held quite a few people back, but now I think people have gotten the impetus to create and are going right forward. Canadian writers are making it, novelists and scriptwriters are, too.

e, Prophet, Personality

ournal: How do you feel about being a generation older than most of your colleagues, particularly when it is said that a criptwriter's creative lifetime is at most 20 years?

arding: Well, that's probably why I'm in semi-retirement. I ot out when the going was good. I worked on a show for 13 ears and its still paying me money. Let's look at it that way. have the single rights to it. "Life with the Lyons" is still oing on in various parts of the empire where they're not rribly enlightened. But I'm glad to be a generation older. here's certain things in my life that I wouldn't change for ything. I went to England when I was 18 years old, went rough Germany, suddenly found myself one day in front of e British Ambassador and was put on a plane and had to go ck to London because there was a Munich crisis and I dn't heard anything about it. There was a group of nadians and Americans and a few English and we were nt back to London. I was in London at the outbreak of war. I ed in England right after the war, not during it. But I went ck there and lived through some very exciting times and I uldn't change them for anything.

urnal: How do you feel the younger generation of writers easures up to your generation?

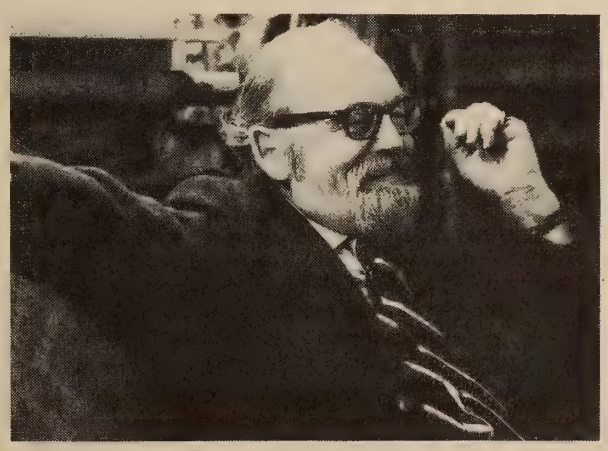
rding: I think they're better. They're less inhibited. More nest too. You often use four letter words to say it. People e swearing more and enjoying it less. But they make their nt. I think they're definitely much more frank, more nest. They just won't stand for the hypocrisy. Just take a k at the movies. I go back to the days when in "Gone With e Wind" Clark Gable said "damn" and there was a hold up the front office for nine months before the film could be eased. Just because he said "frankly my dear, I don't give amn". And then 17 years ago Otto Premminger used the rd "virgin" and "affair" and "sex" and the film was held but he finally released it anyway. There's more freedom I don't mean skin movies and that type of thing, but nest movies. They tell it the way it is and that's the way it uld be.

urnal: How do you feel about shows like All In the Family Maude? They are extremely honest, to say the least.

rding: Well, of course, I'm very fond of those because ude is an off shoot of Archie Bunker's show and the ker show was originally British to start with, Johnny ght's "Til Death Us Do Part". British T.V. makers paved way and they are removing the trite, 'father is an idiot e of situation comedy, because father should not really be an idiot. So that shows like "Lucy" will disappear. Shows like Archie Bunker, shows like Maude tell it the way it should be. A middle aged woman with four husbands behind her talks about being pregnant and wanting an abortion and they got laughs out of it and yet they played it straight.

Journal: What do you think of Archie Bunker as a character? There has been a lot of controversy about him.

Harding: I like him. He's a type, he's Mr. America, I think. Really a Jiggs of a generation ago, he's Andy Gump of two generations ago. There are a lot of Archie Bunker's in this world. I think they taper off occasionally and pull in their horns. They're afraid of going too far. But they've paved the way for hundreds of other shows.



Journal: How does your Mrs. Gordon compare to Maude and Archie Bunker?

Harding: Mrs. Gordon is a type too. She plays a doddering old woman, with great charm and great compassion. She's kept up with things. She mentions in a line of the play "sex" and that in her generation she wouldn't have mentioned it in front of her husband or her mother. Now that she's mentioned it, she thinks it's right to because after all, sex had its tercentenary a long time ago.

Journal: Of all the people you've worked with, who did you enjoy working with most?

Harding: Jack Benny I guess. He's easier to work with. He was a very generous, warm hearted, easy going man. He's not as manic as the others. Some of them are almost schizoid.

Journal: How did you get into T.V.

Harding: There are so few outlets for your stuff these days. I never cracked the magazines, I never tried. When I was younger I had an agent, I still do and he steered me into television because that's where the money is. And when you start making $800 or $900 a week you're quite happy to pick it up. Your scripts are sold for you, you pass them over and that's it. Today you can be a very good writer and you can have a government grant and then a government publisher. There's no other outlet, there's nobody that's going to buy your stuff. I was in the CBC once and sitting across the desk from Nathan Cohen. He turned down the biggest and best play I've ever read in my life. "Flight Into Danger" by Arthur Hailey. Cohen was a brilliant man and a very good critic, but a lousy script reader. He didn't have any idea what was commercially feasible and what wasn't. He just didn't understand what was a good television vehicle and what the medium would require. He thought it was trite and better for film than T.V. It has been made into a movie, "Airport" and Hailey made a million from the first play. It was made into a movie in Britain and they sold the script again, bought the English film back and redid it in Hollywood.

Journal: What do you think of Kingston as a theatre town?

Harding: Very good indeed, far above average, really. Now not everybody goes to the theatre. And the Grand Theatre, I would imagine is quite an uphill struggle because you're re-educating people. Shaw said, "It's harder to re-educate them than to educate them." This is true. But in this town, we have some very talented people. Many more than you'd find in a comparable sized town of 60,000. But I wouldn't want to mention any names.

Journal: It's been said that Kingston is the up and coming place for theatre in this country, that we have more openings per capita than any other city.

Harding: I think its true. And I think it's because of the influence of the university. In this production I have two professors from RMC, two from Queen's, a Ph.D and two B.A. students. These are people who are doing creative things. There really is something else, as an alternative to Hockey. There has to be.

Journal: And so even though Canada and Canadians seem to have a self-consciousness about their own kind of theatre, we here in Kingston seem to be outside that.

Harding: We're lucky you see, we are half way between.We almost overlap into Metro Toronto's geographical area, we're close to Ottawa and we've suddenly become aware of the fact that it's our Capital city. They've built a beautiful Arts centre, a fabulous place for the performing arts. In the future, a lot of shows will be brought to the O'Keefe and the Arts Centre and eventually to Kingston. Just as the Shaw festival comes to Kingston to preview now.

Journal: What would you say is the future of the theatre, taking into account the lack of activity on Broadway this year?

Harding: Exciting. But it's an uphill fight and it always has been. They've always said the theatre was dying. Back in Grecian times, in Roman times, they said it in Pre-War times, they said it during the war. But nothing will really kill off the theatre.

Journal: What has theatre got that makes it so invulnerable?

Harding: I think it offers people a chance to escape. And you can participate in theatre. In a way it's something like radio. It can stimulate people's minds in a way that television will never do. Television will hypnotize them and that's it. The idiot box! Whereas theatre will stimulate you and make you think and this, of course, is what theatre is for.

Journal: Yet you enjoy writing for television more than for theatre. That's a strange dichotyme, isn't it?

Harding: I like theatre and I'll always write for theatre and television, but one has to support the luxury of the other. It's due to the economics of the game.

Journal: There was an article in the Globe and Mail recently, about the death of the West End in London. What do you think is happening there?

Harding: The conventional theatre is dying. The fringe theatre is on the move. Improvisation. Theatre in clubs, hotels. The classical three act play may die for a while but it will come back because they're doing revivals. It's interesting in the West End, the ones that are successful. The plays of Oscar Wilde, Noel Coward, Chekov and O'Neill. The Great writers of a generation ago. The Harold Pinters and those like him are writing in the fringe theatre.

Journal: Do you think Canadian theatre will ever come into it's own?

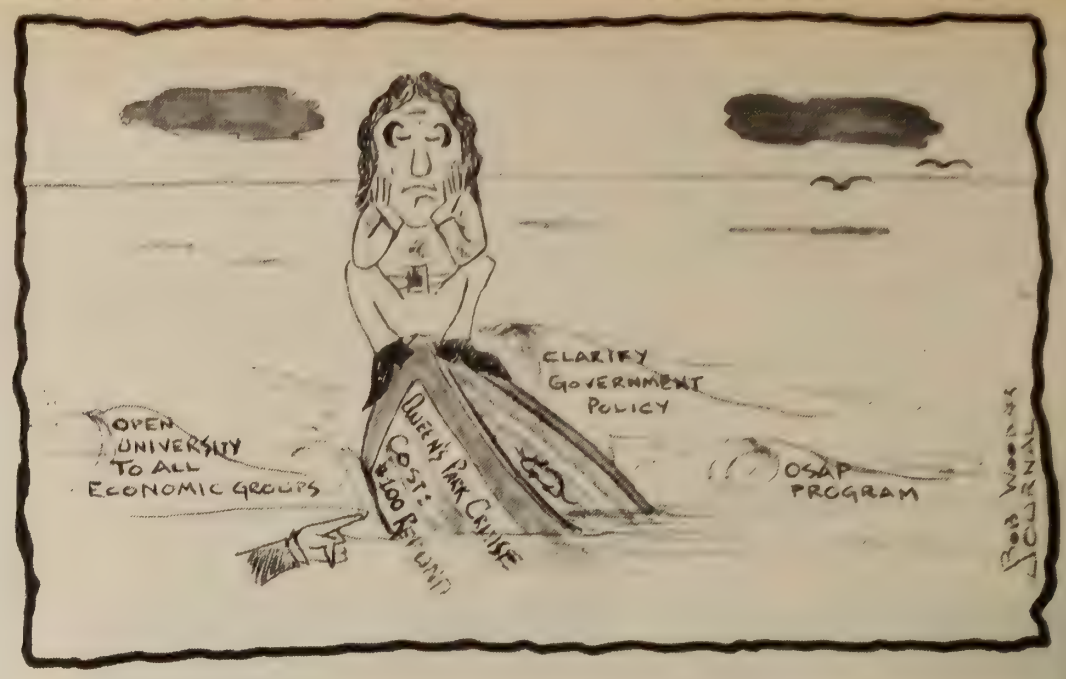
Harding: Oh yeah, I think it is now. Look at the Shaw Festival. And the shows that have been running in Toronto. "Creeps" and that great new play "Leaving Home". It has wonderful feeling, such humanity. It's love of people, and its comedy was a natural comedy. It was the comedy of life, the human comedy. Theatre is alive and well. It may be protesting but it's made in Canada.

letters

More criticism of Centre

Dear Editor:

In a letter to the Journal on December 8, Dean Soberman described my questioning of the proposals for the University Centre as "abuse" and "misrepresentation" of a sort which in future did not deserve and answer. Perhaps he was correct; I didn't think so. In fact, it appears that the serious questions I raised in the letter Dean Soberman objected to have also been treated as though they did not deserve an answer, for my contentions -- that the need and demand for centralization of facilities has not yet been proven; that present proposals for a University Centre imply high costs for relocating in a central building services which are already adequately housed; and that emphasis on subcentres would produce better community planning -- have so far been largely ignored.



At the risk of incurring Dean Soberman's wrath once again, or of again being ignored, I would like to suggest what, in my opinion, is the true lesson to be learnt from the recent thinking of the architect and the University Centre Committee about a University Centre without a bookstore.

The architect and the Committee have found that without a bookstore there are real savings in cost and improvements in the arrangement of facilities. Nevertheless, in the proposed construction extending northwards from the Union there are still high unnecessary costs which perhaps are not apparent at first sight. Two handsome houses, which are good office space and excellent from student services, will have to be torn down and new space built to replace them. It will still be difficult to join the new building to the Union. All of the money spent on this sort of relocation of existing facilities could be better used elsewhere. The campus-at-large has still not received enough attention from the Committee.

The University Centre Committee has found that by reducing the size of the central facility there are significant savings, and more sensible arrangements of facilities. Having now looked at one plan which included a new building, and a second plan which included an addition to the Union, they should go one step further, and ask their architect to prepare a third plan, emphasizing subcentres, with no new construction whatsoever near the Union. It is logical to suspect that this, by capitalizing on the advantages already perceived in a small "Centre", would produce even more savings and advantages of location. Some decentralization, some improvemnt; more decentralization, more improvement.

The criticisms of the proposals for a centralized University Centre made by myself and others have been offered in an attempt to ensure that the Queen's campus develops in the best possible way. The open meeting of the University Centre Committee and subsequent discussions in the Journal have, to say the least, not shown that there is muc h enthusiasm for centralization. Several voices have spoken against it, while in support have only been Committee members. Shouldn't the University Centre Committee consider the substance of these outside criticisms in the spirit of good faith in which they have been offered, and ask their architect to produce the third, subcentre oriented plan, rather than dismiss criticism as "abuse" and "misrepresentation"?

C. E. S. Franks

A violent sport

Dear Editor,

In fairness to Mr. McKenney of the Carleton hockey team. I am enclosing a letter I received in response to my letter printed in last Friday's Journal, and entitled "Exasperation". I wish only to make two comments. First, both Maki and Green were suspended from professional hockey (which may have been a mitigating circumstance) for an extensive period of time. Secondly, if Mr. Wyght would refer to the letters of Mssrs. Prtichard and Palmer in the Journal of January 23, 1973, and compare them to my letter I'm sure he will, indeed, agree that my letter is only "a short note". However, I am flattered that Mr. Wyght should have taken the time to count the words in my letter. In recognition of gargantuan effort, I will not recount the words to see if he was correct.

Yours very truly,
R. Ross Dunsmore

Dear Mr. Dunsmore,

Regarding your letter to the editor (The Queen's Journal, Friday, January 19, 1973, page 7).

I, too was at the Gaels vs. Ravens hockey game but apparently you and I saw two different events. What I saw was that John Smith did not check the Carleton player, who happened to by No. 21, Dave McKenny by the way, cleanly and that John Smith was kneeling on the ice when he was slashed.

In my opinion, McKenny's attack was not malicious. The Carleton goalie had frozen the puck, the play was whistled dead, Smith then knocked McKenny to the ice in an unfair manner. McKenny's reaction was natural, by Canadian standards. It was unfortunate that Smith's mouth was in the way. If McKenny's stick had hit the blades of Smith's skates would you still have written your letter?

In no way did McKenny commit a "criminal act". He slashed Smith, drew blood and received the appropriate five-minute penalty.

From your two sentences: "In any case, he should certainly receive the same type of punishment as Maki and Green. Expulsion - remove this damned spot." What punishment did Green and Maki receive?

Lastly, since when was a "short note" 226 words long!

Yours sincerely,
Geoffrey J. R. Wyght

U of M student strike

Dear Editor,

I would like to correct a few facts in the CUPI news item "U. of Montreal militants in court" that you covered last Friday.

The strike lasted from the 4th of October 71 to the 1st of November, ie. a period of 4, not "about six weeks" and was carried out by the secretaries not the maintenance workers who simply refused to cross the picket lines. The strike support committee was created at the beginning of the strike and not in response to the firing of security guards mislabelled as strike breakers. Indeed there was no attempt by the University to introduce "scab" personnel into the buding.

The violence that occured was caused by the decision of the strike support committee to deny entrance to faculty and students in the third week of the strike while the striking union had stated their desire to see students and faculty reintegrate the building. This strike support committee recruited students and non U of M students to act as guards at the door. This prompted the hiring of security guards by the University. There was some window breaking and stone throwing on Thursday the 21st and that with the incident of the night patrol prompted the closure of the University until the first of November.

As for the night patrol incident the facts were never clear as to whom provoked whom, even if some of us did ask for explanatins.

Finally the Criminology centre is not notorious only for helping the mentioned countries but also for studies of delinquency and on the death penalty. The image of a fascist supporting centre has been created but is not correct.

I hope that these few points will help your readers get their facts straight.

Yours truly,
Francois Vaillancourt

Men's room sexist

An Open Letter to the Proprietors of the Manor (and other Kingston Pubs with Men's Rooms)

My friends and I (Queen's students) have decided that we will no longer frequent the Manor (as we have done in the past) until there is some change in your policy concerning the men's room.

In our opinion men's rooms in drinking establishments are anachronisms, hanging over from Victorian days when women were regarded as inferior companions and would leave the room while the men lit their cigars, poured themselves a drink and discussed the affairs of the world.

In this enlightened age there is no reason to divide the sexes and in fact it is unfair to unescorted men to shove them into a separate room when they have no desire to be isolated from female company.

On a recent visit to the Manor our party was divided in order to get a place to sit and the considerate gentlemen who waited for more vanancies while we sat down were forced to part our company for the men's room. Needless to say this spoiled our evening.

Before we return our patronage to your establishment (and we ask others to protest in a similar way) we would like you to eliminate the men's room or provide a women's room to give single women equal privilege.

With every intention of acting,
Stella Strungout, etal

Tutor fired

Dear Editor,

I have just attended what could have easily been labelled a farcical exhibition of unjust accusations on helpless undergraduate students. It seems that my class for the convenience of two feuding instructors has been placed in the middle of a blood bath which I personally cannot condone. Evidently a certain department head has fired a tutor based on supposed evidence collected from various members of our tutorial class. But when questioned, they seemed innocent of relaying such incriminating evidence to the department head, at least not of the nature, in my judgment, that would merit expulsion. Either everyone in our class is a liar or we are being used by both sides to lay blame on the other. My gripe is that as an individual I object to holding the responsibility of any person losing their job when I have not delivered any testimony and neither has the majority of the class. We are not the pawns of hierarchy.

Yours sincerely,
A concerned observor

Ed Note -- We'd like to hear more about this.

ART
MUSIC-DANCE
POETRY-DRAMA

February 1-3

THREE DAYS OF EXPERIMENTS in the ARTS

in the
Agnes Etherington Art Centre
8:30 p.m.
FREE

Queen's
Division of Concerts
presents

THE FRENCH STRING TRIO

DUNNING HALL SERIES NO. 3

Thursday 1 February

8:30 p.m.

SOLD OUT

CARNAVAL de QUEBEC

Final Big Weekend
(March 2,3, 4)

$30 All Welcome

- Includes accomodation in downtown area and bus to and from Quebec.
- Only 4 buses going.

BOOK NOW! LIMITED SPACE!

- Deposit of $10 due before Feb. 9. Balance by Feb. 21.
- Sign up at the Bus Service Desk in the basement of the Union.

Sponsored by ARTSCI '76

"Wax Works"

Some New Singles and Grammy Predictions

by Geoff Henning

1...Living in the Past - Jethro Tull

This song is from the album of the same name. The album was recorded in parts from the time of their first album until just before Thick as a Brick and it received a gold record late last year in the U.S. The single, a good combination of Jan Anderson's vocal and flute work, was released in Canada early this year after showing good success in the States.

2...Ventura Highway - America

This record is taken from the album Homecoming; it shows fine guitar and vocal harmony. America is continuing to reap success since the release of the first album and the singles from it, Horse with no Name and I Need You.

3...Papa Was a Rolling Stone - Temptations.

This song was written by the team of Whitfield and Strong who have had such famous hits as I Heard it Through the Grapevine and I'm Losing You. The record is a strong variation of Shaft; the "A" side is a seven minute instrumental and vocal, and the flipside is a five mnnute instrumental.

4...If You Don't Know Me By Now - Harold Melvin and the Bluenotes.

A re-released single by a new group to the Canadian music scene, the slow moving recording shows excellent background vocal work, reminiscent of old Four Tops Music.

5...Cover of the Rolling Stone - Dr. Hook and the Medicine Show.

This country-like single is a story about the group's failure to get their picture on the cover of Rolling Stone magazine. If they keep producing records like this they will have to settle for the cover of Golden Words.

6...Why Can't We Live Together - Timmy Thomas

This is a refreshingly simplistic song using only congas, organ and a single voice. The congas keep a steady Latin-American type beat; the organ work uses very easy chords (some times just a one note off-beat rhythm) and the story in the words is just a straight-forward statement of the title.

7...Superstition - Stevie Wonder

This is from the album Talking Book. It is easily his most powerful single since For Once In My Life. The single features the horn section from Paul Butterfield's now defunct group. The beginning sounds like Billy Preston's hit Outaspace.

8...Follow Your Daughter Home - Guess Who

This new single is different from many of the other Guess Who songs but Burt Cumming's voice gives away the identity of the group. It is a Jamaican single which I don't believe shows the full potential of the group.

9...Dreidel - Don McLean

This is from Don McLean's new album. Unfortunately this song (or any other on the album) doesn't come near the success potential of American Pie. But the record is quite good on its own merits (leaving comparisons aside). McLean is using more background music to enhance his singing and guitar.

Chronicles 16

A Discussion of "Fragments"

by Crabitha

I arrived at "Chronicles" on Tuesday evening in a state of gloom, desolation and a sense of the end of a beautiful relationship - and still thoroughly enjoyed it; which, I suppose speaks for itself. The characters-caricatures moved easily between two and three dimensions, always amusing and often tantalisingly suggestive of Deeper Meanings.

Jax, Max, and Baxter, the three male characters, presented a superbly unconvincing picture of the result of three human beings living together, exacerbating their separate hang-ups and successfully inhibiting their potential humanity.

Jax, "our representative from the land of croaking catatonics", (John Reeves), begins the performance with a dying gasp and death-rattle, and continues to die, on and off, for the next hour or so. His occasional agility confirming his health, he simply gets turned on by the act or art of dying. His one desire in life (? but let us not try to be too precise about these intermediate stages) is to persuade the other farewell letters to express his final sentiments to the great public figures of our time.

A more serious function of this character is to instantly deflate all attempts by the other characters to delude themselves or anyone else as to the possibilities of their humanity. This of course is an office all the characters perform for each other, to a greater or lesser extent, presenting an interesting possibility that the "message" of the play is that the prevention of hypocrisy caused by human beings knowing each other's faults, vices, and limitations is ultimately life-destroying: if you can't con somebody some of the time, humanity is impossible. The lives of the characters are reduced to the living-out of their worst sides, these being the only parts of them confirmed and recognized by the others, a reductive process which mediates towards their actually becoming living caricatures of their own vices.

Baxter, (Stephen Hair) the incorrigibly sly and sentimental dipso, is probably the least of a caricature and the most unpleasantly possible human character. He hops, squirms and expectorates about the room with such a continuingly disgusting air that I was amazed at his appearance in relative normality at the curtain-call.

Max (Allan Higden), the representative of respectability (he actually holds down a job as a clerk) with his little suit, his desk, his typewriter, his unbelievably resilient ideals, in this context can come to seem the maddest of all. What, after all, is he doing it for? The prosaic answer is probably bread, since even caricatures have to eat.

Their only shared delusion is an unshakeable faith in the experiences of their mutual childhood "when we were young . . ." recalled in sections which dispelled the last shred of sanity and caused even the ever-hopeful Ann to give up with them.

This female, (Lorna Wilson) who comes over ostensibly to help, delightfully exemplifies the truism that behind every normal girl is a nymphomaniac pride trying to get out, her faces, with a plasticity I had thought only cartoons could give, expressed various amalgoms of shock, eagerness, doubt, disapproval, lust and just repressed hysteria. "Everyone has their problems" - not a fact we are likely to forget for very long. Indeed- the final memorable symbol of this play has to be the knife that is tossed from character to character with the enthusiastic suggestion that they use it on themselves, taunting each other to a suicide which seems remarkably unnecessary.

Middledays

Friday, Saturday 26

Slot 14 - Seminar Bible Study on the Book of Habakkek with Dr. Bush. 208 Kingston Hall.

8:00 - 11:00 pm - International Centre Upper Lounge for the Love of Music presents "The Music Room." Any persons who enjoy playing music and would like to share it with us are welcome to come in and do so. Here's a chance to play a properly tuned piano.

7:30 pm - Chronicles 16: Fragments: Murray Schisgal. Tickets free in Drama Dept. Studio Theatre Room 102, Old Arts Building.

8:00 pm - Music Department presents Lecture-Recital by Christopher Weait (bassoon), Co-Principal Bassoon, Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Accompanied by George Brough, Piano. Dunning Auditorium.

8:00 pm - midnight - Arts Festival - blues, folk and classical music, art workshops and demonstrations, student films and feature films. In Students Union and Dupuis Hall.

8:00 pm - GSS Film Club presents The Shop On Main Street. Academy Award, Best Foreign Languarge Film. Ellis Hall. Tonight: Elrond College Open House. Refreshments. All persons welcome.

Saturday, January 27

Elrond College Open House all day. Refreshments. All persons welcome.

2:00 pm - Queen's Chinese Club presents Mandarin Chinese Movies, double feature with English Subtitles. Featuring Chinese Kung Fu and comedy. Dunning Hall. Admission $2.00.

8:30 pm - Dance. Hillel House. 26 Barrie Street. Live Entertainment.

Bitter Grounds: Doug Steiger will not be at the Coffee House this week end. It will re-open on the week-end of February 9 and 10th.

Sunday, January 28

10:30 am - A Folk Mass in Dunning Auditorium followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House.

11:00 am - University Service. Memorial Chapel.

4:00 pm - Eucharistic Celebration at Queen's. Theological Hall. Faculty Lounge. (2nd Floor). All welcome.

7:00 pm - Folk Mass in the Senior Common Room at McArthur Hall.

7:30 pm - Queen's Chinese Club presents Mandarin Chinese Movies, double feature with Eng. subtitles, featuring Chinese Kung Fu and Comedy. Dunning Aud. Admission $2.00.

Monday, January 29

8:30 pm - Kingston Music Club. A special tercentenary program in conjunction with Chalmers United Church, featuring the Chalmers' choir and soloists under the direction of David Cameron. The program will consist of music by composers alive in 1673 and will include Purcell's Dido and Aeneas. Chalmers United Church.

Tuesday, January 30

9:00 pm - Department of Film Studies, Fellini and The Italian Cinema presents Il Bidone. (Fellini, 1955). Ellis Hall.

Wednesday, January 31

8:00 pm - Student Recital. Dunning Auditorium. Bachelor of Music Students in solo and chamber ensemble performances.

8:30 pm - Queen's Musical Theatre will present Wonderful Town. Grand Theatre. Tickets are $2.00 and students $1.50. Running until Feb. 3.

8:30 pm - McArthur Theatre Arts presents The Caucasian Chalk Circle by Bertolt Brecht, student directed and student actors. John Burgess director, Owen Moulton associate director. McArthur Theatre - Union St. and Sir John A. Tickets $1.00 or phone 547-6666. Running Wed., Thurs., Fri., Jan. 31, Feb. 1 and 2.

Off Campus

January 26, 27 and 28 - The Quiet Rebellion of Mrs. Mary Gordon at the Domino Theatre. Tickets available at Domino and Mahoods. Running for the following two weekends also.

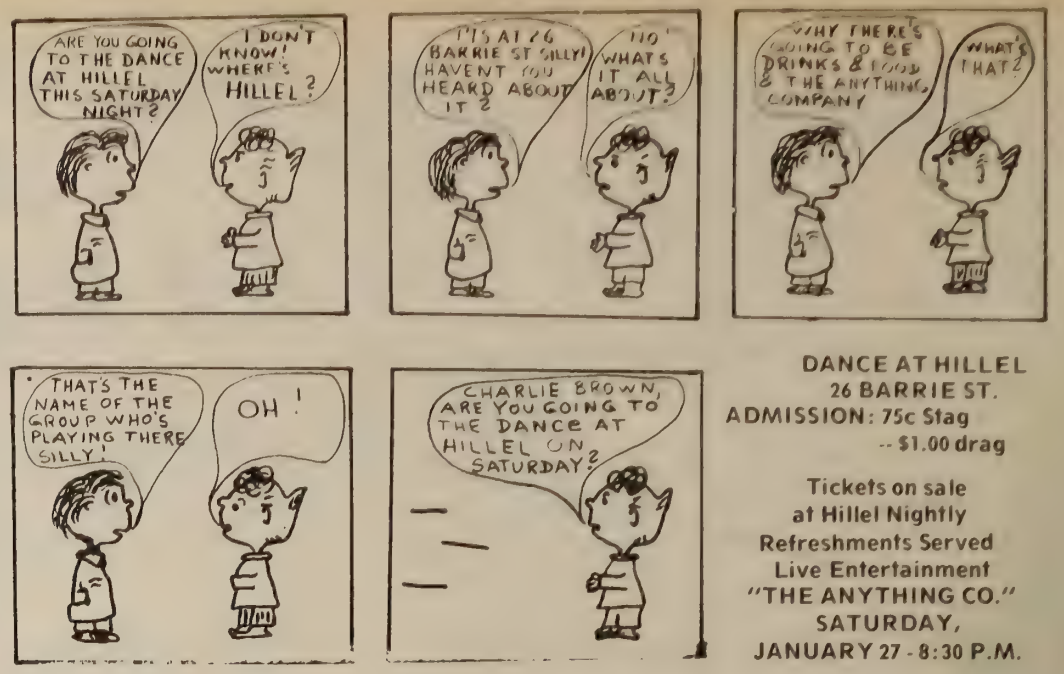
Theatres
Capitol - The Revengers
Hyland - Young Winston
Odeon - The Poseidon Adventure

Pubs
Commodore - The Glesaoniaires
401 Inn - The Newcomers
Manor - Julie Lynn
Townhouse Pub - Carnival

CFRC am-fm

Weekend AM Highlights

Friday, Jan. 26



10:00 "NOCTURNE ON THE WHO" - Queens Radio presents a four hour look at THE WHO, one of the most influential rock bands of the 60's and 70's, on both 1490AM, and 91.9 FM.

Saturday Jan. 27

8:00 GOLDEN GAEL HOCKEY - Queen's vs Brock University.

Sunday, Jan. 28

"SUNDAY MORNING" - Four hours of pop and folk music for the "AM" audience. Classics are featured on 91.9 FM in the same time slot.

DANCE AT HILLEL
26 BARRIE ST.
ADMISSION: 75c Stag
-- $1.00 drag

Tickets on sale
at Hillel Nightly
Refreshments Served
Live Entertainment
"THE ANYTHING CO."
SATURDAY,
JANUARY 27 - 8:30 P.M.

SEND A BILL TO BILL

Bill Davis, Jack McNie, and Syl Apps are waiting for a letter like this:

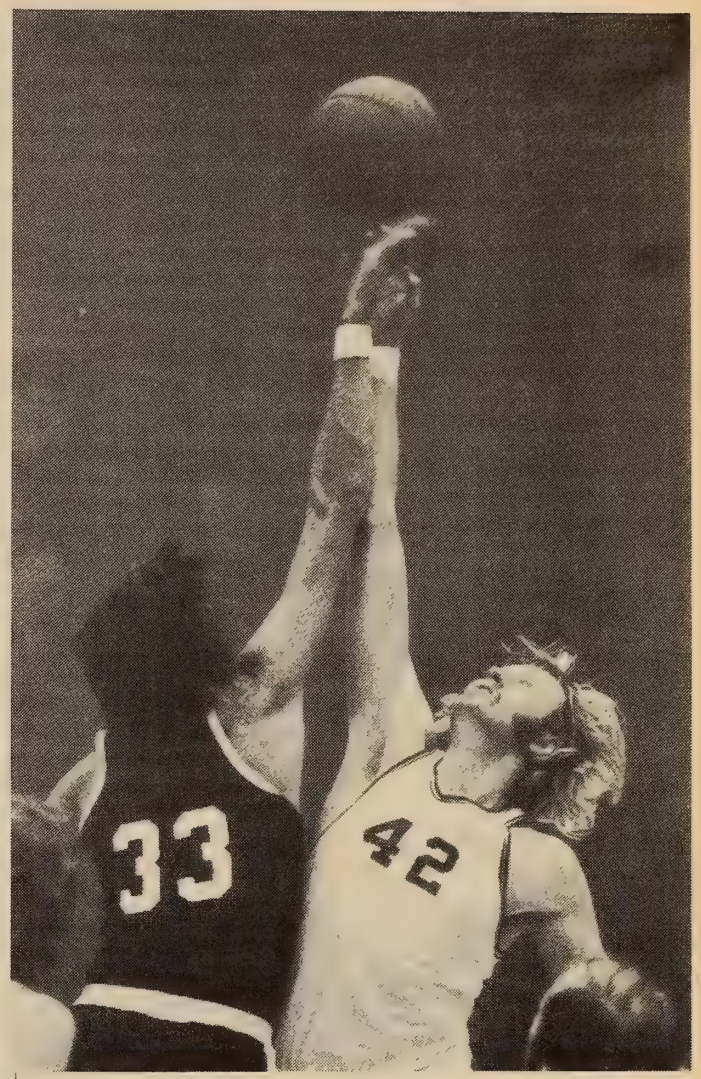
I am withholding my fees in support of:

1. The government clarifying its position on higher education for 1973-74.
2. The provision for greater accessibility through grants under OSAP.
3. The lowering of the OSAP age of independence.
4. Making OSAP open to part-time students.

Along with your own explanation of WHY

Howard leads Gaels to 69-57 win

by Chris Boon



The Basketball Gaels responded to the need to win on Tuesday night, riding a 20-point performance by veteran Paul Howard to a 69-57 victory over the Ottawa U. GeeGees. It was Queen's second win in six league games, and keeps their hopes of a playoff berth alive.

The key to the Gaels' victory was a hustling, ball-hawking zone defense that manhandled the lanky Ottawa forwards and lured their guards out beyond their effective shooting range. Howard, who played his best game of the season, was in fine form, hauling down 16 rebounds, blocking shots, and generally controlling the inside play. Although Ottawa's centre Merv Sabey led all scorers with 22 points, he took well over 20 shots, hitting on just 6 of them; Howard blocked three, despite the fact that he gives away 2 inches (and about 30 pounds) to the Ottawa player.

Corky McCleery, who has moved into a starting role with the Gaels, played his best defensive game, receiving all over the GeeGee forwards, and doing a fine job on the boards although he was a little shaky on offense (he commented after the game that he'd been "nervous as hell") for the first three quarters, his play in the final period was steady.

This was the first game Queen's has played in which they have outhustled their opposition for the entire forty minutes. Forward Norm Hagarty and guards Rob Smart and John Kech came up with about 20 steals amongst them, and the Gaels' fast break was a pleasure to watch. Offensively, Smart added 18 points ("I should have had about 30", he said later) and Keck 14, mostly on driving lay-ups, while Hagarty chipped in with 9 points, and some very tough rebounds, especially on the offensive boards.

The Gaels will make the long pilgrimage to Sudbury this weekend to take on Laurentian, who are undefeated (7-0) in OUAA league play. The Vee's beat Queen's 82-63 three weeks ago, but the Gaels are beginning to play like a very different ball club. A victory in the Nickle City would move them into a tie for the fourth and last playoff spot, and make the rest of the schedule very interesting; a loss would put the Gaels on the brink of elimination.

-mossman

Paul Howard strains to take jump from OU's Vince Lukenda.

From the sidelines...

by Chris Boon

Here we are again after a prolonged layoff, and things still look a little uncertain. Both basketball and hockey rebounded after a disasterous weekend with Tuesday-night wins but are going to need a consistent effort to make the playoffs. The b-ball Gaels looked very sharp indeed, especially on defense, while guard Rob Smart tied the Gee Gee's John Plaspacz up in knots all night) every time 'Max' dribbled behind his back, Plaspacz ended up going the wrong way. John Keck was having fun that way, too. However, Laurentian's pair of Vetire and Bishop won't be quite as easy to work on . . . they had 47 points between them last time, and that's too many.

Although I didn't see the game, reports indicate that Dave 'the Beast' Hadden made his presence felt in the Carleton game (2 goals and three assists aren't too bad for an itinerant fullback). Hadden has a habit of "following through" when he hits people -- something most hockey players (and a lot of football types) don't do -- which keeps the opposition flat on their collective ass. Jim Adair is another useful addition to the hockey scene here. His pro years with Oklahoma City make him hard to move from around the net, as his four-point effort against the Ravens indicates. The Gaels need more like him. Watch the Brock game this Saturday at 2:00 p.m. for more action.

Queen's hosts the OUAA Volleyball Championships tomorrow. We have an undefeated team, superbly coached by Vaclav Smola, and should be the favourites. Come on out and give these guys some support. They more than deserve it!

Speaking of support, fan turnouts at home games have not been overwhelming. It won't hurt you to miss a couple of hours in the pub to cheer on a team - the operative word being cheer. Most Queen's crowds are about as active as a mortician's convention on Sunday.

On the Gals' side, we have the OWIAA Indoor Archery Championships here Friday and Saturday. The Queen's team has been improving steadily for some time, and may be a real threat to take the title this year. Janet Spence could have a shot at the individual crown as well.

The senior B-Ball Gals should have a chance to rest their walking wounded a little on Saturday - Carleton isn't regarded as a powerhouse, so Brenda Mackie plans to give her bench a workout. The VB seniors won't have it as easy though. Both intermediate squads will be looking for wins against Ryerson Saturday, and they should get them. Several girls on both teams are very close to intercollegiate caliber, and should be a real help next season. It's too bad that the men can't maintain a JV squad like this - there are some good young players around who could benefit from playing regularly on a disciplined team.

In the pool, both the men's and women's teams will be in action tomorrow. The ladies host the Queen's Invitational meet with other OWIAA schools, while the men meet Plattsburgh in a dual meet. Larry Brawley, the men's swim coach, is nothing short of ectastic over his superb crop of rookies - Pearson, Ireland and Penner in particular. When a swimmer lowers his best time by a full 20 seconds (as Ireland did last Friday in the 1000 freestyle at Waterloo), it indicates nothing short of spectacular potential. Look for Queen's to move up a notch or three in the OU standing this year.

Track looks good, again, for the indoor season. Hugh Fraser and Dave Jarvis are running well, and a surprising crop of rookies are starting to give coach Rolf Lund some depth to draw on. The Gaels could well repeat as OUAA Indoor Titleists.

Finally, good luck to the hockey Gals in their western swing. I hope you do better than the men did last weekend.

Words from WIC

by Susana Trebuss

The term got off to great start with over 100 girls showing up for volleyball on Tuesday night. Teams winning both of their games were Arts No. 1, P.H.E. No. 1, Rehab-P.H.E. No. 2 and Arts No. 3 won one game each. If your team didn't win, don't despair - It's the participation that counts.

The volleyball tournament continues next week, on Tuesday, with each team playing only one game instead of two. Check the schedule in the locker room for when you play.

The Jogathon continues until Wednesday, Jan. 31st, so if you haven't had a chance to run yet, there's still time. You can run either on the indoor track above the arena, or out to McArthur and back if you prefer to brave the elements. Don't forget to mark your laps on the sheet in the arena.

Indoor softball began last night and continues on Thursday nights into March. If you like this sport, why not try the indoor version, and help support your team.

A refresher clinic was held for ringette on Wednesday. Games begin next Wednesday at 7:00 pm in the arena. This can be a co-ed sport, so if you've got a guy who'd like to play, bring him along.

For those who'd like to play squash, but don't really know how, there will be a clinic on Thursday, February 1, from 9:30 to 10:30 pm. Entries for the tournament close the following Monday.

Curling continues on Sunday afternoons (2 pm) at the Kingston Curling Club (behind the Gym).

It's good to see that the sports this term have started so well. We hope the participation continues.

OUAA V-BALL FINALS HERE SATURDAY

Queen's University will play host to the OUAA volleyball championships here on Saturday. Action will take place in Bartlett Gym and the first round will get underway at 1:30.The championship final will feature the top two teams and will be a best of five series. It will start at 7 p.m.

Queen's is hosting the tournament by virtue of the outstanding performance of this year's men's volleyball team. The team itself has not lost a game in league play all year and wound up in first place in the East Division. The other eastern team will be York University of Toronto while the west division will be represented by Waterloo and Guelph. The Gaels lost to York in the semi-finals of the Waterloo Invitational Tournament held last fall. In league play, however, Queen's won both series of games by scores of 2-1 and 2-0. Strong contingents are expected from the west division and it looks like a fine sports attraction.

The Queen's team won the OUAA last year and finished third in the CIAU national championships. It is led by player-coaches Vaclav Smola and George Janota. John Capek, Ray Davis, Dale Huddleston, Dave Mason, Frank Massong, Mark Peacock, Alan Scott, and Steve Seabrooke make up the rest of the squad.

Remember, action gets underway on Saturday, January 27th, at 1:30 p.m. in Bartlett Gym. Queen's meets Guelph in the first game at 1:30 while Waterloo will take on York. It promises to be an exciting afternoon. This is a good team. Please support it.

'Beast' beats Ravens in final minute

by Peter Watts

Queen's Golden Gaels, hockey edition, climbed back into a tie for fourth place on Tuesday night with a come-from-behind 5-4 victory over the Carleton Ravens in an OUAA game in Ottawa. The Gaels now have eleven points, the same number as the University of Ottawa GeeGees in the battle for the fourth and final playoff spot in the East Division.

For a while, things did not go well for Queen's. The Ravens got off to a good start early in the first period after the Gaels had kept the play in the Carleton zone. At the 2:46 mark of the opening period, Bill Potter opened the scoring for Carleton. Eleven minutes later, the Ravens made it 2-0 on a goal by Mark Waxer.

The two teams traded goals in the second period. Jim Adair got his third of the year at the 2:15 mark, taking a pass from Steve Gross and firing a hard slapshot from just outside the blueline that grazed the inside of the post and went in. Carleton got that back 13 minutes later when Bill Potter got his second of the game at the 15:02 mark. At the end of the period, things looked rather black for Queen's with the Ravens holding a 3-1 lead.

The third period, however, was something else. Jim Sunstrum got his tenth of the year at the 9:39 mark. Carleton scored again - this time by Mike Ruddy - to make it 4-2 for Carleton.

Thus we arrive at the 14 minute mark of the period. At that point, the Beast went to work. Dave Hadden, who had been the best player on the ice all evening for Queen's, scored twice in the next five minutes and set up a third goal to pull the victory out for the Gaels. Hadden scored at the 14:44 mark. Colin Loudon tied the game 15 seconds later and Hadden got the winner with just 55 seconds to play in the game. This last goal was a particularly fine individual effort as Hadden went into the corner against two Carleton defenders, stole the puck, came out to the side of the net, and beat goalie Ray Ralph on the short side.

The game was a quiet affair from a penalty standpoint; only four minor penalties were called. Dave McKenney, who earned the ire of Queen's supporters last week when he flattened John Smith with a high stick did not see action on Tuesday night. Both teams stuck pretty much to hockey. The Gaels outshot the Ravens 37-22 over the game but in the first two periods could not beat Ralph.

On the whole, it was not a bad effort. Jim Adair and Jim Sunstrum both had stronger games than they did last weekend in Toronto and Guelph. Coach Bob Carnegie made use of the power play in the last period even though both teams were at full strength. The move paid off as the Gaels got three goals.

Queen's fans will get an opportunity to see their team tomorrow night, when Brock Badgers invade the Harty Arena at 8 p.m. A good crowd would be in order.

GAELS GRAFFITI

. . .WINGER John Smith is now out of the hospital but will see no further action this season . . . Colin Loudon was restored to centre ice Tuesday night, playing with John Cerre and Mike Lynch. In the first two periods, it was probably the best threesome for Queen's . . . Bill White continues to play some of his best hockey since coming to Queen's . . . Hadden now has 3 goals in his last two games, more than he got in the first half of the season . . . he played a helluva game Tuesday night and may be the shot in the arm the Gaels have needed . . . the win was worth more than just 2 points; it was a morale-booster that the whole team needed . . . a special tip-o-the-hat to Tom Base, Jim Malcolm, (even in your condition) and the other dozen or so Queen's fans who went to Ottawa for the game. Hellova job gang! Well done.

merithew

Dave 'the beast' Hadden puts puck behind Raven goalie.

OUAA-EAST STANDINGS

	W	L	T	GF	GA	PTS
Toronto	9	0	0	81	16	18
York	7	2	1	74	38	15
Laurentian	6	3	1	55	37	13
Ottawa	5	3	1	60	48	11
QUEEN'S	5	4	1	54	42	11
Carleton	1	9	1	41	70	3
Ryerson	0	9	0	21	104	0

ASUS ELECTION

Nominations are now being received for the following ASUS positions

- ☐ President and vice-president (team)
- ☐ Secretary
- ☐ Treasurer
- ☐ Senator (Two-Year term)
- ☐ Senator (One-year term)
- ☐ Nine (9) AMS Representatives at Large

Nominations must include acceptance by the candidate, name and address and the supporting signatures of 25 ASUS members with their years. Nominations must be handed in to the AMS office by 5 pm, Wednesday, January 31. The election will be held the following week.

Need information? Contact Doug Donald at 544-0657

SNOWBALL PUB

"bramble"

2:00 p.m. - 1 a.m.

Dining Hall

McArthur Hall

Entertainment by the Bramble,
9:00 p.m. - 1:00 a.m.

OWIAA Archery:

Championships

The OWIAA Archery championships get underway this afternoon at 2 p.m. in Bartlett Gym. Teams from Toronto, McMaster, Guelph, Western and Queen's will take part in the two-day competition which runs from 2-6 p.m. on Friday and from 9-12 Saturday morning.

In the past year, Toronto has won the archery championship with Western and McMaster fighting it out for second place. This year Queen's, with a veteran team, is expecting to make a strong run at the perrenial powers. Coach Keith Kiell is hoping for a strong performance from Janet Spence who at present is second in the overall individual standings to Anne Chalmers of Toronto. The overall champion is declared on the basis of performance in both the indoor and outdoor competitions. The outdoor championships were held last September in Windsor.

In addition to Janet, her sister Judy, plus Lynn Wilson, Peggy McLeod, Marie Iwaniw and Suzanna Trebuss comprise Queen's archery team. With a couple of breaks, coach Kiell is hoping for a good showing this weekend. If you're not busy, drop in. Good luck girls.

bews news

by Peter Watts

Bews hockey is providing some very interesting races this year although it looks like Commerce '73 has a good shot at the championship. The Commercemen are yet to be beaten in six outings, having scored 24 goals while allowing only 5 to the opposition. At present they are on top of division A. Commerce '75 leads division B while Education with 9 points are front-runners in division C. And it is certainly nice to see that Arts '75 is atop division D. The Artsmen have lost only one game this year, and that was for having too many players. As of this writing, Arts '75 leads division D with 11 points on the strength of 5 wins and a tie.

The season will wind up early in February with the top two teams from each section playing a sudden death play-off. The four semi-finalists will then advance into the playoffs; the schedule has yet to be announced.

The weather has played havoc with the ski programs of the Queen's Ski Club, the Recreation Department and the Bews Program. Rolf Lund, supervisor of the Alpine Ski Meet has announced that the Bews Alpine Ski Meet has been postponed until next month for obvious reasons.

The free throw competition will be getting underway early next month; entries close next Thursday, February 1st at 12 noon. Registration is restricted to a maximum of 10 per cent of the enrollment of a Bews Unit. Most of the other individual sports - squash, badminton, table tennis, and handball - have started or will be starting within the next week. Schedules are posted in the locker room and students are urged to consult these.

A total of 21 teams are registered in the Bews ten-pin bowling league which got underway last week. Each team bowls once a week and the league is divided into Tuesday and Thursday sections. The Tuesday section finds Commerce '73 again at the top of the list with 17 points. Commerce '74A is second with 13 points and Mechanical B follows in third spot with 12 points. In the Thursday section, Mining A holds a slim lead over the B team from Civil and Math - 15-14-while Business Grads follow with 13 and Civil and Math A team with 11.

The Battle of the Bews rages hotter than ever as the intramural program moves toward the end of the term. The race is still up for grabs with at least 3 teams in the running. Civil and Math continue to hold down first place with Commerce '73 second and PHE third. Here are the top ten as of last Friday. Remember that these totals are not official in that some supervisors have not yet turned in a complete list of points for their particular sports.

1.	Civil and Math	28,643
2.	Commerce '73	25,338
3.	PHE	20,326
4.	Mechanical	18,546
5.	Mining	17,550
6.	Commerce '74	16,492
7.	Chemical	14,601
8.	Commerce '75	14,563
9.	Law '74	13,193
10.	Commerce '76	11,590

Curling Gals have problems

Queen's ladies' curling team were in Ottawa last weekend for the eastern sectionals hosted by Carleton University. The girls beat Toronto in the first game but lost to Trent, McGill, and Carleton. Trent and McGill wound up in first place with Toronto in third and Queen's fourth.

The team, coached by Chris Landreth, consisted of skip Helen MacRae, vice Kathy Naismith, second Judy Patterson, and lead Patti Gaudet.

The girls will see action two weeks from now, when they travel to Guelph to take part in the consolation round of the OWIAA curling championships. The western sectionals are being held this weekend at Waterloo Lutheran. The finals will be in Guelph on February 9th.

REMINDER

The second installment of fees due by January 31, 1973 can be paid in person at the Accountant's Office, Richardson Hall.

If you find it more convenient to mail your cheque to the Accountant's Office, please record your student number on the face of your cheque.

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY BANDS

Executive Elections

Nominations for candidates for the following positions on the 1973-74 Queen's Bands Executive should be forwarded to the Bands Manager, c-o AMS Office, by 3:30 p.m., Wednesday, February 7, 1973.

Bands Manager	Pipe Major
Assistant Bands Manager	Head Majorette
Concessions Manager	Head Highland Dancer
Quartermaster	Head Cheerleader
Brass Band Director(s)	Publicity Director

The Executive will be elected by current Bands members at the General Meeting, February 8, 1973, at 7:00 p.m., in Earl Hall, Room 111.
For further information, contact Jeff Chan at 544-7517, or c-o AMS Office.

COURSE CHANGES

Faculty of Arts and Science

Any change in registration must be made on an Academic Change Form. Dropping a course without obtaining the approval of the Associate Dean (Studies) on an Academic Change Form may result in failure in the course.

DEADLINES

January 31 - Last date for dropping a whole course or adding a second term half course.

February 28 - Last date for dropping a second term half course.

SNOWBALL '73

athletic night

a traditional rivalry between Queen's and RMC

•twelve intercollegiate teams competing for the coveted Leonard W. Brockington Trophy

•specialty demonstrations

•thrill of victory and the agony of defeat

come watch the Queen's teams defend their title

World: War over- Nixon optimistic, Thieu is pessimistic

WASHINGTON — The agreement to end the war in Vietnam was signed Tuesday in Paris by U.S. presidential advisor Henry Kissinger and North Vietnamese negotiator Le Duc Tho. It now only requires formal signing by the presidents of the two countries which will take place January 27.

In a televised announcement President Richard Nixon lauded the end of the war stating that a stable peace-one which would contribute to peace in South East Asia had been gained and added that all the conditions he set out last January had been met.

He stated that all Americans held prisoner by the Communist forces would be released within sixty days of the agreement and that there would be a concurrent movement of American forces out of Vietnam.

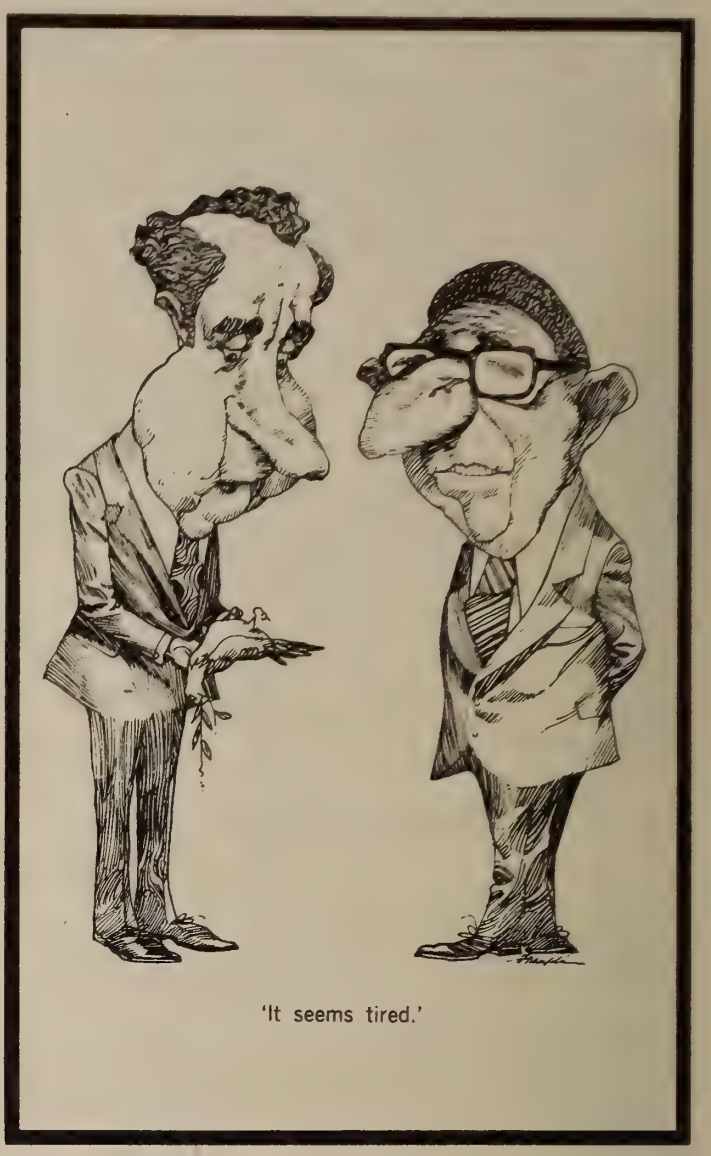
Nixon stated that peace with honour had been attained and that the goal of the right of self-determination for the people of Vietnam had been gained. "We have gotten the right kind of peace", he said.

SAIGON — In his formal statement announcing the end of the Vietnam conflict, South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu pessimistically warned that "there is no guarantee that the peace will be ideal or lasting".

Thieu predicted a difficult and dangerous political struggle for Vietnam and accused the Communists of not having a good will for peace.

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Supreme Court has overruled all state laws that prohibit or restrict a woman's right to obtain an abortion during her first three months of pregnancy.

In making the announcement the court stated that during the first three months the decision to have an abortion does not rest with the state but with the woman and her doctor.



According to the ruling, abortions during the next six months of the pregnancy would still be open to state legislation. The court action will mean a reversal of position for forty-six American states where abortions have been either totally illegal or placed under heavy restrictions.

SAIGON — As an act of good faith the North Vietnamese have released fifty South Vietnamese soldiers captured during a raid last Friday. The soldiers, many of whom were wounded in the raid, were released with safe conduct passes to get them through the North Vietnamese lines.

DETROIT — In one of the largest recalls yet, General Motors has asked that the owners of full-sized 1971 and 1972 Chevrolets, Pontacs, Buicks and Oldsmobiles bring them back for fitting of shields at the bottom to prevent gravel from impairing the steering mechanism.

In all, 3.7 million cars are recalled, some of them for the second time. In 1971 General Motors recalled 6.7 million cars.

The company had received reports of 96 incidents where gravel from the roadway bounced into the steering and jammed it. The company has received record of 23 accidents and 12 injuries as a result of the hazard.

'It seems tired.'

backpage

backpage

Expected by summer

Canada: New narcotics act coming - eased pot rules

OTTAWA — Cannabis, heroin and speed have come under scrutiny by the Department of National Health and Welfare with a possible liberalization of their use and redefinition under a new governing act.

Non-medical use of drugs is presently covered under the Narcotics Control Act administered by the National Food and Drug Administration which also regulates the use of medical drugs prescribed by doctors.

In promising the setting up of the legislation in the near future, Health Minister Marc Lalonde stated that less severe penalties would be introduced to govern the use of certain non-medical drugs than presently exist under the old act.

The legislation will probably come before parliament this summer.

KINGSTON — Sydenham Ward Alderman Keith Norton has called for a cooling off in this city's crusade against crime which he said is producing a "rising degree of fear." He criticised the encouragement of uninformed views and complained that there was too much speculation and too much action on too many fronts.

In their concern over this city's extremely low crime solving rate, there has been an outgrowth of citizens groups, police meetings, hot line shows and declarations from the mayors office during the past two months.

Norton feels, however, that people should leave the problem to the people that know what it is about.

OTTAWA — In her continuing concern over the rising cost of food in North America, Kingston and the Islands MP Flora MacDonald has been severely critical of the Liberal government for not introducing temporary food price control legislation.

Canada was faced with an 8.8 per cent increase in the price of food to the consumer last year, an increase which lowered the 1961 food dollar to a value of fifty-three cents.

A twenty-five member commons food price committee was set up Tuesday to investigate possible causes of food price increases and report back to the House.

Miss MacDonald expressed serious doubt as to what the committee might accomplish and is more concerned as to what will happen while they are investigating.

She pointed out that there are 6,000,000 people living under the poverty line in Canada and that they will be faced with even more price increases during the committee's deliberations.

CHARLOTTETOWN — Premier Alex Campbell has announced that he will be introducing legislation that will repeal that province's gift tax and Succession Duty Act introduced last year, a move which will make that province a tax haven for millionaires. In addition legislation has been prepared to reduce property taxes on the island.

OTTAWA — Flora MacDonald has been making herself well known on Parliament Hill in Ottawa, standing guard over minority rights, food prices and even injecting some parity for the women members of the predominantly male commons.

When the lists naming members to the parliamentary standing committees came out, Miss MacDonald noticed that where two men of the same last name appeared their ridings would be placed afterwards for identification purposes. Not so the women members. Miss MacDonald appeared on the lists as MacDonald, Miss, as her means of identification.

On pointing out the problem to the speaker of the House, Miss MacDonald was told that she had a valid point and he proceeded to revise the lists.

OTTAWA — The Canadian government is remaining cautious before committing themselves to providing a force for the supervision of the peacefire in Vietnam. External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp stated that he would wait to study the terms in more detail before announcing his intentions, but also pointed out that all the conditions previously set out by Canada would have to be met.

The terms set out just before Christmas required that an invitation would have to be received from all parties involved, the provision of a higher authority to which the force would report, freedom of movement and a truce agreed to by all combattants.

Defence Minister James Richardson stated that there are 400 men already trained to go as soon as approval has been given.

Queen's Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 34

Tuesday, January 30, 1973

Senate Kills Human problems

by Jennifer Grass

The idea of establishing a number of courses on the problems of humanity is now dead, so far as the Senate is concerned.

Student Senator, Stuart Searle introduced an amendment to a Senate report on human problems courses which amounted to a plea to the Senate to approve the concept of these courses. The amendment was defeated after considerable debate.

Continued on page 3

Whitham vs Brereton for AMS president

by Bob Wood

Nominatins for AMS president and vice-president closed last Friday with two tickets contesting the positions. External Affairs Commissioner Lyn Whitham and Steve Sugar, Concert Committee chairman have entered the election race as have Steve Brereton, IRC Chairman, and Internal Affairs Commissioner Bruce Trotter. This is the first of the Journal's

Continued on page 2

Queen's 1973-84 A History

(see page 12)

Women kept down because of 'genitals'

(see page 5)

"I'd rather stay home with my wife..."

(see page 11)

Fee withholding, Campus Comment

(see page 3)

Whitham-Sugar vs Brereton-Trotter for AMS race

Continued from page 1

continuing election coverage of the AMS election on February 7, 8.

Presidential candidate Steve Brereton is presently chairman of IRC member of the AMS Outer Council. He was also a co-ordinator of Wanderlust III, involved with residence life as a Brockington floor senior, and participated in orientation programs as a Boss and Gael. Running with him for vice-president is Internal Affairs Commissioner Bruce Trotter who has served as an ASUS representative and has also been active in orientation activities as a Frec and Gael.

Steve Brereton

Brereton and Trotter emphasized in Journal interviews that the AMS should take on a role to complement formal education. This might be done by bringing in speakers on world events of current interest such as the recent signing of the Vietnam Peace Treaty and presenting a symposium for interested students. Brereton pointed out that there is a shifting emphasis in education from the concept of job training to that of increasing personal growth and awareness. He added that it should be the goal of the AMS to meet this change in a complementary way such as organizing symposiums. Trotter indicated that communications between the AMS and campus and between AMS and other organizations should be a high priority. This attitude change involves "more personalized contact with what people want". Trotter added that better communications would create more interest in outer council and its untaxed resources would be stirred to action. He cited the hunt for workers for Snowball as an example of this need. Brereton mentined that psychological barriers between groups such as inter-faculty rivalries increase the isolation of the AMS from the campus at large.

Brereton and Trotter indicated that the matter of restructuring of the AMS should be looked into. Brereton proposed to strike a committee perhaps in March, to study the structure of the AMS to report back to council the second week in September. Trotter favoured a committee system to prepare long range papers on issues such as tenure or student entrepreneurship leaving the day to day administration to the commissions. Brereton anticipated difficulties with reviewing the structure of the AMS by AMS members since many see the loss of their seats as the result. He offered alternatively a composite committee of AMS members and persons from outside the structure to do the study.

The physical and social isolation of McArthur College "will be a big thing in a few years" Trotter cautioned. The Brereton-Trotter ticket considers the extension of more services to McArthur such as setting up a tuck shop as a partial solution. Both applauded the busing service as a step in the direction of better inter-campus relations.

Steve Sugar, Whitham's running mate, has been involved with the Pub, and the housing committee co-authoring the housing booklet. In November he assumed chairmanship of the AMS Concert Committee. Sugar stated that he was "not yet satisfied with the concerts; there's still a lot of reorganization that could be done and improvements that could be made." Sugar told the Journal that he and Whitham were running as "a balanced team with abilities, experience, and past performance in different but complimentary areas". The vice-presidential candidate suggested that AMS services could be improved with more efficient committees and the use of sound

Bruce Trotter

Lyn Whitham

business technique such as advertising.

Sugar proposed setting up a Business Advisory Committee and a University Affairs Committee to improve the functions of the AMS. The Business Advisory Committee would be a resource group of persons knowledgeable and experienced in using successful business techniques. "Why should we relearn every year?" questioned Sugar. "We have the expertise and experience available and should take advantage of it." The purpose of the University Affairs Committee would be to gather and distribute information so policy-makers would have hard facts to work with. Sugar intimated that it would serve as a stimulus having these resources available, to organizers of events like Suzi-Q and Snowball as well as the AMS.

Sugar considers performance of the AMS more important than restructuing it. He remarked that it would be possible to make the existing structure work better by having resources and information readily available creating a situation where commissions will work.

"They know where Jock Harty is because they registered there, and they know where Richardson is because they paid there, but the rest is kind of hazy" sympathized Sugar of the isolation of McArthur. He pointed out that major events such as concerts were needed there to draw students from east campus. Because of this suggestion, the concert committee chairman fully supports the bus services recently instituted.

Presidential candidate, Lyn Whitham is currently AMS External Affairs Commissioner and a member of both Inner and Outer Councils. In addition, she is the chief delegate from Queen's to the Ontario Federation of Students and the co-ordinator of the fee withholding campaign.

Steve Sugar, Whitham's running mate, has been involved with the pub and the housing committee, co-authoring the housing booklet. Sugar founded the figure skating club and will be competing at an intercollegiate level in that sport. In November he assumed chairmanship of the AMS Concert Committee. Sugar stated that he was "not yet satisfied with the concerts. There's still a lot of reorganization that could be done and improvements that could be made."

Sugar told the Journal that he and Whitham were running as a "balanced team with abilities, experience and past performance in different but complimentary areas." The vice-presidential candidate suggested that AMS services could be improved with more efficient committees and the use of sound business techniques.

Both Whitham and Sugar emphasized the AMS must strengthen its "political sphere" so that that portion is as dynamic and as important to students as services. Whitham told the Journal that she wanted to set up what she calls a "University Commission" with the idea of "informing outer council of current issues before the Senate and faculty boards so that the AMS can back up student prositions with credibility."

Sugar agreed that the AMS, in addition to services must be gathering and articulating student opinions, "in a political sense, the AMS must be both responsive and responsible to the students." He and Whitham want to strengthen the AMS Education Commission, making more use of its long term planning committee to look into issues affecting students like financial aid and the final report of the Wright report. Whitham said she would utilize the short term planning committee for putting on symposia and other events.

Sugar proposed setting up a Business Advisory Committee to improve the functioning of the AMS. The committee would be a group of resource persons knowledgeable and experienced in using business techniques. "Why should we relearn every year?" questioned Sugar. "We have experience available and should take advantage of it."

Steve Sugar

Sugar considers performance of the AMS more important than restructuring it. He remarked that it would be possible to make the existing structure work better by having resources and information readily available creating a situation where commissions will work.

Whitham sees an important challenge for the AMS in involving people on main campus with the west campus." She told the Journal that the AMS has taken a great step forward this year in the provision of the bus service and soon a tuck shop. In addition, Whitham proposes the AMS provide for an education and orientation programme for the McArthur students and coordination of educational and social activities to encourage the mixing of students from both campuses.

women's residences and the division of concerts present a

5:45 ban righ common room thursday, february 1

Science '44 Co-op Open Houses

Feb. 3rd and 10th, all day

If you are unable to attend but are interested in applying, use application form below.

Name ..... Age.....

Faculty-Year ..... Sex .....

Present Address .....

..... Phone.....

Summer Address .....

..... Phone.....

Mail or drop into: Science '44 Co-op
c-o Ruth Fraser
544-2793 395 Brock Street

Senate Kills Human Problems

Continued from page 1

Searle's amendment which called for the development of a limited number of courses dealing with persistent social problems actually appeared in a draft report on December 20, 1972. However, the proposal was deleted at a subsequent meeting of Scad on January 10.

When reintroduced at the Senate meeting last Thursday debate centred on whether or not approval of the amendment would constitute an infringement on "the sacred territory of Faculty Board."

Searle admitted that it was not Senate's job to decide the mechanics of course content but he said "it is our job to say that we will encourage these courses." His assurances that the proposal was not intended to be a forced thing" were insufficient to alay the fears of faculty members.

D. A. Soberman, Dean of Law indicated that he was in support of the concept but felt the resolution should come from below. At this point, AMS president Greg Leblanc interrupted with the remark, "support is coming solidly from he students and oboy how low can you go."

Some faculty members were suspicious of the nature of the human problems courses fearing that they would become too superficial. Mr. J. D. Whyte from the faculty of law illustrated this view by referring to a course he teaches called legal services for lower income groups. "The emphasis in a course of this nature tends to be descriptive not analytic,," he said.

In defence Searle remarked that "an Introductory course in English Literature from Chaucer to Hemingway was just as superficial" and added "it is not the Senate's job to prejudge whether courses are superficial or not."

ASUS president Ted Cape spoke in defence of the motion reminding the university of its function to "provide students with the tools to get from the superficial to the essential. Cape suggested that a course in human problems could take students far beyond what insight they gain from the media.

After defeating Searle's amendment the Senate went on to discuss the proposals of the report. In place of the amendment they approved of a watered down proposal for courses of an interdisciplinary nature along with recommendations dealing with how to increase student awareness of the human situation. The report states that members of faculty should make explicit the relation of the subject to the human situation and recommends that the Senate Committee on Fine Arts and Public Lectures and the AMS Education Commission ensure that an extensive program of non curricular events on issues of the day be offered each year.

To encourage awareness the report also suggests that the Senate institute in each issue of the Gazette a heading entitled "Public Affairs and Social Issues" under which are announced immediately forthcoming events relevant to development of awareness of particular issues.

The persistent demand for courses of an interdisciplinary nature was vaguely dealt with in recommendation 4 of the report which urged the Senate to request each professional faculty to consider development of a course designed for senior students in other faculties with the objectives of acquainting such students with the aims and methods of that profession. A similar request was made of the Faculty of Arts and Science to consider the possibility of providing courses intended to illuminate professional practice in the humanities, social sciences, physical sciences and life sciences.

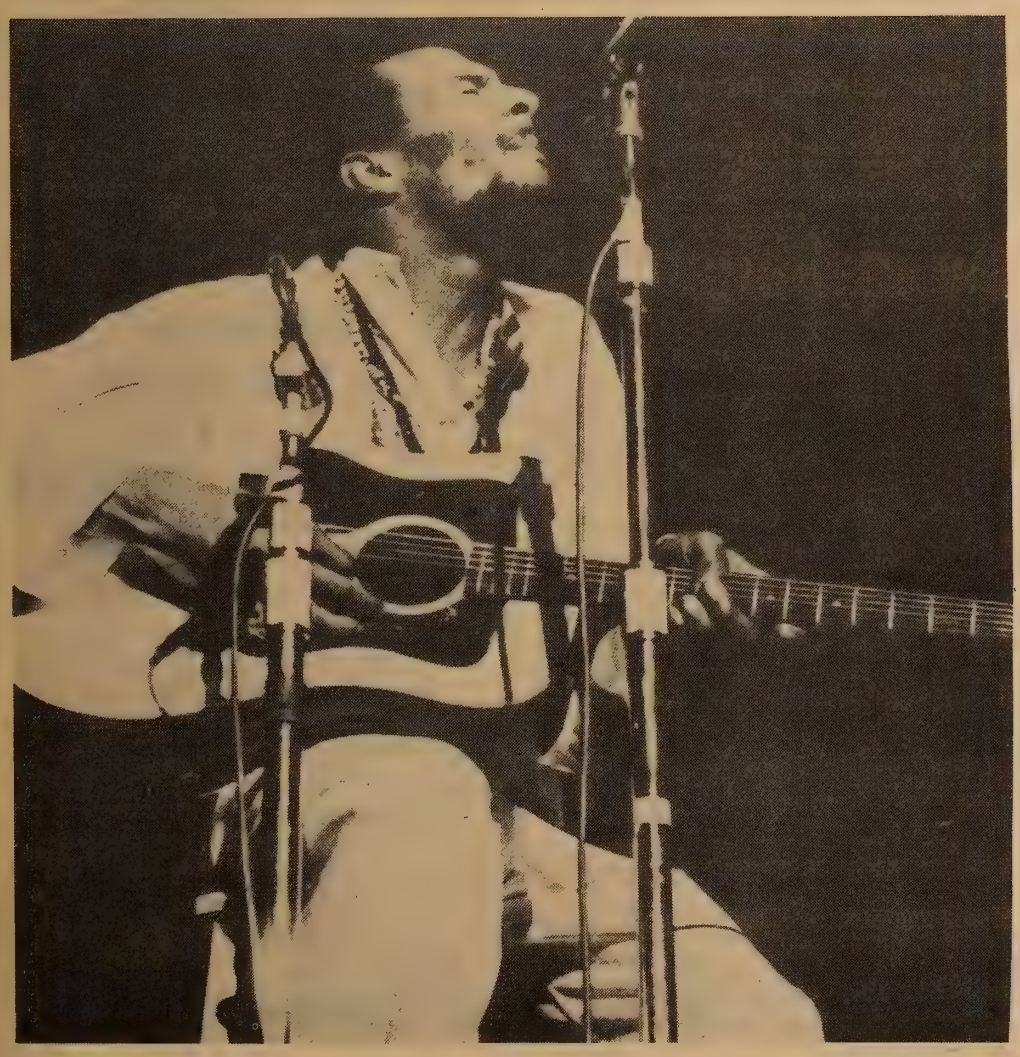
The subject of human problems courses first became a contentious issue when a motion introduced by mathematics chairman Dr. A. J. Coleman and politics professor Dr. Ned Franks concerning such courses was defeated at Faculty Board December 1, 1971. On March 23, 1972 the issue was brought up with Senate Student Senator Tim Garrard and referred to the SCAD for consideration. A task force was then set up to study the subject over the summer.

Campus comment

On Monday morning the Journal surveyed student opinion on the contentious issue of the fee strike. Students in the coffee shop were asked whether or not they agreed with the AMS demands and whether or not they thought the fee withholding campaign was a good way of expressing the student complaint.

Daryl Cumpson, Arts '75; "Demands reasonable, fee withholding a good idea as money talks louder than anything else does."

SUE Elliott, Com. '75; "don't think fee withholding will do anything to solve the problems, the university has said pretty flatly you've got to pay to get your marks."



Bill Gorman, Arts 73: "The fee withholding is one of the few ways to show student concern."

Brian Cox, Phsy Ed '74: "The demands are legitimate, I don't think the government cares about this university or any university at all. If students realized what their fees were used for I think they'd realize that by withholding they aren't going to hurt the government at all."

Dean Main, Arts '75: "Demands legitimate, don't agree with government sneaking up on us like that, but I paid my fees."

Tom Turnbull, Arts '74: "Fee withholding good way of getting at the government, don't think it will accomplish anything, does tell the government that they can't manipulate students as easily as they thought."

Pamela Sweet, Graduate student: "Both the demands and fee withholding campaign are justified, I will withhold as long as I can get away with it, that is until I need my marks to get a job."

AMS Concerts presents:

Richie Havens

With special guest stars:

Batdorf and Rodney

Jimmie Spheeris

Sunday, February 4, 8:30 pm

Jock Harty Arena

Tickets on sale 10 am to 4 pm daily in John Orr Room and the House of Sounds

IT'S A BIRD . . IT'S A PLANE . . NO IT'S a flying Richie Havens billboard that is making its way through the Arts and Social Sciences construction site. The concert is Sunday.

Day care centres to get more money

OTTAWA (CUP) — The federal government expects to double its allocation to day care centres in Canada, according to a national day care study released January 23, by the federal department of health and welfare.

The department will spend about $8 million this year to support day care centers, but the move is unlikely to be much help to working mothers. Last year it spent about $4 million.

The dramatic increase results from amendments to the Canada assistance plan passed in 1972. The federal government will share rent or depletion on facilities, program equipment, supplies, food and other day care costs with provincial governments. Previously, only salaries were shared.

The Royal Commission on the Status of Women called for more federal funding of day care facilities in its 1970 report. The commission estimated only one percent of children of working women attended day care centers. Mothers of about 1,380,000 children work for a living.

The department of labor estimates 59,000 "one-parent mothers" were in the labor force in 1971. Some 182,000 of 634,000 working mothers have children under the age of six.

The Health and Welfare survey says programs relating to children of working parents (full day care and lunch and after school) constitute only about 43 per cent of the day care centres in Canada.

Saskatchewan tuition raised $50

REGINA (CUP) — The Board of Governors of the University of Saskatchewan and the Provincial council of the NDP have decided the sons and daughters of the people of Saskatchewan will pay more to go to university next year.

The fee increase is relatively small ($50) when compared to fee increases in other parts of the country. It is still, however, in direct contradiction to the NDP's long standing policy of free tuition. Tuition fees now will be at least $550 per year.

The present government was vocal in condemning the previous administration when student fees were raised, but now it is using the old tactic of raising fees in small amounts to avoid unrest.

A bursary scheme has been extended to some students will avoid increased costs, but the high price which still prevents many from going to university will still be there.

The Government has refused to supply the university with enough funds to enable it to continue existing programs. The result has been serious and severe cut backs.

The half million dollars not forth coming from the government means many teachers and some entire programs will have to be dropped. As usual when these cuts were made students were not consulted.

In the past two years, size of the university caretaking staff has not increased. In that time many of the staff have left and a new building has been added to their responsibilities. The cleaning staff is working twice as hard. Needless to say the salarys have not doubled.

More money is needed and the Department of Education sees the opportunity for taking a hard line with students whom they say must pay more for their education.

Society elections

Various Societies are holding elections for executives who will serve for next year. Most of the societies are staging their elections in conjunction with the AMS elections.

Dates:

ASUS will be holding its elections on February 7 and 8.

The Nursing Science Society holds their elections also on February 7 and 8.

Rehab's elections are on the 7th and 8th.

The Graduate Society is holding its elections on February 7 and 8th, and closing nominations must be in for the 31st.

Med's Executive elections will be February 7th, and the class President elections will be held a week later on February 14. Curriculum reps are chosen each year for every class. These people are responsible for curriculum interests. The class educational committee chairman will be held on Feb. 14.

Commerce Society is holding its elections on the 7 and 8.

Physical Education Society elections will be held in early March.

Engineering's nomination meeting will be Tuesday, 27 and elections will be February 7, 8.

Theological Society held their elections on Thursday January 18. Elected for President was Barry Saint Germaine, Treasurer is Ralph Hills, Secretary is Paul Ross, Senator is David Woods, AMS rep is Larry Todd, and Pat Howes for the new Programme Chairman.

SNOWBALL NOTES

Snowball buttons are required for:
- -- Beach Party dance 34c and 49c without
- -- Buffalo Chips 25c and 50c without
- -- Apres Ski 50c and 75c without

Tickets also available at the door for:
- -- Fruit of the Vine
- -- Buffalo Chips, and Chimo

Chimo Semi Formal is featuring:
- -- Toby Lark, lead singer from Toronto production of 'HAIR'

Beach Party Dance features "Street Noise"

Concert committee presents:
- -- Richie Havens in Harty Arena, Sunday, February 4 at 8:30 pm
- -- $3 with concert card, $3.50 general
- -- Tickets in John Orr 10 am - 4 pm daily

Bitter Grounds will be closed Feb 3 and 4

LADIES ELECTROLYSIS
Avoid shaving, tweezing, or the use of dipilatories. Have your eyebrows styled and unwanted hair removed permanently by electrolysis. Physicians recommend our work. For a free consultation and information call:
HARRISON SALON 542-5595

Want to know more about the Pentecostal Experience
Meet with us
Thurs., Feb. 1st,
8 p.m.
Jeffery Hall, Rm. 126

THE LAST PICTURE SHOW
A Film By PETER BOGDANOVICH

TONIGHT
7:00 AND 9:30 P.M.
DUNNING AUD.
ADMISSION $1.00
—CINEGUILD—

Primal sex identity keeps women down conference told

by Susan de Stein

TORONTO — Women are kept down in society "because of our genitals", a noted artist told the Ontario Conference on Women last weekend.

Maryon Kantaroff, a member of the New Feminists, said women must go against their primal sex identity in asserting themselves to express anger. They are therefore afraid of doing it and have learned to internalize anger.

"Aggression has been bred out of us," she said.

Kantaroff was speaking during a panel on women in the arts, along with journalist and author Margaret Penman, freelance journalist Joan McClelland, and writer June Callwood. The weekend conference was sponsored by the Ontario Federation of Students "to bring together women from a wide variety of backgrounds from all over Ontario to discuss areas of interest and importance to the problem of women in society. "Attendance extended beyond delegates from OFS-member institutions to include women from various groups, clubs, hospitals and colleges.

Kantaroff said "the polarized difference between men and women was a political distinction. To change this, the very structure of society must be broken down."

Penman pointed out that in the past "it was a bad thing for a woman to become expert".

"Women in the arts have been forced to be amateur," Penman said. Creative women threaten the male ego and are therefore feared.

McClelland, the first woman to work on a national network newscast, criticized the media for its "insensitivity" in dealing with the women's liberation movement.

Because the value of a news item is judged by men, "ninety percent of the time, women's rights stories are treated as frivolous," she said.

The speakers considered discrimination against women to be a problem of socialization. They pointed out the social and political differences between men and women were perpetuated by such practices as dressing a child in pink or blue just after birth.

In a survey of 56 boys and girls between the ages of 11 and 14, the question "do you think women are discriminated against" resulted in more boys answering "yes" than girls. Some 16 of the 28 girls and only two of the 28 boys felt they would like to be of the opposite sex. Already, Callwood pointed out, the males realize that they are in a position of superiority and would not want to be in the lower social position.

The speakers also said the attitude that school girls shouldn't be strong enough to lift chairs up on desks leads to a profound sense of incapacity and inadequacy in the females.

Other conference workshops included discussions of women in athletics, in politics and in the professions, along with workshops on health education, academic discrimination, and day care.

In the session on academic discrimination, speakers felt high school students are being channelled into certain areas according to their sex roles. Throughout school, girls are taught home economics while boys take instruction in "shop".

In career-oriented literature, certain feminine models are

Continued on page 7

To discuss OSAP fees

SVB meet "broke down barriers"

by Bob Wood

The First National Conference on Volunteer Bureaus in Canada, called "students in the Community" was held at Queen's this past weekend. "We could have misread the needs of this conference, but the sessions were very valuable", stated Gord McDiarmid, director of Queen's SVB which organized the conference.

A similar conference attempted last year failed, largely because of poor timing. It was scheduled for March last year, a time when many executives were changing hands, resulting in a poor response.

Representatives from eight universities attended the weekend conference, participating in workshops and exchanging ideas about their individual bureaus. The topics on Saturday morning included a lecture by guest speaker, Dr. David B. McLay, and presentations by the universities having volunteer bureaus. Afternoon workshops dealt with health services, education and recreation, youth activities, and alienation, addiction and alcoholism. Aims of volunteer bureaus were dealt with Sunday morning as were questions of what types of students do volunteer work, structure of a bureau, roles in the community (referral or instigator), and a follow-up for this conference. McDiarmid mentioned that the social evenings held Friday and Saturday nights "really broke down the barriers fast and we got to know each other".

In comparison with the other attending universities, Queen's is the largest in size. McDiarmid attributed this to the high proportion of out of town students. Being campus oriented they form a good source of potential volunteers. He also mentioned that the several local hospitals and prisons provide a great variety of tasks. In contrast with several other universities, Queen's has a good working relationship with the AMS. Although some universities such as Loyola receive no grant at all to work with, Guelph conversely has a budget of $1700 per semester using a large portion of this to finance a car needed to transport volunteers to non-local work locations.

Queen's SVB plans some improvements in their organization as a result of the conference. SVB intends to strive for more intercommunication between other bureaus via news releases. Increased contact with the volunteers is another goal; at present this is limited to a couple of telephone calls from the executive. SVB is also pondering enlarging the executive by the appointing of project coordinators.

An LIP subsidy of approximately $4000 granted last Friday to Queen's SVB will hire 2 persons for 4 months to research and improve the local program. An analysis of methods, recommended improvements, and a follow-up with the volunteers should give more direction to SVB.

Next year's conference is slated for Guelph. Next month a group meeting is planned for the various student volunteer agencies such as those St. Lawrence College and RMC. An open meeting is also scheduled for some time before reading week for all those interested in executive positions.

Band-aid Relief

by Bob Wood

Dr. David B. McLay, guest speaker at the First SVB National Conference hosted by Queen's last weekend, opened Saturday's program with "Band-Aid Relief", an address on the philosophy of volunteer bureaus.

McLay traced the growth of Queen's SVB from its beginning 4 years ago to its present operation. He went on to describe good and bad approaches to SVB work, some of the problems encountered and criticisms levelled at volunteers from parents and observers.

McLay remarked that "getting started with some finite but important problem is an important step." He suggested that volunteers must be perceptive open and aware in their work avoiding a cocksure attitude. "Some people get into organizations because they like power and prestige. They want to be known as big wheels or kingmakers or empire builders. Volunteer Bureaus need to be flexible and cooperative, especially with respect to other community organizations. Hostility and rivalry quickly lead to chauvinism and cultural imperialism" he cautioned his listeners. He also pointed out that "experience with deprivation should lead to radical thinking about the gross inequalities and injustices of North American society. To illustrate bad approaches, McLay mentioned the boy scout who found that his own family was on the list of deprived people and some fiercely proud fathers of large families in Kingston who resent outside interference by do-gooders.

Dr. McLay, a member of the physics department at Queen's and of the Kingston committee of the Canadian Coalition for Development, has been involved with youth work for over 16 years starting with a drop-in centre in the inner city of Victoria, British Columbia, and continuing with prison visitation, low-cost housing and tutorials.

Faculty approve invitation to Apps

In an effort to close the communications gap between university and government, the Arts and Science Faculty Board has approved an invitation asking Syl Apps, Conservative MLA for Kingston and the Islands, to attend their March meeting.

Dr. C. Crowder, Chairman of the Faculty Board and Professor of History told the January 19 meeting that he had written to Apps to complain about the fee increase and OSAP cutbacks announced by the Ontario government last spring. After an exchange of correspondence in which both felt that communications could be improved, Crowder extended a provisional invitation to Apps for the March meeting which will be discussing the response of the Committee of Departments to the Report on the Implications of Constant Enrolment.

The Faculty Board were generally in favor of the move and some suggested that Apps should be given an active part in the discussion.

(Last Monday night, Apps addressed 20 students on the question in what was described as "a bear-pit session without the bear." He said he did not agree with the fee withholding action as "you have made your point, we realize it."

He reiterated the government stand that there are a number of areas which need money, "but someone has to say this is the best we can do. You have to rationalize with the amount of money that you have."

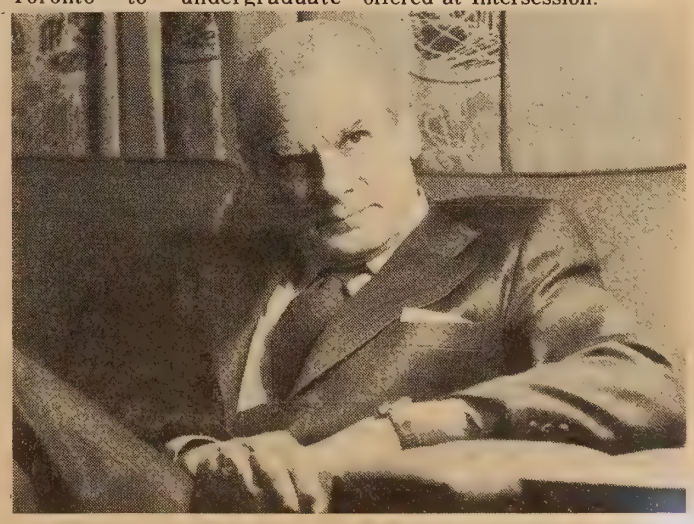
For two hours he repeated this in different ways, but added if students had any ideas, the government would like to hear about them.

When asked if the government cutbacks in education were harmful to university assessibility, he replied that they all say this, who's to be the judge. "You will have to mortgage your future," for an education, which is worth more than a house or a car.

R. L. Watts, Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Science told the meeting that the decrease in the number of applicants for university enrolment will pose grave financial problems across Ontario, especially for the newer and smaller institutions.

Dean Watts stated that his office has been considering the implications for Queen's of the tight budget situation for the past month and that early indications were in line with the predictions of six to nine percent fewer applications for university places in 1973.

However, he was confident that, although the number of applications for enrolment in Queen's were down, there does not appear to be any immediate danger to programs in Arts and Science.



Considerable discussion was raised in the meeting over the closing of the space allocated to Queen's in the Robarts Library in Toronto to undergraduate students.

Dean Watts commented that although the library was originally designed for graduate work in research in the humanities and social sciences, recent upheavals indicate that other uses may have to be considered seriously.

He was referring to the recent protests by University of Toronto students over certain parts of the library being restricted to graduate student use.

The Faculty Board decided that seeing as it was only the original decision that the Robarts Library should be built to provide space for Queen's graduate students, the School of Graduate Studies who are looking after our interests there should be questioned on the issue.

Dr. H. M. Love, of the Department of Physics noted that no deposit will be required from students who wish to take Intersession this year but that there will be a late fee for late registrations. He also stated that there will be an announcement on February 23 concerning the courses that will actually be offered at Intersession.

Syl Apps at bear pit session with students

U of Quebec occupation busted

MONTREAL (CUP) — Students at the University of Quebec in Montreal began a general strike January 26 following a brief occupation of their Administrative Offices Jan. 24, which was broken up by riot squad police.

The occupation and strike are in protest against the expulsion of about 600 students effective Jan. 26, because they owe the university more than $500 in tuition fees.

The occupation followed a general UQAM student meeting in which the university was given until noon Jan. 25 to nullify the expulsions. About 150 students occupied the administrative areas to back up their demands, but were distracted into a strategic debate by the presence of four policemen while they were discussing the strategy, 50 members of the Montreal Riot Squad arrived and evicted the students. There were no arrests.

A general student meeting the next day (Jan. 25) - voted to call a student strike after the Administration failed to respond to their demands.

Student leaders predicted the active support of about 1,000 of UQAM's 13,000 students. In addition, the union representing student employees of the university pledged its members would not cross picket lines.

Meanwhile, students at a general meeting at the University of Montreal Jan. 25 considered launching a solidarity strike, because they face similar administration harassment. They sent a similar ultimatum to the U of M Administration. A strike vote if the Administration fails to reply was derailed by procedural wrangling, but another General Meeting will consider the question Jan. 29.

Several Ontario Universities, locked in struggle with their own Provincial Government, over tuition fee increases and cuts in student aid, sent messages of support to the UQAM students.

At the U of M meeting UQAM student Gilbert Rousseau pointed out that opposition to the growing Quebec Labor Movement, as well as economic considerations, motivated the Quebec Government's 25 percent cut in the education budget this year. The financial pressure is especially acute at the so-called "popular" U of Q, where 20 percent of the students come from working class families.

CEGEP-CEQ student Nicole Fortin said administrative control and the CEGEP's nouveau regime pedeagogique are other means to continue a policy of producing well-trained graduates capable of upholding the capitalist system.

(After CEGEP students across Quebec threatened a general strike in December, the Nouveau Regime was shelved temporarily by the Quebec Government. The proposal would have increased compulsory class time, cut arts options, and allowed administrations to de-register troublesome students.)

Memorial U pres resigns

ST JOHN'S (CUP) —Lord Stephen Taylor, President of Memorial University of Newfoundland since 1966, has resigned effective August 31, 1973.

Taylor, who had three years left to go on his contract with the university, said "as many people know, I have undergone major surgery several times in the last few years, and the pressures of being president of a large university are increasing all the time. Although I feel reasonably fit at the moment, I feel the time has come for me to retire."

Opposition to Taylor's Presidency has become increasingly vocal in recent months. It was at Taylors insistence that the university's board of regents decided last November to discontinue compulsory collection of students union fees. The successful occupation of the Arts and Administration Building that followed dealt Taylor a slap in the face which was probably a major factor in his decision to retire.

Taylor, a medical doctor from England who is a member of The House of Lords, was hired by former premier Joey Smallwood in 1966. He was signed to a ten year contract at thirty thousand dollars a year, and an expensive house near the university was expropriated, torn down and then rebuilt almost identically to suit him.

Taylor's power as president was minimal as the vice-president (Academic) has virtually run the university ever since Taylor became president. Taylor's main function has been as a figurehead and public relations specialist.

However, the power was always theoretically there and occasionally Taylor decided to use it, as in the union fees controversy last term. By the end of the occupation he had lost support of virtually everybody in the university, including students, faculty, other top administrators and even some regents.

Career Seminar Series, Spring 1973

Jointly sponsored by the AMS and Career Planning and Placement

MUNICIPAL ENGINEERING

. . . A panel discussion conducted by

Dean H. M. Edwards, Queen's
Prof. Stan Lash, Queen's
Mr. J. D. Lee, Kingston
Prof. E. W. Thrift, Queen's

Tuesday, January 30th, 7:00 p.m.

Students' Memorial Union
Smaller Common Room

Winners of the AMS Housing Lottery

The following names will constitute the waiting list for AMS Houses. People wishing to remain on the list must go to the AMS office by 5 pm Wednesday and prove they are a student.

ONE PERSON HOUSES: 1. John Bayne, 2. Larry Small, 3. Helen Walko, 4. Frank Ingham, 5. John Davidson, 6. Gary Webster, 7. Judith Smith, 8. Ross Knox, 9. Jim Carmen, 10. Rhonda Williams, 11. Michael O'Connell, 12. Jacqueline Willson, 13. Margaret Betts, 14. Tom Merritt.

TWO PERSON HOUSES: 1. Carla Ceddes, 2. David Currie, 3. Janice Hardy, 4. Manuel de Costa, 5. James Bateman, 6. Catherine Brown, 7. Wendy McDonald, 8. Marilyn Davis, 9. Mr. Gil Labine, 10. Don Goellnicht, 11. Pat Sinclair, 12. Michael B. Evans, 13. Tom Murray, 14. Miriam Gordon, 15. Steven Lydall, 16. Steven Ostrom, 17. Allen Bell, 18. Douglas Titus, 19. Cameron Wilkinson, 20. Gail Tyerman, 21. John Cameron, 22. Dale Johnston, 23. Bob Laidlaw, 24. John Trousdale.

THREE PERSON HOUSES: 1. Peter Smuk, 2. Michael Garland, 3. Debbie Dewar, 4. Diana Magee, 5. Judy Berkeley, 6. Helen Barkley, 7. Gail Lilley, 8. Malcolm Laws, 9. Warren Anttila, 10. Barbara Burf.

FOUR PERSON HOUSES: 1. Vic Lachance, 2. Judy Ness, 3. Nancy Orr, 4. Robert Hatston, 5. John Farrell, 6. Don Miles, 7. Carol McLean, 8. Su Putherbough, 9. Donna Hutchings, 10. Denis F. Michiel.

FIVE PERSON HOUSES: 1. Lorne Carson, 2. Charles S. Lunch, 3. Donald M. Fraser, 4. Craig Shannon, 5. Sue Currie, 6. John Henson, 7. Larry Humphries, 8. Bob Willard, 9. Peter Keyser, 10. Brian Davies.

SIX PERSON HOUSES: 1. John Taylor, 2. Linda Shanks, 3. Ron McEachern, 4. Marsha McKay, 5. Bill Routledge, 6. Paul Wolford, 7. Frank Gneaves, 8. Bev Horn, 9. Peter Lane, 10. Jon Willmer, 11. Alan Musher, 12. Peter Cardlish, 13. Greg Murray, 14. Shirley Stevens, 15. Glenn MacCrimmon, 16. Molly Harkin, 17. Michael Evans, 18. Jane Londerville, 19. Paul Szczvcinski, 20. Mary Scott, 21. John Di Novo, 22. A. D. Griffin.

SEVEN PERSON HOUSES: 1. Dave Tanner, 2. David Harris, 3. Paul Findlay, 4. Isabelle McDonald, 5. Scott H. Cardell, 6. Lloyd Sly, 7. Debera Tomalty, 8. Stuart Elliot, 9. Harris Jones, 10. Doug Throop, 11. Bill Hirley, 12. Debbie Nyman, 13. David Smithies, 14. David Riddell.

EIGHT PERSON HOUSES: 1. Jerry Banting, 2. Paul Green, 3. Ruth Fraser, 4. Steven Scribanto.

AMS OUTER COUNCIL MEETING

Wednesday, January 30
7:00 p.m.
Third Floor Common Room, Union

ALL WELCOME

CANCELLED

WONDERFUL TOWN

is coming

Come see us!

Come hear us!

Michelle Bannock
Paul Bartlett
Barb Brown
Tim Budd
Jean Callum
Bob Coad
Paula Clee
Lee David
Marg Duff
Liz Driver
Patti Fardell
Ian Fraser
Dawn Henderson
Trevor Houle
Andrea Howard
Trish Jones
Sharon Keates
Tony Keenleyside
Nancy Kulchyki
Marilyn MacDonald
Lorne Macleod
Lyle McCoy
Gerry Malloy
Doug Mann
Margrethe de Neeregaard
Arlene Reid
Kathy Robertson
Kathy Rough
Patrick Rousseau
Fred Sallis
Paul Sequin
John Seveigny
Brian Sewell
Ed Smith
Elaine Tepley
Angie Todoroff
Alan Watts
Conrad Willemse
Wayne Tindale
Jennifer Peace
John Palmer
Bob Campbell
John MacCallum
Tim Hallman
Mark Metcalfe
Gordon Creig
Scott Mackenzie
Maria Hubbe
Stephen Irwin
Howard Alexander
Judy Bourne
John Smith
Virgil Jacuzzi
Randy Leipnik
Kirk Elliot
Anne Maloley
Anne McKuer
Victoria Trotter
Jennifer Bartlett
Douglas Dillon

Grand Theatre
8:30 p.m.
this Wed., Thurs., Fri., Sat.
tickets only $1.50 students, $2.00 non-students

"Going against sex identity..."

Continued from page 5

presented to the girl student, convincing her she is suited only for certain types of work.

Speakers felt that counselling in post-secondary education was systematically discriminatory. While boys are encouraged to enter science and technology, girls are channelled into more arts and humanity-minded courses.

One woman pointed out that although three-quarters of all elementary school teachers are women, only one percent of all administrative positions are occupied by women. A study conducted a few years ago revealed that women teachers were "all-round superior to men teachers". These women had been leading academic students, and on several other counts the study declared them superior and more capable than their male counterparts. One woman commented "it scares me to think that the schools are being run by these men."

One woman said the problem was one of confidence. Women are ingrained with certain conservative attitudes that prevent them from being aggressive. They are forced to believe they don't want opportunities for advancement. The prejudices and discriminations are deeply rooted in women. "Socialization is discrimination", another woman said.

Women in another workshop hotly debated the issue of abortion and the proposed repeal of Canada's abortion laws. One woman spoke vehemently; "There should not be debate on the repeal of the laws. It is a cut-and-dried issue."

During this session a motion was proposed to refuse the males present the opportunity to ask questions, speak, and vote. Some very militant feminists felt that the men had no right to speak on the question, that it was a conference on women, for women. The more aggressive and militant leaders of the conference strongly supported the motion. But it was defeated for the sake of rationality.

Several times during Saturday's workshops male reporters and a male camera crew from the CBC were refused admittance to the workshops on the grounds the organizations involved should train and send women representatives.

In the eyes of many, including those of the Queen's representatives, such a move was unfortunate and generally one example of this poor excuse for a women's liberation movement. Alienation of the public is not a step forward. "The strong feminist movement that was in evidence at the conference shows no concern for men's rights. We should be talking about the liberation of people not merely that of women," said Masney Cousins, a Queen's delegate.

In other sessions, Dr. Ursula Franklin, a member of the Voice of Women, said that the phrase "why not" was one of the best defences for the cause of women in professions. Again, it is a question of confidence and determination.

People at this workshop passed a motion for presentation to OFS recommending that when a woman in a professional career decides not to follow her husband, but to stay where she has established herself, the decision not be considered desertion, as it is now. The resolution also recommends that if she does follow him and thus becomes unemployed, she should be able to qualify for unemployment insurance.

Many people felt that the workshops were "consciousness-raising" experiences but that a times the radical feminist supporters became too extreme in the discussions. The organization of the conference mitigated against much interaction among participants, outside of the actual workshops. However, for many of us the experience was enlightening on a personal level.

Heart fund drive Sunday

Students from R.M.C., Hotel Dieu Hospital, and Queen's have volunteered for the annual Heart Fund Drive next Sunday.

Over $3,000,000 is collected yearly throughout Canada to provide for research and projects to combat heart disease. Of this, $100,000 is returned to Kingston. The goal of the upcoming drive is $15,000.

Doug Romans, of the Aesculapian Society, organizer of the drive noted "canvassers are greatly needed and are asked to report to Leonard Cafeteria by noon on February 4. It will take approximately 2 hours for one route to be covered and transportation to and from the district is provided." If you want to help, call one of Kingston's cardiovascular surgeons, Dr. Iyengar at 547-3024 and leave your name.

Faculty news

For Open House, the Commerce Society is setting up a corporate office in the basement of Dunning Hall. modelled on the set-up of such an office, different rooms will have models and diagrams based on, for example, the aspects of finance. A general information booth will also be included in the Open House program.

Commerce Week is to be held from March 12 to 17. A tentative plan for Monday's and Tuesday's program is to have speakers on accounting and other academic subjects related to the Commerce curriculum. On Wednesday 14, a Variety Night is scheduled. A Hockey Tournament is slated for Thursday between various years in Commerce. Beer and Bingo (and a dance) are to be held in Leonard Hall on the 16th. Saturday the 17th is the date for the Commerce Formal at the Holiday Inn.

March 7 is the date for the 2nd Annual Banquet with Eric Kierans as guest speaker.

Med Society reports:

Open House activities include films to be held in Etherington Hall. These films include such medical phenomenon as a normal delivery and diabetes. A film will portray a century of Canadian medicine covering topics such as open-heart surgery.

The Commerce Society sent a delegation to the Canadian Conference in Winnipeg, which was attended by representatives from business and universities across Canada. The conference was sponsored by the University of Manitoba, the federal government and a large number of businesses. It lasted three days and thirty-six business schools participated.

Two guest speakers entertained the Nursing Society Students at their general meeting last Wednesday. Elizabeth Gardiner, nursing student, spoke on Crossroads Africa and her experiences with it, and Kaspar Pold, the director of the International Centre, explicated the job opportunities with CUSO.

Plans are underway for a nursing dinner and dance to be held on Friday March 2 at Pine Ledge Inn. This is open to all Nursing Science students.

A Queen's Nursing Science rep will be sent to the Canadian University Nursing Student's Association to be held at Dalhousie University on Feb. 9, 10, and 11.

1673 QUEEN'S TERCENTENARY OPEN HOUSE Kingston, Ontario

More feature events:

BOULTON DAM MODEL
HOUSEHOLD OBJECTS: stress and fatigue tests
FOX AND HOUNDS: a simple computer board game
PRINTING PRESS
FOSSILS & OCEANOGRAPHIC EQUIPMENT
EN FRANCE COMME SI VOUS Y ETIEZ
RUSSIAN ART, MUSIC, BOOKS
CHANGING ROLE OF WOMEN
A CENTURY OF CANADIAN MEDICINE
MOCK CORPORATE HEAD OFFICE
'CKLC' REMOTE BROADCASTING

Listen to CFRC for details of locations and times.

CFRC am-fm

INTROUCTORY LECTURE
and
PHYSIOLOGICAL SLIDE PRESENTATION
ON THE TECHNIQUE OF

TRANSCENDENTAL MEDITATION
As Taught by Maharishi Mahesh Yogi

Expands awareness

Dissolves tensions and anxiety

Increases creative intelligence

Easily learned and enjoyed by everyone

Scientifically verified in such journals as "Scientific American", Feb. 1972.

Stirling Hall (Physics Building) 412C
WED. JAN. 31st
Everyone Welcome 8:00 p.m.

classified

DEAR PRIME DUO -- You are still first in our hearts. Thanks.

WANTED: 4 BEDROOM house or apartment for four girls for 73-74. Please phone 544-8623, 544-8621 or 544-8617.

WANTED: A SIX bedroom house close to campus for 1973-74. Please call Bev. at 544-8368; Barb at 544-8363; or Colleen at 544-8364.

6 MEMBERS OF THE Addy II Virginity Squad wish to form waffle group off campus. Anyone having suitable 6 bedroom "headquarters" for 1973-74 please contact 544-8198; 544-8186; or 544-8183.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY tomorrow to Christopher Robin from his Pooh Bear.

SUE -- be sure to show up tomorrow at the office.

SCIENCE '44 Co-OP will be having open house on February 3 and February 10. Come any time. Bring $1 for an application form to: Central 314 William or 373 Johnson; East 128 Earl of 15 Sydenham; or North 307-309 University or 31 Garret. Coffee and Doughnuts. Drop in and stay awhile.

REWARD of $10 for information leading to the capture of a four bedroom house or a two bedroom apartment. Call Ral or Joe at 544-2120 or Bob at 544-5922.

WILL ANYONE who found my broad-band silver ring with black markings, lost on January 23, please leave phone number at the Journal office. $5 reward.

WANTED DESPERATELY by three luscious brunettes (all 36-24-36) and one dyed blonde (22 x 48) one four bedroom apartment or house. Please contact Burnette (1) at 544-8264; Brunette (2) at 544-8280; Brunette (3) at 544-8278; or the Blonde at 544-8279.

WANTED: A 4 or 5 bedroom house or apartment to rent for next year. Phone Debbie or Sue at 544-0178.

SKIER WITH WHOM to travel to Jackson Hole in Wyoming during mid-winter break. Phone 544-5428 for info.

WE'RE LOOKING FOR a 4-bedroom house or apartment for next year. If you have one please call Jennifer at 544-8748 or Mary at 544-8749.

DI -- THE answer is obviously that the price of tea in China is too high.

WANT TO GET RID of a house or apartment -- look at these classifieds. They're lousey with people looking for them.

JEN -- get off the phone.

WANTED: AN APARTMENT for 3 or 4 people for the beginning of May. Please phone: Heather at 544-8144; Cheryl 544-8147; Cathy 544-8149; Sue 544-8151.

WANTED: 3 BEDROOM apartment or house for coming year. Will take over lease May 1. Phone 546-9914.

SCIENCE '44 CO-OP will be having Open House on February 3 and February 10. Come any time. Bring $1 for an application form to: Central 314 William or 373 Joohnson; East 128 Earl or 15 Sydenham; North 307-309 University or 31 Garret. Coffee and Doughnuts -- drop in and stay a while.

PAMELA L -- get well soon.

WANTED: 5 BEDROOM house for next year. Beginning May or Sept. Phone 548-3230.

SLIDE SHOW ON PERU, Wednesday January 31, 9 pm. International Centre lower lounge. We have the projector this time. Liberation Study Group at Queen's.

KINGSTON KRAFT BOYCOTT Committee Workshop. Saturday 3rd February 1 pm. 2nd floor common room Students' Union.

TRICOLOR WRITERS - Don't forget the meeting tonight at 7:45.

ARE YOU GRADUATING this year? Are you a member of Artsci 74? Are you a member of ASUS? Are you a Queen's student? If you fit into just one of these categories, you are eligible the final, farewell formal of 1973 -- Auf Wiedersehen - an Arts event jointly created by ASUS and Artsci '74

WATERBEDS - we have a complete line of waterbeds and accessories all fully waranteed and priced low. Call HALCYON WATERBEDS, 544-9540 from 6 - 9 pm today

AVAILABLE for this summer beginning in May, 8 bedroom house two blocks from campus. Phone 544-3930

I WOULD LIKE to buy a reasonably priced dissecting or monocular microscope (used) for a budding 7 year old scientist. Please call K M Brodie, 547-5885, during the day or 389-5995 in the evening.

election notices

The elections will be held next week, on Wednesday and Thursday. Exact polling locations have not been determined yet, but there will be polls in the Union and Library and in many of the academic buildings during the day and possibly in the evening. The detailed times and locations will be announced in the Journal before the voting days

Commerce Society Executive '74

- Nominations now open.
- Deadline Feb. 1st Return to Dunning Annex

Bob Dietrich 544-7403
Commerce Returning Officer

GRADS

Annual General Meeting
(Grad House, 157 King St. E.)

Wed., Jan. 31st
8 p.m.
FREE BEER

Nominations for President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer, AMS Reps (3) will close at this meeting.

All graduates are urged to attend, to hear what we've done, where the $60,000 went, make nominations.

B.A.S. immediately afterwards.

ARTSCI '74 ELECTIONS

All nominations for Year Executive for '73-74

President
Vice-Pres.
Treasurer
Social Convenor
Publicity
Athletic Stick
Permanent Exec.

to be submitted in writing to Anne Macdonald, 469 Victoria St., 544-5997 by 9 p.m., Feb. 5.
Nominations for Pres. and Vice-Pres. are to be accompanied by 25 signatures.

NOTICE OF ELECTION

ELECTIONS for the position of President and Vice-president of the Alma Mater Society and two referenda will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, February 7 and 8.

Candidate teams are:

Lyn Whitham (pres) and Steve Sugar (vice-pres);
Steve Brereton (pres) and Bruce Trotter (vice-pres).

Referenda will be held on:

1) Changing the present method of financing Tricolor from a $4 non-academic fee charged each student AND a $1.50 levy against faculty societies for each portrait of graduates from that faculty which appear in the Tricolor TO a sole $4.50 non-academic fee.
2) Increasing the non-academic fee by $0.25 to help support Golden Words.

AN ADVANCED POLL will be held outside the cafeteria at McArthur Hall on Thursday, February 1 from noon to 4 pm.

ALL MEMBERS OF the Alma Mater Society are eligible to vote upon presentation of their student card.

ASUS ELECTION

Nominations are now being received for the following ASUS positions

- ☐ President and vice-president (team)
- ☐ Secretary
- ☐ Treasurer
- ☐ Senator (Two-Year term)
- ☐ Senator (One-year term)
- ☐ Nine (9) AMS Representatives at Large

Nominations must include acceptance by the candidate, name and address and the supporting signatures of 25 ASUS members with their years. Nominations must be handed in to the AMS office by 5 pm, Wednesday, January 31. The election will be held the following week.

Need information? Contact Doug Donald at 544-0657

IF YOU'RE RUNNING

All candidates wishing to be included in the Journal election special issue must come to the Journal office Thurs night between 7 and 11 p.m. to be photographed and to bring their statement.

See your faculty returning officer or president for further details.

editorial

Does Queen's University have a responsibility to encourage students to study social problems of the day? The Senate considered that question last Thursday and said No. It decided not to endorse an amendment calling for courses of that nature.

Rather it expects that student awareness of human problems can be gained by extra-curricular activities, announced under a new heading in the Gazette called Public Affairs and Social Issues and by faculty members explaining the relevancy of their subject to the human situation.

We see this as a mere token effort to deal with the question. Students can gain as much from the media as they can from these activities. It is the demand to go beyond that level that raised this issue originally.

A constant complaint by faculty members at the Senate meeting was that the courses would be too superficial. Surely superficiality is a common problem not just related to developing new courses on social problems. An Introductory course in English Literature from Chaucer to Hemmingway already invites such a criticism. We are certain that Faculty Board with experience in rectifying these situations, is capable of developing courses, if it wants to, which would provide students with the tools to evaluate the human situation. But from their objections we fear that the faculty has grown far too rigid when it comes to making changes or to coping with the real word outside of their ivory towered, departmentalized existence.

Faculty members at Senate also had reservations about endorsing the concept because they feared it would mean stepping on faculty boards toes. As it is the Senate's duty to deal with matters pertaining to the overall academic welfare of the university, Senate endorsement of the concept would not have constituted an attempt by them to force human problems courses down the necks of faculty board. Rather Senate would have indicated its serious concern and desire to encourage the development of student awareness of human problems. The Senate has neglected its responsibility. An important function of the university will continue to be handled with mere token gestures.

letters

What's the point?

Dear Editor,

What is the AMS going to prove by encouraging students to withhold fees as a protest against the Davis' government's education finance policy? What solidarity among students views will be demonstrated by a mass refusal to pay? Does anyone honestly believe that Davis will be moved by such an act?

By advocating the withholding of fees, the AMS is in effect saying "if you sit down and do nothing (don't bother to go over to Richardson Hall and pay the fees) you'll get $5 (the interest on $350 for 21-2 months). Even students who agree with the Davis decisions would gladly do that. Asking everyone to go to the bathroom on January 31 (as an act of protest, of course) would indicate just about as much solidarity of student opinion. Student solidarity must be expressed as a direct protest if it is to be meaningful (for example by everyone writing to Queen's Park and actually telling the government their view. However, the AMS realizes that hardly anyone will write a letter, so they make it easy. Instead they say "withhold fees" which is about equivalent to asking everyone not to write such a letter (with the implication that the act of not sending a letter is an act of protest).

I think students should realize that hurting the innocent university by not paying is unjust (not to mention rather ineffective) and therefore the wrong form of protest.

It is wrong to withhold fees in the same way that it is wrong to stop paying your paperboy because you disagree with a newspaper's editorial views.

If students choose to withhold payment, all I can do is ask them to give serious consideration to the effectiveness and justness of the protest and don't allow the power hungry and somewhat irrational student governments to think for them.

Andrew Mason

Ed. Note: We support the AMS stand on the fee withholding as the last ditch effort to show that students are seriious about their demand that the OSAP program be changed to ensure accessibility to higher education. Negotiations both verbal and written have been carried out between the OFS executive, Premier Davis and Education Minister Jack McNie with little satisfaction gained by the OFS. The fee withholding is a necessary part of the campaign to show our concern with the future of education.

Pub dancing

Dear Editor,

For the first time in several months I visited the Pub in the Union, Friday night. I had heard, through your paper, and from my friends, of the various changes that had been made. Most of these changes I felt were for the better. However, I, and those people I was with, were shocked to find that there was no dance floor available. Dancing does not require live groups, and I think that many more people would go to the pub, on dates and to meet friends, if they were able to dance as well as drink.

This undoubtably seems like a rather petty issue compared to the fee strike, but I think that this would be of equal concern to many of Queen's students. It would be of interest to many of us to learn the reasons behind the loss of a dance floor at the Pub.

R. J. Taylor and Friends.

New orthodoxy

Dear Editor,

Will you print this letter? I cannot reveal my name because of my position in the University. The NEW ORTHODOXY is disturbing and depressing. In all the talk about withholding fees all discussion is about students and the government, the rectitude or lack of it, on the side of the students. It has become entirely passe to consider the University which is caught in the middle. Not one student voice concerned with its welfare. No, no, that would lead to a label as a reactionary. I would not expect concern for the pay cheques of professors and senior administrators; they must not even be mentioned in the controversy.

But I had hoped that one, just one, student might have thought and have had the courage to ask aloud what would happen if a fee strike were entirely effective. The University would be short some three to four million dollars in the last three months of the budget year. Janitors, secretaries, librarians, technicians, etc., the majority of University employees - and surely no part of the establishment like professors, vice-principals and such - need their paychecks. Bills for light, heat and telephone, food for residences, supplies for labs, books for libraries, these must be paid for. Of course, Queen's University is solvent. Outside Kingston it is known as the best administered University in the province. So its credit is probably good. But there would certainly be some harrowing days for the financial office. And eventually such a deficit would have to be made up somehow.

Luckily, a large proportion if not all students will pay their fees fairly soon. Unhappily not out of concern for their University but out of self interest. Still, it is sad to think that mindless conformity will have robbed them of the ability to think for themselves and be sensitive to needs other than their own.

Will you print this? I doubt it.

Yours with sadness

Ed. Note: We agree that students should be aware of the temporary effects that the fee withholding will have upon the university but we believe that students, faculty members and administrators should all be concerned with the future of education. Accessibility to higher education is essential if the quality of this institution is to survive. It is for this reason we support the fee withholding campaign.

We understand your concern about paying for university employees and services but we believe this situatiion will be much more serious in future if fewer students are able to attend university. As this institution is financed according to the number of students attending, it is possible that the financial office will have more than a few "harrowing days" in future years when it attempts to pay its bills after serious shortfalls have been experienced.

Salaried students

Dear Editor,

It has become my opinion that the teaching assistantships and demonstratorships offered by various departments at Queen's to senior students of reasonable calibre more represent in some cases a honorarium for their own academic level of achievement than payment for the services they perform. There is superficially, I suppose, nothing wrong with this source of student aid.

I would like to voice an objection, however, to specific instances of students who are salaried by Queen's, which have come to my attention.

Firstly, there is precedent for students paid to work for professors, and who have this research count for course credit. In essence, then, such a student is paid to take a course, while the rest of us pay.

Secondly, there are students who are individually tutored in remedial English by Graduate English students. Those are not, I must emphasize, foreign students, but English-speaking Canadians whose prose has been deemed unacceptable by their university professors. Such a graduate student receives hundreds of dollars for reviewing samples of his (one) student's work each week. The latter student, then, receives hundreds of dollars worth of additional tuition, or, if you prefer, of additional university support. If such a student is to be admitted to university, shouldn't he raise the extra money required to enlighten him?

While those objections are perhaps petty, they do at any rate raise some questions regarding the policy decisions made "above our heads." Surely this isn't a smoothly budgeted tax-evasion.

Sincerely,
Rob Burns

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 34
Tues., Jan 30, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Patricia Devitt
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National desk: Bob Mutrie
Photography: Peter Boag

All sorts of things today . . .thanks to the newsprint people, we need you . . CUPOTT gave us help . . Peter and Maryanne rewrote repeatedly . . ..politicians came and went and called..Dave Wood did pics -- not even his nite..Mung passed out (invites)...Woodie got in over his head...CAR helped (thanks) . . Donna delivered . . Suzie is tired . .Slowman took pix . ..Jim came and learned all sorts of things..and Di and Donna fed me.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

"Chub" Smiles Exposes Sci. '44 Co-op to Cub Reporter

by Steven Winnett

Mr. Chester "Chub" Smiles did not like to discuss "co-op philosophy", especially over his second hamburger. He had been roped into so many of these ludicrous affairs this year that his patience had reached the breaking point. And what made him even more exasperated was the presence of a reporter from the Journal at the dinner table this grey evening, questioning some of the "co-op heavies" about their various philosophies of co-operative living. He listened annoyed, to Mr. Bruce Rattray, General Manager of the Co-op, tell the Journal's cub reporter what he was to emphasise in his story even down to what he should and should not print in it. Rattray rattled on, as Smiles smouldered.

"People should come in with a fairly clear idea of what Co-op means, its philosophy. I think this is the most important thing to emphasise." (But what about simple basics like cheaper and better living, rumbled the inner mind of the omnipresent yet silent Smiles.) Rattray, coolly smiling, admonished the young ace reporter how he was to lay out his virgin article. "You should let people know that Co-op is something you participate in. You should start your article with Scott Wilson's blurb in the front of the Co-op Bible about love: I think that says it all. I'm worried about people coming into Co-op and not knowing anything about Co-op philosophy."

The unbelieving Smiles watched the cub reporter earnestly scribbling down Rattray's dictated gems of co-operative wisdom. In his heart he might have been willing to agree- but he felt that discussing something as vague as co-op philosophy was like settling down to a good steak and vigorously arguing the merits of solipsism in the 1970's. Surely, he told himself, all this talk about Gestalt etc. was unnecessary: surely it was self-evident that co-op philosophy was obviously co-operation, toleration and other "ations" including putting up with everyone else's exasperations.

Suddenly there was a burst of illuminating intelligence from Vivien Campbell, a hard-nosed graduate student who shared Smiles's dislike of the philosophers. "My idea of co-op philosophy is that it shouldn't be discussed."

Smiles gratefully reached for another French fry. He reflected that he had consumed a great many French fries in his many years in the co-op (he had been around in 1941 when the news of Co-op's founding had shared the front page with the American entry into the war). He recalled the good old days, when there were only three houses in the co-op and the membership was all male. Then people were too busy getting through university- they knew exactly why they had formed a co-operative: to help with the housing shortage at Queen's, and to live together cheaply (in those days no one said "less expensively"). Since then, there had been changes. In the 60's the members had decided to sell out, because the houses were falling to pieces. But a far-seeing individual (Smiles, after all, had taken sociology among other things in his years at the university) had decided that a project of coed, cooperative housing should be started, preferably with assistance from the AMS (which, happily, was forthcoming). Now there were 220 students in 21 houses- an amazing rate of expansion, and Smiles could not help but admire the amount of student enterprise and initiative which had gone into the revitalized co-op.

Indeed, as he ignored the ensuing discussions of what was and was not cooperativism, Smiles knew that inwardly he could look back with a great deal of satisfaction on the time he had spent in the co-op. He couldn't help but agree with Liz Watson, one of the division house managers, who startled the Journal reporter with a clear sentence: "Co-op is a really great experience. The mixture of years and faculties helps you to broaden your interests. Rather than going into an apartment and spending all your time with the same people, Co-op helps you to break out of the same circle of friends." And Smiles was particularly elated by a remark of

decker

Co-oper at dinner

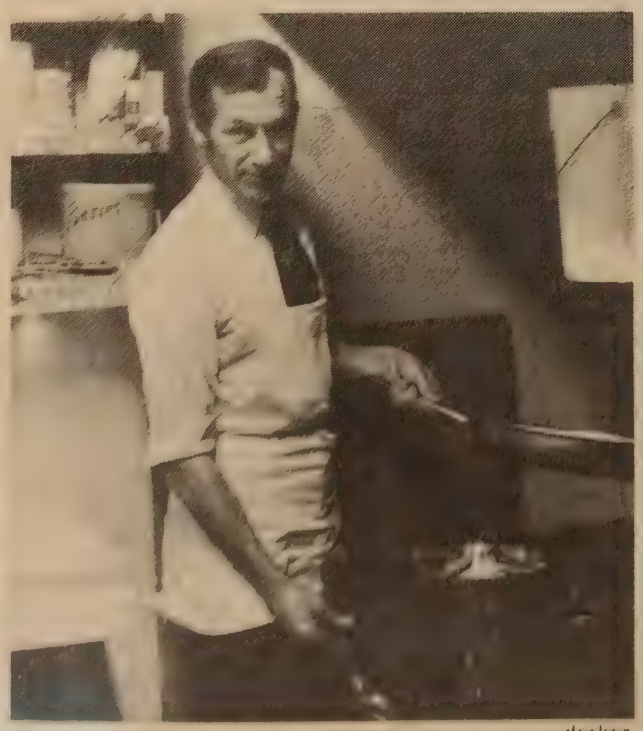
Ms. Watson's on the work duty, as he recalled his many hours of frantic yet fun activity with the dishwasher. "The work duty isn't slave labour: it's fun."

When Smiles had entered the Co-op, he told the suddenly attentive ace reporter from the Journal, he hadn't been able to peel a potato. Now he had had the invigorating experience of preparing lunch and supper on occasions for close to eighty people. He considered that on the whole it had been very rewarding.

As he basked in the glow of his work-sentiments, Smiles was gratified to hear the pronouncements of Scott Anderson, President of the Co-op, on the present state of financial stability. And his exceedingly financial psyche responded strongly to the statement of the treasurer, Carol Shevin, on rents: "This year the price of an average double room, including rents, was $780, for a single about $820." Smiles thought to himself that this was a real measure of the success of the Co-op, especially when he reflected on the higher rents to be paid next year by people in residence and in Elrond. Not that he was "against" Elrond: on the contrary, both Science '44 and Elrond were co-operatives, and each was able to give the other valuable advice on food, fee structures, the law, parties and so on.

Seeing our bright-eyed young reporter, Smiles squeezed him into the corner and told him. "Be sure that people come to the open house on February 3. Don't let them be scared off by all this talk about philosophy: it's fun here. I really like living in an old house with lots of people I've never met before, and generally speaking we get along fine. We eat well, the house is quiet so we can work, the students are mature, and other parties can really be successful. Could five people living in an apartment afford things like renting Polish Hall for a great Christmas party, or the Arena for skating? As long as you make friends both inside and outside the Co-op, you'll never get too closed in- which is great."

"Cooking Is An Inborn Instinct"



Mr. Jim Barrett supervises the preparation of lunch and dinner for the Science '44 Co-op members five days a week, and he is so involved and exhilarated with his work that he "never stops to think" - it even transpires that he is so busy providing "home-produced, well-balanced meals" for his student charges (who cannot hope to emulate his competence) that he himself has no time for lunch.

Barrett disdains the frozen or ready-prepared meals people eat in restaurants. He would never serve powdered potatoes, or produce the kind of profit-oriented pastries one finds in commercial pies. For him, cooking is the fulfilling of his inborn instinct, a gift which gives him great pleasure- and he says that he really enjoys working with students, who are willing to learn and co-operate.

His day begins at 8:00 am in the kitchen at 397 Brock, where he makes the soup for the three divisions, and prepares the supplies for their lunches. In the course of the morning he supervises the preparation of lunch at the other two kitchens on William and Earl Streets. He then repeats this procedure of preparation and supervision in all three kitchens in the afternoon. Thus he is responsible for the preparation of some 400 meals daily.

Barrett, an extremely popular and likeable man in the Co-op, says that his approach to his job is to "get involved in everything that's going, so you can find out you can do a job. You'll do your studies better and with more confidence if you find out in the kitchen that you can do a job you never tackled before."

Barrett is all for sensible budgeting in meal planning. He calls himself "the original Scrooge", and scorns television programs on cooking which encourage a lot of unnecessary spending.

decker

Jim Barrett instructs his charges

Co-op Open House

On February 3, the Science '44 Co-op will be holding an open house for all those who are interested in joining next year. The following houses will be open all day long to receive visitors: 314 William; 373 Johnson; 307-309 University; 31 Garrett; 13 Sydenham; 128 Earl.

Information and application forms will be available. Coffee and donuts are also promised.

Co-operative Living

by Ruth Fraser

Ed. Note: Ms. Fraser submitted this statement of "Co-op philosophy" as part of an advertising campaign.

The duties of co-operative living are few and the benefits which may be derived from it are many. The benefits are largely a function of what one does put into cooperative living. Living in a co-op is not a passive experience, but an active interaction of individuals in a usually congenial atmosphere of love and-or tolerance.

Superficially one's duties to the co-op consist mainly of a few hours of work duty in the kitchen or on maintenance or in the individual houses, paying your rent, and attending the house meetings when they are called. With time, however, you may wish to become involved at the administrative or decision-making level. Valuable experience can be gained at many levels with regard to management. Co-opers coming together and growing closer create social responsibilities for themselves which they then feel obligated to act on.

Living together in the Co-op may develop in individuals a greater tolerance of others and an awareness of the values of co-operation as opposed to competition.

Such a lifestyle can be found in Science '44 Co-op. Each member lives in a room, shares living space with others and shares a common central kitchen. But so does everyone in residence and apartments. The uniqueness of co-op is that the whole is greater than the sum of the 220 parts. Each house and each personality has a different and discernible personality because - and this is so impossible in residence, in apartments- each individual personality changes the outlook of others and makes the whole his place to live. The Gestalt of Co-op is that the enthusiasm and interest of an individual member contributes to, but does not define, his lifestyle. You get more out than you put in. But if you put in more, then even more than that is what you get out. Think about it.

Canadiana Night

"I'd rather stay home with my wife..."

As you see above, John Sewell will not be at Canadiana Night at Queen's tonight. -- an evening that grew out of the idea that students should be able to meet and interract with successful Canadians on a personal level as opposed to viewing speakers from a far. This concept grew into an excercise in frustrations as more and more "successful Canadians" were approached and more and more declined for the various reasons:

Reve Levesque -- "It sounds like a Russian Salad to me."

Morton Shulman -- "My time is worth too much. . ."

Gordon Sinclare -- "It's an interesting idea . . but I'm too old now."

Mel Lastman -- "North York is bringing the budget down that night."

William Terron -- "I have a supper engagement with the British High Commissioner."

Ed Mervish -- "It's impossible to leave Toronto due to all of my business commitments."

Determination (would you believe stupidity) kept me going, and in fact there will be four (count'em) "successful Canadians" here tonight whom you can meet.

James McBain. The exact nature of McBain's work is not explicitily known, but we are certain that he is a poet dealing with Canadian material, and existentialist, and a world traveler. He has just returned from South America and his experiences and circumstances there increased his spectrum in philosophical thought. He will be on show at Lower Vic at 8 pm to . . .

George Nyckalchuck was perhaps here twice last year with Lighthouse -- being he's their manager. He's a shrewd man managing Canada's top rock group. OK. As well, his entreperunertal skill was excercised in his ownerhsip of the Rock Pile, an extremely successful discoteque in Toronto. If interested in finding out some neat things about Lighthouse, come and meet George and he'll tell what's it is like to be involved in the contempory music scene. You can find him in Ban Righ Common room at 8 pm. It won't be a common experience.

Ron Thom does the monolithic structure arising behind Jeffery, Ellis, Richardson, Dunning and MacDonald (where upon they used to park cars and do other things) bother you. If so, Ron Thom is the person to speak to as he is the architect for this great grey beastie. As well, he is responsible for Trent University, Massey College at U of T, the New Metropolitan Toronto Zoo, where many beasties come from. He is an extremely warm and personable person. If, by looking at his stuff, you doubt this, come to the Polson Room at 8 pm

Lars Thompson. I have a quote here: "Formal structures do as much harm as good." Is this a reference to McArthur College (ie -- the Faculty of Education out the road) where Professor Thompson teaches. He proposes that an intern programme for developing teachers would be a more effective way for teacher education than the existing token teaching experience that McArthur students now pay for."Forces for retention are stronger than forces for change."

He will be in Watson 517 if you want to see him.

SEND A BILL TO BILL

Bill Davis, Jack McNie, and Syl Apps are waiting for a letter like this:

I am withholding my fees in support of:

1. The government clarifying its position on higher education for 1973-74.
2. The provision for greater accessibility through grants under OSAP.
3. The lowering of the OSAP age of independence.
4. Making OSAP open to part-time students.

Along with your own explanation of WHY

WARNING: The Department of National Health and Welfare advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked.

1973 The History of Queen's 1982

by Chris Redmond

Chris Redmond is a former News Editor of the Queen's Journal now attending the University of Waterloo. As co-editor of the Who's Where, he wrote a history of Queen's from the day one until last spring for that book. He now looks ahead . .

by Chris Redmond

Changing the name of this institution to Queen's College is the lo clusion of the events which have taken place since 1973. It was just ten in fact, in the spring of 1973, that Queen's took the first drastic step made it the sort of college it is today. The turning-point had come wh tario government (in the fall of 1972) put a freeze on capital funds for u and (early in February 1973) announced two further financial cuth Basic Income Unit, the figure on which university operating grants a would actually be reduced for 1974-75 from the 1973-74 figure; and weighting for arts students would be reduced from 1 to ½ (representin about $950,000 to Queen's alone). Academics across Ontario expre dismay at the announcement. As the president of the University of To John Evans, put it, "Universities were reconciled to a slow rate perhaps again not keeping up with the rate of inflation, but an actual re BIU values and weightings is a much more drastic step than we had reason to expect." The financial crisis which had been coming slowly denly coming very fast.

At Queen's a special principal's committee, the latest in a succession years of cost-cutting groups, took a hard look at the budgetary fi brought a grim report to the senate and to the executive committee of th trustees. It went through history and generalizations, and the a recommendations which it made were buried in technical terms and hid inside page of the Gazette supplement which printed the report. In fact, until the senate had approved the report, and the board – in its first e meeting in more than thirty years – had done the same, that most peopl what had been put forward. It came into public consciousness on ca when The Globe and Mail published a leaked copy of a confidential lette principal of Queen's to Ontario premier William Davis. That letter sa (as the Globe proclaimed on its front page under black headlines):

As a result of this decision, the latest in a series of decisions which prejudice the quality of post-secondary education in Ontario, Queen's ha that it has no choice but to sever its connection with the Province o Queen's will accept no provincial funds after 1973-74, and we will provincial scrutiny of our operations other than what is required by law.

The view of the governing authorities of Queen's is that, while the sc educational activities will undoubtedly be smaller without governme the quality of those activities will be considerably higher without the in the government's policies.

Practically everyone who read of the decision was stunned.

The government, of course, was bewildered. Joy at the saving of $20 year or more quickly gave way to dismay at loss of control over the u Alone among Ontario universities, Queen's had a federal charter, dep the province for none of its legal rights, and had no government appoint board. It was free, as it had been before the government financing sche in the 1930's, to do what it wished as an independent college.

Special senate committees were rapidly formed to pare away every the necessities of operation, as the university found its annual revenue by more than four-fifths. The first step was to cut the 1974 freshman quot in half. Before anything else of substance could be done, however, t ment was on the telephone to Kingston, and the administration of Qu made one concession: the medical and paramedical schools would o they had been doing, with government financing. (Two years later, ho government decided that in the interests of economy the school of n Queen's should be closed, and the nursing programme at St. Lawrenc was slightly enlarged).

After some consideration, however, the university refused to make compromise for the faculty of applied science, which had almost been closed down before -- in the summer of 1974 -- St. Lawrence College agreed to take responsibility for it, under the usual community college financing, and to continue giving programmes in civic, chemical, mining and metallurgy. Mechanical and the other branches would be closed down by 1977, when Science 77 would graduate as the last class of engineers to receive Queen's degrees. Queen's agreed to let St. Lawrence use Ellis, Dupuis and Goodwin Halls for those three years, while its own engineering buildings were under construction.

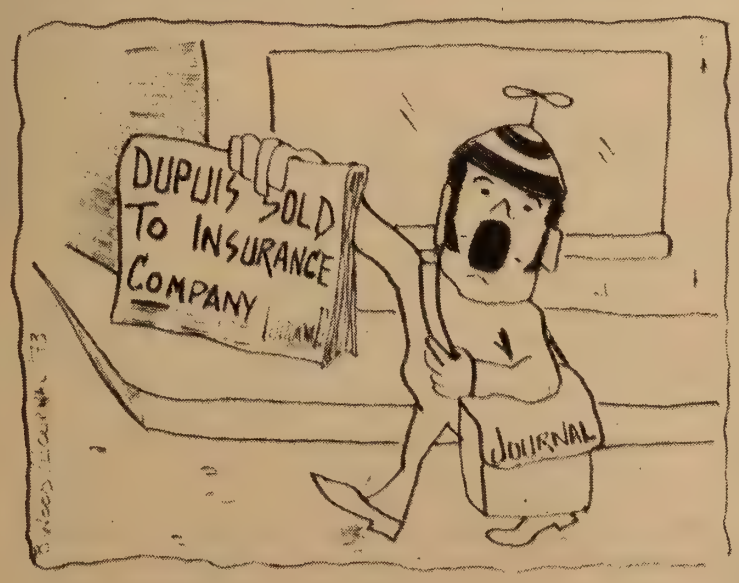
As of May 1974, the faculty of education was closed down altogether. Many of the faculty members decided to leave Queen's, most of them in fact leaving Ontario or getting out of the teaching profession. Of the remainder, those who taught specific subjects were moved into the teaching departments in the faculty of arts and science; those who did not were formed into a division of educational psychology which found a temporary home in vacated Nicol Hall and became part of the psych department. McArthur Hall was sold to the Frontenac-Lennox and Addington County Separate School Board as the new home for Regiopolis-Notre Dame secondary school.

The departments of drama and film studies were closed down, though two film courses and four drama courses continued to be offered under the department of English.

The bachelor of music programme was closed down as soon as the last students graduated from it, in 1977. The departments of music and art history were reduced in size and brought under the department of philosophy.



The departments of classics, French, Spanish and Italian, and German and Russian were combined, and the specialist programmes they offered -- except the French major and a major in classical languages -- were phased out.

The institues of economic research, local government, and intergovernmental relations were closed; the University of Toronto decided to take the economic research operation, and the University of Western Ontario took most of the local government group.

The school of business closed its undergraduate programme, but the MBA programme was kept when the Canadian Association of Manufacturers and the Public Service Commission both agreed to provide substantial annual no-strings grants as long as it was kept. The MBA operation and the faculty of law were brought together under a senate-appointed board to manage graduate professional programmes, and with the grants brought in by the MBA programme they were somehow made self-supporting. Tuition fees in both programmes were high, but went down somewhat when in 1976 the Law Society of Upper Canada finally settled its longstanding controversy over lawyers' trust funds by agreeing to spend the millions of dollars of annual income from them on legal education.

The theological college was closed in 1977, though the university's crisis was only a minor reason; the United Church of Canada had decided in 1973 that ministerial training was best done at larger centres where other denominations also had colleges. The department of religion seemed in danger of severe reduction until, in 1978, the General Council of the United Church agreed to make an annual grant to the university for religious education, as well as for the chaplain and his office.

Students agreed to a substantial increase in non-academic fees. Some of the money went to the running of the phys ed centre, so that the operating costs of the phys ed school went down by almost half. The rest of the increase paid for career planning, counselling and similar services, which were dropped from the university budget. (The Alma Mater Society, though not delighted with the fee increase, grudgingly admitted that it made sense to have these non-academic services financed by students and thus brought under student control.)

Administrative costs went down when the department of sociology was recombined with the department of political studies and the department of economics -- they had been one until the early 1950's, and sociology had separated only in 1966.

Graduate programmes in the life sciences were phased out, though most of them were picked up almost at once, under other names, in the quasi-independent medical faculty.

Staffs were reduced by half or more in the registrar's office, the bursar's and other financial offices, and most administrative departments.

Library hours were cut to save on staff, and for some time the nonprofessional staff was allowed to dwindle by attrition. The reduction in faculties and departments meant a slowdown in some areas of book-buying. The education library was sold to the University of Toronto.

When the St. Lawrence College lease on Dupuis, Ellis and Goodwin Halls expired, Dupuis and Goodwin were sold to an insurance company which connected and remodelled them as a regional headquarters. The computing centre was moved to Ellis Hall, as was the geology department.

Summerhill was bought by the federal government as an historic site (in part, it was the home of Canada's first parliament). Nicol and Miller Halls were sold to the City of Kingston, which needed more office space. Victoria and Leonard Halls and Gordon-Brockington Houses were sold to Major Holdings and Developments, Ltd., which had them remodelled as apartment units.

By 1978, when the major changes had been made or at least begun and the university had spent virtually all of its $30 million endowment, as well as most of the income from the sale of buildings, it was possible to evaluate the whole situation. Excluding the almost independent medical and paramedical, law and MBA programmes, the university had about two thousand undergraduates and three hundred graduate students (graduate enrollment dropped sharply starting in 1975, and by 1978 the only grad programmes of real size were in literatures, philosophy, history, psychology, math, biology and chemistry). Altogether they were paying -- still at the 1973 fee scales -- only about $1.4 million per year. The reductions in operation had brought costs down to only $6 million, but the end of the endowment funds meant a new financial crisis. An all-out alumni canvass was begun in which great stress was laid on the legendary drive of 1877, the year in which the university's very existence had seemed in doubt and alumni had come through to keep it going. In 1979 they did so again, pledging annual contributions of almost a million dollars. Students were polled and agreed to an unprecedented fee increase -- to just under $2000 per year for undergraduates, and about $3000 for grads. This brought the annual income to nearly $6.5 million; when things settled out after the small drop in enrollment produced by the fee increase, income and costs had stabilized around $6 million per year.

By 1980, therefore, the university, with an affiliated medical college, an affiliated law and business school, and a nearby engineering school, was in effect an arts and science college of slightly more than 2000 students. Because of the tuition fees, the highest in Canada by far, it was not surprising that most of them came from higher-income families; the government's inconsistency about whether Queen's students would be eligible for loans and grants did not make things easier. But students continued to apply for admission, so that every year more were turned away than could be admitted.

It was in 1982, finally, that a senior faculty member first pointed out the anomaly in the name of the institution, which was really no longer (in the modern sense of the word) a university. For the 1983-84 academic year, therefore, the name of the place will be Queen's College once again.

Domino's First Tercentenary Production

"Quiet Rebellion" Triumphs Politically, Fails Theatrically

macpherson

Students demonstrate while Mrs. Gordon (Ella Henniger) sits in street

by Sandy Naiman

It was a case of "Great Expectations" unfulfilled at the first of four tercentenary productions at the Domino Theatre Friday night. "The Quiet Rebellion of Mrs. Mary Gordon" triumphed politically but failed theatrically. Although Mr. W. G. Harding's original play had some genuinely amusing farcical touches, these were not frequent enough or funny enough to hold the three and a quarter hour production together.

The play is centred loosely around the attempt to expropriate an old limestone boarding house in Sydenham Ward. However a good chunk of the action concerns the history of boarders who have lived there. From Queen's students of the twenties to Queen's students today, the cycle encompasses World War II evacuee's and Post War Zoot suiters in vignettes which are too sweetly sentimental and which have virtually nothing at all to do with the expropriation of the house.

Present day Queen's students provide the main framework for the play. The influences of pot smoking and protest movements make Mrs. Gordon's plight a feasible impetus for their protest and so guerilla activities are implemented to persuade a stubborn Planning Bord.

Another line also moves within this framework as the love life of one of the students in her house becomes almost hopelessly tangled up. Spock, the nickname of a second year medical student, is played rather weakly by Paul Gompertz. His uncomfortable surplus of restraint however provides a good foil for his roommate to play against. Glen Piper as Weed, is delightfully resilient and spontaneous. His facial expressions, his versatility of movement and a charming sense of innocence created an energetic character on stage and kept the pace of the play going, when in many cases it seemed to falter badly.

Tim Chapman as the kleptomaniac fellow boarder, who appeared to spend more time on the roof with the girls than anywhere else, was initially very funny. However his humour lost its sting from a rather heavy handed insistence upon an affected acting style. Mr. Chapman relieved us in his other role as Larry, the married student going back to school just after the war, with a much more natural style of delivery.

In the only flashback sequence which really worked Jan Brady plays a nubile young maid in Mrs. Gordon's house. In a gin swilling scene with Messrs. Gompertz and Piper playing their predecessors of the twenties the three of them are hilarious. Miss Brady's rather memorable voice and her penchant for gin both surprise and excite the young men and the scene that ensues is one of the best in the play.

Another highlight of the show is the appearance of Charles Pullen and Doris Henderson as the parents of Maude Drawbridge, one of the girls in the house. She has borrowed Spock to act as her husband and her parents have come to meet their son-in-law. Mrs. Henderson's portrayal of a truly unliberated housewife against Mr. Pullen's subtle insistence that she hardly exists at all, encompass another very comical sequence.

Stuart Barton, as the psychologically conditioned policeman, with a hippy son, made more out of the pronounciation of "elm" trees than anyone could possible imagine. His second act opening monologue, reminiscent of a Johnny Carson opening, was nonetheless, well acted and well delivered.

And Ella Henniger, as Mrs. Gordon, owner of the house was, to say the least one of the weaker members of the cast. This is due in part to the script, which involves several very long and not very interesting monologues, particularly an interminable one at the beginning of the first act.

In fact, this speech is so long that it weighed the beginning of the play down. Much of the information is superfluous to the play and much of the rest we find out in the action anyway. Mrs. Henniger is called upon to give several long reminiscing speeches and although she is physically perfect for the role of the 75 year old charming and compassionate woman, she simply cannot keep the pace up in her speeches and thus they become very boring indeed.

Kathleen Roberts, as Aggie, her staunch Scottish friend and housekeeper is excellent. Her heart of gold beneath the gruff exterior is always apparent and her strength and stage presence holds many of the scenes together. Technically, the opening night performance was a disaster. Lighting cues were missed more often than not, sound cues overlapped into the speaking sequences. Set changes were very slow and Les Bartley's set, which was very interesting to look at and which used more of the Domino's stage than usual, inadvertently treated the audience to an added dimension, a shadow show, whenever anyone had to make a quick change back stage.

Mr. Harding's script was also a problem. The play simply tried to do too many things at once. There was a little satire, a touch of sentiment, a dash of farce and even some burlesque, but the overall shape was sketchy and undetermined. Hence the length of the play and very few truly memorable moments. The calibre of the jokes was also very disappointing. They weren't purely of one style or another, but strangely familiar, much like a hybrid, with parts borrowed from different sources. The show was television oriented and would probably work better as a two or three part show for that medium.

Mrs. Norma Edwards' direction was admirable but she had so many people to co-ordinate and so many scenes to integrate, that her task was almost impossible.

It is unfortunate that this first official tercentenary project was so disappointing. Mr. Harding's experience, which is quite extensive, promised to give us a play which we ultimately did not get. But perhaps some changes can be made so that the rest of the run will be a little more encouraging, for the ideas are there and the talent is too. It just has to be streamlined and refined. Then perhaps Mrs. Gordon's rebellion will triumph both politically and theatrically.

macpherson

Mrs. Mary Gordon reminicses

macpherson

In Spock and Weed's apartment (far left, Paul Gompertz and Glen Piper beside him), a [illegible] is planned

Snowballdays

Tuesday, January 30

8:00 pm - The Queen's Astronomy Club will meet for a film. Secretary Geoffrey Wyght will report on the annual meeting of the R.A.S.C. held in Toronto on Saturday. Room 323 Ellis.

9:00 pm - Department of Film Studies, Fellini and the Italian Cinema presents Il Bidone (Fellini, 1955). Ellis Hall.

9:30 pm - Snowball Cultural Night featuring five prominent Canadians. Panel-audience question presentation. Grant Hall.

7:00 and 9:30 pm - Campus Movies - Tuesday Night this week only. The Last Picture Show. Dunning Aud. Admissinn $1.00.

Wednesday, January 31

8:30 - midnight - Beach Party Dance. Grant Hall. 34c with button, 49c without. Dress bikinis and jams (casual).

8:00 pm - Student Recital. Dunning Auditorium. Bachelor of Music Students in solo and chamber ensemble performances.

Thursday, February 1

1:30 pm - Lecture: Arctic Gas and Oil: Need, Supplies and Current Industrial Activity by G. Bevan. The significance of Arctic Petroleum reserves is discussed in the context of a growing world (and especially North American) demand for energy. A review of current industrial activities in exploration and development is presented. The future prospects for and potential benefits of the expansion of the petroleum industry into Canada's northland are assessed.

5:45 - 6:30 pm - Ban Righ Fireside - Coffee and dessert. Artist: French String Trio. Sponsored by Women's Residences and Div. F Concerts. Ban Righ Common Room.

6:45 - Open meeting of the Guerilla Movement for the Arts after the Fireside in Ban Rig h Common Room. The GMA is a non-profit, educational, student-oriented organization to initiate, coordinate, promote and execute musical and related events of a fine arts nature. New Members welcome. Election of executive.

7:30 pm - Medical Sciences Lecture Series presents Diagnosis of Pancreatic Disease by Frank P. Brook. (Prof. of Medicine and Physiology, University of Pennsylvania). Aud. Etherington Hall.

7:30 pm - Bridge Club. McLaughlin Room. Students nion.

8:00 pm - Meeting of the Pentecostal Student Fellowship. Jeffrey Hall. Room 126.

8:30 pm - Music Department presents the first night of Three Days of Experiments in the Arts. Agnes Etherington Art Centre. Admission free.

8:30 pm - The Division of Concerts presents the third concert in the Dunning Hall Series. The French String Trio will perform works by Bach, Mozart, Webern, Guezec and Roussel. Dunning Hall.

9:00 pm Department of Film Studies, American Screen Masters presents Rio Grande (John Ford, 1951). Ellis Hall.

9:00 - 12:30 pm - "Fruit of The Vine" Wine and Cheese Party. Grant Hall. Admission $1.50-couple.

Friday, February 2

7:30 - 10:30 pm "Buffalo Chips" Variety Night. Grant Hall. Admission 25c.

8:30 pm - Music Department presents the second night of Three Days of Experiments in the Arts. Agnes Etherington Art Centre. Admission is free.

Saturday, February 3

8:00 pm - Amity 300 Programme presents Concert on Chinese Music. KCVI Auditorium. Frontenac St. Students $1.00, non-students $1.50. Tickets available from International Centre of John Orr Room at noon hour. (Jan. 29 - Feb. 2).

8:30 pm - Music Department presents 3rd night of Three Days of Experiments in the Arts. Agnes Etherington Art Centre. Admission is free.

8:30 - 1:00 - Snowball Semi-Formal. Chimo. Grant and Kingston Halls. $7.00 per couple. On sale in the John Orr Room 10:30 - 3:30 pm. Meal lines at dinner.

Coming

Sunday, February 4

Richie Havens in Concert. 8:30 pm in the Jock Harty Arena.

Feb. 8

7:30 pm - Pollution Probe - ZPG combined meeting in St. James Anglican Church on the corner of Union and Barrie Streets. Topics for discussion: production of a joint eco-education programme (speakers, information center etc.); address from the ZPG executive (Dr. GerryMorris or Dr. Bill Roff); recycling in Kingston; Dominion Stores policy on non-returnable bottles; and any other topics raised. All interested people are invited to attend.

Off Campus

Jan. 31, Feb. 1, 2, 3 - Queen's Musical Theatre presents Wonderful Town. Grand Theatre. Tickets are $2.00 general and $1.50, students.

Jan. 31, Feb. 1 and 2 - McArthur Theatre Arts presents The Caucasian Chalk Circle by Bertolt Brecht. John Burgess director, Owen oulton associate director. McArthur Theatre-Union St. and Sir John A. Tickets $1.00 or phone 547-6666.

Feb. 2, 3, and 4 - The Quiet Rebellion of Mrs. Mary Gordon. Domino Theatre. Tickets available at Donino and Mahoods. Playing the following weekend as well.

Theatres

Capitol - The Revengers. Starting Wednesday - Deliverance.

Hyland - Young Winston. Starting Thursday - 2001.

Odeon - The Poseidon Adventure.

at agnes

An Experiment in the Arts

by Sandy Naiman

Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings of this week, there will be an experiment in the arts sponsored by the Queen's Improvisation Group. Poetry, Dance, Art and Music will be integrated in spontaneous experimental presentations at the Agnes Etherington Art Centre, at 8:30 each successive evening. They are meant to stimulate the audience by simulating a child's sensibility of creativety.

The planners are David Keane of the Music Department and Trevor Hodgson of the B.A.E. programme. Mr. Keane claimed that they don't know what's going to happen but that "intensive rehearsal tends to deaden" an artistic endeavor.

The premise of the experiment is one hundred per cent improvisation and included in the program will be Toronto Poetess Patricia Elliott reading some of her concrete poetry, a ritualized performance for electrical appliances and a "Laughing Piece" b y Peter Hutchison, which will undoubtedly include the audience.

Robin Nunn, a biology student at Queen's will perform "Body Music". He will be wired to a synthesizer and electrodes will pick up electrical signals from his muscles and these will in turn control the synthesizer Essentially he will be creating music directly with his body.

Dancer Anthony Morgan will perform a work for dancer and projected slide images utilizing the letters of the alphabet. And a transformation of a traditional work for piano will involve the piano being gradually "prepared" while the piece is being performed for the audience.

John Wyre, a well-known Toronto percussionist will perform a work for a multitude of percussion instruments.

The first "Three Days of Experiments in the Arts" was presented in 1971. It was highl y successful according to the planners and had a near-capacity house every night.

The multi faceted nature of the present Improvisation Group gives them a firm basis for exploration in a variety of art forms.

interested in working on a vital instrument of academic change

A.S.U.S. Course Evaluation Guide is interested in you interested in talking about it leave your name in the A.M.S. Office or contact Ross Sutherland 544-0831

virginal player

(or sackbut specialist)

if you are a virginal player or a sackbut specialist a lover of beckett or balzac a freudian cartesian or keynesian if you are turned on by spenser or toynbee sausages or sauerkraut einstein eisenstein skinner or shaw miller marcuse muller or marx if your bag is limnology ornithology or campanology if you are an existentialist dadaist or hedonist male female hermaphrodite or hobbit any or all of these we would like to talk to you somewhere sometime

you may think we are putting you on that its out of the paradiso into the inferno that we will pour you into pin stripes and pack you into a suburban box for your nightly death or that we will hedge you in with corporate controls management theory rubber plants or daily dogma well you may get a plant but forget the rest

at least give us a chance to tell you more we dont care what subjects you studied or what your marks were whether you can start in the spring or want an indefinite holiday first whether you turn up to interviews in your best suit only suit or no suit if you want a chance a challenge a stimulus a highly charged and demanding environment problems to solve and people to motivate then talk to us and tell us

we will be on your campus for interviews and we will hope to see you but if you cant or wont make it why not call mike polley at 928-4345 area code 416 and arrange to meet us sometime at our toronto head office the manufacturers life insurance company 200 bloor street east toronto 5 for further details of our campus visit contact your placement centre or career counselling service

84-72

At McArthur

"Caucasian Chalk Circle"

- macpherson

Robert Common and Kathy Toth in Student production of Bertolt Brecht's play to run Wednesday thru Friday, 8:30 p.m. at McArthur.

John Helmers to be guest soloist at Hamilton Philharmonic

Queen's Student Wins Award

by Merle Bolick

John P. Helmers, a first-year Queen's student, has placed first among 55 competitors in the Hamilton Philharmonic Society young artists' competition, to be featured as guest soloist with the Hamilton Philharmonic Orchestra next season.

Mr. Helmers studies cello under artist-in-residence Robert Dodson of the Vaghy String Quartet. Two weeks ago he was in Hamilton for the final judging of the contest, which took the form of a rehearsal with the full orchestra, under the direction of Boris Brott. His entry choice for the contest was the Concerto No. 1 in A minor for cello and orchestra by Saint-Saens. But it was working with Mr. Brott that made the distinction particularly exciting and inspiring for him, he said.

Previously, Mr. Helmers has played for two summer seasons with the National Youth Orchestra, last summer as principal cellist. He felt that this experience had been especially valuable. The NYO he describes as "a training-ground for professional musicians." More than skill was required in the recent competition, as Mr. Brott stated that he and the judges were looking for a performer-quality, "that distinguishes the artist from the musician."

Mr. Helmers was among those whose names were announced earlier this year in the list of scholarships endowed by the Kingston Symphony Association. As a result of the HPO contest, his name will be listed in the artists' registry of the Ontario Art Council's concert and artists program.

Living off campus and carrying the heavy course-load of the Bachelor of Music program, John Helmers must be given a great deal of credit for devoting so much of his time to the attainment of musical excellence.

The French String Trio

On Thursday 1 February at 8:30 p.m. the Division of Concerts at Queen's University presents the internationally renowned French String Trio as the third concert of the popular Dunning Hall Series.

The programme will be highlighted by a performance of rarely heard Preludes and Fugues by Bach-Mozart. Mozart orchestrated keyboard fugues of J.S. Bach and his son W.F. Bach and composed preludes for them himself. Other works on the programme include the String Trios by Anton Webern, Jean-Pierre Guezec and Albert Roussel. These latter three works demonstrate different styles of composing in the twentieth century.

Founded in 1960 by Gerard Jarry, violin, Serge Collot, viola, and Michel Tournus, cello, these musicians have combined their individual talents to form one of the most important chamber ensembles playing today. This can be demonstrated by their critics' reviews. A reviewer in Switzerland described the trio as "an ensemble of highest quality." In Amsterdam, they were acclaimed for their "intense and beautifully harmonious performance" and "spontaneous and lively interpretation."

The French String Trio has been intergrally involved in the contemporary musical life of France. Serge Collot, the violist, was instrumental in the creation of "Les Concerts du Domain Musical", consisting of a small group of musicians centering around Pierre Boulez. The musicians have performed in first performances by such established composers as Berio, Maderna, and Stockhausen.

The French String Trio has also appeared in Norway, Holland, Switzerland, Belgium, and Morocco. Recently in Mexico, they gave their 500th concert. Their recordings include works by Bach, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven and Schubert.

Hockey Gaels win again: Adair gets 9 points

by Peter Watts

The hockey Gaels kept pace with the University of Ottawa GeeGees this past weekend with a convincing 13-0 shellacking of the Brock Badgers Saturday night at the Harty Arena. It was an important victory for the Gaels as it allowed them to remain tied for the fourth and final playoff spot in the East division of the OUAA hockey program. Friday night, the GeeGees upset second-place York Yeomen 5-2 in Toronto.

The Queen's - Brock game was never in doubt as the Gaels moved out in front 3-0 in the first period, scored six more goals in the second and added a further four in the final period. Jim Adair was the offensive star for Queen's with 3 goals and 6 assists. Colin Loudon and Dave Hadden added two more each while Stu Lang, Steve Gross, Craig Shannon, Mike Lynch, Jim Sunstrum and Jim Tittemore contributed a goal apiece. Queen's goalie Clyde Harris blocked 25 shots to record his first shutout of the year. The Gaels had 68 shots on the Brock goal. The Badgers went with Brian Fraser in goal during the first period but switched to Miller Hicks midway through the second period.

While the Gaels picked up two points for their victory, they were a costly two points. The Gaels, already hampered by the loss of right winger John Smith, have now lost defenceman Steve Gross for the rest of the season. Gross collided with Brock defenceman Phil McCann midway through the third period and was taken to hospital with what was later diagnosed as a broken leg. Gross will have a cast on his leg for about the next 10 weeks.

The injury brings to mind the problems Queen's had last year when they lost Smith, Gross, and Murray Douglas due to injuries in the second half of the schedule. Let's hope that the same thing doesn't happen again this year.

Saturday night's game also shows why Badger coach Dave Perrin is such an advocate of the two-tier system in intercollegiate hockey. This would allow teams to play in one section or another according to their strengths and weaknesses. Teams like Brock, Ryerson, and Trent would play in one section while the strong clubs like the Blues, the Yeomen ad the Voyageurs would play in the first division. Perrin has suggested that the best two teams in divisiion two would move into division one for the next year, replacing the poorest two teams in the first division.

As far as the game itself was concerned, the Gaels played very well; albeit they were not strongly pressed to win. It was one of the Gaels' better efforts in terms of their ability to move the puck, and to hit the man breaking on the wing. The defensive play was much stronger than it has been, an indication of the work that the team has been doing in practice in the last week.

Such a game is good for team morale. And the Gaels need to be mentally prepared for the last two weeks of the season. Friday night, the Gaels meet the second place Yeomen in Toronto. This is a team that the Gaels have lost the last three games to; all of them by a single goal. The Gaels have met York once this year - in the Hockey Canada Tournament here at Queen's last November 5th - in that game they lost by 4-3. The Yeomen boast five of the top dozen scorers in the east division of the OUAA. It will be a very interesting evening next Friday night and anyone who will be in the Toronto area is invited to drop in. The game will be played in the York Arena which is on the main campus on Keele Street.

On Saturday afternoon, the Gaels meet Ryerson Rams in Toronto. This game the Gaels definitely have to win. The following Tuesday, February 6th, the Gaels meet the GeeGees in Ottawa in one of the most important games of the year; the winner of that game will likely be in the playoffs. Then the team returns home for its last three games of the regular schedule, hosting Laurentian on February 9th, and York and Toronto the following weekend, February 16th and 17th.

It promises to be a very interesting two weeks in men's intercollegiate hockey. We hope that their efforts will meet with your support.

mossman

B-Ball Gaels: terrible in Laurentian loss.

by Chris Boon

If anyone out there has the formula for consistent play, please forward it to Mr. Frank Tindall, basketball coach, Queen's University. The Gaels need it, badly. Saturday night, Queen's managed to drop an 80-54 disaster to the Laurentian Voyageurs. Every aspect of their play was lacklustre, especially the shooting - a complete turnaround from the hustle Queen's showed against Ottawa on Tuesday night.

Forward Dave Visser, who is only in his second year of competitive basketball, led the Vees with 26 points, 13 rebounds, and some ferocious defense. Guards Mel Bishop and Guy Vetrie added 20 and 13 points respectively. For the outgunned Gaels, Norm Hagarty hit 14 points, Paul Howard added 13 and Rob Smart 9; Howard also pulled down 9 rebounds.

Norm Hagarty scored the opening points of the game on a pair of foul shots, but it was all downhill from there for the Gaels. Laurentian opened up a 13-2 lead before a brief flurry of activity brought Queen's back to 16-12. Then the roof really collapsed. The Vees ran off 14 quick points, the Gaels were down 30-15, and the game could have been cancelled. The Voyageurs led 44-22 at the half, and enjoyed as much as a 34-point margin during the third quarter, before the reserves managed to narrow the gap a little.

This was one of the worst games that I have seen a Queen's basketball team play in the last seven years. As a team, the Gaels shot badly, moved slowly, played defense like it was a bad rumour, and generally displayed all the enthusiasm of a corpse at a mortician's convention. If they play like that Friday night, Ryerson could beat them, which would completely scotch what slim hopes Queen's has of making the playoffs. I doubt this will happen, but it seems that anything is possible this year . . . maybe we'll even start playing like a team.

In the interim, the gaels will meet R.M.C. in the Snowball game Wednesday night. The present theory is that the game will be played at the College, but check with the P.E.C. for precise details. Ryerson is here Friday in a league contest, then Sir George will wander in for an 8:15 exhibition match on Saturday. Since we don't have too many home games left, it might be nice to have enough fans to justify using both sections of the grandstand. Try it . . . you might even see some good basketball.

Wrestlers have mixed success

Queen's wrestling team enjoyed mixed success over the weekend, competing in an open meet on Saturday and a novice meet Sunday. Al Stewart was the outstanding competitor for Queen's over the two days, losing in the second round on Saturday, but advancing to the final round-robin on Sunday, and finishing third overall in his weight class.

An unfortunate draw put Kim Knight and Rob Beamish in the same half Saturday, with the result that the two Queen's competitors ended up wrestling each other. Beamish won the match 1-0, although he had moved up from his usual 142-lb class to compete in the 150-lb event, Beamish finished 5th overall.

Another Queen's matman, Randy White, won three bouts, but suffered from a bad case of 'bad points'. He had 4½ after his third match, ½ over the allowable limit.

A final note: after three years, Queen's 123-lb man, Steve Brown, won his first match - by a pin. Good show!

Synchro swim wins Western

by Vicki Hand

This past weekend, nine women captured an Invitational title. Waterloo, McMaster, York, Toronto, Western, Windsor and Guelph competed against Queen's and finished after us in that order. We'd ask you to guess which team we are but chances are you'd be wrong. Synchronized swimming is one of the least known of the women's competitive sports. Those of you who call the Phys. Ed. Centre your second home have undoubtably hung over the balcony of the pool one evening and wondered what the hell those girls were doing marching up and down the pool to "Pomp and Circumstance". Well, we are a swimming team that "specializes in gymnastics in the water", to quote our new coach Mrs. Norma Douglas. It is much like figure skating competitiion in that the women compete in figures, solos, duets and team routines.

The placings at the Western meet on Jan. 27th, were:

Figures - 3 entries-team

Anne Morawetz	2nd
Heather Demeza	3rd
Anne Malone	4th

Solo - 2 entried-team

Anne Morawetz	3rd
Anne Malone	4th

Duets - 2 entries-team

Malone-Morawetz	2nd
Hand-Hodgins	4th

Team

Lindsey Coates	1st
Heather Demeza
Sandy Imrie
Vickie Hand
Trish Hodgins
Ann Oldfield
Pat Wilkins

Final Team Standings

Queen's - 45; Waterloo 35 (1st in Figures, Solos and Duets); McMaster -20 (Last year's Champs); York - 11 (Half the team was sick with the 'flu); Toronto - 10 (Only entered a team routine); Western -6; Windsor - 4; Guelph - 3

The finals are being held Feb. 23, 24 (the end of reading week) at the York University Pool, Tait McKenzie Bldg. We'd appreciate your support.

By the way, for those of you who won't be in T.O. the weekend of the Championships, there will be a sneak preview on Athletics Night, Jan. 31 at 7:45 pm and our practices are always open.

P.S. If you're travelling with any other Queen's team and happen to draw the Men's Squash Team, don't wait for them.

V-Ball Intermediates bury Ryerson 3 straight

by Sue Moffatt

Saturday afternoon, our Intermediate Volleyball Gals maintained their play-off berth by downing a strictly inferior Ryerson team, 15-2, 15-5 and 15-3 in a mere 38 minutes of play. While the scores perhaps justify the team's self-confident and trifling attitude toward the match, their standard of play certainly did not. It rarely rose above the satisfactory, and in many cases was blatantly mediocre. Their strategy seemed to amount to getting the ball to Ryerson's side and waiting for them to make the mistakes. Fortunately, Ryerson was very obliging and played senior public school volleyball throughout the match; thus making our highschool plays look advanced by comparison. The over-all style, or lack of it, which our gals exhibited this weekend, was not a credit to their former displays of expertise. In essence it was a case of letting Ryerson lose rather than of our winning the game by positive offensive action.

The first game was dominated by Queen's undisputed ability to get their service over the net. In the reverse situation, we were fortunate in picking up most of the few serves which Ryerson lobbed over. The inordinate pride which we took in a number of miraculous recoveries should have been dimmed by the realization that not one of them would have been necessary had the team played the ball intelligently in the first place.

The second and third games were faster moving, and saw better use of the spike and block on the parts of both teams. Technical fouls and mistakes in routine skills gave some of Queen's plays an unusual shoddy appearance. In their eagerness to retrieve the ball, the back row players vacated their positions and created holes on the court which a better opponent could have used to advantage. Moreover, this three-on-one positioning created unnecessary and ridiculous confusion among a team which has always shown itself to be very alert position-wise. Queen's back line must also be thankful that Ryerson's dangerously hard server cut her own throat with a net serve. Otherwise, she would have given them even more opportunity to prove they couldn't put a good bump under a hard serve.

The negative should not be permitted to wholly overwhelm the positive, considering they did win. In fairness, there were many fine plays, particularly by frontline spikers who showed skill in placement and speed. Judy Beirma's habit of calling positions and making precise, high sets, helped co-ordinate the court play and prevent further degeneration into individual action. Over-all, the level of play swung from the excellent to the dreadful- an inconsistency of style not favourable to those who truly desire to be champions. We shall soon see how much of this lackadaisical play was due to the unchallenging nature of the match. On February 10th and 11th, in T.O., they battle for first place in the 3rd and final championship round. They have a good chance, but only if they start playing the game as a team.

perry

Queen's Rifle Club
marksmen needed
Call Bob at 542-8196
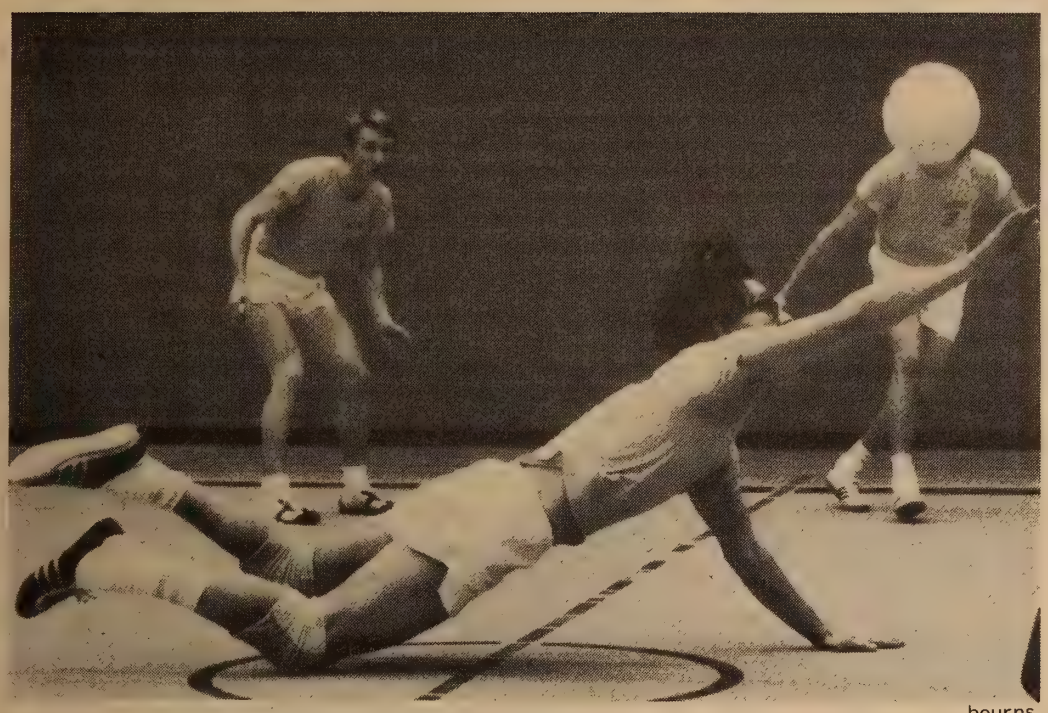
Come out.
Enjoy the fun!!!
free ammunition
--good sport



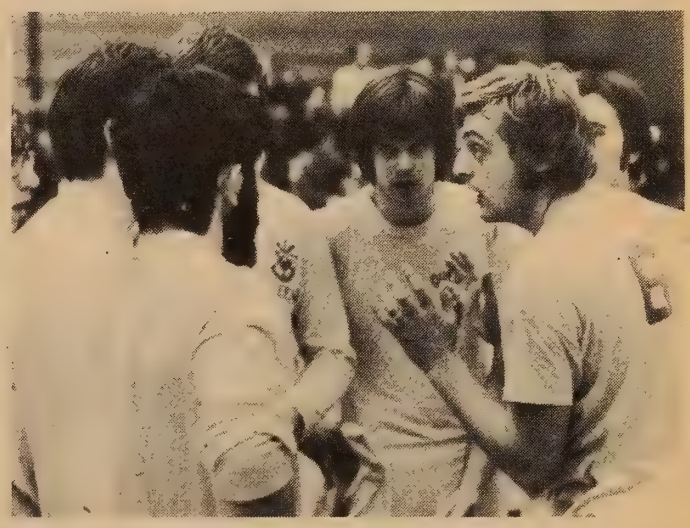
Swingers prefer Golden.
Try it anyhow.

Molson Golden
A good smooth ale
Do you know what you're missing?

Men's Volleyball

The end of a beautiful season . . .

bourns



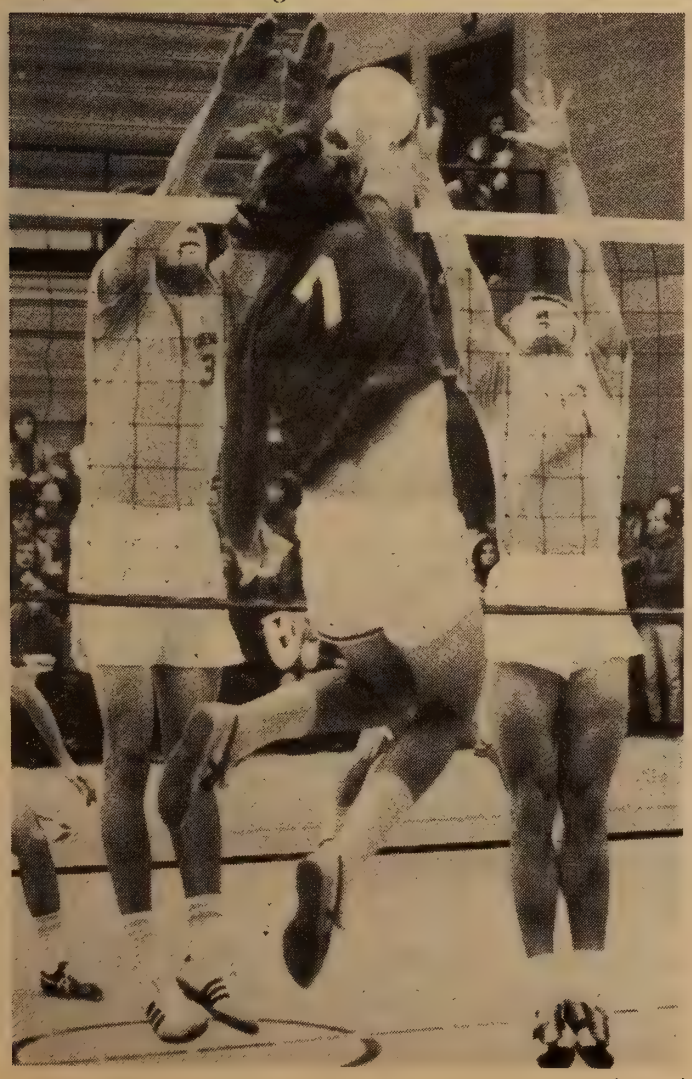
The Gaels worked hard, diving to save points . . .

The end to the 1972-73 volleyball schedule came suddenly for Queen's Saturday night in Bartlett Gym. The York Yeomen came up with a strong performance in the deciding series of matches to beat Queen's 3-1 and capture the OUAA volleyball championships. The victory gives York the right to represent the OUAA at the CIAU national championships in Sudbury, February 23-24.

The day started poorly for Queen's, the team which finished in first place in the regular schedule and did not lose a league game all season. The Gaels dropped the first set to Western 2 games to one. They then went on to beat Waterloo 2-0 and edged the Yeomen 2-1 in the final semi-final game to qualify for the finals. The Yeomen lost to Queen's but defeated Waterloo and Western to gain a berth in the finals.

The Gaels started quickly in the final series, beating York 15-5 in the first game. However, the second game proved to be the turning point. Behind 8-0, Queen's managed to tie the score at 10-10. The lead see-sawed back and forth with York finally winning it 16-14. The Yeomen won the final two games 15-12, and 15-7.

Despite the loss, Queen's students can be very proud of this team. The volleyball Gaels enjoyed an excellent season and are to be congratulated for their fine performance.Special credit goes to player coaches Vaclav Smola and George Janota for their inspired leadership. And a special tip-o-the-hat to the Gaels' manager, Brian Kotilla, whose hard work behind the scenes was a major factor in the team's success this year.



... listening to coach Vaclav Smola . . .

Plattsburgh no match for Pool Gaels

Queen's University swimmers took the lead from the first event in a dual meet against Plattsburg State College on Saturday night and never looked back as they outswam and outdived the New York State team 77-36 in the Queen's Pool. Brian Warren, Darryl Penner, John Pearso and Steve Patterson came from behind in the first relay to win by half a length. Jim Easto broke the team record in the 1000 freestyle, while John Ireland took two seconds in the 1000 and 500 yard freestyle events. John Ker picked up a second in the 200 yard freestyle. Rob Carson picked up a third in the same event. Team captain Steve Patterson overcame a poor start and turn to win the 50 yard freestyle. Darryl Penner joined Patterson with a second, giving Queen's the majority of the points in this event.

. . . .and straining to win . . .but to no avail

d. wood

The 200 yard individual medley is usually a strategy race and veterans Rob Herman and George Craig used their experience to advantage, picking up a first and a third in this event.

The New York college does not have a three metre event in their dual meet schedule and Queen's complied with their request for diving two one-metre events. Phil Millard and Tom Caswell easily outpointed the duo from Plattsburg for a high point total of 320 points. This shows real hope for a good performance from Queen's divers at the OUAA championships. Bill Kirkpatrick, a regular performer with the springboard Gaels, was sidelined this week with the flu. He expressed real satisfaction with his teammates' performance and looks forward to joining them in the Queen's Invitational this coming weekend.

John Pearson, swimming against little competition, managed to break his own team record in the 200 yard butterfly for the fifth consecutive time. Pearson looks toward the Invitational as his real test in the sprint event in this stroke. Rob Herman won the 100 freestyle easily with Roger Rowan outtouching Quayle from Plattsburgh for second.

Bryan Warren dropped his time in the 200 backstroke by a second being narrowly beaten for first in this event while Jamie Noakes missed first in the 200 breaststroke by a tenth of a second. Noakes, Penner and Gillis gave Queen's second, third and fourth in this event and provide extra depth in the backstroke, a factor that should pay off in the championships. The team of Herman, Rowan, Patterson and Pearson narrowly missed breaking another team record in the 400 freestyle record adding a final seven points to Queen's winning total.

So far the pool Gaels have lost to only one team out of seven in regular competition this season and look forward to their Invitational, February third at Queen's pool, to be no exception to their winning trend.

Guelph and Ottawa will be the universities attending and some outstanding club swimmers are also expected to be competing.

With the OUAA finals less than a month away, the team will be working hard, looking for a finish in the top five out of eleven competing universities.

Fencing Gals tie for 1st at Carleton

Queen's ladies fencing team again proved its strength on the weekend finishing in a first place tie with Carleton in the Carleton Invitational Tournament. A total of nine teams took part in the competition.

In the opening round, Queen's beat the Ottawa Recreation Club and also defeated the University of Toronto "A" team. Round two saw them score a victory over Trent but the girls lost their third round match to Carleton.

Next weekend, the OWIAA will conduct its fencing championships at the University of Toronto. Judy Krupanszky, who is at present the second leading individual fencer in the OWIAA, will represent Queen's in the individual championships.

Volleyball Seniors split

by Sue Moffatt

In two games of outstanding play, and a third of questionable character, Queen's dropped their match with Ottawa on Friday night. This necessitates their winning against Carleton and York in order for them to hold on to a 3rd place playoff spot. They surmounted the first obstacle on Saturday night with a 3-1 victory over Carleton, and now must prove their mettle against York next weekend. First place T.O. is also included in next week's schedule, but David and Goliath stories don't usually make the sports page.

Ottawa is indeniably a superb team. Calm and competent, their excellent technical abilities allow them to make remarkable recoveries which discourage all but the most tenacious opponent. Recognizing this challenge and re-calling their last "his close" match with O.U., Queen's went on the court with a "do or die" optimism. The first game was a spectacle of spikes, blocks and digs. In defensive action and net play, the teams were so evenly matched every point was a stiffly contested battle. Occassionally, rattled by Ottawa's uncanny returns. Queen's court positioning would disintegrate, but they always managed to sort things out before the badlam became complete. Unfortunately, Ottawa soon realized our back line's tendency to creep up, and made good use of the back corners on spikes and serves.

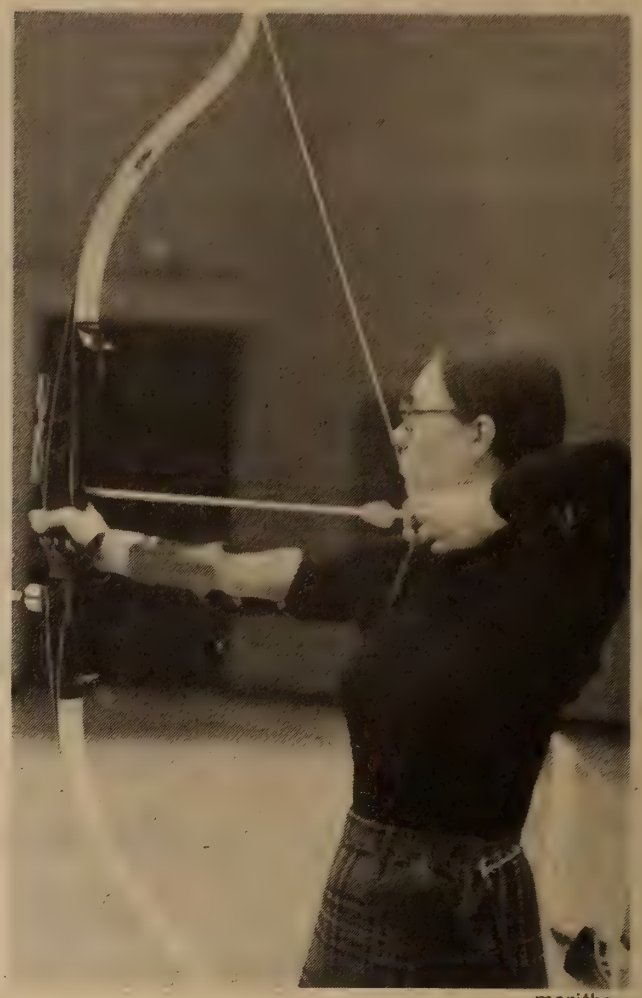
It was serving which cost Queen's this game and the entire match. Time and again serves went out of bounds or into the net. Sure, we could keep Ottawa from making points, but the object was to get 15 of them ourselves. It was bitterly ironic to watch this team fight for the serve, only to literally throw it away.

The second game was an even faster version of the first. Whereas the first game score of 15-9 perhaps suggested a considerable disparity in ability, Ottawa's hard-fought 15-13 win in this game was another matter. For both teams, well-placed back-up work at the net recovered many a block and spike. Jane (Tuffy) Peterson was Queen's specialist in this department. Throughout the match, she made endless efforts to co-ordinate plays, cover holes, and be a Jill of all trades, with well-earned success. Yet, no matter how hard this team tried, they could not serve consistently. Even after holding Ottawa for 11 rotatins to the same score, they could not put enough over to win.

The third game was anti-climactic after the vitality and fierce competition of the first two. While they didn't exactly lie down and die, the gals seemed to lose their aggressive optimism in the face of their serving jinx. Ottawa accordingly took advantage of the slow action and lack of concentration, to clean up the match, 15-5.

While the match was not a success as such, it did prove that Queen's court play is as good as the best. Given even a 50 percent Queen's serving completion rate, the game could have been a very different story.

On Saturday afternoon, the Fates were willing and for the first two games, Queen's servers could do no wrong. Unfortunately, the improvement seemed to be at the expense of their court play. With the exception of blocking, much of the play in these two games was inferior to that of the night before. Gradually, from their initial 15-6 loss, Carleton began picking up momentum, losing only 15-10 in the second, and were ready to really tip Queen's self-satisfied apple cart.



From the beginning of the 3rd game, there was a new tension on the courts and the promise that this was going to be a real game. As Carleton became more aggressive, we came "unglued" and defensive. Rather than relying on the system, our gals tried spontaneous wonder shots which were rarely effective. Blocking and spiking continued to be good, but on recoveries there seemed to be a lack both of confidence and well-directed effort. The struggle for the last 5 points saw both teams playing their hardest, making the same mistakes in their excitement, and revealing a fascinating degree of desperate skill. 14-12 Carleton, 14 all, 15-14 Carleton 15 all, each volley a crisis. Carleton comes up with the goods, 17-15.

The fourth game saw Carleton in control until the 9 all mark. Queen's again seemed to run out of steam and temporarily fall back on individual, sporadic efforts. This made the play on our side violently uncontrolled. While their inconsistent effort allowed them to overtake Carleton, it was not a sight to inspire confidence. Indeed, Carleton rapidly capitalized on our back row's intermittent bouts of restfulness to put their serves behind us and make it a 12-all tie. The upshot, thanks to a Foster Fluke, was a 15-13 win for Queen's, game and match. It came in the nick of time. Although both teams were tired, it would be hard to say which would have held on longest to take the 5th game.

Unfortunately, our gals allow themselves to lose momentun and the will to win at crucial moments. Hopefully, next weekend the rookies will not show the same tendency to become flustered as they did in Friday's Ottawa game. Perhaps, too Queen's will be better able to control their serves and not fall prey to whatever blights them every time the match really matters. It would also be nice if some players would postpone admiring the play until it is definitely over. Next weekend is their last chance. They've got it to give-if they will.

Just in passing - all you sports fans had better hustle down to your nearest meal line or phys-ed centre to pick up your lottery ticket. You can't lose. Think of those skiis! So far our gals have enough to get 3/4's of the way there. PLEASE don't let them down. It's an awful long walk back.

Queen's 3rd in OWIAA Archery Championships

merithew

Janet Spence takes aim for Queen's

Last Friday and Saturday, Queen's University played host to the OWIAA Archery championships. The competitions took place in Bartlett Gym and featured five teams representing the University of Toronto, Western, Queen's, McMaster and the University of Geulph.

The Blues won the championship with a total of 1959 points. Western was second with 1854 points followed by Queen's in third spot with 1779 points. McMaster finished fourth with 1693 points and Guelph placed fifth with a total of 1664 points.

Outstanding individual performances were turned in by Janet Couch of Western, Chris Grant and Anne Chalmers of Toronto, and Janet Spence of Queen's.

Coach Keith Kiell of the Queen's team expressed satisfaction with the performance of the girls. In addition to Janet Spence, Lynne Wilson, Marie Iwaniw, Peg McLeod, Judy Spence and Suzanna Trebuss represented Queen's. Their third place finish was the best that Queen's has had in recent years.

REMINDER

The second installment of fees due by January 31, 1973 can be paid in person at the Accountant's Office, Richardson Hall.

If you find it more convenient to mail your cheque to the Accountant's Office, please record your student number on the face of your cheque.

Finlay's Sports Shop

SKI SPECIALS

Finlay's
Value $10.00
off sale price
on all
Fiberglass and Metal
Glass Skis

Finlay's
$5 Value
off sale price
on boots

Free beer steins with every ski or ski boot

93 Princess St. FEBRUARY ONLY 548-8255

Women's Gymnasts do well in O.G.F. meet

Queen's all-around gymnasts showed that they will be tough competition in the 1st qualifying meet of the Ontario Gymnastics Federation, held in Toronto on Sunday. Paced by Vivien Symington, who took the Overall crown with 1sts in uneven bars and vaulting and a third in beam, and rookie Sue Menard, who came 3rd in floor and 4th in vaulting, the Queen's contingent picked up six ribbons. Chris Goodbrand placed fourth on the beam for the other award.

Meanwhile, the rest of the women's team are preparing for the OWIAA championships in Ottawa this coming weekend. A full squad of 17 competitors, the largest in years for Queen's, will be entered.

SwimGals do well at home

The Queen's Golden Gals hosted the First Annual Invitational Swim Meet this past Saturday, Six teams including Guelph, York, McMaster, Toronto, McGill and Queen's participated. A total team effort took the girls to a third place finish behind McMaster and Toronto, with the support of the home crowd.

Ianna Swan had a really good day placing fourth in the 200 freestyle, cutting her previous best time by three seconds. The 400 freestyle held even greater personal victory for her, as she dropped her time by ten seconds. Beth Randle, in her best race of the day, the 100 freestyle, came from behind to land third place overall with a time of 1:07:1. She also placed well in the 50 freestyle, and put in a good first lap in the 400 freestyle relay. Andra Jamieson, in her first meet since the fall, placed well in the 50 free, and posted a good time in the 50 butterfly. Sue Pritchard cut her 50 freestyle time by a full second, and later went on to post a good time in the 100 yard breaststroke.

After having missed several meets due to knee problems, Steph Prosenyak put in a strong performance in the 50 freestyle, and put in good time in her share of the 400 relay. Backstroker Pat Matheson held her times consistent in the 100 back and the 50 free. Brenda Prosenyak cut her 200 freestyle time by a second.

Team captain Cathy Brace won the only first place for the Queen's women, taking the 50 free in a time of 28:0. She swam a strong second place in both the 100 and 200 breaststroke, cutting her 100 time by 2.5 seconds and her 200 time by a full 5 seconds. She also anchored the second place relay team posting a time of 1:03:4.

Despite the absence of backstroker Barb Whitehead and breaststroker Jane Alexander - both out with the flu - and Mary Jean Duncan who was managing the women's synchro team, the swim Gals were pleased with their overall performance. They now have a three week layoff until the OWIAA finals at McMaster February 16th and 17th. Congratulations to coach Shiela

decker

McKirdy and manager Sue Murdock, whose many hours of work made this one of the smoothest and best run meets of the season.

Queen's Track 2nd in York Invitational

Queen's men's and women's track and field team placed second to the University of Toronto at the second annual York Invitational Indoor Track and Field Meet in Toronto on the weekend.

The Toronto men demonstrated they will be difficult to beat this year and will be attempting to add the OUAA indoor title to the outdoor championship which they won last fall. In scoring, a total of 80 points the Blues dominated the distance events and the field events in spite of not having a full team. Queen's finished a strong second with 52 points, based on a strong showing by their sprinters, middle distance men and a surprise second in the long jump.

A total of fourteen schools and colleges in Ontario took part with over 350 athletes entering the competitions.

The Gaels were led by outstanding performances from team captain Dave Jarvis, Hugh Fraser and Axel Becke.

Fraser enjoyed another victory in the 50 metre sprint with a top time of the season: 5.7 seconds. Teammate Jarvis was second in the same event with a time of 5.8, a personal best for him.

In the four hundred metres, Fraser and George Feeney of the Blues battled it out with Feeney edging out the Gael runner at the finish line, Feeney's time was 50.3, Fraser 50.8. Dave Jarvis running in the last section posted a fast time of 50.5 which would have placed him second, but he was disqualified by officials for having cut out of his lane too soon at the start.

Axel Becke turned in one of his best jumping performances as he placed second to Tim Gowgham of Waterloo. Becke's distance of 6.35 meters was one of his shorter jumps of the day, as he had problems hitting the takeoff board. Several of his efforts were over 23 feet. Freshman John Rudan placed fifth (6.07 meters).

The 1500 meters was won by Ken Hamiltin of York in 3:59:0. Queen's freshman Dieter Stein placed seventh with another personal best performance as he ran the distance in a time of 4:06.7. Veteran Brian Aitken also returned to competition after a long recovery from a severe leg injury to tie with Stein for seventh place. The Gaels will be strengthened considerably with the return of their middle distance star. Rookie Larry Aitken chopped eight seconds off his previous best 1500 as he placed 13th with a time of 4:21.0. Vic Lachance was 14th in 4:26.0.

In the 800 meters another rookie, Ralph Yarnell, ran a personal best time of 2:04.9 to finish tenth.

In the 5000 meters, Kingston native Bill Bryden placed 11th in a field dominated by Toronto and won by Joe Sax of the Blues in a time of 14:39.

The Queen's Gals showed improvement in the 400 meters as Aileen Kirby placed sixth in 64.9. Cathy Wynne was 7th in 65.3, Lynne Andrews 9th in 66.0, and Janey O'Rourke was tenth in 67.2. This event was extremely competitive and will be well contested in this year's OWIAA.

In the relays, the men's and women's teams both finished second. The men ran second to the Toronto "A" team (6:06.8). The Gael foursome consisted of Dieter Stein, Larry Aitken, Brian Aitken, and Dave Jarvis and finished in a time of 6:13.8. There were two other Queen's teams in the event as the sprint and distance teams were both entered. The sprinters placed eighth (6:52) with the distance men finishing ninth (6:55).

The girls were second to Western in the 4 x one lap event with a time of 2.07.4.

Queen's men's and women's teams see their next action on Friday night in the Star Maple Leaf College Games in Toronto. The event will also see the addition of the Queen's mile and two-mile teams in the evening's events.

ASSOCIATION OF STUDENT COUNCILS
44 ST. GEORGE, TORONTO 5, 962-8404

Acapulco Mexico '73

Study week flights $199.00

Dates: Feb. 4-11; Feb. 11-18; Feb. 18-25; Feb. 25 - Mar. 4

YOUR FARE INCLUDES:

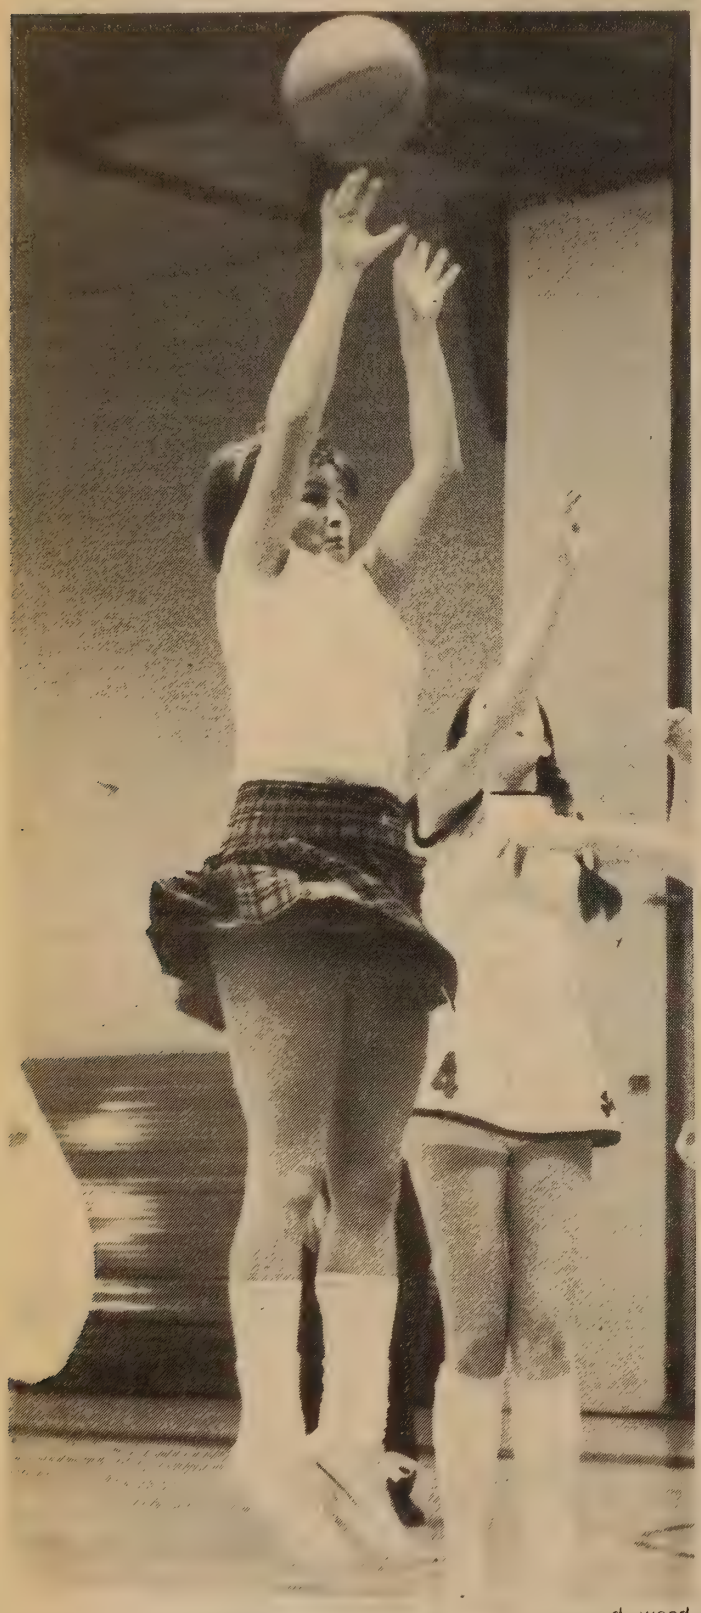
- 1st class travel by Trans International Jet featuring complimentary meals and bar
- 1st class accomodation (double occupancy) Delmonte Hotel Acapulco
- Transfers between arrival airport and hotel
- Welcome cocktail party (2nd day)
- Farewell cocktail party (7th day)
- Free admission to two top Discotheques (Normal charge $2.50 per head)

★ For all prices add $10.00 Hotel Service Charge.

Applications available in the AMS office, Union

Senior Gals dump Carleton53-34

by Mary Anne Purdy



The Queen's senior women's basketball team coasted to an easy win this weekend against Carleton with a score of 53-34. Both Laney Marshall and Karen Flemming seemed to have recovered from their pre-Christmas injuries to lead the team offensively and defensively. Laney was one of the top scorers of the game with 10 points. Guard Pat Quigley also had a total of 10.

The game started with a scrambly first quarter, with poor passing under the Queen's basket, and disorganized plays, resulting in the Gals losing the ball more often than they should have. Coach Brenda Mackie relied heavily on her bench strength, with Heather Dean and Guard Kathy Keely substituting regularly. By the end of the half, Queen's had settled down to play good, solid defensive basketball. The Gals used a zone defense, as did Carleton.

The referee was very liberal in calling fouls in the first half, with Queen's repeatedly losing the ball because of this. This was due to the close contact basketball the team was playing, with a lot of fouls being committed around the baskets of both teams. However, Pat Quigley made up for this loss with her quick rebounding and good passing. The score at the end of the half was 29-12 in favour of Queen's.

The second half started out well, with Queen's getting control of the ball quite often by intercepting passes and good rebounding. Also, steals by Marshall and Flemming resulted in Queen's taking advantage of their fast break. Queen's also scored when Laney or Karen would get past the Carleton defense and receive long court passes from their team mates. The team played well together, setting up good passing plays and shooting accurately with layups and outside of the key. Next weekend the Gals travel to Toronto to play York and Toronto. The team has beaten both of these teams in the past, so let us hope that history will repeat itself.

Pat Patterson takes a jumper vs Carleton

d wood

classified

CATHY WHAT WILL F Troop say whey they find out that you backed down in our classified fight . .

DI and DONNA -- Don't forget to send you a WHAT . .

DO YOU HAVE PLANS for the future? Dreams and plans are fine -- but there's a time for dreaming and a time for doing. Set aside March 10 for the Arts Formal at the 401 Inn -- this dream can come true for only $6.00.

I'm LOOKING FOR a Ultraviolet (Black) light. Call Helen at 544-2157.

IF YOU ARE GRADUATING, save your farewells for the Arts Formal. This perfect opportunity offers you a bar, a buffet dinner and a dance all for $6. You can even leave your fux at home!

TO FRIENDS IN RADIOLAND -- JVS is upset cause no one called.

10-50 OVER AND OUT

COURSE CHANGES

Faculty of Arts and Science

Any change in registration must be made on an Academic Change Form. Dropping a course without obtaining the approval of the Associate Dean (Studies) on an Academic Change Form may result in failure in the course.

DEADLINES

January 31 - Last date for dropping a whole course or adding a second term half course.

February 28 - Last date for dropping a second term half course.

panelists wanted!

UNDER ATTACK , the national campus television show, is returning to Queen's next week

Guests expected include:

AL CAPP
U.S. Cartoonist and Social Commentator

MR. LOH I-CHENG
Nationalist China Ambassador to the U.S.

Others T.B.A.

There will be an open meeting with a member of the Under Attack staff for any students interested in being panelists

Wednesday, January 31
McLaughlin Room,
Students Memorial Union
6:00 p.m.

Computing Centre
Programming Competition '73

The Closing Date for Entries is January 31st., 1973.

Further details are available from F. M. Larkin, Computing Centre (local 6901).

Hockey Gals in 1st after big weekend

Queen's hockey Gals moved into a tenuous first-place lead in OWIAA competition this weekend, dumping Guelph 7-6 Saturday on Gail McLeod's penalty shot after Western had tied the score 2-all in the Friday natch. The three-point weekend leaves Queen's one point ahead of Guelph.

The key to Queen's success was the goal production of the line of Liz Wood, Gail McLeod and Leslie Ferrari. Lix collected a single goal against the Mustangs, then added a pair in the Guelph contest, while Leslie also potted two markers against the Aggies. Gail's game-winner in Guelph came with avout five minutes left in the match.

Against Western, the Gals enjoyed an edge in play throughout the game, which was dominated by fast turn-arounds and well-coordinated line rushes that just missed producing goals on several occasions. Gwen Harrison and Liz Woood gave Queen's a two-one lead going into the final 17 secoonds, but Western won a crucial faceoff in the Gals' end, and scored the equalizer out of a goal-mouth scramble.

Saturday, in Guelph's dismal arena, Queen's found itself in another fast, offensive game. Guelph took an early 1-0 lead, but Queen's came back strongly on the work of the Wood-McLeod-Ferrari line and single goals by Cathy Collins and Jane Kirby. Ahead 5-3 in the second period, Queen's suffered through an inability to clear the puck from their own end that gave Guelph two quick goals. The Gals went ahead again, early in the third period, but Guelph again rallied to tie the score, this time at 6-all. This set the stage for Gail McLeod's heroics.

The penalty shot resulted when a Guelph defenseman fell on the puck in the goal crease, with the goalie well out of position and a sure goal for Queen's on its way in. The referee alertly awarded Gail the attempt, and she wasted no time. Skating in, she faked a shot, bringing the Guelph net-minder to her knees, then calmly slid the puck into an open net off her backhand. Queen's defense and the steady goaltending of Wanda Gyde held up for the rest of the game, and the gals had a 7-6 victory.

The Gals will host McMaster this weekend, then travel to McGill the following Friday, wrapping up the season with a home game against Toronto on Saturday, February 10th. Queen's will host the OWIAA hockey finals the next weekend, on Feb. 6 and 7th.

Strickland 1st all-around

Queen's Gymnasts bomb Ottawa U.

by Chris Woods

In an informal duel meet held at the University of Ottawa's new athletics complex over the weekend, Queen's Men's Gymnastics Team emerged victorious over the home team by a margin of thirty points.

Drew Strickland once again dominated the all-around scoring, with a total of 43.6 points. Strickland won Still Rings and tied for first spot on Parallel Bars with teammate Dave Ross, while he placed second i n all the rest of the events. Dave Ross came up with some excellent performances also, winning Vaulting with 8.5 points and tying with Strickland for first place in Parallel Bars with 7.6 points. Highlight of the meet was undoubtedly his full-twisting back "noodle" off the Parallel Bars, which sent Queen's coach Barry Brooker into an uncontrollable fit of laughter.

Jamie Archibald clinched third place all-around, with 39.4 points. Hampered slightly by an elbow injury which he sustained in the Queen's Invitational, he still managed to take first place in Floor Exercise, with a score of 8.2. Finally, Alex McLaren tied with Delio Tortosa, to take fifth place all-around for the Queen's team. McLaren won the Horizontal Bar event with 7.4 points, while rookie Bob Dales, wh o suffered a slight mishap on the bar, swept to an easy first place finish on Side Horse. Both competitors considerably outclassed the opposition, both Queen's and Ottawa.

The lone Ottawa competitor in the all-around ranks at the end of the meet was Dennis Pigeou, who took fourth place all-around with a score of 38.3 points. It was obvious that the Queen's team would walk away with the contest from the moment they started their warm-ups, but they blew a considerable portion of their potential margin my missing routines on various apparatus rather consistently. Hopefully, they have purged the "wipe-outs" from their systems, and will hit these routines right on at the OUAA East, to be held at the same U of O gymnasium in two weeks' time. In addition, it is anticipated that the experience of competing on the Ottawa equipment will give the Queen's team a slight advantage going into the semi-final meet, in which it will face its principal opponent, York University.

Finally, this victory at last proved my own mettle as a seer; one of my predictions finally came true. Thanks, guys.

Intermediate Gals undefeated

by Mary Anne Purdy

Once again the intermediate women's basketball team came out with a win in play this weekend against Ryerson.The game Saturday afternoon seemed to be a replay of the last two games the team has played, with the Gals starting off slowly, then picking up in the second half. At half time the score stood at 12-9 for Queen's. Sloppy, uncontrollable passes attributed to this low score. Also, the Gals had trouble getting the game moving, because of their lack of running in the first quarter. However, by the end of the secon quarter the team started to move the ball well. Ryerson had an effective zone defense that Queen's could not penetrate, forcing them to shoot from outside the key. Many of these shots did not go in.

In the second half, the Gals came out running. Queen's was quick at getting rebounds, and also the majority of jumps were taken by the Gals. As a result our team controlled the ball for the majority of the half. High scorers for Queen's were Jarmila Smola, who hit fourteen points, and Jenny Bagnall, who netted 10 with her consistently effective long shot. Special mention should be given to Devany Smith, for her bustling play both on offense and defense. (Gaels, take note please!)Substitutions were put on regularly throughout the game, the most frequent of these being Kathy Willox, who is very effective at rebounding.

The game ended with a score of 45-33 for Queen's. This has made a perfect record of no losses in seven games for the intermediate Gals.

Gael Group 52 See you at the pub on Thursday night around 9 P.M. Mum & Dad Fats; Great to have you back, wires and all. Schmug.

AMITY 300

An International Festival

Queen's University

Sat. Feb. 3 Concert on Chinese Music K.C.V.I. Auditorium (Frontenac St.) 8:00 P.M. Students $1.00 Non-students $1.50

Sun. Feb. 5 Filipino Music Concert Grant Hall 8:00 P.M. Students $1.00 Non-students $1.50

Mon. Feb. 6 African Language Structures A seminar in International Centre Lower Lounge 3:00 P.M. West Indian Variety Show Grant Hall 8:00 P.M.

Tue. Feb. 7 "The Ugly Canadian" International Centre Lower Lounge 3:30 P.M. Movies on Indian & China Dupuis Hall Auditorium 8:00 P.M.

Wed. Feb. 7 "Tanzanian Road to Socialism" A seminar in International Centre Lower Lounge 3:00 P.M. Audio-Visual Slide on China Internatinal Centre Lower Lounge 8:00 P.M.

Thur. Feb. 8 "Social & Economic Structures in the Philippines" A seminar in Dupuis Hall Auditorium 3:30 P.M. Amity 300 Variety Show Grant Hall 8:00 P.M. Admission $1.00

Fri. Feb. 9 Indian Variety Show Dunning Hall 8:00 P.M. Admission $1.00

Sat. Feb. 10 Grad Day Symposium "Foreign Students in Canadian Universities" - the role & education. 10:00 A.M. - 4:00 P.M. Dunning Hall Aud. Highlife Spectacular Dance Grant Hall 9:00 P.M. Admission $2.50

Tickets & Information: International Centre (547-2807) John Orr Room, Agnes Etherington, and other places around campus.

Canada: Commons considering new foreign fund policy

OTTAWA A new bill has been brought before the House of Commons to ensure that Canada will get the maximum benefit from any new foreign investment in this country.

The legislation, introduced by Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Alastair Gillespie last week, will set up a foreign investment review agency which will regulate all new enterprises set up by parties from other nations as well as expansion of existing foreign subsidiaries who wish to enter into new business activities.

In screening the companies wishing to set up subsidiaries or invest in Canada, there will be five standards against which they will be measured. These are the economic effect of the company, including jobs created; Canadian participation; the effect on productivity, efficiency and technology; the effect on competition; and the effect on provincial and national economic policy.

In addition Gillespie announced that legislation would be brought before the House by March requiring that all companies have a majority of Canadians on their Board of directors.

TORONTO — According to Dr. Morton Shulman, New Democratic Party MLA in the Ontario legislature, there are a number of doctors who are ripping-off the Ontario Health Insurance Plan by charging for patients they never saw.

Shulman stated that he has found billings for last year which show doctors seeing an impossible number of patients, a psychiatrist who held a group therapy session and charged for the patients individually, and hospital doctors billing for work done by interns.

Dr. Shulman, who has gained his reputation as a government watchdog, claimed that one doctor was paid $18,161 by OHIP for one month. Apparently the doctor said he had had 115 office calls, and made 26 house calls and 14 hospital calls during that month.

Another doctor had earned $10,833 for the month, claiming 294 office calls in addition to 1282 pieces of lab work.

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau has announced that he will not place any burden on the Canadian taxpayer for the 1976 Montreal Summer Olympic Games, a move which could seriously impair the 1976 Sailing Olympics in Kingston.

Mayor George Speal was told that before the provincial government kicked in funds for the games, the federal government would have to foot the bill for an improvement of the harbour facilities in Portsmouth Bay.

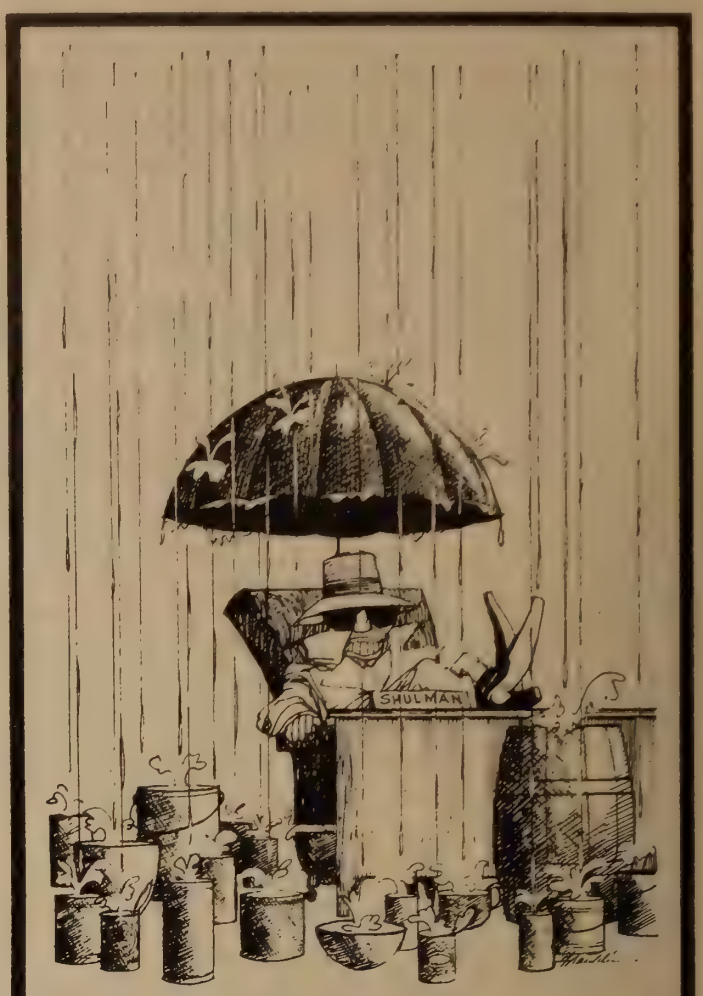
However, Trudeau stated that if agreement could be reached between all parties he would give permission for special coinage, stamps and lotteries to generate revenue for the event.

OTTAWA — Canada's first envoy to the special peacekeeping force in Vietnam has been sent and will start its duties as soon as the other envoys, that of Poland, Hungary, and Indonesia, arrive.

Although it has still not been settled as to the higher authority to whom the force will be reporting, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp has indicated that the terms of service are acceptible.

Sharp agreed to sending 176 observers on a 60 day trial basis until the actual success of the pact is determined. However, if Canada decides to continue with the peace force then External Affairs department staff will be assigned to the job on the basis of a one-year rotation with a holiday in Hong Kong some time during that tour of duty.

The actual cost to Canada of providing the force will be providing for the people who are sent plus 2 per cent of the operating budget according to Sharp. Canadian personnel will only be allowed to carry sidearms as one of the terms of the agreement.



The head of the Canadian mission will be Michael Gauvin, former ambassador to Greece and a veteran of Indochina, the Congo, and the Dominican Republic.

Sharp is still negotiating an acceptible authority to which to report but has indicated that he would favour the security council of the United Nations.

KINGSTON — Lake Ontario Park will get a major facelift if a proposal by Conklin Shows of Brantford is accepted by city council. The Canadian amusement company which presently offers limited facilities in the park has proposed a twenty-five year project which will include amusement rides, a band shell, an arcade, restaurants and a zoo.

Phase one which would be completed by this summer will consist of an improvement in the facilities already offered and additional parking facilities. The second phase which the company would have in operation for the Olympic games in 1976 will include a fantasy land, the band shell complex, a roller coaster, an arcade and an international transportation system.

According to Conklin Shows this could make Kingston an amusement capital of Canada.

'It isn't raining rain, you know . . .'

backpage

Countries impose image protection

World: Overseas reporters facing growing censorship

WASHINGTON — Associated Press has found that their foreign correspondents around the world have been faced with growing censorship problems in the past year and that an increasing number have been arrested or expelled or faced with threats.

Many they claimed are faced with the refusal of state officials to provide facts. In addition foreign correspondents have been increasingly hampered by state control of censorship of the local press, an important source of news tips and background for Associated articles.

With the declaration of military rule in the Philippines last fall, heavy restrictions were placed on the movement of news stories across their borders.

The government of Chile requires that all outgoing news stories be presented to the government. According to Associated, heavy intimidation of correspondents is being practiced in Asia, Africa, and Latin America as a means of protecting their image in the outside world.

WASHINGTON — The end to the Vietnamese war will mean an end to foreign interference in South East Asia if the terms of the agreement signed Saturday in Paris are strictly adhered to.

In addition to calling for the removal of foreign presences in South Vietnam the agreement also demanded removal of all forces from Laos and Cambodia.

The treaty also makes provision for an international conference possibly including Russia and Communist China within thirty days after the peace signing to ensure that the peace plan is being carried out. Other participants in the conference would be the combattants, France, the United Kingdom, and Hungary, Poland, Canada, and Indonesia, the four members of the International Control Commission.

Vietnam will also be given the right to determine her own future in a free democratic election under the terms of the treaty, and all discrimination against individuals and organizations who took a part in the war on one side or the other will be illegal.

There will be established a council of national reconciliation and concord composed equally of representatives of the Saigon regime, the Viet Cong, and neutral parties, to attempt to reach some sort of agreement as to the country's future.

The border between North and South Vietnam was left as only provisional at the nine-year old demilitarized zone in expectation that the two Vietnams will eventually come together into one country.

The agreement forbids any new buildups of arms and requires that only existing stocks may be replaced on a one-to-one basis as they are worn out.

Queen's Journal

Volume One Hundred [illegible]

February [illegible]

We're all in this together

This advertisement sponsored by

F2 HAIR

Barbering & Hairstyling Service
82 Brock
549-0012

It's not how long you wear it
It's how you wear it long

Kenneth Rowley Proprietor
No appointment necessary

Batdorf and Rodney have cancelled their tour!

On SUNDAY,February 4, at 8:30 in Harty Arena

see RICHIE HAVENS direct from Los Angelas

with special guest star: JIMMIE SPHEERS

TICKETS: $3.00 with concert card; $3.50 general admission.
On sale this afternoon in the John Orr Room, House of Sounds, and at the door.

Acclamations abound in faculty societies

Eleanor Crowder and Craig Brown were acclaimed President and Vice-president of the Arts and Science Undergraduate Society Wednesday night. Acclaimed for treasurer was Bob Livingston, and for Senator (2 yrs), Kathy Turner.

The Artsci students are having a race for AMS representatives however. Nineteen people have filed for the nine positions open. They are: Deaniel Andreae, Jennifer Blishen, Doug Christensen, Jeff Evenson, Kiloran German, Miriam Gordon, Gary Gorr, John Gray, Anne Humeniuk, Michael Judge, Will Kranenburg, Don Krestel, Dorthey Lloyd, Terri Macli, Rob Nicholson, Dave Sparling, Ross Sutherland, Roberta Walker, Bev Watson.

Di Eastman and Bob Maxwell are contesting for Artsci Senator for a one year term. The nominations for Artsci secretary have been re-opened until 5 pm today as there were no candidates.

In the Graduate Student Society, Fraser Dunford and Bob Maloney were acclaimed President and Vice-president Jennifer Phillips was acclaimed secretary.

Doug Kerfoor, Gerry Liddell, Kathy Dewar, Keith Marshall and Frank Chan are running for the three seats as AMS representatives. Guy Chan and Cal Gillies are running for treasurer.

Final report on Post Secondary Education

Few changes made -- rhetoric added

by Jennifer Grass

The long awaited final report of the Commission on Post Secondary Education was unveiled yesterday in Toronto. It offers few changes from the initial draft, but significally more rhetoric.

While the commission explained the contents of the report, several students at the press conference expressed fear that the recommendations of the report might again be ignored by the provincial government.

Jack McNie, minister of colleges and universities, in a written statement to the press, made the usual platitudes concerning the report and announced his intentions to study it immediately.

David Black, former student and a member of the commission, told the conference that the recommendations for the financing of students are "related to students' ability to pay."

The commission advocates a modified version of the loan and grant scheme now offered through the Ontario Students Awards Commission.

Eligibility for grants should be based on an individual's personal and parental income, according to the report. The amount granted would be calculated on a graduated scale with an upper limit of $15,000 income for a family with two children.

The loan scheme would be open to all students with interest-bearing loans to be repaid within 20 to 30 years following graduation and forgiven after that date.

Black suggested that the program was designed to encourage the maximum accessibility to post-secondary education.

He also pointed out that it would discourage across-the-board fee increases. "Some people would have increases one year and others would not," he said.

Over the past six months students have been asking the government to lower the age of independence. This would allow students who do not get parental support but who do come from wealthy families to receive loans.

Black explained that within the proposed scheme this would not be a problem. "Students will be able to finance their independence by going into debt," he remarked.

Some concern was expressed that accessibility, the essential issue of the report, could be hindered by implementing the loan scheme without the accompanying recommendations for student aid.

This is the central complaint of students who are still fighting last year's cuts in the grant portion of OSAP. They were supported by the commission in their struggle with the govern ment when the cuts were announced last March.

Vince Kelly provided the one dissenting voice on the commission regarding the financing program. He called it a "patchwork welfare scheme" and complained that "middle and upper class students inevitably take advantage of it."

Kelly advocated the abolition of tuition fees and a progressive taxation scheme to bear the cost.

Debate also centered on the government financing of the universities. The report suggests that funds be allocated on the basis of projected enrollment rather than on actual enrollment.

This recommendation comes in response to the financial embarrassment which many universities have experienced as a result of enrollment short falls.

Proposals regarding French-language and native studies, library facilities and a new governing super structure will follow in subsequent articles.

- wood

HAVEN'T YOU HEARD . . .IT'S SNOWBALL week. This is the Beach Party Dance. Some beach party, it must have been thirty below outside, and not enough snow for a sculpture.

We got problems

For those people who read the story on the AMS elections in Tuesday's Journal, and for the candidates, we apologize on the part of ourselves and our printer.

Somehow, we switched the pictures of the two vice-presidential candidates Bruce Trotter and Steve Sugar.

We also (even worse) ran the interview with Sugar twice; once alone, and the other time (correctly) with Lyn Whitham's comments.

This happened because on the weekend Whitham was too sick with the London flu to be interviewed. We did interview her on Monday, and as with Steve Brereton and Trotter, we combined seperate interviews into one overview of each team.

We neglected, however, to remove the singular interview with Sugar.

Sorry about that, but see page 5 for more!

INTERSESSIONAL PROGRAMME
May 14 to June 26, 1973

This Intersession program has been designed to make available a selection of both introductory and advanced degree courses to both currently registered intramural and extramural students at Queen', and applicants who meet the admission requirements of the University. Candidates for this program are urged to take note of the fact that registration by FEBRUARY 16TH, 1973, is highly advisable since certain courses have only a limited number of places available, and others will be withdrawn if minimum enrolment requirements are not met by this date.

Biology
12-030 - Living Systems
12-307+ and 12-407+ - Field Camps
12-537 - Problems in Biological Research

Chemistry
17-283 - Organic Chemistry

Commerce
20-112+ - Accounting II
20-121+ - Introduction to Finance
20-151+ - Human Behaviour in Business I
20-315+ - Current Issues in Financial Accounting
20-381+ - Business Law I

Computing and Information Science
22 101+ - Introduction to Computing (May 8 to June 8)
22-102+ - Computer Organization and Programming I (May 28 to June 22)

Economics
29-110 - Principles of Economics
29-210 - Modern Economic Theory

Film
34-310 - Fundamentals of Film Production
34-423 - The Director's Cinema

French
35-011 - (1st part)- En France comme si vous y etiez (This is a full course taught over both Intersession and Summer School sessions)

Geography
38-323 - Historical Geography
38-336+ - Spatial Interaction: Movement and Networks

History
46-274 - Race Relations in North America
46 277 - Europe Since 1870
46-284 - The Seizure of Power in Historical Perspective

Mathematics
55-005+ - An Introduction to Algebra (the first half of 55-004)
55-162 - Probability and Statistics

Music
64-314 - Studies in Mediaeval and Renaissance Music

Philosophy
77-110 - Introduction to Philosophy

Physical & Health Education
78-241+ - History of Sport and Physical Education (Also Level II activity courses in Rugger, Soccer, Field Hockey, Track and Field)

Physics
79-102 General Physics

Politics
81 280 - Empiral Analysis of Political Behaviour
81-332 - American Government

Portuguese
85-100 Introductory Portuguese

Psychology
84-100 - Principles of Psychology
84-205+ - Experimental Psychology: Learning (the first half of 84-210)
84-230 - The Study of Personality

Religion
89-345 - Christian Interpretations of History: Augustine to Toynbec

Sociology
92-122 - Introduction to Sociology
92-274 - The Sociology of Deviant Behaviour
92-341 - Canadian Society
92-370 - Social Change

Intersession Courses to be Offered in Venice (May 13 to June 23)

Art History
05-245 - Venetian Art and Architecture

Italian
49-202 - Intensive Italian in Venice

Music
64-211 - Studies in Baroque Music

Deadline for Application for Intersession Courses in Venice - March 15, 1973

+ Denotes half course

Length of Session
May 14 to June 26, 1973 (including Victoria Day);
Examination Period - June 25 and 26.

Admission:
Admission to the University is mandatory before registration in Intersession courses. Students not currently registered at Queen's should make application immediately through the Department of Extension, 25 Union Street, Kingston.

Registration:
Registration by February 16th is highly advisable. Individual courses may not be offered if a minimum number of registrations is not received by that date. Certain courses also have a maximum enrolment quota and it will be improbable that a student who attempts to register later than February 16, 1973 can be accepted.
In any case, registration subsequent to February 16th will involve a Late Registration Fee. All students should register through the Department of Extension, 25 Union Street, Kingston, Ontario.

Counselling and Authorization:
Academic Advisors within each department are available for consultation and enquiries concerning courses. Prospective students should seek academic advice in departments before determining their courses and load for the Intersession program.

Registrations in all courses must be authorized by a Departmental Academic Advisor or by the course instructor, or by the Department of Extension. Any student wishing to take two full courses will be required to obtain the approval of both departments or both instructors before registration.

Eligibility:
Registrations will not be valid unless course eligibility requirements are met by May 14th, 1973. Students are not permitted to register for an Intersession course similar or identical to a course already taken except with the permission of the Associate Dean (Studies).

Fees:
All Course Fees are due May 1, 1973.
For each full course - $135.00, For each half course - $67.50

Residence:
Accommodation for both men and women will be available in University Residences during the Intersession term. Enquiries and applications for accommodation should be made to the Business Office, Students' Memorial Union.

REGISTRATION BY FEBRUARY 16, 1973 IS MOST IMPORTANT. A LATE FEE WILL APPLY FOR REGISTRATIONS RECEIVED AFTER THAT DATE.

Admission Applications and Registration forms are available from:

The DEPARTMENT of EXTENSION
25 UNION STREET, KINGSTON, ONTARIO
or phone 547-3283.

Students at Hill see Diefenbaker

by Will Kranenburg and Jill Steinke

A politics tutorial group and a number of other students travelled to Ottawa Wednesday afternoon for a view of the Canadian political scene.

Prior to the sitting of the House, a group of Queen's students met informally with John Diefenbaker in his office. In what proved to be a monologue, he looked back with nostalgia on his life, emphasizing his meeting with Sir Wilfrid Laurier when he was a newsboy in Saskatoon. In describing the present atmosphere of Parliament, Diefenbaker compared it to a "graveyard run by its inmates". Throughout the meeting, he stressed the importance of knowing Canadian History.

The group met with another political notable when they lunched with the Speaker of the Senate, Senator McQueen Ferguson. During the luncheon, she disproved the stereotyped conception of Canadian senators by displaying a dynamic and lively personality. She recounted an anecdote of her experience with a Parliament tour guide shortly after her appointment to the Senate. The guide, ignorant of her identity, criticized the appointment of women to the Senate and in the same breath pointed out that many Senators died before their first session in the Senate.

Part of the group also met with Queen's graduate Leorand Hopkins, who is presently Parliamentary Secretary to the Department of National Defence. He compared the role of the Canadian contingent in South Vietnam to that in Cyprus and Egypt. This peace keeping role exemplifies Canada's position as an intermediary power rather than a world power he said. The Canadian forces are presently in Saigon and are in no apparent danger, however, Hopkins stated in the event of a major crisis, the troops will be evacuated as quickly as possible. Any proposed plans for evacuation were not disclosed.

'Toban ed fired

WINNIPEG (CUP) Maria Horvath, editor of the University of Manitoba student newspaper, The Manitoban, was reinstated as editor Jan. 29 when the University of Manitoba Students Union (UMSU) voted to rescind the motion of impeachment passed at a council meeting Jan. 26.

After her reinstatement as editor, Horvath read a letter of resignation to the council, stating she was resigning so she and the staff might work towards establishing an editorial collective.

The staff had overwhelmingly passed a vote of confidence in her as editor at a Jan. 28 staff meeting.

According to the Canadian University Press constitution, an editor may only be impeached by the council that ratifies her when serious charges of irresponsibility are laid and documented. The Manitoban is a long standing member of the National Student Press Organization.

The council never attempted to make those charges. Vague allegations were made about supposed attempts by the paper to "sabotage" UMSU-sponsored events on campus and about Horvath's supposed inability to get along with UMSU personnel and the Manitoban staff.

Horvath countered all these allegations with the staff's support.

The motion to impeach Horvath was originally made by UMSU President Bill Ballan. With the motion came a threat from Ballan that the UMSU executive would resign unless this motion was passed by council.

After more than two hours of debate, in which council members repeatedly objected they were unable to judge the case, the motion to impeach was passed. The Manitoban staff was asked to find a new editor.

Notice of motion to rescind the impeachment was filed Friday Jan. 26 by a Council Science Representative. Horvath was not given a notice of intent to impeach and her trial was conducted in a totally illegal manner, according to Roberts Rules of Order.

Coincidentally, the move for impeachment came the same day the newspaper published the results of a referendum that indicated a vote of non-confidence in UMSU and its stand of not electing students to the University Senate.

Co-ed quota set

Students wishing to enter Morris Hall from other residences 1973-4. will have a good chance of being accepted. Out of the 180 available spaces in the first co-ed residence on campus, thirty-four are being reserved for returning Morris people, and thirty-four for upper-classmen from outside.

However, should fewer than thirty-four Morris people re-apply, the extra space will be allotted to other upper-classmen.

Indications are that re-applications will be few in number. Most students asked have stated that although they felt the co-ed experiment to have been a great success, they will reapply because the increase in residence fees makes the financial burden too great.

Candidates talk on OFS, NUS, and 'politics'

by Bob Wood

On Tuesday, the Journal presented the backgrounds of the candidates for AMS president and vice-president along with a few of their comments on some of the important issues of the election. The Journal continues now with this discussion with the Whitham-Sugar and Breteton-Trotter teams.

"As a symbol of protest the fee-withholding campaign has been quite good but by itself it will not change government policy" stated Steve Brereton. "Influence lies within the political parties with the MPP's and that's where we should go". Bruce Trotter emphasized that "we must strive for representation on governmental advisory committees". He commented "it's a pity that OFS has gotten so involved with one thing." He suggested that OFS should broaden out into areas like the quality of education, the role of women, and declining enrolement.

Regarding the formation of a National Union of Students, Trotter suggested that leaders of campuses at present are not the type to make it work. "It's a matter of the people involved. There's so many lobby groups; he commented. Trotter pointed out that a keen eye should be kept on NUS and support given when it becomes feasible.

"NUS must be very flexible, not an overall governing body" added Brereton. He favours the organizing of conferences on tenure, student finance, and the role of universities in society as a major task for the national organization as a supplement to discussions initiated by AMS and OFS.

Brereton saw the relationship between senate and the AMS as a complimentary one where the former is concerned with overall academic excellence while the AMS should deal with social and cultural events, services and an educational program complimenting formal studies. He recommended more informal intercommunication which should lead to greater co-ordination between the two groups.

Brereton sees the role of ombudsman as the most important aspect of the rector's duties. "He should act as a leader of the opposition so that the AMS doesn't become embroiled in personal debate. His division of responsibilities should be completely autonomous."

Trotter emphasized the need for better communications between campus organizations. "This should start with the orientation program for first year students with a symposium on Queen's political structure."

Some other proposals of the Brereton-Trotter team included a study of the feasibility of establishing a University Avenue Mall and an information clearing house carrying listings of all rentable accommodation available to students and they also recommend the preparation and presentation of papers on issues of long term importance to the university such as the trimester system, the pass-fail system and the role of students in university decision making.

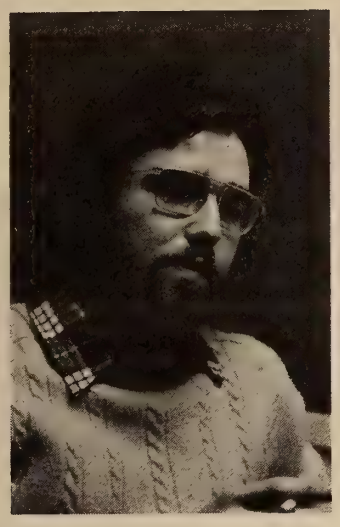
The Whitham-Sugar team fully support the fee-withholding demands. Lyn Whitham pointed out, "the fee withholding allows students a rational credible committment to the future of education. We're trying to bring to the attention of the government our concern with its past and future action". Steve Sugar emphasized that it has been "a very respectable campaign" which encouraged broad based public support". Bills to Bill and similar kinds of protest have been urged to preserve public support. "There has been respect for the steadying Queen's voice in the matter" he added.

"Queen's should focus it's attention and energies toward the Ontario Federation of Students and once this is functioning well then consider a national committment" recommended Whitham referring to a National Student Union. She emphasized however that "the need for NUS is real", substantiating this saying "we need NUS for effective input at the federal level with its influence on education in the various provinces and for an effective lobby for the Canadian Student Loans Plans".

Both Whitham and Sugar reiterated the importance of improving the provincial organization before considering the federal question.

Discussing the relationships between the Senate and the Rector, Whitham and Sugar felt it important to strive for effective liason with Senate to provide for greater academic flexibility. This would also serve to inform Outer Council of proposals before Senate and encourage more informed discussion on topics affecting the students. The pair proposed formally setting up part of the education commission to do this.

They believe the rector "should represent the administration's view to the students and the student's view to the administration" in order to maintain effective communications. Whitham and Sugar also believe the rector should maintain a degree of autonomy in his non-partisan role of facilitating communications.



In summary, the Whitham-Sugar team foresee the AMS as a viable body if the student government is as efficient as possible, especially in services and activities. "With this kind of strong base we can improve the education and policy wing" Whitham concluded.

Further coverage will be published in the special election supplement in next Tuesday's Journal.

Just for the record

Above is the real Steve Sugar, Lyn Whitham's running mate for vice-president.

And this chap is really Bruce Trotter, running for vice-president with Steve Brereton.

Outlook helps kids grow

by Susan de Stein

Camp Outlook is heading into its fourth summer of operation, and plans are underway for making it the most 'successful.'

The idea of Camp Outlook is to organize canoe-trips and camping opportunities in Algonquin Park for kids from the Kingston area. Canoe-tripping serves as an exercise in co-operation and provides a chance for kids to get out of the city in the summer and to gain a better appreciation of nature. In this way the campers are given the opportunity to learn the skills and crafts involved in canoeing and camping.

For those older campers who take on the position of guides in-training, the experience allows them to take on responsibility and acquire certain leadership qualities.

Camp Outlook counsellors are generally university students who, through the programme, are given the chance to meet other students who enjoy canoeing and hold similar interests. The programme provides the counsellors with an opportunity to gain an insight into the various backgrounds and lives of others in the programme.

Outlook is staffed on a voluntary basis. Since campers do not pay any fees, Outlook is supported by charities and donations, and money is often raised by events such as the Dance-a-thon and Charity Day, held during orientation week.

Outlook is looking for people who would be willing to work for one month, either July or August. At attempt is being made now to arrange for jobs for the prospective counsellors in the Kingston area, so that they can also aid in the Kingston part of the programme. Hopefully, this summer, Outlook's projects will include a drop-in centre for the coordination of activities, and also a number of extra in-Kingston events. People planning on remaining in Kingston for the summer are encouraged to become involved in the latter part of the programme.

The follow-up to Outlook's summer project includes various one-to-one activities such as tutoring, a large outlook Christmas dinner, water polo games, snowshoeing and skating, and horseback riding.

To apply for a part in Camp Outlook, those interested may pick up application forms in the SVB-Outlook office located on the second floor of the Union, University Street entrance. Forms should be returned before Feb. 16. Interviews should be underway as soon as classes resume after Reading Week.

Pub and Grounds change

Patrons of the House of Commons Pub and Bitter Grounds, beginning the week ofFebruary 9 and 10 will note that a new set of hours have been instituted for the operations.

Bitter Grounds will be open as usual druing the hours of 8 to 12 pm on Friday and Saturday and the Pub will operate Friday afternoon from 12 pm to 5 pm and Saturday afternoon from 1 pm to 6 pm.

No reason was given for the move but it was suggested that an attempt may be made to introduce amateur shows to the Saturday afternoon pub.

Quebec students meet over fees issue

MONTREAL (CUPI) — More than 1,000 people attended a general assembly at the University of Montreal January 29 to discuss the effect of the new ruling concerning fees.

The new ruling, similar to the one now in effect at the University of Quebec in Montreal, forces students to pay their fees by February 15 or have their names and records stricken from university files.

The first speaker, Danielle Bourassa, gave information on the struggle now going on at UQAM. She said the students there are now on strike to protest the ruling and that they will not return to classes before their ultimatum that the ruling be withdrawn is met.

A second speaker, who has met with Robert Bourassa and U of M officials, gave a brief rundown on the details of that meeting. She said that originally, U of M students would have been forced to pay their second-term fees by January 29. Only Bourassa's personal intervention resulted in a one-week prolongation of the deadline. The speaker added that she suspected ulterior motives on Bourassa's part.

The speaker also gave details of a proposed negotiations committee, as outlined by the University administration. The plan calls for a three-part negotiating team, made up of representatives from the ministry of Education, the university administrators, and students from both universities.

Finally, she indicated that some 422 students from various faculties may be refused the right to attend the second-term classes because they haven't paid. She added that this number would jump to about 1,000 by next September.

A list of resolutions was then presented to the assembly, outlining possible future actions. The first resolution called for an ultimatum to be presented to the administration similar to the one the UQAM students proposed, - that negotiations will not proceed till the ruling is withdrawn. Two further points of the resolution called for the parity committee mentioned earlier and for a deadline to be set for the administration's response. The resolution was passed by a majority.

The second resolution called upon students to withhold payment of their tuition and instead deposit it to a common account, to be managed by representatives of the assembly. The money collected would be paid over to the administration only upon settlement of the conflict. This too passed easily.

The third resolution called for students to participate in a series of rotating strikes and occupations. A heated debate ensued, and the resolution was defeated by a narrow margin of nine votes. Students who had voted in favour of it stated that they would organize such actions anyway.

The fourth resolution calling for a demonstration to be held on February 1, in which students from both UQAM and U of M. would participate passed.

Stringent law may force high failure rates

LENNOXVILLE (CUP) — Nearly one-quarter of the 699 Champlain CEGEP (Community College) students found their academic careers in jeopardy when their marks were released this month.

Some of the students will be forced to leave the CEGEP because of a section of The Regime Pedagogique, the law controlling CEGEP's, which he is registered, may be refused admission to the following session."

This article is included in the act, said Champlain Academic Dean Peter Hill, because a large number of students have attended school free of charge since the CEGEP system was first introduced. The Department of Education is considering making enforcement of this regulation compulsory by 1975, he added.

Hill's office sent one of three types of form letters to 169 students following the release of marks. The students were asked to arrange an interview about their marks, to withdraw with no appeal or to withdraw with the option of appealing, depending on their case. The last two categories were also given the option of registering as part-time students, taking no more than three courses and paying $55 for the "privilege".

The high failure rate, apparently comparable with other english-language CEGEP's, was caused by numerous things, local administrators and instructors said. Their suggestions included the pressure of the semester system to produce results after only four months in a new academic environment, extreme devotion to socializing, the lack of the bottom third of the high school class, which tends to inflate a student's relative standing, the "education gap" between CEGEP and high school, dislike of compulsory courses and a tendency on the part of some students to take more difficult courses too early.

Interviews are still in progress, but Hill estimated that about eighty students will be asked to leave or register as partial students. Other sources indicate the overall impact on Champlain's student body will be much smaller. A source in the Champlain records office said 39 students have withdrawn so far, to be replaced by 42 new students.

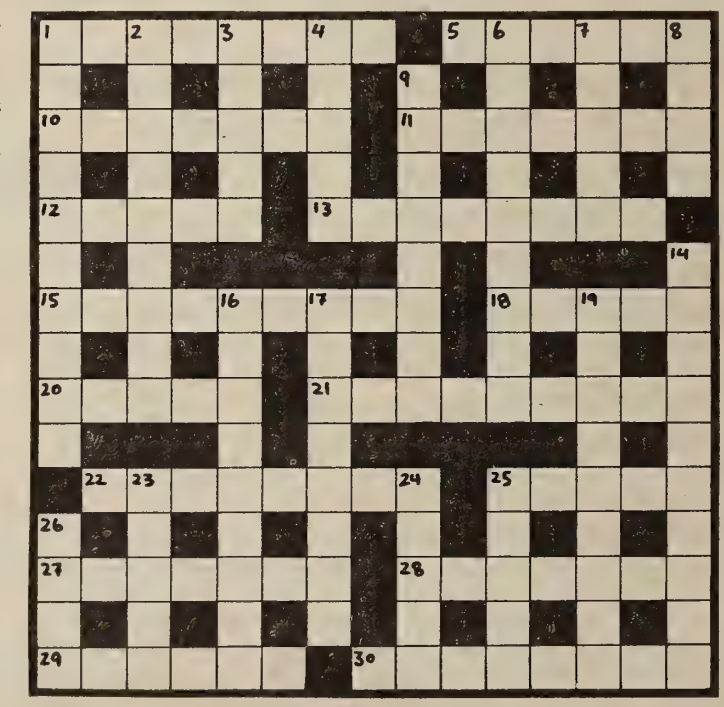
Commerce cares for confused

Help is on its way to academically confused commerce freshmen. Third-year students, led by Charlie Ketcheson and Horst Bettin, have set up a "brain trust" to help them.

The idea is that third-year people who are well prepared in a commerce course will come to the aid of freshmen in distress. Forty-five of the roughly 100 students in third-year commerce responded to a proposal mailed to them last week by Ketcheson and Bettin. A list of their names was mailed to first-year commerce students Tuesday.

Copies of the list are available, for artsci students who have commerce courses, in professor Carl Lawrence's office in Dunning Hall.

Ketcheson said he hopes the "brain trust" will also help integrate commerce students socially, bringing them closer together as a faculty. He said smokers and similar events had not been able to counteract the stratification of students by years.



The "brain trust" will provide "one way to get together", he suggested. Ketcheson and Bettin both mentioned the problems of first-year students who do not know any upperclassmen they can consult for help.

Ketcheson said the idea has the support of the commerce professors, and particularly of Lawrence, who is chairman of undergraduate studies for the school of business.

He said the project should show that students really care and take an active interest in their courses. The objective, he said, is to get commerce students motivated to help other students.

So far the response has been good, Ketcheson said, and the programme may be continued in successive years.

Crossword

ACROSS

1. Likely to fall over because of poor design.
5. Owner of Greek slave.
10. Requiring.
11. A pointed, four-sided monolith.
12. Vapid.
13. High, like rapid transit.
15. Conservative.
18. Bit of information (in Latin, not Greek).
20. Home of Indians who are not on reserves.
21. Worth having.
22. Tots' means of transportation.
25. Winter complaints.
27. Relevant to war.
28. Barely Greek.
29. Claim.
30. Horse operas.

DOWN

1. Throat ailment.
2. Won out.
3. Banishment from Greece.
4. Style.
6. Greek general.
7. Nonsense!
8. Dissipated fellow.
9. The aurora of the north.
14. &&&&&.
16. Spreading out, taking different paths.
17. Contempt and mockery.
19. Device on a typewriter for making columns.
23. Non-urban.
24. Follow.
25. Sing in a monotone.
26. Girl's name; Jane Austen novel.

* * *

The Canadian Red Cross maintains sixteen blood transfusion centres strategically located throughout Canada. The staff, trained nurses and technologists are responsible for collecting, testing, storing and distributing blood to hospitals in their respective areas.

* * *

Red Cross youth discover the needs of their communities first hand by going out and experiencing the problems affecting people in need. Through inner city projects, volunteer work at blood donor clinics, swimming instructions for handicapped children, Red Cross youth in Canada are working for a better world.

Kentucky Fried Chicken
542-2773
286 Montreal St.
Your closest Aunt Lucy's
Take Home Store

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY BANDS

Executive Elections

Nominations for candidates for the following positions on the 1973-74 Queen's Bands Executive should be forwarded to the Bands Manager, c-o AMS Office, by 3:30 p.m., Wednesday, February 7, 1973.

Bands Manager
Assistant Bands Manager
Concessions Manager
Quartermaster
Brass Band Director(s)
Pipe Major
Head Majorette
Head Highland Dancer
Head Cheerleader
Publicity Director

The Executive will be elected by current Bands members at the General Meeting, February 8, 1973, at 7:00 p.m., in Earl Hall, Room 111.
For further information, contact Jeff Chan at 544-7517, or c-o AMS Office.

ARTSCI '76 ELECTIONS

Tuesday, Feb. 13, 1973 - 7:30 pm
STIRLING D
ALL POSITIONS OPEN
President, Vice President
Secretary - Treasurer
Social Convener
Publicity Agent
Athletic Sticks (2)

Nominations for President and Vice President must be submitted by 11 pm,
Monday, Feb. 12 to Nancy Riley, Chown Hall, 544-8098

YOU'LL FIND JUST A LITTLE BIT OF HEAVEN at

CORNER PRINCESS AT ONTARIO

S & R DISCOUNT DEPARTMENT STORE

FREE PARKING

Heavenly Quality Brand Names
Heavenly Latest Styles

Hellish Low Prices

Everything for Everyone to Wear
And For Your Pad Too!

Clothing, Health and Beauty Aids, Toys, Sporting Goods, Housewares, Kitchen Gadgets, Etc, Etc, Etc, Famous Maker Jeans, Slacks, Jackets, Tops and Shirts for He and She at Special Low Prices.

City of the future to be unveiled

In Ottawa on the 24th day of February, 1972, the Earth City Foundation received its Federal Charter as a non-profit urban research foundation. Basically, it is our objective to provide a permanent centre from which we can undertake specific urban research programmes of established priorities and promote maintenance of the high standards of Urba System's education in North America.

It is amazing that with all the current public preoccupation with the present urban crisis, no one has attempted to define just what the city is supposed to be. It is the research objective of the Earth City foundation to combine the most advanced urban planning theory and technique available in the world into a realistic, future model city system. In essence, we are scanning the latest technological urban systems and integrating them into a smoothly functioning, conceptual urban grid system. By orientating our research parameters in this way we focus our energies towards a tangible outcome, and thus eliminate wasted research. We have called this research focal point, "Universal City - the experimental city of the 70's."

It consists of 5 spiral galactic arms, each separated with up to a mile of green areas that flows right to the centre of the city. Our residents will be able to appreciate unspoiled natural ecologies right within the city system. Two of the spiral arms are devoted exclusively to industrial production. This segregates the urban calm from the industrial noise, eliminating industrial-residential overlap-an occurance common to all our present cities.

The Galactic spiral also allows for a natural hierarchy of housing choice. In the far ends of the galactic spirals we have single unit dwellings - coloured blue in the diagram. As we travel further towards the heart of the city, we experience multiple clusters of apartment, leisure and shopping complexes - coloured red in this diagram. Urban density gradually increases as we proceed towards the heart of the city. Not all of our streets and avenues will be straight - the overall effect will be one of peace and tranquility - a never ending succession of discoveries and perspectives. By orientating our urban research from scratch, we have the ultimate in design freedom.

As we travel into the central area of Universal City, we enter a domed megastructure. This structure is the culminating results of total urban planning. Instead of planned obscelescence as found in our present city systems, we have planned inevitability. It is inevitable that a city grow and expand; so, therefore, it is logical that we must plan for this growth and include it in our model. By approaching the total core area in terms of one integrated, homogenous, mega-unit, we can perfect even, free-flow core area mobility and communication. All of its machine parts can be coordinated into a smooth functioning whole unit.

By enclosing the structure in an air inflated dome we create universal free space - free from inclement weather. A dome distributes stress evenly throughout its surface. It facilitates less costly open-air construction techniques. The necessity for large amounts of insulation, brick and cement walls would be minimized. Underneath this dome all manner of exotic plants could be grown and would provide a delightful tropical atmosphere. The plastics in this dome could be engineered to change color and hue by the principle of liquid crystals so that intense sunlight could be filtered out of the city at the flick of a switch.

It is self-evident that purposeful social commitment must proceed all action in the design process. It is only through the expansion of "Urban awareness" to the North American population that we can side track the present urban crisis. We have thus included an energetic "education plan" in our Short and Long Term Strategies. We are planning a North American Membership drive through an active lecture tour. Each member will receive the Foundation's monthly newsletter - "The Universal Star". It will provide a platform for meritorious urban studies as well as foundation progress reports. It will also be a valuable polling device with which we can find out what our membership thinks Universal City should be like. We will also provide the full spectrum of educational aids such as slide shows, video tape programmes, books, pamphlets, and movies to any school, university or special interest group.

The universal city concept will be the subject of a presentation to be given by Franklin Thomas of the Earth City Foundation on February 5 as a special lecture in the "Nature, Science and Man program".

The presentation will be in Dupuis Hall auditorium, at 8 p.m.

Volunteers wanted

The student volunteer bureau needs volunteers for:

New swim program for school kids, here at the Queen's Pool. Thursdays or Fridays 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. and Tuesday mornings 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. Males needed for changing rooms. Instructors - Red Cross necessary.

Someone assisting with the school program at Sunnyside. Three hours a week, preferably in the morning. As soon as possible.

People who would like to help Outlook acquire supplies for this summer's camp, come on up to the office and you can start!

Prison for Women, people are needed to tutor: French, reading, writing and arithmetic as well as the occult. Mornings and Tues, Wed and Thurs. afternoons.

Mental retardation Unit at K.P.H. needs a tutor and other who are willing to volunteer.

Bauden Wing (Rehab) at K.G.H. needs entertainers, chess players and anyone who would like to visit this sections of the hospital.

The Centre, the Drug crisis and information centre, needs some volunteers to assist in the running of the place.

The Kingston Community school needs help in the afternoons.

St. Paul's School is starting a new elective program for children grades two to six. Students with expertise in the areas of guitar, photography gymanstics etc. are needed. Wednesdays 2:45 to 3:30 p.m.

A new program in Pittsburg Township - a program for, 6 to 12 year olds that is a club called the All Stars. Thursday evenings from 6:30 to 8:30 at Holy Family School. (2 males and 1 female).

If you have the time and are interested in one of these volunteer areas, drop in to our office. We're in the Union - up the outside stairs off University. Or call us at 547-5766.

Oh, if you are interested or are thinking of an OFY project, contact Roy Deechey at the above number.

SNOWBALL '73

Saturday, Feb. 3, dance in Leonard Cafeteria

-- admission: 50¢ with button, 75¢ without

-- time: 8:30 pm to midnight

-- fun and and games on Leonard field: Skating on the lake, refreshments, all afternoon.

-- All night movies in Ellis Auditorium from 11 to 4 am. (Featuring: Up the Down Staircase.) Adm: $1.00

Buffalo Chips: The doors will open at 6:45 pm and 9:30 pm

Mexican talks on revolutions and religion

by David Fuller and Frank Okoh

Last Sunday a member of the revoluntionary left-wing movement in Mexico spoke at the Liberation Study Group's Supper in the International Centre. He asked that his name not be published. - he fears that the Mexican authorities would not allow him to return to Mexico if they knew of his activities - so in this article, he shall be called Juan.

Juan outlined the stages and types of capitalist development. There is the pre-capitalist stage, which is usually associated with the traditional outlook and consciousness. The mass of the people still have an 'other-worldly' outlook. They look to a world beyond and do not think in terms of changing society. As a result they do not consider radicals fighting for reform as their allies. Religion is their refuge.

At the other end of the spectrum of development is developed capitalism, exemplified by the United States, Great Britain, West Germany, etc. Between these two extremes lie two kinds of society: the underdeveloped capitalist society, whose structure allows for the possibility of evolution to developed capitalism (for example, Japan, in the early twentieth century); and the underdeveloped capitalist society which will be bound (in a dependent way) to the developed capitalism of the imperialist powers until a socialist revolution comes about. All the countries of Latin America, except Cuba and possibly Chile, are underdeveloped capitalist ones.

What are the possibilities for socialist revolutions in the Latin American countries?

In Mexico, there is a growing peasant guerilla movement, but it is not yet very powerful. The Mexican left is just now beginning to realize that their greatest mistake in the past has been their lack of effort to seek grass roots support among the peasants and workers. There have been "proletarian" parties with not a single member of the proletariat in their ranks; there have been great debates about whether to follow the Soviet model or the Chinese model, but no attempts to create a revolutionary socialist movement specifically suited to Mexico and which will thus attract the support of peasants and workers. It is only very recently that the Mexican left has begun to correct these errors of too much emphasis on theory and too little on practice.

Juan warned against trying to model a particular revolution after another successful one. Conditions are different in each country. A Mexican revolution, for example, will probably follow a course completely different from the Chinese, Vietnamese, or Cuban revolutions. Revolutionaries may learn some things from these other revolutions, but must be prepared to determine by trial and error the best course of action to promote revolution in their own country.

Juan suggested, to the surprise of some of the audience, that the Roman Catholic church will play a large, if not a leading role, in many socialist revolutions in Latin America. In many countries, groups organized by the church are the only groups helping the poor.

The church has a lot of power in Latin America because the people are very religious; Juan hopes that the left-wing elements in the church will gain ascendancy over the more conservative, pro-government elements. To anyone who thinks that religion and socialism are somehow incompatible, Juan points out that Paraguay in the 16th century was a socialist state, ruled by Jesuit priests.

One question was this: are socialist revolutions in Latin America especially difficult because of the danger of American military intervention, as in Guatemala in 1954? Juan replied that the imperialists are adopting a new tactic: rather than intervene directly to prevent a socialist revolution, they will get another country to do it for them. In Latin America, the other country is Brazil.

Brazil's rulers publicly state that they are trying to make Brazil as influential in South America as the United States is in North America.

In conclusion, Juan pointed out that it is ridiculous for radicals to talk of liberating the peasants without first learning what kind of liberation the peasants want. Radicals would be better off living with the peasants for a time instead of taking to the hills to argue over dogma. So dogmatic have some radical parties become that they make the Roman Catholic Church look flexible.

For those interested, the Liberation Study Group has another supper and discussion on Sunday, February 4. A professor in History will be talking on "Violence in Latin America" in the Lower Lounge of the International Centre at 5:30 p.m.

ASUS ELECTIONS

Nominations for Secretary have been extended until Fri Feb 2, 1973 at 5 pm.

Nominations should be handed in to the AMS Office and must include 25 ASUS signatures, acceptance by the candidate, and the candidate's telephone number.

AMS Presidential Candidates Forum

MONDAY
7 P.M.
STERLING D

Amity Commonwealth series

Janes Stone

Opening the Tercentenary Commonwealth Seminars on February 6 in Watson Hall is Mr. A. Kathiramalainathan of the Sri Lanka High Commissinn in Ottawa. Sri Lanka? Sri Lanka is the new name for Ceylon, and the subject of the first seminar in which its history, geography and economics will be discussed.

Organized by the Institute of Commonwealth and Cooperative Studies as its contribution to Amity 300, this group of six weekly seminars form an effort to introduce and make better known some of the smaller Commonwealth members to the general public. Malaysia, Barbados, Guyana, the Republic of Tanzania, and Ghana are to be represented in following meetings.

One of the purposes of these seminars is to introduce Canadians to some of the complex problems on the agenda of the Commonwealth Prime Ministers Meeting in Ottawa this coming August. "There is no doubt in my mind", says Dr. R. T. Robertson, organizer of the seminars, "that the centre of the Commonwealth has begun to relocate itself in Canada and Canada will play a greater role in Commonwealth affairs in the next decade."

An interesting incentive to attend these seminars. They start February 6 and run every Tuesday into March except for February 20.

Mural mystery

A thirty by nine foot mural for the Snowball Variety Night, Buffalo Chips, has been taken or moved without permission from the organizing committee. A committee spokesman declared, "we're absolutely frantic! We really wish the person who moved or took it would bring it back!"

The mural was last seen Tuesday night at 12:30; it's disappearance was discovered early Wednesday. The $30 mural, the product of three day's work, can not be replaced for the show because of the lack of both time and finances. Checks have been made with maintenance staff to ensure that the mural was not simply misplaced.

Lunch Programme in North Kingston needs Volunteers to Work from about 11:30 - 1:30 on any weekday. The programme gives hot lunches to school children. Call 544-3482 or 546-7191.

TAK ready to help

Telephone Aid Kingston is ready to help -- at 544-1771.

Add the number to the "Quick list" on page one of your Who's Where. It went into effect February 1.

TAK, proposed last spring, is an organization of student volunteers designed to take an interest in other students and their needs, whatever they are. Someone will answer the phone who will be ready to act as an information and referral service, to rap about anything at all, or just to listen. They will listen to problems in confidential and anonymous manner when it is "too hard to approach someone in person with the problem".

From 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. the lines will be open at 544-1771.

editorial

Altogether, Whitham and Sugar are the stronger team

Election time again. Cliche time again.

As usual, there are experienced people running for president and vice-president of the AMS, asking for student votes. There are no "unknowns" or joke candidates, though, unless you count Shane, which we don't really. It' a real, political-heavy choice between two teams.

Each team is telling the campus what it wants to do. (See Tuesday's issue, or this issue, or next Tuesday's issue.) At the same time, each team tells the campus what the AMS, under its control, will have to offer to students.

Of course, the AMS will not change as much as one might think from reading the candidates' words. It will remain as the central student government, dispensing services of all kinds (pub, typing and housing services, concerts, constables, Snowball, Who's Where) and taking action in matters of general university concern. Priorities may change, but that frame of reference will stay.

While the candidates outline the things they propose, The Journal humbly outlines the things it proposes.

Social functions are increasingly falling apart. The old ideas become obsolete, and there have been few ideas; now things are at such a stage that even Snowball stirs apathy and loses money. The AMS needs a new plan for coordinating the big events and making them lively. Unless some lively ideas appear for jazzing up the little events, the AMS should cut them loose. Most people prefer to plan their own social lives anyway.

The Queen's Student Agencies bureaucracy needs to get moving, to take services away from the AMS altogether, into a field where people with talent for business can run them. The catch-as)catch-can policies of the last few years not only lose money; they produce less than ideal services.

And the AMS needs to -- now here's the cliche -- become responsive to the needs of its constituents, who are the students who carry green plastic cards. That responsiveness must extend past social events and necessary services, into the issues which will shape Queen's life over several or many years.

We mean, to be specific, the issues raised in the fee withholding action and in the new Wright Report on education. Issues like what it costs to go to university, what you can learn there, who hires and fires the faculty and why. Those issues are not, on the surface, very interesting. If you give a damn about your kid sister and your future children, they're vital.

Those are the three areas in which the AMS moves; those are the directions in which we think the movement ought to be. Now, who should lead it?

Part of the decision can be made on the basis of the policies. You can read them and see which ones you agree with. You may find, though, as we do, that they differ in details but not in essence. And you may find, as we think the candidates will, that an election platform is only a set of hints. The events of the next twelve months will prevent most of the specifics in it from even being tried.

Part of the decision can be made on your personal impression of the candidates, if you are lucky enough to meet any of them. If, that is, you think a smooth line or a pretty face proves anything.

In the end, the largest part of the decision has to be made on the candidates' experience and talents.

Bruce Trotter? He is internal affairs commissioner of the AMS this year -- an unspectacular role at best.

Steve Brereton? He is president of the inter-residence council on Leonard Field. He's done well there, keeping residents reasonably happy -- but the issues are not the broad ones faced by the AMS.

Steve Sugar? He's the real administrator among the four, and has given his attention this year to the AMS concerts committee and such other AMS matters as the housing lottery.

Lyn Whitham? She is AMS external affairs commissioner. You've seen what she did on the single biggest issue Queen's has faced this year: she was in charge of the fee withholding operation. Her strong point is the educational-political field.

In summary, it seems that Sugar and Miss Whitham have more of what it takes. Sugar is experienced in the services and entertainment areas of AMS activity, and he is a good administrator. Miss Whitham, more of a theoretician, has experience in the political matters which the AMS deals with.

Altogether, they are the stronger team for AMS president and vice-president. We suggest you vote for them next week.

A note of explanation

In the editorial above, The Journal endorses a team of candidates for president and vice-president.

This opinion is not the unanimous view of the Journal staff. The Journal staff couldn't possibly agree unanimously on anything.

It is not just the personal view of the editor-in-chief, though necessarily an editorial includes her point of view

It is not (as the masthead regularly states) the opinion of the AMS, which is The Journal's publisher, or of the University.

Then what is it?

A Journal editorial, especially this important one, is the consensus of those staff members who have watched the AMS and the candidates over a period of time -- and who have managed to reach a consensus.

It was written by a group session of senior Journal staff.

It is the view of the newspaper itself. Nothing more, nothing less, nothing different.

Campus comment

On Wednesday the Journal took a survey on the subject of student government at Queen's. Students in the coffee shop were asked, "What does the AMS do for you, and what doesn't the AMS do for you that it should be doing?" The catalogue of comments listed below shows a rather pessimistic attitude to the subject.

Rick Stasiak, Science '73: "The AMS gets hung up bureaucratically, events too stereotyped, everything happens the same year after year."

Jeff Cannon, Commerce '76: "The AMS probably does a lot but we're not aware of it."

Marg Murphy, Arts '73: "I think I could probably live without it."

Al Coxwell, Commerce '73: "They do a lot of things but . . .they collect money and then redistribute it for me to enjoy myself."

Josh Dering, Artsci '74: "I ignore it until something goes wrong."

John Steacy, Artsci '74: "The AMS patrols the pub, takes up space in the Journal but generally doesn't do much."

Penny Gotzaman, Artsci '74: "I have no interest in it and I don't know what its functions are."

Merle Bolick, Arts '73: "It doesn't excite me at all; I'm upset with the male power structure of it, glad to see a woman running for president."

Tony Ramesar, Artsci '76: "I claim ignorance and apathy; its functions are not well advertised."

Jim Sheppard, Science '74: "It provides student services."

Architect, arrogance and environment at Canadiana Night

by Susan de Stein

Ron Thom, the architect responsible for the new Arts and Social Sciences complex at Queen's and also for Trent University, Massey College at the University of Toronto, and the new Metro Toronto Zoo, spoke informally to a small group of students in the Polson Room of the Union on Tuesday.

Elrond College was the subject of much discussion. In Thom's opinion, the design of Elrond "is responsible for its having come together".

Thom also spoke of the new concepts now being discussed for the university centre. He felt that the idea of the present Queen's student uniion "makes sense," adding that "I think it is right to have such concentration in the concept of university centres."

More consideration of the environment and the land must be given by Canadian architects, Thom commented. Too many times "we are being arrogant as far as the land is concerned," he added. "There is no concern for the differences in the areas of the cities with respect to the buildings." We must be paying more attention to how these things are affecting the environment and the people, he said.

All too often, he pointed out, the attitude is taken that "what is good for New York or American metropolitan centres is good for Toronto".

Asked for a comment on the Toronto-Dominion Centre in Toronto, Thom said, "I am furious that these projects are being done by Americans." It was generally felt that the problems involved with increasingly high-density populations must be dealt with more satisfactorily.

Miss Cousins complimented Thom for his enthusiasm, initiative and interest in coming to Queen's. "He is a tremendously busy man and he was concerned enough to come to speak with Queen's students," she added.

George Nyckalchuk, manager of "Lighthouse", met with another small group of students as part of Canadiana Night. The session with former NDP candidate Lars Thompson had to be cancelled when no one came. James McBain, originally scheduled to be a part of the evening, was forced to cancel his visit due to illness.

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 35
Fri., Feb. 2, 1973
Queen's University at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Patricia Devitt
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National desk: Bob Mutrie
Photography: Peter Boag

Well, the editor took off early (again) to curl up with a good book . . Bob and Bob stayed and worked . . Sue had a happy birthday (we hope) . . Morris cried (still) and requested . . CUPOTT had some ideas (thanks) . . Lizzie worked on stories . . Susan came in and did cup . . Ann did things . . James learned the ins and outs of papers . .Helen taught people . .every damn politico came around politicoing (one of them isn't that bad) . . various photogs like Dave and Dave and Lee and Earnie came and went . . even Borus came and worked . .now that Chris is back to help out - it's all yours; John and I are going on vacation, tonite.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

Escott M. Reid

1972-1973 Skelton-Clark Fellow

Mr. Escott M. Reid is the 1972-73 Skelton-Clark Fellow at Queen's. The Skelton-Clark Fellowship is a very prestigious post: previous Fellows have included General E.L.M. Burns, Dalton Camp, and the late Senator C.G. Power.

While at Queen's Mr. Reid is preparing the manuscript for his book "External Affairs 1939-62".

Born in Campbellford, Ontario in 1905, he holds degrees from the University of Toronto and Oxford University. A Rhodes Scholar and a Rochefeller Fellow, he was the first national secretary of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs.

For a quarter century in the Department of External Affairs, Mr. Reid held such posts as Acting Under Secretary of State, Deputy Under Secretary of St India, and Ambassador to Germany. Then followed a four-year te Asia and Middle East Department of the World Bank.

With the establishment of Glendon College at York University, principal. He is now a consultant to the president of the Canadian Agency in Ottawa.

In interviews last week with Raj Anand of the Journal, Mr. R pressions of his and Canada's roles in international affairs from th

Interview by Raj Anand

JOURNAL: The first topic I'd like to talk about is the Canadian Institute of International Affairs, whose National office you established in Toronto in 1932. Was this a world organization?

REID: No, it isn't world organization. There were two organizations established in Paris at the time of the peace conference in 1919. One was the Royal Institute of International Affairs in London, and the other was the American organization, the Council of Foreign Relations in New York. The Royal Institute had about twenty-five members in Canada, and they decided to establish a separate Canadian branch. That was in 1928. Then, in 1932, Vincent Massey gave them enough money to establish a national office and I was appointed the first national secretary.

This was a matter of going across Canada to organize new branches - I came here about 1934 - and we must have doubled the number of branches during my time as secretary. I was also involved in organizing speakers and meetings and research.

The reason why I always look back on this experience with pleasure is that I met so many interesting people in the Institute and it gave me opportunities to travel all across Canada probably three or four times when I was in my late twenties. It's an unusual opportunity - there aren't many jobs which you can get in your late twenties which enable you to travel across Canada and get to know so many interesting people from universities, businesses, newspapers, politics.

JOURNAL: This was after you came back from Oxford.

REID: Yes, it was.

JOURNAL: Did the Institute have any influence on the government, or was it a group solely in itself?

REID: The rule of the Institute is that the Institute itself never expresses an opinion on any aspect of international affairs. What it does is to encourage study and discussion so that its influence would be through its members.

JOURNAL: What were the primary concerns of the international conferences which you attended during the 1930's?

REID: The primary concern, regardless of their agenda, was the drift toward seemingly inevitable war. As soon as Hitler took power in 1933, it became clear that the danger of war was extremely great. The conferences discussed what might be done to lessen this danger. And then you had the whole argument between the people who wanted neutrality for Canada, and those who believed that even at this late date (1935-36) the League of Nations could be strengthened.

It was a setting for the great debate during the 30's on what could be done to prevent...to stem the drift of war. In those days, there was as today a distinct difference between the generations in Canada. There were a few French speaking members in the Institute, but it was predominantly English-speaking. The older generation considered that one of the most important aspects of Canadian foreign policy should be to preserve a united front with Britain. The younger members, who would then be - oh - thirty-five to forty, were considered to be very extreme nationalists. Even those of them who believed that it was highly likely that if war broke out, Canada would be involved, many of them also believed that during the period of peace it was essential to establish for Canada the right to be neutral. In the thirties, this was not clear...that we had the right to be neutral. When the war started, Mackenzie King established this right by remaining neutral for a week.

The argument today that we should try to have a policy different from that of the U.S. is something the same as the argument in the 30's with relationship to the British. And this is not unnatural, because the British in those days were the leading power of the West and today the U.S. is.

JOURNAL: You joined the Canadian External Affairs service in 1939, and your biography mentions posts in Ottawa, Washington, London, New Delhi, and Bonn. What positions did you hold?

REID: Well, I started as second Secretary in the hierarchy, which includes Third, Second, and First Secretaries, Counsellors and Ministers and Ambassadors. My first post was in Washington, from January 1939 to the spring of 1941, the period just before the outbreak of war and the period of American neutrality.

JOURNAL: What was the attitude there? Did they intend to maintain neutrality. . . before Pearl Harbour, for example?

REID: Certainly the bulk of the American people and the bulk of Congress were in favour of the United States staying out of the war. You get that right through to the election campaign in 1940, when Roosevelt promised that not one American boy would go to fight in Europe. When I left Washington in the spring of 1941, I was pretty well convinced that the U.S. would be in the war within about a year.

The period of greatest crisis was the spring and summer of 1940, when western Europe collapsed, when the Germans occupied Norway, Denmark, Belgium, Holland, most of France...This came as a particular shock to the U.S. Most people then considered that the British Isles would be occupied by the Germans. The U.S. would then find itself with no barrier between itself and a victorious Germany. In June 1940 the whole world was crashing about their ears and they were unable to influence the course of events because they were virtually powerless; they had virtually no armed forces.

One of my jobs in Washington was to try to find out what the U.S. would do if the British Isles were occupied. The Americans didn't make their minds up. It's years since I wrote those memoranda to Ottawa, and I haven't seen them since, but I think my conclusion was that they'd re-arm as quickly as they could, and in the course of time they'd fight the Germans in an effort to liberate Europe, but this was going to be a long, long operation.

Roosevelt deliberately pulled...pushed the U.S. into the war. The process was speeded up by Pearl Harbour, but it would have come anyway. Our fear was that the Japanese would attack Thailand - I was in Ottawa, and we knew the Japanese navy was speeding south - and this would not bring the U.S. into the war.

JOURNAL: Were the Americans looking for a reason?.

REID: Roosevelt was looking for a reason, certainly.

JOURNAL: When you were speaking of the President bringing around Congressional opinion to his view. I was thinking of Nixon as a contrast, of not placing too much importance on Congressional and public opinion, but instead forcing policy to follow his view. Is that a change in the Presidency, or is it a change in the man? Has there been any type of progression?

REID: There has been a great change in the power of the Presidency. During the period of American neutrality (1939-41), there was a great argument taking place, in the United States, as there is today, on the power of the President as commander-in-chief. The powers have been extended greatly since 1940. In those days, from 1939 to 1952, up to the end of the Truman regime, I would think that most "small" liberals in the Western world were in favour of an extension of the powers of the President of the U.S. because they thought that the President was likely to be more progressive than the Congress, and I think this was true.

JOURNAL: Why would that be?

REID: I don't know. It's a fascinating question. Today, the Congress - particularly the Senate - is, and has been for about ten years, more liberal than the President. Don't ask me why; ask the Political Studies department.

JOURNAL: At what time were you in London? Was this during the war?

REID: It was just after the war. I was sent over to London in August 1945 to help tidy up some loose ends from the San Francisco conference, which I was at, and at which the U.N. Charter was adopted. The Charter had just provided the framework for the U.N. and it was necessary to work out the more detailed arrangements for the organization of the Secretariat, the General Assembly, the Security Council and so on.

The San Francisco Conference set up a committee of fourteen countries, of which Canada was one. I was the principal Canadian representative on that, and it was an extremely interesting experience. It meant negotiating, pre-eminently with the Russians, for week after week...That was the first time I met Adlai Stevenson, who was second-in-command of the American delegation.

JOURNAL: Was this negotiating simply over organizational matters?

REID: Yes, over the organization of the U.N. , the agenda of the first meeting, over everything....The Russians were the Russian re serving Stalin, nor the other authority to m could tell that a The talks were didn't know th couldn't find out of us concluded the Russians h whether they w

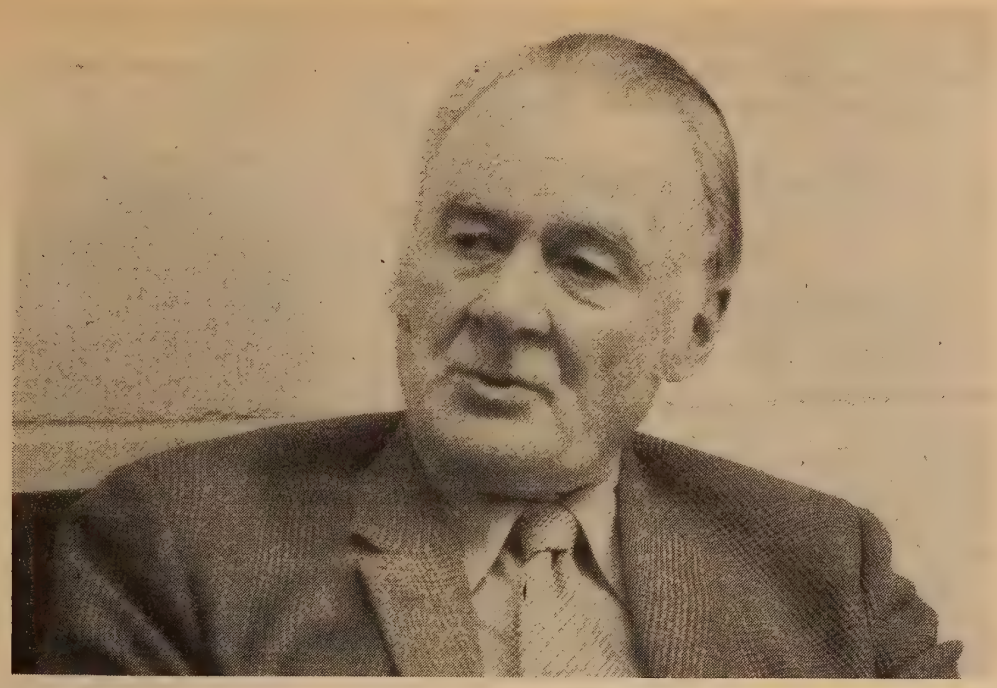
We adjourne Gromyko came he had been gi extent necessar

JOURNAL: A the formation

REID: From th proposals draw one by the Ame had discussed th In Washington, people who proposals. Then at Dunbarton O of the U.N. Char British. Then, of conference at S

JOURNAL: T you, Mike Pea San Francisco contingent?

REID: There w the senior posi government an King, St. Laure beginning of the declared in Can the officials wer officials played they normally v



JOURNAL: W on equal footi

REID: No. The three great pow minor changes i had put up. You normally have satisfactory con about the San people there ha didn't, if you kn

JOURNAL: W

REID: It was c of them...was p own sovereignt was also clear created by the Japanese attac apart.

JOURNAL: W East-West co

...gh Commissioner to ...Director of the South

...eid became its first ...ational Development

...ve his personal im- ...1930's to the present.

...ly difficult. Gromyko was ...tive; in those days he was ...as not an easy task. Neither ... of his delegation had any ...isions, and very often you ...t from Moscow was a "no". ...nely difficult because we ... of their objections - we ...ir answer was "no". Many ... first five or six weeks that ...et made up their minds ... to join the United Nations. ... couple of weeks; when ...was obvious that in Moscow ...uctions to cooperate to the ... first assembly to be held.

... point did Canada enter ... U.N.?

...eginning. There were three ...e U.N.: one by the British, ...nd one by the Russians. We ... proposals with the British. ... in constant touch with the ...wing up the American ...ng was held in Washington ...h drew up the framework ...n we were in touch with the ...we participated in the U.N. ...cisco.

... York Times mentioned ...d Norman Robertson at ...you three the Canadian

...a big contingent, of which ...eld by members of the ...tion parties: Mackenzie ...dion, Coldwell....but at the ...ce, a general election was ... so the politicians left and ...e. The result was that the ...ole at the conference than ...e layed.

...Canadians more or less ...the other nations?

...ce was dominated by the ...at anyone could do was get ...ls which the great powers ...t for more, but you would ... content with very un- ...s. One of the great myths ... Conference was the that the ...pes. You most certainly ... was happening.

... that?

...the great powers...not one ...o accept limitations on its ...re of any importance. It ... alliance that had been ...attack on Russia and the ...U.S. was beginning to fall

...rimarily because of the ... Europe?

REID: There had been a long history of suspicion between the Soviet Union and the West, going back to 1917...the Russian fear of intervention by the West...the temptation to which the Russians were subjected, and to which they eventually gave in, to pick up anything that could be picked up in Europe at the end of the war, to move as far as they could in the occupation of Europe and in the setting up of satellite regions.

JOURNAL: You were one of the most instrumental men in bringing Canada into NATO. I'd like to know the reasons for your strong commitment to the formation of a North Atlantic Alliance in 1948?

REID: I think, looking back on it, that there were two main considerations that moved Mr. Pearson...The first was that we were frightened by the increase in the power of the Soviet Union in Europe, and we were frightened that...(it) was likely to increase unless something was done to give the people in Western Europe more confidence.

When the fighting ended in Europe, my recollection is that people in the Western world generally...accepted the fact that the Soviet Union would be in a very special position in the whole part of Europe up to where their armed forces had moved at the end of the war. We had, however, hoped...that the countries of Eastern Europe,...while they would have governments which were friendly to the Soviet Union, would not be completely controlled by the Soviet Union but would have national freedom.

(They) started out with "governments of national unity""...; then these governments....were replaced by coalitions of socialists and communists. The next step was that the socialists were got rid of, and the final step was that those communists were...liquidated or imprisoned who were not considered by Stalin to be loyal to him.

This...remorseless increase in Soviet strength in Europe was creating in that part of Europe which was not under Soviet control a feeling that Soviet control was probably the wave of the future. Then at the beginning of 1948, the Norwegian Government told us that the Soviet Government was threatening them. This frightened us even more.

JOURNAL: So I guess there was a feeling of powerlessness as well as fear?

REID: Yes, and there was, especially in France, a terror of Soviet occupation...They had lived through the catastrophe of German occupation; they feared that if there was a Soviet occupation, they would never recover from it.

The first step in the negotiation of the North Atlantic Treaty was an appeal from the British Labour Government...this was in the beginning of 1948...the immediate step necessary was to create an alliance. The purpose of the alliance was to deter Stalin from running any further risks inWestern Europe by an attempt to extend Soviet influence beyond the point it had reached. It was indirect aggression we were worried about.

The argument was a very simple one, perhaps too simple: it was that Germany might not have gone to war in 1918 and 1939 if it had realized that by going to war it would bring into existence a coalition of Western Europe, Britain, and the U.S....We didn't want Stalin to make the same mistake that the Kaiser had made, and Hitler had made. We wanted him to know that if war came in Western Europe, there would be a coalition against him.

JOURNAL: So was this primarily a military alliance at first?

REID: No, it was more than a military alliance, and that brings me to the second part of my answer to your question. What I am saying now was not the belief of everybody who participated in the negotiation of the North Atlantic treaty. It was certainly Mr. Pearson's belief. It was the belief of a number of the most influential Americans concerned in the negotiations. We hoped that the creation of a North Atlantic alliance would be the first step toward the creation of a federation of the North Atlantic countries...

One reason why we in Ottawa considered the creation of such a federation important was that this would be one way of containing the ever-growing power of the United States. We believed that in a North Atlantic alliance which was moving in the direction of a federation, it would be possible to establish constitutional procedures under which the countries of Western Europe and ourselves would be able to...exercise a reasonable influence on the policies of the whole alliance. Looking back now,...I wonder if the world wouldn't be in a much better position if that had happened and if the frightening power of the American presidency were now controlled within the ...constitution of a North Atlantic federation.

JOURNAL: More recently, in a Globe and Mail editorial of 1969, it was mentioned that your attitude toward Canadian military expenditures had changed a great deal. What is your main reason for this?

REID: The main reason is that the conditions in the world have changed very greatly since the end of the Korean War. It wasn't the formation of the North Atlantic alliance which resulted in the rearmament of Canada...or any other part of the Western world. It was the revelation of the military weakness of the West when the war broke out in Korea, which resulted in the rearmament, which resulted in Canada increasing its defense expenditures by...six times in eighteen months...to $1.8 billion a year. Certainly, Mr. Pearson never expected that the North Atlantic alliance would exist indefinitely as a military alliance...By 1966...I had myself come to the conclusion that the time had come for Canada to withdraw its forces from Europe and to reduce its armed forces..

JOURNAL: Where did you want this money redirected to?

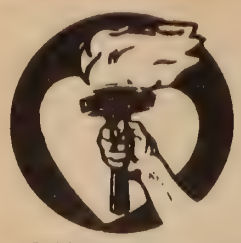
REID: I had the same views on this as a predecessor in this post as Skelton-Clark Fellow,...Mr. Dalton Camp. I believed then and I believe now that the money saved by reducing defense expenditures should be used to increase our economic aid to the poorer countries of the world. I remember at the Liberal convention on policy which was held in 1969, I pointed out that if we were to double our defense expenditures...this would mean an increase of about one percent in the total defense expenditures of the North Atlantic alliance, but if we were to...use the $1.8 billion for foreign aid, the result would be an increase of about 25 percent in the aids expenditures of western countries. That kind of contribution would make Canada one of the two or three most important nations...in...foreign aid. I felt that this was a real role for Canada to play in foreign affairs.

JOURNAL: After periods as High Commissioner to India and Ambassador to Bonn, you became Director of the World Bank's Department of South Asia and the Middle East. What were the principal roles of the World Bank in these areas?

REID: The principal role of the World Bank was to provide these countries with loans. As far as India and Pakistan were concerned, this meant loans which were interest-free. The World Bank and its affiliated institution, the International Development Association, are now providing India with loans of about $400 million a year, almost all of this interest-free.

Aid of this magnitude is important to a country like India. It means that India can...move faster in improving the standards of living of the poorer half of its people than it otherwise could.

The other aspect of the World Bank's activities is the advice which it gives to its member countries. The Bank, because it is lending to countries all over the world, gets to know about successes and failures in development of a poor country. Sometimes the failures are expensive..The Bank is a transmission belt: it passes on to one developing country lessons to be drawn from the experiences of others.



JOURNAL: I'd like to turn to the question of Glendon College, of which you were the first principal. In your convocation address last June, you said "Glendon College is...a federal responsibility." Why should this be?

REID: What I was arguing was that this was one of the simplest and cheapest ways to carry out the government's policy on bilingualism, that if you had - as I suggested - five small, bilingual liberal arts colleges in Canada, one in each of the main regions, of about the same size as Glendon (about 1400 students), you'd have 7,000 students in Canada taking their under-graduate training in both English and French. You would have gone a considerable distance in assisting Canadians, especially Canadians who have an interest in public affairs, who want to become bilingual, to become bilingual.

This is a very expensive operation, to run a bilingual college. It can't be run with the ordinary government grant; it has to be subsidized in another way. To me, this is an appropriate area for the federal government to subsidize. This is my argument.

JOURNAL: Yes, I notice one of your statements is, "Glendon is performing a task of national importance." I guess this reflects your attitude.

REID: Yes.

GIVE... so more will live
HEART FUND

The Aesculapian Society and the
Kingston Chapter - Canadian Heart Fund
present
The Annual Heart Sunday Canvass of the City of Kingston
Leonard Hall, Queen's University
February 4th, 1973, 12:00 noon
400 Canvassers Required

Join CKLC, and students from Queen's, R.M.C., and the K.G.H. and H.D.H. Schools of Nursing in the annual Heart Sunday Fund Drive. A max. of 2 hours is required, and transportation and refreshments are provided. To volunteer, phone:

Doug Romans 546-2040, Sue Bunting 544-7210, Ed Enge 544-7194

Remember - Cardiovascular Disease is the most common cause of death in the over 35 age group.

Hear the sounds of the 4 Seasons, the Beach Boys, and the Happenings. Hear the songs of teen-hood. Remember "The Lion Sleeps Tonight", "Land of 1,000 Dances". Go further back into your past and re-live the days of Gloria and "Hang on Sloopy". It all happens Friday and Saturday, February 1 and 2 in the Queen's Pub from 8 pm to midnight.

The group is The 21st Stepp. It consists of five students (two at Queen's) who were separated three years ago when they went to different universities. They've come together, again for this special week.

This is Snowball and as such it has been brought to our attention that we should be open as much as possible to accommodate those persons unable to make it to the semi-formal. The pub will be open Saturday, February 3 from 1 to 5 in the afternoon and from 8 to midnight.

Come on out and participate in the annual Snowball activities.

icecreamdays

Friday, February 2

7:30 - 10:30 pm - "Buffalo Chips" Variety Night. Grant Hall. Admission 25c.

8:30 pm - Music Department presents 2nd night of Three Days of Experiments in the Arts. Agnes Etherington Art Centre. Admission free.

Queen's Groups may book ice time now for Reading Week, Feb. 19th to 25th. Please apply at the Phys. Ed. Centre wickets between 11:00 am and 4:30 pm weekdays.

Saturday, February 3

6:30 pm - Ice will be removed from the Jock Harty Arena for the Snow Ball Concert on Sunday, Feb. 4. The arena will be ready for use again at 8:00 am on Tues. Feb. 6.

8:00 pm - Amity 300 Program presents Concert on Chinese Music. M.K. Sze conducting the Chinese Instrumental Group of the University of Toronto. Instruments dated back to Chou Dynasty (1500 BC). KCVI Auditorium. Frontenac Street. Students $1.00, non-students $1.50. Tickets available from International Centre or John Orr Room at noon hour. (Feb. 2)

8:30 pm - Music Dept. presents the 3rd evening of Three Days of Experiments in the Arts. Agnes Etherington Art Centre. Admission is free.

8:30 pm - Snowball Semi-Formal "Chimo" Grant and Kingston Halls. $7.00 per couple. On sale in the John Orr Room 10:30 to 3:30 pm and in the dinner meal lines.

Sunday, February 4

Early Canadian Painting: The English Colonial Period and the early years of Confederation. Paintings by 17 artists who worked in Canada during the 19th C. are on loan for this exhibition from the National Gallery of Canada, the McCord Museum, Montreal, the Art Gallery of Windsor, the British Columbia Archives and private collectors, with some works from our own permanent collection. Arranged by the Art Centre. The exhibition continues until March 4 at Agnes.

10:30 pm - A folk mass at Dunning Aud. followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House.

11:00 am - University Service at Memorial Chapel.

4:00 pm - Eucharistic Celebration at Queen's Theological Hall. Faculty Lounge, 2nd Floor. All welcome.

7:30 pm - Folk Mass in Senior Common Room at McArthur Hall.

3:30 pm -Music Dept. presents a Recital: Brahms and Shumann Lieder. Randall Marsh (baritone) and Christopher Hunt (piano). Art Centre.

5:30 pm - Liberation Study Group presents a Sunday Supper. Followed by 'Reflections on the Significance of Violence in Latin America' by Prof. G. Smith of History Dept. Supper $1.00 per person. International centre (downstairs). All welcome.

8:00 pm - Amity 300 Program. A Filipino Music Concert in Grant Hall. The Kundiman Folk Singers and Filipiano Dance Troupe. Students $1.00, non-students $1.50.

8:30 pm - Richie Havens in Concert. Jock Harty Arena.

Monday, February 5

12:30 pm - Lecture on Arctic Gas and Oil: An Alternate Viewpoint by K. North. An argument is presented which questions the desirability of the exploitation of Arctic petroleum resources, in view of the geological, economic and technological factors. Dupuis Hall Aud.

3:00 pm - Amity 300 Program Seminar African Language Structures and Igbo Traditions. Prof. S. O. Anozie. International Centre Lower Lounge.

8:00 pm - Amity 300 Program.West Indian Variety Show. Native dances, folktales, steel band. Grant Hall.

8:00 pm - Kingston Youth Orchestra presents its 2nd Concert of 72-73 season. McArthur Aud.

Tuesday, February 6

3:30 pm - Amity 300 Program Seminar on "The Ugly Canadian". International Centre Lower Lounge, John Forbes and D'Arcy Martin of International Research Centre of Toronto will lead a discussion on Canadian economic interests in developing countries.

8:00 pm - Amity 300 Program. Documentary Movies of India "The Red Detachment of Women" and "Taking Tiger Mountain by Strategy." Dupuis Hall Aud. Tickets and information in Inter-National Centre.

8:30 pm - Manfrog - travelling Troupe. Free Performances. Feb. 6 and 7 (Studio Theatre), Rm. 102, Old Arts. Feb. 8-10 - Guildhall Theatre, Princess Street.

9:00 pm - Department of Film Studies presents "La Strada." (Fellini, 1954). Ellis Hall.

Theatres

Feb. 2 and 3 - 8:30 pm, Queen's Musical Theatre presents Wonderful Town. Grand Theatre.

Feb. 2 - 8:30 pm - McArthur Theatre Arts presents The Caucasian Chalk Circle by Bertolt Brecht. McArthur Theatre - Union St. and Sir John A. Tickets $1.00 or phone 547-6666.

Feb. 2, 3, and 4 - The Quiet Rebellion of Mrs. Mary Gordon. Domino Theatre. Tickets Available at Domino and Mahoods. 9:00 pm.

Feb. 1, 2, 3, and 4 - 8:30 pm The Queen's Drama Guild presents Death and The Devil by Frank Wedekind. Directed by Gordon McCall. Guildhall Theatre, 233½ Princess St. Tickets $1.00, Guild Members 75c. Available from Barb Stewart in Drama Dept. from 10-11:00 am every weekday or at the door.

At Guildhall Theatre

"Death and the Devil"

- macpherson

Diane Rutter and Morrison Bock in a scene from the play by Frank Wedekind.

More about Arts Experiment

On Friday and Saturday evenings, February 2 and 3, at 8:30 p.m. in the Agnes Etherington Arts Centre, the Queen's Improvisation Group will be host to three well-known Toronto artists, Patricia Elliott, sound poet, and John Wyre and Michael Craden, percussionists.

Patricia Elliott will be the special guest artist for the second programme of the Three Days of Experiments in the Arts on Friday evening. Mrs. Elliott is a well-known Toronto organist and poet. Her recent explorations have been conducted in sound poetry. She is a member of the "Cosmic Handerkerchief" - a performing group of four sound poets.

In the art form of sound poetry, the phonetic characteristics of the words are equal or may even surpass in importance the literal and connotative meanings of the words. It is poetry to be heard rather than seen.

For example, one work on the programme will be a performance of three prose poems by the composer Karlheinz Stockhausen entitled "From the Seven Days". The works will be pre-recorded in two processes. First, the poems will be read as written and taped. Secondly, the Cosmic Handkerchief will perform a reading superimposed on the first one, "trying for a liberated sound, a respect for the purity of the immediacy, and a faith in the human capacity to grasp that immediacy." With a performance of this tape, performers and audience will have the opportunity to interpret and react to the work instrumentally and vocally.

Patricia Elliott is widely known for her creative ideas and her concerts of sound poetry. In Toronto, she teaches new music and sound poetry at the Three Schools of Art.

The other guest artists for the Three Days of Experiments in the Arts are percussionists John Wyre and Michael Craden. They will perform on Saturday evening.

Exponents of liberated sound through free improvisation, they are members of the internationally famous percussion ensemble Nexus. They will perform on many different percussion instruments - ones not normally considered as part of the traditional orchestra. Their search for new and exciting sounds has taken them to other continents, and they have amassed an extraordinary collection of African, European, Asian and Oriental drums, gongs, bells, cymbals, rattles of various sizes and tone qualities.

John Wyre is currently a member of the Faculty of Music at the University of Toronto. He has been associated with the Milwaukee Symphony, the Rochester Philharmonic and the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. He has been a soloist with the Japan Philharmonic, the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, and the Boston Symphony as well as the Contemporary Music Festival at Osaka in Japan.

John Wyre and Michael Craden will be joined by Peter Hutchison, a fourth year Bachelor of Music student at Queen's. He is a private student of John Wyre.

Queen's
Division of Concerts
presents

CATHY BERBERIAN

Mezzo-Soprano

Friday 9 February 8:30 p.m.

Grant Hall Series No. 4

Tickets: $2,3 students
3, 4 non-students

Division of Concerts Box Office
Agnes Etherington Art Centre
547-6194

Don't forget
Science '44 Co-op
Open Houses

FEBRUARY 3 and FEBRUARY 10

314 William

373 Johnson

307-309 University

31 Varnet

13 Sydenham

128 Earl

Drop in and stay awhile

CARNAVAL de QUEBEC

Final Big Weekend

(March 2,3, 4)

$30 All Welcome

- Includes accomodation in downtown area and bus to and from Quebec.
- Only 4 buses going.

ONLY A FEW SPACES LEFT!

- Deposit of $10 due before Feb. 9. Balance by Feb. 21.
- Sign up at the Bus Service Desk in the basement of the Union.

Sponsored by ARTSCI '76

"Wax Works"

Richie Havens and Jimmie Spheeris

by Geoff Henning

Richie Havens is acknowledged to be one of America's most accomplished artists in the field of conetemporary music. He is both a superb singer and fine musician and has played to audiences all over the world in the last five years. Havens is also a respected professional painter of portraits, a poet, sculptor and philosopher. He is currently writing a book which is a prose statement of his personal philosophy as it relates to and is influenced by the world around him.

Havens has performed at probably the two most famous concerts in the world, Woodstock and the Isle of Wight Pop Festival. At one of the Pop Festivals, Havens recorded his latest album, "Richie Havens on Stage." The double album contains many songs that had been written and recorded by many other artists: Teach Your Children - Graham Nash, Tupelo Honey - Van Morrison, My Sweet Lord - George Harrison. Havens, in fact, has received more commercial success with the recording of other groups' songs.

Havens has an unmistakable style. His strong guitar work and raspy voice and stomping foot have become his tradesmark.

Jimmie Spheeris is a brand new recording artist, his first album, is Isle of View. Spheeris lives in New York, in California and lots of places in between.

His music is heavily dependent on melody. Jimmie plays guitar and piano and Lee Calvin Nicoli accompanies him on flute, bass guitar, acoustic guitar and occasionally vocals. Jimmies masterpiece is a song called "The Nest", and he says, "It's a song about a man from Mars and his parents from Earth. They went to Mars on an expedition and got killed while they were there. His name was Michael Valentine Smith . . on Mars there's this religion that they have and in this religion there are nine circles; the first of these circles is called the Nest, and the nest is a room padded with white feathers. You take off your clothes to get into the nest and once your in the nest you share water with someone and once you share water with someone you have their total trust and complete love, and then you make love, and that's just the first circle. . . ."

Well I'm not sure this guy is for real, but with an imagination like that, the lyrics take on rather interesting meanings. He writes about marshes and mountains, far away planets and earth love. He writes about himself and he writes about me . .he writes about you. See him Sunday, at 8:30 pm at the Jock Harty Arena.

Songwriter Tim Hallman at work

A Song Is Born!

by Merle Bolick

Have you ever tried to write a song? Just any song is difficult enough, but to write a song on a specific subject for a specific occasion, suitable for marching, waltzing, children's choirs and thirty-second jingles, is almost impossible. But Tim Hallman of Queen's came first out of 71 competitors attempting the impossible in the Kingston Tercentenary Song Contest. The main problem he articulated as one of trying "to strike a balance between patriotism and schmultz" without resorting to "corn".

Having known about the contest all last summer, Mr. Hallman wrote the lyrics while waiting for transportation on a vacation trip in the maritimes. The tune was written after he returned to his third year of the Bachelor of Music programme in September. The keyboard major then recorded his entry on tape with the aid of fellow-students Trish Jones and Craig Thompson. Then he waited.

The Tercentenary Song Committee, headed by Andrew Marshall of CFRC, received entries from professional and amateur songwriters all over North America. Those submitted in manuscript forms were performed and taped before the judging could be completed and the $500.00 winner and two $50.00 runners-up could be announced. Besides Mr. Marshall, the board of judges consisted of Greg Stewart of CKWS, Gary Parr of CKWC, Dick Baldwin of the A.T.C. Band, and Dr. F.R.C. Clarke, music professor at Queen's. The Second-place songs were "Kingston in Ontario" by Michael Myers and D.S. Scott, and "This is the Place" by Ted Hockaday, formerly of CKLC.

Recording, production and distribution are next on the list of Mr. Marshall's activities. Mr. Hallman will be kept busy in the next months providing arrangements for concert and marching bands, children's choirs and smaller groups and possibly a background for a tercentenary routine for the Kingston Skating Club. "With a little luck," says Mr. Marshall, "we can have a 45 r.p.m. disc in the stores before the winter's end."

In the meantime we can all be singing it. The verse lyrics are under revision, but the chorus goes like this:

Back three hundred years ago-
Long before Canada-
Before this land we call our own,
Kingston was on the way
Now three hundred years have gone-
The years have passed and the light has shone-
Kingston-town is now a city.
Kingston is three hundred years now.

ADMISSIONS TO RESIDENCES 1973/74

Men only Residences
Co-Ed. Residence, Morris Hall, Earl Street Residence West Campus Residences

Applications from upperclass students, other than those entering Law 1 or Education 1, are due by February 12, 1973.

Application forms and brochures may be obtained at the Desk Clerks' offices at Gordon/Brockington Hall, Earl Street Residence, Social Centre West Campus, and at the Dean of Women's Office, Victoria Hall and the Business Office Leonard Hall.

AMS CONCERTS & AMITY 300
present

FILIPINO MUSIC CONCERT

8:00 p.m.
Sun., Feb. 4th
Grant Hall

Students $1.00 Non-Students $1.50

tickets: International Centre, John Orr Rm.

1673 QUEEN'S TERCENTENARY OPEN HOUSE Kingston, Ontario

More feature events:

BOULTON DAM MODEL
HOUSEHOLD OBJECTS: stress and fatigue tests
FOX AND HOUNDS: a simple computer board game
PRINTING PRESS
FOSSILS & OCEANOGRAPHIC EQUIPMENT
EN FRANCE COMME SI VOUS Y ETIEZ
RUSSIAN ART, MUSIC, BOOKS
CHANGING ROLE OF WOMEN
A CENTURY OF CANADIAN MEDICINE
MOCK CORPORATE HEAD OFFICE
'CKLC' REMOTE BROADCASTING

Listen to CFRC for details of locations and times.

CFRC am-fm

Queen's University Music Department

RECITAL

LIEDER of BRAHMS and SCHUMANN

RANDALL MARSH
Baritone

CHRISTOPHER HUNT
Piano

AGNES ETHERINGTON ART CENTRE
SUNDAY 3:00 PM FEBRUARY 4

LADIES
ELECTROLYSIS
Avoid shaving, tweezing, or the use of dipilatories. Have your eyebrows styled and unwanted hair removed permanently by electrolysis. Physicians recommend our work. For a free consultation and information call:
HARRISON SALON 542-5595

NOTICE
SNOW REMOVAL
QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY
PARKING REGULATIONS

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY PARKING REGULATIONS STATE IN PART:

"FROM DECEMBER 1, 1972 TO MARCH 31, 1973 INCLUSIVE, VEHICLES PARKED ON THE CAMPUS BETWEEN MIDNIGHT AND 7.00 A.M. WILL BE TOWED AWAY IF THEY IMPEDE SNOW REMOVAL OPERATIONS"

WOMEN'S RESIDENCES

Women returning to Queen's for the 73-74 session may apply for accommodation in the Women's Residences, Morris Hall, and the West Campus Residences. Application forms are available at the Victoria Hall main desk, and are to be returned to the Office of Residence Admissions, Victoria Hall. Accommodation in a specific area will be available for a limited number of post-degree and mature women students.

Applicants will be notified of their room assignments by mid-March. The fees for the coming session (20 meals per week) are: single room $1,085, double room $1,046.

MINING ENGINEERING ORIENTATION '73
Monday, February 5, 7 pm
Goodwin Hall
For all first year engineering students interested in mining as a career.

Finlay's Sports Shop

SKI SPECIALS

Finlay's
Value $10.00
off sale price
on all
Fiberglass and Metal
Glass Skis

Finlay's
$5 Value
off sale price
on boots

Free beer steins with every ski or ski boot
93 Princess St. FEBRUARY ONLY 548-8255

Dancers Ron Holbrook and Rachel Browne

Contemporary Dancers Come to McArthur

One of the more than forty original ballets in the repertoire of the CONTEMPORARY DANCERS who hail from Winnipeg and will be appearing at Duncan McArthur Hall on Tuesday, February 13, at 8:30 pm under the sponsorship of the Kingston Club of the Canadian Federation of University Women.

These artists dance to music which ranges from "Switched On Bach" to Debussy, from the Bayou folk songs and the songs of Odetta and Laura Nyro to Prokofiev.

They vary the music - they vary the fare - something witty, something serious, something modern, something traditional.

Many of the most exciting works in their repertoire are choreographed by their Artistic Director, Rachel Browne, who founded the company in 1964 in a breakaway from the Classical ballet tradition, attempting to create dance forms more relevant to the times.

What began as an experiment at a few, small, public performances received such an immediate and affirmative audience response that a new dance company was born.

In spite of the initial artistic success money was short and it was only the enormous determination and dedication of Rachel Browne, who literally acted as chief choreographer, artistic director, principal dancer, booking-agent and general factotum, that the company survived!

The CONTEMPORARY DANCERS did survive, however, and in less than ten years under her vigorous and imaginative direction, they have come to be widely recognized as Canada's leading modern dance exponents.

They danced at Expo '67, have done a series of presentations to the accompaniment of the Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra and of recent years give over one hundred performances annually in cities throughout Canada and North America generally.

They were the first professional dance company ever to tour the Northwest Territories and in Hay River, Yellowknife, Fort Smith and Inuvik, they had packed houses and enthusiastic audiences.

Now you can see the CONTEMPORARY DANCERS on February 13th at 8:30 pm at Duncan McArthur Hall. Tickets $2.50 are on sale at Pickwick's Book Store, Verne Napier's Cameras and Londry's Sundries (Reddendale).

Manfrog - Alive Theatre

The Manfrog "Travelling Troupe, is a Vancouver based Theatre Collective, which has operated for three and a half years. Manfrog is dedicated to producing theatre which is free, and which focuses on social and environmental problems. The causes and the "causers". Economically Manfrog depends on the generosity of those who see value in their work; and feel they want to contribute when the "hat-is-passed," after each performance. The content of the work is drawn from the real life experiences of the members of the group. The members Manfrog live and work together and the form of the theatre has derived from a basic belief that "life is art is lifestyle".

Manfrog will present "Songs of the City", a series of sketches written by the group and dealing with problems of big city living. It will run in the Studio Theatre of the Old Arts Building, February 6 and 7 at 8:30 pm and February 8 to February 10 at the Guildhall Theatre.

3 days

experiments in the arts
agnes etherington art centre
february 1,2,3, 8:30 pm

no admission charge

St James Anglican Church

9.00 a.m. - HOLY COMMUNION

11.00 a.m. - HOLY COMMUNION
Preacher: The Rev. Eric Howes

7.30 p.m. - EVENING PRAYER & HOLY BAPTISM
Preacher: The Rector

YOU GROWING

by Milton Acorn

You growing and your thought threading
The delicate strength of your focus
Out of a clamour of voices
Demanding faces and noises
Apart from me but vivid
As when I kissed you and chuckled.

Wherever you are be fearless
And wherever I am I hope to know
You're moving vivid beyond me
So I grow by the strength
Of you fighting for your self, many selves
Your life, many lives, your people

Canadian Poet reads & discusses his work.
Thursday, Feb. 8, 2nd floor union 8:00 p.m.

NOTICE OF ELECTION

ELECTIONS for the position of President and Vice-president of the Alma Mater Society and two referenda will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, February 7 and 8.

Candidate teams are:

Lyn Whitham (pres) and Steve Sugar (vice-pres);
Steve Brereton (pres) and Bruce Trotter (vice-pres).

Referenda will be held on:

1) Changing the present method of financing Tricolor from a $4 non-academic fee charged each student AND a $1.50 levy against faculty societies for each portrait of graduates from that faculty which appear in the Tricolor TO a sole $4.50 non-academic fee.
2) Increasing the non-academic fee by $0.25 to help support Golden Words.

AN ADVANCED POLL will be held outside the cafeteria at McArthur Hall on Thursday, February 1 from noon to 4 pm.

ALL MEMBERS OF the Alma Mater Society are eligible to vote upon presentation of their student card.

QSA is optimistic

This is going to be a transitional year for AMS business ventures, according to David Merrick, director of Queen's Student Agencies. He said the large financial losses of the past may yet become gains through the assistance of the QSA.

Queen's Student Agencies is one of the newer appendages to become a feature of Queen's student government in the search for a way to keep campus services financially viable yet de-emphasize AMS outer council involvement in financial matters.

The very large deficits for the Typing Service and Heffalump boutique last year caused considerable concern this fall for the AMS. As a result, QSA was formed October 1972 to provide some kind of financial direction for similar ventures.

What QSA has been doing is to inject effective management into the workings of the organizations. Merrick said. Since the formation of QSA the Typing Service was reorganized, the Pub brought under control, and Heffalump closed down through collaboration of QSA with the particular managements in an attempt to put them back into the black.

QSA has no real power to determine the future of the various ventures but if something goes seriously wrong with a service, then QSA can make recommendations to the AMS outer council, as they did in the case of Heffalump.

QSA will be involving itself shortly in the operations of Job Bank, planned again for this summer to help find temporary or long-term summer jobs for students. The Job Bank is non-profit and relies on AMS funding for its operation.

WUSC arm begun

"University: Why Bother?" is the theme for a weekend discussion at Camp Mazinaw, organized by the newly instituted Queen's committee of World University Service of Canada.

WUSC is involved in University communities around the world. It attempts to increase educational opportunities by promoting education in neglected areas, helping people who cannot afford it, and improving inadequate facilities.

The Queen's WUSC became official last Thursday, January 25, when a constitution was passed, various positions were filled and plans were finalized for the winter weekend discussion on the role of the university.

The Queen's WUSC committee extends a general invitation to all interested people to participate in outdoor activity and group discussions to be held at Camp Mazinaw from February 16-18. The camp is located sixty miles northwest of Kingston.

For further info on the winter weekend call K. Pold at 547-2807 or Ilyas Absar at 547-2986. Weekend accommodation, transportation and meals are only $5.00 per participant.

Amity week talks

One of the features of this year's International Week will be a series of seminars. The first, will be a discussion of the "Tanzanian Road to Socialism and its Side Effects", led by a member of the Tanzanian High Commission on February 3 at 3:00 pm in the International Centre Lower Lounge.

At 8:00 pm that same day in the Lower Lounge of the International Centre an audio-visual slide show on China will show many aspects of China's history, art and architecture.

"African Language Structures and Igbo Traditions" will be discussed in the International Centre Lower Lounge on February 5 at 3:00 pm.

The next seminar goes from Africa to the West Indies and Latin America. D'Arcy Martin and John Forbes will take a look at Canada's economics in those areas and will lead a discussion on "The Ugly Canadian". Many people complain about the American rape of the Canadian economy. This seminar questions the underlying assumption of virginal innocence on Canada'a part.

The martial law and reform program of President Ferdinand Marcos will be examined on February 8 at 3:30 pm in Dupuis Auditorium in "Current Problems in Phillippine Politics, Economy and Society". Dr. Aprodicio Laquin and staff of the Philippine embassy will carry the discussion and field questions from the audience.

The Department of English and the Institute of Commonwealth and Comparative Studies are jointly sponsoring a series of six weekly Commonwealth seminars. Speakers will include members of the High Commissions of Ceylon, Malasia, Barbados, Guyana, Tanzania and Ghana. The first seminar in this series will be held during International Week on Feb. 6 in Room 517, John Watson Hall at 2:30 pm.

The annual Grad Day Symposium will focus on the subject of foreign students in Canadian universities with "The Role and Education of Foreign Students in Canadian Universities". Speakers include Bryce Mackasey, John McNie, Pierre-Yves Paradis (IDRC), Ceta Ramkalawansingh (OCSA), Mel Preston (ACAP), Colin Isaacs (Ont. Union of Grad. Students), as well as speakers from CUSO, IDRC, CBIE and the Quebec provincial government.

classified

THE QUEEN'S EXCURSION club will continue to accept $10 deposits for Quebec Winter Carnival '73 trip (Feb. 22 - 25) in the Outer AMS Office 11:30 - 3 pm daily until February 7, the balance being due ($25) by February 14. Space is at a premium so book a place now to avoid disappointment. SUNDAY, 8:30 P.M. Richie Haven, Jock Harty Arena.

APARTMENT TO TRADE, we want a four bedroom apartment in trade for our three bedroom house that's very close to campus (Aberdeen St.) call 544-3574.

PASSPORT or identification pictures from Photo Image cost only $5.00 for six prints. We guarantee quick service. Call 546-7770 or visit our gallery at 33 Brock St.

AFTER BUFFALO CHIPS come on over to 4th Brockington for a cool drink and-or a good time. Tonight, 10:00 P.M.

HOUSES FOR RENT: Close to Queen's campus, 8-10 rooms each. Available in Summer '73. Lease required. Contact Mr. Chan, 783 Queen Street East, Toronto.

UNIVERSITY: WHY BOTHER? -- the topic of a winter weekend in the woods sponsored by WUSC at Camp Mazinaw, Feb. 16-18. Accommodation, transportation, meals and fun provided for $5. Call Illyas Absar (547-2986) or Kaspar Pold (547-2807) for more info.

WANTED: 2 or 3 bedroom apartment for next year close to main campus. Call: Ian 544-7280 or Dave 544-7279.

F-TROOP: your classified warrior is preparing a master repartee.

LIZ, KAREN, KATHY, JAME, AUDREY, CATHY, JOAN, DONNA, PAT, RAJ, JOHN, FORD, B.J., DAVE, AND DANNY . . . DON'T FORGET THE PRE AND POST BUFFALO CHIPS PARTY AT 154. . .Woody

THE QUEEN'S EXCURSION CLUB is still sending weekend busses to Toronto and Ottawa -- please come in and get your place assured at the beginning of the week. Departure schedules are forthcoming for Reading Week Busses.

THREE CHOWN CHICKS looking for a 3 bedroom chicken coop for next year. Anyone giving up their apartment pleace call 544-8130, 544-8134, 544-8137.

DOUGIE CHRISTENSEN, please call Marg at 544-1921 (you devil).

WANTED: 2 BEDROOM APARTMENT FOR May to September 1973. Please call Carol at 549-1466 or Mary at 544-8413.

THE QUEEN'S EXCURSION club extends its apologies to those who suffered through our somewhat troubled-ridden return trip from Toronto on Sunday night. Thank you for waiting for us.

REWARD OF TEN DOLLARS for information leading to the capture of a four bedroom house or a two bedroom apartment. Call: Rae or Joe at 544-2120 or Bob at 544-5922.

KEEP PUNCHING that clown. I think it is going to work.

unclassified

WATERBEDS -- we have a complete line of waterbeds and accessories all fully warranteed and priced low. Call HALCOYN WATERBEDS, 544-9540, 6 to 9 pm today.

1 BEDROOM APARTMENT to sublet from May to September. With option for next year. Furnished May to Sept. 10 minutes from campus, 5 from downtown. Phone 544-2523 after 4 pm.

WANTED: a one, two or three bedroom apartment or house for 1973-74. Please contact Pat (544-8717) or Ariane (549-2145).

RICHIE HAVENS, Richie Havens, Richie Havens, Richie Havens, Richie Havens, Jimmie Spheeris, Richie Havens.

WILL ANYONE WHO found my silver ring with black markings lost on January 23, leave his phone number at the Journal office. Please -- $5 reward.

LOST: ONE PAIR gold wire framed glasses. Please return. I cannot afford new ones. Call 544-5287.

WANTED: 4 BEDROOM HOUSE or apartment for four girls for 73-74. Please phone 544-8623 or 544-8621 or 544-8617.

DON'T FORGET Science '44 co-op is having open house on February 3 and February 10. All day.

WANTED: RIDE to Waterloo this weekend. Call 546-7802.

DI -- Why are you.

FOUND -- one pair of brown leather gloves in Frost G15 on Monday January 29 1973. Phone 544-7381.

FOR RENT -- 6 or 7 BEDROOM house available May 1 for 73-74 school year. Phone 544-1972.

GIVE THREE GIRLS a break. Desperately needed a 3 bedroom apartment, or house for next year. Please call 544-8094; 544-8097, 544-8100.

TO THE BOYS -- thanks for the days-off. Will be returning in full and rejuvenated force on Sunday. My regards, the News desk.

SNAFFLED! In drunken stupor on Saturday night, one small oval white and gold pin bearing an emblem of two crossed swords and a crown. Of INCREDIBLE sentimental value. Great reward offered. Give Ann (544-8315) a ding.

NEEDED: 3 bedroom apartment for September 73. Close to campus. Phone Linda, 544-8343, Janis 544-8344, or Lauanne, 544-8345.

RE CLASSIFIED AD on Lost Silver Ring with black markings in last Journal. Would owner please phone 544-4015 and ask for Jeannette. I think I have the ring in Question.

FOR RENT from May 1 to August 31. 2 bedroom apartment. For more information, call 549-2928.

ROOM in 8-bedroom house. Near campus, co-operatively run. $50. 544-9207.

TO SUBLET: May 1st - Aug. 31st; 4 bedroom House. 5 minutes from Campus. Fully furnished. Not a slum. Call 544-0140.

LOST: green suede walled with gold top, in area of Tech Supplies or Health Service. Contact Kathy at 549-1519.

The good people at Morris Hall are having a coffee house to sponsor their foster from Brazil. Entertainment will be supplied by B-B- Bob Bobyh; the esteemed Chris George, the well known Joanie Eaton, and two budding musicians, as yet unheard of, from the second floor. So come on Sat. 10, Feb. between 8:30 and 1:00 p.m. to drink good coffee, see great entertainment, and meet Fantastic people.

WANTED: house or apartment for five persons for 1973-74. Phone 549-1949 or 549-1999.

3 BEDROOM APARTMENT available May 1. 10 minutes from campus Phone 544-2313.

WANTED: 2 bedroom completely furnished apartment, close to campus, for next year. PLEASE. Phone 544-8427 or 544-8422.

CLASS - CONGRATULATIONS to Marg Bartlett gold medal winner of the giant slalom at Sutton last weekend and to Kathy Heinbecker bronze medal winner for the same. Sympathies to B.A., B.B. and H.G. Maybe we can lick the fifth gate next time. signed Number 5.

LESSONS in classical guitar. Will O'Hara. 546-7142 or 544-3280.

PHOTOGRAPHERS. Are you fed up with drugstore-crud photofinishing. Photo Image offers custom processing and printing at reasonable rates. Call us at 546-7770, or drop by our studio at 33 Brock St.

LEE: I'm sorry. Bob.

TREMBLANT WEEKEND -- Ticket sales for the Queen's Ski Club annual Mont Tremblant Trip (March 2, 3, 4) on sale Wednesday, February 7, John Orr Room, 7:30 pm. Bus, tows, food and accommodations -- $40.

WANTED, WAY, URGENTLY required one three bedroom (or large 2 bedroom) apartment comfortable and reasonably close to campus. Please get on the jungle telegraph to kid-lightning at 544-7077.

HI! YOU TRYIN' to ditch a monstrous 6 or 7 bedroom house for next year? If so, give us a ring † 544-2110 at dinner time. Ask for anybody. If she's not there, talk to someone else. Thanks.

AVAILABLE, MAY 1, 73. Two bedroom apartment. Very close to campus. Kitchen, living room, bath and storage. Phone 544-6392 after 6 pm.

ANYONE WANTING TO play at the Bitter Grounds hack nite on February 17 and 18 come to the lower common room in Clark Hall on Wednesday February 7, 1973 at 8 pm prepared to audition.

When you B.Y.O.B.

Bring a winner.

Oktoberfest

Real imported flavour in a great Canadian beer.

Tercentenary Commonwealth Seminars

SRI LANKA

Speaker: Mr. A. Kathiramalainathan, First Secretary, Republic of Sri Lanka High Commission, Ottawa
Tuesday next: February 6th 2.30 p.m. Room 517 Watson
Movies: Discussion: Coffee: Free Admission
Institute of Commonwealth and Comparative Studies and the Department of English, Co-sponsors

Tercentenary Commonwealth Seminars

MALAYSIA

Speaker: Mr. Ismail Budin, Counsellor, Malaysia High Commission, Ottawa
Tuesday next: February 13th 2.30 p.m. Room 517 Watson
Discussion: Coffee: Free Admission
Institute of Commonwealth and Comparative Studies and the Department of English, Co-sponsors

at the art centre

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 4

Exhibition opens: EARLY CANADIAN PAINTING
On loan from the National Gallery of Canada the McCord Museum, Art Gallery of Windsor and Private Collectors.
Continues to March 4.
RECITAL OF LIEDER – Randall Marsh , 3 pm

AMS CONCERTS & AMITY 300 present

Concert on Chinese Music
8:00 p.m.
Sat., Feb. 3
KCVI Auditorium
Students $1.00 Non-Students $1.50

Tickets: International Centre, John Orr Rm.

ARTSCI '74 ELECTIONS

All nominations for Year Executive for '73-74

President
Vice-Pres.
Treasurer
Social Convenor
Publicity
Athletic Stick
Permanent Exec.

to be submitted in writing to Anne Macdonald, 469 Victoria St., 544-5997 by 9 p.m., Feb. 5.
Nominations for Pres. and Vice-Pres. are to be accompanied by 25 signatures.

elections feb. 8, 8 pm, 2nd floor common room, union

Lynch and Sunstrum lead Gaels to 9-4 win

by Peter Watts

Those of you who were at the Harty Arena on Wednesday night got a chance to see one of the better efforts of the year by the Queen's Golden Gaels. The Gaels outskated and outscored the RMC Redmen 9-4 in the annual Snowball game. The Redmen did not play particularly well but I have to give much of the credit to the Gaels who played a strong two-way and forced the Redmen into making mistakes.

The game started badly for Queen's as have many of their games so far this season. The Redmen got the first goal of the hockey game at the 7:21 mark of the opening period when defenseman Brian Hook slid one into the Queen's net past a surprised Clyde Harris. That lead lasted less than a minute, however as Jim Tittemore brought the Gaels even on a nice passing play with Bill White and Norm Goulet. Five minutes later Bob Kindon made it 2-1 as he rifled a rebound past Redmen goaltender Chris Amos. The Gaels added two more goals in the first period, one by Jim Sunstrum, the other by defenseman Mike Lynch.

In the second period, Dave Hadden put the Gaels in front 5-1 at the 21 second mark. Steve Blanchard and Bob Gillett scored two quick goals for RMC midway through the second period and it began to look like the Redmen finally might get going. However, Colin Loudon put the Gaels in front again by three goals and the second period ended with Queen's leading 6-3.

Again in the third period, RMC got the first goal, Chuck Barkman being the marksman. The Gaels took over after that, with goals coming from Jim Adair, Lynch and Sunstrum.

It was a chippy hockey game as referee Pat Hagerty called 23 penalties - 12 to the Redmen and 11 to Queen's. Included in that total were fighting majors to Brian Hook of RMC and Dave Hadden of Queen's plus a misconduct to Hook.

The Gaels received a bad scare in the second period when Colin Loudon was struck in the face with a puck off the stick of Ron White. Fortunately, however, the injury was not serious and Loudon continued to play.

For those who were there, most will agree that it was a good all-round effort, by the Gaels. Coach Bob Carnegie has juggled his lines a little, uniting Jim Lunstrum and Colin Loudon and putting Bob Kindon back on right wing. The move appears to have paid off on the basis of Wednesday night's game. Jim Adair also played well, getting a goal and three assists. Adair, who joined the team after the Christmas break, has moved into a tie for second place in the team scoring with Colin Loudon, each with 20 points. Jim Sunstrum leads the team with 25 points.

A couple of players have to be singled out for particular mention. Mike Lynch got two goals - in one game no less - and played a strong two-way hockey game. Left winger Norm Goulet also played one of his best games of the year. And of course the Beast contributed his own brand of hockey - that is until he got thrown out in the second period. Perhpas all our forwards should be sent to the Gaels' football camp next fall. We'd have a real zoo on skates then!

This weekend could well tell the tale as to whether Queen's will get into the playoffs this year. At present, the Gaels are tied with Ottawa for the fourth and final playoff spot, each with 13 points. However, second place is still not out of the question; the present second place team, Laurentian, has 17 points. York is in third spot with 15 points. A win for Queen's over York on Friday night in Toronto would put the Gaels temporarily in a third place tie with the Yeomen. Saturday's game with Ryerson - well, Queen's just has to win that one! Then next Tuesday night, it's back to Ottawa for a showdown with the GeeGees. The last three games of the regular season are all at home against Laurentian on February 9th and against York and Toronto, February 16th and 17th.

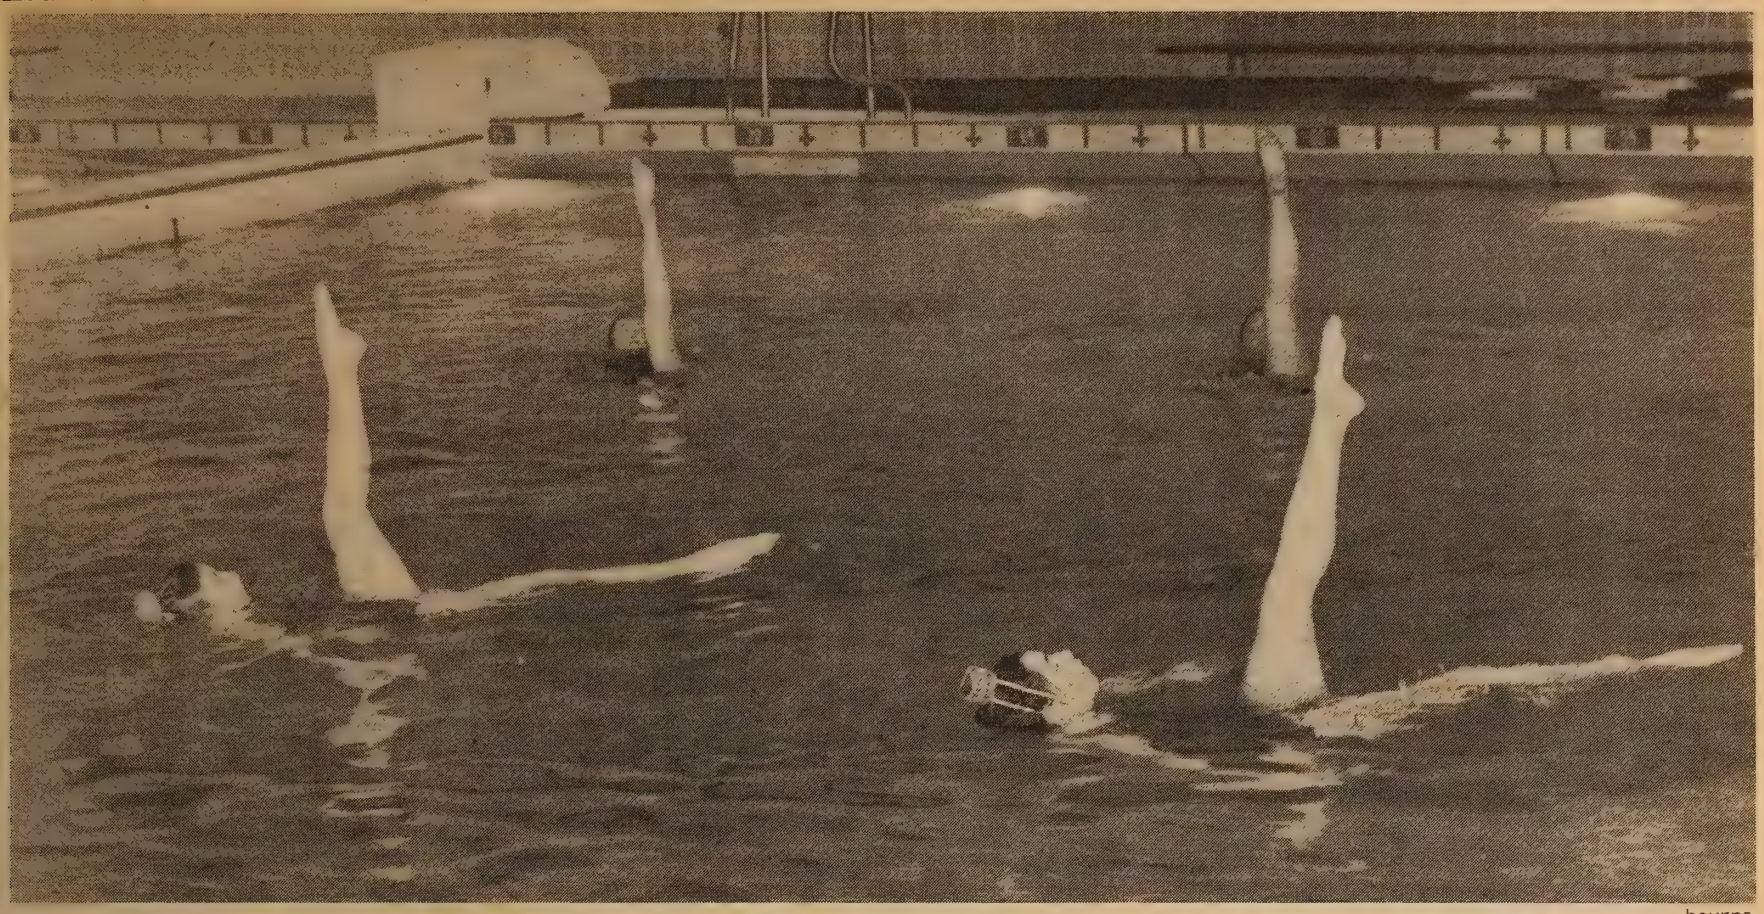
Gaels' Graffitti. . . Steve Gross is out of the hospital but he will have a cast on his leg for the next three months . . . winger Jim Sunstrum still has a year of eligibility left. Stick around Jim, take a Ph D in ANYTHING . . . the Gaels will hold a tryout camp next month for anyone who is at Queen's this year, will be here next year, and who thinks that they could help the Gaels. . . . watch for more details in future Journals.

bews news

by Peter Watts

The leagues are all progressing steadily toward the playoffs and the race for the Bews trophy is still up for grabs. At the moment however, it is beginning to look like a two team race with Civil and Math holding a 2700 point lead over Commerce '73. PHE is still not out of the picture but the jocks haven't got one of the stronger hockey teams and both Commerce '73 and Civil and Math are in the running for a championship in this particular sport.

The waterpolo league has run into trouble with a number of defaults. One of the reasons is that those students who took part in inner-tube waterpolo before Christmas are ineligible for regular waterpolo this term. Perhaps this policy will have to be altered next year.



The 10-pin bowling standings show that Commerce '73 "A" team are leading the Tuesday section with 24 points. Commerce '74 "A" are second with 20 points and Mining "B" is right behind with 19 points. In the Thursday section, Mining "A" leads with 30 points followed by Business Grads with 27 points and Civil and Math with 25½ points. It looks like another close race in this sport and one which could have significant influence on the Bews race.

The singles and doubles handball schedules have now been posted on the notice board in the men's locker room. Competitors are asked to check these schedules for times of games. The second round of the singles is to be completed by February 9th, while the first two rounds of the doubles are to be finished by February 16th.

Table tennis is also underway and the first round is to be completed by February 7th. Check the notice board for more information. Singles and doubles squash also continues and the schedules are posted.

A look at Bews shows that Civil and Math have retained their lead in the race and Commerce '73 is not far behind. However, a little larger gap is developing between the second place Commercemen and the third place PHE. Here are the top ten up to January 26th.

1.	Civil and Math	29,793
2.	Commerce '73	27,088
3.	PHE	20,676
4.	Mechanical	19,496
5.	Mining	18,350
6.	Commerce '74	17,492
7.	Commerce '75	15,913
8.	Chemical	15,251
9.	Law '74	14,243
10.	Commerce '76	11,690

- bourns

Synchro Gals put on a fine display Wednesday night . . . too bad the Snowball program didn't get the times right.

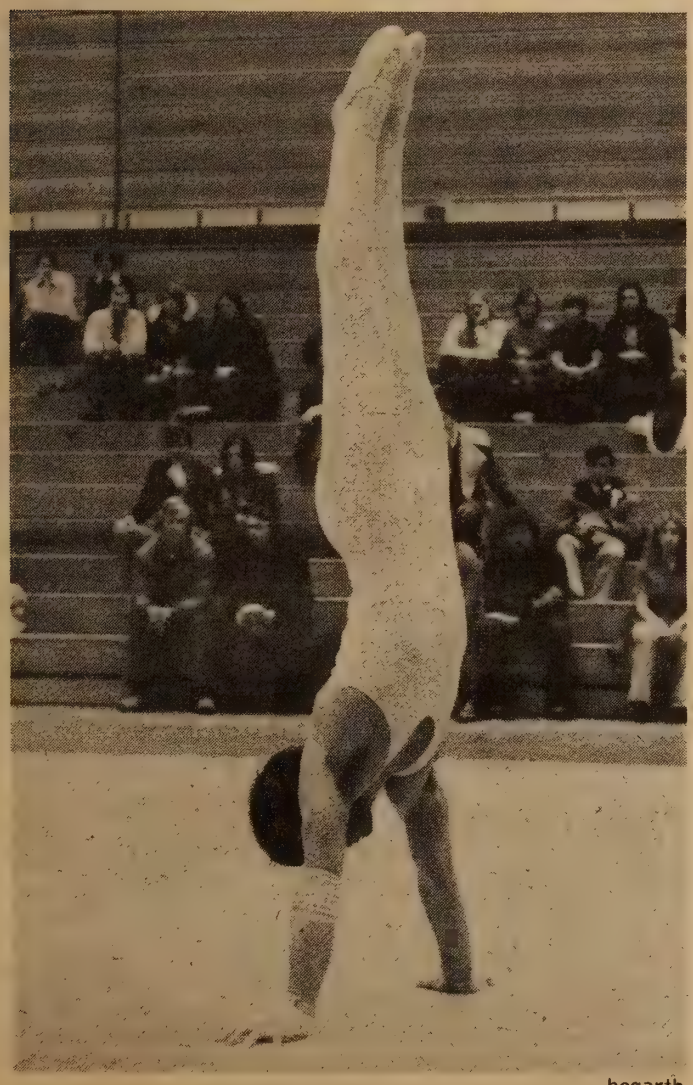
High-box DemoSquad steals show

Queen's retains Brockington Cup

by Chris Boon

Snowball Athletic Night has just wound down for another year, and Queen's has once again retained the Brockington Trophy, by a 9-5 count (actually, 9-4-1; we tied badminton with R.M.C. Queen's started off strongly in the afternoon events, taking three straight in curling, cross-country skiing, and x-c running, before the spectator attractions began.

Volleyball won easily, as did the gymnastics squad and hockey enjoyed a 9-4 triumph (Hadden's set-to with one of the Cadets may have been a high point), but basketball had a rough time, pulling out a 65-62 squeaker. Norm Hagarty and John Keck sparked Queen's, hooping 19 and 17 points respectively, while Paul Howard, who had a disastroous shooting night, blocked eight shots and made up for it on defense. Hagarty also played some tough 'D', and pulled down quantities of rebounds. Look for a win tonight against Ryerson, especially if Norm keeps his shooting eye from outside.

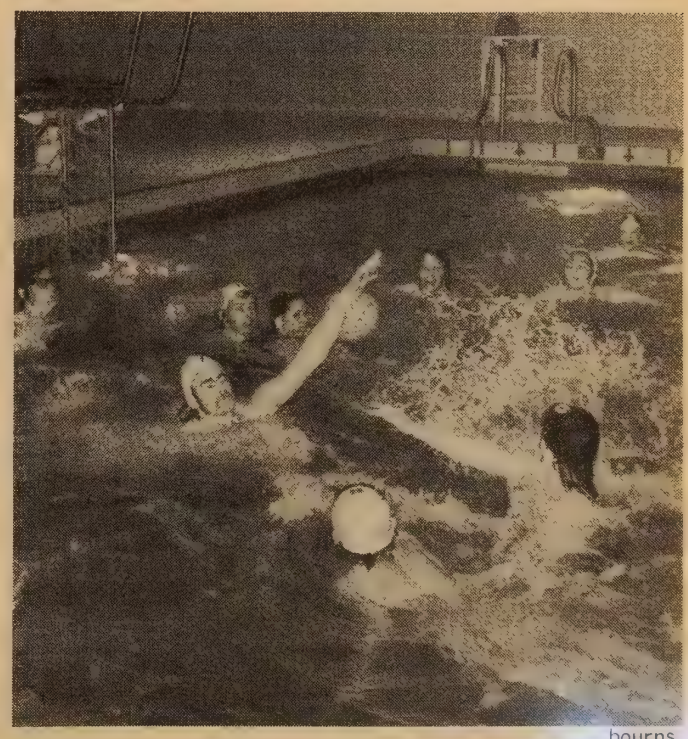


The Cadets managed to win wrestling, judo, pistol, fx and fencing, while badminton split the points, tieing after all matches were completed.

The highlight of the evening, at least for me, was the high box demonstration put on at half-time by an R.M.C. drill team. Those guys were great, and really deserved the standing ovation they got. It was a real pity that the show couldn't have gone on in the Bartlett where more people could have watched it. Again, a great effort by all concerned.

Another demonstration that was well received by those that saw it was put on by the women's synchro swim team. Unfortunately, whoever put the schedule in the program blew it. Instead of running from 8:15 to 9:00 it went from 7:45 to about 8:20 . . . but, that's the way it usually goes. These girls could do well in the OWIAA championships this year; it's a pity more people didn't get to see them on Wednesday.

Finally, good luck to our intercollegiate teams this weekend. Most of them can't afford any more losses, and back luck won't help.



Gym Captain Jamie Archibald holds a handstand.

- hogarth

Queen's	RMC
Won 9	Won 4
Tied 1

Waterpolo Gaels make big splash vs R.M.C.

bourns

backpage

Canada: Davis calls by-elections

TORONTO — Two provincial by-elections have been announced by Ontario Premier William Davis for March 15 and one may very well prove to be a test of the government's policy on university education.

One by-election will be in St. George riding in Toronto left vacant by former Justice Secretary Allan Lawrence who was elected federal MP for Northunberland-Durham.

A by-election will also be held in Huron riding in south-western Ontario to fill the seat of former treasurer Charles McNaughton, who recently retired from active politics to become assistant to Davis with special responsibility for the government's energy policy.

One of the major issues in St. George riding which is comprised of part of the University of Toronto and the Ryerson Polytechnical, may very well be the arbitrary tuition fee hike and OSAP ceiling increase which the Conservative government of William Davis instituted last spring.

MONTREAL — Mayor Jean Drapeau of Montreal claimed Monday that fears that the 1976 Olympic Games will have a deficit are unfounded. He expects that if fund-raising efforts are successful, "there will be a surplus, not a deficit."

Drapeau's announcement came shortly after a demand by Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau that he tell Ottawa who would pay for a possible Games deficit.

Drapeau claimed that the Games can be profitably financed through the sale of Olympic coins and special postage stamps, and a national lottery. Other income will come from such sources as ticket sales, television rights and souvenir sales.

TORONTO — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau warned that if serious fighting breaks out in Vietnam, he will quickly withdraw the Canadian delegation sent to the International Commission of Control and Supervision set up to observe the ceasefire in Vietnam.

There are presently 145 Canadian military and civilian personnel in Saigon and 145 more are to be sent next week if all goes well.

However, Trudeau stated that he will not allow the observers to be caught up in a cross-fire if fighting breaks out. Shortly after arriving in Saigon, the Canadians began preparing an emergency evacuation program in event that the continuing skirmishes should escalate.

TORONTO — Cross-Canada Car Leasing has been convicted of turning back the odometers on 120 cars a total of 1,600,000 miles.

Returning the verdict, the Commercial Registration Appeal Tribunal accused the company of committing "a fraud on the unsuspecting public" to get higher prices for used motor vehicles.

The company claimed that what they were doing was necessary because high mileage vehicles "do not sell".

MONTREAL — The Liberal party must pay greater attention to the problems of Western Canada if it hopes to gain support west of Ontario, according to Prime Minister Trudeau.

In an address to the Quebec wing of the party, Trudeau noted that now some answers are starting to be found to alienation in Quebec, the Liberal party must try to understand and find answers to Western disenchantment.

He admitted that last October's election results show Western voters do not identify with the Liberals, so the party must act to woo their support. Until that time, the party cannot consider itself to be truly national.

The Liberals currently hold only seven of the 68 Western seats.

KINGSTON — Amidst a storm of criticism over a recent bid to move the Kingston farmers' market during renovations to City Hall, parks, and recreation committee chairman Ald Grant Timmins was forced to clarify the controversial announcement.

The market, for many years located in front of the City Hall has become an integral feature in the city, well-known to both residents and visitors.

When it was announced that the market would have to be moved so that renovations could go on unhampered at City Hall, at least four city Aldermen protested. Timmins finally explained that the move would only be temporary and that he would ensure that the market is finally returned to its original setting.

TORONTO — Recent surveys by Ontario health authorities showed that tbe flu epidemic which has been raging across Ontario proved to be a significant obstacle to many areas of activity.

In one week the abseeteeism rate for schools, industry and hospitals climbed as high as 7.1 per cent with absenteeism for students the highest at 9.3 per cent.

"Well, getting in appears simple enough - let's make sure we know how to get out ..."

Commission hit by obstacles

World: ICCS enters stormy Vietnam

SAIGON — The four member International Commission of Control and Supervision mandated by the Paris peace treaty to keep the peace in Vietnam, arrived Sunday and Monday amid a storm of battles both military and diplomatic.

Although delegates from North Vietnam, the United States and South Vietnam came before the commission to present their credentials, the Representatives of the Viet Cong faction refused to comply and gave no reason for the move.

One hundred and fifty North Vietnamese delegates to Saigon, flown in for peace discussions to be carried out there, refused to go through South Vietnamese immigration procedures and remained in their planes for close to a day.

In addition there has been a flurry of claims and counter-claims that the opposing sides have been violating the treaty with heavy fighting still raging throughout South Vietnam.

The South Vietnamese have claimed that the North Vietnamese have violated the ceasefire at least 500 times in small but bloody battles which have since escalated into infantry attacks. It has been reported that 1800 casualties have occurred since the ceasefire.

However, the United States has been adhering to the terms and have already reported the removal of 800 men from South Vietnam. By the agreement the remaining 22,700 troops must be out by March 28.

CAIRO — The Eyptian authorities have begun to crack the whip over rebellious student leaders of the campuses of Cairo University with the possibility of stringent security enforcement by a special civilian policy force.

A report was commissioned by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat at the beginning of January to suggest ways of dealing with the recent student unrest generated by leftist elements connected with former Premier Aly Sabry which resulted in a day of violent clashes with police just outside the campuses of Cairo University.

Although the report called for strong measures against the students, it recognized that the government was acting unwisely in cancelling the student union elections which were to occur in November, a major factor in the later unrest.

LONDON — Fears of another monetary crisis which would be one of several during the past few years, have started to grow as world foreign exchange markets are starting to rock in response to recent national currency changes.

Speculation started when the Italian lira underwent extensive revision by the government. While the official exchange rate will be maintained for bank transactions, the lire was taken off the fixed exchange rate for private dealings. In addition, the Swiss franc was unpegged and allowed to seek its own exchange rate.

The French franc is under sustained downward pressure with mounting concern for the possibility of a Socialist-Communist win in the upcoming French national elections.

The US dollar is caught up in the resultant instability in foreign exchange market and despite its recent strength is showing slight declines in value. The German mark also may be forced to revalue upward as a result of the general upheavals.

WASHINGTON — The Communist forces in South-East Asia have released a list of 555 Americans held prisoner by them for release in the next sixty days under the peace treaty.

However, these lists do not include those captured in Laos and many more have been reported missing in action in Vietnam by the Americans. The release of those men captured in Laos is still under discussion in Paris.

KAMPALA — After virtually telling the world to leave Uganda alone, President Idi Amin has reversed his position and demanded assistance from "friendly" Arab, European, and Asian countries claiming that he is having trouble keeping his Africanized economy afloat.

Last August, Amin announced total expulsion of over 50,000 Ugandan Asians and gave them 90 days to leave in an attempt to place the economy of the country into African hands. He now finds that he is in need of "temporary assistance" and has requested help in the form of engineers, doctors and other experts.

BELFAST — Two guerrilla bombs rocked Belfast on January 30 commemorating the killing of 13 Catholics by British Army fire during a civil rights demonstration in Londonderry. No one was hurt in the bombing but at least three deaths were reported during fighting elsewhere.

Kraft boycott committee gains 'broad-based' support

by Bob Mutrie

Close to fifty students were present at an anti-Kraft Foods meeting Saturday at which Don Kossick, National Kraft Boycott Co-ordinator and Fred Gudmunson, national Farmers Union Education Officer warned people against Kraft products.

Kossick told the meeting that support for the Boycott has become extremely broad-based, including both consumers and farmers from coast to coast.

Originally set out to gain the right of collective bargaining for dairy farmers who were forced to sell to Kraft for lack of suitable alternatives and who had been earning less and less from sales of their products, the Boycott has spread into urban centres across the country recognizing the fact that Kraft's monopoly in the market for dairy products was ripping off consumers as well.

The Boycott has been maturing in the West where it originated and, according to Kossick, the National Farmers' Union sponsored Boycott has been showing absolute success in real figures. In the Peace River country of Northern Alberta, the campaign has gained 80 per cent support from the inhabitants. In Moosejaw, Saskatchewan, it has been determined that sales of Kraft have dropped by 40 per cent.

Boycott support is not exclusive to the west as the Committee has been concentrating on acquainting the people of Ontario with the dangers of the Kraft monopoly for the past nine months. The NFU has gained the support of numerous unions in the province, including the Ontario Federation of Labour, and, more recently, the Labour Council of Metro Toronto. They have also brought in organizations ranging from church and community groups to womens' groups and unions. Boycott Committees have been set up all across the province, according to Kossick.

With so many people of varying characteristics becoming involved, Kossick stated, there have been as ever increasing number of different ways in which it has been advertised. These include cartoons, balloons bearing the Boycott Kraft inscription, and even songs written.

The people of Ottawa became acquainted with the boycott last year when the Committee called on area farmers to bring their produce to parliament Hill where it was given away free. One thousand dozen eggs and hundreds of boxes of fruit were distributed to thousands of people who had gathered. Committee people then went into Ottawa stores to talk about the Boycott and gained over 80 per cent support for their actions.

Even governments have indicated support for the Kraft Boycott. The government of Saskatchewan and the New Democratic Party of that province voted in favour of the National Farmers' Union campaign, Gudmanson pointed out. In addition the Saskatchewan government gave the Boycott committee a grant to cut a record of original songs about rural Canada and the Boycott. The record, probably to be

Continued on Page 2

Snowball, like every semi-formal, the stuff that dreams are made of. wilson

New bureaucracy to deal with education policies

The Commission on Post Secondary Education released its final report in Toronto last week. This study of the future development of post secondary education in Ontario culminates three years of work.

The report suggests the establishment of a new administrative structure to formulate policy and handle student aid (see last Friday's Journal for explanation of the commission's policy on financing of universities and students).

Principal John J. Deutsch told a press conference on Thursday that the proposed bureaucracy is not intended as an attempt to "abolish the Ministry of Colleges and Universities" but rather it "calls for a change in its duties."

The new Ministry would be called the Ministry of Post Secondary Education, if accepted by the government. This would be the Minstry's third change in name in five years. It was originally the Department of Education, then the Department of University Affairs and presently the Ministry of Colleges and Universities.

In addition to advising the Minister, this body would be responsible for dispensing student aid.

Four government agencies, established by law, would replace the existing advisory bodies in dealing with the planning, co-ordination and funding of post secondary education. These would include a Council for University Affairs, a Council for College Affairs, a Council for the Open Educational Sector and a Council for the Creative and Performing Arts.

Opportunities for continuing education would be facilitated by the establishment of an Open Academy of Ontario. This Academy would be responsible for developing new programs suited to the needs of students not served by existing institutions. Degrees and Diplomas would be offered by those meeting specified criteria. Financing of these programs would be the responsibility of the Council for the Open Educational Sector.

The Commission also suggests that those who have not completed secondary school should have the right to conditional admission to post secondary education without having to meet formal requirments.

Vincent Kelly, a Toronto lawyer and member of the commission indicated that the "purpose of the Open Academy was to allow all the gifted of our society into post secondary education."

Queen's Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 36

Tuesday, February 6, 1973

Election Section

With candidate platforms

Pages 11 to 22

U. of O. could drop football

OTTAWA (CUP) — An enrolment decline and an ensuing projected deficit of $2 to $3 million for 1973-74 may take their toll on sports at the University of Ottawa (U of O).

Students and faculty of the university's school of physical education will know within two weeks how much money they must ask U of O students for to continue their intercollegiate sports program.

In a January 3 meeting, the sports advisory council, a nine-person autonomous body with five student members, told the university administration that if it completes plans to cut back seven per cent of each faculty's budget, the university's intercollegiate football program will be the first sports activity to go.

But that may just be a threat.

Dr. Bill Orban, dean of physical education, admitted January 25 university administrators may be shocked by the suggestion to drop football, while a suggestion to drop a less expensive sport would have had a higher chance of being approved. The administration simply asked "what implications would be created" by the proposed budget reduction, Orban said. When it learns phys ed would cut football, it may consider not cutting back that faculty's budget.

If the administration does reduce the sports budget, Ottawa U's "GeeGees" may still not have to go.

"I'm optimistic that the students would be in favor of support through an increase in their fees," Orban said.

A referendum in mid-March will probably ask the students to increase their activity fees from $16 to $25. Orban and U of O Athletic Director Carol Turgeon both insist there will be a need for more money - and thus a referendum - whether or not the administration reduces the sports budget.

"The only difference will be the amount asked for and the arguments used," Orban explained. If the budget is cut, students will decide whether U of O wants a football team; if not they will decide the fate of some other, less expensive activities.

Kraft boycott committee

Continued from Page 1

released in the fall, will be distributed to AM and FM radio stations across Canada, he said.

The movement has been gaining strength rapidly from student groups across the country, Cossick pointed out. He mentioned that the student councils of Carleton, Laurentian, the University of Toronto, and the University of Manitoba to name a few.

Kossick urged the local Boycott group which consists of about thirty Queen's students and other community members to approach the AMS and ask them to support the Boycott.

Status report says UBC women rank second

VANCOUVER (CUP) Women at the University of British Columbia (UBC) are a small proportion of the faculty.

Women are paid less than men in every academic rank.

Women with the same qualifications as men are in inferior ranks.

Women staff members are paid less for the work they do than male staff members are.

Women do not occupy supervisory and administrative positions on the same proportions as men.

Women are educated less at the university and UBC educates fewer women than men,

These are the findings of the report on the status of women at UBC released Tuesday January 23 by the local women's action group.

The report calls for adoption of a university policy of non-discrimination; for development of a program designed to correct all practices which discriminate against female students, faculty and staff; for additional funds and staff for the dean of women's office so it can develop and oversee the equal education plan with the aid of an advisory council; for the establishment of comprehensive child care facilities on campus open to children of all staff, faculty and students; and for improvement of the status of part-time students, staff and faculty.

The women's action group consists of female students, staff and faculty at UBC who have worked for a year to improve working and learning conditions.

"At the moment the university punishes women for not being men," says the preamble of the report, written by Shelagh Day, a former arts instructor.

"However, with the publication of the report, the university cannot remain complacent or naive about its role in shaping the experience of its women students and employees," Day said.

ARTSCI '76 ELECTIONS

Tuesday, Feb. 13, 1973 - 7:30 pm

STIRLING D

ALL POSITIONS OPEN

President, Vice President
Secretary - Treasurer
Social Convener
Publicity Agent
Athletic Sticks (2)

Nominations for President and Vice President must be submitted by 11 pm,

Monday, Feb. 12 to Nancy Riley, Chown Hall, 544-8098

GRAD DAY SYMPOSIUM

"The Role of Foreign Students in Canadian Universities"

Sat. Feb. 10 10:00 A.M. - 4:00 P.M P.M.

Dunning Hall Auditorium

Panelists include:

Colin Issacs, Chairman of Ont. Union of Grad. Students.

Colin Issacs, Chairman of Ont. Union of Grad. Students.

Mel Preston, Ex. Vice-Chairman, Advisory Comm. on Academic Planning.

Allan Rix, Director, Canadian Brueau for International Education.

Jack McNie, Minister of Universities & Colleges of Ontario.

Dave Catmur, Canadian University Students Overseas.

Pierre-Yves Paradis, Assoc. Dir. International Development Research Centre.

Ceta Ramkalawansingh, Student member of Ont. Comm. on Student Awards.

Bryce Mackasey, MP for Verdun and former Federal Minister of Manpower & Immigration.

Student Typing Service

Hours:

Monday to Thursday 8:30 - 8:30 Friday 8:30 - 4:30

To: Students, Clubs, Organizations, Department Heads

We can offer you the following services....

3600 XEROX

-capable of making thousands of top quality copies in hours for as little as 1½¢ / copy
-free 20 bin collator
-reproduces half-tones; photos; coloured documents

2400 XEROX

-copies books, notes etc. in seconds for 5¢ / copy

DITTO

-makes a Ditto Master in seconds from any page and hundreds of Ditto copies in minutes at only 1¢ a copy

TYPING

-essays
-theses
-letters and resumes
-neat and accurate at 30¢ a page double spaced and 50¢ a page single spaced
-special typing slightly extra

Our cost is low and our service fast and efficient.
We are located in the
STUDENT'S UNION
Drop in and see us or call 549-1655
We'll be glad to assist you with any
TYPING or COPYING PROBLEM.

AMS Court

Student not guilty Witness fails to show

by Victoria Kemsley

The AMS court met on Thursday, February 1 and acquitted the defendant Rein Tirrul, a first year engineer charged under the AMS constitution, for "wilfully defacing, damaging or destroying the property of an educational or public institution. . . whether or not he intends the extent of the act." Under the by-law, the defendant is liable to suspension from studies at Queen's.

The case concerned events which took place in Victoria Hall in the early morning of Dec. 17 and which resulted in the breaking of a door. The one witness, Mr. Victor Lee, the nightwatchman at Victoria Hall, was not present for the hearing. "We have no way to compel him to come", commented Chief Justice Stuart Hendin, a third year law student. When Tirrul's representative, John Hill raised some objections to the authority of the AMS court, the Chief Justice commented that the court was a "regulatory body" and that any verdict of guilt was not a criminal burden.

Tirrul entered a plea of not guilty and stressed that "I'm not fully to blame."

A letter, from Lea to Mrs. Trumper, the business manager of Victoria Hall, reported that Lea had chased four engineers on an upper floor and caught one of them. The letter continued to say that when he brought the boy downstairs, he apparently ran for the front door, and in the process of exiting the building, the door was broken, causing severe lacerations to the face and hands of the defendant.

"The only clear thing I remember is the glass exploding in front of my face", Tirrul said. Wehn asked if he were drunk at the time, he replied: "yes. I wasn't myself."

Tirrul paid for the damages on January 25th. When asked by the AMS representative Art Winreb, a third year law student, why he paid for the damage if he did not believe he was at fault, Tirrul anwered, "I paid the damage because it was me that broke the door." The question was not whether the damage had been paid for, said Chief Justice Stuart Hendin, but whether it had been done 'wilfully'. "I'm sure I tried to kill myself by breaking a door with my head," replied Tirrul.

After some deliberation a decision was made. "I find for the defendant", said Justice Stowell, one of the three justices present. He expressed sympathy for Mr. Weinreb for the difficult job of proving an event had taken place without the benefit of witnesses.

The Chief Justice was in accord with his fellow justices and commented that as the charge used the word 'wilfully' there was some question as to whether a reasonable man, indeed even, " a reasonable drunken first year engineer" woul d wilfully "shove his head through a glass door". Tirrul was released of any futher liability concerning the incident.

New Med plan

by Raj Anand

A new project called the Clinical Learning Centre was begun recently in the Queen's medical school. Its aim, explained Mrs. Barbara Valberg, the administrator in charge, is to give second year medical students practice in the clinical skills of interviewing patients, taking a "good history," and conducting a physical examination.

For this purpose Dr. Alex M. Bryans was given a $40,680 grant from the Ontario Department of Health last November to set up the necessary facilities on the third floor of Calvin House. These facilities include eight examining rooms, a viewing room, a reading room, and a reserve room.

Four mornings each week, a group of eight second year medical students practise being doctors. Their "patients" are either people recommended by Kingston doctors or people who have phoned the CLC (549-2829) to volunteer as practice patients. The latter group include students who have been "programmed" by Valberg to play a certain role and "fake" a certain illness; many of these people are drama students. After the examination, both student and patient offer "feedback" in the form of suggestions for improvement and their impressions of the interview. Valberg commented, "Thus far most responses have been very enthusiastic." The students are gaining confidence in the necessary clinical skills with the aid of practice patients.

Mrs. Valberg stressed that there are two hypotheses to be proved: that people will volunteer to be part of the students' education, and that this education in clinical skills can be done away from the hospital setting. The usual clinical training in hospitals has involved several students following a doctor around the hospital, picking up what they could. Sue MacKinnon, one of the students involved in the CLC and a member of the curriculum committee, said "hospital wards are not good for practising the history and physical." She cited noise, lack of space and people constantly streaming in and out as reasons for this. The CLC is simply much more efficient, she said. "We don't feel we're intruding on patients."

Mrs. Valberg reiterated this view; she said that it is actually beneficial for the students to examine "role-playing" patients. In this way, a student can gain experience by first examining a co-operative person, then one more reluctant to talk, and finally encounter someone entirely hostile. With this type of progression, the student can gain confidence in his skills.

One interesting feature of the facilities at Calvin House is the "viewing room." It has one-way mirrors on two walls looking into the two adjacent examining rooms. A teacher and a few students can thus watch a student interviewing a patient and offer suggestions and criticism. The room also houses a video playback unit, which enables a student to watch his own interview. Mrs. Valberg added that the student and patient were only only conscious of the mirror for the first few minutes. The important thing is that they do not have to have a teacher in the room. The student is to a great degree on his own.

Since the opening of the CLC in December, many other medical schools have inquired about its operation. As an innovation in its field, its next step is growth. Ms. MacKinnon said that she hoped it would be used more often in the future. One possibility is that student nurses may also be given the benefit of its facilities to practise their work.

World oil supply tapering

The United States is ripping through the world reserve of oil, according to G. Beven, who conducted the lecture on the demand for energy in the Nature, Science and Man lecture series.

For many years a net exporter, the United States has become a virtual drain on oil from Canada, Alaska, Venezuala and most recently on the mid-east, he said.

With the United States' own domestic supply of gas now peaking, Alaska has been pumping at full capacity apparently unable to fill the insatiable demand. This means turning to Canada, he said, but he added that Canada's oil exports are too small to be important.

Beven pointed out that Canada's production has not been increasing as fast as it could due to the lack of significant finds since 1965 and the low price paid with relation to the risk undertaken in the current production regions.

This has met an increasing American reliance on Venezualan oil which has already reached maturity stages, he said. For future reserves, the United States will have to import more from the mid-east.

Looking at the present world oil capacity, Bevan showed fear that if new methods of oil production or different forms of energy are not introduced, the world may be left in short order without heat.

According to Bevan, the world supply of oil is presently 642 billion barrels but by 1990 he estimated that world consumption could very well be 82 million barrels a day.

As one alternative to the current situation, Bevan advocated the developing of methods of coal refining so that the sulphurous coal which is in plentiful supply in North America may be economically refined. If coal is to become a viable alternative to oil, he suggested that an economic stack gas scrubbing system would have to be introuduced by 1978.

Another possibility outlined by Bevan was the development of the tar sands in the Canadian Arctic which he said has a potential of 100,000 barrels a day. However, he warned that the sands only have a total potential of 60 billion barrels by direct mining and the rest would have to be developed through maturation of steam and pressure removal.

The cost of developing such Arctic resources could also be prohibitive, he said, estimating that it could cost as much as $5000 a day where other oil producing regions of the world only have a cost of $3000. However, he added that the cost could be reduced.

In addition to these considerations, he mentioned that the cold can very often have a retarding influence on the productivity of the men and machinery.

However, a list of benefits might include employment opportunities for Canadians, an improvement in Northern economics, population of the north, which would take some of the pressure off already overpopulated regions, development of market expertise, a strengthening of Canada's trade position with the United States, and its addition to government revenue.

In conclusion, Bevan felt that the advantages of developing Canada as an oil export region outweighed the disadvantages, pointing out that, "we must be "worthy of our role in Western Society".

DONALD MATHERS MEMORIAL BLOOD DONOR CLINIC

Tues., Wed., Thurs.,
Feb. 6, 7, 8

Victoria Hall Residence
REFRESHMENTS!!!!

11 a.m. - 2 p.m.
5 - 8 p.m.

newsbriefs

Classical concerts wanted

There is an underground movement on campus which has been surfacing from time to time during the past few weeks and has become known as the "guerilla movement for the Arts."

A group of people who felt that the Queen's concert committee was not offering enough on the classical side in the events they sponsored decided to get together and do something about it.

"There is the audience for it", guerilla movement member Bernard Gobin stated and added that they are prepared to work to make sure that it happens. "Variety must be offered to concert card holders", he added.

The group came together two weeks ago and set up a constitution which was accepted at a meeting January 25. They have since been holding meeetings with Steve Sugar, Concert Committee Chairman, to arrange more Classical concerts for the campus.

Sugar has promised that if the Richie Havens concert proves to be successful, he will committ the Committee to at least one event of a "classical nature".

Movement member Marlene Creates stressed that they were not jumping in to take over the Concert Committee but instead were wanting to help them.

According to Gobin, the Guerrilla movement was set up to provide the machinery and people that could look after and staff a classical concert at Queen's. He added that he would build for the use of the Concert Committee "if they are willing to work with us".

In its constitution the organization calls itself a non-profit, educational, student-oriented organization to initiate, co-ordinate, promote, and execute music and related events of a fine arts nature.

Already, the Movement has compiled a list of people who play at Classical Concerts and provided it for use of the Concert Committee in choosing groups to come in.

Slater forced out

David Slater quit as president of York University only because of a "resign or be fired" ultimatum from the university's board of governors.

Slater's resignation was the end result of a leadership crisis which was sparked by York's current financial crisis.

In a continuing leadership power struggle between Slater and the York board of governors, the former president lost almost all of his power last October.

R. M. McIntosh, chairman of the board of governors, twice asked Slater for his resignation after that, and on December 17 Slater agreed verbally to resign quietly in June.

Slater apparently changed his mind in January, however, telling the board of governors that he would remain for the rest of this ten year term. He submitted his resignation on January 18 only when told he would be fired otherwise.

The final decision to fire Slater was taken at a board of governors meeting December 14 to which Slater was not invited.

Several senior York faculty members had threatened to resign if Slater did not leave the university.

SVB needs volunteers

If you want to expend energies profitably before the big push to complete essays or if you have yet to overcome the January 'blahs', the Student Volunteer Bureau needs you to help various community agencies with their programs. A volunteer is needed to assist with their school program at Sunnyside three hours a week. People who would like to help Outlook this summer are asked to come to their offices in the Students' Union Building. The Mental Retardation Unit at K.P.H. needs volunteers and specifically tutors. The Centre, the drug crisis and information centre, needs some volunteers to assist in the running of the place. The Kingston Community School program needs someone with dark-room experience. St. Pauls School is starting a new elective program for children. If you have skills in guitar playing, photography, gymnastics, etc., please contact us. A new program in Pittsburg Township, known as the "ALL Stars", has just started in Holy Family School. They need volunteers for the kids who range in age from 6 to 12 years. Hotel Dieu has requested a tutor for Grade twelve chemistry for a patient.

By the way, we have Opportuntities for Youth application forms if you are interested in starting a program. The contact person is Roy Beechey.

If you have the time and are interested in one of these volunteer areas, drop in to our office. We're in the Union - up the outside stairs off University. Or call us at 547-5766.

SCIENCE 44 CO-OP

Looking for a place to live next year? Co-op may be for you. For information read P. 71 in the 'Who's Where' and come talk to us.

Drop in and stay awhile

OPEN HOUSE, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 10 from 9:30 at

314 William
373 Johnson
307-309 University
31 Garrett
128 Earl

Finlay's Sports Shop

SKI SPECIALS

Finlay's
Value $10.00
off sale price
on all
Fiberglass and Metal
Glass Skis

Finlay's
$5 Value
off sale price
on boots

Free beer steins with every ski or ski boot

93 Princess St. FEBRUARY ONLY 548-8255

Under attack

returning to Queen's Wed., Feb. 7th -TOMORROW!
with guests:

ELDON WOOLLIAMS
Conservative M.P. in support of capital punishment

MR. LOH I-CHENG
a representative and defender of Nationalist China

AL CAPP
cartoonist, in defence of his political and social commentary

also: Michel Chartrand, Labour Leader and Head of "Quebec-Palestine Ass'n"

Two shows to be taped in the afternoon, and two in the evening, in Grant Hall. Doors open 2:30 p.m. and 6:45 p.m. Audience questions invited.

FREE TICKETS at the door or in advance from AMS Office

UNDER ATTACK COMES BUT ONCE A YEAR.....
DON't MISS IT.

Montreal students dispute ruling

MONTREAL (CUPI) — Quebec students are up in arms over the recent rulings over fees passed by the Quebec government.

Students of the University of Quebec are continuing their general strike against a UQAM ruling recently passed requiring the expulsion of about 600 students who had not paid their tuition fees, amid charges of administration backed police interference and intimidation of professors and employees. A Jan. 24 occupation of the Administrative offices was broken up by riot police, after which the General Strike was called.

Students from all the universities in Montreal met at McGill on Feb. 4 to conduct a teach-in against the Quebec ruling at which it was determined that close to 3,000 students at UQAM and about 1000 at the U de Q., would be affected by it.

Several hundred UQAM students demonstrated on Phillips Square in favour of their demands on Feb. 1, and were joined by about 50 McGill University students who formed a strike support committee.

Due to the hazy economic situation in Quebec and the resultant rising unemployment, the Quebec government is attempting to cut back on an already too large number of Quebec graduates.

Again, the students most affected by the ruling will be those from lower income backgrounds who must rely on part-time jobs and government bursaries to pay their tuition.

The UQAM administration continues to insist that the university is still open despite the fact that picketing has closed down the university since the strike began.

Support has been gained from the professors' unions which voted not to cross the student picket lines. The professors had for a long time been having trouble getting various demands through the administration.

The University of Montreal students have not had the same pressures as their administration backed down and extended the deadline for payment of fees without expulsion to next September.

One more on the deficit list

FREDERICTON (CUP) — It's becoming an epidemic.

The University of New Brunswick (UNB) has added its name to the long list of Canadian universities facing a huge deficit this year and -or next.

The initial deficit for next year, using unpared budget submissions, will be $3,291,000, acting president Desmond Pacey told the university senate recently.

This calculation assumes the Higher Education Commission will make a grant using the planning figures established in a provincial report "Flexibility in the 70's", rather than actual enrolment figures.

The UNB student council has also announced it supports the university's bid for a revision of the grant formula.

New Brunswick students could not absorb the additional financial burden of a tuition fee hike, student council president Roy Neale said. "The question of accessibility to a university education must also be considered," he said.

The other alternative is to cut back university expenditures. But, Neale said, "everyone is now feeling the pinch; possibly they can cut back but the province must accept its responsibility in insuring the continuity of the UNB community and the quality of education in that sphere."

Call for tighter budget

TORONTO (CUP) — Ryerson can reduce its current $1.3 million deficit easily paring administrative costs before firing instructors, concludes a Ryerson faculty report released January 25.

A shortfall of 600 students last September created the debt and administrators announced that 38 instructors may be fired at the end of April.

The report challenged the simplistic assumption that when an educational institution is short of money it must cut back on teaching staff, increase the student teacher ratio, and increase the teaching load in order to "balance the books".

"With some 43 per cent of the budget being spent in other areas than direct teaching costs and direct academic administrative costs, it is possible to make substantial cuts without interfering with the established teaching and learning functions at Ryerson," concluded the 24 page study.

The study asked that cutback decisions which affect directly or indirectly the academic work at Ryerson be made only after full consultation with students, staff and faculty.

Further recommendations included formation of a committee to study ongoing trends and changes in the enrollment pattern, a review of Ryerson entrance requirements, and a provincial grant system to provide short term assistance for institutions making adjustments to the changing needs and demands of the community.

I.L. Horowitz

"A painful outcome"

by Janet Ritchie

The predominance of militarism in the countries of the Third World is, according to Irving L. Horowitz, a "very painful outcome" of their need to survive.

It is a disconcerting realization since he would prefer to see non-coercive measures effective in promoting social change. However, Horowitz notes that countries with single-party systems under military rule show consistently high rates of developmental output. This fact leads him to conclude that the "military and coercive nature of these countries is very effective since everything becomes a matter of life and death".

Militarism is, he says, a form of self-sacrifice which provides, through coercion, the high degree of efficiency and organization necessary for the rapid development of the Third World. This is essential to ensure its continued existence in a world dominated by the U.S. and the U.S.S.R.

Horowitz does not see this situation as the fault of the two powers but rather as a consequence of their existence. It has generally been assumed that the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. offered the only viable models for any country in the present-day world. However, the Third World has combined both models under a military apparatus and, in doing so, has proven to be a "tough system with great resiliency and with as many variations as are in capitalism and socialism".

It is not Horowitz' intention to advocate militarism on this basis. However, he sees no alternative to the Marcusian statement that productivity grows out of repression. Social change must come about "very slowly, painfully and tortuously".

Horowitz, who is professor of Sociology and Political Science at Rutgers, the State University, as well as author of a number of works in political sociology and Editor-in-Chief of Society magazine, is presenting a series of five seminars on the "Three Worlds of Development" - also the title of one of his books.

Faculty cutbacks

LONDON (CUP) — President of the University of Western Ontario, Dr. D.C. Williams, announced Wednesday that 82 faculty members will be leaving at the end of this academic year, and that most of the positions will remain vacant.

This is the first time since Williams became President in 1967 that the total complement of faculty will decrease. There are roughly 1,200 faculty members at Western. Of the 82, 61 have not been offered contracts for next year after having served a short-term or probationary contract. The rest of those leaving are either retiring or resigning.

The announcement was made at a hastily-assembled press conference in the president's office Wednesday afternoon, following a London Free Press story on dismissals in the Sociology Department Wednesday morning.

"Most of these people didn't expect renewals," Williams said, referring to the 61 without contracts.

He emphasized that only six positions were cut due to the enrolment shortfall and resulting budget cuts.

The largest drop overall will be in the Faculty of Social Sciences, which will lose 24 currently lecturing under limited term appointments.

Most of the faculty on limited

Contined on Page 6

AMITY 300 An International Festival

Seminars

Tues., Feb. 6 "The Ugly Canadian"

International Centre 3:30 p.m.

D'Arcy Martin and John Forbes of the International Research Centre of Toronto will lead a discussion on Canadian economic interests in the West Indies and Latin America.

Wed., Feb. 7 "Tanzanian Road to Socialism"

International Centre 3:00 p.m.

Presentation by a member of the Tanzanian High Commission.

Audio-Visual Slide Show on China

International Centre 8:00 p.m.

A colourful presentation of the art, history and architecture of China.

Thurs., Feb. 8 "Social & Economic Structures in the Philippines"

Dupuis Hall Auditorium 3:30 p.m.

Dr. Aprodicio Laquian and staff from the Philippine Embassy will discuss the martial law and reform programme of President Ferdinand Marcos.

QUEEN'S SKI CLUB

TREMBLANT

presents their legendary weekend:

MARCH 2,3,4

$40.00 - BUS, TOWS, FOOD, ACCOMOD.

TICKETS: Wed. Feb. 7

John Orr Room - 7:30 pm

1 ticket per person

Tickets for WHITEFACE trip this Saturday on Sale

Thur. Feb. 8 - 7:30 p - John Orr Room ($14.00)

Over 3,000 support McGill daycare occupation

MONTREAL (CUPI) — The occupation of a McGill University common room to back demands for a University Day Care Centre has entered its second week, with morale remaining high.

About 35 parents, children and student supporters took over the room on the eighth floor of the Leacock Building early Jan. 30, and vowed they would stay until the administration met their demands or the police arrested them.

More than 3,000 people have signed a petition supporting their demands, and many McGill groups have expressed solidarity and helped gather supplies.

Developments are now moving toward a rally Feb. 7 to mobilize support and bring the issue to a head.

On Jan. 26 the McGill Baby Care Coop was told to leave an unused language laboratory it had been using as an unofficial day care centre since last November.

On Feb. 1 the administration issued two oninous ultimatums to the occupiers. In a letter delivered by Sam Kingdon, Chairman of the Space Allocations Committee, the administration said the presence of children constituted a fire hazard, and they must leave by 7 pm. Others must leave by 11, because the building closed to the general public then, the ultimatum said.

After a brief meeting the occupiers decided to send the children home by the 7 pm deadline, but to remain themselves.

More than 40 people had flocked to join the occupation and despite Kingdon's threats, the university made no attempt to remove the occupiers by force.

The occupiers are demanding the university provide facilities and money for day care facilities for McGill students, faculty, and staff, and members of the surrounding community. They also demand the university agree to foot part of the bill with parents paying on a sliding scale based on ability to pay. They want immediate facilities for about 50 children.

Plans for a university-sponsored centre have been delayed by a delay in moving the Spanish Department out of a building slated for day care.

The occupying forces have established the "Alliance For Child Care" to support the efforts of the Baby Care Coop.

The McGill situation is similar to one at the University of Toronto, where a women's group occupied a university-owned house in August 1969 after the university had claimed it had no space available for day care. The university allowed the group to remain and establish a centre for children under the age of two, but by the spring the Provincial Government was demanding massive renovations to bring the centre up to provincial standards.

A dramatic 24-hour occupation of the university senate chamber in late March 1970 persuaded the administration to cough-up enough money to pay for renovations.

In April 1972, a similar group occupied an unused university building and turned it into a day care center for children over the age of two. The occupation is still continuing, with the university trying to find alternative accommodation for the group, before it turns the building into its own administration-run day care centre.

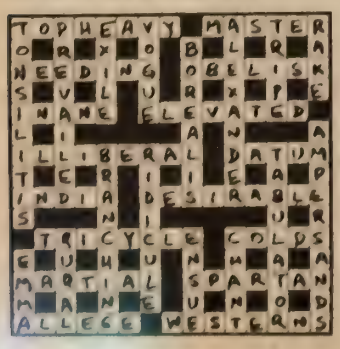
Faculty cutbacks

(continued from p-5)

term appointments were replacing faculty members recently granted leave. The remainder are graduate students or part-time appointments.

A limited term appointment does not imply any obligation for future employment whereas a probationary appointment does imply such a consideration if mutually agreeable to both the faculty member and the university.

Williams and University Vice-president Academic R. J. Rossiter, were careful not to say that all of these faculty members are being released because of the shortfall in enrolment.



Williams explained the necessity of cutbacks in faculty by saying: "We engaged faculty for an enrollment we do not have." Actually student enrollment at Western this year was roughly 1,000 less than predicted.

The teacher-student ratio, however, is projected to stay below the provincial average. Williams quoted the weighted average at Western as one faculty member for every 22 students, the provincial average as 1 to 24.

"Most of the faculty have recognized that the heyday is over," Williams said, and may not make high salary demands. "The government has set its priorities on other things. It looks like we're in for a prolonged period of belt-tightening."

Williams conceded that by reducing the number of lecturer positions, graduate students would go elsewhere, possibly to the United States, where graduate teaching positions were easier to obtain, and would possibly stay there.

crossword solution

Queen's University Music Department

PUBLIC LECTURE
"The Art of Berio and Berberian"
PROFESSOR ISTVAN ANHALT
Head
Music Department

An introduction to the recital
by Mezzo Soprano CATHY BERBERIAN
DUNNING AUDITORIUM — 8:00 — WEDNESDAY FEBRUARY '73

Queen's University Department of Drama

as you like it

February 12–17 Convocation Hall 8:30pm Tickets: Drama Dept. 547 6291

The ASUS CONSTITUTION is being revised. All those interested are invited to pick-up a copy of the draft constitution in the AMS Office. Comments and suggestions would be appreciated These should be should be left in the ASUS mailbox in the AMS Outer Office before February 20th. The final draft will be presented to the ASUS general meeting, March 1st for approval.

AMITY 300
VARIETY SHOW
Thur. Feb. 8 — 8:00 p.m.
Grant Hall
Admission $1.00
—Cultural Displays from Africa India, China, Middle East, West Indies Philippines and Canada
—International buffet cuisine
—Live Entertainment
— India and West Indies.

YOU'LL FIND JUST A LITTLE BIT OF HEAVEN at
S & R DISCOUNT DEPARTMENT STORE
CORNER PRINCESS AT ONTARIO
FREE PARKING
Heavenly Quality Brand Names
Heavenly Latest Styles
Hellish Low Prices
Everything for Everyone to Wear
And For Your Pad Too!
Clothing, Health and Beauty Aids, Toys, Sporting Goods, Housewares, Kitchen Gadgets, Etc, Etc, Etc, Famous Maker Jeans, Slacks, Jackets, Tops and Shirts for He and She at Special Low Prices.

1673

QUEEN'S TERCENTENARY OPEN HOUSE
Kingston, Ontario

by Helen Gignac

The latest word from the committee ...

The Queen's Tercentenary Open House '73 Committee is finalizing plans for the upcoming Open House, Saturday and Sunday, February 10th and 11th. Remember, Open House hours are: Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Sunday, 12 noon to 4 p.m.

With thirty-seven departments participating, Queen's Tercentenary Open House '73 promises something to suit every interest. Here are just a few feature events:

Results of the fourth year traffic labs, Kingston: an engineering display in the Civil Engineering Department.

Sculpture, silkscreens: an Art Education display.

Fox and Hounds: a simple board game in the Department of Computing and Information Sciences. The computer will reward any successful challengers.

Creative drama production by the Drama students.

"Spread of contagious diseases among school children in Kingston", a lecture, Saturday and Sunday, 1:30 p.m. in the Geography Department.

1972 Federal Election data Printouts: a Political Studies presentation.

Mock Corporate Head Office manned by Queen's Commerce students.

"How I found true happiness becoming a statistician and helping farmers store manure odorlessly"...and more: a lecture by Dr. Watts of the Mathematics Department.

Queen's guides will be distributing information brochures with a complete schedule of events, times, and locations.

In an attempt to provide the visiting public with a complete view of Queen's University, the following departments and clubs have joined in the Open House program: the Computing Centre will conduct tours; Douglas Library will display some of the earliest books in the Queen's library; the Registrar's Office will be open to receive secondary school students and to distribute information; the Agnes Etherington exhibition during Open House will focus on early Canadian painting, as well as presenting Kurt Kranz, "Retrospective Bauhaus and Today"; CFRC (Queen's radio) studio will be open to the public during its broadcast hours beginning at 12 noon; Pollution Probe personnel will be on hand to distribute literature and answer questions.

The underlying theme to Queen's Tercentenary Open House '73 is "a student's eye-view of university." Central to this theme are 15 minute mini-lectures presented on the hour and half-hour in most all departments. These are pithy, topical lectures presented with the idea of giving the public an insight to the various disciplines. For the public to benefit the most from these mini-lectures, the Queen's Tercentenary Open House '73 Committee has prepared a "mini-calendar" containing details of the lectures and the focus of each presentation. A host of films, slides, displays, and demonstrations are planned around the Open House theme.

In sum, Queen's Tercentenary Open House '73 offers an interesting and informative visit to Queen's University. Here is a chance for Queen's Alumni to re-acquaint themselves to the vast, multi-faceted university that Queen's has become; a chance for the people of Kingston and the surrounding area to experience the community-life evolving amidst the larger community of Kingston, to join Queen's students and a staff in celecration of Kingston's 300th birthday; moreover, a chance for secondary school students to preview university life.

The viewing public is welcome to linger over coffee with students and staff. Most departments plan to serve free coffee and donuts. Meals will be available in the Student's Memorial Union and in residence cafeterias. CKLC Kingston will be broadcasting remote from campus locations on Saturday from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Guides and hosts stationed throughout the campus will direct people and answer any questions.

The Queen's TercentenaryOpen House '73 committeewelcome the opportunity to open doors to Kingston and out-of-town guests in celebration of Kingston's Tercentenary. Come see us!

COME – HEAR – MEET

QUEEN'S HILLEL PRESENTS

PROF. & MRS.
AVROM MICHAEL HASOFER

of Sydney, Australia, presently visiting Prof. of Mathematics, M.I.T., Boston, Mass.

Prof. Hasofer will speak on:

"CHASSIDISM – THE FUSION OF THE MYSTICAL AND RATIONAL"

FEB Feb. 6th, 8.30 p.m., 26 Barrie St. All Welcome

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO
SUMMER PROGRAMMES
IN EUROPE

In addition to the regular Summer Session, the Division of University Extension is offering degree courses in Europe, July 4 – August 14 as follows:

Nice, France/English, French
Siena, Italy/Fine Art, Italian
Trier, Germany/German, History

Cost? Approximately $750 – $800 (includes round trip, tuition for one course, room and board).

Further information:

Summer Programmes in Europe
University of Toronto
Division of University Extension
119 St. George Street
Toronto, Ontario
M5S 1A9

editorial

Acclamations: why so many?

Last week at least thirty positions were acclaimed in the faculty society elections. This phenomenon has been increasingly evident in the past few years.

Queen's is suffering from a social disease called political complacency. The fault does not lie entirely with the student body, however. In fact, the blame must be laid at the feet of our student government.

Some people drag out the word "apathy" whenever student disinterest in noticeable. But this six letter word is meaningless in terms of the situation at Queen's. Students here are involved in a variety of activities. In fact, we would estimate that political heavies are really only a loud minority group compared with the number of jocks and bridge players on campus.

A campus comment survey last week indicated that students don't know what their student government does. It has acted in a vacuum dispensing services and discussing a few campus issues without explaining to its constituents what it is doing. Students will never feel inclined to show interest in student government unless it begins to advertise its functions.

The AMS and faculty societies should tell the campus what services and activities they are sponsoring rather than taking for granted that it is already known. Similarly, representatives should spark interest in student government by holding regular meetings with their constituents.

It is the responsibility of students in political positions to interest the campus in university affairs.

Friday's Ed. questioned

Dear Editor:

It is my opinion that you have, in your editorial in Fridays Journal (volume 100 number 35), acted without thought or responsibility.

As editor of a newspaper you are entrusted with the task of printing unbiased, factual news. As editor of a student newspaper your task is made more difficult because it entails remaining neutral even when your close personal ties are involved.

I am questioning in my mind just who you think you are. What gives you the right as editor of Journal to instruct the student body politically.

Are you caught up with the feeling that your position is one of importance. In reality you are no more than a wild-eyed student who, with poor results, is attemtping to publish a two bit imitation of a newspaper.

May I say you impress me as someone who is caught up in their self importance.

What annoys me most is that my non-academic fees are being used to support your personal vendetta.

Your article is a conglomerate of lies and unsubstantiated facts, which cannot be clarified nor proven. Your personal assessment of all the candidates is uninformative and poorly compiled.

I have worked with all the candidates and I realize their separate potentials, their failures and their successes. The generalizations you have presented to the student body are libelous.

May I say that I have been asked to work on both campaigns. I refused to make a public stand because I have friends on both sides. As an editor and a person you should have done the same.

A retraction at this time is useless. You have made a severe error in judgement and as in the case of a murderer you should be punished.

Miss Grass, I have one word of advice you should weigh heavily - resign.

Edward W. Bogle
AMS rep.
Treasurer-elect
Engineering Society

Ed. NOTE: In the aforementioned editorial, we like many others in any election campaign, suggested that students vote for a particular team. We didn't, and obviously cannot, TELL anyone how to vote.

Election protocol

Dear Editor:

I cannot express in words the disgust I fell toward the Journal due to your recent editorial in support of an AMS presidential team.

Last week the Journal broke all election protocol by listing the teams, not in alphabetical order as is required, but in order of personal preference. The Journal has forgotten its special and influential role in campus here. Its monopoly on credible campus comment puts it in a position where it's way behind any one candidate could elect him. In recent times it has not endorsed any candidate in any student election. This was a fair and ethical practice.

I must say the timing the staff used was perfect. They have succeeded in creating a situation where a retraction or adverse student opinion will have little effect.

I now serve notice to any future "political heavy" - that God now sits behind a type-writer in the heart of the union; all candidates approach with humility and reverance.

Don Krestel

letters

Journal, is it up against a wall?

Dear Editor:

I consider your editorial "Altogether, Whitham-Sugar are the stronger team" in last Friday's Journal to be the most irresponsible piece of student journalism I have ever read. What respect I had for the Journal no longer exists. Your editorial infurated me, not only because it was bad journalism and poorly written, but because it was in bad taste.

As editor of a newspaper you have a responsibility to your readers of maintaining a sense of fair play. An editorial which carries an opinion on such an important issue should be well substantiated. Off the cuff statements such as, "Bruce Trotter? He is external (sic) affairs commission of the AMS--an unspectacular role at best" or "Steve Sugar? He's the real administrator among the four . . ." without elaboration are meaningless and in the context used, slanderous. If you are going to support or knock someone I suggest you list the reasons why. If you refer to something give the whole story. To print a statement like, " . . .the issues are not the broad ones faced by the AMS." when referring to Steve Brereton tells me nothing of the issues you refer to. Or when you refer to Lyn Whitham, "You've seen what she did on the single biggest issue.," you tell me nothing. What in fact did she do. How successful was it. Lets be fair; if you want to rate a candidate you should give both pro's and con's.

You have overstepped your editorial perogative by endorsing a set of candidates. A newspaper should not tell its readership how to vote. It should explain the issues and the priorities but leave the decision to the electorate. To endorse a set of candidates without substantiating why is insane. I credited you with more intelligence and conjugation of your responsibilty to your respectability.

If I ever printed such a editorial I would expect to be impeached. The comment on your front page is adequate -- You are up against the wall.

Kevin Van Koughnett
Editor of the Golden Words

Editors right to express an opinion

Dear Editor:

This campus is not accustomed to the endorsement of candidates in the Journal, and it was to be expected that Friday's editorail which supported Whitham-Sugar would be severely criticized. But that criticism has gone beyond disagreement with the Journal's stand. A large number of students are attempting to impeach the editor on the basis of her lack of neutrality. This type of action must not occur.

An editorial is, by definition, "an article in a newspaper or magazine giving the editor's views or those of the person or persons in control of the paper." While we may not always agree with the editor's views, it is clearly her right to print them. We must not attempt to oust an editor simply on the basis of our disagreement. A newspaper can manipulate opinion quite effectively under the guise of objective reporting. The Journal preferred to print a clearly expressed point of view that was clearly labelled "editorial". The Journal has informed us of its bias. This action does not warrant impeachment. An impeachment would be a devasting blow to the right of expression. We therefore support the editor fully in this matter and ask all students to condemn the effort to impeach her.

Sincerely,
Kiloran German
Kathy Turner
Eleanor Crowder

Fee strike demands solidarity

Dear Editor:

It has come to my attention that many people on this campus are indecisive about whether or not they should withhold the second installment of their tuition fees. It is my intention to offer the student body a more accurate awareness of the political and moral significance of the action; an awareness that seems to be sadly lacking in most students.

During the Christmas holidays, I was fortunate to read an article in the Toronto Daily Star by McNaught, a professor of history at the University of Toronto. The jest of the article was that the Premier of this province seems to be a northern George Wallace because he has shown a disdian for the intelligence of the public. McNaught also pointed out that the Conservative tradition in the past had been concerned with cultivating excellence.

He criticised Ontario Conservatism for having degenerated into a kind of "businessman's socialism". He cited the example of Ontario Hydro, a publicly-owned establishment, giving contracts to private firms to perform tasks that could have been done more cheaply under the old system. The concern for excellence which characterized past Conservative Governments seems to have fallen by the wayside because of the profit motive.

It is in this light that the decision of the Davis Government to cutback spending on hospitals and education can best be understood. Last fall the government threatened that it would close the universities down before yeilding to the pressure of a student fee strike. I'm convinced that this was a bluff.

Students are busy people. Before they will march on the streets, occupy buildings, or form a picket line, they must get terribly upset about something. But sooner or later every student must come to the realization that there is such a thing as politics and decide where he or she stands. The Davis Government has chosen to ignore us and has refused to reveal its policy for next year. The most effective and sensible way to get the government to take notice of our demands is to withhold fees.

Certain universities have adopted Mickey Mouse tactics to coerce the students into paying their fees. Giving OSAP grants only on the condition that the student will not take part in the strike is one example. We are fortunate enough to have a senisble administration at Queen's. Dr. Deutsch has stated that the administration will take no punitive action against students who participate in the strike.

I have yet to hear a professor speak out against withholding fees. It would appear that the interests of the administration and staff and the students are homogeneous. In the January 30 edition of the paper, in a letter entitled "What's the Point?", the author made the implication that to withhold fees is tantamount to "hurting the innocent university." This is contemptable nonsense, if anyone is "hurting the innocent university," it is the Davis government.

If the fee strike is to be effective, the student body must show some solidarity.If we can do this, then the government will think before it raises the loan ceiling or the cost of tuition again. The logical outcome of the policy that the Davis Government has embarked on, is that higher education will become less and less accessible to the lower income strata of society.

Some people think that they are being apolitical by not taking part in the fee strike. This university has a hang-up about 'radicalism'. Shortly after he was elected, the new rector was written about in an article entitled "I'm Not a Radical". The point is that not to take part in the strike is to support and concur with the policy that the Davis Government has embarked upon. If there is no significant protest, why shouldn't the government raise the loan ceiling again?

The issue at stake here is whether the universities are going to become institutions for the elite or not. I believe that academic ability and performance should be the only criteria for admission to university. If that makes me a radical, then there are an awful lot of radicals in our universities. It is a slogan of democracy that people get the kind of government they deserve. If we don't act now, we're going to get it, and we're going to get what we deserve.

Wolfgang Gamble

Ed: a welcome relief

Dear Editor:

It was indeed refreshing to read in the Feb. 2 Journal an analysis of current AMS Presidential campaign issues which followed through to the logical conclusion of a statement by the Editorial Board supporting one team of candidates.

This forthright expression of opinion was a welcome relief from the immature and cowardly approach used by some campus publications in other years in writing subtly biased "articles" about the candidates. One recent example of this was the anti-Bradley campaign last year which stooped to facial jig-saw puzzles and snide column fillers.

Candidate preferences are expressed editorially by nearly every newspaper whether in one-newspaper towns or many-newspaper towns. Since viable, alternate papers have existed on campus for years a visible Journal editorial policy is long overdue.

Mr. Van Koughnett et al's strident criticism of stating one's opinions clearly suggests that their main complaint is they didn't think of it first!

Doug Pritchard

Endorsement unethical

Dear Editor,

We disagree in principle with the editorial in Friday's Journal supporting Lyn Whitham and Steve Sugar. We intend this to be a criticism of the editorial itself and are not concerned whatsoever with the candidates.

The people involved in writing this editorial have taken unethical advantage of their positions as staff of the official AMS newspaper. With this editorial they are hoping to influence the outcome of the upcoming election. Although it was the opinion of only a small number of people, their opinion could carry heavy weight with the many students who have little or no information on which to make a choice. We do not wish to imply that this editorial will sway a great number of voters but rather that a political statement of this kind could affect the outcome of the election. The question is, "Should the Journal editor be allowed to express her personal endorsement of an AMS presidential candidate, an endorsement which could decide the election? In other words should one person on campus have the potential power to affect such an important decision? Furthermore, "Should the editor be allowed to make statements about candidates such as, - an unspectacular role at best or he's the administrator of the four with little or no qualification."

Finally, we feel that the Journal has prejudiced the election in favour of one candidate. In this editorial the Journal has not given information on what choice to make but has made the choice itself. If this type of journalism is condoned the Journal ceases to be an information medium but rather a political power. We invite further views on this issue whether personally or as letters to the editor.

Bob Marien
Jock Devonshire

Congrats to the Journal

To the Editor:

Congratulations to the senior Journal staff for tugging at the sleeves of the student body. I fully agree that as a responsible voice of the campus, it is up to the student paper to take definite stands on "issues which will shape Queen's life over several or many years." Students must know if the candidates in elections have foresight, integrity, and administrative abilities. Most of us - the "great unwashed" - only get to know the candidates for a brief time, through their speeches and from interviews printed in the Journal. However, we never really know to what extent a candidate's laurels are a true indication of his or her worth as a leader. I think that the editorial in Friday's (Feb. 2) Journal which endorsed Whitham and Sugar as the stronger team is a tremendous assistance in letting us see beyond the images which political figures present, and helping us to make the right decision in the election.

Marney Cousins

A real editorial, its about time

Dear Editor,

Well it's about time!

Finally after 3½ years of wishy washy journalism the editor of the Queen's Journal has written a real editorial. For too long the Journal has been a news bulletin, a roster of events with the odd cryptic comment about the politics of the university.

A bland newspaper insults my intelligence. But now you have taken a stand. Your outspokenness will encourage students in future to blatanly raise other contentious issues. Friday's editorial challenged me to think about the election, not just read about it.

I hope this is an indication of things to come.

Yours truly
Jennifer Duncan
Arts '73

Journalistic trash in editorial

Dear Editor;

I find it difficult to believe that a "group session of senior Journal staff" could have written the editorial which appeared in last Friday's edition. (Pg. 9: "Altogether Whitham and Sugar are the stronger team".) It seems incredible to me that your staff would see fit to print such a piece of journalistic trash.

Very few people would dispute your early points concerning the A.M.S. However after devoting the greater part of your editorial to this area, you then proceeded to summarize the presidential and vice-presidential candidates in four or five paragraphs.

These paragraphs had to be the best example of irresponsible and oversimplistic editorializing I have ever seen. You begin with Bruce Trotter, a nice succinct four line summary. Your statement that his role was "unspectacular" could be interpreted two ways; try and be more explicit in the future.

Steve Brereton gets the same treatment; you don't even mention the fact that he sits on the AMS because of his position with the IRC.

Steve Sugar gets a pat on the back for his role as head of the concert committee; "a real administrator." Honestly now, when was the last time you heard a good comment on the concert committee? If his work in this area is indicative of his potential (or lack of it) the AMS would be better off without his services next year.

At this point in the editorial I was on the verge of tearing it up; but there was more to come.

Lyn Whitham's strong point is not the "educational political field," it is getting her name in the headlines. Granted this is not her fault. Ken Wong's resignation got her much of the recognition after he had done most of the work on the fee referendum. However, since that time she has been responsible for the fee withholding campaign, and early reports would indicate at least a partial if not a total failure in the withholding campaign.

If these are not the facts, please correct me, but I feel they provide a more realistic assessment than your editorial did.

However the damage may have been done. Very few people know any of the candidates personally; they will base their decision solely on your editorial. Perhaps in the future the Journal should stick to objective reporting rather than irresponsible and erroneous editorializing.

Yours Sincerely,
John Ronson

McArthur students overlooked

Dear Editor,

It must be coincidental, I presume, that International Week as well as Queen's contribution towards Tercentenary festivities should fall at the same time as the Faculty of Education Teaching Round. Seven hundred odd students won't be able to participate in one way or another in these events. That's OK I suppose for they would not be missed since they are so insignificant anyways. I wonder if the rest of the campus knows anything about practice teaching or what goes on around this time. Maybe the Journal could list the dates of the practice teaching round in its calendar of events.

Anyway who cares.

Teach '73

N.B. In the present fee withholding drama a lot of speeches are being made about the $100 fee hike and the raising of the loan portion in OSAP to $800, but little or no mention is made of the student teacher's plight or even the nurses'. Student teachers, prior to the present academic year, received a $500 award. However this was removed and in addition fees went up $100. So that technically fees for faculty of Education students went up by $585. The nurses and graduate students suffered an even greater increase. Don't these people's plight deserve some mention, even if it is token.

Beaver not using Kraft

Kraft Boycott Committee,
c-o Mr. Richard Rynasko,
96 Division Street,
Kingston, Ontario.

Dear Sir:

In response to your letter of January 9th, I should like to inform you of the fact that we have not used any Kraft products for several years now.

Yours truly
E. McKee,
Food Service Director,
Beaver Food Service Associates Limited

Queen's Journal

Vol. 100, No. 36
Tues., Feb. 6, 1973
Queen's University at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Patricia Devitt
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National desk: Bob Mutrie
Photography: Peter Boag

Special thanks to photog Gian Eggar, Susan who did CUP (again,) Jane who types a little, Peter for Monday morning, and dear dependible Helen. Also REAL thanks to Heather, Lee, Pete, and Susie for Thursday nite.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

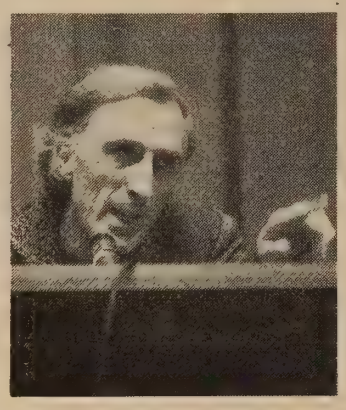
Vanier assails man's cycle of violence

by Steven Winnett

Jean Vanier offered some thoughts on violence and non-violence to an overflow audience in McArthur Auditorium on Friday morning. His listeners followed his forceful words with absolute attention.

He noted that "we live in a world where violence is rampant." When violence explodes, it's the product of years of suffering, hate and anguish. A cease-fire has happily been called in Vietnam, but "cease-fires don't come quickly in the hearts of people." What impresses is the quantity of violence in the world, be it in Bangladesh or New York or Kingston. In North America, we are developing "the locked-door civilization" of "frightened people, frightened of one another."

Here in Kingston, in the penitentiaries, can be found the men and women who are the fruits of a more or less violent civilization - and in prison, "we put men into situations which are more or less violent." Vanier then contrasted "the violence of electronic surveillance" with the more humane conditions he had found in an Indian prison.



He spoke of his own work, in France, India and Canada: "I have the privilege to live with men and women who themselves can at moments be violent." Here are the ones who have been rejected by society.

One of the prime reasons for violence is anguish, "a strange and difficult to describe reality." Anguish is a physical feeling which engenders high nervousness and either prevents eating or causes over-eating, since it is rested in the solar plexus, near the stomach. Sometimes the only recourse is drink, as anguish becomes so intolerable that one tries to quench it.

His voice rising in emphasis, Vanier further refined his definition of anguish: "It is the feeling of being rejected pushed to an extreme. It is the feeling of not being loved, when it comes down to the child." This is a terrible feeling, especially in a child who is handicapped in some way. The parents, deeply wounded by this disease, become aware that this child will never be a "success." In a civilization like ours the highest value has become "success," i.e. lots of money, many friends, a car, a home. "This strange and magic word, is probably one of the greatest causes of evil in our time, for so many are being wounded in the name of the success of another."

It is a terrible thing for a tiny child to feel he is not loved, not wanted. And he knows, for the child of a few months old is conscious, by a non-verbal reality which comes from the warmth of a mother's body, whether he is loved or not. We tend not to notice "the extra-ordinary quality of hands." If you stick your hand into a hive, the bee will sense the fear in your hand; in the same way a child can sense fear, hatred, disgust, rejection - or love. What is love? It is holding the child in a certain way, which says, "You are a person, called to grow to be a free person." If a child feels he is not loved, his whole digestive system will shrivel up.

We should watch mothers feeding their children. There can be a whole movement of joy, of relaxation, around feeding. Or there can be tension.

Vanier recalled a fifteen-year-old girl in a Paris hospital, who was bottled up inside herself, her senses refusing to respond. The only thing that created a reaction was when she was fed. A doctor who fed her was able to break through to her, such was the power of "food linked to a person who is tending toward her with gestures that show he cares." There must be one person only here, not several. This act of feeding is like playing with a child: "it signifies we are prepared to waste time." Play, not the alphabet, is communication to the child, one says, "I love you," through the medium of the teddy bear. So it is with feeding. This Paris girl, through the reality of food and the doctor who fed her, had broken out of the barrier of her depression. Tragically, the doctor did not see her anymore, and so she retreated even more into herself. Vanier labelled this "a treason, the kiss of Judas - to kiss, and at the same moment to kill." He compared this with experiments on dying people which are performed on the American continent. It is like the Dale Carnegie smile of confidence: "the utilization of an affectivity in our being to kill, wound, possess."

There is a danger that someone in depression will pull you down too. It should not always be a one-to-one relationship. Gradually the child should open up to those to whom the mother introduces to him, so that he can learn to fear none, and love all, including the as yet unborn child in the womb, for, "in him is all the wealth of the human person."

For the child, hell is rejection. "The suffering is so great - it leaves deep, deep scars." Either he will be a person closed in on himself, or a highly violent person, wanting to wound. Vanier recalled a discussion between a Montreal prison chaplain and some inmates on evil. One prisoner said, "I don't know what evil is, all I know is I like doing evil. "Vanier said of this man's remark, "You can always tell when people are speaking from the head, and when from the solar plexus: it's experience which engenders authority." This is how you know. Vanier referred to the First Epistle of John: "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of Life."

When this prisoner, who liked doing evil, told the chaplain his life-story, it was "a yelling-out of suffering." The Chaplain told the inmate, "When I listen to you, I hear, through your words, that you're thirsting for love."

We have to be aware, said Vanier, that the moment of explosion is a therapeutic moment- "otherwise one remains in a superficial realm." We have to learn how to accept this violence. It is only when a rejected man discovers that he is an important person, a person to be loved, that he can begin to be healed.

He spoke of the slums of Cleveland, of the faces of hatred and violence. One knows why there is this violence. These men, suppressed and rejected, have been taught to hate themselves. Their violence is but the answer to that other form of violence, despisal. The same kind of violence is found when we talk about handicapped people as being on the other side of "normality". The "normal" adult is not usually happy, when contrasted with the child: "The sign of adulthood is sadness."

Sometimes, Vanier said, people come up to him and say, of his work, "How devoted you are!" His reply; "You feel like saying, Merde!" Their statement implies that to live with people like that you have to be super-human, because they are not "normal." But this normality is a strange reality. How many "normal" people, as contrasted with goldfish and cows, can live together in peace? "People don't know the laws of community. We teach them math and history- but not how to live together."

Politics? Demonstrations? For Vanier, there is no point in talking about Vietnam "unless you know how to open yourself up to the enemy in front of you, in your own home." You can run away, hide, or be aggressive, when confronted with an enemy. Or, one can grow, open one's heart. The sign of maturity is to love an enemy, "to really love him, to want him to be healed."

Most of the time we reject those who hurt us. This perpetuates the present state of affairs, "this cycle of aggressivity, this cycle of hatred." But there can also be "a cycle of gratuity", when someone "flowers forth with the perfume of gratuity."

He has seen this other cycle in action in Calcutta, with its "beauty and poverty, the dignity, the peace of the East", in the sight of people lying together on the ground, sharing warmth and bread. On his way to the airport there, he saw a leper by the side of the road. A child came up to the leper, holding an orange. He gave the leper half the orange. This, said Vanier, was the cycle of gratuity, here was "the poverty and tenderness of Calcutta." In this action could be seen all the beauty of the child- "he gave more in that half an orange than if someone else had given great riches."

So, Vanier concluded, man has a choice. This world of violence merely engenders violence. Or, man can leave behind this mythical world of "success", and change his civilization from "one of competition to one of openness to the weak. The human heart is a fantastic reality. Look at the amazing reality of the child giving the orange. The beauty is to give something which is your life, not something superficial."

Hahiff

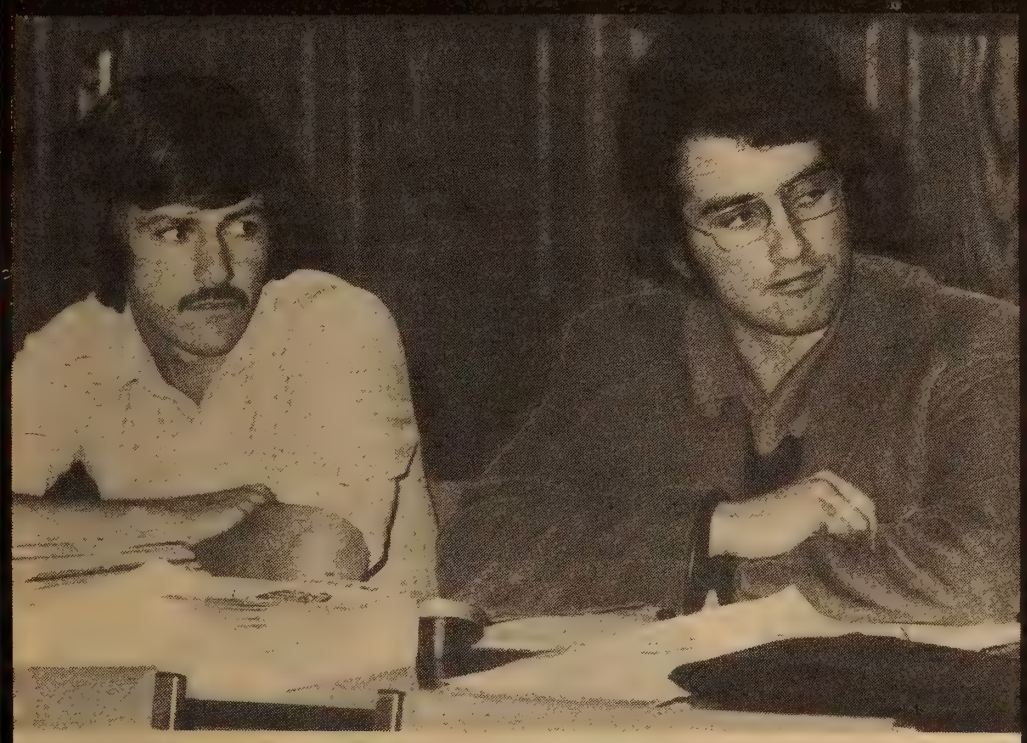
"The beauty is to give something of your life."

"How devoted you are!" "Merde!"

And what of the future?

A questioner afterwards asked Vanier, "What hope is there for the future?"

Vanier replied, "I believe in the capacity of people to open up. Many young people are moving away from the structures of success, but often they don't have structured personalities." He spoke of his double hope; people must believe in, love, and commit themselves to people, and, most importantly, "Man is not alone."



"One of the great anguishes of our civilization is our fear of death, which we cover up. We think we've made an immortal civilization- but it's very mortal. It's often when man enters into those stages of suffering which come closest to despair that he finally discovers hope." 'God's own people' are not necessarily a technocratic, intellectual, Coca-Cola group. Man has to find something deeper than knowledge. There is a force called God, if we are ready to open ourselves to it. A closeness to death (by which I mean mental death) can lead to an amazing rediscovery that this mortal body of ours is not called to death, but, deeper than that, to life.

"The laws of love imply that we die to egotism and live to compassion."

Queen's

Journal Election Section

Wherein you will find platforms of AMS and faculty candidates

You wouldn't want these two again ...look inside for replacements

Two money referenda on AMS ballot

Golden Words

On the AMS election ballot there is a referendum concerning Golden Words. The referendum is as follows, "Shall the AMS student activity fee be raised by 25c to help finance the publication of Golden Words?"

We consider the Golden Words to be a complimentry alternative to the Journal. You have seen and read our paper and know what kind of paper we are. Our editorial policy is simply to be an open forum of student opinion and ideas. Our topics are on subjects of interest to students and concern every aspect of Queen's life. We have dealt with campus politics, peoples views on Orientation, such moral issues as suicide and death and numerous other topics. We consider the holding of opinions to be a vital part of the education process and shall continue to do so.

We ask your support because without it we will be forced to reduce production and perhaps even cease publication. The money generated by the referendum will be used to increase circulation from the present 5500 to 7500. The major portion of the revenue will be used to supplement our production needs. In the past the Dean's office of the Faculty of Applied Science has provided a generous grant which has allowed Golden Words to exist. Due to financial cutbacks they can no longer provide the grant. The referendum will provide the money we need to remain publishing and also allow us to increase circulation to provide better service to the Queen's community.

Golden Words has a place at Queen's. Please vote yes on the Golden Words referendum.Our future rests with you.

Kevin Van Koughnett
Editor, Queen's Golden Words

Tricolor

In addition to the Golden Words referendum, there will be a referendum on the financing of the Tricolor yearbook.

At present Tricolor receives student support in two ways - every student pays $4.00 (unless he opts out) and the faculty societies (ASUS, Eng, Soc, etc) pay $1.50 for every grad photo from their society included.

In recent years, a number of the faculty societies have been unhappy with this $1.50 levy as it can amount to quite a bit in a large society (last year ASUS paid over $1000.00). The proposal on the ballot is to eliminate the $1.50 charge to the societies, and to increase the student levy to $4.50. The opt-out provision will remain in effect whether the referdum passes or fails. Tricolor will receive about the same revenue regardless of the outcome of the vote.

Faculty, AMS Elections

Again this year, there will be a multi-day, multi-faculty election period this week. Voting for AMS president and for executive positions in ASUS, EngSoc, GSS, and Commerce, Nursing Science, Rehab, and Aesculapian Societies will take place tomorrow and Thursday. In addition, there will be two referenda on the AMS ballot, concerning the financing of Tricolor and Golden Words. Ballots for all the elections except Rehab and Meds will be placed at the various polls on campus during the two day period. (ASUS and Commerce ballots will not be available in the meal lines). You must have your student (library) card to vote.

POLLS WILL BE OPEN AS FOLLOWS

Wednesday, February 7

Union	10:30 - 6:30
Library	10:30 - 9:30
Stirling Hall	10:30 - 3:30
Humphrey Hall	10:30 - 3:30
Kingston Hall	10:30 - 3:30
Watson Hall	10:30 - 3:30
Dupuis Hall	10:30 - 3:30
Dunning Hall	10:30 - 3:30
Matheson Room (KGH)	11:15 - 12:45
Ban Righ Cafeteria	4:45 - 6:15
Brockington Cafeteria	4:45 - 6:15
Leonard Cafeteria	4:45 - 6:15

Thursday, February 8

Union	10:30 - 6:30
Library	10:30 - 6:30
Stirling Hall	10:30 -3:30
Humphrey Hall	10:30 - 3:30
Kingston Hall	10:30 - 3:30
Earl Hall	10:30 - 3:30
Ellis Hall	10:30 - 3:30
Summerhill	10:30 - 3:30
MacDonald Hall	11:30- 2:30
Ban Righ Cafeteria	4:45 - 6:15
Brockington Cafeteria	4:45 - 6:15
Leonard Cafeteria	4:45 - 6:15
Elrond College	4:00 -6:00

STEVE BRERETON President

Steve Brereton

"A NEW ATTITUDE"

Bruce Trotter

BRUCE TROTTER Vice President

THE ELECTION QUIZ

Instructions: Answer each question TRUE or FALSE. Attempt all questions; there is no penalty for wrong answers. Good luck!

1. Internal Affairs Commissioner Bruce Trotter is an ASUS Representative on Outer Council.

2. The study on restructuring should be limited only to the size and composition of Outer Council.

3. Increased bureacracy is not the answer to the problems of the AMS.

4. The team of Brereton-Trotter is running as "a balanced team with abilities, experience and past performance in different but complimentary areas".

5. Issues of mutual concern to University students across Canada could be discussed at a Queen's hosted conference.

6. The Belleville Cheese Riots are of great social and historical significance.

7. An Information Bank would make the AMS more accessible to the students.

8. One goal of the Education Commission should be to make students aware of "the endemic problems of the human condition".

9. Such relavent issues as world poverty, pollution, and racial conflict could be discussed in a series of teach-ins.

10. Efforts should be made in gaining Queen's representation on the OFS Executive.

11. Subsidized bus transportation would lessen the isolation of students living on the West Campus.

12. Rufus T. Firefly is a candidate for the Presidency of the Alma Mater Society.

13. The Chairman of IRC is a voting member of the AMS Outer Council.

14. The AMS should examine the critical problem of Health Services on campus.

15. The main purpose of NUS is to supplement the educational efforts of the AMS.

16. The number of cars on campus should be limited.

17. Queen's should consider offering more co-educational residences.

18. The AMS should support taxing Queen's property at its full taxation value.

19. There is not an information clearing house on all rentable accommodation for students in Kingston.

20. The OFS should establish a permanent liason committee with the Ontario Federation of Labour to deal with all issues of mutual interest.

21. SVB has a positive effect on Queen's-City relations.

22. We support, in principle, keeping the University Centre within the Union-University-Clergy-Division block.

23. Our campaign slogan is "Not Insane or Anything Else You Want Us to Be".

24. Listening to other people's opinions is one necessary quality of an AMS President.

25. QEA books all performers for concerts at Queen's.

26. The "Alma Mater Matter" could be resurected and published in the Journal or Golden Words.

27. A study should be undertaken to determine the feasibility of a University Ave. pedestrian Mall.

28. A supervised bicycle parking lot would ease the problem of theft.

29. QSA (Queen's Student Agencies) is the business arm of the AMS which provides employment for students and provides services for Queen's and Kingston residents.

30. Coffee served in the Union is better than the soup served in Lower Ban Righ at lunch.

31. Part-time students should have adequate representation on Outer Council.

32. The Education Commission could conduct a campus-wide poll to determine campus views, interests and ideas.

33. Before we instigate more committees of the AMS, we should first examine existing structures and see if they can be used more efficiently.

34. Participation on AMS committees should include but not be restricted to AMS Outer Council members.

35. The success of the AMS does not merely depend on the efforts of the President and Vice-President, it depends largely on the efforts of Outer Council and the campus-at-large.

36. All members of the AMS are eligible to vote in the Presidential election upon presentation of their green student card.

Our purpose is to strengthen the educational and political potential of the Alma Mater Society so that this aspect is as dynamic and important to students as its services. The AMS must be both responsive and responsible to students. It must lead in gathering and articulating student opinion on subjects from the quality of education to the financing of it. In addition, the AMS must gather ideas on other matters affecting the life of students such as the university centre and housing.

However, we also intend to operate activities and services at maximum efficiency, considering that the performance of the AMS is most important. We can work within the existing structures by making better use of the information and resources available to us now.

We have a balanced team in that we both represent these two important functions of student government with abilities, experience, and past performance.

The following are some recommendations and ideas for you to consider. We can make the AMS work for you.

Services

The services available through the AMS and the university must be effectively publicized so that students may receive their benefits. A student-self type service should be established where typewriters are available for general student use.

Ontario Federation of Students

The Ontario Federation of Students will be encouraged to undertake an extensive study of student aid for presentation to the provincial government. Queen's representatives will continue to lead the Federation in responsible action.

Senate

Communications between Senate and the AMS will be improved in order to create more informed discussion, thus assisting in the formation of unified student voice in the university governing bodies. One specific student goal to work for is greater academic flexibility, perhaps through the easy transfer of credits between faculties.

Housing

We propose to improve the housing situation for students through the dissemination of information on landlord and tenant rights and responsibilities, the publication of landlord lists and recommended landlord lists; the production of an off-campus housing booklet. Greater use can be made of the University Housing Service in Clark Hall and other agencies in helping students locate off-campus accommodation.

Education Commission

To stimulate the study and discussion of important educational issues, we will revive the long-term planning committee of the Education Commission. This committee will study the questions of student aid, tenure, and student representation on governing bodies.

The short run function of the Education Commission will include educational, social, and cultural activities will be expanded.

Kingston and Queen's

We seek to improve relations between the city and University through regular meetings with the mayor and other municipal officials, and mutual participation in activities designed to produce greater student involvement in communicty affairs.

Lyn Whitham and Steve Sugar

Steve Sugar

for AMS Vice-president

- Philosophy student
- Chairman, AMS Concert Committee
- Member, AMS Housing Committee
- Co-author of housing handbook

Lyn Whitham

for AMS President

- History and English student
- AMS External Affairs Commissioner
- Co-ordinator of fee withholding
- Chief Queen's delegate to OFS
- Artsci AMS representative

A realistic Approach

Whitham Lyn Sugar Steve	X

Graduate Student Society

President

Fraser Dunford
Acclaimed

Vice-pres.

Bob Maloney
Acclaimed

Secretary

Jennifer Phillips
Acclaimed

Joint Statement

The Graduate Students Society speaks for the graduate students at Queen's on two fronts: inside the university, to faculty, administration and other students; and outside the university to other universities, governments and the city itself.

It is the relationship between grads and the university that interests us most. In many ways we know little about this relationship. Recently the GSS completed a study on graduate student income, and the GSS is currently conducting a study on the relationship between the grad as a teaching assistant and his department, so we are learning more and more. We propose to take a very intensive look at the function of grads in this university community. These studies will reveal areas which can be improved, yielding benefits both to ourselves and to the university, and will also reveal strengths which we must take care not to destroy. The studies will range from the pragmatic (should grads receive letters of support promising so much financial support for the next year?) to the philosophical (what should the relationship between grads and faculty be? between grads and undergrads? and how we achieve it?). Such work will require the assistance of many interested persons.

An emphasis on the university does not mean we would neglect the situation outside. We are currently engaged in a bitter struggle with the provincial government, a struggle which we view not as students protesting a fee increase, but as a battle in the larger war of who controls higher education: the universities or the politicians. This war should have started years ago. We forsee it lasting for years to come.

Our GSS has in the past given us firm representation at interuniversity meetings. This representation has done away with the old view of Queen's as a rather reactionary university, without becoming activists. This representation has also shown that there exists at Queen's a rather unique rapport between students and the administration. We believe that these gains should be maintained and exploited, especially in the light of the current situation viz. fees, graduate student funding and foreign student enrollments. Proper use of our voice at these various meetings can lead to even more gains in the areas mentioned above.

Finally, the relationship of the GSS to grads themselves. The GSS spends our money, yet the GSS Council has never had representatives from all departments in the university. Our first action will be a concerted drive to obtain representatives from all departments so that GSS Council will be more representative of all grads and so that Council may benefit from the larger input of ideas and talent.

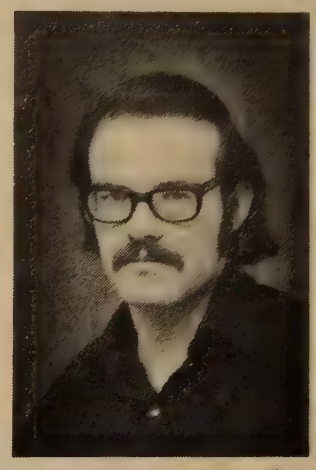
Treasurer

Guy Chan
Acclaimed

AMS Reps. (3)

Frank Chan

In any election of this sort the candidates spend a lot of time stating what they will do if elected. It is my contention that if one is seeking an elected position then one should be prepared to fullfil any duties required of that position. By accepting this nomination I agree to act to the best of my ability in representing the G.S.S. to the rest of the students on campus. I have had some experience in student government having been the Cultural Chairman of the McGill Chinese Students Society, the Engineering Undergraduate Society Rep on the Student Council, Queen's Chinese Club President and was on the organizing committee for Amity 300.



I do not believe that a lot of promises of what I will do if elected would be of any use here and so all I will promise is to represent the G.S.S.

Kathy Dewar

I have enjoyed taking an active part in GSS this year as Psychology rep and as Cultural Committee Chairwoman organizing our annual Grad Day Symposium. (Incidentally, don't forget to come out and hear lively discussions about the Role of the Foreign Student in Canadian Universities, Saturday, February 10th, Dunning Auditorium) I would like to continue working with the GSS this coming year as one of the GSS reps to the AMS and put the experience I have gathered to good use.

Kathy Dewar

Doug Kerfoot

As an AMS representative from the Graduate Student Society, my responsibility would be that of a liaison co-ordinating the efforts of the GSS with those of the rest of the Alma Mater Society. My particular concern is that Graduate student interests, your interests, be reflected in the policies of the AMS. Currently, this is being done with respect to student financial upheaval and hopefully such progress would be maintained with future issues. Thank you.

Gerry Liddell

Anxious to foster rapport between grads and undergrads and ensure that AMS activities serve the interests of graduates, I am standing for the position of AMS rep. With the "common sense stance" I will represent grad views; to wit - cars off campus,

cut down buildings and put up trees,
no action without alcohol,
and follow the usual precedent of committees "be consistent, abandon reason".

Finally I urge you to vote for Cheap Housing At Our School.

Keith Marshall

It is essential that the different needs and opinions of graduate students be carefully ascertained and effectively presented to the AMS. My undergraduate experience at Queen's and out side working experience could be useful assets in offering constructive and moderating comment to issues as they arise and in serving to safe-guard the interests, of graduate students.

Most significantly, this position is an opportunity to play some small part in seeking to advance social and academic intercourse on campus.

MILTON ACORN on
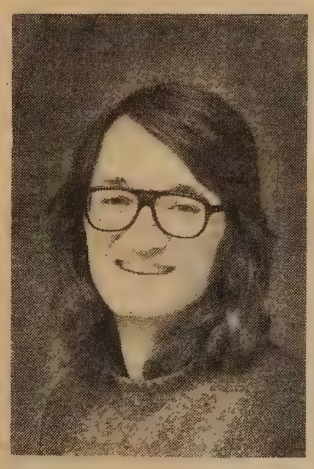
"MILTON ACORN"



a Canadian poet talks about Canadian poetry

3rd floor, Union 8 p.m.
Commonroom Feb. 8th

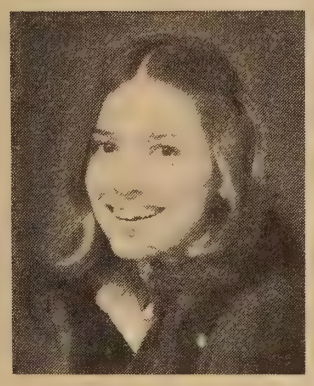
Arts and Science

President and Vice-pres.

Eleanor Crowder Craig Brown
Acclaimed



The AMS in conjunction with the various faculty societies provides an extensive political network, at times too complex to be efficient. Therefore, we feel that the focus of ASUS should be primarily educational, attempting to provide a forum, a gathering place for both student and faculty opinion and discussion. The present consolidation of DSC's in the caucus of the Association of DSC's can become such an integrated body, a vital channel of communication on a more general level than it is at present. A greater awareness of student initiated education can include the pursuit of issues such as the Human Problems courses which recently foundered in Senate, and a closer liaison with the Elrond College Education Programme.

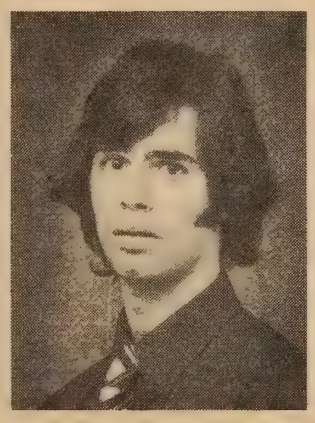
Since Orientation Week is one of the largest responsibilities of ASUS, and in view of our direct involvement in Orientation '73, we are committed to a careful examination of the programme as a whole, and of the present committee structure. We feel that the week should move towards a looser organizational structure and more freshman contact with upper-year students.

We would also like to stimulate interest in the Interyear Society by delegating to it, responsibility for social events, e.g. Suzie-Q, at the same time freeing ASUS to play a more active role in student initiated education.

We are enthusiastic about the potential effectiveness of ASUS in continuing academic development, and ask for your support to implement our ideas.

Senator (for one year)

Di Eastham



I hope in this brief space to give Arts and Science students an indication of my interests in the position of Senator and in the functions of the Senate itself. Opportunities for the 'planning and development of the university' are afforded in the deliberation of Senate Standing Committees. I am interested specifically in the work of the committees of Academic Development, Student Affairs, and Campus Planning.

My interest in the Student Affairs Committee is to ensure the active voice of students in the evaluation and effective planning of university services which are vital to the support of this academic institution. I feel more effort is needed in the clarification, and promotion of services offerred here - services such as personal counselling, career planning, and student health.

'Campus Planning' in the days of tight money and the 'steady state' should be directed to improving the quality of our campus. I am concerned about the atmosphere and attitude in Queen's residences and would appreciate the opportunity of expressing my concern over the need to upgrade the quality of residence life.

Academic development is an issue which will involve Arts and Science student Senators to a greater degree with the recent formation of the Inter-departmental Student Council - an organization to formulate and represent student opinion on academic issues. I would hope to take an active part in its operation and in representing it on Senate.

These are my interests. I would appreciate the opportunity of pursuing them as your Senator.

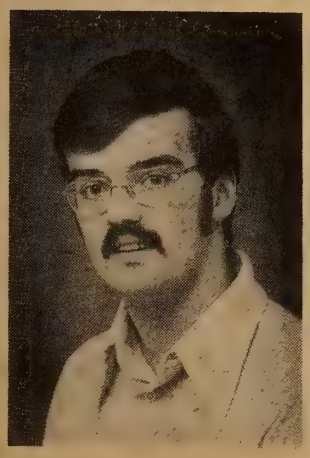
Bob Maxwell

The Senate's function is the administration and reform of academic policy. Through a series of committees, the Senate investigates and makes policy statements on matters ranging from financial implications of growth to the ethics of research involving human beings.

It is difficult to present a platform in a Senate election, for issues problems arise that cannot be forseen. In electing a Senator more important are considerations of rational judgement, objectivity and a verbal ability to express issues of student concern

This is not to say that there are no issues with which we should presently be concerned. Despite a slowdown on enrollment, Queen's will have 10,000 students by 1975, when a "steady state" enrollment will be maintained. As outlined by the Joint Committee of Academic Development and Appointment, Promotion, Tenure and Leave, Queen's now has 383 professors, most of whom are under 40 and have, or will be granted, tenure. As a period of no growth is reached, the hiring of professors must level off.

There is also the very important problem of the preservation of personal identity in a university of 10,000 students. Stronger departmental affiliation or a college system are matters which should be considered.



The presentation of and knowledgeable criticism of questions such as these is the prime role of a student senator. The aim must be to rise above personal feelings and by establishing communication with the student-faculty committees and elected societies, present the opinion of the student body as a whole.

Senator (for two years) Kathy Turner Acclaimed

University per se has become what is a regretful symptom of our present society - a job training ground. It is becoming an institution for the financially elite - not the qualified intellectually elite: "an industrial assembly-line of degrees." What is unfortunate is that I feel that the university has lost sight of its primary function of the pursuit of higher knowledge for its own sake and not the tangible rewards that may follow. Maybe an in depth look at just where we are going, or should be going . . .?

And so I'm interested in the Senate's role in education - academics in particular. Several concepts need investigation; the feasibility of independent study degrees in various disciplines; recognized credits for various educational (but not necessarily academic) experiences; and the current issue of transferability of course credits between faculties deserve serious consideration and study.

Treasurer Bob Livingston Acclaimed

Last night I was made treasurer of ASUS by acclamation. Webster's dictionary defines acclamation as "a loud eager expression of approval, praise, or assent." I think I was not elected by acclamation. No bother though, I wanted to do the job (some last minute prompting was needed) and I will do it to the best of my ability (I am now treasurer of Artsi '75).

One point I would like to make concerns the people who were not acclaimed. Nineteen people have shown interest in running for the position of AMS representatives. I think we owe it to them and others running for positions, to give a little of our time to evaluate them and then vote for those who we feel would do the best job. Elections for the Arts years are being held in about two weeks time. Why not take five minutes and consider seriously whether you could help your year. If you don't think you can, then at best go to the elections and elect people who you think can.

Secretary

(Edn. note: Because nominations for secretary were extended until after this page had been designed, we regret that there is insufficient room to include the candidates' pictures.)

Richard Meech

The most important thing about the position of secretary on ASUS is his voting power. I am interested in running for this position partly from a personal interest in learning more about ASUS and becoming an integral part of it and also because I would like to express my opinions on certain issues that ASUS deals with. I am particularly interested in developing the new Speakership Fund that has been created over the past year, as well as taking an active role in selection of committees for the various ASUS events. I have had experience indirectly with ASUS this year as I served both on my year executive and the Arts Inter-year committee. I am also involved with the ASUS orientation programme as a gael for 1973. I understand my obligations as a secretary and I would treat them seriously, but I feel that in running for this position I am running more for a voice in ASUS than as a secretary on a committee.

Harold Persaud

In any community such as Queen's it is necessary to have adequate communication between students, student government and faculty. One of the main functions of the ASUS is to act as a body to reflect Artsci student opinion, but because of its many autonomous committees it fails drastically in this respect.

The recently established coordinating committee for the DSC's, from some accounts, seems to be running into difficulties as a result of duplication of duties already performed by the ASUS executive. The ASUS secretary could use his resources to remedy this situatinn by assisting the committee in the dispersal of information.

One of the foremost ASUS issues has been the usefulness of course evaluation. It has been suggested that many evaluations are not indicative of student opinion because there is not enough feedback. The reason for this is that many students do not understand the purpose of the DSC's and as a result the course evaluation. The secretary in cooperation with the coordinating committee of the DSC's could undertake to compose a simplified information sheet explaining the functions and the advantages of DSC's and make this available to students at the first possible date in the year (during Orientation or before).

The ASUS should investigate the feasibility of setting up a fund to promote cultural and social activities on West Campus.

ASUS

Representative-at-Large

Nine to be elected, you may vote for nine

Kiloran German

A great deal of criticism was levelled at the AMS Outer Council t year specifically at the inactivity of its members. As President of t Women's Residence Council, I was one of those members, my co contribution to the AMS was not particularly significant. The WR was my priority and required my full involvement. I was frustrat by my inability to fully participate in the AMS and now that m committment to the WRC is at an end, I would like to devote m energies to the Outer Council. I am aware of the work that is entail and I feel that experience which I have gained during the past ye has prepared me for that work. As well as the presidency of the WR and my seat on Outer Council, I have been actively involved in the fe withholding campaign and I have been a member of the Ban Ion Board, the Residences Boards and various sub-committees. Th problems which beset the AMS this year are not insurmountable an while some restructuring may be required, full participation by th members of Outer Council would eliminate most of those problems. ask you to give me the chance to participate fully.

Dan Andreae

In this election many candidates are going to make exorbitant promises that can never be fulfilled. I feel candidates should be realistic and concentrate their efforts on improving existing programs instead of dreaming up schemes that will be forgotten.

Services: The services at Queen's are basically good however we need to publicize existing facilities so everyone will know about them and can benefit.

there is a need to expand pub facilities to areas other than the union so live entertainment can be brought in.

A committee should be set up to look into existing health services.

Education: there is a need for the AMS to become involved in education.

it can help to revitalize certain areas of educational services.

there shuld be improvement in symposia so they will be more interesting and more people will benefit.

West Campus: It needs minimal medical facilities.

it needs expansion of the tuck shop already planned.

there needs to be transportation for all those returning late at night to the West Campus.

These are things that I will fight for. I make no promises. The only thing I can be sure of is that I will faithfully represent the interests of students.

Miriam Gordon

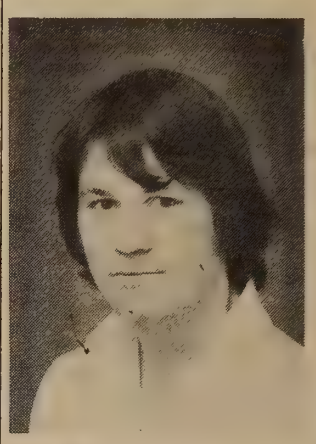
The AMS has in the past, existed primarily as a service orient institution: it is time that the body alter its list of priorities to favo issues of an academic nature. This university needs more intellectu stimulation, to broaden our minds, to compliment specific cour studies and to help us relate to ourselves, to others, to our e vironment, and to our future.

The AMS often seems to lack direct student contact. Yet, speaking to other student delegates at the OFS Conference on Wome I realized the advantage that Queen's relative small size shou provide in overcoming problems of communication. Perhaps b opening organizational and procedural decisions of AMS schedule events to the student population, one might mitigate against th "heaviness" type of animosity presently thrown at the AMS. Co cerning the challenge offered by the McArthur isolation problen more effort is obviously needed to handle their demands.

At the last meeting, Senate members did not seem disposed establishing specific courses concerned with Human Problems. recommend that the AMS accept the challenge presented in th Senate report and instigate a grass-roots movement to get such course off the ground.

I solicit your support in my campaign for the position of Arts Representative on the AMS.

Jennifer Blishen

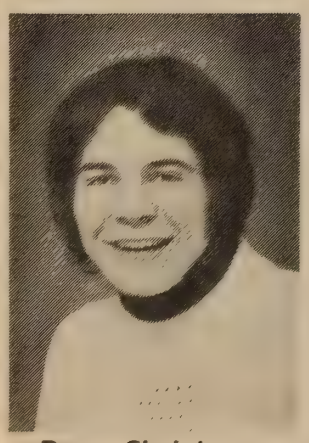


One of my primary interests to increase accessibility of the services offered by government to the average student. Too often one hears an undergraduate asking: What exactly is the AMS and what can it do for me? A representative must be readily available to the students, acting as an effective liaison in presenting their problems, ideas, and opinions to the AMS.

Closely related to the idea of accessibility is that of communication. Anyone should feel free to attend Outer Council meetings and voice opinions or offer services. Increased contact is vital.

In addition, communication between the university and the outside world, through the External Affairs Commission, must be emphasized. The subject on everyone's mind at present is the Fee Strike. What about the other proposed concerns: High School Liaison, Alumni Relations, Student Volunteer Bureau, Community relations etc? Due to preoccupation with the Fee Strike these important areas have been neglected. Students should realize that they are part of the Kingston, as well as the academic community. I propose more programmes such as SVB, which encourage communication between the two spheres.

I bring with me a genuine interest in the student government.



If anyone has any questions, comments, or ideas regarding my position, please call me anytime at 544-2110. Thank you.

Gary Gorr

Communication - an old political promise, but I hope it will receiv new life and meaning if I'm elected. The efficiency of studen government depends upon the relationship of the student body to th student executive, the people in power. If the two forces are close, yo get good, student oriented, responsible government. If not, arbitrar government by a select few with the students having the option o either agreeing or disagreeing with the policy, after the fact. Shoul this continue to be true? I emphatically say no! The job of the AM rep is to make sure the students do know. A responsible AMS rep should hold semi-monthly meetings in the residences to discuss wha the students want in the form of poljcies and to hear any suggestion or grievances they have. Other ways are to put up posters outlinin policies, with the AMS rep's phone number at the bottom. In this way students can take a moment to let the AMS rep. know how they feel Finally, open letters to the Journal, following the principle outlined i the above method.

These three ideas I'm sure will help make your stay at Queen's socially and intellectually the most stimulating and memorable years of your life. I'm committed to them!

Doug Christensen

ASUS reps on Outer Council must be given and assume more responsibility. At present too many do too little. Instead of menial tasks, responsibility may be gained through placement on a commission.

Inner Council does not delegate power adequately. More involvement for reps (in effect MP's) at committee level in commissions must occur. A greater role in policy formation is essential. Let's get away from endless harangues over trivia. Reps have to help formulate, not just vote on policy presented by Inner Council.

For fruitful debate and bolstered attendance Outer Council should be pared. Five, not nine, Artsci reps would have more important work and increase interest. Weekly columns concerning AMS-ASUS business must appear in the Journal. Awareness doesn't have to be a cliche. DSCs must be given a material role and upper Artsci years have to be revitalized via ASUS incentives. I want to organize Artsci Week '73.

We must view government structures as artificial devices whose purpose is catering to wants and needs of Queen's students, not as exclusive social clubs for campus "heavies".

(Doug Christensen is a Politics major and a Morris House Senior. He worked on Orientation, DSCs and High School Liaison)

John Gray

WHY SO MUCH APATHY!

Well, election time is here again, which means that once again al Queen's students decide who will represent them for the following year. But aren't you tired of voting for people and not hearing anything more from them until its time to vote the next year. Per sonally I believe that I'm not the only one who feels the AMS could b more of a true representation of student feeling.

Since this is a competition, I guess I'm supposed to offer reason why I am better for this job than candidate X; but to me this is not pedestal above the rest of the student body, but a position through which all students may have their opinions heard. The job is not getting elected - it starts after than!!

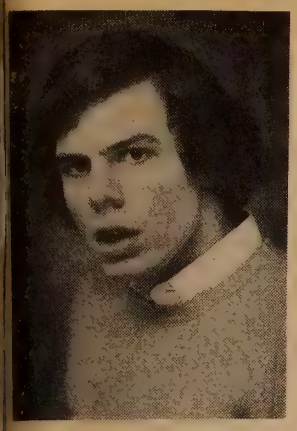
Sorry -- I can't make you any concrete promises - I'm only one student concerned with the issues and problems facing all of us. The shortage of suitable low rental housing near campus, is an example o one issue that has affected many students including myself.

The limited space I have been given restricts what I am able to say to you in print; but I am eager to speak with any student who dares enough to vote. Phone me, John Gray, at 544-7693.

We should have our voices heard!

Jeff Evenson

I just have a thought or two I'd like to throw. The first is that I know virtually nothing about how the student government works. No doubt I am not alone in this regard as I have the feeling that very few of the students here really know what the AMS is all about. If I am elected as an AMS rep. and you feel that there is something you would like to know about student government at Queen's, give me a call at 544-1765 and if I have learned anything I'll help you out and if I don't know the answer I'll find out and let you know. If you have any interest at all--go and vote and we all can get a little better acquainted with the student government.



Secondly, there really isn't alot of practical everyday knowledge available at Queen's. Stuff like the difference between a bull and a steer, or how to survive in the woods, or how to hike with a backpack. Now a lot of kids accumulate a lot of knowledge from summer employment, but it just sits around in their heads. An idea would be to put some of this knowledge to work by offering it to other students. This useful type of cooperation would serve to re-cycle valuable, practical knowledge.

Now if you have any ideas of your own but just don't know how to get them going--go and vote on Wednesday or Thursday and then if I'm elected give me a call. I'm interested. Are you?

Anne Humeniuk

Nineteen people running for the nine positions of rep at large incredible. Really, if any of the candidates scream apathy they shoul be shot. Because of the large number of candidates running, there wil have to be, more then ever before, an emphasis on issues. One of th most important issues right now is of course the fee strike. I think th government should be made to clarify its' position on highe education. Since fee withholding appears the only way to currentl register a protest, I think this measure should be taken by a students. Although the Senate seems to have killed the possibility o instituting the humanities' course in the near future, I think the en vironmental studies course is such a good idea that it should not b completely abandoned. I think more effort should be made to in tegrate West Campus with main campus activities, free bus betwee the two campuses is a great first step. The Principal's Committee o the Status of Women should be applauded - looking forward to seein the results of their study. I'm interested in working with the AMS an I'm promising to spend time if elected. Urging every one to vote ('Specially for me)

Michael Judge

More than once the question "What does the AMS do" has arisen. Let's face it Queen's students know rather little about the functions of the AMS. And it's not their fault. It's with a certain amount of difficulty that one finds out about what the AMS is up to. The only sure way to do this is to go down to the AMS office and ask them. In other words, students must go the the AMS. This is not right.

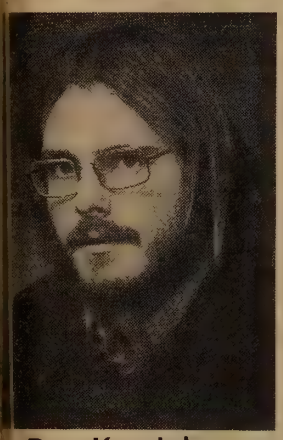
The AMS must go to the students.

I have listened to the candidates for AMS president insist that better rapport should be created between the students and the AMS. Let's stop talking and do something.

I personally feel better rapport could be created by:

1. A monthly open forum held by the AMS executive and any interested students. The executive could explain their activities of the past month and discuss any questios asked of them by the students, with the students.
2. All AMS meetings should be published. In interest is lacking let's create it.
3. All AMS activities should be published widely - poster campaigns are not expensive.

Let's get the school and the AMS involved together. The AMS should not be an ego trip.



Wil Kranenburg

The AMS, as a campus wide organization, is responsible for investigating student grievances, and acting in regard to the best interests of the entire student community. To fulfill these obligations, the AMS must work as a unified body to alleviate problems and to innovate services and opportunities to enhance the educational aim of the university.

Of prime concern to me are services and education. Controvesial topics I would like to review are: curtailment of Douglas Library hours, expansion of Health Services to include dental care, and extension of Student Typing Services. Also, I would like to see the establishment of courses in typing and speed reading.

In the sphere of education, I think that Canadian content should be increased through symposia, the arts and speakers. The latter could be incorporated with appearance of other controversial personalities. The possibility of booking cultural performances as the Stratford Shakespearean company and the Winnipeg National Ballet should be investigated.

Previous experience as treasurer of ASUS, as a consultant for Queen's Injured Workmen's Compensation Board and as a member of various committees has given me insights into working in student affairs. I feel I have the right to solicit your vote because I want to work for you.

Don Krestel

This campus is drowning in its own whimperings. Apathy and sarcasm prevail; student action toward any goal carries an aura of doom before it begins and a sense of futility as it stumbles forward. People have to start giving a damn.

Student government has become too involved in burearcratic formalities and has stopped being an effective student voice. Until students start using their representatives to express their will, nothing will be created or changed that will seem relevant to you, the student. I will be receptive to student opinion at all times and will try to seek it. By associating more with people and less among themselves student government can again become an effective entity.

It will be one of my major objectives to inspire campus activities to better orientate the university community. Meaningful activities can be created the placing trust in the student body. With this trust a chance will be taken that apathy is just a word not a disease.

If you don't vote this week, don't bitch, next year when you think you are paying for nothing with your hard earned bucks because you've become part of a society that acts exactly the way you do and gets nothing.

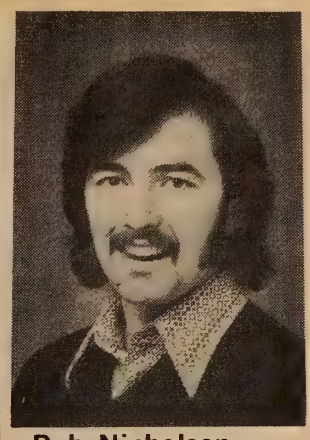
Dorthy Lloyd

As a member of the university community I feel the activities sponsored by the AMS should appeal to as many people as possible. Having worked on committees in charge of various campus events I have seen how events are run. More important, it seems that certain activities are no longer as well-supported as they were last year. It is time to sit down and re-evaluate the Queen's community. Instead of standing on the past we should change to meet new needs of the campus. Perhaps that will mean re-structuring many social events that have become traditions here. We must cater to the students, who are here now and not assume they want the same activities those students two, four or ten years ago supported.

The AMS can not do it alone. It will mean asking you, the students of Queen's for your opinions. There may be mistakes made, but that's how we will learn. The job must be done.

Because of my experience I feel I have a grasp of the problem and some ideas on how it should be solved.

erry Macli



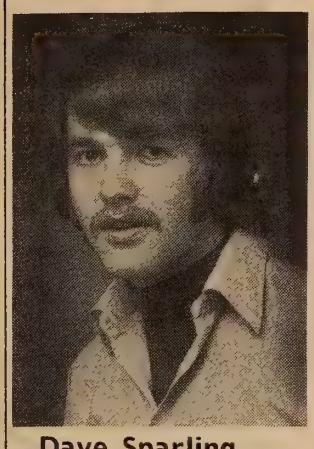
PLEASE READ THIS

I've kind of done a lot of interesting things helping organize Oom-Pa-Pah's, sitting on ASUS, co-chairing the High School Liaison Committee, raking muck in Golden Words, but there are still things that bother me and things I would like to see done.

I'd like to see an AMS whose reps have at least the sense of responsibility to attend meeting and represent their constituents, yet who don't become part of an AMS country club with restricted membership. I'd like to see an AMS more involved with the rest of the world and problems in it and I'd like to see the AMS contribute to the awareness of the student body as regards these problems. I'd like to see AMS involve more people by making what the AMS does more exciting and stimulating. I'd like to see a campus where faculty rivalries are productive not destructive and petty. I'd like to see constitutional reforms creating a more streamlined and efficient Outer Council. The Wright Commission's final report needs to be studied.

AMS needs constant internal criticism for the only way to better something is to question and discover what its faults are.

And that basically is why I'm running and why I'm asking for your vote. Thanks a lot for reading this.



Rob Nicholson

I think there can be an improvement in the organization of AMS activities. This is an area I would especially like to make a contribution. Too often students are left standing in line because events do not take place on time. This is an area where we can make improvements.

It has been noticeable that there is often a breakdown in communications between the AMS structure and the students. This situation could be helped if more students attended AMS meetings. This will only happen when council meetings are held outside the Student Union. More students would participate if the council meetings were held in the common rooms of the various residences.

I think there is still room for improvement in the Concert Committee. The AMS has lost money on several of its concerts but this could have been avoided. If the Grand Theatre can successfully bring Lighthouse to Kingston there is no reason why Queen's can't.

Finally I think there is a danger that the AMS IS BECOMING TOO SERVICE ORIENTED. I believe that cultural and educational priorities have suffered as a result. There has been a distinct shortage of symposiums and guest speakers this year. Strengthening and expanding the Education Commission would be a move in the right direction. Also steps should be taken immediately to see that Sweven is published this year.

Dave Sparling

One of the most obvious downfalls of student government today is lack of communication. This problem is one which I feel the AMS has sadly neglected in past years. The average Queen's student doesn't know or care what the AMS does. Although this is partly the fault of the individual I feel that the AMS should make every effort possible to involve the students on campus. Through means such as campus newspapers students should be kept informed as to what their government is doing. They should be allowed to express themselves at well publicized open meetings. If they have a beef or question a system should be set up whereby they can leave their name and number and one of their reps can call them.

As the AMS is one of the few organizations which involves all faculties it should use this to improve inter-faculty relations. Meetings between student executives of the different faculties to exchange ideas would be beneficial to all involved.

The AMS itself should try to establish better communication with other universities and organizations.

Voting is the first step to better communications, but must be followed by conscientious efforts by all involved.

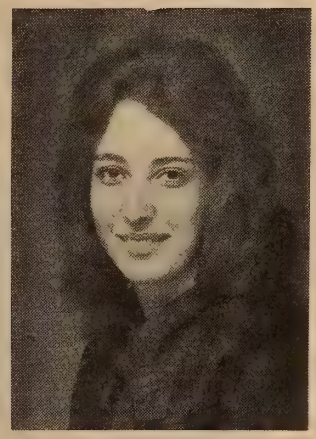
Ross Sutherland

I feel that the AMS has to start strongly presenting a student developed point of view. Sadly to some this means "raising Hell."

I think the AMS has been too service oriented (necessary, but services are only half of the AMS's responsibilities) and afraid of damaging campus sensibilities.

A student government can only be expected and respected for developing and strongly presenting student opinion.

Tenure, interdiciplinary courses, courses evaluation need a campuwide appraoch.



The AMS needs a body (possibly an expanded Planning Committee) with a regularly appointed chairman to co-ordinate these activities.

The AMS has a well developed service system, but by no means perfect. Services constantly have to be made more efficient, and changed to meet new needs, eg. the typing service and the general information service of the AMS have to be expanded.

Finally the AMS has to take a long look at itself, to take reliance off of Inner Council and entice Outer Council members to get off their asses.

I will support and initiate actions to these ends.

Presently I am co-ordinator of the ASUS Course Evaluation Guide, and have been actively involved in the External Affairs Commission, the Math DSC and the Student Volunteer Burearu.

Roberta Walker

Student politics, like most politics is often criticized as being an ineffective and worthless practice. However if it is not a worthwhile endeavor, then it is difficult to account for the amount of time and the number of people involved in it. Student government is also referred to as petty. The validity of this charge is debatable but the fact remains that it is the only means available to the students to control their university. The degree of participation available at Queen's is large so government need not be petty or worthless. The government can only be as good as the people involved in it and the people it represents., The effectiveness of a representative is a function of his or her willingness to work, to weigh the ideas of others and to implement programs in accordance with the changing needs. This initiative has taken place this year with the strong support and activity of the AMS in the fee strike as well as the greater attention given to community relations with the university. The coming of Kingston's Tercentenary presents a great opportunity for Queen's to take an active part and interest in the community. I hope to see Queen's make a continued use of this opportunity.

Above all I offer my willingness and enthusiasm to be your representative.

Bev Watson

To me political responsibility goes beyond voting and I wish to take an active part in the affairs of student government.

In reference to student entrepreneurs: Who's Where is the best and most comprehensive student directory produced by a Canadian university. USI, which is run, according to Golden Words, by "entrepreneurs" has been instrumental in the production of it for the last four years. If a group of students offers an otherwise unavailable professional service, there is no reason why they cannot receive remuneration for their efforts.

Bus services, if made available to the student body would allow for greater interaction between Queen's and the Kingston community, even if services could not be made available to everyone, the hours the services are available should be extended.

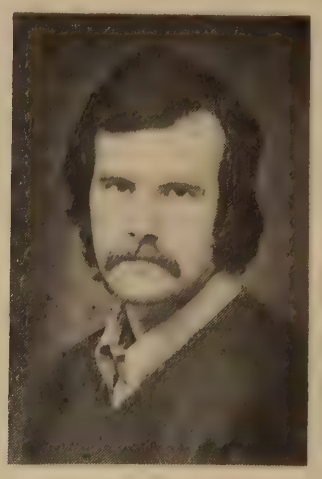
Definite deficiencies in services are apparent on main campus and and particularly West Campus. Some of the problems on main campus would ultimately be alleviated with the construction of a university centre. However, there are more immediate problems, facing West Campus, For example, there is no tuck shop or even food machines save one candy machine which works periodically. There is no sort of medical service at West Campus at all and neither main nor West campuses have medical aid available at night.

Further experiments with co-educational residences should be encouraged.

Come on, we have a lot to do - I have the enthusiasm and concern - you have the votes. Use them!

Commerce Society

John Farrell



President

Acclaimed

The Commerce Society, a small and closely knit community, has unlimited potential to make a positive contribution to the total University experience of all its members.

The function of the Commerce Society President is to organize and co-ordinate the real potential that so many of its members have and are willing to offer.

I will try to achieve this end to the best of my ability.

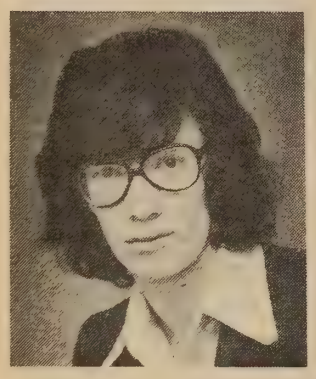
Rick Barber

Vice-Pres.

Acclaimed

I feel that the position of Vice-president is a vital one. Although the duties do not seem to be as defined as the other members of the executive,the VP's responsibility to the members of the society is just as great. Therefore his contribution to the structure in dealing with issues of the day must be just as great. I feel that I can supply the necessary input to make life within the Commerce Faculty a more worthwhile experience.

Junior AMS



Paul Greenwood
Acclaimed

Secretary

Andree Chartier
Acclaimed

Treasurer

Sue Baugh
Acclaimed

Ken Wong Acclaimed

Senior AMS

In the "marketplace", prices are said to be the major determinant of where scarce resources go. In student government, it is the AMS rep who must decide such matters. Unforuntately, most people tend to spend far too much time trying to combat one man wars against apathy instead of ensuring that the resources which we have on hand go in the right direction. The important thing is not to force participation upon people, but rather to ensure that there does exist activities in which you can become involved if you so desire.

People in general are tired of the student apathy line, and rightly so. In the past little effort has been made towards ensuring that we allocate ourselves in the directions you want, and towards the things you should have.

The AMS should carry out a campus-wide survey to discover exactly what its goals should be, for only then can they measure the utility or disutility of the organization.

At present, there are many major events (Wright Commission, Pietchinius Report) occurring in the financing of post-secondary education. It is the job of your rep to see that these reports are properly responded to. I feel my past experience will help me in doing so . .and in the process alleviate from the members of this faculty the headaches of trying to sort it out on one's own. In this respect the educative element of the AMS must be performed.

Finally, there is much internal reform which should be pursued within the AMS. Being a Commerce student is indispensible in this area for any organization be it political, charitable, or social has an internal structure which requires caretaking.

Rick Hudon

Athletic Stick

Skills Instruction programs. I will attempt to maintain, if not increase, the present excellence and participation in Sports throughout my term of office by retaining and improving the present spirit of co-operative effort made by one and all in promoting athletic activities.

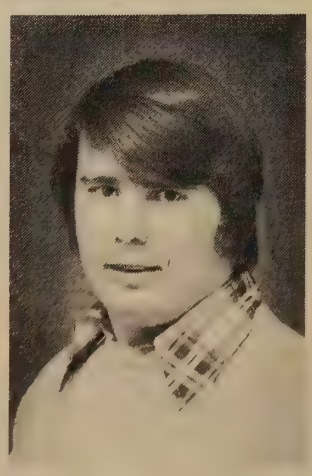
As a Commerceman, I am very much inclined towards management activities, that is, the directing of the activities of others. I believe that this will be another valuable experience for me, and I will be glad to serve my fellow commercemen to the best of my ability this coming year as their athletic representative.

I am prepared to do my share of the work as required of me.

I am seeking election as athletic stick for Commerce because I feel I can perform the job effectively. I am highly motivated towards sports participation, both personally and for others. I have personally participated in a large number of sports since my arrival at Queen's in 1971, and have also taken many Sports

Cam Ross

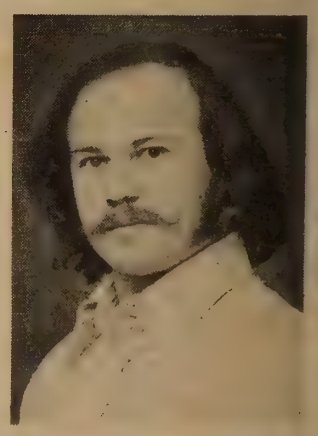
As a faculty athletic stick, I would be responsible for coordinating the athletic program for the Commerce Society as well as giving guidance and support to the athletic stick of each Commerce unit in the Bews program. As the athletic stick for Commerce 74 for 71-72 I have the experience to know what is expected of each person who I will be working with as well as being a past member of the Men's Intramural Athletic Committee. I have supported the Bews program through participation in as many activities as I have been physically able. After all, every jock in Commerce knows Bews comes first!



ADMISSIONS TO RESIDENCES 1973/74

Men only Residences
Co-Ed. Residence, Morris Hall, Earl Street Residence West Campus Residences

Applications from upperclass students, other than those entering Law 1 or Education 1, are due by February 12, 1973.

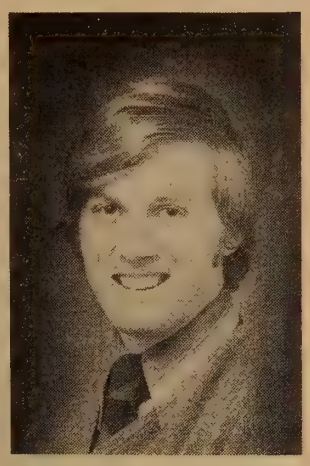


Application forms and brochures may be obtained at the Desk Clerks' offices at Gordon/Brockington Hall, Earl Street Residence, Social Centre West Campus, and at the Dean of Women's Office, Victoria Hall and the Business Office Leonard Hall.

Kurt Bonokoski

If elected Social Convenor there are certain changes that I would like to propose. These would include a transformation of the Commerce Formal into a Semi-Formal with the hope of making it an event that all commerce students would wish to attend rather then just members of the graduating class. I would also propose to co-ordinate the social activities of the various year executives with those of the Commerce Society to provide a more complete and balanced social calendar. I feel this should include each Commerce year sponsoring a Commerce pub dance that would be open to members of all years. This will help to provide closer relationships between members of various commerce years. I would also have the Commerce Society sponsor more events that involve other faculties such as the Commerce-Meds dance and the Barn Dance held in the Harty Arena. I would also work for the continuation of events as the Commerce Banquet, Guest speaker series and the Commerce Stag as I feel these are worthwhile. These changes I feel will create more unity within the Commerce faculty and provide more social events where Commerce students can get together as a faculty.

Social Convenor



Adrian Donoghue

As Faculty Social Convener I would like to see far more interaction between years, awakening the Commerce Faculty to the fact that extramural activities are an integral part of university that should not be ignored. It is a must to provide increased opportunity to meet new people both in our faculty and in others and to gain greater recognition that the Commerce Society is an active part of the university community.

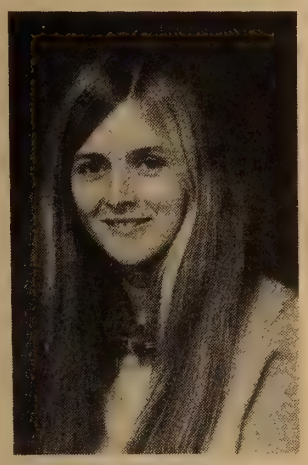
Aesculapian Society

President

Alan Cruess
Acclaimed

This year for a second year in a row, the Aesculapian Society has acclaimed virtually its whole Executive - with the exceptions of the positions of Treasurer and Secretary. In spite of this, we have a very keen group which has a good deal of experience behind it and I anticipate another good year for the Aesculapian Society. As you may know we still maintain a highly organized and successful Meds Sports Program in addition to participating in Bews, which provides our students with competitive as well as very friendly recreation. As always our Medical Variety Night of this past fall, Funny Bones '72, met with great success all accross campus (We acknowledge here the excellent contributions to this evening's entertainment by Queen's Nursing Science, the School of Rehab Therapy, KGH and Hotel Dieu Nurses). These activities I mention because of the number of people involved in making them a success. At this point I would like as the incoming President to thank those people as well as those involved in convening all this past year's activities of the Society. Their example, I hope, encourages the same number of talented people to emerge next year.

Vice-pres



Jude Leech
Acclaimed

The Faculty of Medicine will this fall for the first time be admitting a complete medical year none of whom have been through pre-medicine. I would therefore invite any suggestions or assistance from all faculty and society members to make the orientation program to be planned for these students both interesting and enjoyable. Suggestions for subjects or personalities for the annual Aesculapian lecturer would also be welcomed. I hope that a greater number of students will be involved in planning and attending these and other events.

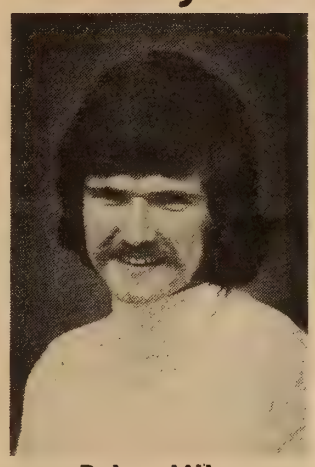
Senior AMS

Bob Anthony

Cathy Rublee

Acclaimed

Med students are too often segregated from the main stream of campus life and many are unaware of present issues, or become aware too late. With Pre-med gone and many first year medical students from outside Queen's this problem of communication will become worse not better. It is going to be the job of Meds AMS Reps to represent the AMS to the students as well as med students to the AMS.



There are many things we'd like to see changed and improved: the concert fee and what we get for it; implementation of the Wright Commission recommendations; and the entire Student Loan System, especially concerning Med students who have a shorter summer work term.

We will try to act as good links between students and council and give the faculty the stronger voice it needs in campus affairs.

Junior AMS

Acclaimed

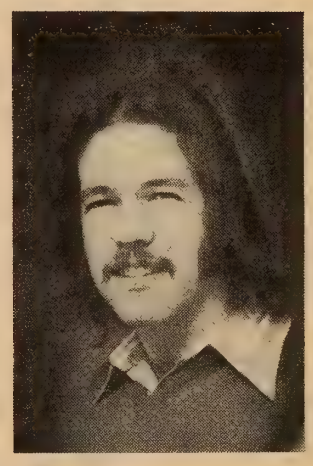
Secretary

Brian Milne

I would welcome the opportunity to participate actively in the Aesculepian Society.

No photograph available

Lyn Gracie

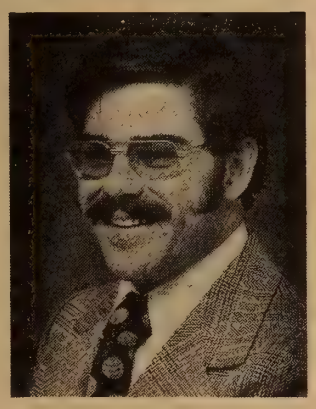


Athletic stick

Brian McNab
Acclaimed

Public Relations Officer

Dave Allison
Acclaimed



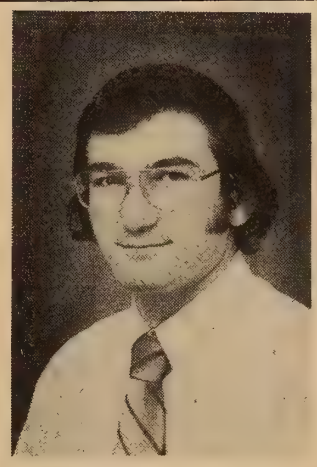
External vice pres.

John Moorhead
Acclaimed

In these times of change within the Medical Faculty, I feel that the position of Vice-President of External Affairs affords one the opportunity to participate actively both in the initiation and adoption of new ideas. This has been especially apparent during the past year in which my predecessor, Sarah Prichard, was highly instrumental in promoting greater student-faculty co-operation in these matters. I feel this is a challenge and am pleased to have been acclaimed to this position. I would, at this time, like to express thanks to my campaign manager, Brooke Pearson, for his inspiration and support.

Treasurer

Mike Tovell



The Treasurer of any organization, although being a bureaucratic position is a most imporant position. I feel that if elected Treasurer of the Asculapian Society I shall be capable of continuing the fine performance of this year's treasurer. My experience includes working as a salesman for a small business during the summer. I have also been a class DSC representative and during my four years at Queen's I feel I have acquired a good working knowledge of the Aesculapian Society. I am eager and willing to accept the responsibility that the position requires.

Since every student in the faculty of Medicine benefits from a well run executive, it is only to your advantage to vote on February 14, and I urge you to give my your mandate.

Andy Janikowski

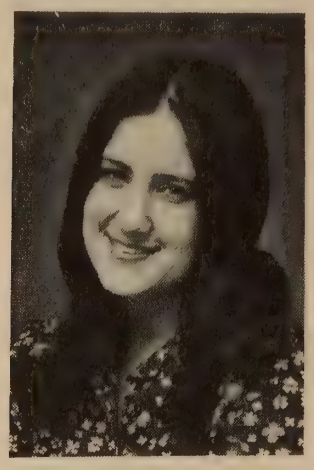
Like other elected bodies, the Aesculapian Society is only as good as the people who are elected to it. While I have not held up to this time any elected position on the Society, I have nonetheless taken an active interest in its workings. These have included organizing and running this year the first Student Microscope Exchange, working in Funny Bones and co-editing the 1972-73 edition of the Queen's Medical Review. I have been treasurer this year for Meds '75 and would like to now work as treasurer for the whole Society.

Bob Mazurka

The position of treasurer of the Aesculapian Society is not a very demanding office but it is a necessary one. Assessing my capabilities, I believe it is in this capacity that I can be of most benefit to the medical society.

Nursing Science

President



Eleanor Francis

Interest is the key to participation. Participation of the students leads to unity and this unity allows a faculty to play a more significant and worthwhile role in the university community. Thus, success on the part of the Nursing Science Society will be inevitable if enough interest can be generated. In my opinion, the initial responsibility for producing interest lies with the executive of each faculty. Because I feel that I am capable of accepting such responsibility I am running for the position of President of the Nursing Science Society. This position needs someone who can donate time, enthusiasm and, most important of all, interest. It also demands a person with organizational ability. I feel confident that I can meet these requirements.

By improving the communication between the different years, I feel that more interest will be produced because the students will be more aware of what is going on within the nursing faculty. This interest can then be directed towards participation in activities that will benefit the faculty and the university.

I wish very much to help our faculty in any way and I feel I can best accomplish this as President of the Nursing Science Society.

Janet Jeffrey

Word is out that we're an apathetic faculty, and this does appear to be true. But, Nursing Science has made itself known and will continue to do so in an ever louder voice. Big sister - little sister relations should become a mode of facilitating communication, to bring our four years together. Back-Rub Day and Smoker 74 will be even greater than they were in 73. CUNSA (Canadian University Nursing Students Association) is the national organization to which each of us belong. This should become better known to all students and to faculty alike. Ideas, I have many. Involvement will make it possible. I want to be involved.

CUNSA Rep.

Heather Foster

The main responsibility of the C.U.N.S.A. Rep is to attend the annual Canadian University Nursing Student's Association Conference held each year in February. The C.U.N.S.A. Rep is the voting delegate from Queen's at the Conference. Also the C.U.N.S.A. Rep reports to the Nursing Society all information about Canadian Nurses and University Nursing Happenings transmitted to her during the C.U.N.S.A. Conference. As well as attending the conference, the C.U.N.S.A. Rep is a member of the Nursing Executive who helps organize activities for the Nursing Society.

I am aware of my responsibilities as C.U.N.S.A. Rep and I am fully prepared to be an active component of the Nursing Society Executive. I have previously been an active member of the residence government.

The Nursing Society can be an active group and I want to be an integral part of making it so.

Janet Samson

My interest in CUNSA is to exchange our school's ideas about present and future training programs with other university nursing schools and to relate these ideas to my collagues and our faculty. With the new developments and expansions of the nurse's role it is important to discuss programs which will fully prepare the baccalaureate nurse for such fields as primary care and preventative medicine outside the hospital. I see a definite need for CUNSA to organize programs with the government and hospitals which will assure summer employment and financial assistance for university student nurses. I feel that Queen's nursing students have a lot to offer and to gain by communication with other university nursing students.

Vice-pres.

Joan Robbins
Acclaimed

Unity within an organization is of the utmost importance. I feel this especially applies to any executive group which represents a certain population. The Nursing Science Society this year has achieved a great deal and this progress will only continue with an enthusiastic, interested, and above all, a well-unified executive.

Once this unity is achieved, the aspect of communication between the executive and the rest of the students would be a minimal problem.

I feel that I have the necessary qualifications to be an integral and helpful component of this group. That is to say, I am interested and enthusiastic. Therefore, I hope I will receive your support in my aim to enhance the enjoyment of being members of Queen's Nursing Science Society.

AMS Rep

Anna Vander Veen
Acclaimed

Secretary

Linda Reiche
Acclaimed

The position of secretary as I perceive it to be involves:
(1) efficient management of clerical work
2) effective representation on the executive on behalf of undergraduate members of the society

Next year, as a second year nursing student, I will, if elected to this position, demonstrate the experience in clerical work that I have had in the past and will strive as a junior member of the society to effectively represent the junior segment, and in so doing, help to strengthen the bonds that exist not only between junior and senior members, but serve to bind the society together as a whole.

Athletic Stick

Claire Baillargeon

Athletics is an important aspect of university activities. I am running for the position of Athletic Stick for the Faculty of Nursing because I strongly believe that more participation and better representation from the students are essential. Also, I feel that the students need to be more aware of the opportunities that the Women's Intramural Committee for Athletics offer in meeting people and learning various sports.

Hainia Duncan

The Nursing Society Athletic Stick should make her faculty aware of the numerous activities in the intramural athletic programme. She should act as a liaison between the WAC and the students by passing information about sport facilities and events.

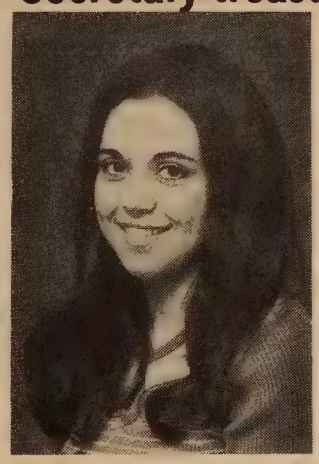
Rehabilitation Therapy

President

Lesley Mitchell

As most students realize, the School of Rehabilitation Therapy is one of the newest and smallest faculties in Queen's. This, however, doesn't constitute an excuse for being one of the least well known. In the two years I've been in physiotherapy the opportunities to get together with our faculties have been slight, but my thanks goes out to the civil engineers with whom we've had many good times. Next year, I would like to see a bit more inter-faculty spirit.

More along the lines of rehabilitation therapy I can well imagine extended hours for the rehab library to include Fri. night and Sat. This year several students recorded text books for a blind law student who is most appreciative. Granted this will take time but if the entire school helped. probably less than three hours a term would do it; and wouldn't it be worth it?



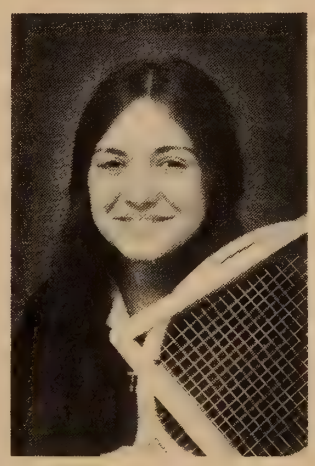
I realize the position of president of the School of Rehabilitation Therapy is a great responsibility but with the help of the rest of the executive I could handle it well. I would appreciate your support to give me a chance to prove it.

Mary Belair

We are a small faculty, and I hope to appeal to you on a personal level. I stand for election because I am seriously interested in the job of president of our Rehab Society. It is for a person who is willing to devote a lot of time to do the job, and do it properly; for a person who is ready to work like a dog, and put all she has into it. That is my goal as I am fully prepared to work. We want someone who will put all she has into her position.

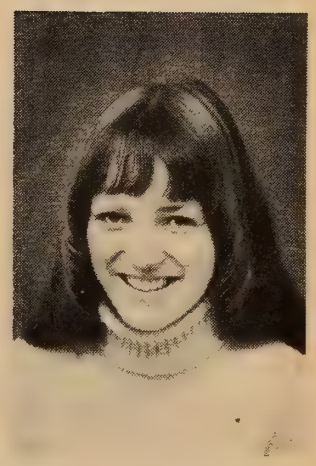
Secretary-treasurer

Susan Filuk



Sheila Pond

Diana Stocker



WIC (2 to be elected)

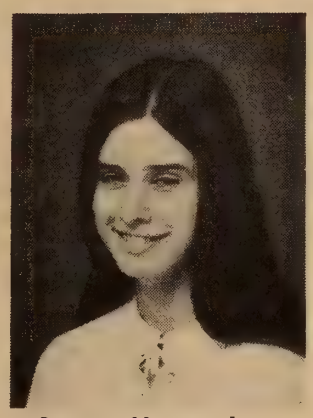
Hedy Cirrincione

Sue King

Cathy Shannon

AMS Rep

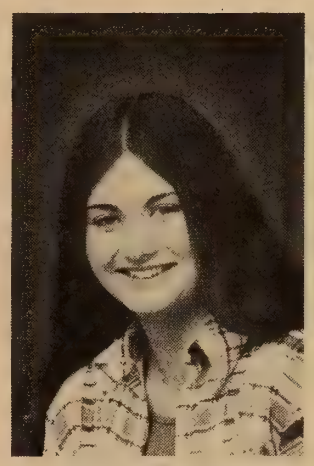
Laurie Hayhurst



As a second-year Occupational Therapy student, I have become interested in the workings of the university and would, as Rehab's AMS Rep, like to learn from and participate in the functioning of the Alma Mater Society. I have worked on various committees in the last two years, and am enthusiastic about becoming more involved in my final year. Although I am still relatively inexperienced in student politics, I am willing to put a lot of time and effort into the AMS in the hope of establishing our faculty as a small, but significant voice on campus.

Suzie Lauzier

I am interested in becoming involved in the student government and representing the students of the School of Rehabilitation Therapy. A forceful representing voice is particularly important at this time of controversy over the problems and issues concerning my faculty, but also in those pertaining to all students of Queen's University. A position on the AMS would present me with the opportunity to deal with the protection of students' rights and the channelling of their opinions concerning the operation of their university. It is my promise that if I am elected to represent the rehab. faculty in voicing its opinion in the policies deliberated by the governing body, I will handle my duties and responsibilities to the best of my ability.



Vice-pres.

Susan Howard

To present a platform in a society where each member is relatively well known just by virtue of our small numbers seems rather meaningless. For those of you who don't know me personally, I have no history of experience with which to impress you, and no revolutionary ideas for our Society. I can only say that I would be very pleased to fill this position and take a part in making things run smoothly and happily next year.

Since this can hardly be called a platform, I suppose you could say rather that I stand on firm ground, ready to "dig my heels in" on your behalf if I am elected.

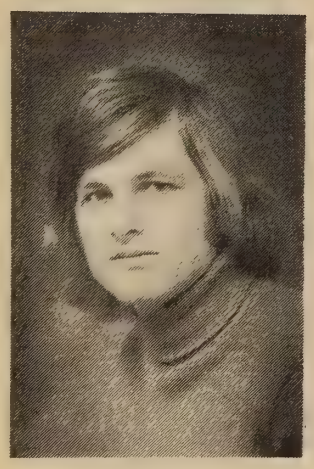
Sarah Mulligan

The role of vice-president is mainly supportive, not one of policy making. For this reason, all I can offer the position is my willingness to work hard, enthusiasm and desire to do a good job. My previous experience includes rehab committee and DSC work this year and an executive position on the student government council, editorship of a yearbook and prefectship in high school. I urge everyone in rehab to vote with judgement in light of what this year's executive has accomplished concerning the matter of the stipend. Make the '73-'74 executive as good as the one for '72-'73 was!

Candidates for social convenor on page 22

Engineering Society

President



John MacDonald

Acclaimed

The propspects for the Engineering Society in the upcoming year are good. With one or two exceptions the affairs of the Society have been restored to order. Major interests such as QUESSI, the clubs, blood drive, and academic concerns have been stimulated and developed. New interestes such as the Friday pub, and the resume book have demonstrated their value.

Next year, more emphasis may be placed on social activities. There is a need for better organized events on this campus. Not only do these events provide a service, but they allow individuals to participate and learn effective planning and preparation.

The new executive will make only one promise -- accessibility. Anyone with an idea will have an audience. If the idea has merit, we guarantee it will have an opportunity to prove itself.

Senator

Dave Armstrong

Acclaimed

Aquiring a position of responsibility by acclamation is not entirely satisfying, nor does it indicate much interest in the governing body involved. The Senate makes the university academic decisions and is involved with campus development and expansion. A student senator also sits on senate committees, on a Faculty board, and, in my case, the outer council of the Engineering Society. This means that the Senate plays a vital role in Queen's University, and its decisions affect both every student now at Queen's and those coming in future years.

For a student senator to be effective he must be aware of the shortcomings of the university from the student bodies point of view. This knowledge is not easy to acquire and necessitates communication between students and the student senators. I hope that this communication will improve over the next two years.

Vice-pres.

Gord Hobbs

As a candidate for the position of Vice-President of the Engineering Society, I realize that I am running for a very important and responsible post. The Engineering Society has, over the last year under President Steve Mansell, really picked itself up out of the dust and is again a guiding influence on the Queen's campus. But to stay alive and active, the Engineering Society needs responsible and energetic people to conduct its affairs. The Vice-President's job, as the President's right-hand man, is mostly organizational, but it involves a hell of a lot of time. The reason I am asking all engineers to support me in the contest for the vice-presidential seat is that I am prepared to spend the time necessary to do the position justice. (Like the typical "plumber", I don't drink, smoke, swear, or chase wild women, so most of my unused energies can be funnelled into the Engineering Society.) My past experience with Engineering activities leaves me confident that I can make the position of Vice-President a truly functional one.

Steve Tovee

For the past two years of sitting on inner and outer council of the Engineering Society I have noticed a transition within the engineering student body. For the most part it has been a fruitful change whereby the image of the Queen's engineer both on and off campus has significantly improved. Recently, APEO meetings in Toronto have indicated to the society that Queen's is running in front of most other university societies in practically all possible engineering endeavours.

As Vice-President I would like to continue to push for excellence. Of course, the only way that the engineering society can excel, is with the continued good work of every single engineer at Queen's. I am out to help each and everyone of those students help themselves to make Eng. Soc. a better organization.

Keep this in mind when you vote this week.

Vote Tovee for Vice-President of the Engineering Society.

Secretary

Colin Dennis

Acclaimed

Treasurer

Ted Bogle

Acclaimed

Development Committee Chairman

Glen Lyle

Acclaimed

More Rehab

Social Convenors (by team)

Brenda Griffiths

Heather Hales

"In running for the position of the Rehab Social Convenor, we have several goals in mind. First, the key behind any successful social event is organization. If elected we would endeavour to make this possible by keeping all the classes well informed of upcoming events, so that planning would be possible well ahead of time.

We would also like to continue the policy of intermingling in social events with the other faculties on campus. We've had a lot of fun doing so in the past, and it's been a good way to get together with other students and exchange ideas, which we feel is what university education is all about.

Finally, we were both actively involved in the Queen's variety shows this year and found that this was a great way of breaking down the barriers of communication between the OT's and the PT's, as well as the different faculty years, since we were all working together towards a common goal. If elected, we'd like to see this feeling carried on by getting involved in the variety shows again next year.

We could go on to make all sorts of promises to have great social events in the upcoming year. Still, the success of any program depends upon general cooperation and participation.

Carol Harwood

Lucy Scarbo

Our main objective would be to organize further social interaction with other faculties and amongst ourselves. Too often the orientation spirit is limited to that first week, we would try to extend this. Regular events, well publicized, could help to dispel apathy. We would promise our enthusiasm and make every effort towards having an entertaining year.

French String Trio - Close to Perfection

by Merle Bolick

Dunning Hall was sold out but a good number of seats were empty as the French String Trio played a program of classical and modern works Thursday night. I don't think the Trio members were upset by the empty rows of seats, however. Before dinner they had played at the Ban Righ Fireside to the clatter of coffee cups and the chatter of AMS candidates. Even the members of the audience who left, noisily and talkatively, between movements of their final number left them unperturbed. (Just in case Ban Righ hosts less imperturbable artists in the future, and just in case you didn't know, girls, this is not done.)

On to Dunning Hall. As promised, the highlight of the performance was the Four Preludes and Fugues KV404A by Bach-Mozart. I have a friend who counts it a sin to play any musical work out of its original instrumentation. I suppose it would upset him to hear what this upstart Mozart did to J.S. Bach and his son Whilhelm Friedemann in these works. The adagio movements were composed by Mozart as preludes to the Bach fugues which he transcribed for string trio. At any rate, it provides an interesting perspective on the well-known fugues of the Well-Tempered Clavier to hear their interpretation by a composer of the following age.

When Gerard Jarry, violin Serge Collot, viola, and Michel Tournus, cello got together in 1960 to form the French String Trio, it was with the primary purpose of playing Mozart. Their precision and delicacy of articulation was especially suited to the interpretation of Mozart. But the full-blooded warmth of the Bach originals also came through from this group that had no trouble filling Dunning Hall with rich sounds. The ensemble's complete rapport was evident in the Mozart-Bach and carried on into the demanding modern works which followed.

The String Trio, opus 20 (1927), of Anton Webern, a student of Schoenberg, was next on the program. It is a two-movement work, of which the first, Sehr Langsam, is supposed to be a rondo, and the second, Sehr Getragen und Ausdrucksvoll-Zart Bewegt, is in first movement form. This may well be true. But it is difficult for the uninitiated listener to pick up these formal structures of the work and he must be carried through by the rhythmic and melodic motives which provide continuity if not unity for the work. This is a virtuoso piece and the Trio cannot be faulted on their sparkling performance.

Next we were treated to the String Trio composed in 1968 by Jean-Pierre Guezec for performance by the French String Trio. The work in one movement has more variety of tone colour and more sustained ideas worked out in logical patterns. Once again we were shown what the Trio could do but at the cost of being quite taxed from listening to the Webern and Guezec in succession. The Webern is quite a blow to any audience's confidence and the Guezec was every bit as difficult and demanding to listen to. Dunning Hall was getting a bit squirmy.

The final work, the String Trio, opus 58, is a tonal work, it demonstrates that he felt beautiful melodies were not out of place in the twentieth century. The French String Trio take the opening movement at a good fast pace for Allegro Moderato. It is a lovely movement and can be savoured at a slower tempo as well. Adagio and Allegro spirito movements were played with that combination of restraint and animation that particularly set this group apart from any other. It was a perfect end to the concert.

The performance was as close to perfection as could be hoped. One hesitates to criticise the program. I would be a pity indeed if these virtuosi felt the need to play to the lowest common denominator of their audience. If anyone has a right to play Webern, they do, who play him to perfection. It just seems too bad that they should lose the sympathies of their audience at some midway point during a performance, through exhaustion alone.

amitydays

Tuesday, February 6

3:30 pm - Amity 300 Seminar on "The Ugly Canadian." International Lower Lounge.

8:00 pm - Amity 300 Movies - Documentary movies of India: "The Red Detachment of Women" and "Taking Tiger Mountain by Strategy." Dupuis Hall Aud. Admission free. Tickets and information to all admission functions of Amity 300 are available from the International Centre (547-2807), or in the John Orr Room Feb. 5 - Feb. 9 at noon hour.

8:30 pm - Queen's Hillel presents Prof. and Mrs. Avrom Michael Hasofer of Sydney, Australia presently visiting Prof. of Mathematics, M.I.T. Boston, Mass. Prof. Hasofer will speak on Chassidism - The Fusion of the Mystical and Rational. 26 Barrie Street. All welcome.

8:30 pm - Manfrog - a Vancouver based touring Co. Free performance. Studio Theatre, Rm. 102, Old Arts Building.

9:00 pm - Department of Film Studies presents "La Strada." (Fellini, 1954). Ellis Hall.

Wednesday, Feb. 7

11:30 am - Oil from the North. Lecture on Modes of Transport. C. Law. The methods of transporting petroleum from northern sources to distant markets to the south are discussed. Dupuis Hall Aud.

2:00 - 5:00 pm - Hotel Dieu Hospital Aud. Queen's Faculty of Medicine and the Dept. of Dietetics from KGH and HDH will present a seminar entitled 'Everything You Always Wanted to Know about Nutrition but were Afraid to Ask."

2:30 pm - The Dept. of Biochemistry presents a lecture on "Some Properties of Alkaline Phosphatese from Normal and Regenerating Rat Liver." Earl Hall, Room 114.

3:00 pm - Amity 300 presents a seminar on "Tanzanian Road to Socialism and its Side Effects. International Centre Lower Lounge.

8:00 pm - Lecture on "The Art of Berio and Berberian" by Prof. I. Anhalt. Preparatory to the Cathy Berberian Concert on Feb. 9 sponsored by the Division of Concerts. Dunning Aud.

8:00 pm - Amity 300 presents an Audio-Visual slide show on China. International Centre Lower Lounge.

8:30 pm - Manfrog - a Vancouver - based touring Co. Free performances (Studio Theatre, Rm. 102, Old Arts Building).

7:30 pm - Queen's Ski Club ticket sales for Tremblant Weekend (March 2,3 and 4) - John Orr Room. Price $40.00.

Thursday, Feb. 8

1:30 pm - Oil From the North. Lecture on Ecologic Aspects by F. Cooke. The implications of petroleum recovery and transportation for the ecology of northern Canada are discussed. Other environmental factors are also considered and an evaluation of the desirability of such development is made. Dupuis Hall Auditorium.

3:30 pm - Amity 300 Seminar on "Social and Economic Structures in the Philippines." Dupuis Hall Aud.

3:30 pm - Biology Dept. will present Dr. David Patriquin speaking on "Nitragen fixation, succession and sedimentation in the Caribbean marine grass beds." Ellis Hall. Rm 111.

7:00 pm - Engineering physics orientation for first year engineers. Tour of Stirling Hall plus refreshments. Stirling "A".

7:30 pm - Bridge Club. McLaughlin Rm. Students Union.

7:30 pm - Pollution Probe - ZPG combined meeting in St. James Anglican Church on the corner of Union and Barrie Streets. Topics for discussion: production of a joint news letter; initiating a joint eco-education programme (speakers information centre etc.); address from the ZPG executive (Dr. Gerry Morris or Dr. Bill Roff); recycling in Kingston; Dominion Stores policy on non-returnable bottles; and any other topics raised. Films for Queen's open house will be previewed. All interested people are invited to attend.

7:30 pm - Queen's Ski Club Ticket Sales for Whiteface Trip. (Sat. Feb. 10). John Orr Room. Price $14.00.

7:30 - 9:00 pm - The Medical Science Lecture Series will present Dr. Robert Volpe, Prof. of Medicine at U. of T. Lecturing on "The Etiology of Hyperthyroidism". Etherington Hall Auditorium.

8:00 pm - Amity 300 Variety Show. Displays native dress, buffet and live entertainment. Grant Hall. Admission $1.00.

8:30 pm - Manfrog - a Vancouver based Touring Co. Guildhall Theatre, 233½ Princess St.

8:00 pm - Milton Acorn on "Milton Acorn", 3rd floor common room, Union, Thursday, February 8th.

9:00 pm - Dept. of Film Studies presents "El Dorado." (Howard Hawks, 1966). Ellis Hall.

Friday, Feb. 9

8:00 pm - Amity 300 presents Indian Variety Show. Dances and music of India. Dunning Hall. Admission $1.00.

8:00 pm - Graduate Student Society Films presents "Take the Money and Run." (Co-authored and directed by and starring Woody Allen.) Ellis Hall.

8:30 pm - Division of Concerts presents Cathy Berberian in a programme of vocal works by Monteverdi, John Cage, Debussy, James Joyce, Berio, Kurt Weill, McCartney-Lennon and herself. Tickets $3 and $4. for non- students, $2. and $3. for students. Available from the Div. of Concerts Box Office, Agnes Etherington Art Centre (547-6194). Grant Hall.

8:30 pm - Manfrog - Vancouver based Touring Co. Guildhall Theatre, 233½ Princess St. Saturday evening as well.

Monday, Feb. 12

3:00 pm - Donald R. Cressey, internationally renowned criminologist, from University of California at Santa Barbara speaking on "Organized Crime: Myth or Reality". Ellis Hall Aud.

Off Campus

Theatres -

Feb. 9, 19, 11 - The Quiet Rebellion of Mrs. Mary Gordon. Domino Theatre. Tickets available at Domino and Mahoods.

Capitol - Deliverance

Hyland - 2001. Starting Fri. - Bluebeard.

Odeon - Skyjacked and The Carey Treatment.

HIGHLIGHTS ON CFRC-FM, 1490

THURSDAY Feb. 8th

7:30 The Goon Show Comedy with Spike Milligan, Harry Secombe and Peter Sellers. Tonight's Goon Show is "The Jet-Propelled Guided Naafi".

FRIDAY Feb. 9th

8:00 GOLDEN GAEL HOCKEY The Golden Gaels meet Laurentian University.

CARNAVAL de QUEBEC

Final Big Weekend

(March 2,3, 4)

$30 All Welcome

- Includes accomodation in downtown area and bus to and from Quebec.
- Only 4 buses going.

ONLY A FEW SPACES LEFT!

- Deposit of $10 due before Feb. 9. Balance by Feb. 21.
- Sign up at the Bus Service Desk in the basement of the Union.

Sponsored by ARTSCI '76

Death and the Devil: A Provocative Production

machpherson

Morison Bock and Diane Rutter in final scene

by Sandy Naiman

There were some very effective moments in the Guildhall Theatre's productin of Frank Wedekind's strangely perverse little playlet, Death and the Devil, this weekend. Set in a surreal setting, this dance of death explored the landscapes of spiritual morality and sexual ecstacy, and Morison Bock's portrayal of Marquis Casti-Piani, the daemonic proprietor of a whore house was by far the most stringent.

The play concerns his confrontation with Miss Elfriede Von Malchus, who has come to his brothel to rescue a former employee who has fallen into a career of selling her favours. As a champion of a movement to eradicate white female slavery, Elfriede, played by Miss Diane Rutter, epitomizes all 'that is grotesque and' absurd in womanhood for the Marquis. In the discussion that ensues he manages to win her over with his sophisticated ideas about he beauty of the sensual life and the true sacrifice that women can make when entering into it.

Mr. Bock has developed his character completely and is not prone to speaking with the speed of lightning he so fears will eventually cause his death. Miss Rutter, on the other hand, speaks so quickly that much of what she says is lost or else she stumbles over her own speeches.

Although Mr. Bock's voice and appearance resemble Vincent Price in an old Dracula movie, because he has every detail of his character acutely determined his portrayal is not so much a comic caricature as a portrait of evil at its best. His fingers clutch and caress his glass with superb finesse and as Elfriede tries to clumsily seduce him he recoils with the slimy grace and natural beauty of a cobra. He lives to the fullest his ideal of the sensual life.

When they both retreat behind two screens to watch Elfriede's former employee, Lisiska, played by Carol Ann Reid, try to seduce a customer the play falls flat. Miss Reid looks more like the Queen's student she is than a young seductress. When she speaks, she appears to be simply reciting lines which she has recently committed to memory. One feels that if she cannot get them out fast enough she will probably not get them out at all.

As the young man who she seduces, Peter Hartwell is more believable and comfortable on stage. He succumbs rather nicely on her honest innocence instead of her physical advances for her verbal entreaty is far more persuasive.

All the players wear masks, which visually complement the red and black set and add to the surrealistic vision Director Gordon McCall has conceived. However, only in Mr. Bock's case, does the mask really work. The other members of the cast seem more hampered than helped by them, whereas with his slow meticulous guarded movements he uses his entire body to colour his character.

Mr. Wedekind's strangely inverted view of the feminist chauvinist debate in nonetheless poignant in this production, in spite of the acting problems. The confrontation of illusory and real values, of social views and secular ideals triumphs and in light of current feminist controversy, the play bears special significance. Although Wedekind lived and wrote in the latter 19th and early 20th centuries, his play has a universal and timeless quality. He was constantly struggling for the sexual liberation of mankind, according to some critics, and this play is testimony to his struggle. His beliefs in the metaphoric martydrdom of orgasmic death as opposed to the sterility of middle class bourgeois values are presented in mildly flowery prose but with none of the satiric flavour that Shaw infused upon his debates.

Mr. McCall has used some excellent technical devices, red light and spine tingling sound effects to polish his production. Although the play is very short it presents an extremely interesting ideological discussion of the issues and the social views of the male-female relationship and Mr. Bock's excellent performance should not be missed, for the play is clearly his.

machpherson

Carol Reid and Peter Hartwell during seduction scene

"The Art of Berio and Berberian"

On February 7, 1973, at 8 p.m. in Dunning Hall, Professor Istvan Anhalt, Head of the Music Department will give a public lecture on "The Art of Berio and Berberian". The talk will introduce the forthcoming recital of the internationally acclaimed mezzo-soprano Cathy Berberian, that is to take place on February 9, at 8:30, in Grant Hall, sponsored by the Division of Concerts.

Cathy Berberian, renowned for her wide repertoire and her innovative concert-programming, is known foremost for her contribution to contemporary music. Her extraordinary vocal interpretative qualities have inspired the creation of numerous composition by major contemporary comoosers such as Henry Pousseur, Darious Milhaud, John Cage, Silvano Busotti, and of course Luciano Berio, who was among the first to discover the potentialities of her unusual vocal gifts. Berio composed for Cathy Berberian, "Circles", "Epifanie", "Omaggio a Joyce", "Visage", "Sequenza III", "Folk Songs", among other works. The association of Luciano Berio and Cathy Berberian, in fact, is one of the most interesting and fruitful musical alliances in the world of contemporary music.

Professor Anhalt, himself a composer of a number of experimental vocal and choral works, has lectured widely about contemporary vocal music. His talk would provide interesting insights into the art of Cathy Berberian and its relationship to that of one of the foremost contemporary composers of our time, Luciano Berio. . .

At McArthur

Caucasian Chalk Circle - Uninspiring But With Charm

by Sandy Naiman

Vaguely analagous to the Biblical story of Solomon and the two wives who are given the option of slicing their baby in half to test which is the true mother, Bertolt Brecht's Caucasian Chalk Circle shifts location and time but tells basically the same story.

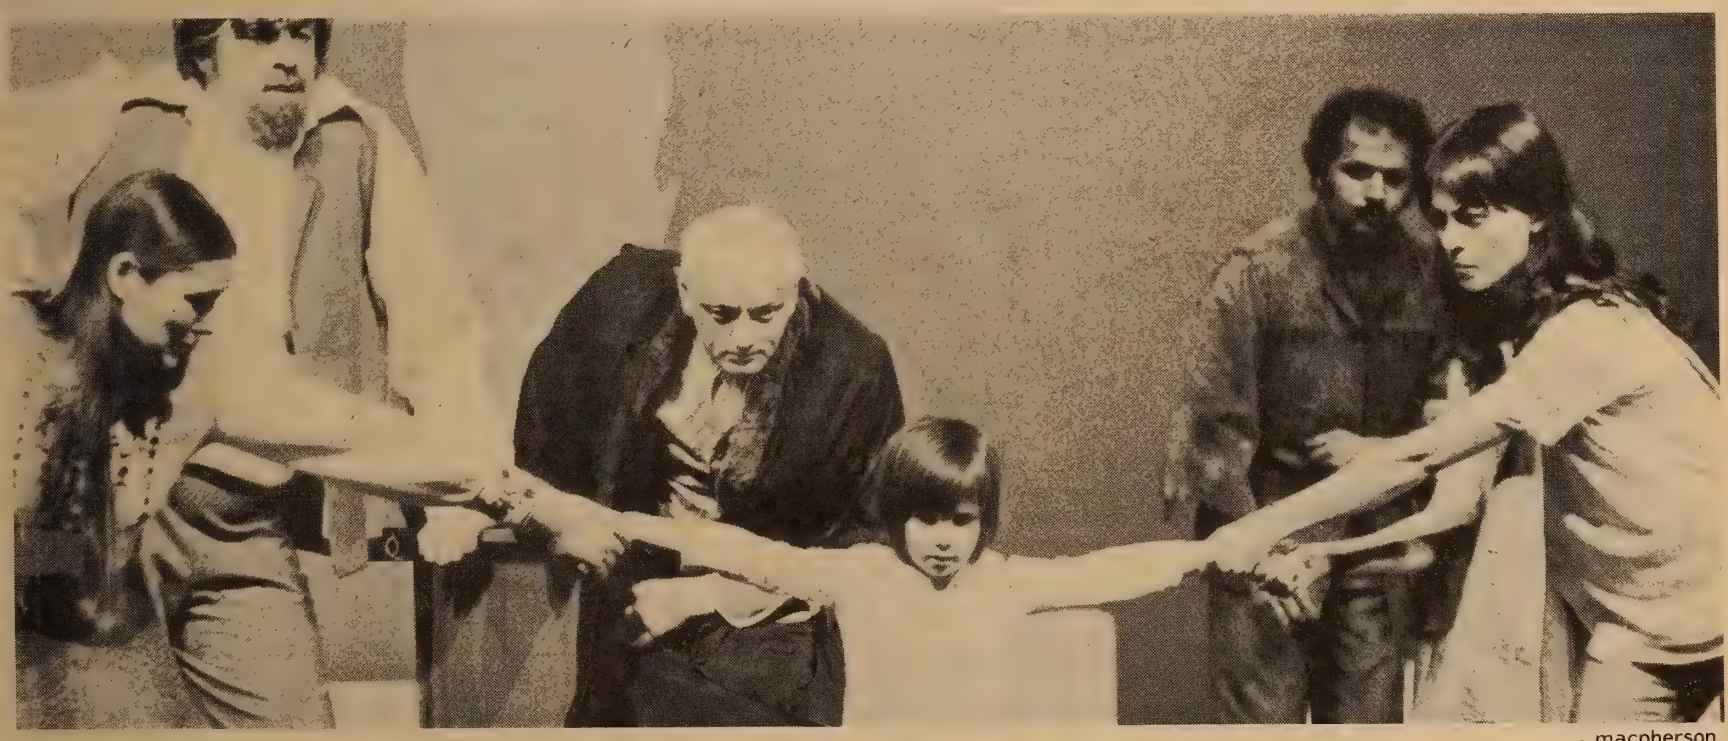
Set in Medieval Russia, the first act of this epic drama, staged last week at McArthur College by an almost exclusive student cast and crew, tells of Grusha, the meek kitchen maid who adopts the slain Governor's son when he is left behind, as his mother goes into exile. This production had some interesting ideas which unfortunately went astray in a performance which lasted a gruelling three and a half hours.

The set, designed by Paul Moulton, is simply a collection of shapes which when arranged in various designs became the Governor's courtyard, a bridge over a deep precipice, a peasant's home and a prosecutor's court. The idea is a valid one, but so much time is spent in the arranging of these blocks that the first act, in particular, seemed to drag on interminably from scene to scene. The white set was a welcomed departure however from the Brechtian tradition which is consumed with dark browns and drab greys.

Kathy Toth's portrayal of Grusha was touching in a rather contrived way. Only in the final scene, in which she confront's Azdak, the Judge, does her dignity and grace come forth with intensity and force.

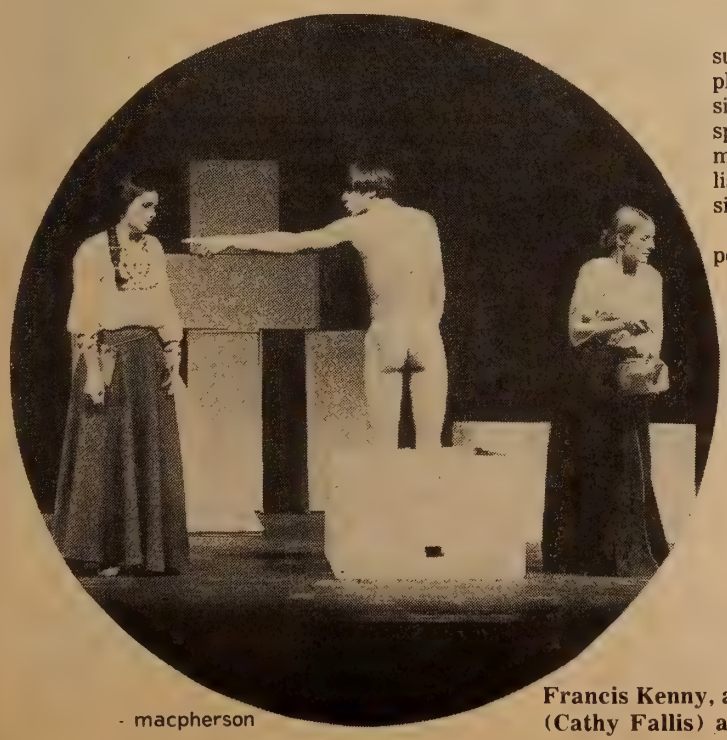
Donna Killoran, as the Governor's spoiled and obnoxious wife is highly amusing and decidely casting Miss Killoran was a stroke of genius on the part of Director John Burgess.

The first act is composed of many scenes which plausibly could have been cut out to speed up the production. The last act moved much more smoothly and the portrayal of Azdak, by Andreww Orr was one of the finest in the entire production. In fact, the second act focuses on his rise from drunken poaching to drunken prosecuting, his comical drinking bouts and his manipulation of his servants, Shauwa, played rather well by David Kemp. And finally, as the Robin Hood of the law courts by despensing mercy and justice to the poor instead of the rich, he pronounces the verdict in the test of the Chalk Circle, which awards to Grusha, the Governor's son. His performance is energetic and exciting and he encompasses a strange combination of compassion and lustiness throughout.



Norman Campbell as the singer narrator had some very mediocre music to deal with, for John Reeves score is in no way comparable to his lilting, hummable tunes for the Drama Department production of The Mother earlier this year. This is a disappointment, since there is so much musical accompaniment in the production and since Mr. Campbell semed rather uncomfortable singing much of it.

His performance however, is surprisingly good. He has a pleasant, though not spectacular singing voice and his usual speaking pattern, which loses the middle of sentences for the listener is not present, when he sings.



- macpherson

Kathy Toth as Grusha protecting child from Ironshirt, (Frank Brown).

- macpherson

The test of the Chalk Circle with Andrew Orr as Adzak officiating.

- macpherson

Francis Kenny, as Grusha husband takes a bath, with mother (Cathy Fallis) and wife looking on.

There are several other good performances in the large cast.

The lecherous ironshirt, played by Rrank Brown is one of the best. He epitomizes the humorous villain. Peter Daly, as the Drunken Monk was also immensely amusing, when trying to marry Grusha, to her dying groom. Francis Kenny, who is revived with the news that he will not be drafted, plays a reluctant husband quite convincingly and Cathy Fallis as his mother, also have some excellent portrayals of aging women, throughout the production.

The outstanding element of this Caucasian Chalk Circle is its simplicity. The unpretentiousness of its overall conception which takes the script in its most direct and primary interpretation, works rather well. It does not make heavy demands on the audience, except of course in its length, but visually it had a great deal of charm and aesthetically it was rather refreshing.

Unfortunately though, on Thursday night, the cast seemed to lack any enthusiasm or sparkle. The production dragged as a result and the scenes seemed to blend into one another in a miasma of despondency. Even the final scene, one of joy and happiness, was restrained and subdued.

Nevertheless, the production had some good moments and Dirctor John Burgess and his Associate Owen Moulton triumphed in part, in the first student production at McArthur College. And although the show was not an inspiring one, or one which could be said to be stunning, it had a certain charm. It's just a shame it was so long.

Wonderful Town Triumphs in a Sparkling Show

by Sandy Naiman

"Wonderful Town", the rather trivial musical adaptation of the Broadway hit play, "My Sister Eileen" by Leonard Bernstein, Betty Comden and Adolph Green, played last week at the Grand Theatre. Queen's Musical Theatre revived this show, as seems to be the vogue right now, updated it from the mid thirties to the early sixties and took a responsive audience for a glorious ride into the Bohemian Beatnik section of New York's Greenwich Village.

Although the songs themselves are not as memorable as other Berstein compositions, from On the Town and West Side Story, they are performed with supreme enthusiasm and pinache by a cohesive, fun loving cast and chorus. This show is one of those rare ones, which triumphed on Broadway when it opened even though the score has sunk into oblivion since. It happens occasionally, when the songs are deeply woven into the fabric of the play but cannot stand on their own when removed from sets, costumes and the context of their environment. Nevertheless, last Wednesday's production was almost flawless. For an opening night, it ran smoothly with almost no technical problems, the pace never faltered and scene changes were executed quickly and easily.

Essentially, the story of "Wonderful Town" is almost too simple. The plot, if you can call it that, conerns the adventures of two sisters, Ruth and Eileen Sherwood, who come to New York from Columbus, Ohio to seek their fortune, Ruth as a writer and Eileen as an actress. After that, and really that's all there is, you are invited to share the adventures and misadventures they encounter along the way. However the chronicle is a charming one, and the menagerie of weird and wondernul types which parade across the stage throughout the show add to the story the flesh that it needs.

Director Jill Hodkinson begins the show with a nice touch which she uses several times throughout. A guide takes some tourists through The Village and the audience becomes part of the fare. As the typical tourists roam through the crowds, snapping pictures and clicking tongues in wide eyed amazement, the curtain rises on a colourful street scene which vibrates with activity and energy. Christopher Street becomes home to the Sherwood sisters even though the lifestyles indigenous to that address are a little more difficult for them to adopt.

Ruth is played superbly by Kathy Robertson. As the girl with more brains than beauty (as the script and not the eye implies) Miss Robertson delivers her sarcastic little quips with a perfect mixture of cynicism and sincerity. She sparkles throughout and sells her songs with incredible verve and gusto. This fervour is particularly evident during a routine in which she must ward off the physical advances of four aggressive Brazilian Cadets, while dancing the Conga and singing a complicated song. And in a solo entitled A Sure Way To Lose A Man, she tells about the social failures she's encountered with similar vigour.

Sharon Keates, as her sister Eileen, is equally beguilling. She is simply and totally adorable. Miss Keates combines an angelic singing voice with a Lolita like innocence which not only charms every man in New York but the entire audience as well. She is almost too sweet, through no fault of her own, but the script which is virtually 30 years old has to show it wrinkles somewhere. Thus the character of Eileen, the sweet, virginal girl-next-door, singes the sweet tooth a bit. Musically Miss Keates is exceptional. Her voice is crystal clear and when she sings and dances the Irish Jig in My Darlin' Eileen, in A Little Bit of Love and with her sister in Ohio, the scriptual deficiencies of character go unnoticed.

Lee David, who plays Bob Baker, also has an exceptional voice, but in his role as the all too sympathetic publisher he only gets a few opportunities to show it off. In the beautiful ballad, "It Love" and "What a Waste" Mr. David's vocal clarity and strength are clearly apparent. It is unfortunate that Mr. David's acting role is so innocuous. He plays a very serious man, dedicated to his work and bent upon discouraging unpromising young writers. (Ruth is not among these.) But in last year's show, Mr. David demonstrated not only a fine singing voice but an accutely tuned comic sense and in this show he is given no occasion to use it.

The show includes some very funny smaller roles. Tim Budd, the robust and rotund Wreck clearly scores in his song Pass the Football.

Rob Schock, as the clumsy drugstore soda jerk tumbled and tripped delightfully during his nervous attempts to court Eileen, and Paula David, the anxious expectant mother-in-law was appropriately obnoxious. Patricia Jones as Mme. Valenti, proprietress of the Village Vortex, bumped and ground to perfection and Margaret Duff as Violet, the ousted call girl made her message crystal clear.

Only Doug Mann's characterization of Appolous, the cunning Greek landlord and artist was not up to the other performances. His affected accent seemed to hamper him, more than create the authenticity he was trying to achieve.

Tony Keenleyside, as Chick Clark, the tough and gritty newspaperman, was a little to clean cut and smooth, but his performance was consistent, well timed and paced.

This year's chorus was generally of a much finer calibre than in past shows. Chorus members were called upon to play in several different capacities and Marg Wood's costumes seemed to aid in this pursuit. Her police uniforms were particularly authentic.

Choreographers Liz Driver and Andrea Howard designed dances which were simple but spontaneous, and which allowed the cast to enjoy itself, and this was most apparent.

Alan Watts' sets were meticulously built and cleverly designed. The outdoor park scenes had a quaintness and closeness which the Village typifies. His Village Vortex entrance was simple but eye catching. His use of colour was pleasing and seemed to reflect the bohemian atmosphere in which the action takes place.

And finally Dr. Duane Bates orchestra performed beautifully and sensitively. The orchestra played to peak volume in the big production numbers but toned down considerably when solos were being sung.

I must admit that this year's location for the musical far surpasses last years auditorium. Although the Grand is probably harder to fill it is a much more functional theatre for a musical, with good pit facilities and equipment to fly scenery.

"Wonderful Town" is typical of the entertainment of its period. When the United States was in the throes of a depression, her songwriters and storytellers gave her sweet sweet stories through which to escape. But they were not too sentimental. They were charming vignettes, almost fairy tales, but always with a sharper edge, always with a finger on reality. This story is a simple one of young girls making good in the big city and finding a little romance as well. It is a remnant of the musical theatre which we don't often get the opportunity to see today, except in revivals or on the late show. What was simple and sweet and palatable in the forties has given way to sleasiness and sophistication. This show does not boast sophistication, but good clean fun. It has all the ingredients of a good show, even though it is dated somewhat. Great music, believable characters, romantic entanglements, complications and lots of very amusing caricatures to add colour and dimension to a show which could easily have become a one woman show.

With Jill Hodkinson's sensitive direction the limelight is spread out and it belongs to everybody.

Kentucky Fried Chicken
542-2773
286 Montreal St.
Your closest Aunt Lucy's
Take Home Store

RED CROSS Swimming Instructors To all Red Cross

Swimming Instructors re: qualification clinics March 3 or March 10. For further information call 546-3940 or 389-3368.

MANFROG Travelling Troupe
presents
SONGS OF THE CITY
Feb. 6 & 7 - 8:30 p.m. -
Studio Theatre (Room 102, Old Arts)
Feb. 8 - 10 - 8:30 p.m. -
Guildhall Theatre (Princess St.)
FREE

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY CONVOCATIONS 1973

May 25th, 2:30 p.m.	QUEEN'S THEOLOGICAL COLLEGE
	FACULTY OF EDUCATION
May 26th, 10:00 a.m.	FACULTY OF APPLIED SCIENCE
	SCHOOL OF BUSINESS
May 26th, 2:30 p.m.	SCHOOL OF GRADUATE STUDIES AND RESEARCH
	FACULTY OF MEDICINE
	FACULTY OF LAW SCHOOL OF NURSING
	SCHOOL OR REHABILITATION THERAPY
June 2nd, 10:00 a.m.	FACULTY OF ARTS AND SCIENCE
	B.A. (A-H), B.A. (Hons.)
June 2nd, 2:30 p.m.	FACULTY OF ARTS AND SCIENCE
	B.A. (I - Z), B.A.E., B. Mus.,
	B. Sc. (Hons.)
	SCHOOL OF PHYSICAL AND HEALTH EDUCATION

Note: Graduates are advised that the Alma Mater Society owns a full complement of academics hoods, gowns, and mortorboards (optional). These are made available on a non-profit rental basis as a service to graduating students. Specific details regarding rental of these garments will appear in the Journal in March. All queries relating to academic garb should be directed to the A.M.S. Office or Doug Romans, 546-2040; those relating to other aspects of Convocations should be directed to the Office of the Secretary, 547-6203.

Hockey Gaels fourth ..... for now

by Peter Watts

Queen's Golden Gaels emerged from their weekend roadtrip to Toronto with a loss in a game in which they played well and a win in which they played just well enough to win. The two points gained were enough to ensure them of at least a temporary hold on the fourth and final playoff spot in the east division of the OUAA.

Friday night's game in York was one of the Gaels best efforts of the season. The team came out hitting and skating in the first period and held a 1-0 lead until midway through the second. Jim Sunstrum got the opening goal for Queen's in the first period, wrapping home a rebound after Colin Loudon had done a lot of hard work in the corner to get the puck out in front of the York goal. In the second period the Gaels hit two goal posts but it was York who finally scored; Barry Jenkins got the goal. A few minutes later, Mike Travis put York in front 2-1. Dave Hadden brought the Gaels even again with a goal and it looked as though the Gaels might be able to get at least a tie. However, Dave Wright scored with about 5 minutes to play in the third period, and the Yeomen got their fourth goal into an empty net with just seven seconds to play in the game.

Despite the loss, the team played well. Bill White, who played centre between Norm Goulet and rookie Craig Shannon played a strong two-way game for Queen's. Dave Hadden also played well as did rookie defenseman Chris Clark.

On Saturday evening, the Gaels met Ryerson in what was merely a formality as far as the Gaels were concerned. In the first period, Queen's took a 2-1 lead and it appeared obvious that the team was not mentally prepared for the game. Jim Sunstrum and Norm Goulet scored for Queen's while Dave Fargueharson replied for Ryerson. The second period, however, saw Queen's exert itself a little more, counting five goals to Ryerson's one. Sunstrum and Goulet added their second goals of the night while John Cerre also got two and Bob Kindon added another. Glen Nicholson scored for Ryerson in the second period. Manny Silias of the Rams got the lone third period goal. The Gaels went with Clyde Harris in the nets in the first half but coach Bob Carnegie switched to rookie Dave Dungey for the rest of the game. Harris allowed the first goal and Dungey allowed the other two. He played very well, however.

The Camel kick one out vs. York mossman

Queen's thus has at least a share of fourth place in the east division. The results of the Toronto-Ottawa game were not known at press time but if Toronto won then Queen's is alone in fourth. Regardless, the Gaels must win tonight's game in Ottawa against the GeeGees. It will not be easy. It will take 110 per cent from everybody to beat Ottawa. Let's hope that the White line can keep playing the way it has been in the last three weeks. Guys like Cerre and Goulet could be the key to Queen's success on Tuesday night. One can usually count on Sunstrum, Loudon, Adair, Hadden, and Harris to do the job but a united effort from the supporting cast would ensure a victory. It's a four point game. Good luck Gaels.

classified

MALE AND FEMALE MODELS needed for figure studies. Will pay professional rates. Phone Clark at 547-3178 tonight after 7:00 and tomorrow between 3:00 and 6:00 p.m.

PAMELA - Keep smiling.

AUF WEIDERSEHEN is our way of saying farewell to all our fellow Queen's students. Come and eat, drink, and dance for only $6.00 a couple, from 7:30 until 1:00, at the 401 Inn on March 10.

FOR SALE: BESSON Stratford B-Flat Trumpet. Brass and nickel finish. In excellent condition. $150.00 new. $75.00 or best offer. Phone 544-9017.

WOULD WHOEVER found my red and cream coloured wallet please let me know. Phone 544-8641

TWO GOOD SIZED rooms available in ideally located 5-person student house (193 Colbourne Ave.) Cooking facilities, fridge, stove, shower bath, parking. $50.00 per month per person. Available IMMEDIATELY, Call 544-4386.

WANTED: 2, 3, OR 4 Persons to share nice house with one other for 73-74. Males or females welcome. Phone Days-547-2612, ask for Dave; nights after 11:00 pm. 542-9648

LOST: Thursday, February 1, one black umbrella. If found please call Chris at 544-0913.

DON'T let this school year end with a whimper but a BANG! Attend the graduation dance, Auf Weidersehen, sponsored by ARTSCI '74. Dress is not too formal, in other words, a tux is not required.

Answers to THE ELECTION QUIZ: 1. T 2. F 3. T 4. T 5. T 6. F 7. T 8. T 9. T 10. T 11. T 12. F 13. T 14. T 15. T 16. T 17. T 18. T 19. T 20. T 21. T 22. T 23. F 24. T 25. T 26. T 27. T 28. T 29. T 30. T 31. T 32. T 33. T 34. T 35. T 36. T

TO THE JIVERS at 154 . .Thanks for the pre and post. L.K., J.K., and A.P. WE'LL DO it again sometime only a little bit slower . . Dan and Woody GAELS: Important Meeting Thursday Feb. 8. For time and location see Golden Words on Wed. and notices around campus. ASUS Orientaton Committee.

SCIENCE '44 CO-OP Application Deadline: Feb. 17, 1973. Don't forget this weekend's Open Houses - Feb. 10

TO SUE H. AND friends: Thank you from the QSC for your generosity last Saturday night.

QCF BANQUET Ambassador Dining Lounge, Friday Feb. 10, 6:45 p.m. Tickets - $3.99, Speaker - Dr. James Naismith

THE THEORY of Calculus: Take the Reciprocal of P x V and integrate, thereby reversing the proportionality constant. This implies the truncation of several variants, leaving us with dDIRTY DAVE-dt - dCAPT. CALCULUS -dt + dDD-dt ARTSCI 74 extends their invitation to all Queen's Students on March 10 as they present Auf Weidersehen, a dinner and dance at the 401 Inn.

LOST - a paperback copy of "Gulliver's Travels" (edited by R. Greenberg)from deep within "25" and a scarf with a Union Jack design that was left in the Ban Righ Cloak Room. (It was one of those days!) If anyone knows their whereabouts, I'd appreciate a call. Ask for Deb at 544-8205. Thanks.

GAEL GROUP No. 8 - is still alive and stompin'! Watch your mail for Friday's bash! Burnie & Deb.

ROOM FOR RENT: 1.5 blocks from Campus, clean, quiet, run of house, owner a grad student. 197 Frontenac, 548-3470

LOST: 1 pair of Bauer Hockey Skates (7½) Thursday morning in Stirling "D" - of very important value. If found please call 544-7071. REWARD.

BEE-Happy Birthday, from Bruce, Jules, Meatball and Don.

DO YOU HAVE WHAT WE WANT? Our tent leaks, our rubber boots have holes and our rubber ducky has the sniffles. So, if we don't find a two bedroom apartment or an enormous umbrella for next year, we're screwed. Call Sandy 544-8406 or Helen 544-8436

PLEASE: Would the person who made off with my back-fenderless blue three speed from Donald Gordon House last term please let me know where it can be found. Phone 544-7541.

PAUL is a chicken, A & S Inc.

WANTED: 4TH Person for house 233 Johnson St. Immediate Occupancy 542-5445.

WANTED: 1 Male to share torrid love affair with, for no more or less than 1 week. Male Flashers preferred but not particular. Call Daisy Flasher or Bernard & Bernard Associates.

AVAILABLE MAY 1st, for next school year, large modern one-bedroom apartment, ideal for two people, $150.00 per month, unfurnished, 10 minutes from campus. Call 542-4341

SPECIAL AND GRACIOUS THANKS to all who helped in Artsci '76 Grand Fiasca. Keep on pucking (sorry, but could I help myself?) After all, our class pres. is now avoided by most. Next year the history of Tiddlywinks as told by a Tibetan monk. Thanks again. Love Pops and Dirty Daughter.

THANKS AND CONGRATULATIONS to all those who helped decorate Grant Hall for the semi last week. We now have $50 to spend on a party for all involved. Time and place to be announced soon. I'll talk to all later. Thanks again. Dave Searle.

DEB, BRENDA AND MARY-ANN-you're welcome too. Dave.

THANKS FROM BOO HOO AND TEE HEE to all who helped with Snowball '73. Harry Ort!!! Di Surgenor, Andrea Davidson, Leslie Bankes, Rob MacKnight, Robin Nunn, Patty Muldoon, Marney Cousins, Lizza Fawcett, Lea Hanson, Kathy Lawton, Lizza Sherwin, Sue Meech, Sue Harper, O.T.B., Don Cameron Steve Sibold, Variety Show workers and performers, Patsie MacKemmie, Billy Routledge, Chris Taylor, Brenda Nethery, Addie II, Labatts, AMS constables, and all who decorated, bartended, worked at doors, supported mentally and physically (??). Also thanks to whoever gave us flowers. XO Sue and Dodo.

6.5 x 11 bold classifieds...

A Man For All Seasons

Thursday, February 8

7:00 AND 9:30 P.M.

DUNNING AUD.

ADMISSION $1.00

—CINEGUILD—

ASUS

Meet the Candidates Night

Tuesday, February 6th

8:00 P.M. Red Room, Kingston Hall

All ASUS Candidates Will Be Present!

Meet Your Candidates Tonight! Be Educated!

25 People Have Shown Their Interest!

Please Support Them!

Council of Arts & Science Representatives

MEETING

—DSC representatives to Faculty Board

—DSC Chairman

—ASUS representatives to AMS Outer Council

—Divisional Councillors

Thurs., Feb. 8th

7:00 p.m.

Room 248 Goodwin Hall

Attendance is mandatory

Throw a Kegger.

A "Kegger" is a draft beer get-together that you can enjoy anywhere, anytime. All you need for a "Kegger" is an Oktoberfest Tap'n Keg with Mini-Keg refills, and you're on your way to good times. Draw as much as you want whenever you want it. When you run out, just drop in a Mini-Keg refill and draw another 16 eight-ounce glasses of fresh, cool Real Draft Beer.

Oktoberfest Real Draft Beer

OWIAA Gymnastics

Junior, Senior competitors spark 3rd-place finish

by Donna Melkman

Queen's women's gymnastics team lived up to expectations in Ottawa Saturday, winning two individual titles and finishing third overall in the OWIAA competition. The Gals collected individual wins in the Junior and Senior 'B' divisions, despite a general upgrading of competition, both in quality and in numbers (105 people took part).

In the Junior section, Kingstonian Sue Menard led the way with an overall victory, on the strength of a first in beam, seconds in vaulting and floor exercise,, and a fourth on the uneven bars.

Val Wilson added a third in floor, while Christa Craig placed 6th on the beam.

In the Intermediate division, the Gals had to settle for fourth overall, although Penny Smith, the last competitor of the championships, placed first on the beam, her only event. Cathy Smith added a fourth on floor, and Peggy Hutchinson came sixth in vaulting.

Lastly, Senior star Vivien Symington will be at the Nationals again this year, providing the school gives her the financial support she needs and deserves. Vivien placed first overall in the Senior 'B' division, and stood fourth, behind three olympians, in the Senior competition as a whole. She had firsts in floor exercise and uneven bars, a second in vaulting, and a most unfortunate fourth on beam, an event she is potentially very strong in.

boon

Junior all-around winner Sue Menard during floor rountine.

V-Ball Seniors out of playoffs

by Sue Moffatt

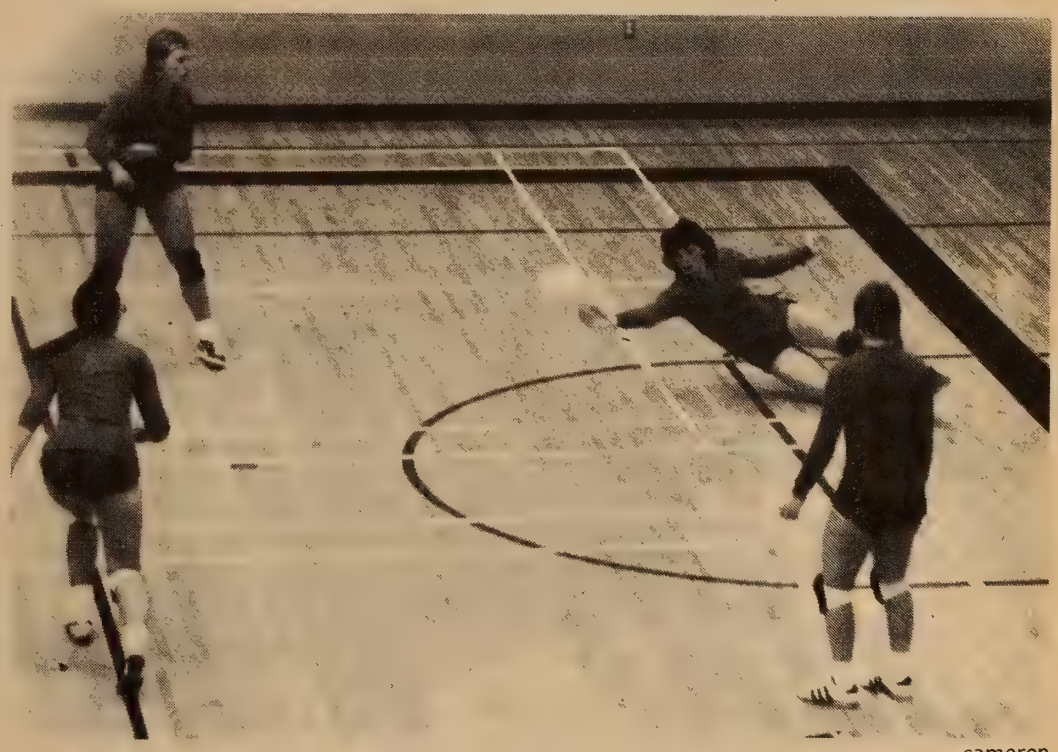
It was a discouraging weekend for Queen's Senior Volleyball Gals. With ironic perversity, they played their worst volleyball of the season in the two matches which demanded their best. In dropping three straight games to each of York and Toronto, they dimmed their fans' and team-confidence, and lost, irretrievably, their 3rd place play-off berth.

Although sudden upsets are far from unheard of in volleyball, there is no doubt that the odds on the T.O. game were heavily in the Blue team's favour. Friday's results were so disappointing by virtue of their degree.

The first game was incredibly fast. Although T.O. took an early 8-4 lead which Queen's could not close, there were many excellently contended volleys. Queen's serves were strong and well-placed so much so that 4 of our final 8 points were won on unrecovered serves. Both teams relied heavily upon digs and 3rd volley bumps as well as spikes. The exceptional height of many of the T.O. players made our blocking almost a token effort-but acclaim must be awarded those players who retrieved these spikes with many a knee-bruising dive and roll. Like any other team, given the ball often enough, Toronto muffs it. As long as Queen's offensive action was aggressive, the game was dynamic and the teams comparatively evenly matched.

But that was, and is, the point-their aggressiveness was not consistent. The will to win, the mental concentration which it demands, only flickered sporadically among the mediocrity of half-made plays. Throughout the match, Queen's undoubtedly had its moments of great competence, of which anyone who watches them knows they are capable. But the moments are not enough. What does it accomplish to fight skillfully for 3 points only to declare a rest period or state of mental torpor, and give away the next 5 on stupidly trivial mistakes? Somehow this team seems incapable of motivating itself as a unit. Individually, they work like veritable Trojans-at times. To be successful, a team must have 6 actively thinking, quickly reacting members on the court all the time. Our team just didn't have them this weekend.

Setters made last minute decisions or no decisions at all as far as their intended spikers. Back line players left gaping holes in the centre for T.O.'s benefit, and behind them for York's. Many players moved too slowly into position, arrived just this much too late, or just that little bit out of line to be really effective. These faults are not through lack of training or of skill, but are evidence of some far more serious absence of the intrinsic ability of each player to be 100 per cent aware of the play.



Once this team gets a few good offensive plays under their belts, they're golden. But make them play defensively, and they seem to develop a mental and physical paralysis that is horrible to behold. Each of the players could justifiably say she had tried- but was the attempt effective? Did she maybe just think she was trying, and forgot to concentrate intelligently about the play at hand? No doubt, the person who finds and cures this malaise of athletes will be made coach of the year from here to eternity.

The criticism is harsh, but it need be. This team had potential - it had trained hand, it can and has played championship ball. But scores of 14-8, 15-1, 15-3 to T.O. make such claims sound like the fantasizing of a loyal but myopic fan. And Saturday was no better.

In the first game, York outplayed Queen's 15-1 about which nothing can nor will be said. The second game was a different story. Queen's came from behind, 8-3 to lead York 11-10 in a swift reversal that put York in a distinctly more sober frame of mind. Helped by the fresh competency of rookies Pat Johnson and Linda Bell at the net, our team played with their fundamental calmness and organization. Then, at the last moment, they let it slip away to a 15-12 York victory.

The third game began with aggressiveness on the part of both teams. Queen's even took the lead. But their personal maleveolent genie descended upon them. They ceased to function as a team and let York just play around them. Soon it was all over, 15-6, and we were no longer 3rd place.

On February 16 and 17, our gals "advance", to the consolation rounds in Waterloo, a series of matches they should clean up with no problem. They should be playing the championship rounds. They know it. Anyone who has watched them knows it. Why they aren't is a mystery this weekend only emphasizes, but does not explain.

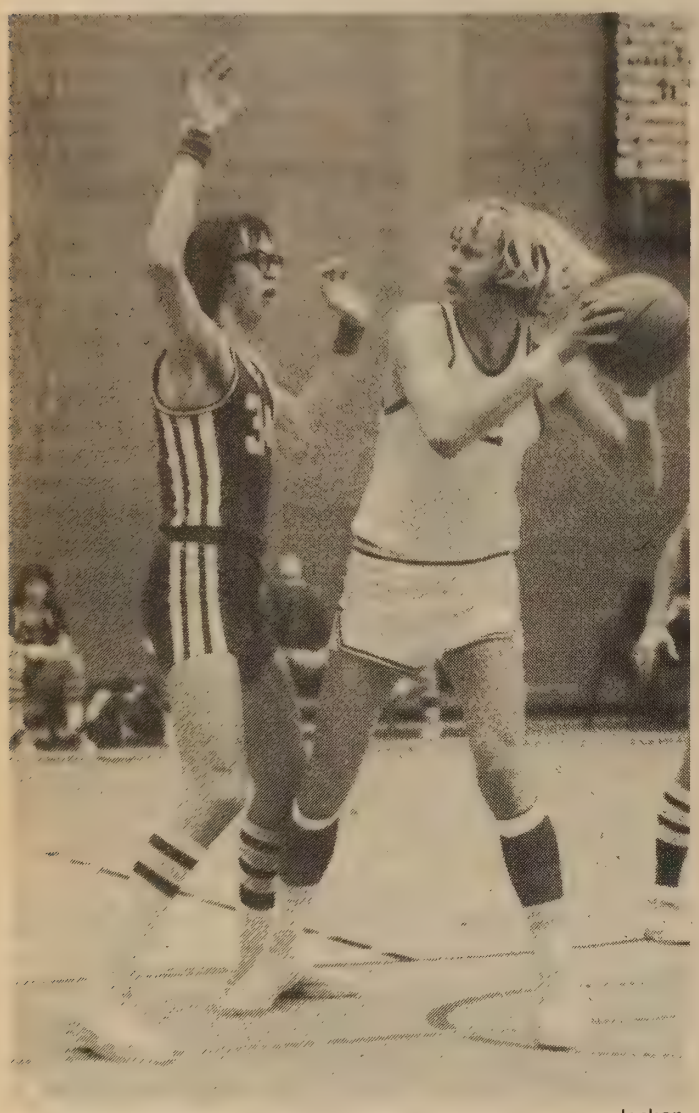
cameron

Queen's Gal makes diving save but to no avail.

Queen's jumpers clean up

Queen's Skydiving Club was represented by a six-man team at McGill University Skydiving Club's annual competition, at St. Antoine, P.Q., last weekend. Harro Trempenau and Brian Smith took first and second place senior trophies; John Rankin placed third in the novice class. Gillian Booth competed in the Intermediate class, Bruce Kyle in Junior, and Kit Spence in Novice.

The competition was efficiently organized, and two rounds of accuracy were completed on Saturday before the weather degenerated totally. An excellent banquet was provided by McGill, and the local hotel provided facilities for good times in the evenings. Heidelberg donated trophies, and a round of free beer for all after the meet.



The competition was attended by 60 jumpers, with Queen's, Carleton, Ottawa U., Algonquin College, Brock, Cambrian College, RMC, and McGill sending delegations.

B-Ball Gaels bury Rams but Sir George too much

by Chris Boon

The basketball Gaels split a pair of weekend games, but they picked the right one to win. Led by the 21-point performances of forwards Norm Hagarty and Derek Swinnard, Queen's buried the hapless Ryerson Rams 91-62 Friday night. Rob Smart with 14 points, and John Keck with 11, were the other scorers of note for the Gaels.

Saturday afternoon was another story. Sir George Williams fields a better team than Ryerson, and, aided by some of the most incredible refereeing ever seen at Queen's, downed the Gaels 69-58 before a sparse gathering of fans. Paul Howard led Queen's with 19 points, while Derek Swinnard, who appears to have regained his early-season scoring touch, tossed in 16.

decker

Paul Howard looks for a passing target

The really embarassing thing about Queen's 29-point win Friday was the level at which we were content to play. The Gaels looked somnolent all game, which is a damn fine trick when you score points on the fast break. In fact, it's almost a contradiction in terms. . .but we managed to do it anyway. Defense, or at least the lack of it, was another sore point. It may seem funny to worry about 'D' when you win by 29, but Ryerson actually out-rebounded Queen's, on the offensive boards, during the first half. The Rams had 36 points at the half. If the Gaels had chosen to box out a little underneath, and generally to show even a slight hint of hustle, the total could have been about half that.

Friday night did prove one thing conclusively: our second string is far superior to that of Ryerson - mainly because we have one. At least it's two points in the standings, and we need all we can get at this point.

The next afternoon, the game lacked even the excitement of victory. About the only thing that broke the uniform mediocrity of the game was the incredibly incompetent performance of a certain 'zebra' who shall remain nameless. Suffice it to say that his partner, one Charles Pester, was moved to offer his apologies afterwards for the problems caused by said nameless wonder; if that doesn't indicate that a new level of ineptitude was reached, nothing ever will.

decker

Norm Hagarty drives past Ram Friday night.

The Gaels will be back in action Tuesday night when they travel to Ottawa to take on Carleton in the Raven's Nest. Game time is apparently 8:00 pm, for the benefit of any hardy supporters who might be up to making the trip. Queen's has to win this one.

Refs unreal as senior Gals split

(STAFF) The University of Toronto's reputation for 'homer' refereeing came to the fore again this weekend as a pair of skirted stone-age lovelies combined with Varsity to down the senior basketball Gals 56-38. Laney Marshall, used to the at least competent calls of some of our local officials, was called for travelling no less than 11 times; many of these came on fast breaks and cost Queen's at least two points. To add injury to insult, three Queen's players were warned for uncomplimentary mutterings, and Pat Patterson, who is far from being a talker on the court, picked up a technical after suggesting that one of the refs take a quick trip out of the area. The Gals were within two points in the second half, but the zebras (plus the Blues) were a little too much for them.

Connie Crawford led Toronto with 17 points, while Pat Quigly and Karen Carson had 10 each for the Gals. Pat Patterson added 7 despite her problems with the refs.

The trip wasn't a complete loss in terms of points, though. The Gals overcame injuries to team captain Heather Dean (ankle), Jean Crichton (ankle) and Karen Flemming (knee, again) to dump York 54-34 on Saturday. Queen's attack was led by Laney Marshall with 17 points, while Karen Carson hit for 14 points. Melanie Leigh was high for York with 12 points.

In general, the Gals' play over the could be described as stale. Their offensive plays are anything but innovative, and appear limited in selection, while the hustling zone defense that stifled opponents before Christmas has been decimated by injuries and a decline in hustle. The Gals can still make the playoffs, but it will take a great effort from all concerned to do it.

Hockey Gals stay on top

(Staff) —Queen's Golden Gals hockey team downed McMaster 5-0 here Friday afternoon to remain on top of the OWIAA league standings. The Gals got two goals from Jane Moran and singles from Ginny Backus, Karen Howatson and Leslie Ferrari as they skated to an easy win over the Marlinettes. Reserve goalie Kathy Wright played the whole game in nets for the Gals, and made several good saves while putting up a steady performance.

The game was rather scrappy in the early going, but Queen's edge in skating asserted itself by mid-period, and the Gals controlled the rest of the game. Queen's led 1-0 after the first period, added two more counters early in the second, and scored the final goals in the dying minutes of the final period. Coach Cookie Cartwright singled out team captain Debbie Gilmour for special praise, noting that she had played well, and had been able to clear the puck effectively, something the Gals have not done well in recent games.

The Gals will conclude their regular schedule this weekend, meeting McGill in Montreal on Friday, then hosting Varsity here at 2:00 pm Saturday. The Gals will host the OWIAA playoffs here on the 16th and 17th of February, and would love to win it all at home.

OUAA-East next week

Queen's swamps R.M.C. in Snowball Gym meet

by Chris Woods

Queen's Men's Gymnastics Team virtually swamped the RMC gym team in the Snowball meet held last Wednesday. The Queen's team came off with a forty-point victory over the Redmen, in a meet which saw some very high scores.

Drew Strickland, for instance, registered a 9.2 score in Parallel Bars. All-around scores were correspondingly high; Strickland led the all-around standings with 52.24 points. (Unfortunately, somebody lost the results for me, so that I can't tell you anything else significant about the meet.)

Having dealt with what was probably the greatest gymnastic mismatch of the season, gymnastic enthusiasts should note that the preview of the biggest university gymnastic battle of the season will take place this Saturday at the Universite d'Ottawa gymnasium. The meet is the OUAA Eastern semi-finals, and Queen's and York will face off in this first league meet of the year. Indications are that the meet will be very close insofar as team standings are concerned. And whatever the team results, I think Queen's can be confident that at least one, if not two of its gymnasts, will survive the Ontario competitions to proceed to the CIAU gymnastics championship in Winnipeg in early March.

sport shorts

Squash wins first tournament ever

The men's squash team surprised the intercollegiate squash world Saturday by winning their own invitational tournament; Queen's edged York 33½ to 28, with Waterloo third with 20 points.

York's Saul Ticktin won the individual title, defeating Ron Fenn of Queen's in the semi-final match and Doug MacLean of Waterloo in the final. Rich Irvine and Stu Watt of Queen's won the 'B' and 'C' consolations respectively.

York are considered to be one of the "big three" in squash, so this team victory for Queen's should give them a lot of confidence in the OUAA finals. It was Queen's first-ever victory in a squash tournament.

Wrestlers beat Mac

Queen's wrestling team defeated McMaster 23-13 Saturday in Hamilton, but suffered some serious injuries inthe process. Kim Knight, one of the Gaels' best in the meet, suffered ligament damage in his final bout, and could be through for the season. Norm Staples injured his ankle Saturday as well.

Bruce McGill and Randy White, who have been improving steadily all year, paced the Gaels win in Hamilton with weight-class victories.

Next weekend, the matmen will be in Ottawa for the Central Ontario Open competitions.

Badminton Gaels sweep

The Badminton Gaels didn't lose a game as they swept to an easy victory in the annual Queen's Invitational Tournament this past weekend. Competing teams came from OUAA rivals Ryzrson, Carleton and Guelph.

These results may bode well for Queen's in the OU championships this coming Satureay, We hope so.

Ski Team disappointed

by Gail Munro

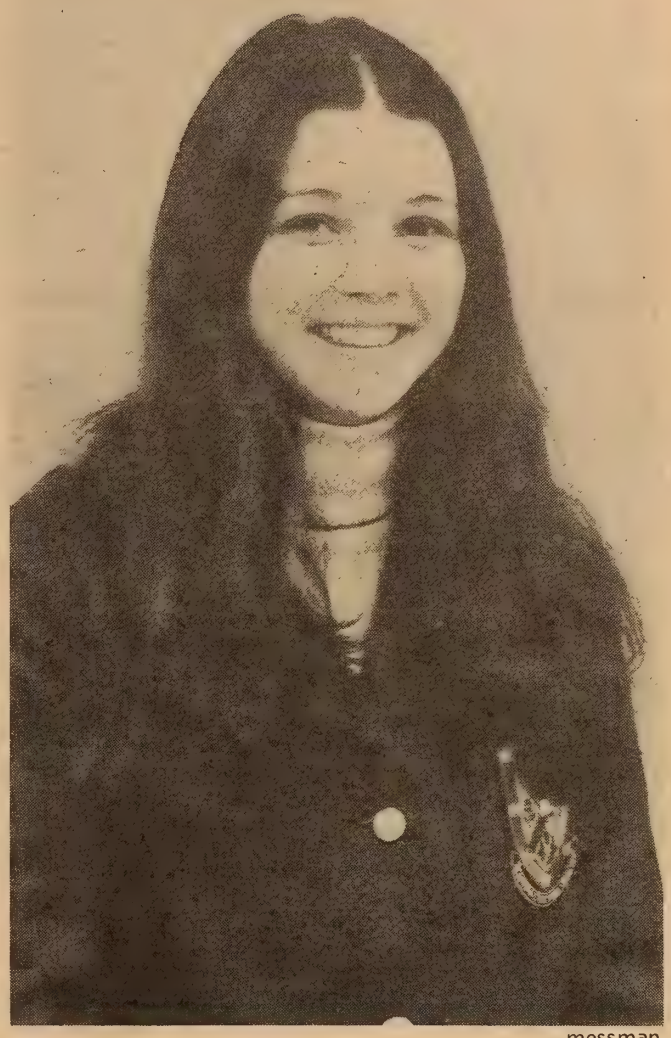
At the U. of T. Invitational Ski Meet held last Friday at Blue Mountain, Collingwood, the Mens' Alpine Ski Team dominated the individual standings but could not combine for a team victory. The race was a two-run giant slalom, the best 4 out of 6 times for each team to count. For the second time in as many meets, Queen's seemed assured of a win after the first run, only to have it snatched away in the final moments of the second, through a frustrating combination of falls and disqualifications. As a result Queen's did not have four finishers and so were out of the running for the team trophy, which was won by Laurentian University.

Bright spots in the meet for Queen's were strong individual performances by the Neilson brothers and Bob Archer. Ian Neilson placed 3rd with a combined time of 82.5, 1.2 seconds off the pace set by Peter McConville of Western. Jamie Neilson captured 4th spot with 82.8, and Archer finished 6th with 84.8. With two races now completed in this winter's six-race Molstar University Series, these three Queen's skiers are in excellent position for individual championship honours.

The most important race of the series, the OUAA Championships, are scheduled for next Friday and Saturday at Mont Ste. Marie.

Judy Krupanszky

Queen's fencer tops



by Judy Krupanszky

The University of Ottawa captured the OWIAA team fencing championship on Friday night in Toronto. The GeeGees finished with a perfect 5-0 mark. McMaster was second followed by McGill in third and the defending champions from Toronto in fourth. York finished fifth and Western was sixth.

The big story, however, as far as Queen's was concerned, happened on Saturday morning. Judy Krupanszky, captain of the Queen's team, captured the OWIAA individual championship in a very exciting bout with arch rival June Mallin of Ottawa. Both girls had been tied with identical 6-2 won-lost marks after the regulation 8 bouts. One of Judy's two losses had been at the hands of Miss Mallin. In the final bout, however, Judy was not to be denied and beat the Ottawa girl 4-1.

Going into the final matches, Judy had been second overall in the eastern section behind Miss Mallin. She started well, winning her first two matches but then lost two in quick succession. However, she rallied with four convincing victories which led up to the final bout. From then on, it was only a matter of time.

Robin Sargent of McMaster finished third behind Judy and June Mallin.

mossman

The championships will finish up women's fencing for this year. Obviously coach Jon Tondeur was more than satisifed with the year's results, although he expressed disappointment that the whole team had not been able to qualify for the team championship. However, with the exception of Judy, everyone else is in first year and some of the other schools will behard hit by graduation next season. The performance of this year's team speaks well for the future. To coach Tondeur, and to Judy Krupanszky and her teammates we express our congratulations for a job well done. And a special tip-o-the-hat to Mary Rowan who acted as the team's manager and did a great job all season long.

A 30-pt victory

Swim Gaels keep on winning

Queen's Golden Gaels swim team kept up their fine performance this past weekend with victories over Guelph, Ottawa and Ryerson in the Queen's Invitational Swim Meet held Saturday at the Queen's Pool.The Gaels finished in first place with 195 points, followed by Guelph with 160, Ottawa with 44 and Ryerson with 14. The team broke several individual and team records and coach LarryBrawley was very well satisifed with their performance.

Rookie John Pearson continues to show that he will be one of the finest swimmers ever to compete on behalf of Queen's. Pearson beat John Duncan of Ottawa in a photo finish to win the 200 yard butterfly, breaking his own record for the event for the sixth time this year. His time was 2:04:8. Pearson also broke his own record in the 100 yard butterfly and beat Duncan again, this time in 55.7 seconds. Pearson's third individual mark was a momentous one; he broke Rob Herman's two year old record for the 400 yard individual medley, cutting nearly 12.5 seconds off Herman's time. Herman himself missed equalling his old time by less than a second and wound up in third spot.

Besides setting three individual marks, Pearson helped Herman, John Ker and Steve Patterson to shatter the 800 yard freestyle relay, cutting nearly 11 seconds off their previous best time. Pearson and Herman then joined Darryl Penner and Brian Warren to win the 400 yard medley relay, although they had to come from behind to beat a determined team from Guelph. The Gaels have not been beaten in this particular event in any dual meet this year.

Queen's dominated the 50 yard freestyle event even with Steve Patterson finishing first, Penner third and Roger Rowan, fourth. Rowan pulled off a fine victory and surprised everybody by winning the 100 yard backstroke, the first time he has entered this event. Penner also picked up a first in the 100 yard breaststroke while Herman finished third and veteran George Craig fourth.

The diving Gaels cleaned house in their part of the competition, winning the top three positions in both the one and three metre events. On the one metre board, Phil Millard finished on top with 325 points followed by Tom Kirkpatrick with 304 and Tom Caswell with 281. The three metre event was won by Kirkpatrick with 387 points followed by Millard with 321 and Caswell with 285.

Probably the highlight of the meet, though, was the 1650 yard freestyle in which Queen's competitor Jim Easto swam one of his best races ever. It would have been a little faster, but Easto parted company with his swim suit midway through the event. Despite admonishments from his teammates to keep on going regardless, Easto stopped to rectify the situation; the result being that he lost valuable time and finished sixth in the overall standings.

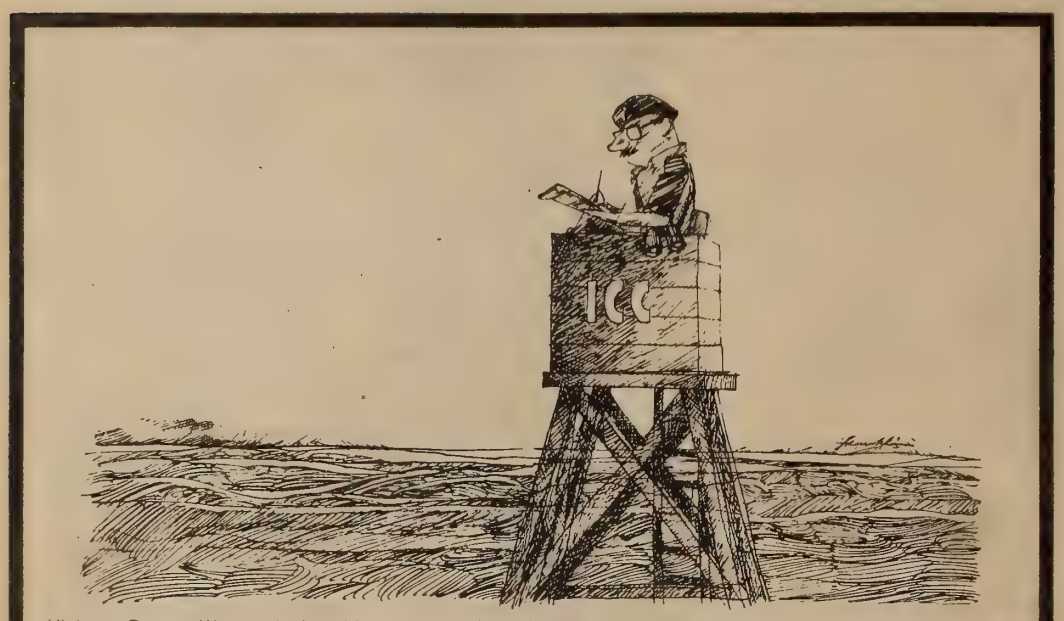
At any rate, it was a good all-round performance by the team as everyone who participated contributed points to the overall team standings. We look for more of the same in the weeks to come.

Death toll at 701

World: Ulster militants declare "war"

BELFAST — Violence in Northern Ireland is raging out of control after a virtual declaration of war by the two opposing religious forces.

Militant Protestants of the Ulster Defense Association announced that because of Irish Republican Army provocations, they could no longer hold their extremists in check and added that they would no longer try to.



The Catholic IRA replied strongly, asserting that they would take "ruthless retaliatory action" and that they treated the UDA announcement as a declaration of war.

With the outbreak of a rash of bombings during the past few days, the death toll in Northern Ireland for the three and a half years of violence now stands at 701.

SAIGON — After being stalled for a week because the Joint Military Commission was not ready to approve the deployment of observers into the field, the International Commission of Control and Supervision has finally been given the go ahead.

According to the ceasefire agreement, there should have been seven ICCS regional teams in place by last Tuesday but the military commission composed of the four combattants delayed the appointment of the necessary meeting with the ICCS required before deployment.

The United States has begun removing and deactivating the thousands of mines in North Vietnamese waters as required in the Paris agreement. There will be a complete swap of information by the two parties as to the locations of the mines and any hazards in removing them. Both countries will be participating in the removal activities.

Vietnam Report: We are deployed in an area which might have been a lush forest at one time, extending eastward through terrain scorched and churned to a cluster of annihilated rice paddies. A half-mile farther and slightly to the north is probably a village site, as evidenced by the remains of a chicken-coop. There is no foliage; no sign of life.

UNITED NATIONS — In answer to a request by the Zambian government, the United Nations Security Council has approved the sending of an observer team to survey her communications needs under the present Rhodesian economic blocade. There have bee repeated border skirmishes between the two countires provoked by attacks from Zambian black nationals upon the white government of Prime Minister Ian Smith.

WASHINGTON — President Richard Nixon has been nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize by a Canadian-born New York publisher who claimed that the president has not gained enough world recognition as a man of peace.

The nominatin, which gained the signatures of 100 accepted nominators has been officially accepted by August Shoa, director of the Norwegian Nobel Institute.

SEATTLE — The first joint United States-Soviet mission to the arctic has left to study the effects of the polar ice cap on world weather.

WASHINGTON — US Presidential Advisor Henry Kissinger announced that Hanoi will be releasing American prisoners of war within the near future, and certainly sooner than the 60 days required under the Paris Peace agreement.

backpage

Canada; Quebec seeks end to rent rise

QUEBEC — The province of Quebec may become the Canadian leader in the field of price controls if legislation to implement a freeze on rents to be introduced at the end of the month is passed.

The bill drawn up by Quebec Justice Minister Jerome Choquette would put an end to the growing number of rent hikes since the beginning of the year by placing all rent increases under the watchful eye of a Quebec Rental Board.

The minister has received 50,000 calls since January 5 from tenants whose rents had been increased by up to 50 per cent. The new bill will give such people a clearing house to air their problems and gain action.

OTTAWA — After repeated guarantees from Montreal and the province of Quebec that the federal taxpayers would not end up footing the bill for any deficit incurred from the 1976 Summer Olympic games, the Federal government has given its tacit approval to the event.

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau told the Olympic co-ordinators that he was not averse to giving indirect assistance to the games but that his government would not pick up any left over costs incurred.

The games, which are expected to cost close to $310 million, have become the centre of considerable controversy as it became apparent that the host city would have to pay the bill itself out of an already stretched purse.

However, Montreal mayor Jean Drapeau feels confident that with the federal approval to float a special issue of stamps and coins in addition to a proposed lottery, the games' costs could be covered.

In his announcement of support for the Games given that no direct financial burden would fall on the Canadian people, Trudeau added that federal aid would come in the form of housing and other programs which could be converted to [illegible] after the 1976 games.

Between $26 and $54 million would be contributed to construction of the Olympic village through the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp, providing for 2,000 to 3,000 dwellings which could aferwards be used as regular housing in Montreal.

Trudeau also stated that the federal government would have to foot the bill for additional policing customs, immigration and other personnel.

KINGSTON — The income tax form this year is being sold by the federal government on the theme, "its easier than it looks" but according to John Jeavors, Kingston manager of H and R Block, specialists in he field, "practically everyone this year will have more trouble".

Apparently there are some areas on the form which appear dubious even to the experts. An accountant with one of the city firms stated that they really aren't as easy as the advertising makes them appear to be.

OTTAWA — Energy Minister Donald MacDonald warned the oil industry that they better look to proper fulfilling of domestic fuel needs before making wholesale exports to the United States.

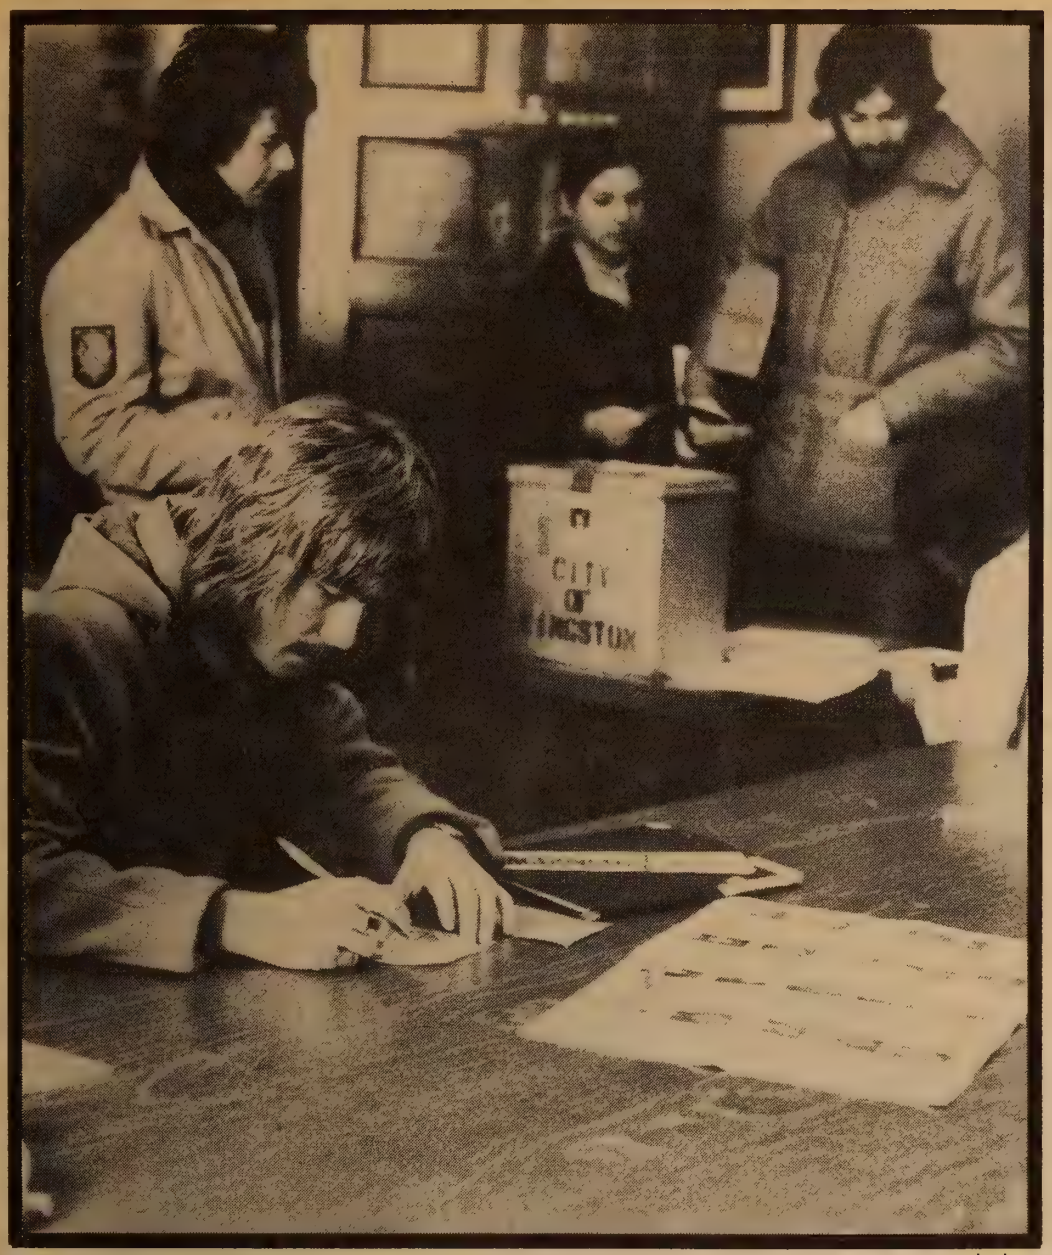
Planned supplies for oil for the Canadian market have been carefully considered and no shortage will exist for February but the minister stated that if exports to the United States continue to rise at their present rate, we may be faced with a serious situation in March.

The United States, recently faced with critical shortages in many areas, approved the lifting of oil import quotas for fuel imported from Canada. Subsequently, Canadian oil wells and pipelines have been operating at full capacity to fill the needs of an almost insatiable market.

OTTAWA — The Bank of Canda's new governor, Gerald K. Bouey, replacing Louis Rasminsky came out in favour of price controls, under certain economic conditions, but did not elaborate as to exactly what these conditions are.

However, he recognized that there are certain times when regular fiscal and monetary activity are ineffective and extraordinary measures would then become desirable.

TORONTO — Ontario's new minimum wage policy came into effect Saturday raising payments to about 140,000 Ontario workers from $1.65 to $1.80 an hours.



The legislation introduced in December has received considerable criticism from labour unions as being far too low when compared to minimum wages in other provinces, approaching much closer to $2.00.

The bill also provided for an increase in the minimum wage for students under 18 to $1.45 from $1.30.

TORONTO — Members of the Metro Barbers-Hairstylists Association have voted yet another price increase for their services raising the figure by close to 100 per cent. It will now cost $3.50 for a plain haircut and $6.00 for a hairstying. The association represents about one-third of the Toronto shop owners.

QUEBEC — Three union leaders convicted last spring of encouraging striking hospital employees to stay off the job after a court order to return, have had their appeals rejected by the Supreme Court of Canada and face at least 18 months in jail.

Yvonne Charbonneau, President o fthe Quebec Teachers' Corp., Marcel Pepin, President of the Confederation of National Trade Unions and Louis Laberge, President of the Quebec Federation of Labour will serve sentences for contempt of court after a Quebec Court of Appeal ruling in November.

decker

Tuition

2,000 withholding

Probably close to 2000 persons are taking part in the second-term fee withholding at Queen's protesting government cutbacks in the financing of higher education.

University Accountant Ken Brodie told the Journal on Wednesday, that 500 seems "awfully low", referring to a front page report in Wednesday's Golden Words which said 500 at the most were withholding their second term fees.

"The information", said Brodie, "was a bit distorted." He said he imagined the information had come from one of the fees cashiers. He said he didn't know how she had arrived at that figure, but when pressed gave the 2000 figure.

Brodie said approximately a million dollars in assessed fees were outstanding as of January 31, the fee payment date. "Certainly the greater portion of that has to be installments," said Brodie, although part of it would be represented by graduate student summer fees and by other money owing the university.

He said revised and accurate statistics would be available around the end of next week.

Whitham pleased

Lyn Whitham, AMS External Affairs Commissioner and co-ordinator of the fee withholding action, said she was "exceptionally pleased with the success of the fee withholding on this campus, since it shows Queen's students are genuinely concerned with the future of education in Ontario."

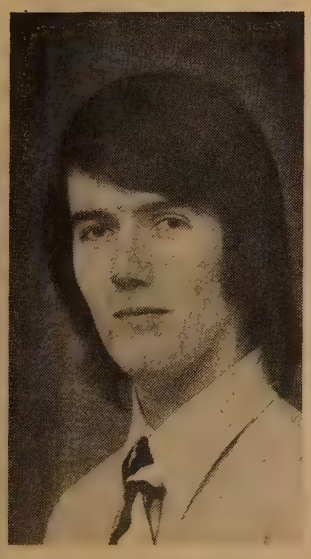
She added that she thought the action of Golden Words was rather irrational and unfortunate in that it published unsubstantiated figures." Whitham said that as a result a number of students are thinking about paying their fees because of the "seemingly low turnout in the withholding."

The future of the protest will be decided this weekend at a meeting of the Ontario Federation of Students in Guelph. Whitham had no predictions on the outcome of the meeting.

McNie here tomorrow

Tomorrow at 10 am in the Polson Room of the Union, Jack McNie, Minister of Colleges and Universities will be explaining the government's position on the financing of higher education.

Brereton-Trotter win by 56



Steve Brereton captured the AMS presidency by a meager 56 votes in the closest election in recent years. The Brereton-Trotter team polled 1287 to Whitham and Sugar's 1231.

The two referendam both passed decisively with the Tricolor question supported 1348 to 982 and the Golden Words one 1894 to 580.

Steve Brereton was unable to express his excitement at winning but commented "we'll know in 12 months the true results of this election. I hope everyone can work together in the future."

Ballot counting and recounting took nearly five hours with two counts being made because of the extremely close results.

Approximately 30 percent of the enrollment, or 2,616 students voted, down from last year's 40 percent turnout. All results are unofficial pending possible recounts.

Steve Brereton

Bruce Trotter

Other election results

ARTS: Senator, Di Eastham; secretary, Richard Meech; representatives at large in order of voting) Kiloran German, Terry Macli, Ross Sutherland, Jennifer Blishen, Wil Kranenburg, Rob Nicholson, Roberta Walker, Dorothy Lloyd and Don Kestel.

NURSING: President, Eleanor Francis; athletic stick, Claire Baillargeon; CUNSA, Janet Sampson.

COMMERCE: Social Convener, Adrian Donoghue; athletic stick, Cam Ross.

ENGINEERING SOC: Vice president, Steve Tovee.

GRAD. SOCIETY: AMS Representatives in order of voting) Kathy Dewar, Keith Marshall and Garry Liddell.

MEDS: Secretary, Brian Milne; treasurer, Bob Mazurka.

Queen's Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 37,

Friday, February 9, 1973

LADIES
ELECTROLYSIS
Avoid shaving, tweezing, or the use of dipilatories. Have your eyebrows styled and unwanted hair removed permanently by electrolysis. Physicians recommend our work. For a free consultation and information call:
HARRISON SALON 542-5595

Chartrand has harsh words for Olympics

by Sue Wishart

Although Michel Chartrand was officially Under Attack Wednesday afternoon, host Bill Walker's comment "I'm not sure it's not going the other way . . ." described the true situation.

Chartrand is best known as a fiery Montreal labour leader and president of the CNTU. He is a former leader of the Quebec CCF and is president of the Quebec-Palestine Association.

Chartrand lashed out at everything from capitalism to Israel to the Olympics, and completely dominated the debate. His opinions left the audience sometimes angry, often confused, but rarely in agreement with his point of view.

Chartrand's description of the Arab terrorists at the Munich Olympics as "heroes" and his vehemently pro-Arab position caused the widest disagreement. He blamed the deaths of the Israeli Olympic athletes on the Israeli and West German governments: "When you use force with people who have hostages, you kill them". The Arabs were heroes, he claimed, because they were fighting to get rid of Israeli oppression of Arabs. Chartrand shouted down opposition to this point, explaining that in his capacity as president of the Quebec-Palestine Association, he had visited Palestinian commandos on the Israeli border, and that he was in complete support of their cause.

These statements provoked more protest. One questioner accused Chartrand of hypocrisy for claiming to be a humanitarian while calling the Arab and FLQ terrorists "heroes". He replied that the available ways to complain vary from country to country and that "I go along with the people who fight for their liberation if there is no other way".

Chartrand justified the use of violence in strikes claiming that "some scabs do not understand (the aims of the strike) otherwise".

According to Chartrand, the members of the federal government are just puppets of the United States. He claimed to have told Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau that Ottawa does not "run anything in Canada except the Post Office and the RCMP".

Chartrand also condemned the Olympics as being "a racist organization".

This attitude differed sharply from that of Ken Farmer, of the Olympic Organizing Committee, who was the guest on an Under Attack show taped earlier Wednesday afternoon.

Farmer was very optimistic about the Olympics, especially

(continued on page 5)

Winter snows don't slow you down

You love long walks in the woods, and even the mounting snows of winter don't stop you. You just take along a pair of snowshoes and set off on a hike.

Menstrual worries don't stop you, either. You just make sure to include Tampax tampons, the internal sanitary protection. They're easy to carry—small enough to fit the pocket of your parka. Yet they do a big job of protecting you, expanding in three directions to fit your inner contours. Such absorbent protection can really free you to enjoy the winter sports scene: skiing, snowshoeing, skating.

So if the urge to be active drives you on if a heavy snowfall means adventure — then count on Tampax tampons to help you go.

The internal protection more women trust

DEVELOPED BY A DOCTOR
NOW USED BY MILLIONS OF WOMEN
MADE ONLY BY
CANADIAN TAMPAX CORPORATION LTD.,
ONTARIO

Skiing at its peak Prices at their bottom

30 superbly groomed trails.
10 lifts accommodating 7,500 skiers per hour, including
the only gondola lift in Eastern Canada

- 2050' vertical drop (It's a real kick)
- Beginner's slopes (Look at me!)
- 5 day ski week: use of lifts $25., lifts & lessons $35.
- Season from November to May

mont ste-anne P.O. Box 40, Beaupré, Province of Québec
(418) 692-0835

Toronto ski reports phone number (416) 483-4510

ATTENTION
Artsci '75 Elections
Positions:
Pres.
Vice-Pres.
Secretary
Treasurer
Male & Female Athletic Sticks
Publicity Agent
Feb. 14th, 8:00 p.m. upstairs in the Union
Nominations must be placed in box provided in AMS Office no later than 5:00 p.m., Feb. 14th
ITS YOUR YEAR
Get Off Your Butt And Vote

A Short Treatment For Public Speaking Anxiety

Are you nervous or uncomfortable when required to give a seminar or present a paper to a class? If you have any problems you might call anxiety or nervousness (or distress of any form) when you have to speak before a group, please get in touch with us.

This experimental treatment program requires about 2 hours per week for 4 weeks. The program will begin the week of February 26th.

Please leave your name and phone number with one of the following as soon as possible.

Secretary, Student Counselling Service 547-2893 (days
Dr. Wm. Marshall, K.P.H. 546-1101 (days)
542-2059 (evenings)
Cindy Presse, Dept. of Psychology 547-5819 (days)
544-5180 (evenings)
(Student Counselling Service and Department of Psychology)

Tercentenary Commonwealth Seminars

MALAYSIA

Speaker: Mr. Ismail Budin, Counsellor, Malaysia High Commission, Ottawa
Tuesday next: February 13th 2.30 p.m. Room 517 Watson
Discussion: Coffee: Free Admission
Institute of Commonwealth and Comparative Studies and the Department of Geography, Co-sponsors

THE CANADIAN MINERAL INDUSTRY EDUCATION FOUNDATION
offers
UNDERGRADUATE SCHOLARSHIPS
in
MINING ENGINEERING
$1,500 - 9 months
to students wishing to enter the first or subsequent professional year of a degree course in Mining Engineering

For applications contact:
The Secretary,
Canadian Mineral Industry Education Foundation,
P.O. Box 91, Commerce Court West, Toronto, Ont.
or
The Dean of Engineering
Applied Science

CLOSING DATE 15 MARCH, 1973

Al Capp under attack raps several knuckles

by Elizabeth Trotter

Accused of being a "social exhibitionist", having the sensitivity of a Genghis Khan" and "living in the era of Herbert Hoover", Al Capp still managed to come out of Under Attack smiling.

Amid boos, laughter, and cheers, Capp carried off the session with his frank opinions and his continuous quips. When criticized for never showing a serious side, Capp replied that laughter is the "one breath of fresh air that we have left."

The three panelists, Ted Cape, Kevin Van Koughnett, and Michael Rose, proved the infallibility of the Capp wit, as they battled in vain against humour itself.

The creator of L'il Abner and contributor to Penthouse explained his reasons for his patronage to the magazine. The girls in Penthouse are the type that "leave your back clawed to ribbons" whereas your own girl "sends you a thank-you note in the morning." This quote raised questions on Capp's view of Women's lib which he summed up in the words of Golda Meir that "Women's lib is a bunch of foolishness." Capp expressed the opinion that he did not want any part of a society that "excluded the Penthouse girls."

Capp started his defendant role in Under Attack with the statement that "Spiro Agnew has more guts thatn Ralph Nader." The Vice President attacks the enemies that can hurt him, whereas Nader shies away from criticizing the media that supports him. Nader confines his arguments to shoddy consumer products, but does not attack the unethical newspaper or unbalanced documentaries. Agnew recognizes no limits of criticism.

The most sober opinion and the one that received the most support of the Grant Hall audience was Capp's idea on American draft dodgers and deserters. Capp felt that "we should shut-up for a while and then let them all come home."

To Kevin Van Koughnett's accusation that Capp never takes politics seriously, Capp retorted "do you" and "if you can't get a laugh out of your paper, stop editing and give it to someone who is civilized."

The panelists and audience's emphasis on questioning Capp on the Viet Nam war, met with Capp's expression of approval for the war and for the peace now being achieved. Capp believed that there has been a "peace without humiliation" for the United States and that only in "fifty years from now will we know whether the war was right." He refused to answer any further questions on this topic.

To an audience revalation of a supposed statement of Capp's, concerning his donation of fifteen cents to the Sncc cause, Capp stormed to the questioner that he was "a sewer of filth", "an unmitigated liar", and told him "to get out of my sight". He commented further that he would not "discuss products of a deseased mind . . "

An earlier quote of Capp's was revealed by an audience participant. The view expressed was that Wallace was a better friend to the American Negro than Mayor Lindsay. He substantiated this viewpoint by his opinion that the "public schools in Alabama are in a better state than in New York city." After Wallace's move

- newbury

ten years ago when he blocked the entrance of a school to a Negro, Wallace has made a gigantic comeback. In New York, "it is impossible for black and white kids to survive."

An appropriate quote from the audience stated that "the only difference between you and God is that you are syndicated." Capp quipped that actually God has a wider syndicate and this is said with a feeling of envy."

One of the things that Capp inherited from the heavenly father is the feeling that when he thinks, then "I'm right and you are wrong." Capp admits that he takes "one side - the side of justice and right."

Over the audience's concern that Canada was becoming Americanized, Capp agreed by saying that Americans feel that "when we are in Canada, we feel that we're in part of America."

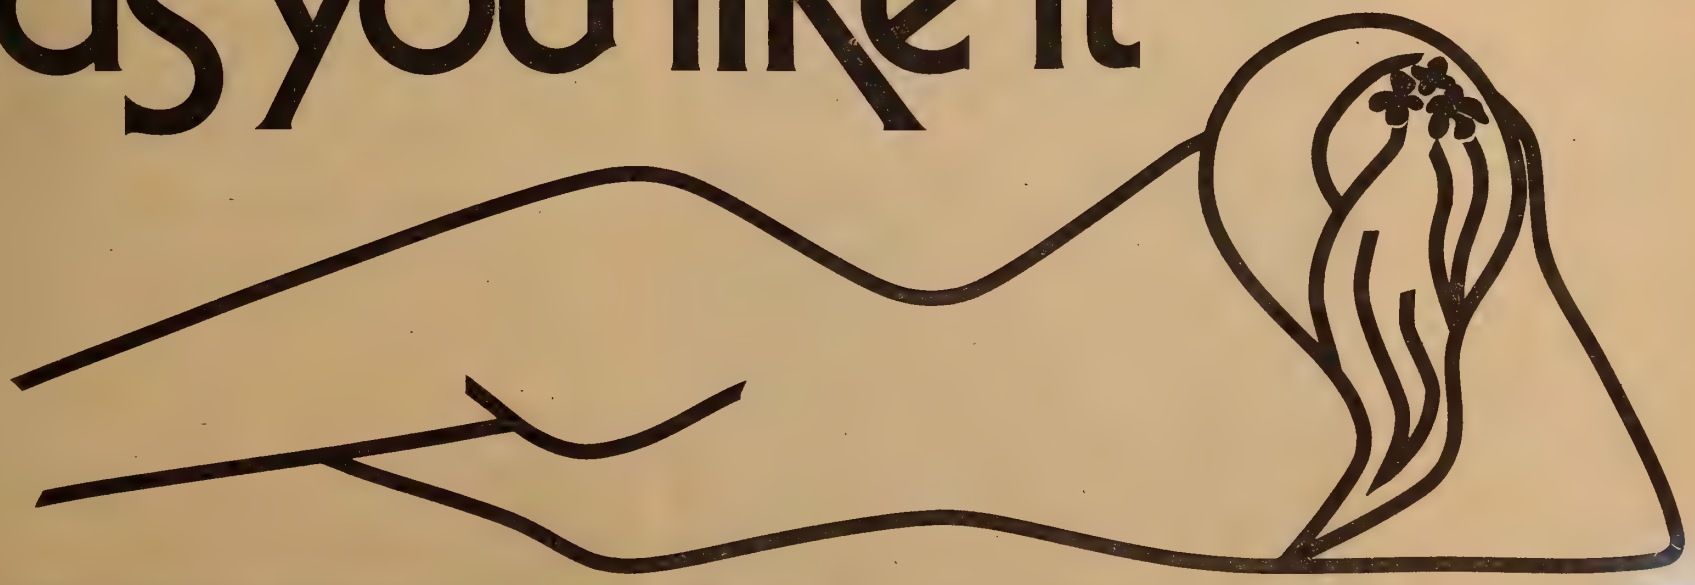
Capp revealed that he was "not young enough to know everything" but he certainly showed his intellectual wit and vocal superiority Wednesday night. His elusiveness to be caught as a verbal underdog emphasized the panels' and the audience's inability to catch him as one.

Penalty draws landslide of debate

by Elizabeth Trotter

"Punishment must fit the crime" was the oft-used phrase, propagated by Eldon Wooliams, conservative justice critic and MP for Calgary North.

This stand of Wooliams was contested by Richard Osler, Bill Young, and Doug McLean of the panel. Wooliams claim that "premeditated,planned murder" should by deterred with capital punishment. It is "for the protection of society and society has not been protected," he said.



When asked by Under Attack host Bill Walker if capital punishment was compatible with Christianity, Wooliams replied that "this lies in your interpretation of the Bible." (Wasn't it Shakespeare that stated that the devil could quote scriptures).

The panelists immediately attacked Wooliams' stand on the grounds that "the principles underlying capital punishment are wrong", "capital punishment serves no purpose", and that it "is a cruel and brutal act."

Osler demanded that Wooliams should go "all the way or not at all' in Wooliam's distinction between capital and non-capital murder, Osler also asserted that if there was to be a reinstatement of capital punishment then why not reinstate public hangings with "hundred foot high gallows". Wooliams retorted that there has to be punishment and "murder is a crime because the law makes it a crime."

Queen's University Department of Drama

as you like it

February 12–17 Convocation Hall 8:30pm Tickets: Drama Dept. 547-6291

newsbriefs

More culture for frosh '77

by Bob Wood

Orientation '73 will have a different emphasis for freshmen this fall according to the Committee. Cultural activities will have a much bigger role this year with the focus less on purely social events and more on symposiums, speakers, presentations by clubs and campus organizations and other cultural events. The first priority, stated Kathy Turner, an Orientation Committee member is academics: helping freshmen pick their courses, helping to break down any faculty-student barriers, and providing more academic information.

Gael groups this year will be increased to about twenty freshmen and four gaels per group allowing more flexibility for organization and closer contact with Queen's new members. With more gaels per group, frosh will be able to relate to composite resources of academic specialties and years.

To play down interfaculty rivalries, parties between faculties will be staged early in the week, probably Monday night. Another feature initiated by the Orientation Committee is called the Freshman's Bible which will contain everything a frosh wants to know but will be afraid to ask. It will include everything from academic information to where to find the right people and places.

Funds to be set aside for renting canoes and other non-orientation related events are part of the plan for more flexibility for individual gael groups. If frosh and gaels want to go camping for the week and forego planned activities they are free to do so.

In keeping with Tercentenary, an All Kingston Day is planned for Thursday afternoon to acquaint freshmen with the Limestone City. The Queen's versus Carleton football game will be the closing highlight on Saturday.

Crier declares Open House official

by Helen Gignac

The CKLC Town Crier, Al Stevens, has decreed Queen's Tercentenary Open House '73 an official Tercentenary event.

Stevens has become a well-known figure during Kingston's Tercentenary Celebrations. He has been seen on many occasions in appropriate period costume adding a colourful touch to Kingston's Tercentenary events.

Clad in 17th Century attire, CKLC's Town Crier has performed several official functions.

He was on hand on Monday to announced the upcoming Queen's Open House, Saturday and Sunday, February 10th and 11th. As part of his official duties on campus, Town Crier joined Vice-Principal Jim Courtright, Dr. A. Brebner, Professor of Civil Engineering, Wally Palmer, AMS Vice-President, and the Queen's Open House Committee for a preview of the Civil Engineering Open House demonstrations.

The Town Crier is an historical role tracing its roots to late 17th Century England when it was the only means of relating local news.

Rehab's got more than backrubs

Do you think Physio's only give back rubs? Do you think all an Occupational Therapist does is basket weave? Have you ever wondered what goes on in the Rehab rooms in the basements of Brockington and Watson? Well, during Queen's Open House the Rehab students are hoping to reveal some of their secrets to all interested students and community members.

The School of Rehabilitation Therapy includes both Occupational and Physical Therapy students. What is the difference you ask - well, our display in the Games Room in Victoria Hall during Open House is an attempt to help remove some of the confusion. Students from all three years in both O.T. and P.T. will be on hand to answer questions and demonstrate what we learn, why we learn it, and how it benefits people. Active participation in demonstrations such as splinting, crutch walking suspension, electrical stimulation of muscles, aids to daily living, wheelchair adaptations, weight lifting and others is invited and encouraged.

There will also be films, books, displays and coffee so if you want to have a little fun or just chat drop in and visit us. We'll be in the Games Room in Victoria Hall from 10 am to 4 pm on Sunday, Feb. 11. We hope you will drop in and enjoy the coffee as well as the display.

Crisis aid next week

Help for young people in a crisis will be available at the Crisis Accommodation House which opens next week.

The centre has been organized by Sharon Singer, a former assistant at the Birth Control Centre. It will provide living accommodation for young working people and high school students between the ages of 16 and 20 who have had a "falling out with their parents," according to Singer.

The house will be staffed by six counsellors who will act as a liaison between parents, social agencies and young people.

The centre has facilities to accommodate eight to ten people. Many of them will be referred by social agencies in Kingston.

Singer says that there is a desperate need for furniture and other household supplies. If you can help, please come to 26 Palace Rd during the day on Friday, Saturday or Sunday.

AMITY 300
International Dance
9:00 p.m.
Sat., Feb. 10th
Grant Hall
featuring two 8-piece bands
HIGHLIFE W'AFRIKA
(authentic African band)
WEST INDIAN STEEL BAND
(pride of the Islands)
Admission $2.50

GRAD DAY SYMPOSIUM
"The Role of Foreign Students in Canadian Universities"
Sat. Feb. 10 10:00 A.M. - 4:00 P M P.M.
Dunning Hall Auditorium
Panelists include:
Colin Issacs, Chairman of Ont. Union of Grad. Students.
Colin Issacs, Chairman of Ont. Union of Grad. Students.
Mel Preston, Ex. Vice-Chairman, Advisory Comm. on Academic Planning.
Allan Rix, Director, Canadian Brueau for International Education.
Jack McNie, Minister of Universities & Colleges of Ontario.
Dave Catmur, Canadian University Students Overseas.
Pierre-Yves Paradis, Assoc. Dir. International Development Research Centre.
Ceta Ramkalawansingh, Student member of Ont. Comm. on Student Awards.
Bryce Mackasey, MP for Verdun and former Federal Minister of Manpower & Immigration.

THE CANADIAN MINERAL INDUSTRY EDUCATION FOUNDATION
offers
POSTGRADUATE SCHOLARSHIPS
in
MINING ENGINEERING
to GRADUATES in any branch of
ENGINEERING or APPLIED SCIENCE
$4,500 - 9 months
PLUS Planned Summer Employment
For information contact:
The Secretary,
Canadian Mineral Industry Education Foundation,
P.O. Box 91, Commerce Court West, Toronto, Ont.
CLOSING DATE 15 MARCH, 1973

ALTHOUSE COLLEGE OF EDUCATION
The University of Western Ontario
LONDON, Ontario
Diploma In Education
University graduates are invited to apply for admission to the 1973-1974 academic program leading to the Diploma in Education and Ontario teacher certification for elementary or secondary schools. Applicants must have an undergraduate degree or be eligible for graduation by September 1973.
The College facilities provide special instructional areas in keeping with all new developments in secondary and elementary education.
Althouse Students' Council in co-operation with the Althouse Faculty have successfully assisted in placing over 85 per cent of Althouse graduates through the operation of a Placement Service.
Communications regarding admission to Althouse College of Education should be addressed to:
The Acting Associate Registrar,
Althouse College of Education,
1137 Western Road,
LONDON, Ontario N6G 1G9.
Telephone (519) 679-2367

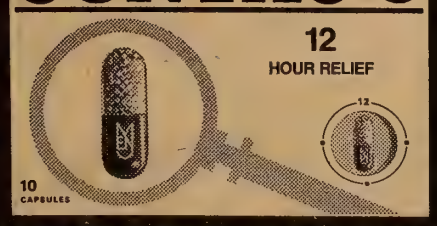
ARTSCI '74 ELECTIONS

Thurs., Feb. 15
3rd floor Common room, Union

President
Vice-Pres.
Sec.-Treasurer
Social Convenor
Publicity
Athletic Stick
Permanent Exec.

to be submitted in writing to Anne Macdonald, 469 Victoria St., 544-5997 by 11 p.m. Feb. 14

A little Trouble in the morning...



After Shave and Cologne with a distinctive, disturbing fragrance that can give a whole campus Trouble up to 8, 10, or even 12 hours!
and you've got Trouble all day.

DOWN WITH A COLD?

DOWN WITH A

CONTAC·C

One capsule and you'll be up and feeling better for 12 hours.

Rehabilitation

Impossible inside prison

by Susan de Stein

"The question to be discussed is whether or not the preponderance of penitentiaries in the Kingston area is a contributing factor to the city's increasing crime rate," commented John Maloney, Regional Director of Penitentiaries.

Maloney was speaking, as a panel member, at Joint Appeal, a public forum held on Wednesday night at the Grand Theatre. Joint Appeal was organized by Stabilize, a self-help group, similar in nature to an AA, and whose membership consists of parolled convicts.

Debate centered on the question of how the rising crime rate relates to the presence of penitentiaries in Kingston. The questions involving the penal institutions, policy concerning parole and temporary absence is directly related to this issue. It is often claimed that the presence of parolled convicts in the community contributes to the increasing crime rate. However, later in the evening, statistics were presented that indicated the weakness of this argument. It was also pointed out that the crime rate in most Canadian cities has been on the increase.

The disadvantages of the presence of penitentiaries has been overplayed by the media, Maloney commented. On the other hand the advantages have been less specified.

The ten autonomous institutions in the Kingston area themselves employ 1000 persons with a total payroll amounting to between $8 and $10 million. Although people are unhappy because the various institutions (educational, medical or otherwise) seemingly don't pay their way, he pointed out that government grants adequately account for the money that could be collected in taxes.

Maloney also commented on the rash assertions of many people who claim that a convict-rehabilitative program belongs in the institutions and not in the community. "This is wishful thinking," he added.

John Garretson, an alderman in Kingston, previously involved in a citizen-inmate interaction group, began by outlining several reasons behind the incarceration of the individual: the punishment of the offender, the protection of the public, the deterring influence, and the rehabilitation of the offender. However, he said, in his opinion, the institutions are failing on the latter two counts.

Garretson also contended that the individual's release from the institutions should be on a gradual basis, stressing also that there has been "nothing to indicate that those on temporary absence from penal institutions have been contributing to the increasing crime rate."

Cam Edwards, Regional Director of National Parole, cited some figures. In 1972, 240 persons were placed on parole or on day parole, and of these, only 12 were returned to the institution. In the past 15 years, 14 inmates originally committed to the penitentiaries to serve life sentences were released and of these, only one was returned and that, on the basis of a parole violation. "Parole has generally been a success," Edwards concluded.

Terry Willett, professor of Sociology at Queen's University felt that we lack the adequate information to determine whether or not there has been an increase in crime. However, if there has been an increase, he added, "it is not surprising and an increase is evident throughout Canada." Willett was vehement. "We are using the criminals in prisons as scapegoats."

He commented that a basic problem is one of educating the public and of teaching humans to lead other humans. "The difficulty lies in dealing with the human problems," he stated.

Willett continued, saying that our society is one in which the glamour is given to those elements of social control that deal with the 'catching'. "Prevention is the tedious job, one for which no credit is given. We must relegate out priorities," he added. His stand was applauded.

Miss Debbie Fox, a panel member and director of Stabilize, is an ex-inmate who spent 2 years in a prison for women, has been on parole for 2 years and will be for another three. For the last nine months she has been studying at Queen's University.

Miss Fox felt that the public was not aware of what goes on in penitentiaries and in parole questions. She also felt that many people were unaware of the positive contributions inmates are making in the community. Joint Appeal was an effort to acquaint the public with these ares.

"With the permission of the inmate, I am representative of the people in the Kingston penitentiaries," she said, adding that she knows the feelings present inside the walls, and the feelings present upon coming out of the walls. Emphatically Miss Fox stated, "we need temporary absences, for the sake of the emotional stability of the person." "Rehabilitation within those walls is impossible," she said.

Flloyd Patterson, Director of Public Affairs at CKWS cited living in a prison as comparable to sitting down at dinner with the children under the supervision of four policemen. He asked, "how normal could one expect the future behaviour of the children to be?"

John Bullman, a day parollee prensently attending Queen's, stressed that "you can't rehabilitate the men and women inside the walls. Rehabilitation is resocialization." One spokesman added that it was impossible to expect to rehabilitate people to become well-adjusted citizens on the outside, from the inside.

Bullman also commented that "rehabilitation is a two-way street. The community must open up a bit so that the men and women returning to the community can open up a bit."

One parollee from the audience spoke out, "who protects us from the people in the community?"

Sunday, Feb. 11th

5:30 - 7:00 p.m. —Buffet supper, Kosher cold cuts etc., $1.50 per person (first beer free)

7:00 - 8:00 p.m. —Israeli dancing and singing

8:00 p.m. —Games Night: chess, pool, ping-pong, poker, bridge, checkers, etc.

Hillel House
26 Barrie St.

Everyone welcome

Olympics

(continued from page 2)

the effect they will have on Canadians. People who "see sport in its excellent stages" will become more interested in participating in amateur sport themselves.

When asked if the immense cost of staging the Games was worthwhile, Farmer replied that many Canadians will benefit. The construction of Olympic facilities will stimulate employment in Montreal, and the Olympic will be used as public housing following the Games. On a wider scale, Farmer claimed that the Olympics will stimulate tourism throughout Canada, benefiting many other citizens.

The question of professionalism in the Games sparked a lively, though inconclusive, discussion. Several students questioned the banning of professional athletes who were willing to participate without payment.

letters

An Apology

Dear Editor:

In reply to the letter in last Tuesday's Journal regarding the timing of events for International Week coinciding with the practice teaching period for McArthur students - this situation was neither intentional nor done out of ignorance of the existence of McArthur College and its students. I am fully aware of the problems faced by these students in relation to activities on this campus.

Amity 300 (International Week theme) was designed as a Tercentenary function and organized cooperatively by the overseas student clubs at Queen's. Many people have put hundreds of hours of work in preparation for some of these events and they had to be timed to avoid a conflict with Festival, Snowball and study week - thus the week chosen was Feb. 3-10. Earlier in January (before Festival) would not have allowed sufficient time for publicity, etc. and March would be too close to exams for students and participants in the variety shows. It was a decision that had to be made in the best interests of the majority of students on this campus and other campus activities. I am certain that Kirk Hamilton would echo the same comments concerning the timing for the Open House at Queen's.

We had in fact hoped to start International Week at McArthur Hall Aud. with the Concert on Chinese Music on Sat. Feb. 3. Another group at McArthur had this date booked and we were unable to get in touch with this group to see if some arrangement could be made. Finally on Jan. 10 our alternative booking at K.C.V.I. Aud. had to be finalized in order to initiate publicity and other arrangements.

An honest attempt was made to accommodate the students at McArthur (and I have the grey hairs to prove it!), but it was one of those organizational problems that could not be solved. I will have a number of recommendations that will be addressed to the AMS concerning the timing of all functions on this campus (including the practice teaching periods for McArthur students), but for the present I can only offer my apologies to the students at McArthur College.

Yours truly,
Ted Grandmaison,
Co-ordinator, Amity 300

Pissed off!

Dear Editor:

I am a twenty year old, first year Arts student, and a furious, exasperated, raging and irate one at that. In other words, I'm pissed off. The cause of my maddened emotional state has been inflicted upon me by the presence here at Queen's of what many people would refer to as young ladies, but I would prefer to call bitches!

After this harsh, but truthfull initial statement, I imagine I have attained the attention of the majority of the females reading this letter..., GOOD. I would like to inform you bitches that your attitudes toward University life stink. Lets face it, your old man probably makes a "good buck" and you're used to receiving a generous share of it. As a result, you have a passion for spending money, and you even more so, love to have a guy spend a bundle on you. Well keep dreaming Sister, cause most guys that attend Queen's just plain can't afford it. Face the facts you dumb broads, University life can't be an extravagant one, who can afford it with the high price of receiving a university education today.

I would just like to say that it would be nice to see you bitches get off your bloody high class pedestals and drop the "stuck up nose" attitude the large majority of you have. Give it a try girls, act according to your age, not your old man's bank account, it'll help your reputation, which quite frankly, is presently sickening.

An appalled Artsci

Denunciation

Dear Editor:

I am writing in regards to your editorial in the Journal, Feb. 2, concerning the AMS elections. I strongly denounce this piece of journalism on two aspects of form: firstly, on the grounds of ethical principles specifically involved in this situation as it applies to this university newspaper; and secondly, the carrying of this isolated opinion to the point of slander.

Do you as "editor" have an ethical right to unload a half page opinionated extravaganza on the sensitive event of AMS elections in a newspaper in which you are chief administrator as opposed to owner? By sensitive, I mean that your opinion has a potentially strong effect on the voting decisions of many students. Regardless of your qualifying postscript blurb, I, and many others feel that your editorial has seriously violated the ethical boundaries of your position as "editor" of the Queen's newspaper.

The most serious opinion stated was the slander dealt to Mr. Bruce Trotter, vice-presidential candidate for the AMS, defamating his character and directly affecting his personal campaign. With qualifying wording you have implied that Mrs. Trotter's affiliation with the AMS has been "unspectacular at best". What kind of shit is that to shovel onto the page before potentially some eight thousand people, and not substantiate? This, in my opinion, is a severe display of incompetent journalism and I feel Mr. Trotter is owed an official apology.

Finally, I'd like to say that unfortunately your editorial will have an effect on the voting of many students and for me (and many others), it will be negative with respect to your endorsement.

Sincerely,
Al P. Pasemko

21st Stepp

Dear Editors,

This is a letter of thanks and appreciation to whomever was responsible for getting "The 21st Stepp' last Friday night at the Queen's Pub for Snowball. For six guys who haven't played together for three years, they did a fantastic job!, and I know that everyone who was there will agree with me. Please, whoever you are, bring this great group back again real soon. These guys really know how to make those "golden oldies" come alive. "21st Stepp", come back soon! C.D., [illegible]

St. James Anglican Church

9:00 a.m. HOLY COMMUNION
11:00 a.m. Morning Prayer and Holy Baptism
PREACHER: The Rev. James Perry
7:30 p.m. - EVENING PRAYER

artsci '73

Smoker of the Year

8:30 p.m. - 1 a.m.

Fri., Feb. 9th

Kingston Hall, Red Room

Come and support your year

Don't miss...

"The Religions of the World on Display"

Theology Hall Sat. & Sun.

1673 QUEEN'S TERCENTENARY OPEN HOUSE Kingston, Ontario

Saturday, 10 a.m. - 4 p.m.
Sunday, 12 noon - 4 p.m.

the Rat that Roared

a BIOCHEMISTRY film

Shown on the hour and half-hour during Open House hours

Saturday, 10 a.m. - 4 p.m.

Sunday, 12 noon - 4 p.m.

Everyone welcome to talk and look at displays.

Come See Us!

at the art centre

For Open House

Saturday, Feb. 10,
10 a.m. - 4 p.m.

Sunday, Feb. 11,
Noon - 5 p.m.

1 EARLY CANADIAN PAINTINGS

11 KURT KRANZ

ARTSCI' '76

Artsci '76 Hockey Team

vs

Sir George Williams

6:30 p.m., Jock Harty Arena

Sat., Feb. 10th

After the game, join us for a beer in the pub around 9 p.m.

ELROND COLLEGE APPLICATION FORM

SEPTEMBER 1973

Name: .....
Current Address: .....
.....
Phone No: .....
Home Address: .....
Phone No.: .....
Birth: ..... Sex: .....
Course Concentration: ..... Year .....
Other Information: .....
.....

CHOOSE YOUR HOME
Indicate 1st, 2nd, 3rd Choice
Houses

No. of Units
16	12 person house (meal plan)
	Single	$1155 (8 months)
	Double	$ 995 (8 months)
	Double as Single	$1295 (8 months)
7	6 person house (meal plan)
	Single	$1155 (8 months)
	Double	$ 995 (8 months)
	Double as Single	$1295 (8 months)
4	4 person house (meal plan)
	Single	$1155 (8 months)
	Double	$ 995 (8 months)
	Double as Single	$1295 (8 months)
20	2 person house (not on meal plan)
	Each Large Single	$105-month

Apartments

	1 Bedroom apartment (1, 2 people)
2	Small Corridor Apt.	$140-month
6	Large Corridor Apt.	$160-month
8	Large Thru Apt.	$175-month
	2 Bedroom apartment (1, 2, 3 people)
2	Small Corridor Apt.	$195-month
24	Small Thru Apt.	$210-month
8	Large Thru Apt.	$245-month

When applying with a room mate or for the same house, please staple the applications and enclose them in one envelope, Mail or bring them to: Elrond College, 401 Princess Street, Kingston.

Information for Elrond applicants:

First notifications of acceptance will be mailed early next week. Applications received prior to Jan. 31st will have first preference. Applications are still being received for all units. Upon receiving notice of acceptance confirmation and membership fee ($25) is due by March 5th.
Note: The rental for the 2 bedroom small thru apts. is now $210-month instead of previous $225.

and more letters

Crummy service

Dear Editor,

I think it is about time that somebody complained about the crummy taxi service in this city. First of all, I've always been charged a buck for the ride, even though there were four other customers in the car. If they all paid a dollar, the taxi driver makes five dollars for a couple of minutes work.

Secondly, I hate being squished up against a whole slew of strangers. Especially if I'm the last one to get left off.

There should be a law against the taxi-driver picking up another customer when one is already in the car. You are paying him to drive you somewhere, and he has no right to deviate from the course (in search of more "sardines") without your permission.

Thirdly, there are at least two taxi drivers around here (both from MODERN) with foul mouths. One guy had something to say about the "censored" Prime Minister, and the other guy just swore every once in a while for the fun of it. That's not too bad, but there was a lady present in the first instance.

Lastly, for a complaint that might be too trivial, it makes me feel sick to listen to a dispatcher that argues violently with the drivers, and then a few minutes later, starts to sing into the microphone, so all can hear his operatic larynx. ECCH!

Well, I'm fed up with the dispicable taxi companies of Kingston, and from now on I'll walk from the bus depot or train station to campus. It'll be better for the health, easier on the wallet, and peace to the mind.

Thank you very much.

Geoff Smith

Discrimination

Dear Editor:

Recently, in the stacks of Douglas Library were posted yellow signs saying "no pipe or cigar smoking please". We have here an excellent example of discriminatin against those connoisseurs of the smoking world, the pipe and cigar smokers of Queen's. The masses that suck on those dirty little things known as cigarettes still go unchecked.

No doubt the main complaint about pipes and cigars is their odour, which, it must be admitted, many people do not seem to enjoy. But that is beside the point - which is that many pipe smokers and cigar smokers find that cigarette smoke not only has an unpleasant odour, but that it is irritating to their eyes. Also, there is the factor of cigarette butts detracting from the aesthetic atmosphere down in the stacks.

I call for a letter of explanation from the library. It seems to me that the situation should be "all or nothing" - either all smoking is banned, or all of it is allowed.

Yours sincerely,
Ian Szlazak

Musical Theatre

Dear Editor,

We would like to bring to public attention an injustice that occurred in the Queen's Musical Theatre. Due to oversight or more likely by design, the choreographers of "Wonderful Town", Andrea Howard and Liz Driver did not receive proper recognition for their work. A musical is a combination of acting, singing and dancing. It is hard for us to believe that the choreographers who took charge of such an essential part of the show could have been overlooked. The director and musical director received public acknowledgement after the closing night performance and were also presented with gifts backstage. The costume designer and the set designer were also presented with tokens of the cast's appreciation. No such recognition or even appreciation was shown to the choreographers. We were involved with the show and know what hard work these girls did and the long hours they spent with the cast on dance numbers. We think it was a disgraceful lack of gratitude and just plain rudeness that these girls were not thanked. The people responsible for this slight should be ashamed of themselves. We think the choreography of this year's show was exceptional and we would like to publicly congratulate Andrea Howard and Liz Driver on their creativity and hard work.

Yours truly,
Arlene Reid,
Gabrielle Eckhardt
Mary Ford

Thanks to all

Dear Editor:

We would like to take this opportunity to thank all those who participated in "Buffalo Chips", and who made it one of the most exciting and successful variety shows at Queen's in recent years.

The changes made by the show's producers in the style and format of the show (specifically the use of an over-all theme to tie the show together, and the use of a live band instead of an M.C.) would not have been as successful as they proved to be without the assistance and enthusiasm of the show's participants.

Thanks again.

Stephen Sibold, Producer
Charles Hayter, Director

Queen's Journal

Vol. 100, No. 37
Fri., Feb. 9, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Patricia Devitt
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National desk: Bob Mutrie
Photography: Peter Boag

Well, God and Bankers willing, this press nite has come and went . . or rather floated away . . thanks to Jen for what we didn't need, and Booner for even more . . and to Helen for the ads amid utter chaos . . and Sue and Liz and Heather for working . . and Duncan for her, well . . and Bob and Bob . . .and Peter C farce . . and the varying sobering influences of Kathy and Kiloran and Pamela . . and Sandy who was appalled at pressNITES. .and one funny Romanian . . . and Suzie who worked like a dog . . .and Johnnie who came late . . .and poor Morris who has to translate this monstrosity . . and of course Gary for photos . . and anyone else who came in on this nite of all nites . . Tous faiseurs de journaux doit tribut au Malin.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

Elrond... Who can afford

- by Steven Winnett -

Lots of people are interested in living in Elrond, but are put off by two things: next year's rent increases, and an overall uncertainty about the financial picture of the college. Just how financially sound can an institution be with so many vacancies? And given the gloomy picture on university enrolment in this year of the fee increase, how can Elrond possibly expect to fill that towering building in the future? For that matter, what can they even do in the summer to stay alive? To answer these and other questions, the Journal cornered Elrond General Manager John Blanchard in his spacious, modern office to get the facts and figures straight.

JOURNAL. To begin with, just what is the present financial state of Elrond?

BLANCHARD. There are two parts of our financial state to consider: (1) capital costs, the expenses incurred in putting up the building, and (2) operating costs, for this and future years.

Starting with the capital costs: the total project cost for the building is $3,373,000. Our first application to Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation in December, 1969, based its request on a number a lot smaller: $2,864,000. So there's a net increase of about $500,000 to be accounted for. Before the contract was even signed, costs went up by $200,000 due to bad estimating by architects, surveyors, even the university. The remaining $300,000 was all due to time. The building was originally scheduled for occupation in September 1971, with construction to be finished by June, 1971. Due to intensive haggling, no contract was signed until the end of September, 1971. In the meantime there were interest charges to be paid during construction, organization charges, legal fees. The original investment charges we expected to pay were $85,000; we ended up by paying $234,000, as an example.

JOURNAL. Are you going to do anything to try to recoup some of these losses?

BLANCHARD. Oh, there will be litigation, lots of it. The contractor has received notices from Elrond, and Elrond from the contractor. It will be expensive- perhaps we will be able to haggle it out outside of court.

JOURNAL. How would you describe your relationship with the contractor?

BLANCHARD. Not very amiable. Let's just say, "a complete absence of trust".

You can see that we are faced with a capital shortfall, although I can't at present release the exact figures for publication. I can say that we are making arrangements to correct the situation.

JOURNAL. What about operating costs?

BLANCHARD. As far as operating costs go, it has been a strange year, in many ways. The financial year is normally from May 1 to April 30, but things here haven't been assessed on the basis of full costs. So far, our projected expenses this year are $280,000, while our revenues are projected at $298,000. Our sources of rental are not very diversified: there is our main revenue, from rentals, and then there are miscellaneous sources, like rentals for commercial space and laundry franchise.

The problem is that this doesn't leave a big surplus for the summer. We will make it through the summer, but we would have done better with a better start.

These costs are not typical, because they don't include eight months of mortgage payments and municipal taxes. Elrond paid no municipal taxes from September 1- December 31, 1972, because the building was still under construction, and there are no municipal taxes on unimproved land.

JOURNAL. What about mortgage payments?

BLANCHARD. We have four mortgage payments remaining to make to CMHC, two to Queen's, and two to the AMS. By agreement with the university, we are paying off CMHC first.

JOURNAL. What can you tell us about summer plans for Elrond, such as the famous "Hotel Hobbit" I've been hearing talk of?

BLANCHARD. First of all, you have to understand the nature of Elrond. The building is divided into (1) apartments, and (2) furnished houses. The houses are on 8-month leases, the apartments on 12-month leases - so the problem is to sublet the apartments, and to find something to do with the houses.

As far as apartments go, some of them will be in big demand. There are a large number of people with sufficient funds (and often with a family) who come to Kingston for Intersession and Summer School and who want a nice clean place to live in. For us, it's a question of promotion. For example, we've sent letters to Boards of Education across the province, to advertise ourselves to teachers. We've had good assistance on this from the university. Things may be different, though, once the apartment tower is built.

JOURNAL. What will you do with the houses?

BLANCHARD. As you know, there are market changes in the summer, with a great decrease in demand, and rents drop dramatically. We can't rent a single room at $95 a month in the summer, so we will let one go for $50 a month. We have no plans at the moment for a summer kitchen, I'm sure breakfast would be successful, but it's hard to be so certain about the other two meals. Doubles will go at $60 a month. The rates I've given you apply to the 4, 6 and 12-man houses; the 2-man houses will go for $60 a single. We are calling these "co-op bookings", because like in Science '44 Co-op we supply such things as furniture, while you supply bed linen.

These are, I think, marketable prices- but housing

expenses per bed night do not go down in the summer. We will be losing virtually 50 per cent of what would normally come in in winter.

JOURNAL. Is this where the hotel comes in?

BLANCHARD. We will be running a hotel operation, which will be primarily aimed at block bookings. Here again we've received a lot of really helpful assistance from the university. We're very optimistic about block bookings, especially with the learned societies convening in Kingston this year. Unlike a hotel, which takes in random bookings, we will be concentrating on block bookings.

Obviously there will be a certain amount of competition with the university residences. However, where the university doesn't actively promote itself, Elrond does. We will be promoting both o especially for this centenary. Prestig Kingston are now f that if we can make on these organizati bookings to us. We maid service, towe Our tentative rates single, $16 for a do

JOURNAL. So Elr youth hostel?

BLANCHARD. Def have had such hostel damage to the buildi had a loss of $23,00

JOURNAL. What ca

'G.M.' John Blanchard - Is he waiting for How

o stay at "Hotel Hobbit"?

s haunts Elrond?

and Kingston,
r with the Ter-
and motels in ed, and we hope
rable impression
t they will refer providing linen,
kfast, the works.
ight are $11 for a

no plans to be a

not. Those who eported too much here in Kingston damages.

ell us about the

for Ho ughes?

famous Elrond elevators?

BLANCHARD. The elevators were about 95 per cent complete when the strike began, which was 23 weeks ago. I'm really disappointed at the provincial government for not doing much more about it. And when the strike ends, we won't be first in line for service. Apartment builders in Toronto have been losing $250,000 a day because of this strike. So we certainly hope that strike negotiations will be completed before the summer starts.

JOURNAL. There's been a lot of talk about large-scale rent increases next year at Elrond. Just how much more will people have to pay?

BLANCHARD. The eight month rental this year for a single room was $1075. Next year this figure will be increased to $1155 (an increase of 7 per cent). This figure applies to 12 and 6-man houses. A double this year in a 12 or 6-man house costs $995 per person for the eight-month period; next year it will cost $995, no change. We have problems with doubles because the university has a captive market of Grade 13's coming to Queen's. Most people in first year are assigned to doubles in residence, and don't want to live in doubles the next year. We're trying to encourage people to live in doubles by keeping this figure static. These increases will also apply to 4-man houses next year, since they will also be going on the meal plan. There will be a 5 per cent increase in the price of 2-man apartments, from $100 to $105, and about a 10 per cent increase in the rental price of the other apartments, from $160 a month to $175.

JOURNAL. An obvious question at this point is, Why?

BLANCHARD. The main reason has to be the abnormal year we have had. If we had opened on September 1 as scheduled, we would have had substantially increased revenues. Two things hurt us. First of all, we went from a 96 per cent occupancy rate at the end of August to our present rate of 82 per cent, which represents a loss of $100,000 in revenue. Similarly the best time to fill our commercial space was September, when students are returning. Again, the building wasn't finished, so we were unable to do so. So we lost another $18,000 here. Secondly, Elrond had to pay huge expenses to billet people, until construction was complete, and this cost us over $25,000. This money will be part of our future claim against the contractor.

We need these rent increases. Without them we would be bankrupt by Christmas.

JOURNAL. Elrond was built, in part, to deal with a housing shortage- but now it appears that universities in Ontario, due to declining enrolments, will be faced with a housing surplus. Given this probability, and given the higher costs of living in Elrond, doesn't the college's future look a little bleak at the moment?

BLANCHARD. As far as future enrolment is concerned, we will certainly want to have a look at any future projections which will be drawn up. What we can hope to do is to diversify our sources of revenue, for example we might look into having a short-term stay hotel in the winter. We have to make more and more people aware of us. The university right now is a captive market. Most people arrange their accommodation needs by phone or by letter. Obviously we need more than a little place in the university handbook to advertise ourselves. The key thing for the future will be to establish a first year population. How are we going to do this? I'm not at all sure. We can't sell Elrond as an economical place to live. Rather, what we are offering is "moderately expensive accommodation": you have to want to live here.

The university residences have no continuing land cost and pay no municipal taxes. Elrond has to pay about $250 per capita per year in taxes to the city- without these taxes, our rents could be as low as $800. The Science '44 Co-op pays about $63 per capita per year in taxes. As well, charges during the construction of university residences are assumed in the general operating budget, unlike us.

Elrond haunts Kingston . . .

JOURNAL. Given all these things, what is your "pitch", then?

BLANCHARD. The best "pitch" is to come and see the building, and talk to the people who live here. We think people will see that it's a lot better than residence. Hopefully in about five years' time our prices will be more competitive. The price of off-campus housing is going up 7-8 per cent a year, mainly due to speculation- hardly to the value of the houses! The cheapest and best off-campus housing offered is AMS housing. And yet, let's take a look at the real cost of AMS housing. The AMS will only rent to groups, and the per capita rent costs work out to $69 a month. Usually these groups split a front parlour into a double, while everyone else has a single, and they then agree among themselves on the rent. So let's say the people in doubles pay about $59, the people in singles $74, by consent. The P.U.C. bill works out to about $6 per person per month, which increases the cost of a single to $80. As well, there will be losses during the summer, when the house is sublet. We can also add on a small component for furniture. Then there are waxes, soaps, etc. to be paid for. And then of course there are food costs: on the average these people will pay $5 more a month than people living in Elrond. This comes out that people pay damn near the same amount of money. So in reality there's little to choose between the costs of AMS housing and Elrond. When people rent AMS housing, they ignore hidden charges; at Elrond, you pay a fixed figure for eight months.

This leaves out all the things you can't quantify. Spirit is good in the building. In September, the place was a mess, yet people moved in and pitched in- there was great spirit about the place, it was an adventure. People had to pitch in and help, so they made a lot more friends initially than normally would have been the case.

When we had an Open House, the building was jammed - people were curious.

JOURNAL. One measure of the success of Elrond has got to be the success or lack of success of your current membership drive. How many applications have you received so far for next year?

BLANCHARD. So far we've received over 250 applications for houses and apartments, from both old and prospective members. We will probably cut off applications at 500. It's the same situation over in Science '44 Co-op: the people in the place are the last to apply.

ADMISSIONS TO RESIDENCES 1973/74

Men only Residences
Co-Ed. Residence, Morris Hall, Earl Street Residence West Campus Residences

Applications from upperclass students, other than those entering Law 1 or Education 1, are due by February 12, 1973.

Application forms and brochures may be obtained at the Desk Clerks' offices at Gordon/Brockington Hall, Earl Street Residence, Social Centre West Campus, and at the Dean of Women's Office, Victoria Hall and the Business Office Leonard Hall.

seven more days

Friday, February 9

8:00 pm - Amity 300 presents Indian Variety Show. Dances and music of India. Dunning Hall. Admission $1.00.

8:00 pm - Graduate Student Society Films presents "Take The Money and Run." (Co-authored and directed by and starring Woody Allen.) Ellis Hall.

8:30 pm - Division of Concerts presents Cathy Berberian in a programme of vocal works by Monteverdi, John Cage, Debussy, James Joyce, Berio, Kurt Weill, McCartney-Lennon and herself. Tickets at $3.00 and $4.00 for non-students; $2.00 and $3.00 for students. Available from Division of Concerts Box Office, Agnes Etherington Art Centre. (547-6194). Grant Hall.

8:30 pm - 1 - Manfrog- Vancouver Based Touring Co. Guildhall Theatre, 233½ Princess Street.

8:30 pm - 1:00 am - Arts '73 Smoker. Kingston Hall, Red Room. The Smoker of the Year. Come and support your year. Bitter Grounds will be closed this weekend Feb. 9 and Feb. 10 due to the unforseeable cancellation of Jesse Winchester. However the Grounds will open again next weekend to continue for the rest of the term. Grounds now open Friday and Saturday nights from 8 pm - 12 pm upstairs, 2nd floor Union.

Saturday, February 10

10:00 am - 4:00 pm - The Art Centre will be included in the University "Open House" arranged by a group of students. Guides will be available along with the exhibitions continuously. Agnes Etherington.

10:00 am - 4:00 pm - Amity 300 presents Grad Day Symposium. "The Role of Foreign Students in Canadian Universities." Dunning Hall Aud. Panelists include Jack McNie and Bryce MacKasey.

8:00 pm - Sleigh Ride or Hay Ride on Wolfe Island. Meet at Hillel House, 26 Barrie Street by 8:00 pm - Everyone Welcome.

8:30 pm - Manfrog - Vancouver based touring Co. Guildhall Theatre. 233½ Princess Street.

9:00 pm - Amity 300 presents International Dance. Grant Hall. Featuring two eight piece bands - Highlife W'Africa and West Indian Steel Band. Admission $2.50.

Sunday, February 11

10:30 am - Dunning Auditorium. A Folk Mass followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House.

11:00 am - First University Service, Memorial Chapel.

Noon - 5:00 pm - Art Centre will be included in the University "Open House" arranged by a group of students. Guides will be available with the exhibitions continuously. Agnes Etherington.

2:30 pm- Kingston Symphony Orchestra.Grand Theatre. Guest soloist - George Zukerman, bassoon. Program: Weber - Oberon Overture. Mozart - Concerto in B Flat for bassoon. Schubert - Symphony No. 9 in C Major. Tickets: Adults $3.50, students - $2.00. There will also be a special display set up by the Canadian Music Centre on four composers living and-or working in Kingston: Dr. Istvan Anhalt, Dr. Alexander Brott, Dr. F. R. C. Clark, Dr. Graham George.

4:00 pm - Eucharistic Celebration at Queen's Theological Hall, Faculty Lounge (2nd floor). All Welcome.

5:30 - 7:00 pm - Hillel House Buffet Supper - Kosher Cold Cuts etc. $1.50 (first beer free). 7:00 - 8:00 pm - Israeli Dancing and Singing

8:00 pm - Games night - chess, pool, ping pong, poker, bridge, checkers etc. Hillel House, 26 Barrie Street.

7:30 pm - Folk Mass in Senior Common Room. McArthur Hall.

8:00 pm - Women's Liberation meeting held every Sunday evening in the 2nd floor common room of the Students Union. All women welcome.

Monday, February 12

12:30 pm - Oil From The North - Political, Legal, Social and Economic Aspects: C. Law. This lecture reviews the other less obvious but very important factors which must be considered in "developing" Northern Canada. Dupuis Hall.

3:00 pm - Donald R. Cressey internatinally renowned criminologist from University of California at Santa Barbera speaking on "Organized Crime: Myth or Reality." Ellis Hall Auditorium.

8:30 pm - The Drama Dept. presents "As You Like It" directed by Rod Robertson with music by David Keane. Tickets $2.00 non-students, $1.00 students. Available from Drama Dept. Convocation Hall. Running until Feb. 17.

Tuesday, February 13

7:00 pm - Spanish Club meeting and "stuffed peppers" dinner. 165 University Ave. Everyone welcome.

8:00 pm - Music Dept. presents a Concert: Queen's Chamber Singers and Queen's Chamber Orchestra. Directors: D. Keane and R. Shnitzler. Mozart, Symphony No. 30; Beethoven, Elegisher Gesang, Op. 118; Haydn, Missa Brevis No. 5; Mozart, Regina Coeli. Grant Hall.

8:30 pm - McArthur College Aud. Rachel Brown's Contemporary Dancers. Tickets - $2.50 on sale at Pickwick's Book Store, Verne Napier's Cameras, and Londry's Sundries. (Reddendale).

8:30 pm - The Drama Dept. presents "As You Like It." Convocation Hall.

8:00 pm - Dept. of Film Studies presents Fellini's "La Dolce Vita." Ellis Hall.

Wednesday, February 14

8:00 pm - Student Recital - B. Music students in solo and chamber ensemble performances. Dunning Aud.

8:00 pm - Applied Math Smoker, Clark Hall. $1.00 - all you can drink. All applied Math students and faculty welcome. Special invitation to first year students considering applied Math.

Off Campus

Domino Theatre - The Quiet Rebellion of Mrs. Mary Gordon - Feb. 9, 10 and 11. 9:00 pm. Tickets available at Domino and Mahoods.

Capitol - Deliverance
Hyland - 2001 A Space Odyssey
Odeon - Skyjacked and The Carey Treatment

Glow ahead. (Try it.)

Molson Golden
A good smooth ale
Do you know what you're missing?

Richie Havens in Concert

- macpherson

by Geoff Henning

On Sunday night a crowd of approximately 2,500 people were treated to the best concert at Queen's University in quite a long time. Billy King and Richie Havens filled the Jock Harty Arena with three hours of good music.

King, who was a last minute replacement for Jimmie Spheeris, displayed fine executive at the piano and together with a Van Morrison like voice sang about ten or twelve of his own songs. People said he sounded like Elton John, others said he was like Cat Stevens. Whoever he sounded like didn't really matter, he and his conga-playing sidekick Bill Usher pleased the audience tremendously.

In one of his little spiels between songs King said, "When you work with a small group like this, you've got to work ten times as hard." Well he worked hard for almost an hour with such songs as "Ain't Nobody Home" (a story about looking for comfort) "Lady Be Good To Me" (a story about his woman) and "Song for Canada".

Sometimes when a performer is brought back for an encore I get the feeling that the audience feel an obligation to applaud until the musician returns to the stage; but in this case it surely wasn't an obligatory gesture but a true desire to hear more.

After a short intermission Havens appeared on stage. At first he acted like he was going to mumble some shallow philosophical trivia all night because his repetition of things like "now did that" and "heavy, heavvvy!" and "the trip to this is . ." seemed rather ridiculous. But as the night progressed the audience was told a story, not only in the songs but in the little stories between the songs, that showed a Richie Havens who was a sensitive, perceptive human.

Richie's songs were basically about relationships man to man, man to woman and man to God. He started with the song "Get Together", previously recorded by the Youngbloods and 3's a Crowd, which is about an attempt at universal understanding. The song's writer, Dino Vallente lead singer for Quick Silver Messenger Service, is the person who Havens says got him started. Later Havens did another Vallente song called "What You Gonna Do About Me" and from this song on; the audience never stopped clapping their hands or stamping their feet and rocking back and forth to the patented Havens best.

Havens unique view of man-woman relationships is most interesting. He says that in the Bible women represent spirituality. Therefore when a man gets married he is actually seeking the spirituality he has but outside his own body. Havens believes that this missing quality should be looked for within ourselves. He ended this little dissertation with the different attitudes of men and women after they're married:

Man; "now I have her, I don't have to try and impress anybody anymore."

Woman; "now I have him, I can wear my curlers all day."

Some other Havens numbers included a very moving arrangement of Tupelo Honey (Van Morrison) and Just Like A Woman (Bob Dylan). But the last two songs were the ones the audience was waiting for. As Richie started Here Comes the Sun, the audience never sat down until he finished a long version of Freedom which included a double encore.

There is no doubt that Havens and his group, Paul Williams, Emile Latimer and Eric Oxendine displayed a tremendous show from the start to the finish of their two hour performance. After the concert I had the privelege of interviewing Richie along with some people from Sheridan College and Ryerson. Here are some of the questions and answers given:

Q. "Well, what now?"

Havens: "Back to the Village (Greenwich) for some rest."

Q. "What do you think of college concerts after playing at places like Woodstock and Isle of Wight?"

Havens: "It's the only thing to do . . .these festivals anihilate everything . . they get messed up, now they want to put them on T.V. to keep everybody at home so the parents can see what's going on."

Q. "How do you decide on how to do a song that somebody else has recorded?"

Havens: "I just do them like I hear them . .you just might hear it a different way".

Q. "Are you on a religious trip?"

Havens: (laughing) "No. I was raised Methodist but now I just read the Bible; not religiously but scientifically. It tells you how to live. You see man hasn't been created yet. The trip to this is we talk about mankind or kind of like man, not perfect . . not the way we're supposed to be.

Q. "How did you get to do the song on Tommy?"

Havens: "Well Lou Risler has been trying to get me for a long time and he asked me to do it for him so I did."

Q. "I've seen you on Johhny Carson quite a bit but why do you never go over and talk with him after you do your songs?"

Havens: "Cause he won't let me talk about what I want to talk about. It's too heavy for him. Mike Douglas is the only guy who really cares about his guests . . he encourages them.

Q. "If you had one thing to say to college students without the fear of being censored, what would it be?"

Havens: "Oh, wow, man! . . .(long pause) . . I guess that you kids should learn that college isn't the last stepping stone of 'higher learning' its only near the beginning . . there's a lot of years left and a lot of things to learn after you're through . .but you've got to go to college man . .now dig that . . you've got to go to college. . . "

After this interview I left with a great feeling of satisfaction. Not only had I heard a great musician but I had talked to a man that's as concerned about our lives much more than many other people . . maybe even more than we are.

Congratulations has to go to Bill Mandich, Steve Sugar, and the others who worked hard on this concert, "Snake", Jock etc. This was probably the best organized concert Queen's has seen. Good work, guys and thanks.

Deliverance Treats Theme in Trivial Sensationalistic Way

by Ian McLeod

Deliverance is a curiously inconsistent piece. It starts out to communicate something fairly deep - thoughts on the relationship between savagery and civilization - but gets snarled up somewhere along the line and ends up seeming contrived and a bit futile. The film is entertaining enough to sit through: there's thrill-packed action photography, awe-inspiring scenery and lots of imaginative violence. In these terms you get your money's worth. But certainly on a multi-million-dollar budget you should be able to come up with more than an absorbing kinetic post-card display. Between the prettiness and the panic we acquire no clear knowledge of why things happen as they do. The effect is surprising; also, finally, unsatisfying.

Burt Reynolds (who comes off, by the way, as an insensitive oaf) is leading three buddies from the Atlantic suburbs on a canoe trip down America's last unsullied river. He believes that the entire society is on the verge of collapse. We must prepare now for the catstrophe: get back to the wilds, learn to live harmoniously with nature, face its clear and straightforward challenge with pride. We shall fish, hunt, and breathe clean air, become simple, savage natural men.

From the first, the landscape they enter is one of fear and hostility. The river is relatively safe; but even there the expedition is shown time and again to be tiny and defenseless. In the forests lurk the real natural men, the products of a lifetime in the wilderness: wierd mutants, imbecile victims of malnutrition and tribal inbreeding. Their conduct is gross and bizarre. These hillbillies pose a deathly threat; the canoeing party reacts by kicking over civilized laws and becoming cruel and violent themselves. Again, the forests and the river are on the side of the hinter. They conceal the criminal and the evidence of his crimes. The city-boys learn that the wilderness functions most readily as a playground for destruction.

The great moment of relief comes with the sighting of civilization. The men are saved by the machines they cursed at the start of the trip. In the town, all physical fears are dissipated. If the mountain people are unreasonable, the town people are unreasonably reasonable; the contrast between them and their brothers twenty miles away is almost absurd. Meanwhile, Reynolds drops out of sight; we never do find out what he thinks about the whole thing. We are left with Jon Voigt, safe at home with his "nice kids and nice wife", that Reynolds once maligned, perhaps the best of all possible worlds. He still has nightmares, however, about the terror of the great unknown. He ain't going back.

I don't know if you can conclude anything at all from the movie. It might function as a giant advertisement for quiet, business-as-usual living. At best, the thematic conclusion raises strong doubts about the idyllic back-to-nature movement. But it does so in a trivial, sensationalistic way.

macpherson

Travelling troupe uses hackneyed material and overstates case!

by Sandy Naiman

Mr. Manfrog and his Travelling Troupe of friends descended upon Kingston Tuesday night and began a five day run with a collage of vignettes entitled Songs of the City, in the studio theatre of the Old Art's Building. As its title implies, the theme of last night's entertainment was centred on the alienating effects of big city living, perhaps one of the most exploited motifs in today's idiom. This basic concern is almost as tired as the members of the troupe seemed to be, for although some of the sketches were poignant and almost clever, the performers seemed rather lifeless for a company which calls itself Alive Theatre.

One of the more interesting touches however, in last night's show, was the imposition of a commentary by one Mr. Oliver Wool-Over-Your-Eyes. With this satiric sidelight at least we were not subjected to a totally one sided view of problems concerning young travellers seeking accommodation, drug trafficing, hippies, welfare and the discrepancies between the rich and the poor. Mr. W.O.Y.E. poses as a public relations man for the city of Vancouver, where the troupe was originally based and where all the action takes place. In his introduction to many of the sketches he uses every imaginable cliche in describing the warmth, the open heartedness and the benevolence of the citizens and the police of this, and possibly any big city. However, with each prosaic description a sketch follows to blackwash the picture which has been previously drawn.

One of the funniest moments was when he became so appaulled at the activities on stage that he intruded onto the platform to castigate the members of the troupe and then the illusive Mr. Manfrog himself, whom we never meet. Only an effigy of him sits quietly beside the stage to oversee the troupe and ensure that their message is being clearly dispensed.

Theatrically the Manfrog troupe suggests in some of its activities the potential for being a dramatic group. The use of huge caricatured masks is an excellent touch in a few of the sketches, but unfortunately these are not used frequently enough. In one sketch concerning "the warmth in the home for the traveller" a television was beautifully satirized as the idiot box, with a member of the troupe sitting behind a picture frame and mouthing monotonous, senseless tones, only to be silenced by a tweek of the nose. In another, concerning the heart rending tradition of the Sunday Dinner, four people sit around a table while a mildly blasphemous grace is said. The meal which follows is a delightfully mimed ravenous attack upon imaginary food, and finally an almost musical chorus of burps and belches.

Several of the sketches which reflected the more whimsical side of the problems of the big city living were cuttingly amusing, mainly due to the satiric stabbing of our staid institutions. In particular, one about a cop who was in with a couple of muggers and who got a healthy percentage of their take. This tone, coupled with the outbursts of Mr. W.O.Y.E. and at one point his raging out of the studio to find the real Mr. Manfrog, gave the production a verisimilitude which worked because the entire pretext of the sketches is based on reality.

There are several questions however, which come to mind concerning the themes of Songs of the City. Many of the sketches concerned either directly or peripherally a problem due to lack of money. Is poverty a problem only in a big city? Surely having no money is no pleasure in a small town either. And why were hippies, marijuana and consumerism explored. Surely such subjects are not only hackneyed but extremely passe.

Furthermore, in dealing with didactic theatre or at least theatre with a message, the most effective messages are communicated most dynamically when handled delicately and subtly. Even though the Manfrog message was skeletally simple and clean, it was overstated and nauseum. Perhaps in a McLuhan sense, the medium is the message, but the message was also the medium and occasionally last evening we lost sight of the entertainment of it all.

In the words of the inimitable and subsequently invisible Mr. Manfrog, "If it is true that theatre is dead, then let's dance on the grave." Indeed, with his company this appears to be the case, for conventional theatricalisms are certainly no part of the fare. A medieval approach instead seems to reign, for the performers were re-enacting many of their own real life experiences. One did not get the feeling that he was watching actors perform at all. In this sense perhaps the Travelling Troupe is inappropriately entitled Manfrog: Alive Theatre and could be renamed Manfrog: Life Alive.

But in any case, no matter what the name, Tuesday night's production was only remotely theatrical and even less lively.

Wax Works

Grammys

by Geoff Henning

Somehow on Friday, January 26th, my Grammy Award Predictions were left out of my column, but that was alright because now it gives me a chance to write a whole article on the presentations. The winners will be announced on March 3 at the record industries night-on-the town.

There are many different categories of which I will cover some in detail:

1. Best Record. This is given to the recording artist for the song and is probably the most prestigious award.

The nominees are:
Alone Again (Naturally) - Gilbert O'Sullivan
American Pie - Don McLean
The First Time Ever I Saw Your Face - Roberta Flack
Song Sung Blue - Neil Diamond
Without You - Nilsson.

Most of these are quiet songs and all are very sentimental in nature. My prediction is "Without You" by Harry Nilsson. The song is about the regret of the loss of the singer's lover and is given tremendous justice by Nilsson's voice.

2. Best Album. This is given to the best all round album either by a single artist or a group.

The nominees are:
American Pie - Don McLean
Concert for Bangla Desh - George Harrison and Friends
Jesus Christ Superstar - Original Broadway Cast.
Moods - Neil Diamond
Nilsson Schmilsson - Nilsson

These albums are all quite different in nature. American Pie is almost nothing without the title song; Bangla Desh is a grab bag of various artists; Superstar has been out too long to receive recognition now; Moods is a good collection for Neil Diamond Greats and Nilsson Schmilsson contains both novelty and serious numbers. My prediction is Moods by Neil Diamond.

3. Best Song. This is given to the composer of the lyrics and-or music of the popular songs. The nominees are the same as for Best Record except "Summer Knows" by Michel Legrand replaces "Without You" by Nilsson. My prediction, and I don't think there's much doubt, on lyrics alone is "American Pie" by Don McLean.

4. Best New Artist. This is given to the single artist or group which is new to the recording world as such and shows promise.

The nominees are:
America, America, - Ventura Highway
Harry Chapin - Taxi(s)
Eagles - Take It Easy (s), Witchy Woman (s)
Kenny Loggin and Jim Messina - Sittin' In (a)
John Prine -

My prediction is America.

5. Best Single Female Performance, Pop Rock or Folk This is really a vote for best female performer but the award is supposedly based on one record.

The nominees are:
Carly Simon - Anticipation
Aretha Franklin - Day Dreaming
Helen Reddy - I Am Woman
Roberta Flack - Quiet Fire
Barbara Streisand - Sweet Inspiration-Where You Lead.

The problem here is to say whether the singer or the writer and musicians make the song good; but considering its really a vote for best female singer I'll have to say the winner will be Carly Simon.

6. Best Single Male Performance Pop, Rock or Folk. Same as Female performance; the nominees are:
Alone Again (Naturally) - Gilbert O'Sullivan
American Pie - Don McLean
Baby Don't Get Hooked On Me - Mac Davis
Candy Man - Sammy Davis Jr.
Without You - Nilsson

Remembering that this is only a prediction and not a personal preference I'll say the winner will be Gilbert O'Sullivan.

7. Best Single Performance by a Group Pop, Rock or Folk; same as male and female; The nominees are:
Baby I'm A Want You - Bread
Horse With No Name - America
I'd Like to Teach the World to Sing - New Seekers
Summer Breeze - Seals and Crofts
Where is the Love - Roberta Flack and Donny Hathaway

I think "Baby I'm A Want You" will be the winner.

8. Best Instrumental Performance. This category is for the best instrumental performancy by a group or single artist. The nominees are:
Amazing Grace - Ryal Scots Dragoons
Doc - Doc Severensin
Inner Mounting Flame - Mahvishnu Orshestra
Joy - Apollo 100
Outa Space - Billy Preston

I'll choose Joy.

Queen's Drama Department Presents

As You Like It, next week

As You Like It has remained one of the most popular of Shakespeare's plays in the theatre. Many an actress has been tempted to bring to life the witty, forceful, eternally feminine Rosalind. And who could resist the challenge of a part in which a young girl disguises herself as a boy who then procedes to play herself in front of her own lover?

At the center is love, and we see four pairs of young lovers acting out their variations on the theme. In spite of all the threats, banishments and touches of melodrama, the mood of the play is springtime and sunshine. Lovers get together, evils vanish, and everything ends with a wedding party.

Our production keeps Shakespeare's words, but our interpretation is contemporary. This will be seen in the modern dress and settings. It will be heard in David Keare's music, some of it electronic and some on conventional instruments.

As You Like It will be presented in Convocation Hall at 8:30 p.m. from February 12 to 17. Tickets are $2.00 (students $1.00) and are available at the Drama Department. Telephone 547-6291.

Our aim is to present Shakespeare - his thoughts, his words, his people - and to make his world immediate. And so--

> Proceed, proceed. We'll begin these rites As we trust they'll end, in true delights.

Tony Montanaro, next month

In October of 1969, Queen's audiences were first introduced to the artistry of Tony Montanaro's mime. Accompanied by a talented assistant, Mr. Montanaro never ceased to sustain the undivided concentration and imagination of his audience. As one reviewer put it:

> The slow motion flips and contortions in 'The Museum', where Montanaro played a statue which Henry (his assistant) carried offstage perfectly rigid, were breathtaking. It was difficult to realize upon leaving the theatre that we hadn't heard a spoken word -- but had only "sensed" through the eloquent bodies of Tony Montanaro and Michael Henry.

Montanaro's activity is centered at his new home and summer theatre and school near Portland, Maine, where he teaches classes for professionals and advanced students of the performing arts techniques of creative mime and theatre. His engagements at the Erie Summer Festival of the Arts and the Chautauqua Institution and on regional tours highlight his season.

The Queen's Department of Drama is pleased to have once again arranged a performance of Montanaro's "A MIME'S EYE VIEW" for March 16. The programme of comical and tragical mimes will be presented at 8:30 p.m. in Duncan McArthur Hall (West Campus). Tickets for the performance are $2.50 and students $1.50. For further information or reservations telephone 547-6291.

Amity 300 presents International Dance

- robinson

West Indian Club Steel Band will perform at Grant Hall, Saturday, February 10, at 8 p.m.

Cathy Berberian

Singer, Speaker, Blithe Spirit

"When I sing I try to serve my audience, to reach out to them," said Cathy Berberian. "I don't believe in detachment. I love people. I want them to love me."

Kingston audiences will have their first opportunity to encounter this gifted mezzo-soprano on Friday 9 February at 8:30 p.m. in Grant Hall in a concert sponsored by the Division of Concerts at Queen's University.

Considering that the "traditional" recital as we know it has become a rigid ritual, Cathy Berberian has recently presented a new form of vocal recital incorporating unusual and unpredictable material which has won her such world-wide acclaim as to prompt Time Magazine to call her "the avant-garde Callas."

In her Kingston performance, she will perform works by such varied composers as Claudio Monteverdi, Claude Debussy, and Luciano Berio. Believing that the world of vocal literature includes the written word, her programme will be highlighted by a reading from James Joyce's Ulysses. In addition, she will perform a piece that she has composed herself -- "Stripsody" -- a collage of the onomatopoeia as presented in comic strips. She has restored the sound to very familiar quotations and interspersed vocal sound effects.

Cathy Berberian was born in Massachusettes of Armenian parents. She enjoys a distinguished reputation as an interpreter of contemporary works. Her understanding of contemporary demands and techniques has led a number of composers to write works expressly for her. Pousseur, Milhaud and Cage have all contributed to her repertoire, as has Luciano Berio. She has also been closely associated with Igor Stravinsky's vocal music; the final version of his Elegy for JFK was made for her voice. Miss Berberian has appeared at almost every leading music festival in the world including those at Venice, Warsaw, and Tanglewood, and performs in such leading concert halls as La Scala, Philharmonic Hall, Carnegie Hall and the Concertgebouw. An actress as well as a singer, she has recently begun revitalizing the recital format, incorporating the use of staging and lighting into her provocatively programmed and presented recitals. A linguist, she has translated four books from English to Italian and can sing in a total of twenty languages, including Chinese.

Her critical acclaim has been phenomenal:

"The subtlety of her musical phrasing, the absolute fusion of musical and verbal expression and her total artistic sensitivity are almost without parallel today." (San Francisco Chronicle)

Alan Rich, the New York critic wrote in a more jovial spirit:

"Cathy Berberian, singer, speaker, and blithe spirit of the musical far-out . . . demonstrated that about the only thing she cannot do professionally is to ride an elephant . . . Miss Berberian is an immensely alert and flavoursome artist."

Tickets for this special concert are available from the Division of Concerts Box Office in the Agnes Etherington Art Centre - 547-6194. The prices for students are $2, 3 and for non-students $3 and 4. Tickets will also be available at the door on the evening of the performance.

Queen's University Music Department

MUSIC OF BEETHOVEN, HAYDN, MOZART

QUEEN'S CHAMBER SINGERS
DIRECTOR:
RUDOLF SCHNITZLER

Director:
DAVID R. KEANE
QUEEN'S CHAMBER ORCHESTRA

GRANT HALL — 8:00 p.m. — TUESDAY, FEB. 13
FREE

Courtesy of Brooke Bond Foods Limited Copyright 1971 National Wildlife Federation

AT ALCAN, OPPORTUNITIES ARE AS DEEP AS THE OCEAN.

Sub-Igloo. A light aluminum-plastic observation platform which can be assembled underwater by skin divers.

Sub-Igloo is the essential base for research currently being conducted in Canadian Arctic waters, by Dr. Joe McInnis and a team of Canadian scientists.

At Alcan, we are proud to have been one of the five Canadian companies that developed Sub-Igloo, having designed and supplied its aluminum components.

Another example of the goals of the whole Alcan team made up of scientists, engineers, marketing and operating personnel all across Canada.

Simply a fuller, better life for man. And for each of us.

If this is also your goal, we may be able to help you achieve it. Speak to your on-campus placement service.

ALCAN

unclassified

GOD --- Nos morturi, te salutatem. PL.

SMOKER, Monday 12, 8 - midnight for Art History and Bachelor of Art Education students and anyone else who wants to socialize and talk with profs and students. NB bring your crayons or felt pens.

YEAR ESSAY, KIDS -- you too Bill!!! Pat.

IF YOU'VE been contemplating esoteric cogitations or articulating superficial sentimentalities, beware of platitudinous ponderosities and come to the Philosophy smoker on Tuesday, February 13 at 8 pm in the Union.

PL --- regarding above, Bullshit!

10 TICKETS for Tremblant Weekend Available. $40. First come, first served. Call 544-7620.

RIDE WANTED TO Montreal for three guys and skis on Friday February 16 or early Saturday,February 17. Will share costs. Call Richard 544-7391; Gord 542-7478; or Pete 544-7743.

FOR A FRIEND WHO came visiting on Wednesday --- Sante vierge, toi qui consu sans pechee, donnez-moi le pouvoir pecher sans consu. (Spelling taken as read)

I CANNOT TAKE IT.

GRASS -- the high spirits were nice, but . . .

PLEASE READ THIS --- needed, nay, urgently required. One two or three bedroom apartment fairly close to campus and comfortable. Please, puh-lease call me at 544-7132.

TO VARIOUS AND SUNDRY -- thanks for lending sanity to the old hell-hole when we needed it.

FOUND: Lady's spectacles. 544-7806.

TO THOSE COMMERCE 76 girls who nibble the ice-cream cooler with their teaspoons. IT'S REVOLTING. Other faculties like to eat it too. (From their bowls.)

GIRLS DESPERATELY need 5 bedroom house or apartment for next year. Willing to sublet. Please call 544-8402, 544-8401, or 544-8393.

WOULD ONE OR ALL of the four girls who have leased a house at 437 Brock for next year, please contact John at 544-7054, Pete 544-7082, Glenn 544-7067, Bill 544-7001, or Greg 544-7167.

HOUSE TO SUBLET close to campus. 264 University. 4 bedrooms. Partially furnished. Phone 542-6680.

Mr. Magnam from the Parking Authority gave a ride to two students out Division St to the 401 on the way to Hamilton. One forgot his gloves. Claim them in the AMS Office.

PL -- thanks for calling. Everything under control so far.

TO SUBLET -- two bedroom apartment from May to September with option to sign lease for next year. Call 548-3640.

DEAR USI: Yes Please! Uncle Bob. Dear UNCLE BOB -- it has been sent -- Turtle express.

A RELIEVING WUSC-out! 65 miles from Kingston. A weekend of interaction and discussion for only $5. February 16-18. Apply at the International Centre.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, SPOONER, you hungry young girl! We hope your day is merry and that 3rd stacks presents a particularly pleasing layout for the occasion. Wishing you all the best. A Couple of Squash Hopefulls.

DEAR HALF ID -- come back, we miss you.

UNIVERSITY: WHY BOTHER? The topic of a winter weekend in the woods sponsored by World University Services of Canada at Camp Mazinaw, February 16-18. Accommodation, transportation, meals and fun for $5. Call Ilyas Absar at 547 2986 or Kaspar Pold 547 2807.

WANTED: 3 bedroom apartment or house for 1973-74. Call 546-9518 or 544-7744.

JEN grass is a CENSORED. Jen duncan thinks so.

FOR RENT: MODERN 1 and 2 bedroom apartments. 5 min from campus. Available to female students for May 1 or September 1. Contact Dr. Lyons at 547-2600.

TO SUBLET: 4 bedroom house. Fully furnished. 5 minutes from campus. Not a slum. Rent negotiable. Call 544-0104.

WANTED: New Executive Members for the Student Volunteer Bureau. If interested, come to the McLaughlin Room in the Students' Union Building, for a meeting starting at 7 pm on Tuesday February 13, 1973.

ROOMS AVAILABLE for March and April. $60. Dave at 544-7826.

DUNCAN -- Thanks for coming around.

GOODNIGHT ANNIE.

WATCH FOR THEM, Feb. 14, Artsci 75 elections.

FOUND FOUR rings in Gym. Call 548-8644.

NEED A HOUSE for summer. Close to campus. Call 548-8644.

ALL COMPARDRES of the friendly residents of 160 Stuart St are invited to an informal BASH on the evening of Saturday February 10. So if you know Dave, Duncan, John, Paul, Ron, Simor, Jim, Jim, Jim, Doug, Doug, Bob, Ed, Gord, Gord, or Cyril at the above address, you know you will be welcome. Refreshments will be there, will you?

DEAR TELESETTER -- sorry about the dirty copy. Chas.

DEAR CHAS: -- What's new? Telesetter.

ARTSCI 75 elections coming.

BOB -- regrets, I'll be out of town.

THERE WILL BE A meeting February 13, 1973 starting at 7 pm in the McLaughlin Room of the Students' Union to discuss the STUDENT VOLUNTEER Bureau. All welcome.

VOTE IN THE Artsci 75 elections.

BEVIE BRAT -- Uncle John says we can have the 40 of Vodka if we can collect it. Your unknown admirers.

WE HAVE A BEAUTIFUL 7 bedroom house that needs three female people to fill it for 1973-74. Call Dave at 544-7826; Nick at 544-7825, or Pam 544-5278.

DON THE RECORDMAN. Selling off all my old records. Cheap. Good shape. Allman to Zappa. Phone 544-4737 evenings.

WANTED TO RENT: 6 bedroom or larger house for May 1. Phone 546-6330.

SUPPORT YOUR YEAR. Vote on the 14th in the Artsci 75 elections.

QUEEN'S OUTING CLUB -- Anyone interested in a cross-country weekend at Wakefield Pq. on Feb. 16-17; snowshoe trip to Mount Marcy (highest mountain in New York) Feb. 23-25; or a four day trip to Algonquin Park during Reading Week, come to our Monday night meetings at 7:30 in Jeffrey Hall Room 128 or phone Gary Spiller at 544-9321 for further details.

WE HAVE A 3 bedroom apartment and would like to trade it for a 4 or 5 bedroom house. Phone 549-0196 and ask for Robert or David.

FOR RENT -- modern 2-bedroom apartment with laundry facilities, parking, and utilities, available from May to September; 10 minute walk from campus. Phone 544-9361.

SPECIAL THANKS to Sue, Judy, Brenda, Mardi, Trevor, John, Cathy, Andra, Arlene, Rick, Carolyn, Marg, Anne, Shelly, John, Mike, Craig, Debbie, Natalie, Stephanie, Cynthia, and the Kids from Pickering for helping decorate the room for Snowball. Dave.

FINAL PAYMENT for reading week ski trip to Mont Ste. Anne. Wed. Jan 14, 7:30 pm in John Orr Room. Balance of $65 due.

FOR SALE: 1 pr Imura skis, 1 pr Krista Boots (9), used once, poles and wax. $75 complete. Phone 542 8579 after 5 pm.

TO RENT MAY to Sept. 2-bedroom apartment, furnished, close to campus. Call 544-8275 or 544-8277.

To JOE SCHWARTZ of West Campus. Your Snowball date demands an explanation of your conduct. You should know the rules of the game. Ever lovingly, every affectionately, Debbie Domore.

SANDY, SUE, LUCY, Mary, Heady, Shanon, and other Civil-Rehab chicks. Sorry for my conduct and physical condition at Buffalo Chips. My apologies also to the audience and others I may have affected. Charlie Chan.

SPRING SKIING this year is going to be rocky. Why wreck your skis? I'll sell you DYNASTAR S-430s (210 cm) with salomon bindings for $20. These skis were used for downhill training and have no camber and almost no edge left. The bindings are old Saloman 505s but are in working condition and have a competition spring. These skis are only good for spring hacking. So why worry about your bases this spring (or next) call 544-7070.

ARTSCI '76

Elections

for: President
Vice- Pres.
Secretary
Treasurer
Publicity
Athletic Sticks (2)

Tues., Feb. 13th, 7:30 p.m.

Stirling D

Nominations for Pres. and Vice-Pres.
must be given to Nancy Riley, 544-8098

Finlay's Sports Shop

SKI SPECIALS

Finlay's
Value $10.00
off sale price
on all
Fiberglass and Metal
Glass Skis

Finlay's
$5 Value
off sale price
on boots

Free beer steins with every ski or ski boot

93 Princess St. FEBRUARY ONLY 548-8255

SCIENCE 44
CO-OP

Looking for a place to live next year? Co-op may be for you. For information read P. 71 in the 'Who's Where' and come talk to us.

Drop in and stay awhile

OPEN HOUSE, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 10

from 9:30 at

314 William
373 Johnson
307-309 University
31 Garrett
128 Earl

If you cannot attend Open House
PLEASE USE THIS APPLICATION

Name ..... Sex.....

Year ..... Age.....

Present Address ..... Phone.....

Summer Address ..... Phone.....

Mail to: Ruth Fraser, 395 Brock St.
Application deadline, Feb. 17th.

Pubs
Commodore - Wilson Lorne and The Ramblers
401 Inn - Ray Smith
Manor - Malton and Hamilton
Townhouse Pub - Carnival

Gaels pass first test ... face another

by Peter Watts

On the strength of a united effort and the solid play of veteran netminder Clyde Harris, Queen's Golden Gaels outlasted the GeeGees 5-4 in Ottawa Tuesday night. The win put the Gaels into a temporary tie with York for third place in the east division of the OUAA. They have an opportunity to move into a second place tie with Laurentian on Friday night when they host the Voyageurs at 8 p.m. in the Harty Arena.

The team came out skating in the first period of the Ottawa game and led 2-0 after the first twenty minutes on goals by Dave Hadden and Kim Adair. Adair added another goal later in the game and Jim Sunstrum and Colin Loudon scored single goals to pace the Gaels attack. Penalties hurt Queen's as three of the four Ottawa goals were scored while the Gaels were short-handed. The fourth goal was scored into an empty net with 11 seconds left to play in the game. The Gaels were short two men as Chris Clark was in the penalty box and Ottawa had removed their goal-tender in favour of a sixth attacker. This fourth goal may turn out to be a key one because of Ottawa and Queen's are tied for the final playoff spot at the end of the regular schedule, Ottawa will get fourth place because they have outscored Queen's 11-10 in the two games between them.

At the moment, the University of Toronto is the OUAA eastern leader with 26 points on the strength of 13 straight victories. Laurentian is next with 19 followed by the Gaels and the Yeomen with 17 each. Then comes Ottawa with 13 points and Carleton with 5. Ryerson is still looking for its first points after 14 games.

Despite the fact that Queen's is four points up on the GeeGees, the battle for the final three playoff spots is still not over. Queen's has without question one of the toughest schedules of any team in the OUAA in the final two weeks of the season. Tonight they host Laurentian Voyageurs and next weekend York and Toronto come in Friday and Saturday respectively. The GeeGees have five games remaining: against Carleton, Guelph, Windsor, Lutheran, and Laurentian. Even if Queen's were to win all three of their remaining games and Ottawa were to win all of theirs, the GeeGees would qualify for the playoffs and the Gaels would be out. The Ottawa games against Guelph, Windsor and Laurentian will be tough ones for them. But all three of Queen's games will be really difficult.

Nevertheless, there is much reason for hope that at least one more team will qualify this year for post-season play. Laurentian beat Queen's 8-3 in Sudbury last fall and the Gaels don't feel that they are five goals worse than the Voyageurs. Besides, Queen's played that game without Jim Adair, who since Christmas has become the second leading scorer on the team. Dave Hadden had just reported from football and didn't play the first part of the year like he's been playing since Christmas.

One problem the Gaels have yet to solve is their inability to play well at home. The team has played very well on the road but has had its problems at home. Friday night would be a good time to start changing that image. What might help is a packed house of Queen's supporters. If the team can come up with a game here tonight like they've been playing on the road in recent weeks, we're in for some evening.

All in all, the team has quite a lot going for it. They have been hot in recent games. Every player is showing a strong effort. Clyde Harris has been providing the kind of support that every good team needs. Bill White's line continues to play well. And the important thing is that the GeeGees have got to beat us out for a playoff spot, not the other way around. Furthermore, Queen's still has a good shot at second place and the right to host the sudden-death game against the third place team.

Let's have a full house tonight at the Harty Arena. As I said before, if this team plays like it's capable of playing, we're in for a fine evening. See you there.

Ravens humiliate Gaels 91-55

by Chris Boon

Queen's basketball Gaels tightened their grip on sixth place in the OUAA's Eastern Division Tuesday night, losing yet another squeaker to the Carleton Ravens, in Ottawa; the score was 91-55, and the Gaels were lucky to keep it under a hundred. One of the few remarkable events came in the first quarter. Queen's did not score a basket until almost six minutes had elapsed, but trailed by just ten points, 12-2. After that, it was rather embarrassing. Rookie Forward John Love poured in 28 points (in about as many minutes of playing time) and vacuumed the boards, while an old nemesis, Dave Montagno, hit 20 points coming off the bench. Norm Hagarty had 23 points for Queen's, and Derek Swinnard added 10, but that was about it as far as points were concermed.

At this point, I am going to exercise an editor's perogative, and offer some comments and observations on what is happening (or not happening) to this team. Two months ago, I said, with all honesty, that this team was refreshing to be around, that it was enthusiastic, and that it could be a winner. With one or two individual exceptions, call it three strikes and you're out. Some very fine athletes appear to have regressed amazingly since that was written, and it is depressing as hell to try and figure out why. The reasons are complex, although several do stand out.

First and foremost, the 'team' is one in name only. Most of the players see each other at practice, or occasionally at classes. There is very little team pride, people don't think in terms of a team unit, and they don't do things as a team, on or off the court. Team discipline is almost non-existent. It has long been a part of the Queen's athletic system to avoid imposing discipline from outside; most coaches, and Frank Tindall in particular, have preferred to treat their players like adults, and permit them to set their own standards. It appears the current ones are rather low. Many members of the team are unhappy with the low-key approach that Frank takes to the team. Even so, as one rookie commented after Tuesday's fiasco, "It isn't all the coaching. If we did what we were told to do, we'd win."The problem may be one of tactics, rather than of strategy. In football, Frank has always had the able assistance of 'specialist coaches', who work with specific segments of the team, and on the techniques the players require. Perhaps the addition of a couple (or even one) of assistants, who could work with this year's many rookies on their specific weaknesses or strengths, who could help run the practices and keep things in hand on the road trips, would leave Frank free to do what he does best: plan the broad concept of the team's philosophy. At this, he has few equals.

